BRONCHO BILLY'S ESCAPADE (Aug. 24).—Vedah Morley is drawing a pail of water at the well one morning, when Broncho Billy approaches, lifts his sombrero respectfully, and asks for a drink. Struck by the simple charm of the girl, Broncho watches until she enters her shack nearby, then goes on down the trail, unconscious of the fact that Vedah is gazing after him from the window. In the town saloon Broncho sits in a poker game, detects that he is being cheated, wounds the puncher in the hand, recovers his money, holds the crowd at bay and makes his escape. The sheriff is notified and a posse instantly takes up the pursuit. With a bullet through his right arm, Broncho eludes the posse and finally stumbles into the clearing of Vedah's home. He is admitted by the girl and he explains the situation. She is bathing his helpless arm when the posse arrives. Quickly Vedah hides Broncho and sends the posse away on a false trail. One of the deputies, struck with her face, returns and attempts to embrace her, when Broncho springs out from the adjoining room. The deputy endeavors to capture Broncho at gun's point, but he, with only the aid of his one good arm, forces the deputy's hand through the window and explodes the revolver twice, then wrests the weapon from him. Hearing the shots the posse return. Broncho now compels the deputy to send them away on another false trail, then confiscates his broncho and watches him out of sight down the rocks. At the door Vedah thanks Broncho, presses his hand warmly and receives the assurance that he will return to her some day. Broncho disappears down the dusty trail.

MELIES.

HIS PARTNER'S SHARE (August 29).—Two young prospectors, Paul and Ray, leave for the West in search of gold. They happen to strike it rich and stake a good claim. On the way back to their cabin Ray, slipping over a cliff, falls to the rocks below, and Paul, thinking him dead, pockets the whole of the proceeds of the sale of the claim to a wealthy syndicate. But Ray was not dead, as Paul supposed, and is nursed back to life by some strangers who had found him helpless on the rocks. Paul had meanwhile returned to the city and settled there as a wealthy man. Ray, now penniless, also returns to the city to seek for work. Not knowing where Paul is to be found and driven by want and desperation, he breaks into a wealthy home. Fate must have had a hand in his directing, for it was thus that he found himself in Paul's house and met his faithless partner. For the sake of Paul's little girl, Ray decides to renounce his claims, but Paul, stricken with remorse and overcome by Ray's generosity, calls him back and gives him a check for the half share of the sale which was his due.

C. G. P. C.

HIS WINDMILL (August 20)—Color Photography.—The story in this film is not deep, but is the more impressive because of its simplicity. A tramp who has been refused assistance by a miller revenges himself by destroying the toy windmill of the miller's little boy. For this act the tramp is soundly thrashed by the father. At night when all is quiet and quite dark the vagrant sets fire to the miller's property and escapes. From a small flame the fire increases until the entire vicinity of the real windmill is laid a desolate waste. The spread of the flames is shown by the gradually increasing color in the film and is fascinating to an exceeding degree.

THE SEDGE WARBLER AND THE CUCKOO (August 20).—The peculiar trait of the cuckoo, which tricks another bird into hatching her egg for her, is shown in color photography.

WANTED

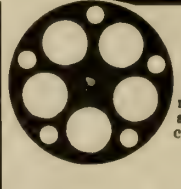
Competent mechanic to care for machines. One who can do perforating.

Experienced dark room men.

High-class man to edit negatives and positives.

Apply evenings only.

Kinemacolor Company of America
1600 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY



Repairs

The most modern shop and best picture machine repair men in the country guarantee you promptest service and complete satisfaction. Second-hand machines bought and sold.

Full Line of Supplies

Selling agents for all makes of machines.

Chicago Moving Picture Supply Co. 107 N. Dearborn Street CHICAGO, ILL.

5000 EXHIBITORS

AT THE

NATIONAL CONVENTION

WILL WITNESS

THEN WILL STAMPEDE

The Convention To Book

THIS MONEY GETTING FEATURE

Now Mr. State Right Purchaser—All the States are not sold yet; therefore in order to secure the best moneymaking State right proposition on the market, go to the nearest telegraph office and wire us for the price of your territory.

THINK!!

"It's THE LIFE of BUFFALO BILL"
IN MOTION PICTURES

BUFFALO BILL & PAWNEE BILL FILM CO.,

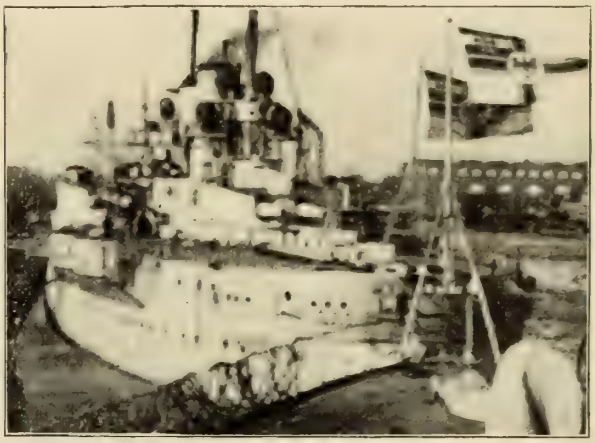
145 WEST 45th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

KLEINE

CINES TRADE MARK URBAN ECLIPSE

Eclipse, Wednesday, August 21st, 1912.

A DAY IN THE GERMAN NAVY



An inspection of one of the great white fleets of warships.

PULP MILLS IN THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

(Industrial)

MICROSCOPICAL CURIOSITIES

(Nature Study)

Cines, Tuesday, August 20th, 1912.

A MATTER OF PRIDE

The story of a society girl and a beggar.

Cines, Saturday, August 24th, 1912.

A PICTURE, C. O. D.

(Comedy)

JENKINS, THE WATCHMAN

(Comedy)

MODERN NAPLES

(Scenic)

Advance Synopses Free. Write to

GEORGE KLEINE

163 North State St. CHICAGO

Licensed by Motion Picture Patents Co.

THE QUEEN'S PITY (August 23)—Color photography.—When King Edward III of England had succeeded in reducing the town of Calais to a state of starvation he advised the authorities that if they sent him six of the city's noblest citizens, each with a noose about his neck, the warfare would be discontinued. The proposal is submitted to the citizens of Calais and, notwithstanding the lamentations of their wives and children, six noblemen volunteer and go forth to save their fellows. The King's Chancellor, touched by the brave act, requests the King to be lenient, but he is obdurate and orders the sentence of death executed. The Queen, however, cannot bear to see such brave men sacrificed and she implores the King to relent. Her pleading finally melts the King's heart and the heroes return to cheer their sorrowing families. It is a really big drama, and the superb manner in which it is colored makes it additionally realistic.

PATHE.

JEALOUSY ON THE RANCH (August 21).—Although Nell Barclay is very young, she has succeded in falling in love with Ralph Tracy, a big, manly ranch owner and friend of her father. Louis Potosi, a neighbor, is also in love with Nell. The two suitors attend the round-up held on the Barclay ranch and pay court to the pretty girl while watching the roping and branding of the cattle. Sunset finds the mates engrossed in each other and perfectly oblivious of the presence of Louis. The following day Louis lies in wait for Ralph on his morning ride and, as he passes, fires at him, wounding him slightly. The girl is a witness to the cowardly attack, and notifies the cowboys, who pursue the fleeing Louis. After a thrilling ride the culprit is brought to bay and the boys attend to him. They return to the ranch in time to find Ralph and Nell in fond embrace.

THE HAND OF DESTINY (August 22).—Senora Martinez, while out for a canter, is thrown from her horse. The accident mars her beauty for life. Her misfortune chills the fire of her husband's love and he becomes infatuated with a beautiful senorita. He is soon her devoted slave and his unfortunate wife is threatened with desertion. But one day, while out walking with his new love, his carelessness causes an explosion of dynamite, by which he is made blind. The hand of fate thus leads him back to his faithful wife, who forgives his infelicity, and they forget their plight by comforting each other.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 33.—Toulon, France—Reinforcements for the army in Morocco leave to aid in the protection of Europeans.

Kansas City, Mo.—Seven balloons start in the national balloon race to determine which three will represent the United States in the international race in Germany next fall.

Cromer, England—An improved lifeboat for the coast guards is launched amid the cheers of the townspeople.

New York, N. Y.—New York defeats Chicago by a score of 10 to 4.

Schwerin, Germany—The Grand Duke, heir to the Grand Duchy of Mecklenburg, courteously grants an interview to Pathe's Weekly while enjoying a walk in his gardens.

Adelaide, Australia—The prize winners of the annual dog show pose for their pictures.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Six men are seriously injured when an uncompleted building collapses.

Moscow, Russia.—The delegates from various governments receive the Czar and Czarina, who arrive in this city and go to the Moscow Cathedral.

New York, N. Y.—Steamer "Jose" is raised from her bed in the East River.

THE $2,500 BRIDE (August 24).—Jack Thompson asks "Boss" Barnet for his daughter's hand, and the wise old man asks him how much money he has in the bank. Jack is embarrassed and the "boss" tells him that when he has $2,500 he will consent to the wedding. The young people are disappointed by the turn of affairs, and to hasten the wedding the girl hits upon a clever ruse. They cut out some of her father's steers and sell them to a cattle buyer for $2,500. The couple engage a minister and return to the ranch, where Jack shows the money to Barnet. The father gives his consent to the ceremony being performed and it is not until they are united that the newlyweds return the money and inform him that the joke is on him.

BIOGRAPH.

WITH THE ENEMY'S HELP (August 19).—The discouraged prospector is about to give up his search for the coveted ore, when he hears his two little children praying, "Please, God, help papa find gold." Their faith gives him new hope and their prayer is efficacious, for he does find it and so stakes the claim, intending to register it at his earliest opportunity. While the little family is lunching at their camp, "Faro Kate" and her gambler husband ride by the claim and jump it, the husband urging Kate to go to the Claim Office and register it. Kate, who does not see the necessity for haste, is slow in starting. When the prospector returns to his "diggings" he finds the gambler in possession and in the struggle which ensues the prospector falls and is hurt. The prospector's wife, arriving at the claim, realizes the situation in a flash and is determined to win the race to the Claim Office, for she feels that the claim jumper has started for that place. By a most unique trick of fate she wins out.

A CHANGE OF SPIRIT (August 22).—Denied by her narrow-minded father all associations except that of her chaperone, the girl, while strolling in the park, indulges in a little flirtation with a young man who is one of a couple of gentleman thieves. A self-introduction comes when he gallantly picks up a book she has dropped. In restoring the book, he cunningly takes her hand-bag in order that he may have an excuse to call on her later and return it, giving her the impression that she had lost it. When he calls, her father is away, and so, in the spirit of bravado, she invites him in. While there he surreptitiously secures the key to the house, intending to return later with his partner. However, upon accidentally meeting the girl the second time, he becomes deeply impressed and the thought of his promise to his chum to enter the house that night palls. As can be imagined, the work laid out is odious in the extreme, but it is the means of causing in him a change of spirit.

SELIG.

THE COWBOY'S MOTHER (August 20).—Ed Weigel, doing well in the West, sends for his mother to come and live in the home that he has provided for her. Ed finds Dave, a bully, mistreating Indian Jim, and interferes, incurring Dave's hatred. I buys a new knife and, in fun, makes a pass at Dave with it. Later, on the way to meet his mother, Ed loses his knife. Dave, riding by, finds the knife. Indian Jim appears and Dave again tries to bully him. Jim, resentful, tells Dave to defend himself. A terrific knife fight then takes place, in which Dave is killed and the Indian badly wounded. Fearing the vengeance of the crowd, Jim hides in the bushes. The cowboys later discover the body of Dave and find by his side Ed's knife. Ed, of course, is accused of the crime. The boys find him and, despite his professions of innocence, they prepare to string him up to a tree. The mother arrives in the meantime,and not finding her son at the station, hires a rig and proceeds to drive to the house. She takes the road on which the fight took place. Indian Jim, realizing that Ed will have to pay the penalty for his crime, starts to crawl along the road in an effort to overtake the posse. The mother finds the Indian, learns his story, and, taking him into the buggy, drives at a fast pace after the crowd that is bent on hanging her boy. She arrives just in time, and the Indian with his dying breath confesses to the killing.

THE BOX CAR BABY (August 19).—Judge Kennedy and his wife go to an afternoon reception and leave their baby girl in charge of a flirtatious nurse maid. With the baby in its buggy, she goes to the park. A chauffeur tempts her to take a short ride. Baby has fallen asleep, and so she decides to leave it for a short time. The parkway being on a steep slope she secures the buggy by placing a stone under the front wheel before she rides away with the chauffeur. An intoxicated man passes the buggy a little later, and by brushing against it sets it free and it plunges down the slope of the parkway, over the curb and into the street below. The baby is thrown out and stunned by its fall. When the nurse returns and finds the baby, apparently dead at the bottom of the parkway, she becomes terrorized and conceals the senseless form in a box-car, while she flees to escape the judge's wrath. Tom and Jerry, two hoboes who have stowed themselves in the same box-car, awaken at the same time the baby revives. They are scared at being found with a baby on their hands. They decide, however, not to abandon the little waif, and its care gets the tramps into many amusing complexities. In order to give the baby a home they go to work and settle down. They learn some years later of the child's parents and sadly decide to return the little girl to them. As a reward the two tramps are given life-long jobs by the delighted parents.

BETTY FOOLS DEAR OLD DAD (Agust 22).—Betty and David are lovers, but Betty's Dad prefers Aaron for a son-in-law. Betty spurns him and tries to elope with David. They are headed off and Dad takes Betty and Aaron in David's taxi to get a marriage license. David follows in another taxi and spurns a plan with the two chauffeurs. The license office is closed and Dad is furious. David passes a note to Betty, telling of the plan. Betty gets in one side of her Dad's taxi and out the other and then into David's taxi, which starts for the railroad station. Dad is driven off in the other direction by his chauffeur and Aaron pursues the lovers. He misses them at the depot, but finds a ticket David has dropped. Aaron telegraphs to have the couple arrested and held. Dad again gets Betty in his favor and starts back to the city. David gets on the train as it pulls out. Betty drops her valise off the end of the car close to a country station and Dad gets off to get it. David and Betty get off the train and board a caboose standing on the next track. The passenger pulls out and Dad, dropping the valise, chases after it. David gets the valise and the freight pulls out the other way, but they laugh at him as he gives up in despair and realizes Betty has at last successfully eloped with David.

LAND SHARKS VS. SEA DOGS (August 23).—Bill Barnicle and his chum, Ole Olsen, two simple and confiding old seadogs, determine not to go to sea any more, but to settle down ashore and become farmers. They secure a room in a neat boarding house kept by a comfortable, tidy, little woman who attracts them both. They invest all of their little hoard in some property which they haven't even seen, and sally forth to have a look at it and take possession.

When they arrive upon the scene, which is a grassy meadow with the sea in view, they are so pleased that they sit down to smoke and gloat over their possession. Sleep overtakes them, and as they are dreaming sweet dreams about the landlady they are suddenly awakened by the encroachment of the tide. Of course the real estate shark refuses to refund, and they are desperate until the resourceful woman shows them a not very legal but entirely effective way to regain their money and punish the shark. And her reward is the hand and heart of little Bill Barnicle.

FROM FOREST TO MILL (August 23).—A remarkable educational subject showing the history of a log from the virgin forests to the finished piece of woodwork.

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS.

Appleton, Wis.—Mr. Maurer is preparing plans to start a new moving picture theater here.

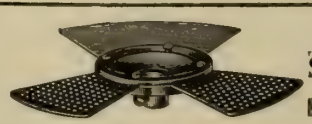
Reading, Pa.—Fred Drexell, of 343 North 6th Street, and Allen W. McKently, 911 North 5th Street, will erect a new moving picture theater at the southwest corner of 10th and Greenwich Streets.

Northport, L. I., N. Y.—Plans have been prepared for the erection of a new opera house here in Main Street.

Kingston, Mo.—The large hall over the Kingston Exchange Bank will be converted into a new opera house.

Highland, Ill.—Work has commenced on the erection of a new opera house here in Columbia Block.

Canton, Ohio.—Plans are being prepared for a theater here.



For a Short Time Only.

$11.50 Repair Kit, - $10.00

$4.00 Shutters, - $3.75

For Powers 5 or Edison Machines.

LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS,

2940 Herndon Street - - CHICAGO

TOM BUTLER

This sensational three-reel feature for rent in New York State by

THE POSNER SPECIAL FILM CO.

81 JOSLYN PLACE, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES & LANTERNS

BRIGHTER THAN CALCIUM.

OZO-CARBI-LIGHT

PATENTED

NO SATURATOR- OPENS NEW FIELDS FOR MOVING PICTURES.

SPECIAL SLIDES ALSO CARRY SLIDES ON ALL SUBJECTS.

TO ORDER Moore Hubbell & Co.

34 N. Franklin St. Chicago Ill Send for Catalogue.

ELECTRA

PINK LABEL CARBONS

BRILLIANT ARC

STEADY LIGHT

Hugo Reisinger

11 Broadway NEW YORK

ELECTRA

Independent Film Stories

GAUMONT.

GRAZIELLA, THE GYPSY (August 13).—The artist, Andrew Darel, is anxiously awaiting the result of the Hermosa competition; his room is invaded by fellow-artists and others, who crown him with laurels and inform him that he is the lucky winner of the purse of money. Amid a scene of gaiety he takes his departure for Italy, and one day, when admiring the beautiful view from Sorrento, he hears a voice singing among the orange trees. A closer view reveals to him a beautiful girl clad in the picturesque garments of the country gathering oranges. Wishing to make her further acquaintance, he advances to meet her and learns that she is alone in the world, and named Graziella the Gypsy. The painter when engaged in painting the various views of the place is always accompanied by the gypsy, who falls in love with him and engraves with the point of a knife their initials on the bark of a tree. One day the painter, when taking a short sea voyage, happens to meet a young Parisian lady, who captivates the young man with her graceful charm, and subsequently meets him when in the company of the gypsy. Graziella is not slow in recognizing that she has a rival, and implores the painter not to forsake her, but her advances are repulsed, and he departs with his fair charmer. The concluding pictures of this film show the tragic effect of the terrible blow received by the gypsy girl.

HER SUPREME SACRIFICE (August 20).—Jack Seward, a well-known barrister, is a widower living with his daughter Colette, who unfortunately suffers with an affliction of the eyes. The barrister during the course of business meets with a pretty actress, with whom he falls in love, and arranges a meeting in the park for the next day. His daughter's affliction has got worse, necessitating a visit to the specialist, who advises an immediate operation. The operation is performed and proves successful. Meanwhile Jack's suit has progressed satisfactorily, and the actress becomes his promised wife. During a visit to the house the actress is introduced to Colette as her new stepmother, and the child's grief at the news is very distressing. She caresses the painting of her mother, rushes off with it and deposits it in her bedroom. Later she suffers a relapse and the specialist when called in states that the acidity of her tears will eventually lead to complete blindness, the only remedy being to remove the cause of the trouble. The actress, upon becoming acquainted with the specialist's opinion, decides upon the course of action to pursue in order to preserve the daughter's eyesight, and to that end sacrifices husband and home.

ANDROCLUS AND THE LION (August 22).—Androclus, a slave because of his Christianity, is cruelly treated by his master, the Pro Consul of Rome, from whom he escapes in order to avoid the humiliation he had been forced to suffer. While roaming through the jungle wilds of the Italian mountains, he encounters a lion in its cavern lair. Androclus starts back with terror at his discovery, but curiously notes that the king of beasts makes no attempt to spring upon him, but on the contrary is moaning and groaning with pain. The escaped slave approaches the beast, after gathering up enough courage, and discovers a huge thorn transfixed in the cushion of its paw. Stroking the monster on his mane, he finally succeeds in extracting the thorn and relieving the lion of his suffering.

A short time after Androclus is run down by the Roman soldiers and recaptured. He is returned to the Pro Consul, who sentences him to be devoured by the lions in the Coliseum. At the appointed hour the hapless Androclus is tied to the cross and a large lion set loose to pounce upon him. The beast springs forward upon its human prey, but to the amazement of all those assembled, draws back as though from recognition, and, instead of lacerating the body of Androclus, rubs his head against his bare legs and licks his feet as though from gratitude. Androclus and the lion have recognized each other, nor has the king of beasts forgotten the favor that the condemned slave had bestowed upon him at the time that he rolled in pain in his cavern lair.

The Pro Consul is by no means the least surprised at this miracle and asks Androclus to explain, which he does with such ardor as to win his permanent freedom. The liberated slave is also granted the lion as a reward, whereafter man and beast become inseparable friends.

REPUBLIC.

THE CURSE OF DRINK (August 19).—Madge Holton, a Kentucky mountain girl, is loved by Joe Calway, who with his father is engaged in illicit whiskey traffic. Madge's mother resents his attentions because all the misery of her life had been caused by her intemperate husband, who consorted with moonshiners and neglected his family, finally drinking himself to death.

In bitter rage she informs the revenue men where the Calway still is located, and along with others opposed to whiskey traffic leads in the raid. The rifle is used freely, and old man Calway is killed. Young Calway is captured by the dry and severely flogged before he is rescued by Madge, who takes the badly beaten boy to her own home to nurse. The mother refuses to allow the young moonshiner shelter, and Madge declares that if he can't come in she will never enter her home. She gains her point and in a highly dramatic way shields the boy until he has recovered, and later on, in defiance to all, including a jealous lover, marries Joe, who still continues to make and trade in mountain liquor.

The young wife becomes addicted to drink, which again rouses the mother and the decent temperate mountain folk, but Madge protects her husband by telling them not to blame her husband. "It's in the blood," she cries; "it killed my daddy, and it will kill me."

During a gospel meeting, which Joe and Madge attend, Joe realizes as he listens to the preacher what havoc is caused by whiskey drinkers, and as the circuit rider calls on sinners to repent Joe comes forward and vows never to make or deal again in liquor as long as he lives.

Happiness is soon restored between Madge and Joe, who turns his hand to honest toil and a new life begins for Madge, Joe and the baby.

BISON.

THE SHOT THAT FAILED (August 17).—Jim quarrels with his sister Nela, leaves his home, and in order to soothe his ruffled feelings enters a saloon and gambles. Jack, a stranger, enters the place and is persuaded to join the game; Jim picks a quarrel with the stranger and finally draws his gun, which Jack takes from him, hits him on the head, stunning him. Thinking he has killed Jim, Jack makes a getaway. After laying Jim upon a chair, the gamblers go in chase of Jack. In the brief time that the saloon is vacant, Jim comes to, and in a dazed state leaves the saloon by a back door and wanders away. The sheriff and posse go after Jack, who eludes them and doubles back. He finds Jim unconscious by a creek, is delighted and takes him on his horse to his cabin in the hills, where he and his partners take care of Jim, whose wits have not fully returned.

Jim's sister Nela is told of the assault upon her brother, his disappearance and of his hat being found by the lake. She mourns him as dead and vows to avenge him. She goes into the hills each day and practises revolver shooting. Jack finds her there one day, and not knowing who she is, teaches her how to shoot properly. They often meet and a mutual attachment springs up between them. One day he asks her why she is giving so much attention to revolver practice; she tells him. He, being of too decided a nature to deceive her, tells her that he is the man who injured her brother. Before he can explain how the quarrel occurred, or how he had rescued and cared for Jim, she aims her revolver at him. He, looking directly at her, opens his arms and tells her to shoot. She falters and the gun drops just as Jim, having recovered his faculties, bursts in upon them. The explanation leads up to happiness.

THE WIDOW'S CLAIM (August 13).—The story is laid in a little Western mining camp—Waycross Gulch, where, at the opening of the photoplay we find the widow, who at the death of her husband has been left with five children and a hitherto worthless claim, known as the little Family Mine. The widow's husband had had confidence in the ultimate worth of the mine, and his last request had been that the widow stick to the claim and work it. Among the denizens of the camp is Jack, a gambler, an unpolished diamond, who in his rough way has asked the widow to marry him. She, admitting that she cares, has refused him on the ground that he is a gambler.

And now at last the claim pans out rich, and the news of the widow's good fortune leaks out. Two of the roughs of the camp decide to jump her claim, and with the assistance of a besotted "city clerk" draw up a paper purporting to show that her claim, through a re-survey, is a part of theirs. They are about to put their scheme into effect when Jack turns up opportunely and puts them to flight.

How the schemers were rounded up and brought to justice by Jack, the sheriff and his posse is vividly told in the remainder of this picture story.

POWERS

THE GOLDEN RULE (August 16).—Alice Holmes, an unsophisticated country girl, has loved indiscreetly, the object of her affections being George Mortimer, a married man. He entreats her to leave her native village with him and she, unsuspecting, consents. She bids adieu to her old home and meets him. Reflecting she asks him to promise to marry her and he refuses, insulting her. She bids him leave her; but it is too late for her to turn back. She goes to the city to hide her shame and there meets him in company with his wife and two children. She confronts him and is rudely thrust aside. She endeavors to secure employment and is found by Donald Rose, a young minister, to whom she pours out her story and is taken to his home and acts as emanuensis.

There is a meeting of the trustees of the church and George Mortimer, a member, enters. He sees Alice. When the minister has left the room he tells the members that Alice is a wanton and the minister is firmly but politely requested to dispense with her services. Alice overhears and is grand in her indignation, made desperate by persecution. She addresses the members of the committee and challenges them. It has its effect, although Mortimer is not exposed. The following Sabbath Donald Rose, the pastor, preaches a powerful sermon on sinning and the betrayal of women. Mortimer is in the congregation and he is overcome with remorse and leaves, going into the pastor's study adjoining, where he falls limp and dies. He is found by the minister and Alice and his wife. The story closes with the man of God taking the persecuted young girl in his arms and asking her to be his wife, and she consents.

WANTED, A PRACTICE (August 14).—Dr. Dunn is a young physician who is waiting for patients and has nothing to commend him, aside from his parchment obtained at medical college and a desire to succeed. He loves Millie Reed, but when he asks the consent of her father, he is told to go and make good. Millie is told of the ultimatum and seeks solace in tears. Earley and Mattie overhear the conversation and decide to take matters into their own hands. They feign illness and do it so cleverly that they deceive the other members of the family and a hurry call is sent for a physician. Dr. Dunn is the nearest and he comes. They tell him their plan and he is delighted. He attends to them and pronounces it a case of poisoning. Each of the other members, including the stern and unrelenting father of Millie, imagine they are ill and he has for patients all the members of the household. The doctor takes pleasure in administering some vile decoctions to the father and the patients speedily recover. Dr. Dunn is about to take leave of his patints when Earley, addressing the father, suggests that a doctor would be a valuable acquisition to the family and they all concur in her opinion, even to Mr. Reed, who has curtly dismissed Dr. Dunn as a suitor for the hand of his daughter.

NESTOR.

A TALE OF THE FOOTHILLS (August 12).—James Golden, a New Yorker, sent out to look after his father's mine in the West, gets off the train and is told the way to the Stony Gulch stage coach. Here he meets Bess Cameron, who is returning to her home in Stony Gulch after a holiday. The two young people become good friends and she invites him to call at her home.

The next day Jim goes to see Bess, and arrives in time to save her from a drunken cowboy. Bess takes Jim into the house, where he meets her folks. Days pass quickly and Bess is charmed by the New Yorker's quiet and unassuming manner, and soon finds herself deeply in love with him. Jim, however, appears to be impervious to Cupid's darts. This goes on for some time, Jim merely regarding the girl as a companion during his stay at Stony Gulch. One day he receives a letter calling him home at once. Bess is heartbroken to think she will never see him again; and after bidding him good-bye, bursts into tears. Jim turns to wave a good-bye and sees her crying, and promises he will return.

Arriving in the village, he learns that the stage has left and Bess's father, who happens to be in town, tells him he will drive him to the train. Jim gets ready to depart; but the drunken cowboy, whom Jim had made an enemy of, having overheard Jim talking to old Cameron, decides to get even, and, riding out of town, hides behind bushes. When the buggy passes, he fires, wounding Jim in the arm. Mr. Cameron captures him and turns him over to the cowboys, telling them to send a doctor up to his home and he hurries Jim there. The doctor finds nothing serious outside of a bad arm. A week later when Jim is ready to depart he finds that he is as much in love with Bess as she is with him. They become engaged, and when he returns West the wedding bells will ring in the foothills.

HOW STEVE MADE GOOD (August 14).—Captain Steve and his band of outlaws are watching a prairie schooner and decide to hold it up. Steve rides down to see how the land lies and overhears a brother and sister planning how they will use their money to cure little Fay, a sick sister. Steve's men come on, but Steve drives them off and when out of hearing of the brother and sisters, divides his last dollar with the men and leaves them to appoint a new leader. Steve returns to the prairie schooner to be earnestly thanked by the pilgrims, who had no idea that he had any connection with the outlaws. They invite him to their uncle's cabin; he accepts, finds work and then leads an honest life. A year passes and although Steve loves the sister he will not speak. At last her brother asks an explanation. Steve tells him of his former life, but the brother and sister, who have entered and overheard his confession, declare, "It's not what you were, but what you are." As he is leaving the cabin, one of his old comrades rides up, and upon being coldly received by Steve, vows to inform the sheriff. This he does, and to the sorrow of all, Steve is led away to jail.

The next day, the brother, remembering the weakness of Deputy James, on guard at the jail, pours enough laudanum in a bottle of whiskey to put the deputy to sleep, then with his sister hastens to the jail. After greeting Deputy James, the brother drops his coat on the jail steps and retires to wait for results. He had not long to wait; as soon as he believes himself alone, the Deputy quickly takes the bottle from the coat and helps himself

Lights and Shadows of Chinatown

FOR THE YELLOW PERIL

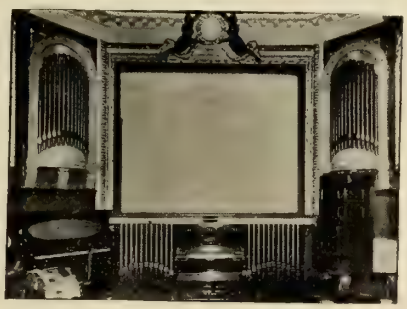
3000 feet

Ready for delivery in all territory excepting Ohio, Pennsylvania, Oregon, Idaho and Missouri.
Six styles of lithographs, photographs and heralds.

NEW YORK FILM CO., 12 Union Square, New York

EXHIBITORS' CONVENTION CALL!!!
August 13, 1912

Visit the ORIGINAL "Home of the Pipe Organ"
The Alcazar Theater, 69 W. Madison St.



Also visit the following Chicago homes of the

ORIGINAL PIPE ORGAN

The Temple Theater, 3121 N. Lincoln Ave.
The Franklin Theater, 328 E. 31st St.
The Virginia Theater, 43rd St. and Indiana Ave.

THEN

Visit our office and get any further information you wish regarding the permanent success of this wonderful FEATURE.
Our representative will be pleased to accompany you to any of these places.

The Chicago Pipe Organ Co.
Room 1145 First National Bank Bldg.
38 So. Dearborn St., CHICAGO

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

MR. EXHIBITOR

We Are Booking! Write for Dates

Convicts' Life in the Ohio Pen.

For Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, North and South Dakota

The biggest money-getter yet. You never saw the equal of this Lobby Display. 500 lbs. excess baggage.

Also

Life of Buffalo Bill for Iowa

Frisco's Chinatown

For Iowa, Minnesota, North and South Dakota.
Also other three-reel features which we can ship anywhere.
"Four Daredevils," "Foe to Richelieu," "Grip of the Mormons" and Many Others.

MOVING PICTURE SUPPLIES

Machines, Chairs, Fans, and, in fact, everything pertaining to the business. Write for our Catalogue and prices.

United Amusement & Supply Company
319-320 Security Building
Long Distance Telephone CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA
FRED W. YOUNG, Manager

Meet Me at the Convention. See Our Exhibit at the La Sall

BEAUTIFUL THREE and SIX SHEETS READY NOW
FOR
VITAGRAPH'S SPECIAL TWO REEL SUBJECT; Released Monday, Aug. 19th
RIP VAN WINKLE

This is a beautiful production of the famous Play, which Joseph Jefferson used for so many years, and it will attract large audiences if properly advertised, so get your order in early for both our THREE and SIX SHEETS.

A. B. C. COMPANY, CLEVELAND, OHIO

We have a good supply of three and six sheets covering all recent special releases. Send for list and prices.

liberally, so that it is easy for the brother to secure the keys of the jail, liberates Steve and sends him away with his sister to begin a new life in another part of the country.

THE MINER'S WIDOW (August 16).—The widow Smith, and her daughter Mary, have been left with just a claim to support them. Jim, Mary's sweetheart, agrees to work the mine on shares, and starts for the small mining town to arrange matters.

Two miners, knowing the widow can't work the claim, scheme to defraud her by claiming that they had bought the claim from her husband a couple of days before his death. The widow is horrified at the news; Mary refuses to believe it. The men try to put mother and daughter out, when a scout and his party drive the villains away. The scout fearing trouble, camps on the claim. He soon comes face to face with the villains who are trying to set the miners against him. Unable to show proofs they draw up a false bill of sale, and return. They are again ordered away. While beating a retreat they see Mary, take her by force, and hide her in an old mine, counting on making the widow give them the claim for her daughter's safe return. The scheme might have worked but for Jim's intervention. Jim goes forward to the mouth of the mine only to be captured by the villains, who also capture the scout after a terrific struggle. Leaving a man on guard, they again start for the widow's claim, to take it by force; but again they reckon wrong.

MILANO.

THEIR GUARDIAN ANGEL (August 17).—The scenes are laid on the picturesque shores of Lake Como, Italy, where we find Robert Bice and his wife with their infant son living happily at their lakeside villa. News arrives that they are to receive a visit from the Baroness Santani, who has recently divorced her husband. The Baroness arrives. The surroundings impress her and she is induced to prolong her stay.

Madame Bice displays great love for her child and her devotion opens opportunity for her husband and the Baroness Santani to be frequently alone in each other's company. They often stroll through the grounds together and their friendship soon ripens into a stronger attachment for each other. One evening they start for a row on the lake and the romance of the situation proves ideal for lovemaking, which is inadvertently seen through field glasses by Madame Bice, who is anxiously awaiting their return. She is at first dumfounded, but upon reflection, decides to outwit the Baroness. She hastens to the nearby landing-place and from behind a clmp of brush sees the lovers disembark and overhears them make an appointment for a clandestine meeting that same evening. She then hurries back to the villa and awaits their coming and when they appear she does not mention her discovery of their perfidy, secretly planning to checkmate them.

The same evening she secretly precedes them with her sleeping child and places the youngster in the very spot appointed for the meeting of the faithless couple, quietly withdrawing and unobserved awaits developments. The husband and the false friend soon appear and when confronted by the presence of the still sleeping child, they are both conscience stricken. The Baroness realizing her falseness is known to the wife, beats a hasty retreat and disappears forever from the life of the Bice family.

VICTOR.

THE CHANCE SHOT (August 16).—Flo and Owen met at the seashore and it was a case of love at first sight, but Flo for some reason unknown to Owen would not consent to become his wife, no matter how hard he urged her to do so. Finally she gave in, but only after his solemn promise never to ask of her any of her past history. To this Owen readily consented, so eager was he to make her his wife, and he wrote his servants to open up the summer home, as he was bringing home a new mistress for them. They were deligated and greeted Flo with the same love they had for their master. Now it happened that Flo's father had been a convict and this was the "dark past" that she hid from Owen. Had he known this, what hours of troible it would have saved her.

Owen had a chum, George, with whom he used to go gunning. It was while these two were hunting that a man spoke to Flo. She recognized him as a former acquaintance of her father's. He, being in poor circumstances and having fallen to low depths, threatened to expose her father's misdeeds if she did not give him some money. She readily consented to his request and he left her. Many times he did the same thing and sometimes when she used to sit and talk over the day's luck with her husband and James she was on the impulse of telling them of the intruder, but each time changed her mind. She gave him her rings and pin until finally she decided that the next time the man accosted her she would do as she had so long intended doing. One morning she was walking along the path when he stepped up and asked for more money. Just as he was talking she heard her husband coming up the path and shoving him into the shed where all the tools were kept she shut the door. Owen, coming up and mistaking her looks of fright for that of sickness, made her go to the house and lie down. Seeing her comfortable once again, he returned to where he had left James when he found his wife. They were joking as to whose fault it was that they never caught anything and soon it was made into a bet as to who would hit the bull's-eye. Putting a piece of paper upon the shed door, they in turn fired. In the meantime, Flo, tired of the deceit and of the villainy of the blackmailer, decided to tell Owen all, even if it cost her her happiness, and rising from the couch she went outdoors just as Owen fired at the bull's eye. Flo gave a scream, ran to the shed, opened the door where she had hidden the man who had caused her all her unhappiness and found that the shot had struck him and he lay dead on the floor—showing her husband where the shot had struck and explaining to him why he was in there. Owen took his wife in his arms to protect her.

SOLAX.

HIS DOUBLE (August 21).—Joe Howell is not welcome at the home of Mr. Burleston. Although young Miss Helen thought very much of him, Mr. Burleston is determined that his daughter should marry Count "Lacking Koyne." When Jack Howell discovers who his rival is he hits upon a plan which not only puts his rival out of running, but outwits the "old man." It is fortunate for Jack that in physical frame he had the appearance of the Count. The only things he needed to make him look like the Count's double were a little mustache and an apology for a chin beard. These Jack's costumers easily supplied.

Everybody mistakes Jack for the Count, even the Count when he looks through a mirrorless frame imagines himself looking in a mirror. Jack imitates the Count, going through some vanity stunts right before the Count's eyes, the Count believing all the while that he is posing before a mirror. Jack's pranks give Burleston considerable cause to question his own sanity. When the Count goes Jack comes. First the Burleston sees the Count going in one direction and almost simultaneously he sees his double coming from the opposite direction. Burleston pinches himself to see if he is awake. He does not discover Jack's duplicity, however, until the very end. The daughter helps along in the fun.

THE EQUINE SPY (Drama).—In the World of July 20 will be found an extended review of this two-reel production.

GEM.

BABETTE (August 13).—Babette was an ordinary girl—or she may have been a woman, for it is women, rather than girls, that make sacrifices. Her foster sister, the Countess Celie, was the type of Countess you've read about a dozen times—a little bit vain and a lot more selfish. Chevalier was the man. Chevalier loved Celie and Babette loved Chevalier. Babette loved him secretly but fiercely. Babette's cousin Jean thought a lot of her in his burly, boisterous way, but Jean was not Chevalier. The revolutionists were particularly active at this part of the story and once Babette hears noises. Going to inquire the cause, she sees Chevalier pursued by the mob. A moment later he falls wounded at her feet. Babette defends him, telling the mob she would keep him safe for them, and leads him tenderly toward the old mill near which she lives.

The leader of the mob had become infatuated with Celie, and demands her from her father, threatening to burn the house unless he accedes. Celie desperately puts on a blue coat and makes her escape. Celie arrives at the mill and finds Babette nursing Chevalier. Babette calls Jean, and begs him to take Celie and Chevalier away. He refuses, and in desperation Babette offers to marry him if he carries out her wish. He consents and escorts the lovers away. The mob returns, demands Celie and Chevalier, and when Babette tells them they have escaped, they decide to wreak vengeance upon her. But suddenly the leader notices the blue cloak belonging to Celie, and concludes she is in the house. In furious rage he wields a knife over Babette's head. Determined to cheat him of his vengeance, she grasps the weapon and takes her secret forever with her.

IMP.

THE KIDNAPPING OF DOLLY (August 17).—Little Edith Wright is the proud possessor of a beautiful doll, and in her honor she invites all her little friends to be present at a doll's tea party. All are enjoying themselves, when a gang of young rowdies espy the happy little party, and the leader suggests that they form themselves into a young Black Hand and kidnap Dolly. This is done, and the doll is carried to a nearby hut and word is sent to little Edith that unless she brings a ransom in the shape of several oranges, apples, three cents and a custard pie, the doll's head will be cut off. Little Edith's heart is broken and in her despair she goes to the famous detective, Hairlock Combs. The great sleuth hands the case over to his little son Joe, who handles it in a clever manner, and brings the criminals to justice by throwing them into a nearby creek. Dolly is restored to Edith, and the happy child rewards the savior of her pet with a beautiful baseball bat and glove. The picture is played entirely by children, with the exception of the one scene, in which Hairlock Combs, the detective, appears.

IN OLD TENNESSEE (August 15).—A thrilling story of life in the mountains of Tennessee. Nell Gwinn is a secret service agent and receives a strange assignment. The chief of the bureau is notified by wire that there is an illicit still in operation in a certain district and twice the men he had sent to this point had failed to accomplish the apprehension of these lawbreakers. Nell is offered the assignment and accepts. She arrives in the district and hangs out a dressmaking sign.

Jim Howard has a younger brother who is a cripple. The doctors tell Jim that an operation will restore to the boy the use of his limb. Three hundred dollars is the fee asked. Jim gains a frugal livelihood by chopping wood and realizes that it would take him years to accumulate this amount of money at his present vocation. He is offered a partnership in an illicit still. Seeing an opportunity to gain the money necessary for Little Joe's operation, he accepts—and then Nell comes into his life. She learns of his connection with the moonshiners and is about to denounce him when she is in turn discovered spying on the still by one of the partner's children. The women of the district decide to deal with her. She is saved by the cripple boy, and accepts her real mission in life as Jim's wife.

REX.

THE GREATER CHRISTIAN (August 15).—Helen was a sport, and she had sporty friends. She didn't believe in the Bible or in being good, and perhaps she even doubted God. There was just as much in a short life and a merry one, in her careless opinion, as there was in a long life and a weary one. One day she and a party of friends were entering a cafe when a Salvation Army girl outside tried to halt them and pleaded with them not to enter. The little party thought it was pretty good humor, for they laughed—even Helen. Then something happened. They were all sitting with their glasses in hand, listening to a toast being offered by one of the party, when Helen suddenly rose from her seat. Another second, and she dashed the glass to the floor and ran from the cafe. Outside she pleaded with the Salvation girl to take her away. In the cafe only Sorello, the gambler, who loved her, sat and wondered.

Helen joined the army, and one day was sent as governess to a rich child who was ill. While walking with the child, she sat down to read her Bible, now her dearest friend. A minister passed, noticed the book, chatted with her—and something stole into their hearts that both pained and soothed.

A few days later the minister called at the rich woman's house. He was surprised to find Helen there, but they talked, and talked and talked. He proposed, she trembled a little, and told him she would write her answer. Then she told him she could not marry him because she was not fit for him. The minister was horror-stricken at the news, and pitied himself, yet he was happy that he had not permitted himself to marry this outcast. In fact, he told his wealthy parishioner about the incident, and the girl was dismissed.

And one day a minister sat by the sea, thanking God for what had been spared him; and a gambler, with the germ of manhood in his soul, sat drinking and longing for an absent happiness; and the girl, the Greater Christian, was comforting a homeless woman, bringing solace to a weary heart.

LUX.

TOMMY SAVES HIS LITTLE SISTER (August 16).—Directly their parents have left the nursery Tommy and his little sister proceed downstairs intent upon making themselves acquainted with the contents of a nice box of chocolates. Entering the drawing-room, to their horror and surprise they encounter a burglar. Their scream of terror attracts their father to the spot, who promptly covers the intruder with his revolver. The thief, however, uses Tommy's little sister as a shield by placing her between himself and the revolver. Holding her there he manages to escape and takes the child along with him.

A few days later he writes to Tommy's father, demanding a ransom for the child and telling him to meet him at a certain public house. Tommy's father goes to the place in question, having previously instructed several detectives to hide themselves in the car. The thief is therefore surprised upon his entrance, but after a hard struggle he gets away and drives off in the very motor car which conveyed Tommy's father to the spot. He does not, however, observe that Tommy has taken a hand in the game. Upon being refused permission to

FILMS FOR SALE.
New Catalogue just off the Press. You will be surprised at the bargains.
ACME FILM CO., INC.
120 West 37th Street, New York.

SLIDES
Announcements, six for $1.00. Special prices on advertising slides. Take advantage of the dull times. Catalog.
NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY,
Lockport, N. Y.

A FEW MORE STATES OPEN

We own exclusive rights for the United States and Canada for

"THE PENALTY"

In two reels each, $250.00 per set.

"THE CIRCUS GIRL"

No bonus for exclusive territory.

Write, wire or telephone for further particulars.

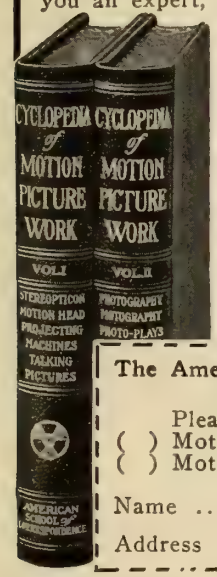
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY COMPANY

145 West 45th St., New York, N. Y. Telephone Bryant 6332

LEARN AND EARN

A Good Salary or Big Profits in the MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS

Get into the popular, money-making amusement business of the Century—be an Operator or a Manager and enjoy a good income. Our complete, thoroughly practical and easily learned course of instruction by mail, for home study, will make you an expert, during spare moments. Write today for our illustrated booklet: "The Motion Picture." It explains our motion picture course fully—gives some valuable information about operating.



CYCLOPEDIA of MOTION PICTURE WORK
VOL I
STEREOPTICON MOTION HEAD PROJECTING MACHINES TALKING PICTURES
CYCLOPEDIA of MOTION PICTURE WORK
VOL II
PHOTOGRAPHY PHOTOGRAPHY PHOTO-PLAYS
AMERICAN SCHOOL OF CORRESPONDENCE

Also ask for information about our "Cyclopedia of Motion Picture Work." Just off the press—the only complete work on the subject ever published. Fill in the coupon, now, specifying whether you want books or course.

The American School of Correspondence,
Chicago, U. S. A. M. P. W. 8-10-12

Please send me further information about your ( ) Motion Picture Course.
( ) Motion Picture Cyclopedia.

Name .....

Address .....

HUBER BROTHERS

1413 Sedgwick Street
Chicago -:- Ill.

INTERIOR DECORATIONS DRAPERIES and FURNISHINGS

We Make a Specialty of THEATRE DECORATIONS

REFERENCES:

Palace Theatre, Chicago; Grand Opera House, Chicago; Orpheum, Winnipeg, Manitoba; Orpheum, Madison, Wis.; Majestic, Milwaukee, Wis.; Orpheum, Grand Rapids, Mich.; and others.

See our exhibit at the Chicago Offices of The Moving Picture World

NOT IN ANY TRUST!! NOT IN ANY COMBINATION!!

STRICTLY INDEPENDENT

We Stand Alone—And On Our Merit

WE HANDLE THE UNIVERSAL PROGRAM—REX, IMP, NESTOR, POWERS, ECLAIR, MILANO, VICTOR, GEM, CHAMPION, BISON, ANIMATED WEEKLY, ETC.

We sell all makes of machines, machine parts and supplies.

Exhibitors visiting Chicago during the National Convention, or at any time, are invited to make our offices their headquarters. A cordial welcome and courtesies always await you. THERE IS NO FROST ON OUR DOORKNOB. WALK RIGHT IN.

JOSEPH HOPP, President

STANDARD FILM EXCHANGE

168-172 W. Washington Street (Just around the corner from Hotel La Salle) CHICAGO accompany the expedition. Tommy hid himself at the back of the car and awaited events. In this manner Tommy is conveyed to the house of the thief and is enabled to find out where his sister is hidden. He bravely ascends to the roof of the house, and by the aid of a stout rope he saves his little sister from the criminal's clutches.

MAJESTIC.

TOODLES (Aug. 18).—Toodles is a very handsome litle Boston bull. Even Harry thinks so. But his sweetheart, Anna raves over it and pets it so constantly that between the dog and the theater, where Anna is playing, there is very little of her time left for Harry.

Anna's mother sides with Harry and they scheme to get her to give up both the stage and the dog and marry Harry. A note is sent to the theater, telling her that Toodles is sick. Anna, dressed in her Gaby Deslys gown, is about to step out upon the stage when she receives the note. She leaves the theater immediately and, rushing through the streets in her stage clothes, reaches home to find Toodles all huddled up in bed with Harry feeling his pulse and giving him medicine.

Her mother and Harry make such a fuss about the dog and pay such slight attention to her, that she understands for the first time how silly she has been. When Harry offers her an engagement ring if she will give up the dog and the stage she gladly accepts his offer, especially as she has lost her position because of her hasty exit from the theater in the middle of a performance.

THE NEW BUTLER (Aug. 20).—Mr. and Mrs. Carthan, a wealthy couple, decide to visit their niece, Mrs. Jones, hoping at the same time to make the acquaintance of her husband, whom they have never met. They telegraph that they will come the following week. A short time after the message leaves, Mr. Carthan finds he will be unable to go the following week, owing to a business engagement, so they decide to leave at once.

The Joneses are all worked up over the telegram, and, seeing their house in disorder, start to fix it. When the Carthans arrive they find Mr. Jones busy with an apron tied around him and they at once mistake him for the butler. They order him to take their things and before he can recover from the shock he has done as they told him. The wife, not wishing to tell her relatives that the butler is her husband, and wishing to keep up the deception, insists that Jones play the part of butler while the Carthans remain. She tells her relations that her husband is away on a business trip. Jones quite forgets that he is the butler and sits down with the visitors to enjoy the conversation. He is soon told to leave the room. He decides to throw up the job and put on his good clothes. He is caught in the act of dressing by Mr. Carthan, who calls him to account for trying on his master's clothes. He proves to be a very awkward butler, as he spills the soup on Mr. Carthan's waistcoat. Mr. Carthan demands that he be discharged and Mrs. Jones, unable to do anything else, bids the butler leave the house. He goes to the home of a friend and finally decides he will get his own clothes. He sends a note to his wife bidding her throw a suit case full of his clothes out of the window. She does this and he gets the suit case, which he takes to his friend's home, where he dons some of the garments and shaves off his mustache. He then returns home and Mrs. Jones introduces her husband to the Carthans, who although very glad to meet him, cannot help commenting on his likeness to the discharged butler. Although his wife is at first distressed over the shaving of her husband's mustache, when he reminds her of the predicament she put him in, she laughs and embraces him.

RELIANCE.

ONE AGAINST ONE (Aug. 21).—Dion, one of the mounted police of the Northwest woods, is rejected by the girl he loves. He never forgets Jess and always keeps her last letter in his pocket. He is commissioned to go after a man called Hughes, who is wanted for murder. He sets out through the woods. The fugitive is in the woods hiding from the man he knows is searching for him. Dion is hungry and wants to kill some game—but remembers that the shot would betray him to the fugitive. The murderer has one shot left. He sees Dion in the distance and fires, wounding the officer in the arm. The fugitive leans over a pool of water to take a drink. Dion sees him and, although he is half crazed at the sight of the water, he pulls himself together and manages to cover his man. Overcome with pain and hunger he faints. The fugitive manages to make him comfortable. He kills a bird and shares it with the officer. He carries the unconscious man to his shack in the woods, where he cares for him. He finds the letter from Jess, the girl who rejected Dion to marry him. When Dion regains consciousness he learns that the fugitive killed his man in a fair fight, also that Jess aided her husband to escape.

NORTH OF 53 (Aug. 24).—Bob, while playing cards with some other young fellows, has a quarrel with Frawley, who accuses him of cheating. Bob strikes, and the other man falls. He hits his head against the floor, rendering him unconscious. The boys advise Bob to get away at once. He goes into the North Woods. His father writes him that Frawley never recovered consciousness and bids his son go further into the woods. Bob hires a guide, Pierre, who takes him into the wilderness. Pierre steals a letter from Bob's pocket while he is sleeping. He learns that Bob is a fugitive from justice and that a reward of $1,000 is offered for him. He decides to turn him over to the police.

When Bob awakens he sees the man's intention. After a terrible fight Pierre succeeds in tying Bob hand and foot. In the canoe Bob manages to free himself and attacks Pierre. Julie, a trapper's daughter, sees the canoe capsize and she rescues both of the men and marches them out at the point of her gun. Pierre tells the trapper of the reward offered for Bob, but the trapper refuses to allow the guide to carry out his intention. Pierre leaves them, vowing vengeance. Julie and Bob fall in love and become engaged. A passing priest visits the cabin and he is asked to marry them. As he is beginning the ceremony Pierre returns with a sheriff. After the marriage Bob goes away with the sheriff, but does not tell Julie where. Julie finds his letter of explanation and rushes after him. She stops the canoe by firing at Pierre, but Bob receives the bullet himself. The canoe goes over and the men walk ashore. They return to the trapper's cabin. The old man tells the sheriff he cannot take Bob, for he is North of 53, or over the Canadian border, so the sheriff leaves and Pierre is warned never to return. Julie fixes Bob's arm and puts her arms about his neck.

COMET.

THE HOLD-UP IN BUCKEYE CANYON (Aug. 10).—The hero of this story is Jim Mason, who is an express messenger. Jim is enamored of Rose Mitchell, and his devotion to her causes him to neglect his duty. He is reprimanded by an official of the express company for failing to properly care for a box containing valuables left in his charge. Jim is eventually discharged. He vows to get even for what he regards as unjust treatment, so he elects to turn thief and rob the stage-coach on the next trip. His plans are well laid and single-handed, with a gun, he holds up the stage, secures the coveted box and decamps with it to the woods.

Rose, who has not seen Jim for several days, is worried over his absence. She goes in search of him, and from a point in the mountains, beholds the robbery and the escape of the daring bandit in the canyon below. Ignorant as to the identity of the robber she fires and wounds Jim in the leg. He returns the fire and the bullet penetrates the rim of her hat. She falls to the ground and manages to crawl to a thick underbrush without being recognized by Jim. Rose arises and discovers that the bandit is Jim. She watches him and sees where he has hidden his loot. Then she returns to him and helps him to an old hut. On the pretense of securing him some food and medicine, she goes to the place where Jim has buried the loot, takes it and is about to enter the hut when the sheriff and his posse arrive. She then hands over the box to the authorities and when the posse departs, rejoins Jim.

Several weeks pass and as a reward, she receives a check for $500 from the express company. When Jim is able to get about, she tells him of the check. explanations then ensue, and when Rose reveals her part in the affair they decide to tear up the check, begin life anew, and forget Jim's deflection from the path that leads to the other way.

TWO WOMEN AND ONE MAN (Aug. 12).—Blanche Belmont is deeply in love with Herbert Lord and has every reason to believe that her affection is reciprocated. Blanche is a woman with a past and when Herbert decides to give up his old life and marry a girl of his own set, he sends Blanche a note in which he tells her that all is off between them. As a balm to the poor woman's injured feelings he agrees to settle a certain sum on her and commissions his lawyer to see her. Blanche refuses to be discarded in this fashion and orders the lawyer from her house.

Baron Henri Strang, an adventurer, is a friend of Herbert's, and through his unsuspicious manner, succeeds in geting himself into Lord's good graces. Lord introduces him to his fiancée, Eleanor, and the pseudo baron makes love to her. Eleanor is fascinated by the baron, who eventually wins her away from Herbert. For a last farewell, Herbert visits Blanche and asks her to accept a bouquet of violets which he has been in the habit of sending to her every day. On the night of the betrothal party, Blanche returns the flowers with the request that Eleanor wear them, and Herbert complies. While the guests are gathered Eleanor becomes ill. The baron asks if he can be of any service and Herbert tells him to look after her while he goes for a physician. The pair are left alone and taking advantage of his friend's absence, the baron forthwith embraces Eleanor. While locked in each other's arms, Herbert enters. Eleanor pleads for forgiveness, but Herbert casts her aside. As further proof of her guilt, he snatches the violets from her and points to a stain on the baron's shirt front, made by the flowers. Then he strikes the baron violently in the face with the bouquet and Strang challenges him to a duel. The duel is held and the baron is stabbed to death. Next we see Blanche in her apartments, crying. Suddenly she takes from her breast a small phial containing morphine and is about to drink the contents when Herbert, holding the withered and tell-tale violets in his hand, enters the room. Then he unfolds all that has happened. Without further ado, Blanche permits him to take her to his heart again.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY (Aug. 8)—Youngest Aviatrice.—Katherine Stinson, 17 years old, youngest aviatrice in the world, in her qualifying flight for Aero Club, Chicago.

United States Regular Army Manoeuvres.—Crack regiments of United States Army in war practice at Sparta, Wisconsin.

Chinese Funeral.—Century-old customs contrast strongly with modern mourning in Chinatown, San Francisco.

Fattest Baby in the World.—Rosa Lee, age 5 years, weight, 250 lbs.

King George and Queen Mary Afloat.—The King and Queen of Great Britain use their state barge for the first time at the Henley regatta.

London Fire Brigade.—The annual inspection in Battersea Park, London, England.

Woodrow Wilson's Parlor Cabinet.—The men who control the destinies of the Democratic party and advise the presidential nominee.

The Four Hundred Disport Themselves.—New York society goes bathing at Larchmont, L. I.

A Wet Convention.—Motion picture exhibiters of Wisconsin meet in convention on a rainy day.

Return of Olympic Athletes.—Uncle Sam's boys home from Sweden, where they won world's honors at Olympic games.

Baloon Elimination Contest.—The starting of the race at Kansas City, Mo. The three winners will represent the United States in the international Baloon race at Stuttgart, Germany.

President Taft Accepts Nomination.—The President is officially notified at the White House of his nomination as regular Republican candidate for a second term.

AMERICAN.

SAVED BY AN AUTO (Aug. 7).—Mrs. Sam Winston, of Ranch R, went to visit in Denver. Delighted with automobiles, she orders old Sam to buy one promptly upon her return. This he does. When it arrived he spent two days in profanity and gave up the job. Meantime, Mrs. Winstons brother-in-law went to visit them from Denver. He bought a horse to ride to the ranch and was quickly arrested as a horse-thief. A friendly line-man, watching the excitement, sent the news to Ranch R. Mrs. Winston knew that ordinary horses never would reach her brother-in-law in time. Grabbing that crank firmly, Mrs. Winston got a spark, then a chug-chug. Ten minutes later she ran over an Indian who confessed the horse theft. Five minutes after that her brother-in-law had the noose taken from his neck and all was happiness.

THE GIRL AND THE GUN (Aug. 8).—Bad Pete, wanted for a string of offenses, quarrels with his pal and escapes to a giant trestle. Later he and the sheriff, swinging by a rope in mid-air, battle royally. Pete's pal, seeing an opportunity to dispose of two enemies at the same time, starts to cut the rope that meant death for the fighting pair. But—away down below stood a little girl with a rifle—and the pal hurtled over the trestle to destruction.

THE BATTLE GROUND (Aug. 12).—REEL 1.—Yielding to the insistent entreaties of his father, mother and a friendly priest, Bob Carroll goes away, much against his natural desires, to become a priest, after promising to marry his sweetheart, Anna Catherwood. Anna, piqued at Bob's adherence to parental wishes, hasily marries a working boy, Jim Whitcomb, and in the six years that follow, becomes addicted to liquor. Jim, himself a drunkard, comes home one day to find Anna drunk and carousing. In the scene that followed, Anna, laughing derisively, informs Jim that Bob, now a devout priest, is the father of their six-year-old child. After that Anna takes the downward path and Jim finds consolation in saloons.

One day, on charity bent, Father Bob goes into the slums. Accidentally he finds the child, and thinking it one of the city's waifs, notifies his mother to call and get it. Entering a dive, Bob is horrified to find Anna—"not as they parted in the years gone by"—but Anna is too drunk to recognize Bob.

REEL 2.—Mrs. Carroll called with Bob and took the child to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Anna returning one day, finds Bob's note telling of the child's whereabouts. Mrs. Carroll often met Anna at the Society's office, and finally succeeded in bringing about the reformation of the woman, little knowing her identity. She adopted the child and secured work for Anna as a nurse. Later, Anna, now on her upward path, stepped into a church in search of spiritual consolation. There, face to face, she met Bob, praying at the foot of a cross. There, for the first time, Bob learned that he was the father of Anna's child—a frightful revelation that spelled the day of death for the gentle-hearted priest. One afternoon Mrs. Carroll, Bob and the child went for an auto ride. They ran down Jim Whitcomb as he staggered from a saloon. At the hospital, there was a moment of recognition and understanding—a moment of horror during which Mrs. Carroll understood that her adopted child was really her grand-child; Anna, that this good woman benefactor was the mother of Bob; Bob, that he had kept in his own home as his mother's ward, his own child—and all of them knew that the end of Jim Whitcomb had come. Falling at his feet, Father Bob whispered, "Forgive me, for I knew not what I did." In his study the next day they found Father Bob, sitting upright in his chair,

ATTENTION

Exhibitors of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont

The Famous

Bison 101 Features

Are Now at Your Disposal Through the

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.

Don't lose any time, but write, wire or call at once for open dates.

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
228 Tremont Street Boston, Mass.
TELEPHONE, OXFORD 3790-2187

A Lens Outfit With Nearly Sixty Years' Experience Behind It.

A lens outfit, made in America's best equipped optical establishment by an organization with nearly Sixty Years of Experience behind it, is simply bound to be of superior quality. And on the quality of your lens outfit depends largely the quality of your pictures—the satisfaction of your audiences—and your own profits.

The long experience and high reputation of the Bausch & Lomb Optical Co. stand back of the and afford you better protection than any written guarantee.

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lenses

These lenses give steady, sharp, flickerless pictures—the kind to be proud of—the kind that yield the biggest financial returns.

Our objectives and condensers are considered the standard by leading moving picture men. You ought to know what your lens outfit will do before you buy it.

Get our interesting free Booklet 62D, valuable to both owners and operators. Write for it TODAY.

The Superior Quality of Bausch & Lomb lenses, microscopes, field glasses, projection apparatus, engineering and other scientific instruments is the product of nearly Sixty Years of Experience.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co
NEW YORK WASHINGTON CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO
LONDON ROCHESTER, N.Y. FRANKFORT

NEWSPAPERS ARE GIVING COLUMNS OF SPACE EVERY DAY TO

THE PANAMA CANAL

THE MARVEL OF THE AGE

The Greatest Engineering Feat Ever Undertaken, the Construction in All Its Details, Including Scenes Along the Canal Zone, and

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW TAKEN WHEN AVIATOR DE GIERS FLEW OVER PANAMA

Shown in Two Reels of Motion Picture Film

WRITE IMMEDIATELY FOR STATE RIGHTS AND SPECIAL EXHIBITIONS

AVIATION FILM SALES COMPANY
Sole Distributors
Suite 711, 203 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

Crown Features Draw Crowds!

Saint George and the Dragon

COPYRIGHTED, 1912.

Owners of This Feature Are Reaping Profits!

The First HIGH Class Feature Offered at a LOW Price

Our 12-Page Illustrated Art Book in Two Colors Secures Business. Our Remarkably Attractive Posters, Heralds and Dodgers Fill the House. Very Choice Territory Still Open.

WIRE FOR PARTICULARS AT OUR EXPENSE

Crown Feature Film Company
145 West 45th Street
NEW YORK

tightly clutching the big crucifix on his desk, his glassy eyes fastened on the Savior. Bending over him, Mrs. Carrol and Anna heard his stiffened lips mutter: "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give thee rest."

ECLAIR.

WANTED, A WIFE, IN A HURRY (Aug. 20).—Fred Norton, a young man-about-town, depending on the generosity of his aunt Mary, finds his many pranks have displeased her, and fearing that his allowance will be cut off, he turns over a new leaf. He writes, telling her he has at last settled down and is happily married. Aunt Mary, a little surprised and suspicious at such a sudden change, intends to investigate for herself. Norton receives notification of Aunt Mary's visit, one hour before her arrival. Taken unawares, he tries to persuade several girl acquaintances to become his wife at once. Not succeeding, he beguiles his chum, Baxter, to play the part during Aunt Mary's visit. Baxter, for want of a costume, robs his wife's wardrobe. Mrs. Baxter being away on a visit, returns unexpectedly, discovers the loss of her clothes, telephones the police, who follow down the clues and arrest the plotters before Aunt Mary's arrival.

THE WILL (Aug. 25).—Grandmother Hall, aged fast failing in health, is greatly comforted by her only two grandchildren, daughters of her own daughter long since past before. She has made a will in which she stipulates that Lawrence, her son, shall inherit her wealth providing he assumes the care of her grandchildren, and who are, of course, his nieces.

She dies. Lawrence claims the estate and orders his nieces to get out and earn their own way. A second will is found, properly filed and recorded. It is read and they learn that it is a repudiation of the first will, should Lawrence fail to live up to the terms therein. Lawrence tries to break the will but fails and the estate is ordered delivered to the girls. The granddaughters kind-heartedly offer Lawrence a home with them.

A MOSLEM LADY'S DAY (Aug. 25).—An intimate sort of glimpse into the life of an actual member of a ruler's harem. Highly instructive, inasmuch as it thoroughly disproves a common low conception of these much tabooed institutions.

ROBIN HOOD (Aug. 22).—A highly favorable review of this two-reel reproduction, from the pen of Mr. Harrison, was printed in the World of August 3.

Among the Exhibitors

Shreveport, La.—Messrs. Snively and Halloway, of Paris, Texas, will erect a moving picture theater here.

Toledo, Ohio.—The United Feature Film Company, Toledo, moving picture films: $20,000. H. E. Smith, A. A. Gottshall, Marshall A. Vanderlip, George E. Dixon and John E. Parsons, Jr.

Columbus, Ohio.—The Midland Amusement Company, Columbus. Amusement parks, theaters, airdomes, &c. Capital stock, $5,000. Incorporators: Arthur M. Crumrine, W. T. Robinson, S. M. Swisher, B. F. Reinmund, Jr., and J. I. Crumrine.

Peoria, Ill.—De Luxe Theater Company, Peoria. Capital, $5,000. To operate a place of amusement. Incorporators: Charles K. Lambert, Walter W. Whitney, and Robert N. McCormick.

Sioux City, Iowa.—The Empress Theater, formerly known as the Mizzou, at 310 Pierce Street, will open in the near future, giving Sioux City one of the best equipped motion picture houses in the West. Albert Bessmann is proprietor of the house. George W. Schermily will act as manager. A four-piece orchestra will furnish music. The theater has been remodeled and improved to the extent of $3,000. All the features of metropolitan houses will be introduced here. A new system of so-called "daylight pictures" will be installed.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Grand Theater, Holton and Locust Streets, is another addition to the already large number of picture houses in Milwaukee. Its large seating capacity, beautiful decorations and light effects make it one of the prettiest theaters in this city.

Burlington, Wis.—Work has been started on a new theater at Lake Geneva. The building is to be under the management of George A. VanSlyck. It will be 32x100 and built of cement blocks.

Rockford, Ill.—A new theater is to be erected here and will cost $60,000.

Wapello, Ia.—Robert Silin has leased the Duke Building on South Street, in which he will open a moving picture show.

Martins Ferry, W. Va.—The new Rex Theater opened in Martins Ferry under the direction of the Atheneum Amusement Company of this city. The building formerly was known as the Star Theater, but it has been completely remodeled under the direction of Architect George Deringer, of this city, and it is claimed for it that there is no prettier or finer moving picture house in the Ohio valley.

Lebanon, O.—The Theatorium Motion Picture Theater in Eighth Street, is undergoing extensive alterations.

Chisholm, Minn.—This town is to have another picture show house. Mr. Miller, of Hibbing, has consolidated with Mr. Latham, manager of the Bijou, and new quarters are being arranged in the Barret Building, on Lake Street. This will give Chisholm a straight moving picture and vaudeville house.

Shamokin, Pa.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new theater here.

Memphis, Tenn.—M. Frank awarded a contract to R. C. Mulkey to erect two out-door moving picture theaters.

Fort Worth, Texas.—R. A. Healy will erect a moving picture theater at 10th and Main Street.

Belleville, Ill.—Grace Amusement Company, Belleville; capital, $2,000; to operate vaudeville houses, moving picture shows, etc.; incorporators: Louis Landau, Jr., Alexander B. Garvin, Edson Dodge, Cecille Dodge, Thomas Gray.

Louisville Ky.—The Novelty Amusement Company, with an authorized capital stock of $20,000, divided into shares of $100 each, filed articles of incorporation in the county clerk's office recently. The company will conduct a motion picture theater. The debt limit is fixed at $2,500. The incorporators, with their holdings, are: David Levinson, fifteen shares; Moses Levinson and Caroline F. Levinson, five shares each.

Peoria, Ill.—Crystal Amusement Company, Peoria; capital, $5,000; general amusement and theatrical business; incorporators, William Schafer, Lillian Naegele, Walter H. Kirk.

Fort Worth, Texas.—Feature Department, United States Amusement Company, Fort Worth; purpose, merchandising, films and picture show supplies; capital stock, $25,000. Incorporators, W. G. Underwood, Fort Worth; C. R. Scott, Amarillo, and E. F. Hardwick, Artesia, N. M.

Granite City, Ill.—Lillian Amusement Company, Granite City; capital, $2,000; general vaudeville, moving picture and show business; incorporators, Louis Landau, Jr., Thomas Gray, Cecille Dodge, Edson A. Dodge, A. B. Garvin.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The Orpheum Amusement Company, Cincinnati, picture and vaudeville, theaters; $15,000: A. G. Turnipseed, Nelson B. Cramer, Franklin T. Cahill, C. Ouert and S. A. Headly.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.—Palace Theater Company, Cedar Rapids, capital stock, $15,000. Incorporators: M. Ford, A. J. Diebald and L. M. Ford.

Halton, Kan.—A motion picture theater is to be opened in the Hedrick Building.

Lancaster, N. H.—A new moving picture theater will be constructed here.

Evansville, Ind.—Evansville Auto-Foto Company, Evansville; to manufacture moving picture films; capital stock, $6,000; directors: A. C. Sallee, F. W. Launestein and F. P. Fuchs.

It's YOUR BUSINESS to Know OUR BUSINESS

IS GROWING THROUGH INCREASING SATISFIED CUSTOMERS EVERYWHERE

Motion Picture Supplies

Machines { MOTIOGRAPH, POWERS, EDISON, SIMPLEX, STANDARD

Carbons { ARCO, BIO, ELECTRA, FLAMING, NATIONAL

SECOND HAND MACHINES BOUGHT, SOLD, EXCHANGED, REPAIRED

Gas Outfits — Asbestos Booths — Electric Signs — Rewinds Compensarcs — Tickets Condensers

Gundlach and Bausch & Lomb Projection Lenses

GENUINE REPAIR PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF MACHINES

COME OVER AND GET ACQUAINTED WHILE AT THE CONVENTION

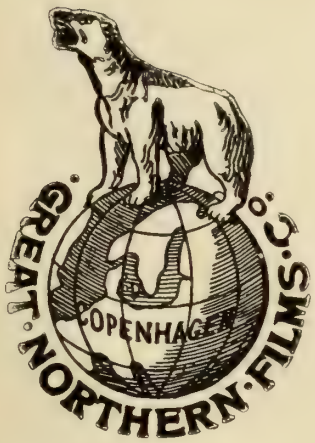
Remember This—We Handle an Order for Only Ten Cents as Cheerfully as One for One Thousand Dollars.

WE WANT YOUR BUSINESS—YOU NEED OUR BUSINESS

Amusement Supply Company

107A No. Dearborn St. ∴ ∴ ∴ Chicago, Ill.

GREAT NORTHERN



Release for Saturday, August 3rd

THE KING'S POWER

A beautiful and refined drama, with a cleverly chosen cast. Superb photography and excellent scenic effects. TWO REELS.

BOOK THIS GENUINE HEADLINER NOW!
ELABORATE ONE AND THREE-SHEET LITHOGRAPHS, ETC.

Release for Saturday, August 10th

THOU SHALT NOT KILL

A Dramatic Production of Merit. On the Same Reel:

WHEN THE CAT'S AWAY

A Ludicrous Comedy.

Release for Saturday, August 17th

THE PRODIGAL'S RETURN

A drama extraordinary. A subject which can be featured big.

Watch for Our Coming Headliners!

SOLD ONLY THROUGH FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 E. 14th St., N. Y.

NORDISK FILM CO. OF COPENHAGEN.

LUX FILMS

RELEASE FOR FRIDAY, AUGUST 16th, 1912

Tommy Saves His Little Sister

Length 983 ft.

A powerful Drama in which the Wonderful Child Actor TOMMY

SAVES HIS LITTLE SISTER

RELEASE FOR AUGUST 23rd, 1912

Uncle's Favorite Pudding

Comedy. Length 774 ft.

Views of the Livran

Scenic. Length 239 ft.

R. PRIEUR, 10 EAST 15th STREET NEW YORK CITY

Telephone 3427 Stuyvesant

SOLD ONLY THROUGH FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA

INDEPENDENT Release Dates

AMERICAN.

July 31—The Fight at the Mill (Drama).....
July 31—Giants of Steel (Scenic).....
Aug. 1—A Life For a Kiss (Drama).....1000
Aug. 5—The Meddlers (Drama).....1000
Aug. 7—Saved by an Auto (Com.....1000
Aug. 8—The Girl and the Gun (Dr.).....1000
August 12—The Battle-Ground (2 reels).....2000
August 14—The Bad Man and the Ranger (Com.-Dr.) 1000
August 15—The Outlaw Colony (Drama).....1000
Aug. 19—The Land of Death (Drama).....
Aug. 21—The Outlaw Colony (Drama).....

AMBROSIO.

June 21—The Maniac (Dr.).....
June 28—The Actor's Test (Dr.).....
June 28—Benares, the Sacred City (Sc.).....
July 5—The Legend of the Chrysanthemum (Dr.)
July 5—The Airman (Com.).....

BISON.

July 27—The White Saviour (Dr.).....
July 30—An Even Break (Dr.).....
Aug. 3—His Partner's Share (Dr.).....
August 6—A Western Girl's Dream (Drama)..
August 10—Her First Choice (Drama).....
Aug. 13—The Widow's Claim (Drama).....
Aug. 17—The Shot That Failed (Drama).....
Aug. 20—How He Made Good (Drama).....

CHAMPION.

July 22—The Call of the West (Dr.).....
July 29—The Poisoners (Dr.).....
August 5—What a Woman Will Do (Drama)..
Aug. 12—For His Child (Drama).....
Aug. 19—The Bum and the Bomb (Comedy)...

COMET.

July 20—Her Indian Guardian (Dr.).....
July 22—Reformed by Strategy (Com.).....
July 27—The Tomboy Ranch Girl (Dr.).....
July 29—Reconciled in Reno (Com.).....
Aug. 3—The Hold-Up in Buckeye Canyon (Dr.)
August 5—A Bachelor's Romance (Dramatic)..1000
August 10—Hold Up in Buckeye Canyon (Dr.)..1000
August 12—Two Women and One Man (Dr.)..1000
August 17—Western Chivalry (Drama).....1000
August 19—House of "No Children" (Com.)..1000
Aug. 24—The Deputy's Duty (Drama).....1000

ECLAIR.

Aug. 4—The Price of Blood (Dr.).....
Aug. 4—The Beautiful Vintage Time (Ind.)..
Aug. 6—Because of Bobbie (Com.-Dr.).....
Aug. 8—Boys Again (Com.).....
Aug. 11—The Foster Sister (Com.-Dr.).....
Aug. 11—Carlsbad (Scenic).....
August 13—Daddy (Comedy).....
August 15—Aunt Hetty's Gold Fish (Com.-Dr.)
August 18—A Child to the Rescue (Drama)....
August 18—Egyptian Ruines (Scenic).....
Aug. 20—Wanted, a Wife In a Hurry (Com.)..
Aug. 22—Robin Hood (3 reels; Drama).....
Aug. 25—The Will (Drama).....
Aug. 25—A Moslem Lady's Day (Novelty)....

GAUMONT.

Aug. 1—A Romance of the Palm Garden (Dr.)
Aug. 6—Dream Driven (Comedy).....
Aug. 7—Gaumont Weekly (Topical).....
Aug. 8—The Phantom of the Night (Dr.).....
August 13—Graziella, the Gypsy (Drama).....
August 14—Gaumont Weekly (Topical).....
August 15—Their Lives for Gold (Drama)....
Aug. 20—Her Supreme Sacrifice (Drama).....
Aug. 21—Gaumont's Weekly (Top.).....
Aug. 22—Androclus and the Lion (Ed. Dr.)....

GEM.

July 9—Under Two Flags (2 reels, Dr.).....
July 16—Two Men (Dr.).....
July 23—Bread Cast Upon the Waters (Dr.)..
July 30—Back to Her Own (Dr.).....
August 6—'Neath the Homespun (Drama)....
Aug. 13—Babette (Drama).....
Aug. 20—White Dove's Sacrifice (Drama).....

GREAT NORTHERN.

July 13—Circumstantial Evidence (Dr.).....
July 13—Moving Pictures (Com.).....
July 20—Almost a Tragedy (Com.-Dr.).....
July 20—Uncle Reuben Goes to Town (Com.)..
July 27—Don't Go On a Spree (Comedy).....
Aug. 3—The King's Power (Drama).....
Aug. 10—Thou Shalt Not Kill (Drama).....
Aug. 10—The Springlock (Comedy).....
Aug. 10—When the Cat's Away (Comedy)....
Aug. 10—Thou Shalt Not Kill (Drama).....
Aug. 17—The Prodigal's Return (Drama).....
Aug. 24—For Her Sister's Sake (Drama)..... 944

IMP.

July 27—A Case of Dynamite (Comedy).....
July 27—Love's Diary (Com.-Dr.).....
July 29—Reunited By the Sea (Drama).....1000
Aug. 1—Adrift (Drama) 1000
Aug. 3—The Cure that Failed (Comedy)....
Aug. 3—In and Around Chicago (Topical)....
August 5—The Hindoo's Prize (Dr.).....1000
August 8—Blood Is Thicker Than Water (Dr.).1000
August 10—How Jones Saw the Ball game (Comedy) .....
August 10—Ferdie's Family Feud (Comedy)....
Aug. 12—Big Hearted Sim (Drama).....1000
Aug. 15—In Old Tennessee (2 reels; Drama)..2000
Aug. 17—Kidnapping Dolly (Comedy).....
Aug. 17—In and Around Charleston, S. C. (Sc.)
Aug. 19—Padrone's Daughter (Drama).....
Aug. 22—The Castaway (Drama).....

LUX.

July 5—The Empty Holster (Dr.)..... 860
July 12—Spiffkin's New Job (Com.)..... 567
July 12—Ponto's Little Joke (Com.)..... 393
July 19—Stones that Rebound (Dr.)..... 970
July 26—Mr. X and the Unfortunate Heiress (Dr.)..... 967
Aug. 2—The Mysterious Flowers (Drama).... 983
Aug. 9—A Race for Liberty (Dr.)..... 580
Aug. 9—The Postman's Escapade (Com.)..... 272
August 16—Tommy Saves His Little Sister (Dr.)
Aug. 23—Uncle's Favorite Pudding (Com.).... 744
Aug. 23—Views of the Livran (Scenic)..... 239

ITALA.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Feb. 17—The Italian Army in Tripoli.....
Feb. 17—Making a Cinematograph Scene.....
June 29—The Great Bank Failure (2 reels, Dr.)
July 6—A Woman's Duplicity (Dr.).....

MAJESTIC.

July 28—The New Policeman (Comedy).....
July 30—The Mighty Hunter (Comedy).....
Aug. 4—Farmer Allen's Daughter (Dr.).....
Aug. 6—The Higher Thought (Com.).....
August 11—The Matrimonial Substitute (Com.)
August 11—The Striped Parasol (Comedy).....
August 13—A Summer Idyl (Comedy).....
Aug. 18—Toodles (Comedy) .....
Aug. 18—A Game of Chess (Com.-Dr.).....
Aug. 20—The New Butler (Comedy).....

MILANO.

July 27—The Blind Man's Sacrifice (Dr. 2 reels)
Aug. 3—The Battle of Two Palms (2 reels) (Dr.)
August 10—Playthings of Fate (2 reels, Dr.)..
Aug. 17—Their Guardian Angel (Drama).....
Aug. 24—The Courage of Fear (Drama).....

NESTOR.

July 26—Young Wild West's Prairie Pursuit (Drama) .....
July 29—The Undoing of Slim Bill (Com.).....
July 31—The Obligation (Dr.).....
Aug. 2—Young Wild West Washing Out Gold (Dr.).....
August 5—Fortunes of War (Drama).....
August 7—Fatty of E Z Ranch (Comedy)....
August 9—A Mexican Mix-up (Drama).....
Aug. 12—A Tale of the Foothills (Drama)....
Aug. 14—How Steve Made Good (Com.-Dr.)..
Aug. 16—The Miner's Widow (Drama).....
Aug. 19—When the Heart Calls (Drama).....
Aug. 21—The Alibi (Drama).....
Aug. 23—A Stubborn Cupid.....

POWERS.

July 31—The Rose Festival (Scenic).....
Aug. 2—Dora (Dr.).....
August 7—As the Wind Blows (Comedy)....
August 9—The Burglar and the Rose (Dr.)..
Aug. 14—Horse Show at Long Branch (Top.)..
Aug. 14—Wanted, a Practice (Comedy).....
Aug. 16—The Golden Rule (Drama).....
Aug. 21—Her Diary (Drama).....
Aug. 23—Life's Lesson (Drama).....

RELIANCE.

July 13—The Toy 'Phone (Dr.).....
July 17—At Cripple Creek (Dr.).....
July 20—Love Me, Love My Dog (Com.-Dr.)...
July 24—The True Love (Dr.).....
July 27—The Soldier Baby (Dr.).....
July 31—Where There is Soap, There is Hope (Comedy) .....
Aug. 3—The Wood Nymph (Drama).....
Aug. 7—Phillip Steele (2 reels) (Dr.).....
Aug. 10—The Two Fathers (Dr.).....
August 14—Order in the Court (Comedy).....
August 14—The Old Swimming Hole (Comedy)..
August 17—A Man Among Men (Drama).....
Aug. 21—One Against One (Drama).....
Aug. 24—North of 53 (Drama).....

REPUBLIC.

June 25—The Queen of May (Dr.).....
June 29—In the Balance (Dr.).....
July 2—Evil Be to Him Who Evil Thinks (Dr.)
July 8—The Gold In the Auto (Dr.).....
July 15—The All-seeing Eye (Dr.).....
July 22—Evil be to Him Who Evil Thinks (Dr.)
July 29—A House-top Romance (Dr.).....
July 29—Evolution of a Duck Egg (Edu.).....
Aug. 5—The Octoroon's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
August 12—The Borrowing Simp (Comedy)....
Aug. 19—The Curse of Drink (Drama).....

REX.

Aug. 1—The Lash of Fate (Dr.).....
Aug. 4—The Hour of Peril (Dr.).....
August 8—The Troubadour's Triumph (Dr.)..
August 11—None Can Do More (Drama).....
Aug. 15—The Greater Christian (Drama).....
Aug. 18—Thus Many Souls (Drama).....
Aug. 22—An Old Fashioned Girl (Drama).....
Aug. 25—The Leader of the Band (Drama)....

SOLAX.

Aug. 2—Buddy and His Dog (Drama).....
Aug. 7—Two Little Rangers (Dr.).....
Aug. 9—The Pink Garters (Com.).....
Aug. 14—The Blood Stain (Dr.).....
Aug. 16—The Strike (Dr.).....
August 14—The Blood Stain (Drama).....
August 16—The Strike (Drama).....
Aug. 23—The Equine Spy (2 reels; Drama)....
Aug. 28—His Double (Comedy).....

THANHOUSER.

Aug. 6—Baby Hands (Dr.).....
Aug. 9—Old Dr. Judd (Dr.).....
August 11—Big Sister (Drama).....
August 13—Now Watch the Professor (Com.-Dr.)
August 16—The Wrecked Taxi (Drama).....
Aug. 18—As Others See Us.....
Aug. 18—Warner's Waxworks .....
Aug. 20—Her Darkest Hour.....
Aug. 23—Conductor 786 (Drama).....

VICTOR.

July 26—Not Like Other Girls (Drama).....
Aug. 2—Taking a Chance (Dr.).....
August 9—The Mill Buyers (Drama).....
Aug. 16—The Chance Shot (Drama).....
Aug. 23—Her Cousin Fred (Drama).....

MISCELLANEOUS.

NEW YORK FILM CO.

July 15—Lights and Shadows of Chinatown (Dr.).....

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY COMPANY.

July 15—The Penalty (Dr.).....
July 29—The Circus Girl (Dr.).....

GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM COMPANY.

March 18—The Call of a Woman.....3000
April 8—Cell Thirteen.....2000
April 22—The Dead Man's Child.....3000
April 15—The Dead Man's Child, 3 Reels (Dr.)

SHAMROCK.

May 7—A Gypsy's Love (Dr.).....
May 11—Algernon's Busy Day (Com.).....
May 14—On the Verge (Dr.).....
May 18—Algernon's Busy Day (Com.).....
May 21—The Thorny Path (Dr.).....
May 25—A Cold Reception (Com.).....
May 25—The Kissing Germ (Com.).....
May 28—White Fawn (Dr.).....
May 31—A Petticoat Ranch Boss (Com.).....

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS THE BIG TICKET. ANY PRINTING ANY COLORS

5,000	-	-	$1.25	20,000	-	-	$4.60	50,000	-	-	$7.50
10,000	-	-	$2.50	25,000	-	-	$5.50	100,000	-	-	$10.00

GET THE SAMPLES STOCK TICKETS, 6 CENTS

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - - Shamokin, Pa.

ECLAIR

TUESDAY, AUGUST 20th

"Wanted: A Wife in a Hurry"

It rolls and rocks with laughter as the film comes reeling out.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 22nd, 1912

"Robin Hood"

In Three Parts

You can exhibit "Robin Hood" without a fear of its failing to please. It will go over big. Take our word for it. You will, won't you? Did we ever disappoint you on a feature release? And we never will!

SUNDAY, AUGUST 25th

"The Will"

Quite too many persons leaven the sorrow of death in anticipation of the deceased one's will. See this one.

ECLAIR FILM CO., 225 West 42nd St., New York City

"Feel majestic by using Majestic Film Service"

YOU discriminating exhibitors, you managers who believe in getting what you are promised—your money's worth—will get your film service here. Not only will you get advance booking of the dependable kind, but you'll get the entire output of the Film Supply Co. of America as well as the famous western "101" Bisons and Broncho Bisons. You'll never want to get away if you hook up here.

A card stating number of reels you use per change, and the number of changes you make per week, as well as the age of service wanted, will bring you a price that will make you wire your start order.

Write for an early booking of CUSTER'S LAST FIGHT
3 REELS "101" BISON

MAJESTIC FILM SERVICE COMPANY
R. C. SEERY, Manager
216 NORTH FIFTH AVENUE CHICAGO

LICENSED Release Dates

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, C. G. P. C., Cines, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Eclipse, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Pathe, Selig.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, C. G. P. C., Vitagraph.

Saturday—Edison, Essanay, Cines, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

July 25—The Would-Be Shriner (Com.).....
July 25—Willie Becomes an Artist (Com.).....
July 29—Black Sheep (Dr.).....
Aug. 1—The Narrow Road (Dr.).....
Aug. 5—The Tourist (Com.).....
Aug. 5—What the Doctor Ordered (Com.).....
Aug. 8—A Child's Remorse (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—Rameses, King of Egypt (Special—2 reels—Drama) .....
August 12—The Inner Circle (Drama).....
August 15—An Interrupted Elopement (Com.)..
August 15—The Tragedy of a Dress Suit (Com.)
Aug. 19—With the Enemy's Help (Drama)....1000
Aug. 22—A Change of Spirit (Drama).....1000

CINES.

(G. Kleine.)

Aug. 3—Carthage and Sidi-Bu-Said (Sc.)..... 360
Aug. 6—The Little Orphan (Dr.)..... 903
Aug. 10—The Danger Line (Dr.).....1067
August 12—Rameses, King of Egypt (Special; 2 reels; Drama) .....
August 13—Mona Lisa In Disguise (Com.).... 600
August 13—Vicovara, Italy (Scenic)..... 400
August 17—A Convict's Gratitude (Drama)....1025
Aug. 20—A Matter of Pride (Drama).....1000
Aug. 24—A Picture C. O. D. (Comedy)..... 470
Aug. 24—Jenkins, the Watchman (Comedy)... 250
Aug. 24—Modern Naples (Scenic)..... 305

EDISON.

July 13—Madame de Mode (Com.)..... 700
July 16—Nerves and the Man (Dr.).....1000
July 17—Revenge is Sweet (Com.)..... 600
July 17—The Maple Sugar Industry at Thompson, Pa. (Ind.)..... 400
July 19—The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves (Dr.).....1000
July 20—The Little Artist from the Market (Dr.).....1000
July 23—The Sketch With the Thumb Print (Dr.).....1000
July 24—The Grouch (Com.-Dr.)..... 985
July 26—The Escape from Bondage (Dr.).....1000
July 27—The Relief of Lucknow (Hist.-Dr.)....1000
July 30—More Precious than Gold (Dr.).....1000
July 31—When She Was About Sixteen (Com.)1000
Aug. 2—The Lord and the Peasant (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 3—Ninth International Red Cross Conference, Washington, D. C., May 7 17, 1912 (Top)..... 700
Aug. 3—Mary Had a Little Lamb (Com.)..... 300
Aug. 6—In His Father's Steps (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 7—Marjorie's Diamond Ring (Com.)....1000
Aug. 9—The Librarian (Dr.)..... 980
Aug. 10—The City of Washington, the Capital of the United States (Scenic)..... 960
August 13—A Dangerous Lesson (Drama).....1000
August 14—Holding the Fort (Comedy).....1000
August 16—The Harbinger of Peace (Drama)..1000
August 17—Spring Log Driving, Maine (Ind.)..1000
Aug. 20—The Street Beautiful (Edu. Dr.)....1000
Aug. 21—Mr. Pickwick's Predicament (Com.)..1000
Aug. 23—The Cub Reporter (Drama).....1000
Aug. 24—The War on the Mosquito (Edu.)...1000

ESSANAY.

July 19—Hearts of Men (Dr.).....1000
July 20—A Wife of the Hills (Dr.).....1000
July 23—The Understudy (Com.-Dr.).....1000
July 25—Mr. Tibbs' Cinderella (Com.).....1000
July 26—Twins (Com.).....1000
July 27—A Moonshiner's Heart (Dr.).....1000
July 30—Broncho Billy's Pal (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 1—Her Hour of Triumph—(Dr.).....1000
Aug. 2—The Browns Have Visitors (Com.)...1000
Aug. 3—The Loafer's Mother (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 6—The New Church Organ (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 8—The Old Wedding Dress (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—The Tale of a Cat (Com.).....1000
Aug. 10—The Little Sheriff (Com.-Dr.).....1000
August 13—Broncho Billy's Last Hold-up (Dr.).1000
August 15—An Adamless Eden (Comedy).....1000
August 16—The Magic Wand (Juvenile).....1000
August 17—On the Moonlight Trail (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 20—The Return of Becky (Drama).....1000
Aug. 22—A Corner in Whiskers (Comedy).....1000
Aug. 23—Her Adopted Father (Drama).....1000
Aug. 24—Broncho Billy's Escapade (Drama)..1000

KALEM.

July 22—The Siege of Petersburg (Hist. Dr.) (Special) (2 Reels) .....
July 24—Fantasca, the Gypsy (Dr.) 1000
July 26—A Political Kidnapping (Dr.).....1000
July 29—The Family Tyrant (Dr.).....1000
July 31—The Soldier Brothers of Susanna (Dr.)1000
Aug. 2—The Barefoot Boy (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 2—Easter Celebration at Jerusalem (Scenic) .....
Aug. 5—The Mine Swindler (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 7—Freed From Suspicion (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—The Wandering Musician (Dr.).....1000
August 12—The Little Keeper of the Light (Drama) 1000
August 14—Kentucky Girl (Drama).....1000
August 16—The Prison Ship (Drama).....1000
Aug. 19—The Daughter of the Sheriff (Drama).1000
Aug. 21—The Frenzy of Firewater (Drama)....1000
Aug. 23—The Beauty Parlor of Stone Gulch (Comedy) 1000
Aug. 24—Rube Marquard Wins (Drama).....1323

LUBIN.

Aug. 3—The Detective's Conscience (Dr.)....1000
Aug. 5—A Prize Package (Com.).....1000
Aug. 7—The Sand Storm (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 8—Buster In Nodland (Com.).....
Aug. 8—A Double Courtship (Com.).....
Aug. 9—A Fly Time (Com.).....1000
Aug. 10—The Missing Finger (Dr.).....1000
August 12—The Minister and the Outlaw (Dr.)..1000
August 14—The Stubbornness of Youth (Dr.)...1000
August 15—Baseball Industry (Ind.).....1000
August 16—The Hindoo's Charm (Comedy)....1000
August 17—The Deputy's Peril (Drama).....1000
Aug. 19—The Hobo Club (Comedy).....
Aug. 19—Won at High Tide (Comedy).....
Aug. 21—The Convalescent (Drama).....1000
Aug. 22—The New Ranch Foreman (Drama)....1000
Aug. 23—Work In a United States Arsenal (Educational) .....
Aug. 23—A Water Fight (Comedy).....
Aug. 24—The Government Test (Drama).....1000

MELIES.

July 18—The Lesson (Dr.).....
July 18—A Cowboy's Proposal (Com.).....
July 25—A String of Beads (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 1—The Will of Destiny (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 8—The Ranger's Girls (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 15—A Romance at Catalina (Dr.).....1000
August 22—The Moth and the Flame (Drama)..1000
Aug. 29—His Partner's Share (Drama).....1000

ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

July 31—The Trials of a Playwright (Com.-Dr.) 1010
Aug. 7—The Joker's Mistake (Com.)..... 390
Aug. 7—From Sion to Champery, Switzerland (Scenic)..... 220
Aug. 7—A Quiet Boarding House (Com.)..... 390
August 14—The Rivals (Drama).....1000
Aug.21—A Day In the German Navy (Naval).. 425
Aug. 21—Pulp Mills in the Province of Quebec (Industrial) 310
Aug. 21—Microscopical Curiosities (Edu.)..... 280

PATHE.

July 17—A Question of Size (Com.).....
July 18—The Brave Little Indian (Dr.).....
July 20—The Halfbreed Foster Sister (Dr.)...
July 22—Pathe's Weekly No. 30—1912 (Topical) .....
July 24—His Second Love (Dr.) .....
July 25—The Redman's Friendship (Dr.) .....
July 27—For the Sake of the Papoose (Dr.)..
July 29—Don Juan and Charles V (2 reels; Dr.; Special).....
July 29—Pathe's Weekly No. 31—1912 (Top.)
July 31—Anona's Baptism (Drama).....
Aug. 1—In God's Care (Drama).....
Aug. 1—A Little Trip in the Colorado Mountains (Scenic) .....
Aug. 3—Memories (Drama) .....
Aug. 5—Pathe's Weekly, No. 32, 1912 (Top.)
Aug. 7—The Arrow Maker's Daughter (Dr.)..
Aug. 8—The Famous Scout to the Rescue (Dr.)
Aug. 10—Here and there in Oregon (Sc.).....
Aug. 10—Kittens (Juvenile).....
August 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 33—1912 (Top.)
August 14—Silver Wing's Two Suitors (Dr.)..
August 15—Cupid's Stolen Arrows (Com.).....
August 17—The Cactus County Lawyer (Dr.)..
Aug. 19—Pathe's Weekly No. 34 (Top.).....
Aug. 21—Jealousy on the Ranch (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—The Hand of Destiny (Dr.).....
Aug. 24—The $2,500 Bride (Dr.).....

C. G. P. C.

July 16—Whiffles Mourns His Twin (Com.)....
July 19—The End of Robespierre (Hist.-Dr.)..
July 23—Jane Seymour and Henri VIII of England (Hist.-Dr.) .....
July 26—A Bold Game (Dr.).....
July 26—Over Monaco in a Hydro-Aeroplane (Scenic) .....
July 30—The Martyrs (Drama).....
Aug. 2—The Lightning Paper Hanger (Com.)
Aug. 2—Havana, Its Streets, Buildings and Fortresses (Scenic) .....
Aug. 6—Death of Chevalier Albertini (Dr.)..
Aug. 9—The Burglar's Weird Reception (Com.)
Aug. 9—How a Letter Travels from the Great Lakes of Central Africa (Edu.)....
August 13—The Tyrolean Doll (Comedy).....
August 15—Some Inhabitants of Stagnant water (Educational) .....
August 16—A Love Story of Old Japan (Dr.)....
Aug. 20—His Windmill (Dr.) .....
Aug. 20—The Sedge Warbler and the Cuckoo (Ed.) .....
Aug. 23—The Queen's Pity (Dr.).....

SELIG.

July 12—The Los Angeles Police Department (Top.).....
July 15—The Pennant Puzzle (Com.).....1000
July 16—The Girl and the Cowboy (Dr.).....1000
July 18—The Polo Substitute (Sporting).....1000
July 19—A Day Off (Com.).....1000
July 22—On the Trail of the Germs (Edu.)....1000
July 23—The Double Cross (Dr.).....1000
July 25—The Miller of Burgundy (Dr.).....1000
July 26—A Wartime Romance (Dr.).....
July 26—In Maoriland (Edu.).....
July 29—The Three Valises (Drama).....1000
July 30—The Peculiar Nature of the White Man's Burden (Drama).....1000
Aug. 1—Officer Murray (Drama).....1000
Aug. 2—The Wreck of the Vega (Topical)..
Aug. 2—The Right Way and the Wrong Way (Educational) .....
Aug. 5—An Unexpected Fortune (Com.-Dr.)...1000
Aug. 6—The Man From Dragon Land (Dr.)...1000
Aug. 8—The Girl at the Cupola (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—The Boob (Com.-Dr.).....1000
August 12—A Messenger to Kearney (Drama)..1000
August 13—The Wayfarer (Drama).....1000
August 15—In the Tents of the Asra (Dr.)....1000
August 16—Two Gay Dogs (Comedy).....1000
Aug. 19—The Box Car Baby (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 20—The Cowboy's Mother (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—Betty Fools Dear Old Dad (Com.)....1000
Aug. 23—Land Sharks vs. Sea Dogs (Com.-Dr.)
Aug. 23—From Forest to Mills (Ed.).....

VITAGRAPH.

July 24—Martha's Rebellion (Com.).....1000
July 26—The Barrier that was Burned (Dr.)..1000
July 27—The Light of St. Bernard (Dr.).....1000
July 29—The Miracle (Drama).....1000
July 30—A Juvenile Love Affair (Com.).....1000
July 31—The Adventure of the Retired Army Colonel (Drama) 1000
Aug. 2—The Awakening of Jones (Com.)....1000
Aug. 3—The Fatherhood of Buck McGee (Dr.).1000
Aug. 5—Too Much Wooing of Handsome Dan (Com.).....1000
Aug. 6—At the Eleventh Hour (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 7—The Cross Roads (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—Wanted, a Grandmother (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 10—Suing Susan (Com.).....1000
August 12—Bunny and the Dogs (Comedy).... 300
August 12—Ingenuity (Drama)..... 700
August 13—The Heart of Esmeralda (Drama)..1000
August 14—Vultures and Doves (Drama)....1000
August 16—The Bogus Napoleon (Comedy)....1000
August 17—Two Battles (Drama).....1000
Aug. 19—Rip Van Winkle (Special 2 reel Dr.).2000
Aug. 19—Her Grandchild (Drama).....1000
Aug. 20—Lovesick Maidens of Cuddletown (Comedy) 1000
Aug. 21—The Ancient Bow (Drama).....1000
Aug. 23—Saving An Audience (Comedy).....1000
Aug. 24—The Party Dress (Drama)..... 614
Aug. 24—On Board Kaiser Wilhelm the Second (Educational) 388

POSTERS For all the above releases, also one, three and six sheets furnished by

THE AMERICAN SONG SLIDE AND POSTER CO., 5th Floor, 1st Nat'l Bank Bldg., Chicago

SONG SLIDES Absolutely the best song slide service in America. Week's supply in advance in one shipment. ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴

INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS, Inc.

5 West 14th St., New York City

Importers and Exporters

Dealers in Foreign and Domestic Films

INTERNATIONAL EXCLUSIVE FEATURES

New and Second Hand FILMS

of every make and description

FEATURE FILMS A SPECIALTY

EASTMAN motion picture film—the acknowledged standard the world over.

Manufactured by

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

WURLITZER

World's Largest Mfrs. Established 1856

Wurlitzer PianOrchestra and Mandolin Sextet in Royal Theatre, Lima, O.

Write for 32-page booklet, showing

Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments

in the leading picture theatres of the country.

The Wurlitzer Instruments furnish better music than musicians and reduce expenses. 50 different styles; time payments; big catalog free. If you can't call, write to our nearest branch.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company

CINCINNATI 117-121 E. 4th — NEW YORK 25-27 W. 32d — CHICAGO 329-331 S. Wabash — PHILADELPHIA 1835 Chestnut

ST. LOUIS 912 Pine St. — CLEVELAND 800 Huron Road — BUFFALO 701 Main — LOUISVILLE 426 W. Greene — COLUMBUS, O. 57 E. Main

America's Popular Photoplayers

Handsome Photographs 11 x 14 of the Leading Stars of the Film Firmament

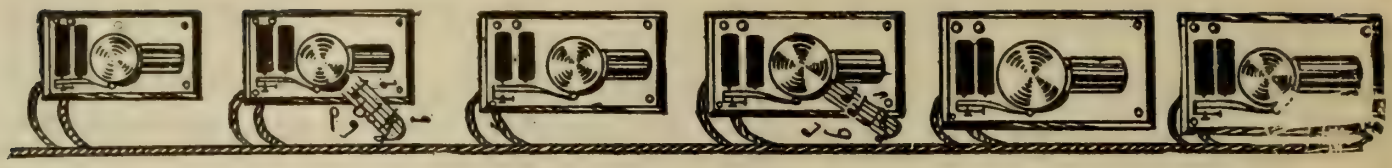
MAURICE COSTELLO	MARY PICKFORD	ARTHUR JOHNSON
FLORENCE TURNER	G. M. ANDERSON	ALICE JOYCE
JOHN BUNNY	GENE GAUNTIER	MARSHALL P. WILDER
LILLIAN WALKER	CRANE WILBUR	MARY FULLER

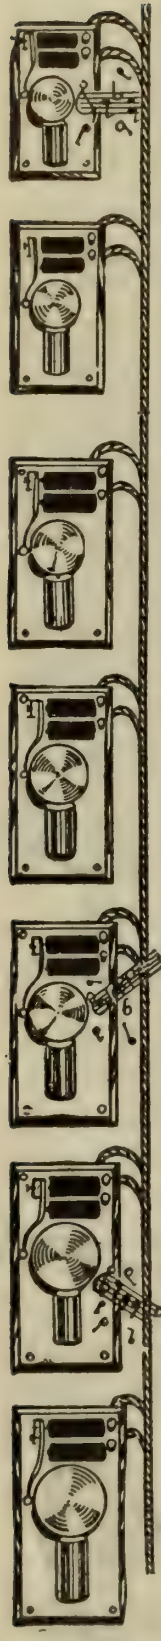
Complete set of 12 for $2.00 Charges prepaid

Send Money Order or Bank Draft with Order. NO Personal Checks or C. O. D. The Latest Novelty in Motion Picturedom. Every One an Established Favorite. The Largest Photographs of These Stars Ever Sold.

ORDER NOW SUPPLY LIMITED

PHOTOPLAY ADV. & SPECIALTY CO., 121 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa., and all Branch Offices





To Our Friends the Mo

From Maine to California, attending we extend a Royal Wel

Grand Mus

In Room 1845,

Listen! Listen !

TO THE MARVELOUS

The Greatest Musical Novelty Instrument of the Century, ANYBODY CAN PLAY IT

The NEW ELECTRICAL

Played from Keyboard Like a Piano.

FAMOUS MUSICAL

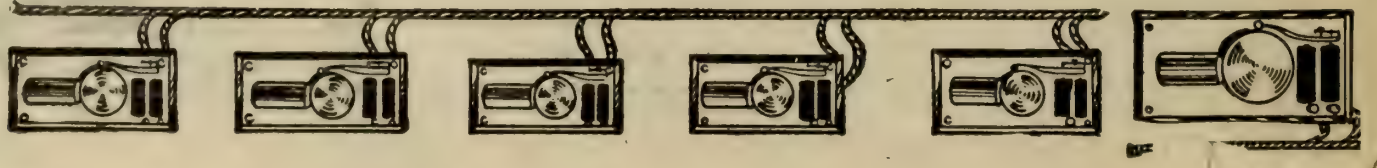
Improved in Construction. Thirteen

Xylophones, Aluminum Chimes, Marimbaphones,

WE WILL BE PLEASED TO SEE EXHIBITORS AT OUR

J. C. DEAGAN

CHICAGO,



tion Picture Exhibitors

the National Convention in Chicago come—Come and see our ical Exhibit

La Salle Hotel

Listen!

Listen !

VITAPHONE

a Peerless Attraction for the Motion Picture Theater
MODERATE IN COST

CATHEDRAL CHIMES

The Most Beautiful Chimes in the World

ELECTRICAL BELLS

Hundred Sets Sold During Past Year

Parsifal Bells, Organ Chimes, Orchestra Bells

NEW $250,000 PLANT DURING THE CONVENTION

Berteau and East Ravenswood Park Aves.

ILLINOIS

WE ARE READY

WITH POSITIVELY THE BEST STATE RIGHT PROPOSITION EVER OFFERED

DEADWOOD DICK

3 REELS — 3000 FEET

HERO OF THE BLACK HILLS

This Is the Most Realistic Western Picture Ever Produced

Write or Wire Us at Once for Full Particulars Regarding This Feature

Atlas Manufacturing Company

411 Century Bldg. — ST. LOUIS, MO.

Watch For This One Coming Soon

3 REELS---QUO VADIS

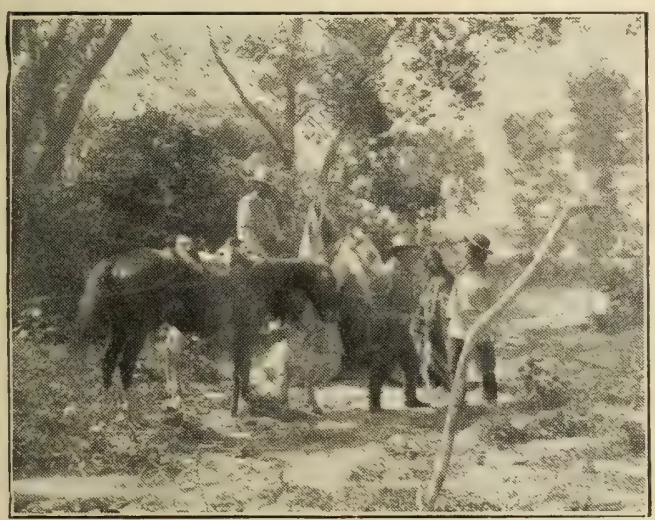
STATE RIGHT MEN

YOU CAN'T BE WITHOUT THIS ONE

THE LAST STAND OF THE

DALTON BOYS

AT COFFEYVILLE, KANS.



3 Reels --- 84 Scenes --- 3000 Feet

This Feature Has Broken All Box Office Records Where It Has Shown and Will Get the Money. Don't Wait Until All States Are Sold. A Few Good Ones Left.

ACT QUICK - WRITE - WIRE - OR - PHONE

ATLAS MANUFACTURING COMPANY

411 CENTURY BUILDING ST. LOUIS, MO.

OUR NEXT RELEASE---SAPHO

The Finest Scene in the
Best Film Ever Produced
Can be Vastly Improved

WITH

BIO RECOGNIZED BIO CARBONS BRAND STANDARD MIL CARBONS

BECAUSE

They are the only carbons that give a fine white, steady, long, flickerless light
If you expect the best results give your operator what he wants

BIO CARBONS

GET THEM FROM

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

NEW YORK
165 Greenwich Street

MILWAUKEE
114 Huron Street

SAN FRANCISCO
19 Sutter Street

AND ALL LIVE FILM EXCHANGES AND SUPPLY DEALERS

CALIFORNIA FILM EXCHANGE, INC.

THE HOUSE WITH REPUTATION

Handling the entire UNIVERSAL PROGRAM.
101 BISON and all other LEADING BRANDS

Write, Wire or Phone and Arrange for Your Film Service with the Largest Independent Film Renters on the Pacific Coast

OFFICES

54 Seventh St., San Francisco, Cal.
110 East Fourth St., Los Angeles, Cal.
Lewis Bldg., Phœnix, Ariz.

FEATURES
AND NOTHING ELSE

FOR SALE or RENT AT LOW PRICES

FLAMES AND SHADOWS.....2 REELS
ARSON AT SEA.....2 REELS
FLIGHT TO DEATH.....2 REELS
THE RIGHT OF YOUTH.....2 REELS
SIEGE OF CALAIS.....2 REELS
MINE DISASTER .....3 REELS
ABSOLOM .....2 REELS
THROUGH TROUBLED WATERS....2 REELS
THE ORLEANS COACH.....3 REELS
AND MANY OTHERS

OUR EXCLUSIVES

THE NIGHT RIDERS.....2 REELS
FLAMES IN THE SHADOWS.....2 REELS

WRITE OR WIRE TODAY.

Northern Feature Film Exchange
S. Decker, Prop.
Suite 405 Schiller Building Chicago

THE FUTURE PHOTO DRAMA

is what one critic calls our picture
Another calls it a
MATCHLESS PRODUCTION
So all along the line there is nothing but praise for

BLANCHE WALSH

IN TOLSTOY'S

RESURRECTION

Four Magnificent Reels

State Rights Now Selling

Tons of Advertising Matter

MASKO FILM CO.
145 W. 45th St. New York

LECTURES ON SPECIAL FILMS

EACH $1.00 PER COPY Prepared by W. STEPHEN BUSH POSTAGE PAID

Lectures for French-American Film Company
"CAMILLE" BY SARAH BERNHARDT and "MADAME SANS GENE" BY MADAME REJANE
One Dollar for Both (Typewritten)
Also in printed form the following:

HOW TO PUT ON THE PASSION PLAY (Second Edition)
For Pathe Freres World-Renowned Production

HOW TO PUT ON THE CRUSADERS, OR JERUSALEM DELIVERED
For World's Best Film Co., Feature Film (Copyright 1911)

KEY AND COMPLETE LECTURE FOR DANTE'S INFERNO
For Milano Film Co. (Italy), Five-Reel Production

ORDER NOW Only a limited edition of each $1.00 PER COPY
COPYRIGHTED AND FOR SALE ONLY BY
MOVING PICTURE WORLD, Box 226, Madison Square P. O., New York City

The Curtain Question in a Nut-Shell

A Black Curtain
reflects 5% of your light and darkens pictures projected upon it.

A White Curtain
reflects 30% of your light; appears brightest right up against it and fades away 10% for every 10 ft. distance you get away from it. Try it and see.

An Alluminized Curtain (Any and all kinds are the same) reflects 40% of your light. Every light ray is a direct reflection. You can't use a strong current or you will ruin the eyes of everybody. (Every metal, even gold, exposed to the atmosphere, will darken and oxidize.) Every day you use an aluminized curtain, those called Gold, Silver, Sun and imitation Mirror (our name) blacken. Every picture has a cold, metallic look.

Every one of these curtains lasts about as long as an apple blossom.

A "MIRROR SCREEN"
reflects 100% of your light. The more current used, the better. The snow-white front diffuses the light, softens it and prevents eye-strain. Don't forget that. The "Mirror Screen" lasts forever. Don't forget that. The "Mirror Screen" makes the pictures look natural just as standing in front of a mirror makes you look natural.

Write Us Today for Prices. Don't Forget That.

THE "MIRROR SCREEN" COMPANY
F. J. Rembusch, Pres. SHELBYVILLE, IND., U. S. A.
FRANK MANNING, Sales Agent, 922 Sixth Ave., N. Y. City. Phone 401 Plaza.

MAJESTIC

COMEDY ! ! COMEDY ! !

Tuesday, Aug. 13th

"A SUMMER IDYL"

An Exquisite Comedy Beautifully Presented by a Splendid Cast.

Sunday, Aug. 18th
(2 Half-Reel Knockouts)

"TOODLES"
in which the wonderful acting bulldog "Dooley" is a real comedian.

AND

A Game of Chess
The most perfect combination of laughter and tears ever produced.

Tuesday, Aug. 20th

"THE NEW BUTLER"

ONE LONG LAUGH:—"Hubby" acts as butler so "Wifey" can put on airs. With Herbert Prior at his best as "Hubby."

Aug. 25th—"A Corner in Kisses." Aug. 27th—"The Disputed Claim."
Sept. 1st—"The Chaperon." Sept. 3rd—"MABEL'S BEAU."
Sept. 8th—"THE PLEASURES OF CAMPING" and "WILLIE'S DOG"

Sold only through

The FILM SUPPLY CO. of AMERICA

Send for Photos of the MAJESTIC PLAYERS,
540 West 21st Street, New York City.

"THE SIMPLE TEST"

Get Our Large Free Samples of

MIRROROIDE

It Costs You Nothing: Get Samples of All Other Screens or Curtains Now on The Market. Soak Same in Water One Hour. See Them Go To Pieces. What Will Dampness Do? MIRROROIDE Will Stand Water for Years. Even a Mirror Will Be Destroyed by Water.

MIRROROIDE
Is Claimed By Thousands to Be The Peer Of All Projection Surfaces. Age, Continuous Usage, Brightens Its Surface. It Won't Turn Black. Years Before The Public Has Proven This.

MIRROROIDE
Is Known Coast to Coast As The Only Projection Surface Producing A Clear Bright Picture At Any Angle Without Haze or Out of Focus Effect.

MIRROROIDE
Is Virtually a Flexible Glass Cloth, the Mercury Coating Being A Permanent Fixed Filling.

MAKE US PROVE IT
Manufactured Under Pending Patents Covering Preparation. Filling, Seaming, Roughened Surface Finish. Water Proofing, Etc.

THE J. H. CENTER CO.
NEWBURGH, N. Y.

To the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America:

We desire to express at this time our heartfelt thanks to the Exhibitors of America. We sincerely hope that the Chicago "SHOW" may afford them one round of pleasure, and that it may be another stepping stone to higher levels and ideals in Moving Pictures so that throughout this great and broad country, wherever pictures are shown, they may be still more firmly entrenched in the hearts of all the people.

We have no apologies to make. We believe that the RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN is worthy of its good name and reputation, but we promise to do our part toward making it better if that be possible.

Again extending to you our good wishes, we remain,

Yours, for screen service,
AMERICAN THEATRE CURTAIN & SUPPLY COMPANY,
105 North Main Street,
St. Louis, Missouri.

Feature Films For Sale or Rent

Titles	Reels	Rental Price	Sell'g Price
The Outcast (Asta Nielsen)	3	$15.00	$275.00
Great Moment (Asta Nielsen)	4	15.00	175.00
Gypsy Blood (Asta Nielsen)	3	15.00	250.00
An Old Man's Darling (Asta Nielsen)	3	15.00	100.00
The Traitress (Asta Nielsen)	3	15.00	200.00
Peep Behind the Scenes (Asta Nielsen)	4	15.00	200.00
Red Rose of the Apache	3	15.00	175.00
Four Dare Devils	3	10.00	125.00
Nursing a Viper	3	15.00	200.00
Flower of the Mormon City (Western)	3	15.00	250.00
The Trap	2	10.00	250.00
Written in Blood	3	15.00	180.00
Course of True Love (A. Nielsen)	3	15.00	180.00
Inventor's Secret	2	10.00	150.00
Poison of Humanity	2	10.00	100.00
Lady of Lourdes (Religious)	3	15.00	150.00
Fisherman's Sweetheart, or Saved from the Sea	3	15.00	200.00
Great Mine Disaster	2	10.00	100.00
Lt. Rose & Hidden Treasure (Naval)	2	10.00	100.00
Revenge	3	15.00	125.00
Mystery of the Banker's Safe	2	10.00	150.00
The Weed	2	10.00	150.00
Cripple Creek (Reliance)	2	5.00	120.00
Waneta's Sacrifice (Western)	2	5.00	120.00
A Merry Night	2	10.00	100.00
A Woman's Honor	3	15.00	250.00
Might of Gold (A. Nielsen)	4	15.00	180.00
Siege of Calais	2	10.00	75.00
White Slave	2	10.00	125.00
Macbeth	2	6.00	50.00
Fall of Troy	2	5.00	50.00
Golden Wedding	2	5.00	75.00
Germany's Glorious Days	2	8.00	50.00
Martin Luther	2	8.00	100.00

G. W. BRADENBURGH,
231-233 N. Eighth Street, Philadelphia.
Harrisburg, Pa. Maxwell Hite—Mgr.
Baltimore Arthur Gans—Mgr.

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theater Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Write for Catalog.

Don't fail to visit our complete New York showroom, 101-103 4th Ave.

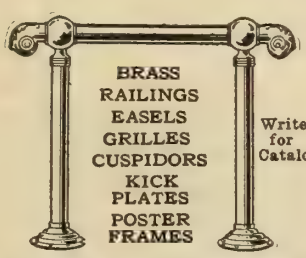
THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-721 Sycamore St,, Cincinnati, O,
Established 1882

The Simpson Solar Screen

Is the best Daylight Screen in existence. Fully covered by U. S. Patent No. 890,101. Don't buy imitations.

ALFRED L. SIMPSON, Inc.
No. 113 W. 132nd St., New York City

McKENNA



Write for Catalog.

McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
PITTSBURGH

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES.

Edison Exhibition 1 Pin, $125. Powers No. 5, $115, and others. Machines Repaired. Parts for Machines. Supplies of all kinds. Stereopticons and Slides. Send for Catalogues and Lists.

HARBACH & CO.
809 Filbert St., Philadelphia.

Let's talk

Bigger Matinee Audiences

75 per cent. of your matinee patrons are women.

They know your theatre is dark. They also know that in a dark house they may be annoyed.

Still you spend your money asking them to come to your shows and expect they'll do it!

If you really want bigger matinee attendance—go after it right.

Install the EYE COMFORT System of Indirect Illumination

(used by 1500 progressive theatres)

¶ It will light your house enough to see everybody, all the time. ¶ It will not hurt the picture's clearness. ¶ It will add detail and tone to them. It is the only economically successful system of Indirect Illumination. ¶ It is the original and scientific system.

Then Advertise the fact and watch your matinee and evening attendance grow.

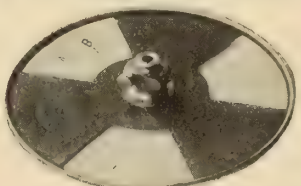
If you're coming to the Chicago Convention, note the EYE COMFORT SYSTEM in the Orpheum Theatre. See it in the Model Photoplayhouse at the offices of the Moving Picture World. Take a five-minute walk to our store, etc., corner Jackson Boulevard and Franklin Street.

Investigate this business necessity!

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.
227 West Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

HOW CAN I GET BETTER PICTURES?
Use a Surehold Shutter Setter



Just the thing to set your shutter instantly and accurately, giving you a sharp, clear picture. Anyone can use it. Made to fit any outside shutter. All those who have bought one say they would not part with it for any price. Send for circular, or, better still, send $5.00 and we will send you one prepaid by return mail. Money back if not satisfied. Price, $5.00.

SUREHOLD SHUTTER SETTER CO.,
P. O. Box 428, Bellingham, Wash.

Direction J. D. Williams Management Wm. H. Ball

INTERNATIONAL PICTURES

Controlled by

The Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Company, Ltd
Capital, £200,000.

The World's largest dealers in Motion Picture Films, machines and accessories. We are on the market for everything Biographic. No Moving Picture Film and equipment proposition too large for consideration. Our Specialty—Exclusive Australasian Rights on the best long feature subjects produced, and the latest successful supply novelties.

PRINCIPAL EXCHANGES.
610 George Street, Syndey, New South Wales. Melbourne, Brisbane, Perth and Wellington, New Zealand.

Send samples and communications to our purchasing offices as follows—J. A. Hayden, Dewar House, 11 Haymarket, London, England. Louis M. Noto, 146 W. 23rd Street.

IMPORTANT:—When writing us direct remember that letters with insufficient postage are delayed.

THE EVIL ART
OR GAMBLING EXPOSED

A Three Reel Feature Showing

HOW MEN GO WRONG

A full detailed description of this most remarkable picture appeared in the last issue of this Magazine, Aug. 10th, which says in part, "A real live up-to-the-minute feature that will save many a man from disaster." Read it.

PRESS, PULPIT AND PUBLIC

Endorse this picture, which appeals as forcibly to women as to men.

THE PEOPLE WANT TO KNOW

How it is possible for gamblers to pay such terrific sums for protection.

THIS PICTURE TELLS IT ALL

Exposing every crooked method as applied to FARO, ROULETTE, CRAP, POKER, BRIDGE, Etc. Telling at the same time A Beautiful Story of great human interest and moral worth. For booking for Ill., Ind. & Wis.

ADDRESS:
Tom Quill
710 First Nat. Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

NEW YORK ADDRESS:
Wm. M. Wilson
Hotel Calvert, 41st St. & B'way., New York City

For State Rights: Wm. M. Wilson, at same address.

EXHIBITORS' HEADQUARTERS
CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY
(Incorporated)
50 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Jobbers in Edison, Powers and Motiograph Machines and Parts

Machines repaired by Expert Mechanics. Genuine Parts Only Used.

SPECIALTIES

Mirror Screens	Condensers	Gas Making Outfits
Chairs	Edison Transformers	Limes Film Cement
Tickets	Ft. Wayne Compensarcs	Branch General Disinfectant Co.
Pianos	Asbestos State Booths
Bio & Electric Carbons	Asbestos Wire	Scenery, Stage Effects
Special Gundlach Lenses	Switches Plugs Spotlights	Theatres Bought, Sold, Rented

CHAS. A. CALEHUFF, Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

OHIO EXHIBITORS!

I have snapped up the best feature yet produced—

BLANCHE WALSH

IN TOLSTOY'S

RESURRECTION

Write now to secure early booking.

NOTE—OHIO EXHIBITORS ONLY

JULES LEVEY, 1418-20 CHERRY STREET Pastime Theatre Building
TOLEDO, OHIO

American Moving Picture Machine Co.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE

STANDARD

Automatic Moving Picture Machine

101-102 Beekman Street New York

Von Duprin Self-Releasing Fire Exit Latches

"Made On Honor."

Absolutely Reliable. Safeguard Against Panic Disasters.

Approved by New York Board of Underwriters. City of New York Bureau of Buildings.

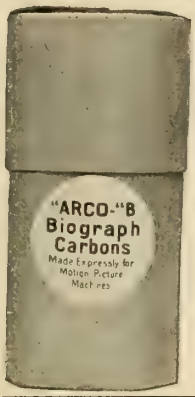
Applied on thousands of Buildings in more than 500 Cities in the U. S. A. and Canada.

Send for Catalogue No. 10 D.

VONNEGUT HARDWARE CO.,
General Distributors,
Indianapolis, Ind., U.S.A.

Can you afford to be without them?

Safe Exit Is a Universal Demand.



USE

"BIOGRAPH BRAND"

The Real Projector Carbon

(Trade Mark "Arco")

Manufactured specially for Picture Machines by Siemens, of Berlin

L. E. FRORUP & CO.

Importers and Distributors

232 GREENWICH ST. NEW YORK

CONVENTION VISITORS

This makes it easy for you to investigate THE TWO NEWEST AND MOST IMPORTANT ITEMS of the moving picture business, the Perfection Concave Screen

AND THE

Perfection Indirect Lighting System

See the big Screen at the Orpheum Theatre.

See both the Screen and the Indirect Lights AT OUR OFFICES or at the MOVING PICTURE WORLD'S EXHIBITION ROOMS.

Not five minutes walk from your hotel to any of these places.

YOU CAME HERE TO SEE SOMETHING NEW

THIS IS YOUR BEST CHANCE.

Inventors Specialty Mfg. Co.

620 Ashland Block N. E. Cor. Clark and Randolph, Chicago

Rental

One Sheet 5 cts.
Three Sheets 25 cts.
Six & Eight Sheets 50 cts.

Photographs of the Leading Motion Picture Stars

Kalem Music

We Carry a Full Line of Hennegan's Posters

BRADY'S POSTERS

HANDSOMELY MOUNTED ON CANVAS

"Weather-Proof"

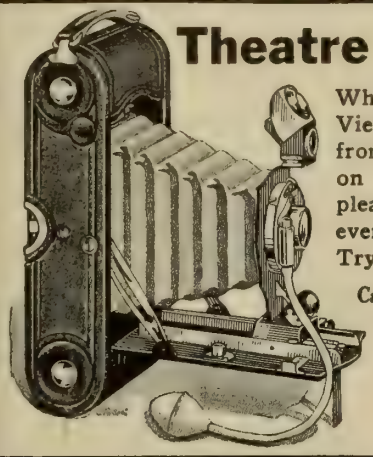
124 East 14th Street, New York

We Handle ALL LICENSED PHOTO-PLAY POSTERS

A.B.C. POSTERS For Sale

One Sheet 15 cts.
Three Sheets 35 cts.
Six Sheets 70 cts.

Snipes, All Designs Signs, Paintings, Etc.



Theatre Managers

Why not KODAK Local Views; Have Slides Made from Them and Show on Your Screens? This pleases your audiences everywhere all the time. Try it.

Cameras and All Photo Supplies

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

21 EAST 14th STREET
NEW YORK CITY

-:- Bound Volume -:-

No. 12. April to June 1912

Moving Picture World

$1.50 Each

Postage 60c Extra, or Express Charges Collect. Order Now.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Box 226, Mad. Sq. P. O. N. Y. City

To Exhibitors in

CONNECTICUT

Remember the money that was made in Conn. with Dante's Inferno.

HOMER'S ODYSSEY

The new Milano three reel Production will be

OPEN FOR DATES AFTER SEPT. 2nd.

Address Immediately

WORLD'S MOVING PICTURE CLASSICS.

Box 485, Madison Sq. Station, N. Y. City.

MOTION PICTURE SUPPLIES

PHOTOGRAPHIC SUPPLIES — WHOLESALE and RETAIL — THEATRE SEATING

EDISON
MOTIOGRAPH
POWERS
SIMPLEX
STANDARD

MACHINES

ARCO
BIO
ELECTRA
EXCELLO
SIEMEN

CARBONS

Ticket Hangers Carrying Cases Machine Parts Asbestos Booths
Reels Rewinders Disinfectants Exit Signs

Everything for the Motion Picture Theatre except the Film

PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT Co., 21 E. 14th St., N. Y. City
Phone Stuyvesant 2478

WHY NOT?

Unless you have seen the films produced by the Universal people within the past few weeks, you haven't the remotest idea what a crackerjack program my customers are getting. You're missing something. Why not post yourself? Why not find out what is going on in the very business you depend upon for a living? Wire or write or 'phone.

CARL LAEMMLE
PRESIDENT

The Laemmle Film Service
204 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.
Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1312 Farnum St., Omaha, Neb.
421 Walnut St., Des Moines, Iowa
The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World.

FEATURES FOR SALE

Zigomar vs. Nick Carter	4	reels	$250.00
Flight to Death	2	"	110.00
Desdemona	2	"	130.00
Paris Auto Bandits	2	"	125.00

These prices include posters.

FEDERAL FEATURE FILM SUPPLY CO.,
Fourth Floor, Hartford Bldg., Chicago.

SCENARIO WRITERS!

If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made saleable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism for a fee of only $2.

Exhibitors!

Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

Epes Winthrop Sargent
Box 70, Madison Square Station
New York City

Carnegie Museum Expedition 1911

The ALASKAN-SIBERIAN MOTION PICTURES

By KLEINSCHMIDT & LANE

A revelation of motion picture camera possibilities. Thrilling hunting feats in the Far North. Roping Polar bears. Eskimos killing the giant walrus. Wonderful photographs within a few feet of Sea Lions, Walrus, Polar Bears, Moose, Caribou, Mountain Sheep and Myriads of Arctic Birds in their rookeries. Eskimos in their homes, on the hunt and in their Kyacks.

STATE RIGHTS BUYERS

This is your greatest opportunity. The buyer of the rights for California played in the new Savoy Theater, San Francisco, for six weeks and then bought the rights for Nevada, Missouri and British Columbia. He writes: "Am breaking all records for motion pictures. The pictures are the talk of 'Frisco. Greatest money getter I have seen in my eight years of picture experience and manager of fifteen theaters."—Herman J. Brown. Now running sixth week in Chicago's finest theater, Mort Singer's Palace Theater. Only pictures ever run in Maxine Elliot's and Broadway Theater, New York City, for a run of six weeks at high class prices. See the pictures first. In six reels for one high class performance of two hours or in two three-reel features. Only a few States left. Wire or write at once.

THE ALASKAN-SIBERIAN MOTION PICTURES
536 West 112th Street New York City
Phone 7080 Morningside

THE ENTERPRISE (Portable) CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Price, with carrying case, $35.00.

Is the only Substitute for electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the

ONLY SATISFACTORY PORTABLE OUTFIT

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valve to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most satisfactory for the production of oxygen gas.

For Sale by Dealers Everywhere.

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS 564-572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

ATTENTION!!
MICHIGAN EXHIBITORS
The Only Five-Reel Production Ever Made.

Nat C. Goodwin
AS FAGIN IN
Oliver Twist

For Terms and Date, Wire or Write
THOS. A. MILLER, 103 East Montcalm St., Detroit

COLUMBIA FEATURE FILM CO.

FOR SALE — FEATURE FILM — FOR RENT

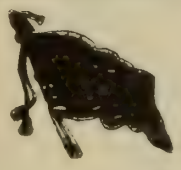
Delhi Durbar	Sale Price		$ 20.00
Gaumont Weekly No. 1	"	"	15.00
Buffalo Jones	"	"	50.00
Christian Martyrs	"	"	15.00
Capt. Smith of Titanic	"	"	20.00
Heaven's Messenger	"	"	30.00
Siege of Calais	"	"	60.00
U. S. Army and Navy	"	"	75.00
Four Dare-Devils	"	"	100.00
Ten Nights in a Barroom	"	"	150.00
Passion Play	"	"	225.00
David's War with Absalom	"	"	50.00

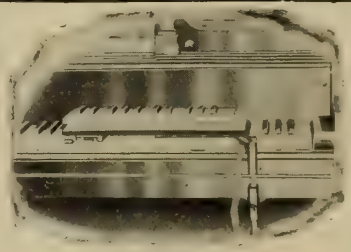
20% of price with order—balance C. O. D., with privilege examination. All in first-class condition. Lithos & Banners included. SEND FOR REDUCED RENTAL PRICE LIST.

422 N. HIGH STREET COLUMBUS, OHIO



MOVING PICTURE LECTURES
HEAR
Louise M. Marion
in her
NEW ILLUSTRATED POEMS AND FEATURE LECTURES
Highest Testimonials. Now Booking.
LOUISE M. MARION
459 West 23rd Street - NEW YORK
Terms Reasonable.

HIGH CLASS ATTRACTION FOR THEATRES CHURCHES AND SCHOOLS



Patent Allowed

Musical Electric Bells and Piano played at the same time with a
BARTON PIANO ATTACHMENT
(Patented).

All the big, expensively operated theatres are making money with musical bells.

You can now make the money without the expense. Beautiful chords and harmony played from the ordinary piano music, the accompaniment on the piano and the melody on the bells. Improved bells, play loud or soft. Write to-day.

DAN BARTON, 266 East Irving St., Oshkosh, Wisconsin

Silver Your Curtain With Silverit

Why buy an expensive screen when you can make your own better than any you can buy? No other curtain or preparation can produce this same bright, mellow light, no matter what you pay. Build up your business with a light, clear picture and a bright house. It's human nature to shun darkness. Wake up. Silverit is a silver paste, applied with a rag and can be polished like a mirror.

1 Lb. covers a curtain 9 x 12.
1 Lb. Can, $3.00. 2 Lb. Can, $5.00.

A. C. THOMAS
1705 Fairacres Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

GREETING TO CONVENTION DELEGATES

We welcome you to visit our office during your trip to Chicago.

We specialize in supplying Exhibitors with accessories promptly. There is no delay when you order from us.

Chicago Projecting Company
4th Floor, N. E. Cor. Dearborn and Washington Sts., Chicago

PROFITS $900 ONE WEEK
AND NEVER LESS THAN $500

This is the record of the purchasers of the OHIO state rights of the five reel production

" OLIVER TWIST "
with
NAT C. GOODWIN AS FAGIN

State right buyers, this is the production with which you can reap a harvest. Act quick to get the few remaining states.

General Film Publicity & Sales Company
145 West 45th Street NEW YORK

SELECTED FEATURES
For Rent or Sale at reduced prices.

Zigomar vs. Nick Carter—Eclair	4 reels
Might of Gold—Asta Nielsen	4 "
Temptations of Money, D.—Bio	4 "
Path of Atonement—Pathe	3 "
Underworld of Paris—Pasquali	3 "
Rose of the Apache—Pasquali	3 "
Desdemona—Gt. Northern	2 "
Flight to Death—Gt. Northern	2 "
Great Mine Disaster—Eclair	2 "
Course of True Love—Gt. Northern	2 "
Paris Auto Bandits—Gt. Northern	2 "
Heroic Girl of Derna—Vesivio	2 "

and many others.

Federal Feature Film Supply Company
Fourth Floor, Hartford Bldg., Chicago, Cor. Madison & Dearborn Sts.

America's Feature Film Co.
406-7-8 Schiller Building, Chicago

THE TOURNAMENT FILM CO.
TOLEDO, OHIO.
Owners of the following feature films:
1911 Cheyenne Cowboy and Indian Frontier Celebration.
Fall Round-Up on the Y-6 Ranch.
State Rights for These Films for Sale.
Bookings Can Be Made by Writing Us.

ZIGOMAR has escaped again!
AND WILL DASH THROUGH
Three Thrilling Reels of New Pictures
TO BE RELEASED SOON BY
THE F. & E. FILM CO., Cleveland, Ohio

20,000 roll tickets, $1.20; 50 % cored carbons, $1.15; stereopticon objectives, 50c to $3.00; stereopticons, $15; rheostats, $3 to $5; arc lamps, $1.75, $2 and $2.25; condensers, 50c; calcium jets, $2.80; acetylene jets, $2.50; gas generators, $3.50; moving picture objectives, $2.75; jackets, $2. List of moving picture repair parts at fair prices. Sprocket wheels, 85c; films 1c a foot. Catalogue. All makes of moving picture machines repaired at reasonable prices. L. HETZ, 302 East 23rd St., New York City

Headquarters for
ASBESTOS
CURTAINS and PICTURE BOOTHS
SEND FOR BOOKLET
C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co.
39 Pearl St., Boston, Mass.

"The House of a Thousand Features"
Big stocks of exclusive two and three-reel features; big advertising; reasonable prices.
IMPERIAL FEATURE FILM CO.
121 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

We buy and sell Second Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines
WESTERN FILM BROKERS
538 S. Dearborn Street Chicago, Ill

Changeable Illuminated
PROGRAM SIGN
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE
ZENITH MFG. CO.
Box 252 Cincinnati, Ohio

Make Your Own Films of Special Events!
Buy the Junior Professional Film making outfit comprising the World's Greatest Camera, Printer and developing outfit—you would not hesitate for a minute if you would know how good it is—or—buy the camera only and let me do the finishing work—better films as what some manufacturers turn out. Everything of supreme quality for the projecting room and the laboratory. Mirror Vitae Projector, the best machine in the world from which all others have been duped—with single arc slide dissolvers, something others cannot offer you, special lenses for any size picture—film stock, slides, repairing catalogues to your service.
EBERHARD SCHNEIDER,
219 Second Ave., near 14th St., New York.

COMPENSARC
This Machine cuts 2/3 from your Light Bills
Mr. Manager
If you are on a 110 or 220 volt circuit and you are using a rheostat to reduce the voltage to 35 at the arc in your lamp, you are paying for 2/3 more "juice" than you are actually using. Can you afford to waste all this energy supplied from the line, over and above what you really need?
The Fort Wayne Compensarc saves all this waste by reducing the voltage without losing any: makes a clearer, whiter, steadier light, and eliminates all danger of fires caused by overheated rheostats.
We have a little 22 page booklet "Compensarc vs. Rheostat" that we want to send you. It will tell you plainly how you can make a big saving and a better light. Send us your name and address.
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
of GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY.
1408 Broadway
Fort Wayne, Indiana
Send TODAY for our FREE descriptive booklet

Slide like cut 40c postage paid. We handle everything needed for the M. P. theatre. Write at once for our new catalogue of machines and supplies, Spot Lamps, Slides, Calcium Gas and Supplies, etc.
ERKER'S 604 Olive St. St. Louis, Mo.

EXHIBITORS
Send Us the Name of Your THEATER
THE CRYSTAL FILM CO.
Wendover Ave. New York City

WATCH FOR OUR NEW LIST
TO BE ANNOUNCED SOON
ROYAL
FEATURE FILM CO.,
538 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

"THELMA"
Marie Corelli's great novel. Released Sat., Aug. 31st. 3 smashing big reels. A sensational feature that you can't afford to miss. Order quick!
RELIANCE
Coming Releases:
"A Man Among Men," Sat., Aug. 17th; "One Against One," Wed., Aug. 21st; "North of 53," Sat., Aug. 24th; "The Secret Service Man," Wed., Aug. 28th.
SOLD ONLY THROUGH THE FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA.

TITLES.

Now located in our new factory and ready to make anything from a 3-ft. title to a complete film subject.
Write us, we have news for you.
TILLEY BROS. & BESSERER, Box 503, Austin, Tex.

SLIDES

OF ALL KINDS

Send for Catalogue "W" of our new line of beautiful
ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

Each slide illustrated from life and most exquisitely colored. The Chicago Song Slide Exchange, 6th floor, Powers Bldg., Chicago, Ill., have the exclusive agency for our announcement slides in the states of Wisconsin, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Iowa.

Advertising Slides at Reasonable Rates

Our Song Slide Catalogue of 500 different songs free to anyone for the asking.

SCOTT & VAN ALTENA
59 PEARL STREET NEW YORK CITY

THE LATEST SONG HITS ALWAYS

Western Song Slide Service, Inc.
OXFORD BUILDING
118 NO. LA SALLE ST. CHICAGO, ILL.

SLIDES RENTED—SPECIAL INDUCEMENTS
PRICES AND CATALOGUE ON REQUEST

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and any one can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of three dollars ($3) cash with order, we will send by express, charges not prepaid, or $3.50 by registered mail, prepaid, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE SENSATIONAL NEW YORK POLICE SCANDAL
THE ROSENTHAL CASE

Produced from original authentic views, supplied exclusively to us by the National Press Syndicate.

20 slides Plain $5.00 40 slides Plain $10.00
20 slides Colored 10.00 40 slides Colored 20.00
Special lecture and 1-sheet lithos free with each set.
A. J. CLAPHAM, 130 WEST 37TH STREET, NEW YORK.
The Originator of Sensational Feature Lectures.

AgfA

CELLULOID POSITIVE
CELLULOID NEGATIVE
AND
NON-FLAM POSITIVE
(MADE UNDER LICENSE OF THE PATENTEE)

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.
15 EAST 26th STREET - - NEW YORK
Tel. Mad. Sq. 7876. Cable Rawfilm New York

In answering advertisements kindly mention the Moving Picture World.

SOMETHING NEW!

THE UNBREAKABLE
AND WASHABLE
E-Z
BLANK MICA SLIDE

Make Your Own Announcements

Made of Specially Prepared Mica That Can be Written on as Easily as Paper

Price, 25 Cents Each

Battershall & Oleson
39 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

The Sensational ROSENTHAL CASE
LIEUT. BECKER INDICTED
20 Slides, $10.00. Cash with order or C. O. D.

AMERICAN OLYMPIC CHAMPIONS
20 Slides, $10.00.
Cash with order or C. O. D.

LEVI COMPANY, Inc. 1560 Broadway NEW YORK

BETWEEN REELS USE GOLDBERG'S FOOLISH QUESTION SLIDES, 50c EACH

The 1913 Model Motiograph

THE PEER OF ANY PICTURE MACHINE ON EARTH—IS NOW READY FOR SHIPMENT

Specifications:

MECHANISM.

Contains hardened Intermittent Sprocket. Steel Idler Rolls. Heavier Balance Wheel. All gears of steel and spiral cut teeth which means a closer fit and longer wear.

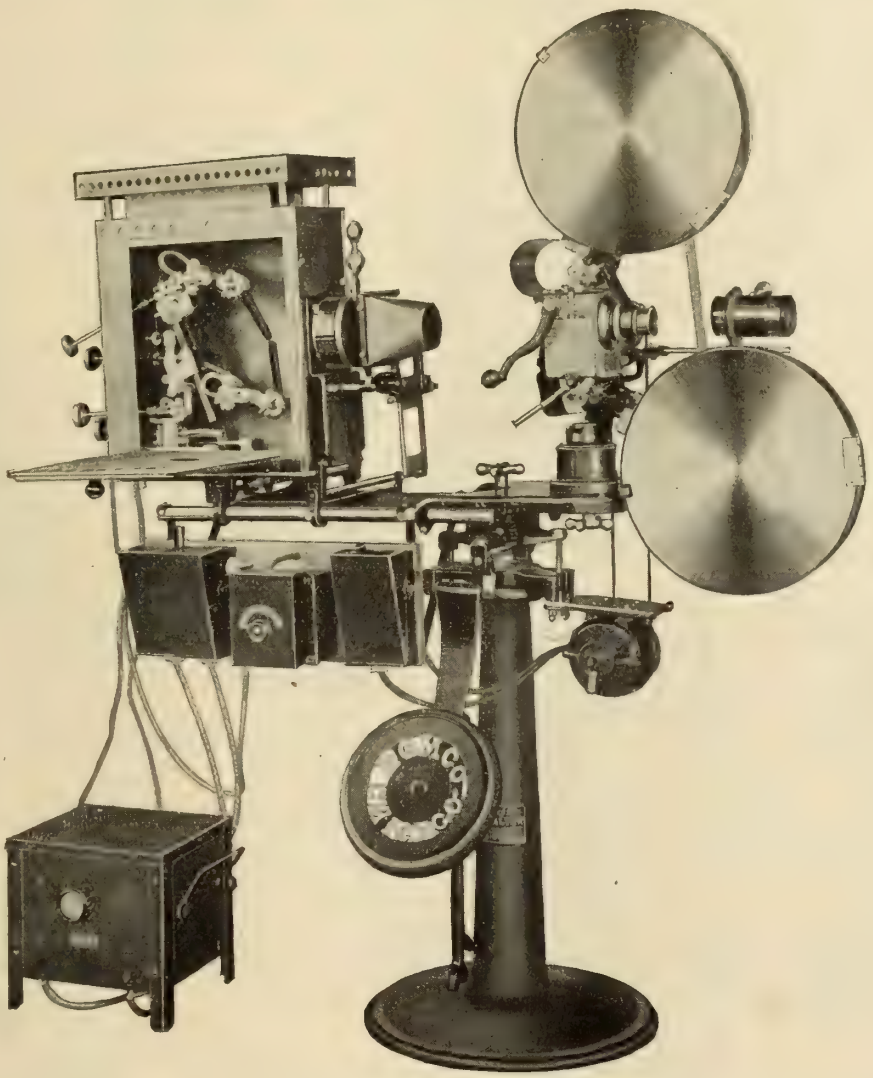
LAMP HOUSE.

The largest and best now in use. Thoroughly ventilated on all sides with large vents for the escape of heat in top hood. Carefully lined with best quality transite board in bottom, front and top. Passes inspection anywhere. Supplied only with spring hinged doors.

ARC LAMP.

125 Ampere Capacity

Heavier and better in every way. Has Universal Arm and Clamp with two adjustments added on upper carbon arm. Either backward and forward or sideways. The Universal Clamp will hold any diameter of Carbon from ¾ down to ⅜. Racks provide for a TWENTY-INCH CARBON FEED—a 12″ upper and 8″ lower.



Specifications:

MAGAZINES.

Fifteen-inch diameter to hold 2,000 feet of film at one threading.

DOWSER SHUTTER.

Large diameter with ball balanced handle. Firmly mounted on condenser mount, thus also acting as protection for lantern slides. The handle may also be used for lifting out hot condenser chamber for changing of glasses.

FILM SHIELDS.

Large and strong. Thoroughly protect film in its entire passage from one magazine to the other.

RHEOSTAT.

Either heavy grid type or coil, on 110-v. line. Our grid is adjustable from 20 to 55 ampere. The coil from 30 to 45 ampere.

STAND.

The original Gibraltar base, perfect rigidity; 3 heights with every desired adjustment.

REWIND.

We will discontinue the patented rewind heretofore incorporated in mechanism and with the 1913 model we will supply the TOGO No. 2 REWIND at no extra cost.

SWITCHBOARD—Suspended from metal sliding base. Rigid and efficient. Made of best quality slate—one inch thick. Contains main switch, spring contact motor switch, and speed control.

MOTOR DRIVE—The most efficient ever designed. Quickly attached by anyone.

MOTOR—Of high quality—strong, compact and efficient—of special construction for up-side-down use on the Motiograph.

METAL OPERATOR'S SEAT—Simple and strong and designed to do away with the dangerous and cumbersome wooden stool. So fitted to the Motiograph to take up small space and in most convenient place. May be dropped completely out of way.

Prices—Complete and Packed for Shipment

$250.00 without motor, switchboard or seat.
285.00 with motor (any voltage), switchboard and seat.
300.00 special Massachusetts, with motor, switchboard and seat.

The price has gone up for three reasons:

1st: Because of the advance in Material and Labor Cost.
2nd: Because we furnish a complete metal equipment.
3rd: Because the introduction of the Motiograph is complete.

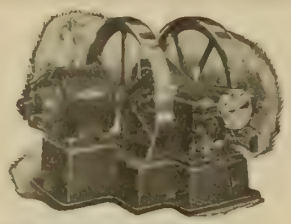
OUR GUARANTEE

FREE UPKEEP FOR ONE YEAR COVERING PARTS of the 1913 model Motiograph mechanism, that may become worn out in service, or which may show defect in material or workmanship, with the understanding that the part be sent to us, charges prepaid, for examination.

Manufactured by - - - The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company

564-572 W. Randolph Street - - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR SALE BY LIVE DEALERS EVERYWHERE



THE Foos

ELECTRIC

Generating Set

will furnish direct current for your show and give you better quality of light than you can get from the best Central Station service. With a Foos Engine you can save 50 to 75 per cent. of the money you have to pay for electric current and have all the light you want when you want it.

Send for Bulletin F-98.

The Foos Gas Engine Co.

809 Linden Ave. Springfield, O.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE

1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865

WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
New York Office, 1165 Broadway.

The A. H. Andrews Co.

Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, 728 Mission St.

Branches in all Leading Cities

Get Our Prices Before You Buy

The Wisconsin Seating Company

New London, Wisconsin, U. S. A.

OPERA CHAIRS

GEO. W. BENNETT

34-36 E. 3rd Street
CINCINNATI, OHIO.

THEATRE SEATING—Send for Moving Picture Chair Cat. "V4." Upholstered Chair Cat. "V5."

AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY
Chicago New York Boston Philadelphia

FEATURE FILMS FOR SALE

2 3 4 Reels — Feature Productions — 2 3 4 Reels

WRITE FOR LISTS QUICK

SUPERIOR FEATURE FILM CO.

32 Union Sq., New York City

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS

ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use.

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE Co., Grand Rapids, Mich

New York: 150 5th Ave. Pittsburgh: 318 Bissel Blk. Philadelphia: 610 Flanders Bldg.

OH! MR. EXHIBITOR!!

Think of the motherless, the fatherless, and the childless homes as the result of theater panics. Protect the lives of your patrons by installing our "ANTI PANIC" THEATER CHAIR. 26 Dead at Cannonsburg, 176 at Boyertown, 575 at Iroquis Theater, Chicago. Make these horrors impossible. Our chair is a friend to the Public.

It advertises your theater and makes your business grow.

It is a space-saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.

It will make your theater all aisles. It is the only sanitary chair. It is the world's greatest theater chair, perfected to the highest degree. Write to-day for Circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio. U.S.A.

Orchestra Music FOR MOVING PICTURES

Violin, Cornet and Drum parts have been added to the popular "Orpheum Collection" of piano music (dramatic and descriptive) for Moving Pictures. Practical for piano alone or any number of above instruments. Issued in two parts: No. 1 and No. 2.

Piano,	58 cents each; both No.'s	$1.15
Violin,	40 cents each; both "	75c
Cornet,	35 cents each; both "	65c
Drums,	30 cents each; both "	55c

Send for free sample pages.

CLARENCE E. SINN

1501 Sedgwick St., Chicago, Ill.

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing

Why don't you send it to us?

We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.

We buy second hand machines.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO., 176 N. State St., Bet. Lake & Randolph Chicago, Ill.

The New York Dramatic Mirror

ESTABLISHED 1879

Special Motion Picture section, containing pictures of leading M. P. actors, actresses, and feature films.

Reviews of the latest releases by our own critics, absolutely honest, original and interesting.

Read "Spectator" and our answers to correspondents. Cover page in two colors. A host of helpful suggestions every week.

The Mirror appeals to all branches of the motion picture field—Licensed and Independent. Send for free samply copy.

Published Weekly. Subscription, $4, one year; $2, six months; $1, three months. Add $1.50 to Europe, $1.00 to Canada for postage.

The New York Dramatic Mirror, 145 West 45th St., New York

Exclusive Features!

The Royal Feature Film Company

ONE RELEASE EACH WEEK

THE BEST THAT MONEY CAN BUY

BLAZING THE TRAIL	Bison,	2 reels
POST TELEGRAPHER	Bison,	2 "
THE CRISIS	Bison,	2 "
LIEUTENANT'S LAST FIGHT	Bison,	2 "
DEAD MAN'S CHILD	Gt. Northern,	3 "
THE OUTCAST	Bison,	2 "
ST. GEORGE AND THE DRAGON	Milano,	3 "
MYSTERIES OF SOULS	Gt. Northern,	3 "
WRECK OF THE AURORA	World's Best,	3 "
LAST OF THE FRONTIGNACS	Gt. Northern,	3 "
VEILED INNOCENCE	Ambrosio,	3 "

Every One a Box Office Winner

Watch for future releases and get busy quick before your competitor beats you to it. You will need each one of them at least two days. One, three, six, eight sheets; heralds, booklets, banners, etc.

SPECIAL NOTICE

We have just secured state rights for Ohio and West Virginia on "Last Stand of the Dalton Boys at Coffeyville, Kansas." Book it quick and get your S.R.O. sign ready.

NOTHING BUT { STATE RIGHT FEATURES the Best To Be Had } RELEASED BY US

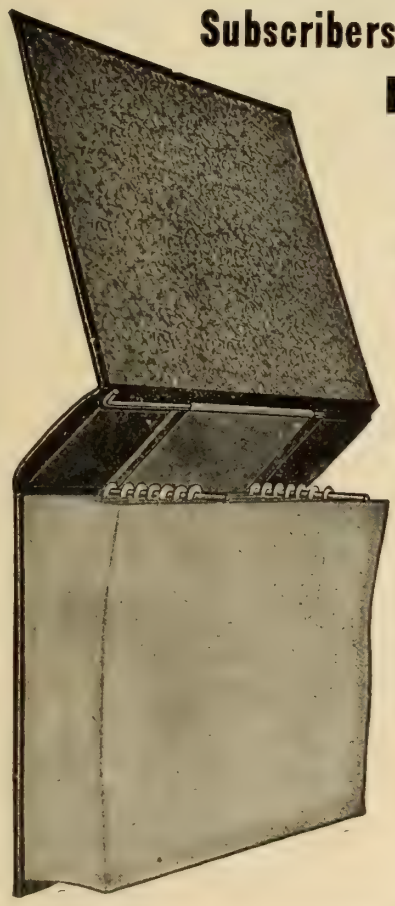
302 Schultz Bldg., High and Hickory Sts., Columbus, O.



Subscribers, Please Note

BINDERS

For each three months' volume of the

Moving Picture World

Can be furnished as follows, express charges additional:

75c each.
$2.60 for four.
$7.25 per doz.
By prepaid mail $1.00 each.

Simple and Secure Single Copies easily removed

Moving Picture World

125 East 23d Street
New York City

I Equip Theatres Completely

And the Increased Demand for My Services Has Forced Me to Add an Architectural Department to My Business. I am Prepared to Furnish Detailed Building Plans and Specifications for Your New Theatre.

The "Hallberg Electric Economizers" for all circuits, made only by Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," save you the most money on your electric bills and produce the best light possible on your screen.

For Sale--At A Bargain--Slightly Used Machines

1 No. 1A Motiograph, 1911 Model, first-class condition $135
1 No. 5 Powers, remodeled head, balance of machine new No. 6 Equipment..... 125
1 No. 5 Powers complete in good running order 100
1 Edison Exhibition Model One-Pin Movement, with fire shutter 75
1 Edison Head Only, Model B. Outside shutter, used very little 50
Second-Hand Current Savers for 110 volts, 60 cycles, of all makes but Hallberg (which I have replaced with my Standard Hallberg Economizers) .....$20 and up.

Any information to help you in your difficulties along the above lines cheerfully furnished.

I am jobber of ALL MAKES of Moving Picture Machines

Through my Exchange Department I am prepared to make liberal allowance for your old machine in part payment on purchase price of new M. P. machine of any make.

FANS

Ventilating and Exhaust
$7.50 and up

Separate catalogues of different makes of machines, supplies and economizers furnished free upon request, BUT Hallberg's Big Complete Catalogue costs you 25c.

I carry the Largest Complete Stock of
Electra Pink Label Carbons

J. H. HALLBERG
36 E. 23rd St. New York City

When You Arrive IN CHICAGO

TO ATTEND THE

CONVENTION

Do Not Fail to See Our Big Exhibit at Hotel La Salle and at Our Office.

We Are Making Great Preparations to Display Our Goods to You.

If You Do Not See It You Will Miss the Most Interesting Part of Your Trip.

WE SELL

Wooden Frames, Brass Frames, Nickel Frames, Silver Frames, Announcement Slides, Photographs and Postal Cards of the Leading Photo-Players, and the Most Modern and Up-to-Date System of Posters That Has Ever Been Put on the Market

Our System Gets the Nickel for the Exhibitor

It Is Endorsed by the Leading Photo-Play Managers

We Cover the United States, Mexico and Canada

FOR FULL PARTICULARS

SEE OUR BIG DISPLAY OR WRITE

EXHIBITORS' ADVERTISING COMPANY

68 WEST WASHINGTON STREET CHICAGO, ILL.

G. MÉLIÈS

NANCY EXPLAINS

The Moth and the Flame

Dick is compelled by his father to marry a girl of his own set, although in love with Nancy, the Innkeeper's daughter. After five years of unhappy married life Dick is frequently seen visiting the Inn, as he cannot forget his first love. Learning of Dick's trouble Nancy tries to win him, and, writing a letter to say Dick has gone off with her, she intends to deliver it to his wife, whom she blames for Dick's unhappiness. Seeing Dick's wife on a sick bed and in her delirium calling for her husband she destroys the letter, and filled with remorse orders Dick to go home and be faithful to his ever loving wife.

G. MELIES, 204 EAST 38th St., NEW YORK CITY

Approx. length, 1000 ft. 8-22-12.

Power's Cameragraph
NO. 6A

Will Be On Exhibition During the Convention, In Room 1818, La Salle Hotel, Chicago

¶ Be sure to see POWER'S NO. 6A with new Loop Setter, Motor Drive and other POWER'S improvements. The machine of the hour.

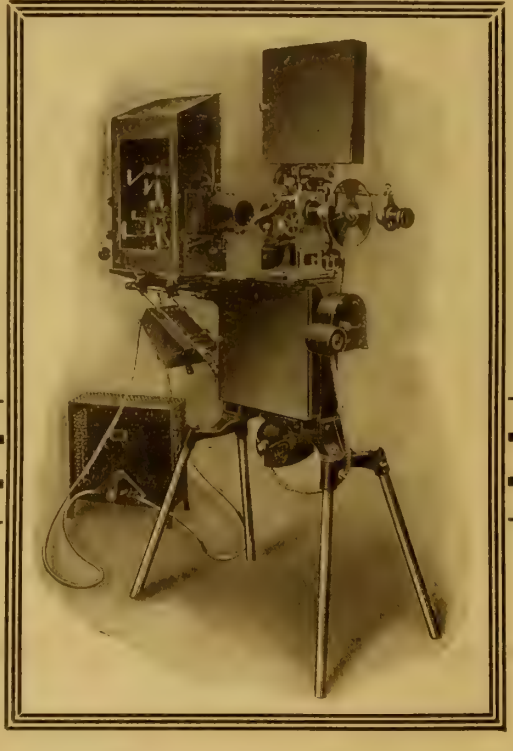
¶ Interesting literature will be furnished and you are cordially invited to call on us at any hour.



NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

90 Gold Street, New York City

For Fifteen Years the Leading Makers of Motion Picture Machines

CAREY PRESS, N. Y.

Vol. 13. No. 8 August 24. 1912 Price. 10c.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "One Against One" (Reliance).

125 East 23rd Street New York—Chicago 169 W. Washington St.

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

SEE Love, Jealousy, Adventure, Battle.

"LUCILE"

DON'T MISS The Charge of the Light Brigade!

IN THREE REELS

Nos. 1 and 2, TUESDAY, AUG. 27

No. 3, FRIDAY, AUG. 30

A De Luxe Adaptation of Owen Meredith's Poem

THANHOUSER PERFECT PUBLICITY FEATURE

PERFECT PUBLICITY

Two Kinds of One-Sheets and a Three-Sheet at YOUR EXCHANGE. Illustrated Heralds from HENNEGAN & CO., CINCINNATI, OHIO. Cuts for Newspapers and Circulars (2-column), 40 cents, and (3-column) 75 cents apiece from STANDARD ENG. CO., 560 7th AVE., N. Y. CITY. Slides 30 cents apiece from NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 20 E. 14th ST., N. Y. CITY.

RELEASED SUNDAY, AUG. 25

WHEN A COUNT COUNTED

A young law clerk is peeved at the women at a fashionable seashore resort because they have snubbed his sweetheart, who is merely a stenographer in the same law office. He makes up as a count, wins the love of all the vain ladies at the resort, and then publicly bestows his own love on the snubbed stenographer—to the anguish of all the assembled resorters.

RELEASED TUESDAY, AUG. 27—Parts one and two

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUG. 30—Part three

LUCILE

This is the widely heralded de-luxe adaptation—in two reels—of the poem by Owen Meredith. There are two one-sheets, three-sheets, heralds, cuts and slides for it. If you have followed our advertising, YOU KNOW WHERE. If you haven't followed our ads, begin to follow 'em NOW for "PERFECT PUBLICITY" hints.

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N. Y.

Send me FREE August Featureframe. I am / am not getting "The Thanhouser News"

Name.....

Address.....

Exchange.....

Charles Reade's Great Story

Coming! "PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE," In 2 Reels

"UNDINE" after the famous Riverside Classic

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

Film Supply Company, Agents for U. S. and Canada

GETTING 3 T 3 A WEEK?

FOUR-A-WEEK ESSANAY

CRUSHED!

All "Bull Moose" Third Parties at the Big Chicago Convention of Exhibitors

BY ESSANAY'S FILM POPULARITY "STEAM ROLLER"

"Gentlemen, We Accept the Nomination With Thanks!"

Released Tuesday, August 20th

"The Return of Becky"

A wonderfully appealing heart-interest drama with a vital and original plot entwined about the life of a simple country lass. Beverly Bayne and Joseph Allen in splendid characterizations.

Released Thursday, August 22nd

"A Corner in Whiskers"

One of those real, live comic gems with a plot that is originality personified. One of the month's biggest laughing hits with Billy Mason, Mildred Weston and Eleanor Blanchard creating a hundred laughs per foot!

Released Friday, August 23rd

"Her Adopted Father"

An unusual dramatic subject, tender in gripping pathos, and replete with beautiful sentiment. Little Eleanor Kahn, Lily Branscombe, Eleanor Blanchard and Frank Dayton in powerful portrayals.

Released Saturday, August 24th

"Broncho Billy's Escapade"

Another dramatic masterpiece of this world-famous Western series, abounding with the vigor of the rugged hills. Mr. G. M. Anderson featured in his great character-creation, ably supported by Miss Vedah Bertram in a splendid role.

WATCH FOR THE RELEASE DATE ANNOUNCEMENT !

"The FALL of MONTEZUMA"

THAT MARVEL OF MODERN FILM-CRAFT IN THREE REELS

3 SHEET POSTERS

of "Broncho Billy's Escapade," in 4 Full Colors, Beautifully Lithographed, 35c Each. Order from Your Exchange or Direct from Morgan Lithograph Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

Striking Postal Photos of G. M. Anderson and Francis X. Bushman in Two Poses for Your Essanay Souvenir Nights! Great! Order at Once.

Your Lobby Display Not Complete Without Those Splendid One-Sheet Lithographed Posters of G. M. Anderson in 4 Sepia Tones. Get Your Order in Now!

ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES IN LONDON BERLIN PARIS BARCELONA

Clean-Cut Smashing Westerns!

of the "AMERICAN" kind are the best Hot-Weather Antidotes known. What is more pleasant on a Muggy, Moist and Sticky Evening than the pleasant suggestion of the out-of-doors in pictures—the long, cool sweep of the prairie—the cold majesty of the distant hills. Humanity longs naturally for the out-of-doors in the summertime—why shouldn't they prefer the out-of-doors in pictures—particularly, pictures that tell charming stories, backed by peerless photography and superb pantomime?

"THE LONESOME TRAIL PIONEERS"

(Release Wednesday, August 28, 1912)

A stirring, red-blooded drama of troubles with the Indians, troubles such as the early pioneers bore with unparalleled hardihood—adventures that will entertain—the exception in Indian subjects.

"THE JEALOUS RAGE"

(Release Monday, Aug. 26, 1912)

A strong Western illustrating that old saw of "the woman scorned." A beautifully told tale that will delight and amuse.

"THE BANDIT OF POINT LOMA"

(Release Thursday, August 22, 1912)

A bandit escaped and spread terror throughout Point Loma. The lighthouse-keeper's daughter gave him protection despite her lover's remonstrances. The sheriff came and settled the question—how he straightened out the love affair makes 1,000 feet of "corking" good pictures.

COMING!

Two Giant 2-Reel Subjects. Both Historical

"Geronimo's Last Raid"

A magnificent two-reel historical subject of the out-of-the-ordinary kind. You remember Geronimo—the famous Indian chief, whose death a few years ago removed a constant source of trouble to southwestern settlers and army posts on the border.

A delightful love story winds its way through beautiful settings—a story of love and intrigue between two post officers and the Major's daughter. Beautiful battle scenes where close to 300 Indians and soldiers participate. Altogether the exception in motion pictures—a subject you, picture-tired, will find inspiration in.

"The Story of Starved Rock"

In Two Reels. A magnificent pageant—a spectacular giant, made on the very ground. A large company of "Flying A" players, by permission of the State of Illinois, encamped at Starved Rock while the pictures were being made.

This gorgeous costume subject covers the history of the famous Rock, showing the discovery by Father Marquette, the later journey of La Salle and Tonty and the mighty battle from which the Rock obtained its name. Watch for future announcements.

American Film Manufacturing Company

5th FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK, CHICAGO

ANOTHER SENSATION COMING

DUBLIN DAN

THE IRISH DETECTIVE.

In Three Reels.

An entertaining, exciting, thrilling and powerful melodrama, featuring

Barney Gilmore

The popular American and Irish idol—the matinee girl's pet—the favorite of millions, an actor known in every state in the Union—a veteran on the stage—although young in years, with a personality that "comes across."

Copyright protected by best legal talent.

STATE RIGHTS SELLING

THROUGH FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA.

Ready for Shipment, September 25th, 1912.

OTHER REGULAR FEATURES

Released Wednesday, August 28th, 1912.

Phantom Paradise

An old inventor and his daughter live happily in the belief that the inventor's new dry cell batteries are a big success, but in reality the wealthy merchant who had undertaken the promotion of the invention withholds from his proteges the fact that the invention is worthless. The inventor dies happy in his ignorance but the daughter learns that she has been receiving charity.

Released Friday, August 30th, 1912.

Playing Trumps

Harry is in love with a girl. Tom and Dick love the same girl. Tom and Dick conspire to make Harry's life miserable, but Harry holds trumps to the last and then plays them. This is a "regular Solax Comedy" with the all-star comedy cast.

Solax Company

FORT LEE, NEW JERSEY

Gaumont

GAUMONT

FLUSHING, NEW YORK

Gaumont

Film Supply Company of America, 133 W. 44th Street, New York, Sole Distributors

A HANDCOLORED OPPORTUNITY

All Our Films Are Copy-righted

Two Reels of Teeming Sensation. One and Three Sheets, Lobby Displays, Photos, Cuts, Pamphlets. Let us hear from you in time.

Watch for the September issue of the PHOTOPLAY MAGAZINE.

This will make them long remember your house if you feature it properly.

Write us for a copy of the Gaumont Graphic, which will explain its importance.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 3—Handcolored

The Refugee's Casket

NEXT IN LINE! SEPT. 19—TWO REELS

Kings in Exile

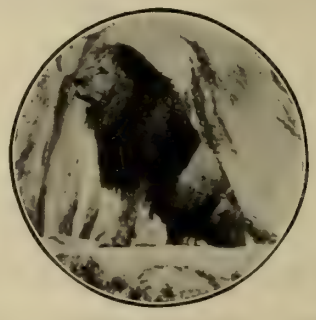
A film that deals with the events of great empires. Here's a serious, dignified monarchy exposer. Not anarchistic, but treated rather from the angle of love and princely sorrow. The everlasting evil of title marry title!

Tuesday, August 27th
The Story of Chopin

Thursday, August 29th
Marriage on the Run

Thursday, Sept. 5th
A Midnight Encounter

Tuesday, Sept. 10th
Love's Serenade



Thursday, Sept. 12th
The Plague Stricken City

Tuesday, Sept. 17th
Queen Elizabeth's Token

Tuesday, Sept. 24th
The Heart of a Redman

Thursday, Sept. 26th
The Stolen Cub

Scene from Androclus and the Lion. Hand Colored.

Gaumont

Gaumont

GAUMONT CO., FLUSHING, N. Y.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA, Sole Distributors

Here We Go!!! Handcolored, One Reel

TUESDAY, SEPT. 17th

Queen Elizabeth's Token

Why pay a bonus for a State right picture when you can get the same thing as an ordinary release. The same story as advertised elsewhere.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

MEN WHO KNOW

are managing the affairs of the Universal. They are not stock-jobbers looking for a little easy money in the "film game," but earnest, ambitious men who know the film business from top to bottom; know what you want and know how to get it for you! They have surrounded themselves with an army of experts in all branches of the business, insuring you the finest selection of high class films in the universe. Your part is easy. All you have to do is to..... ....

DEMAND THAT UNIVERSAL PROGRAM!

MONDAY - - -	Imp.....	Nestor.....	Champion.
TUESDAY- - -	Gem.....	Bison.....	Eclair.
WEDNESDAY	Powers.....	Nestor.....	Animated Weekly.
THURSDAY -	Rex.....	Imp.....	Eclair.
FRIDAY - - - -	Victor.....	Powers.....	Nestor.
SATURDAY -	Bison.....	Imp.....	Milano
SUNDAY - - -	Rex.....	Eclair

Several Big Features in Preparation!!

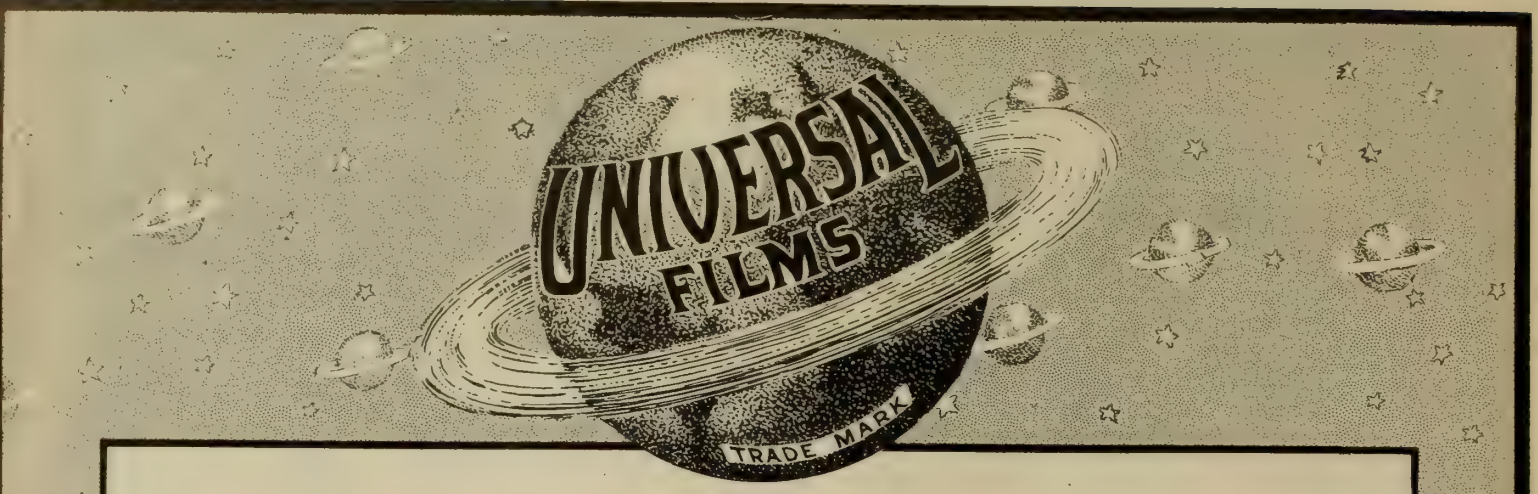
Every One of Them a Great Big Hit!

Keep Posted By Reading The Universal Weekly!

Published in the interests of the exhibitor. A post card will bring it to you.

Universal Film Manufacturing Co. 1 Union Square New York

"Demand that Universal Program"



OUR WESTERN OUTFIT

AT a greater cash expenditure than has ever been paid out by any moving picture concern in the past we have just bought a complete outfit to make one, two and three-reel Bisons and other western features. With hundreds of horses, cowboys, Indians and high-priced moving picture stars in this outfit we will astound you and the whole universe with magnificent productions. The biggest, most gigantic film productions ever conceived of. Watch for details.

ECLAIR

"WANTED, A WIFE IN A HURRY."

A ripping good comedy with screamily funny situations. More laughs than you'd get in twenty joke books. An exceptionally humorous story and not a smile getter lost in its production. If you want to book a comedy that will make your patrons grin from ear to ear, go after this one strong.

Three Reels. "ROBIN HOOD." Three Reels.

Thursday, August 22nd.

The most pretentious motion picture ever made in the producing history of either independent or licensed manufacturers. Mr. E. Arnaud has eclipsed anything ever conceived of. With the purse strings open and a galaxy of stars to choose from, he let his productive genius run riot and the result is conceded to be the most masterful three-reel subject ever offered. It's really a state rights feature, but you get it as a regular release. Not a foot that is not alive with action. Every artist in it has exerted maximum ability to give you a picture that your patrons will talk about for weeks to come. Better book it now.

"THE WILL."
Sunday, August 25th.

Had he been a man of honor he would have respected his mother's last request and taken the two children to his heart and given them the comforts their grandmother intended they should have. But in his greed for gold he forgot even his moral obligations and drove the children out to live as best they could. But retribution followed and they came into the fortune due them. An emotionally dramatic release. Brilliantly staged and acted.

REX

"AN OLD-FASHIONED GIRL."
Thursday, August 22nd.

There's something about this release that will make your patrons yearn for more like it. A picture that will make a most vivid impression. It's a simply delightful story, handsomely staged. If you are looking for a real hot weather money getter book this now.

"THE LEADER OF THE BAND."
Sunday, August 25th.

The leader knew the little tambourine girl didn't love him, but he was a bully, an avaricious sort of being. He determined, by fair means, or foul, to destroy the fond hopes of the first violin and his sweetheart. 'Twas the power of his position alone that caused the second violin to join him in his wicked plan. But the second violin was friendly to the lovers and so he and the little tambourine outwitted him. The dainty offering ends most happily. A most ingenious story most excellently presented.

MILANO

"THE COURAGE OF FEAR"—Sat., Aug. 24th.

It was the kind of crisis before which the ordinary woman would have quailed and fainted. But Countess Eva was one of the few of her sex who looked the situation square in the face and then acted. She knew that the much-wanted criminal beneath her bed was watching every move and yet she outwitted him. When the count arrived with the police she was glad the strain was over; that her courage had not failed. Every detail of the plot produced most strikingly. You'll play to S. R. O. when you bill this.

NESTOR

"WHEN THE HEART CALLS"—Mon., Aug. 19th.

It's such a sweet little story, so romantic. The very kind that ma and the girls will just rave about and even pa will be impressed. A pleasant intermingling of the Western and Eastern atmosphere. When he left the little girl on the ranch he hadn't realized that he loved her so much and though he tried to forget her in the wild happy life of the city, he could not. So when his society sweetheart quarreled with him he went back to claim his own. Very superior cast and production.

"THE ALIBI"—Wednesday, August 21st.

It isn't often that you can get a Western drama with such an exceptionally strong story and such vivid situations. Though the outlaw had really robbed them of their gold for a drink of water, when he fell wounded before them, they protected him. Though he had often committed many desperate deeds the one the sheriff hounded him for he had not been guilty of. The fortune hunter and his family established the alibi. A most thrilling picture play most admirably staged and acted.

"A STUBBORN CUPID"—Friday, August 23rd.

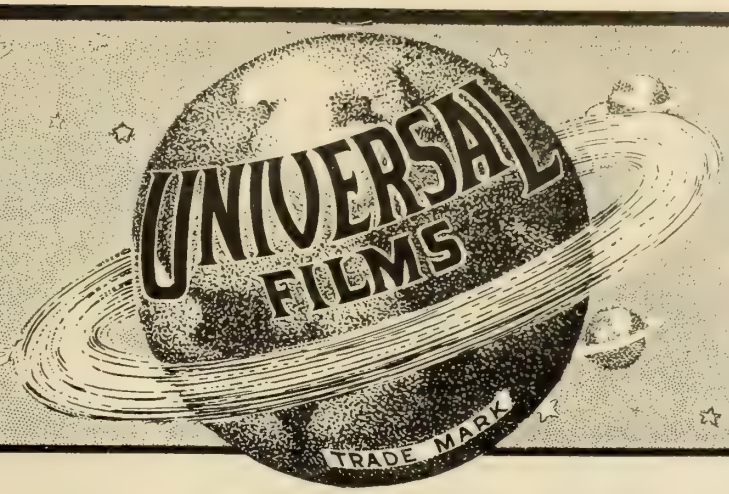
A side-splitting mirth provoker. Laugh after laugh will resound throughout your house when you project this picture. It's the funniest Western story that has ever been produced. Seldom you can get a comedy worth a return engagement. Here's one good for a long run.

GEM

"WHITE DOVE'S SACRIFICE"—Tues., Aug. 20

It might have been fascination, or he may have thought he loved her when he married her, but when he went back East and compared the pretty Indian maid to the beautifully vivacious white girl his love waned and White Dove felt it. She left him, but she knew the penalty. For the child's sake she dared brave even his hatred and so she returned. But Black Owl had avowed vengeance and just when he levelled his gun at him she knew her mission and willingly sacrificed her life. When Tom and Nan promised to care for the babe she knew her sacrifice had not been in vain. Dramatically beautiful.

"Demand that Universal Program"



WE OWN THE BISON

DON'T be confused on this point. WE OWN THE BISON. Plant, trademark and everything that goes with it. If there's any legal tangle, that's up to us to worry about. Meanwhile don't you worry that we intend to let Universal exhibitors suffer for lack of Western features. Don't forget we said FEATURES. We let you share our victories but we don't ask you to share our fights. Read about our new Western outfit. See the top of the opposite page!

IMP

"THE PADRONE'S DAUGHTER."
Monday, August 19th.

Here's a fine big romance, in which a ruffian and a fire laddie are contestants for the hand of a pretty Italian lass. Though the fireman's love quest is beset with many hardships, when he saves the girl's life the father readily relents and the loved ones live happy ever after. Produced in the usual effective Imp manner. Book it now and bill it early.

"THE CASTAWAY."
Thursday, August 22nd.

A tale of the sea presented in such a thrilling manner that you'll wire your exchange for a return date. From the time of the wreck until the lovers are locked in a fond embrace the situations are most enthralling. The rapidity of action and the merit of the story will impress you as strongly as your patrons. The kind of release that means a packed house and a satisfied audience

"CHAPPIE THE CHAPERON."
Saturday, August 24th (Split).

It's a riot of fun, and the fun is never-ending. The girl loved the fellow but the father didn't. Result—fellow decides to make life miserable for papa and he succeeds only too well. It's the kind of picture that starts your audience with a snicker and it ends with their being in convulsions of laughter. If you want a good comedy scream, get this one.

"THE GREAT GEYSERS OF YELLOWSTONE PARK."
Saturday, August 24th (Split).

It's simply beautiful to be out there amid the splendors of America's most wonderful playground, and your audience will appreciate it just as much sitting in their little comfortable seats in your theatre as if they were thousands of miles from home. Not a particle of the awe-inspiring spectacle is lost. The camera got it all.

VICTOR

"HER COUSIN FRED."
Friday, August 23rd.

She was impetuous and high spirited. But you really couldn't have expected a pretty, vivacious and healthful young girl to be otherwise. Her cousin Fred had intended, from the very first, that she should marry his chum, but neither his chum or Flo were quite so anxious to carry out his plans. The chum suffered unending tortures from her impetuosity, but her cousin successfully carried out his plan. Of course she really loved the chum all the time, but you couldn't expect her to show it. A pleasant comedy with plenty of romance and excitement.

POWERS

"HER DIARY."
Wednesday, August 21st.

A novel, most original and corking good side splitter. It's as funny as the dickens. A farmer's kid goes looking for information for her diary and she certainly gets it. But that's not the funny part of it. It's the way she recorded it, and the trouble she brewed for everybody she wrote about. See that you get this reel or you'll miss a treat for your patrons.

"WHAT THE MILK DID."
Friday, August 23rd.

An oddity that will afford fifteen minutes of brisk entertainment. A decided novelty in the way of a comedy-drama. The widow wanted her daughter to marry the widower's son. But the children could not see it that way. They met, however, on a farm. She posed as a milk-maid and he as a cultured farmer. They didn't know they were unconsciously fulfilling the hearts' desires of their parents when they fell in love.

CHAMPION

"THE BUM AND THE BOMB."
Monday, August 19th.

A release much out of the ordinary and one that will please every patron in your house. The kids will be strong for it. A good, live, breezy comedy of a very superior nature. Well produced and exceptionally well staged.

BISON

"HOW HE MADE GOOD."
Tuesday, August 20th.

It's seldom—very seldom—that you can get in a single Western picture such a galaxy of situations. Love and heroism, avarice, hate and cowardice run riot throughout this exceptionally clever story. It will simply sweep your patrons off their feet with enthusiasm. Bigger, better and more thrilling than any Bison ever produced.

"FOR LOVE, LIFE AND RICHES."
Saturday, August 24th.

There's not a single Western picture that has ever been conceived of that has as much worth to it as this truly wonderful Bison release. Time, effort or money have not been spared to make this brand the biggest money's worth ever offered. A stirring, thrilling story with an extraordinarily large cast; enacted with vim and vigor. It's a Bison with a capital B, and you can bank on it it's a winner.

"Demand that Universal Program"

KEYSTONE FILMS

HIGH CLASS
COMEDY AND DRAMATIC SUBJECTS

ACTED BY AN

ALL-STAR STOCK COMPANY

INCLUDING MAX SENNETT, MABEL NORMAND AND OTHERS HERETOFORE WITH THE BIOGRAPH CO., DIRECTED BY MR. SENNETT

READY FOR RELEASE

KEYSTONE FILM COMPANY

Mutual Film Corporation, 60 Wall St., N. Y. City, Sole Agents for U. S. and Canada

BRONCHO FILMS

BIGGER — BETTER — MORE SENSATIONAL AND THRILLING

FRONTIER -- INDIAN -- MILITARY AND PIONEER SUBJECTS

THAN ANYTHING HERETOFORE ATTEMPTED

TREMENDOUS CASTS — PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY

COMING! WATCH FOR RELEASE DATES COMING!

BRONCHO MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

Mutual Film Corporation, 60 Wall St., Sole U. S. A. and Canada Agents, N. Y. City

There Are Only Five Foreign Pictures a Week in the Licensed Field

For Variety You
Absolutely Must Have the Perfect

C. G. P. C.

The Best the World can See

Book them every week at your Exchange

C. G. P. C.

SPECIAL

TWO REELS

FIRE AT SEA

AUGUST 26th 1912

Nothing is more thrilling than a story of a ship afire at Sea. Here is one accurately and dramatically portrayed by the brilliant Pathe players.

AUG. 19 Vitagraph's Feature Film 2 REELS

RIP VAN WINKLE

Robert McWade, Sr., stars in the leading role made famous by the late Joe Jefferson—A great film from a great story.

GENERAL

FEATURES

AUG. 12, 1912 CINES Rameses, King of Egypt TWO REELS.
ROMANCE IN THE DAYS OF THE SPLENDOR OF THE PHARAOHS

JULY 29, 1912 PATHE'S Don Juan & Charles V TWO REELS.
A WONDERFUL OLD WORLD STORY OF LIFE AT THE COURT OF SPAIN (COLORED FILM)

JULY 22, 1912 KALEM'S Siege of Petersburg TWO REELS.
A MASTERFUL PRESENTATION OF THE CIVIL WAR PERIOD

JULY 15, 1912 VITAGRAPH'S The Money Kings THREE REELS.
A VITAL SUBJECT SUPERBLY HANDLED BY THESE COMPETENT PLAYERS

JULY 8, 1912 PATHE'S The Adopted Child TWO REELS.
A FILM FULL OF HUMAN INTEREST AND INTENSE HEART THROBS

JULY 1, 1912 KALEM'S Tragedy of the Desert TWO REELS.
A FAITHFUL PORTRAIT OF THE ROMANCE AND TRAGEDY OF THE SEA OF SAND

JUNE 24, 1912 PATHE'S A Nation's Peril TWO REELS.
AN EXCITING FILM WITH A MARVELOUSLY THRILLING BOAT EXPLOSION

JUNE 17, 1912 VITAGRAPH'S The French Spy THREE REELS.
AN ENTHRALLING STORY OF MILITARY LIFE IN REAL VITAGRAPH STYLE

JUNE 10, 1912 EDISON'S Martin Chuzzlewit THREE REELS.
DICKENS' FAMOUS CHARACTERS ARE BROUGHT TO LIFE—PERFECT

JUNE 3, 1912 PATHE'S The Orleans Coach THREE REELS.
A MYSTERY STORY, FASCINATING TO THE VERY LAST FOOT OF FILM

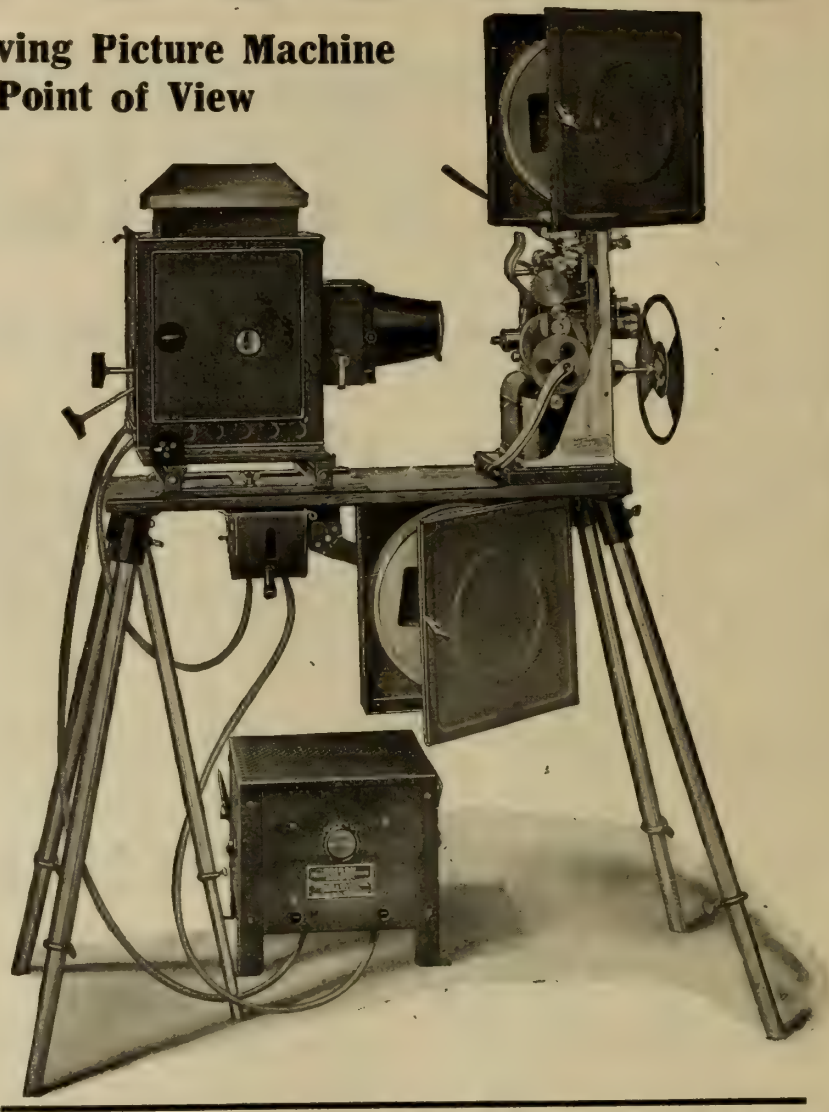
FILM CO.

THE EDISON KINETOSCOPE

An Unsurpassed Moving Picture Machine From Every Point of View

The best show is the busiest show—and pulls down the biggest, surest, steadiest profits. You can't measure up to the big time class with the blurry, jumping pictures projected by a cheap machine, but you're there from the start if you start with the Edison Kinetoscope.

It projects the clearest, steadiest pictures, is the simplest machine to operate, the most accessible, and is built to stand up to the work—no "intermissions for repairs" to discourage the crowd. Get posted today on the Edison Kinetoscope. Write for catalog 500 and a copy of the Edison Kinetogram.



SPECIAL FEATURES of Edison Underwriters' Type "B"

The only machine with hardened steel shafts running in hardened bearings throughout.

Adjustable Outside Revolving Shutter, Chain Take-Up, Extra Large House, with square condenser holder, Double Magazine Rollers, Heavy Brass Terminals on connecting cords, set of Heavy Extension Legs, four of which are 1¼ inches in diameter. A very substantial stand.

Price, with Rheostat, 110 volt, 24-40 amperes, $225.00
Price, with 110 volt, 60 Cycle Transformer, - $245.00

Thomas A Edison INCORPORATED

239 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

Current Edison Films

Aug. 23—"The Cub Reporter." 1,000 feet. Dramatic.

" 24—"The War on the Mosquito." (Taken in New Jersey.) 1,000 feet. Educational.

" 27—"Alone in New York," being the second story of "What Happened to Mary." Produced in collaboration with "The Ladies' World." 1,000 feet. Dramatic.

" 28—"Helping John," by Bannister Merwin. 1,000. Comedy-Drama.

" 30—"The Boy and the Girl." 1,000 feet. Dramatic.

" 31—"Simla," one of the hill towns of India, Summer Capital of the Empire. 1,000 feet. Scenic.

Sept. 3—"The Triangle." 1,000 feet. Comedy-Drama.

" 4—"Aladdin Up-to-date," by William Henry Kitchell. 1,000 feet. Comedy.

" 6—"Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," suggested by Thomas Moore's famous poem. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.

" 7—"Bridget's Sudden Wealth." 600 feet. Comedy.

" 7—"Opening of the Y. M. C. A. Playground, Lynchburg, Va., 1912, produced in co-operation with the Industrial Dept. of the International Committee, Y. M. C. A. 400 feet. Descriptive.

" 10—"The Manufacture of Paper, Maine." 1,000 feet. Industrial.

" 11—"The Stranger and the Taxicab," by E. J. Lucke. 1,000 feet. Comedy.

KLEINE

CINES TRADE MARK URBAN ECLIPSE

CINES FEATURE RELEASE, AUGUST 31, 1912

RICHARD, THE LION-HEARTED

An exciting tale of the Crusades adapted from "The Talisman," by Sir Walter Scott. Laid in the days of knighthood and chivalry, gorgeously produced, it will hold the spectator spellbound.

The challenge of the knights who engage in mortal combat.

The victor receives the hand of a fair lady as a reward.

BEAUTIFUL ONE AND THREE-SHEET POSTERS!

ECLIPSE
WEDNESDAY,
AUGUST 28, 1912.

THE GOLDEN CURL

A thrilling detective story, in which a golden tress of hair proves the clue to the mystery.

CINES
TUESDAY,
AUGUST 27, 1912.

THE BRIDE OF LAMMERMOOR

A powerful drama, telling of a beautiful but unhappy maiden who is forced to marry against her will.

ADVANCE SYNOPSES FREE. WRITE TO

GEORGE KLEINE

166 North State Street CHICAGO

KLEINE KLEINE

LICENSED BY MOTION PICTURE PATENTS CO.

LUBIN FILMS

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, AUG. 21st, 1912
LENGTH 1062 FEET

THE CONVALESCENT

Harry Devereux, a young millionaire, expecting to die of consumption, proposes a formal marriage with Alicia Chambers, who is engaged to his dear friend, Philip Holden, that they may marry after his death and enjoy his fortune. Devereux after the marriage recovers and Holden proposes that Alicia shall elope. but realizing the superior worth of her legal husband, she fills the bond.

RELEASED THURSDAY, AUG. 22nd, 1912
LENGTH 1056 FEET

THE NEW RANCH FOREMAN

Jack Walton, a murderer and outlaw, gets into the confidence of Mrs. Sawyer, owner of a big ranch, and is made foreman in place of Tom Lewis, who held the position and is in love with Grace, the daughter. A reward, however, is offered for Walton and to make a "get away" he endeavors to get $5,000 of the widow's money. His game is blocked and he is turned over to the Sheriff. Lewis is reinstated as foreman and the widow offers Grace as a reward.

RELEASED SATURDAY, AUGUST 24th, 1912
LENGTH 1060 FEET

THE GOVERNMENT TEST

A very dramatic story. Two railroads are bidding for the rights to use a patent device to stop a runaway train. A discharged employee of one of the roads offers to the opposition line to wreck the machine when the Government test is made. News comes that a bridge has gone out. The President of the road who entertained the proposition has his family on the train and by a mad dash in an auto is just in time to save the train from plunging into the river.

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUG. 23, 1912
LENGTH 842 FEET

WORK IN AN U.S. ARSENAL

An interesting picture giving scenes of Uncle Sam's workshops. Thousands of industrious workers are seen making Flags, Uniforms, Chevrons, Tents, etc. At the U. S. Arsenal you will see that Uncle Sam knows how to run a factory.

LENGTH 213 FEET

A WATER FIGHT

Duffy is sprinkling his sidewalk and the spray goes over into Flanigan's yard. Flanigan responds by turning his hose on to Duffy's face. The wives take a hand with buckets and finally the street cleaners turn on the fire hose. The battle royal is a scream.

RELEASED MONDAY, AUG. 26th, 1912
LENGTH 1062 FEET

THE DECEIVERS

Ormi Meredith and Paul Gresham, both leading players, spend their summer vacation at separate farms at Cowper Lake, both working in the fields and dressing as farm hands. They meet and fall in love, each believing the other to be employees of the farms. Mr. O'Neil, the manager, visits them and introduces Gresham to Miss Meredith, but she enjoins him not to tell her quality. They get married and Gresham discovers that his bride is the Star of the Company.

EXTREMELY BEAUTIFUL ONE and THREE SHEET POSTERS of our PHOTO-PLAYS, printed in FIVE COLORS, can be obtained from the A. B. C. COMPANY, CLEVELAND, OHIO. These handsome bills will offer a GREAT ADVANTAGE to your Theatre.

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY,

MODEL NEW STUDIOS,
20th and Indiana Avenues,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago: 154 West Lake St. B. Nichols, 86 Wardour St., London, W., England. Berlin, 35 Friedrich Str.

VITAGRAPH
LIFE PORTRAYALS

"HER GRANDCHILD" — Monday, August 19th

EVERYTHING WORKS TOGETHER FOR GOOD. A young fellow driven from his home town by narrow-minded bigots. He returns years afterwards and finds that his mother has adopted his child. A very strange happening.

Tuesday, August 20th

"THE LOVE-SICK MAIDENS OF CUDDLETON"

EVERYBODY'S DOING IT. A young Doctor locates in town. All the girls get love-sick. After consulting him they all get well. His wife comes to town and all the boys get love-sick.

"THE ANCIENT BOW" — Wednesday, August 21st

SWIFT AND SURE, the bow sends the arrow that lays low the slayer of the Indian girl's husband. Constant in her love, she avenges his death.

"SAVING AN AUDIENCE" — Friday, August 23rd

IT HOLDS THEM. A young girl impersonates a suffragette oratoress. The audience does not detect the deception until the real suffragette arrives. This comedy was written especially for the Vitagraph Company of America by Will Carleton, of Farm Ballad fame.

Two on Same Reel — Saturday, August 24th

"THE PARTY DRESS"

Too pretty for anything. That's how she looks in her grandmother's dress. It makes a hit with her escort and he marries her.

"ON BOARD THE KAISER WILHELM II

You have the run of the ship. You are taken all through the Kaiser Wilhelm Second and you are made acquainted with all the doings on shipboard.

NEXT WEEK	NEXT WEEK
"A DOUBLE DANGER"—Brings a Double Joy.	MONDAY, AUGUST 26th.
"FLIRT OR HEROINE."—True Blue.	TUESDAY, AUGUST 27th.
"TWO CINDERS." / "BUMPS." — A Comedy and a Circus Story.	WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 28th.
"WRITTEN IN THE SAND."—Romance by the Sea.	FRIDAY, AUGUST 30th.
"THE BOND OF MUSIC."—Harmonious Friendship.	SATURDAY, AUGUST 31st.

Special Vitagraph Full House Feature

In Two Reels

"RIP VAN WINKLE"

Released through the General Film Company, Monday, August 19th, 1912

KALEM

NEW-YORK
235 West 23ᴰ Street
LONDON
86 Wardour Street
"International Producers"
BERLIN
35 Friedrich Str:
PARIS
13 Rue du Faubourg Montmartre.

The Hoodoo Hat

A Rollicking Comedy

Ruth has a hat that is a wonder. The milliner's creation, however, brings troubles galore to the owner.

(On the Same Reel)

From Jerusalem to the Dead Sea

The spectator is taken to many famous spots in the Holy Land, from the Tomb of Rachael to the River Jordan.

Released Monday, September 2nd

Down Through the Ages

An American girl visits the Temples of Isis at Karnak, Egypt, where the weird atmosphere brings a remarkable dream.

Released Wednesday, Sept. 4th

The Loneliness of the Hills

Joe, the trapper, in a series of thrilling fights aids the Ogallalas to defeat the Creeks.

Released Friday, Sept. 6th

The Darling of the C. S. A.

A romantic drama of the Civil War

This spectacular military production portrays the adventures of an intrepid girl spy.

Released Sat., Sept. 7th

Special one, three and six-sheet posters for this headline attraction.

Your Exchange will book you for all four of these Features if you ask them.

FOUR A WEEK

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.

Published by
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY,
J. P. Chalmers, Sr., Pres.; E. J. Chalmers, Sec. and Treas.; John Wylie, Vice-Pres. and General Manager.
The office of the company is the address of the officers.

Telephone Call, 1343-1344 Gramercy
125 E. 23rd Street (Beach Building), NEW YORK

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Se cond Class Matter.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: $3.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada, $3.50. Foreign Countries, $4.00, Post Paid.

WESTERN OFFICE: 169 W. Washington St. (Post Bldg.), Chicago, Ill. Phone, Main 3145. Automatic Phone 32732.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES ON APPLICATION.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS (No Display), Three Cents per Word; Minimum Charge, 50c.

Address all correspondence "Moving Picture World, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square, New York," and not to individuals.

Vol. 13 AUGUST 24, 1912 No. 8

INDEX TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS 762
"ALKALI IKE PLAYS THE DEVIL" (Essanay)754
AMONG THE EXHIBITORS 806
AT THE SIGN OF THE FLAMING ARCS, by G. F. Blaisdell....761

CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES....780
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES...782
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed)....770
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)....771
CORRESPONDENCE 783

DON'T BORE THE AUDIENCE, by Louis Reeves Harrison....745
DOINGS AT LOS ANGELES....760

FACTS AND COMMENTS....744

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES 798
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES 812
IN THE CATSKILLS WITH RELIANCE, by Hugh Hoffman 748
IMPRESSIONS OF THE NATIONAL CONVENTION 747
INQUIRIES 769

LATHAM LOOP PATENT ADJUDICATED....747
LICENSED FILM STORIES 788
LICENSED RELEASE DATES 814
"LUCILE"—THREE-REEL THANHOUSER. Production by Louis Reeves Harrison....755

MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES 775
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR, THE....759
NATIONAL CONVENTION OPENS IN CHICAGO 746

PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE 764
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 766

REFUGEE'S CASKET, THE (Gaumont), by G. F. Blaisdell....757
RESCUE, CARE AND EDUCATION OF BLIND BABIES, THE—by L. R. Harrison....752

SONG SLIDE RELEASES 781
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)....788
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent)....798

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
FRORUP, L. E....807
KIEWERT, CHAS. L....821
REISINGER, HUGO....797

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
CHICAGO PROJECTING CO....794
CHICAGO M. P. SUPPLY CO....818
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO....817
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO....819
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO....820
HALLBERG, J. H....821
LAVEZZI MACHINE CO....819
MECHANICAL APPLIANCE CO....818
PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT CO....816-807
SCHNEIDER, E....820
SMITH, L. C....808
SUREHOLD SHUTTER CO. 822

FILM IMPORTERS & DEALERS.
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS 805
WESTERN FILM BROKERS....822

FIREPROOF APPARATUS.
TRAINER, C. W....794

FILM EXCHANGES.
ACME FILM CO....806
BRADENBURG, GEO....817
BUCKEYE LAKE SHORE FILM CO....818
CALEHUFF, CHAS....805
GOLDEN GATE FILM EXCHANGE....817
HITZ, L. 794
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE....794
LIBERTY FILM RENTING CO....809
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE....794
SPECIAL EVENT FILM CO....820-806
SWANSON-CRAWFORD FILM CO....816

FILM MANUFACTURERS.
CRYSTAL FILM CO....803

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS. (Film Supply Co.)
AMERICAN 728
BISON "101" 787
BRONCHO FILM CO....734
ECLAIR 793
FILM SUPPLY CO....793
GAUMONT 730-803
GREAT NORTHERN....795
KEYSTONE FILM CO....734
LUX 795
MAJESTIC 799
RELIANCE 784
SOLAX 729
THANHOUSER 726

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS. (Universal.)
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURERS....731-2-3

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
EDISON 738
ESSANAY 727
KALEM 742
KLEINE 739
LUBIN 740
MELIES 823
PATHE FRERES 735
SELIG 791
VITAGRAPH 741

MISCELLANEOUS.
A B C CO....803
AM. PHOTOPLAYERS SALES CO....807
AMERICAN SONG SLIDE & POSTER CO....814
BOYLE, J. E. 794
BRADY, A. 794
BOUND VOLUME 805
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS 808
CORCORAN, A. J. 795
EASTMAN KODAK CO. 799
EXHIBITORS' ADV. CO. 820
EXHIBITORS' ADV. & SPECIALTY CO....782
FEDERAL FEATURE FILM SUPPLY CO....806
GLOBE M. P. & ADV. CO....820
GUNBY BROS. 808
HARBACH & CO. 817
HOKE, GEO. M. 819
McKENNA BROS. 817
METCALF, G. A. 806
M. P. W. BINDERS....809
NATIONAL TICKET CO. 812
NEWMAN CO. 817
PHOTO CINES CO. 794
PHOTOPLAY ADV. & SPECIALTY CO....785
PHYTHYAN, F. 806
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO....818
SARGENT, E. W. 822
STEBBINS, C. M. 794
SHECKLER, A. V. 822
THREE IN ONE OIL CO....801
U. S. FACTORIES CO....820
WILLIAMS AMUSEMENT CO. 794

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
GUNDLACH MANHATTAN CO. 805

LECTURERS.
MARION, L. M. 805
BUSH, W. S. 818

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN 807
EDISON 738
MOTIOGRAPH 813
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH 824
SIMPLEX 779

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
BARTON, DAN 805
DEAGAN, J. C. 815
SINN, C. E. 819
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH 820

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO. 822
ANDREWS, A. H. 822
BENNET, GEO. 822
HARDESTY CHAIR CO. 822
STAFFORD, E. H. 822
STEEL FURNITURE CO. 822
WISCONSIN LUMBER CO. 822

PROJECTION SCREENS.
AMERICAN THEATER CURTAIN CO....801
INVENTORS' SPECIALTY CO. 797
MIRRORIODE CO. 801
MIRROR SCREEN CO. 801

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.
BATTERSHALL & OLESON 808
CLAPHAM, A. J. 808
KANSAS CITY SLIDE CO....820
LEVI CO. 808
SCOTT & VAN ALTENA....808
SIMPSON, A. L. 817
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO. 808

FEATURE FILMS (Released by).
AMERICA'S FEATURE FILM CO....822
ATLAS MFG. CO. 810-811
CROWN FEATURE FILM CO....799
FEATURE & EDUCATIONAL FILM CO....806
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO. 799-818
GENERAL FILM CO. 736-737
GENERAL FILM PUB. & SALES CO....807
IMPERIAL FEATURE FILM CO....807
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS 805
MASKO FILM CO. 789
NEW YORK FILM CO....818
QUAKER CITY FILM CO....784
ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO 794
ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO....809
SPECIAL FILM CO., LTD....808
SUPERIOR FEATURE FILM CO....819
TOURNAMENT FILM CO. 806
UNIVERSAL FEATURES 791
WARNER'S FEATURE FILM CO....807
WILSON, WM. 816
WORLD, M. P., CLASSICS 820

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO. 819

Facts and Comments

WHENEVER a new field of usefulness is opened to the motion picture the entire industry is the gainer thereby. In this way hundreds and thousands are reached and made friends of the motion picture who would otherwise never have appreciated it at its true value. An important discovery touching the usefulness of motion pictures was made very recently by a veterinary surgeon and chemist in the employ of the German government. The inspection of meats intended for consumption as food is very rigorous in every part of the Empire and cases of ptomaine poisoning are consequently rare. The official mentioned reported to his government that an inspection of meats could be made in a simple and effective manner by means of the motion picture. The present method is thorough, but requires an enormous lot of work and time. The plan proposed would mean a very substantial saving of both time and labor. Samples of meat are to be put under the microscope and filmed. Thus enlarged they can be easily and quickly examined as to the soundness of the carcass from which the samples have been taken. Scientific journals have taken this matter up and commented on it as the most advanced step in meat inspection. Thus great numbers of men to whom the motion picture as a mere means of amusement would never have appealed are converted from hostility or indifference to a recognition of the merits of this great invention.

* * *

THE numerous "Americanisms" in the titles of motion pictures have filled one of our esteemed British contemporaries with a most laudable desire to enlighten our British cousins in the mysteries of U. S. terminology. We quote from our contemporary:

"American Words and Phrases.

"Readers are continually asking us the meaning of various words of American extraction which they have seen on the picture screen, and accordingly we publish this week a glossary of American expressions and their British equivalents. We propose to make this a regular feature, changing the list at intervals, and heartily invite readers to tell us any American words or phrases they have seen but do not understand, in order to complete the glossary."

Some of the elucidations are not quite as lucid as they might be. The word "Yeggman" according to our contemporary denotes "a man employed by a trust to injure enemies." Just what our brother editor means by designating as "Americanisms" such classic words as "posse," "stenographer" and "hardware," "junk" and "thug," it would be difficult to explain. We will continue to watch this interesting "glossary" with considerable solicitude. We expect to see a number of novel and interesting interpretations, which we will not fail to mention.

* * *

IT is most deplorable that circumstances often put it in the power of one man to injure not only himself but others engaged in the same business with him. While public sentiment is veering distinctly toward a just recognition of the motion picture, even a slight mistake or an exhibition of bad judgment on the part of one exhibitor will quickly work a revulsion of feeling and destroy in a few hours what it has taken months to build up. We have often called attention to the evils of lurid posters and of overloading lobbies with cheap paper. Only a few days ago the authorities in Rochester, N. Y., were compelled to order the removal of objectionable posters from a Moving Picture theater. In a moment all the "reformers" and enemies of the motion picture set up a general hue and cry, and filled the newspapers with intemperate and unjustifiable denunciations of the motion picture. The action of one man resulted in loss of money and prestige to the rest of the exhibitors, who according to the unbiased statement of one newspaper, had been conducting their theaters in a proper and decent manner.

* * *

How to deal with such men who willfully cause harm to others is a problem which must be solved. As a rule men of this type do not belong to a reputable organization of exhibitors and cannot be reached directly through any steps taken by organizations of exhibitors. It seems, however, that it would be possible to properly label them in the public press and call attention to the fact that they are the exception rather than the rule among exhibitors of motion pictures. Suitable resolutions passed by a meeting of organized exhibitors will always be received as a matter of news by the daily papers. It is a curious circumstance that all kinds of societies are eager to volunteer their services as film censors, while the evil of lurid and cheap looking posters receives little attention.

* * *

THE matter of finding proper titles, especially for comedies, is one which manufacturers justly regard as important. Often in a comedy a very amusing situation develops and just as the audience is entering into the spirit of the thing, a cleverly chosen word appearing on the screen makes a most fitting climax, often convulsing the spectators with innocent mirth. We believe that the success of many of these comic reels has been due to an intelligent, clever choice of title and sub-title.

* * *

THERE are two ways of looking at the question of admitting children under sixteen years of age to Moving Picture Entertainments. In most States of the Union, legislation has been enacted regulating the admission of minors, and the general rule seems to be that children under sixteen are not to be admitted unless accompanied by parents, guardian or adult friend. While a literally drastic enforcement of such a law will eventually work hardship to many exhibitors, it is to be considered on the other hand that the indiscriminate admission of minors does much to lower the standard of the entertainment. There is a tendency among some of the manufacturers, getting weaker we are glad to say, to cater to the young, rough element of the cities. Where pictures of a sensational or dime novel character are made features of programmes, this element easily predominates and breeds disorder and disgust.

It seems to us that the proper adjustment of the hours in which children may be admitted without being accompanied by parents or guardians will form one of the solutions of this difficult problem. The Motion Picture has, from its very inception, always been a favorite with the children and remains so to this day. Intelligent cooperation with the authorities will often enable an exhibitor to get all the valuable patronage of children and at the same time avoid offending against the law.

DON'T BORE THE AUDIENCE.

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

WHETHER or not the photoplay is to picture our lives or to take us out of them is not of such serious consequence as that it shall appeal to an immense variety of tastes, prejudices and sympathies. I attended a performance the other night where the managers did their best to give their patrons a wide variety of program and watched a picture play where a mother died for no obvious purpose. In the next one a child died. In the third one an old soldier died. Then there was a tragic sketch by some talented players from the studio company of Pathe Freres. I went behind the scenes to chat with the actors and missed the fourth photoplay. When I came around to the entrance, a man leaving the auditorium said to me, "There has just been another death. I am going down to the undertaker's and enjoy myself."

The men who are running that theater are thoroughly alive to the necessity of entertaining an audience in order to bring its members back again, the management is capable, tactful and up to date, hence I can only ascribe the crepe on their presentation to causes that lie in the strain of overproduction. Those who are turning out quantity in the place of quality are compelled to fall back on hackneyed appeals to sympathy in order to arouse it from stale situations. Poor room; dying mother; empty milk bottle on the table; harsh landlord, and the rest, is growing tiresome. Also the sick child; specialist called in; hovering between life and death; all very harrowing but unnecessary. The only play in which there was a raison d'etre for death was that depicting the heroic and thrilling end of the veteran.

The last-named photoplay was applauded in every part of the house—the audience was both intelligent and generous—the sketch received a veritable ovation, although it ended in a double tragedy, but the three other photo-tragedies were a united frost. There was no thrilling or holding element in them and nothing to purify, humanize, or strengthen those compelled to sit through them wondering

"What meant the woes
"By Tantalus entailed upon his race,
"And the dark sorrows of the line of Thebes?"

The audience was simply bored during half of the presentation when high comedy would have afforded relief—low comedy would have been inharmonious. A great tragedy is considered by students of the drama as affording the playwright his widest opportunity, and may be his crowning achievement, but the unnecessary thrusting of death into the faces of moving picture patrons is an offence upon good taste and no come-again attraction.

There is a middle line in American life which has scarcely been touched in the photodrama. Tragedy and high comedy must be very strong to win without contemporaneous sympathetic interest. The drama that will succeed without straining in plot or situation is that we are not likely to get until a capable corps of photo-dramatists has been evolved from those now entering the field. I mean the drama of modern life that is a reflex of the period. It will have to present people as we know them or as we imagine them to be. It will have to be strong in characterization to afford an interesting study to those in front, whether or not the action is complicated or the situation sensational.

Love? It is said to be the motive power, electric or gasoline, of the legitimate drama, but in many of the photoplays there is something the matter with the carburetor. Here they come, Romeo and Juliet, wandering through the hired garden, he straining his newly-pressed suit in an effort to appear ardent, and she working her best smile overtime 'til the makeup cracks. So, this is love! Welcome to Los Angeles! We will now be treated to a feeble little struggle with the villain. Tension! Ah! Relief! They embrace! It is all over, and therein lies the real relief.

Over and over again this marrowless and spineless drama is presented on the long-suffering screen. What do we care whether or not they get married? We have not even been properly introduced to them, to say nothing of having any interest aroused in their careers. Neither of them has made a failure at anything or a success at anything. There has been no struggle of moment, no great conflict of forces to stir our souls. We know the end in the beginning, even if the director forgot to placard the plot in the title and explain every inch of the way in subtitles.

Lead us into the personality of the principal characters. They have souls. Their acts, their conduct, their facial expression reveal those souls. Show the audience the shadowy recesses of those souls, their dark and secret spots, those we strive to hide behind masks of civility and propriety. Go down to the profoundest depths where each of us walks alone with conscience and dig up a portraiture that will enlist and hold human interest. Now, when we are in touch with the men and women of the play, tell us their story. We can now feel with them or for them.

In historical plays action and sentiment must cluster around one strongly marked character. Supposing this personage to be a man, he must be at his highest potency and dominate all the principal scenes. There should be no mushy love story between unimportant characters as a side issue, such as I have seen over and over again where the figure of George Washington was introduced as the leading element of interest. As soon as the name of Washington is brought into the title, the audience not only has its interest centered on him, but demands that his acting and conduct shall be in accord with our conceptions of his noble character.

There are few figures in our history whose presentation on the screen brings a thrill, but the thrill dies away when it becomes obvious that their illustrious names are commercialized. Abraham Lincoln has been used to the point of abuse in this way, but note the difference when he is brought before us in a dignified way, all the majesty of his noble democracy supported by superb and fitting environment.

Abraham Lincoln, wonderfully impersonated by Ralph Ince, was shown in the same theater, the same week, to the same kind of an audience, with results that told for the popularity of the place. His immortal address on the field of Gettysburg was supported by a stirring musical improvisation, and the magnificent presentation, with scene after scene of the highest tension, kept the audience in a state of excitement until round after round of applause burst forth with a storm of approval at the conclusion. This appeal to patriotism succeeded because there is force, character and genius in the production itself. Such noble conceptions set the pace for those who are turning out moving pictures for American audiences, their artistic merits are of the highest from a critical point of view, and they go straight to the hearts of the people.

NATIONAL CONVENTION OPENS IN CHICAGO

MOST AUSPICIOUS SHOWING OF MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS EVER KNOWN IN THE HISTORY OF THE TRADE
M A. NEFF RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT AND ALL FORMER EXECUTIVES RETAINED.

By James S. McQuade.

EVER since Saturday visiting exhibitors, including high officials of the M. P. E. L. of America, have been flocking into Chicago from all sections of the country to take part in the second annual convention of the League. National President M. A. Neff was the first to arrive and immediately took up quarters in the LaSalle Hotel, which has been made the headquarters for most of the visiting members of the Ohio State League and for delegates and alternates from many other states. President Neff put on his working harness soon after his arrival and held successive meetings with the convention committee of Illinois branch number two on the third floor of the Orpheum Theater on State Street. Since Monday he has been hard at work receiving delegates and exhibitors in his quarters at the LaSalle and in arranging the filling out of the skeleton program drawn by the convention committee. On Monday afternoon the New York and New Jersey delegations arrived accompanied by representatives of the Film Supply Company and other guests, making the Grand Pacific their headquarters; the same hotel being selected by quite a number of Ohio delegates and visitors. Most of the Indiana contingent are quartered at the Brevoort, near the LaSalle, with F. J. Rembusch among the number. James L. Hoff, one of the editors of The World, who arrived with the New York delegation, is a guest at this hostelry.

The arrival of the Cincinnati delegation on Tuesday morning was the most spectacular and imposing of the visiting delegations. The party, which comprised seventy-five members, was met by F. O. Neilsen, chairman of the reception committee, and his aides and conducted from the Illinois Central depot to the LaSalle Hotel accompanied by a band of eighteen pieces engaged for the occasion by members of the Universal Company. This imposing delegation from President Neff's home city set at rest any doubts that might have existed as to his popularity there.

By Tuesday noon it was estimated that over eleven hundred delegates, alternates and guests had arrived in the city from widely scattered States, with many large and small aggregations still on the way. One hundred and nine delegates and as many alternates were on hand at that time, the following States being represented: Ohio, Illinois, New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Indiana, West Virginia, Kentucky, Wisconsin, Missouri, California, New Jersey, Washington, D. C.; Alabama, Louisiana and Tennessee.

Oklahoma, Texas, Georgia, Massachusetts and Canada are expected to bring in their reports Wednesday, August 14th.

The fine showing made by these arrivals has invested the Second National Convention with an importance that is keenly felt by all concerned, and this meeting is destined to be one that will furnish a memorable landmark in the history of the motion picture industry. It is perfectly safe to foretell that nothing revolutionary in an injurious sense will be wrought, for one feels it in the air that these men assembled here are full of high purpose and intent to fight the legitimate battles of the motion picture and gain for it just recognition from State legislatures and city governments.

The first session, which was an open one, was begun at one-thirty on Tuesday. Mayor Harrison, who had expected to give an address of welcome, was compelled to send a proxy, Mr. Hoyne, to represent him, owing to grave questions under his immediate consideration concerning the impending strike of street and elevated car employees. Mr. Hoyne was followed by Sidney Ascher of New York, who made a neat speech before presenting President Neff with a gavel. Mr. Neff deferred his speech of thanks until another time, not wishing to infringe on the time of the next speaker, the Hon. J. Lenz, ex-Congressman of Ohio and attorney for the Ohio State League. This gentleman made an exhaustive speech on the motion picture. He was so persistently applauded at the close that a motion was passed to thank him by a rising vote. This was accorded him unanimously. Mr. Neff followed by a short address, after which he appointed credential and other committees to report on Wednesday morning at nine-thirty, when the delegates will meet in executive session.

At seven o'clock Tuesday evening visiting delegates and guests boarded the large steamer Pere Marquette for a lake trip along the water front to view the water carnival and naval review now in full blast off Grant Park. Preparations for the trip were made by a committee of the Universal Company.

Exhibitors Watch Big Selig Scene.

On Wednesday the delegates went into executive session at 11 A. M., barring members of the press. This session lasted until 2 P. M., when adjournment was taken in order to make a visit to the Selig plant.

Visiting motion picture exhibitors attending the Chicago Convention, at the personal invitation of Mr. W. N. Selig, witnessed at the studio the taking of the big scene for a forthcoming Selig release to be entitled "The Fort Dearborn Massacre." In this scene almost a hundred Indians were used in the attack upon the fort. A special arrangement with the U. S. Government was necessary in order to bring these Indians from the Northwestern reservations. For some weeks the preparations for this big scene had been going on with the intention of having everything in readiness for the visiting exhibitors at the Selig plant. This occasion was the first opportunity that many of the theater managers had had of observing a moton picture in the making, and to them it was a revelation as well as a valuable piece of knowledge to carry back home for use in answering the questions frequently put by patrons who like to learn all they can about the pictures. About 1,500 delegates went out to the plant, and in the evening saw themselves in a moving picture down town that had been taken during the day at the plant.

Officers Elected...

In the evening the delegates again went into session and the nomination and election of officers was immediately proceeded with. All of the former officers of the National League were re-elected, M. A. Neff as president, Mr. Wm. J. Sweeney, of Chicago was nominated for the presidency, but withdrew his name and moved that the election of Mr. Neff be made unanimous. C. M. Christenson was re-elected as secretary; J. J. Rieder as treasurer. The utmost harmony prevailed throughout the meeting.

The next issue of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD will contain a full detailed report of the proceedings of the Chicago Convention, and accounts of the various pleasure junkets of the visiting delegates.

EXHIBITORS' CONVENTION AT SAN FRANCISCO.

The California exhibitors are making extensive preparations for their coming state convention. They are advertising it to the limit in various ways and, judging from the lively way in which it is being boomed, it will be a big affair. One of the schemes for advertising the convention is unique. It is a large printed "sticker" reading as follows: "BOOST —Don't forget to attend the annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of California at San Francisco, September 17, 18, 19, 1912. Excursion rates on all railroads." This gummed label is pasted on the outside of reel cases and express packages every day as they leave the film exchanges. In this way exhibitors in all parts of the state are confronted daily with this label to keep them reminded of the convention. Many of the most prominent exhibitors of the state are taking an active interest in the coming affair and all indications point very favorably toward the accomplishment of improved conditions.

TO TAKE IN TEXAS.

President Neff is in correspondence with E. T. Peters, of Dallas, Texas, and a number of exhibitors at other points on the subject of a Texas meeting of motion picture exhibitors. The date for the convention has not been set at this writing, but will soon be announced.

IT PAYS TO ORGANIZE.

Through the efforts of the Cincinnati Local a proposed ordinance requiring exhibitors to purchase a special kind of magazine, was killed before it got to the City Council. Had that ordinance passed, every exhibitor in Cincinnati would have been compelled to pay $50 for the patented equipment. Does it pay to organize?

TENNESSEE MEETING.

Warren Clay Scott, manager of the Edsonia Theater, Harriman, Tenn., is working for an organization in Tennessee. The date for the convention has not yet been set, but it will, in all probability, be held at Nashville at an early date.

Latham Loop Patent Adjudicated.

End of Long Litigation Between Licensed and Independents Favors the Latter Faction.

THE United States Circuit is the court of last appeal in patent cases. For several years litigation has been going on between the Motion Pictures Patents Company, owners of the Latham patent as complainant, and the Independent Motion Pictures Co., which was the former name of what is now the Imp Company, as defendant. While the Laemmle concern is designated as the defendant, in reality the entire Independent side has been vitally interested in the case, and the combined manufacturers of that side have joined in fighting it.

To sum up the case broadly, Latham in Philadelphia, back in 1895, thought of looping the film in a projector just before it passed into the intermittent movement, a simple process quite familiar to every exhibitor and operator. However, he did not specify his loop to cover a camera; only a projector. Before Mr. Latham could rectify this omission, the Armat Jenkins patent was filed to cover the loop as applied to a camera, and thereby Latham's claim was anticipated. Both the patents of Latham and Armat and Jenkins were antedated by a similar patent issued in France to Joly, which renders either of them without the qualification of absolute originality.

The story is familiar, to most readers of the Moving Picture World, of the numerous injunctions that were brought against the Independent film manufacturers for using alleged infringing cameras. These injunctions were finally denied, a year ago last June, and the interim has seen the case go through two courts to its final settlement. Here we append a statement from Messrs. Kenyon & Kenyon, attorneys for the defendant, including the decision:

> The United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit on August 9th, 1912, handed down a decision affirming that of the lower court dismissing with costs the bill of complaint in the case of Motion Picture Patents Company, complainant, against Independent Moving Pictures Company of America, defendant. This suit was for an alleged infringement of United States Letters Patent No. 707934, issued August 26, 1902, to Woodville Latham for Projecting Kinetoscopes and owned by the Motion Picture Patents Co. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals is the court of last resort in patent cases and thus this suit is definitely terminated and the Independent Moving Pictures Company of America has been vindicated in its use of the apparatus that was charged in the bill of complaint to be an infringement.
>
> This suit was looked upon by all parties as a test case. The owner of the patent claimed that it included all projecting machines and cameras in commercial use, but this suit has definitely settled their claims. The lower court rendered its decision about six months ago. The decision was then rendered by Judge Hand for the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, in which he held that defendant's camera was not an infringement of the Latham patent. In this test case the complainant had sued a user of a camera rather than the user of a projecting machine because it was essential to complainant's case to obtain a finding that the Latham patent covered a camera as well as a projecting machine. The reason such a finding was essential to this case was that Armat and Jenkins (and not Latham) were the first to embody the feeding mechanism in a successful projecting machine. Judge Hand in a carefully considered opinion held that the patent does not cover cameras and applied that holding to the question of infringement, going no further than that because that was sufficient to dispose of the case. But the holding led equally to the conclusion that the patent being for a projecting machine only is anticipated by Armat and Jenkins and is consequently invalid.
>
> An appeal was taken by the complainant to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and the case was argued at final hearing before Judges Coxe, Ward and Noyes of that Court on May 21st and 22nd, 1912, complainant's case being argued by Mr. Parker W. Page and Mr. Thomas B. Kerr, of Messrs. Kerr, Page, Cooper and Haywood, and on behalf of defendant by Mr. Wm. Houston Kenyon and Mr. Richard Eyre, of Messrs. Kenyon & Kenyon.
>
> The majority of the court, Judges Ward and Noyes, entered the following decision of the court:
>
> "The majority of the Court are of the opinion that the decree appealed from should be affirmed with costs upon the opinion of Judge Hand; and it is so ordered."
>
> This means that the majority of the court of appeals were satisfied, not only with the decision of Judge Hand in the District Court, but also with the reasons expressed in Judge Hand's opinion and upon which he reached his decision.
>
> This decision is directly to the effect that no camera is an infringement upon the Latham patent. In effect the decision means more than that, since if any attempt should be made to sue a user of a projecting machine the very reasons that lead to a holding of non-infringement in this particular case must lead to a holding that the patent is invalid because it is conceded that if the patent is limited to a projecting machine it was anticipated by the projecting machine of Armat and Jenkins and also by the French patent to Joly.

Impressions of the National Convention.

Whatever the future may bring forth for the exhibitor of motion pictures, he will never wish to forget this convention. The men and motives of the second annual National Convention are honorable. A serious vein runs through all their proceedings. The way they received the speech of Mr. John J. Lenz abundantly proved their intelligence—their enthusiasm was sound, not frothy. When Mr. Lenz, who is the assistant legal adviser of the Ohio exhibitors, started in with his remarks, there was a move of the stump orator, who "points with pride" to the achievements of his own party and "views with alarm" the horrible doings of the other party. The speaker soon dropped this trite phraseology and gave utterance to splendid sentiments. When he spoke of the higher aim, which should animate every exhibitor he was applauded to the echo. In the course of his speech, which lasted over an hour, he showed a thorough comprehension of the scope and mission of the cinematograph in this and in coming generations. When he told the delegates, that the men who wanted to cater to the lower instincts of human nature ought to be eliminated by the organized exhibitors, he called forth a storm of approbation. It is evident that Mr. Lenz has given great attention to the subject of the motion picture and that he is its sincere and warm-hearted friend.

There were over a thousand people in the convention hall when Mr. Lenz spoke. It was a refreshing contrast to the last convention, when but three states had working organizations upon their arrival at Cleveland.

The Ohio delegates are the most active and appear to be adept politicians. The big word in their dictionary is "busy." They are all busy. Their entrance into the convention hall was typical of their "live-wire" methods. They are enthusiasts in the best sense of the word and to know them is to admire them. I can well believe the statement of Mr. Lenz, that "the thousand exhibitors of Ohio are a mighty force for good"— or words to that effect.

"The National Board of Censorship" was represented by its chairman, Mr. Collier. He found himself in the maelstrom on the 18th floor of the LaSalle Hotel and eventually landed on one of the golden chairs in the room over which the unquenchable Kerr presided. Mr. Kerr insisted on introducing the chairman of the National Board of Censorship to every delegate who got within reach, emphasizing in far-reaching tones that the chairman "was a fine type of moralist." The chairman has elaborate plans for an improved censorship, which, it is believed, he will lay before the convention. Censorship does not appear to be a popular topic and there may be breakers ahead.

The failure of Mayor Harrison to appear and address the convention was a disappointment to many exhibitors. The name Harrison has long been associated with the civic progress of Chicago and no class of citizens honor the name more sincerely than the local exhibitors of motion pictures.

It cannot be said that the press of Chicago rose to the importance of the occasion. A Hearst paper devotes six or seven lines to what it calls "the meeting of the nickel show men." The other papers had not a line about the convention, though it is being held within a stone's throw of most of the papers published in Chicago. The same papers, which so completely ignore the convention carry a dispatch from the town of Montclair "in darkest Jersey," announcing the fact that moving pictures have at last been allowed to come into Montclair. The inability of the press in the great cities of the country to realize the importance of the motion picture is one of the continuous mysteries of modern journalism.

W. STEPHEN BUSH

Chicago, August 13, 1912.

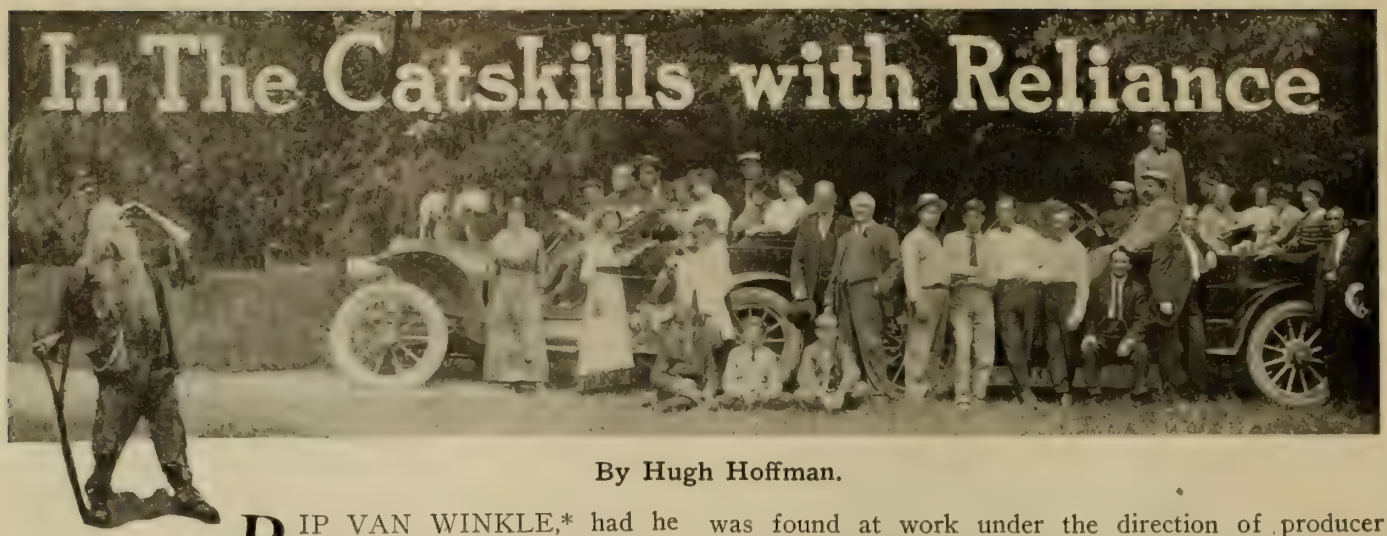
CLEVELAND EXHIBITORS HAVE PICNICS.

One of the favorite diversions of the exhibitors of Cleveland, Ohio, is picnicking. One of these events was held at Forest City Park recently. There was a big turnout and everybody had a good time.

SIX VITAGRAPHS A WEEK.

Beginning with the last Thursday in September, the Vitagraph Company will release six productions a week. The call for more Vitagraphs has been heard and this is the answer. Six Vitagraph life portrayals every week.

In The Catskills with Reliance



By Hugh Hoffman.

RIP VAN WINKLE,* had he been allowed to sleep for a hundred years instead of the fleeting twenty, would have inspired a more wondrous tale. It would have come closer to being a fairy tale, and would have been more nearly within the category of the Arabian Nights, ranking perhaps with "Aladdin" and his lamp.

Rip left a five-o'clock call with Father Time, proprietor of the Dreamland Hotel. Had Rip not been an early bird he might have slumbered on for a few score years and awakened in an age of marvels. Arising in the year 1912 from his reptilian hibernation he might have shaded his faded eyes and gazed in the direction of Hendrick Hudson's river, where perchance he would see the gliding biplane on its way from New York to Albany.

Dragging his atrophied limbs into his native village of Polen he would have found more interesting developments than the deaths of his friends and the births of his grandchildren. The "honk" of the motor car would probably be his introduction to that new-fangled contraption as he made haste to move his creaking bones out of its path. Had he returned through his village street during June, July or August of this year he would have beheld another of the latter-day miracles, the cinematograph, recording the doings of the Reliance Motion Picture Company, at his very doorstep.

During early August, in response to a kind invitation from Mr. James V. Ritchie to come as a guest of the Reliance Company, I arrived in the ancient village of Palenville, N. Y. In the days of Rip Van Winkle it bore the name of Polen. It lies in the shadow of the mountain side at the head of a narrow-gauge railroad, of which the train conductor is the business reincarnation of Jesse James.

The country thereabouts has been immortalized by the pen of Nathaniel Hawthorne. The cold transparent streams sparkle with mountain freshness while in the shadows of their rocky depths the lazy, wary trout basks heedless of eyes that see him as clearly as through glass. The sweet breath of the pines exudes from the ever rustling branches on the heavy timbered mountain slopes. Precipices, canyons, caverns, mountain torrents and cascades, abound in riotous profusion. Some of the gorges are spanned by quaint frail suspension bridges, built regardless of the laws of engineering, and accentuating the wildness of the place. Magnificent distances everywhere delight the eye and soothe the mind. Irving may have discovered the Catskills but nature made them for the moving picture man.

It was amid these scenes that the Reliance Company was found at work under the direction of producer Anthony O'Sullivan. His dramatic voice echoed through the rocky walls before a sight of him was had. The play in hand was "Philip Steele;" a two reel adaptation of James Oliver Curwood's novel of the same name. Philip Steele was a member of the Northwestern mounted police and his heroic adventures have gained wide popularity for Curwood's vigorous novels. The scene being enacted was the climax of the first reel wherein Philip Steele battles single handed against the superior numbers of the scoundrelly Bucky Nome and his crew, at "Hell's Hole," a wild and rocky mountain torrent. Above the din of the skirmish rose the commanding voice of the director, while half the population of Palenville sat spellbound on the rocks behind the camera.

The story of Philip Steele was adapted by George Terwilliger, scenario editor and playwright of the Reliance Company. He was formerly dramatic critic and editorial writer on the Dramatic Mirror and is one of the most popular men in motion picture circles by reason of his ability and his affability.

The second part of "Philip Steele" will be released under the title of "One Against One." Philip gets orders to capture a murderer in his vicinity. He takes the trail and overtakes the fugitive, but when he does so the two men are exhausted and Philip falls at the feet of his man. The fugitive saves the officer's life by taking him to his own cabin and giving him food. While there Philip finds out that this man is the one who married the girl of his heart. The man explains that he killed in self defence and Philip in return for the saving of his life bids him to flee to his wife who is waiting for him across the Canadian border.

"A Man Among Men" is the title of another fine picture that the writer saw produced. The story tells how a villainous quarryman attacks his employer and puts the blame on the sweetheart of the employer's daughter. He is about to be hung when the employer returns to consciousness and the girl saves her sweetheart and the blackleg gets his deserts.

"Where there is Soap there is Hope" is the title of a clever comedy done in the Catskills. A young fellow to get money to wed takes to selling soap to the country folks. Surreptitiously greasing an axle with black tar soap, he later smears his handkerchief with it and then easily washes it out. Big sales, followed by a wedding.

In some of the Catskill pictures the townspeople of Palenville were given a chance to appear. Mr. O'Sullivan did a wise thing in quartering his company at the various hotels in the town instead of placing them all under one roof. In that way his people became well acquainted and gained the good will of the entire community.

*Photo by C. B. Schaldner, N. Y.

As a director Anthony O'Sullivan, although for many years a comedian, has shown conclusively that he poses the true dramatic instinct. Every member of the original Biograph company has risen high in the profession of motography, and as "Tony" was one of that remarkable organization, he too has prospered. His stage experience, however, dates much further back than the Biograph company. For twenty-five years he has trod the boards, appearing first with Lillian Russell and Pauline Hall at the New York Casino. For years he delighted the nation as the star in "Mrs. B. O'Shaughnessy" and in "The Doings of Mrs. Dooley." He was with Harrigan and Hart in the old Comique Theater days in New York. In 1894 he took his own company to England and starred throughout the English provinces, after which he filled eighteen months unbroken time in English vaudeville, which is very nearly a record. Before going with the Biograph he staged "Mary's Little Lamb" and "A Spring Chicken" for Richard Carle, and appeared in both productions. While he is producing a picture he is all busness but after working hours he is the life of the party. One sure sign of his ability is the respect accorded to him by his company. There are men among them who have been thespians for a longer period than he, but they voluntarily testify to their faith in him as a director.

"The Old Swimming Hole" is a bright comedy that will remind every man of his childhood. Into this picture a majority of the juvenile population of Palenville were impressed, with excellent results. The principal part, that of a country constable, is played by George Siegman.

"The Two Fathers," soon to be released, was done in the Catskills. It is a story of the love of the son of one father for the daughter of the other. The girl's father proves to be rather unscrupulous and allows the boy's father to go to prison for his own sin. Later the prisoner escapes and insists on the young people's marriage as the price of his silence.

"The Soldiers Baby" is a tale of how the friendship of a little girl and a general of the Civil War saved the child's father from worse than disgrace when he deserted his post to be near her when she was ill.

Then there is "The Wood Nymph" relating the story of an amateur fisherman's promise to his sweetheart that he would give it all up for her. His one fall from grace —his adventure with a girl of the forests—his rescue of her, and failure to be at his own wedding—his final "throw down" by his fiancee, and his return to the "Wood Nymph" altogether form a pretty comedy with a certain amount of wholesome logic.

"North of 53," a stirring northwest subject, was also done at Palenville.

In my time I have been with many traveling organizations, but trouping with a motion picture company is an improvement on all past experiences. Instead of one-night-stands, six week stands and longer are the rule. The actor makes-up in his hotel room; an automobile calls for him and takes him to the meeting place, after which the necessary actors proceed to the selected location where the scene is gone through in short order. By sundown the work is over and the actor has his evening to himself. Being many weeks in the same place the actor becomes acquainted and quickly enters into the social life of the town. He has also the privilege of having his family with him, if he has one, which adds to his happiness. Therefore, on the whole, it is preferable to the old order.

A Highly Artistic Grouping in a Scene from "A Man Among Men," Done in the Catskills by Reliance.

Sketches of Some of the Reliance Stock Company Members—by Hugh Hoffman.

The personnel of the Reliance Company is interseting for the list experienced actors it contains. The eldest is Henry E. Walton, an English actor, who has been forty-five years on the stage. He has acted all over the world; in Indian, China, Japan, Africa, Australia, New Zealand and elswhere. For years he appeared in "The Lights o' London" and "Youth." In America he has appeared in support of Dion Boncicault, Mme. Modjeska and Margaret Mather. He was with the original Ermine Company at the New York Casino and later appeared with Effie Ellsler in Jeanne d' Arc.

Susan Balfour was for two seasons with Charles Frohman's "Jane." Later she joined the Girard Avenue Theater Stock Company in Philadelphia. These engagements were followed by others with the Kirk La Shelle Company; with Edwin F. Mayo in Pudd'n Head Wilson and with Proctors 5th Ave. Theater Stock in New York. Latterly she has been a year with the Edison company; two years with the Lubin Stock company; with the Imp. company, and a year with Reliance.

Charles D. Herman has been a player for thirty years. He appeared first in stock with Mme. Janusheck, and was later with Frederick Warde in Shakesperean repertoire. For four years he was with Ward and James, enacting classic roles, after which he went with Mme. Modjeska as leading man for a number of years. He next was associated with Nance O'Neil, James O'Neill, Walker Whiteside, and Robert Mantell. He is a sterling actor and a fine scholar.

James Cooley is a studious actor of long experience. For three years he was with the Frohman production of "The Sign of the Cross." Later he appeared in a long list of Clyde Fitch comedies with Clara Bloodgood, Amelia Bingham and Annie Russell. Following that came a year in comic opera with Grace Van Studdiford; then with Dorothy Donnely for two years in "The Lion and the Mouse." After a year of stock work he went to the New Theater, under Donald Robinson, and from there to play the lead in "Baby Mine" at the Lyric, New York. His next appearance was with Hilda Spong in Vaudeville, after which he spent a year in Chicago with The Drama Players. He has been a year with Reliance.

Jack McCabe began his experiences with McKee Rankin and Nance O'Neill. Later he was in the cast of "A Knight for a Day" and "How Baxter Butted In." Another season found him with "Salomy Jane;" another in vaudeville with Junie McCree, and latterly he has been in the stock company of Virginia Harned.

Miss Edgena De Lespine is the late star of "The Turning Point." Before that most of her stage work was done in vaudeville.

Gertrude Robinson has been acting ever since she was four years of age. She made her debut as Eliza's child in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." With J. H. Stoddart in "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush" she was one of the group of children in the play. As she grew older she was seen as Joseph in "Sapho" with Olga Nethersole. With Thomas Jefferson she was cast for grown-up "Menie" in "Rip Van Winkle." In "Ben Hur" she played the part of Tierza. Miss Robinson played with the Biograph company for a year and has now been with Reliance two years.

A Scene from "One Against One" in a Reliance Catskill Production, Showing "Fawn's Leap" Cascade in the Background.

George Siegman, playing heavy leads varied with heavyweight comedy, began his professional career with the Castle Square Stock in Boston. After a good schooling there he put in four years with Charles Frohman's production of "To Have and to Hold." He then joined Eleanor Robson's company and appeared in "Under Southern Skies" and "Salomy Jane," as long as those plays lasted. Leaving the legitimate he went for a season in vaudeville with Joe Welch. He then joined the Biograph company and some time afterward went to the Edison company, going from there to the Reliance.

Hector Dion was one of the first of the photoplay favorites and was the first man with whom Florence ever played leads. At the outset of his stage career he played for four years the erring son in "The Old Homestead," with Denman Thompson. He created the part of the minister in "The Volunteer Organist," and after a few seasons of that he went with Orrin Johnson in "Hearts Courageous." He next appeared in a number of Broadhurst plays; then with Joseph Murphy in "The Kerry Gow" and "Shaun Rhue." After a season with Robert Downing he joined the Vitagraph company as leading man. Many of the pioneer exhibitors have good reason to remember his work in such splendid old Vitagraph pictures as "The Easterner;" "The Mill Girl;" as Paolo in "Francesca Di Rimini," in "Liquid Electricity;" "The Gipsy's Warning," and many others.

Conductor on the Narrow-Gauge Railroad.

THE RESCUE, CARE AND EDUCATION OF BLIND BABIES.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THERE is to be released September 14th, by the Edison Company, a reel produced in co-operation with the International Sunshine Society so momentuous that its surpassing importance may be overlooked—it can not be measured at a glance. In truth, it deals with part of a subject of absorbing interest to mixed audiences wherever in our fair country intelligence and humane sentiments flower in the cheerful rays of progress. Wherever there are manly men of broad minds and womanly women of tender hearts the welfare of those who will constitute the race to come awakens intense sympathetic interest, and the whole question has become one of national consequence.

In evidence of the truth of what I am saying, I have only to illustrate the startling success of a book written by an Italian woman named Maria Montessori in relation to the marvels she has accomplished, whose translation was eagerly awaited, and whose sale ran ahead of that of popular fiction until it became the "best seller" of its kind ever known. The astonishing welcome accorded this work may have been prepared by widespread interest in magazine articles on the subject, or because the methods it advocated were originated and worked out successfully by the constructive effort of one of the most intelligent women the world has ever known, but all the evidences of its popularity point to a receptive mood on the part of our people—they were waiting and longing for something of the kind.

So far as the book is concerned, it is cited only in proof of my claim—there will be millions who will silently watch this initial effort of the Edison Company made along the same lines and as silently be affected by what it suggests as by what it offers in actual demonstration. Though it only touches the edge of a tremendous subject, the Edison release is of high consequence, just as were the first steps Columbus took upon shores now radiant with superior conditions of living and promise of greater improvement to come. Americans are only reactionary when they reach the "public-be-damned" state of mind of those who are well done financially. While morally raw or half-baked, most of them are progressive, and this release is in accord with the racial spirit of the times.

No producer, no exhibitor, no director, no playwright, no man of intelligence, engages in advance what will exactly suit all shades and varieties of the primitive mind, but each of them recognizes within the complex make-up of our characters greater forces than have ever been called out. It may be that none of us is able to reach anything like full expansion of mental power and effort because of that faulty elementary education for which our parents were in nowise to blame. Recognizing this and blaming no one for the imperfect development of what was implanted in us at birth, shall we sit still and cater to all that is weak and frail in human nature, or shall we pay our debt to men and women who preceded us by extending a helping hand to those less fortunate and by raising ourselves to a higher plane in the ennobling effort?

The International Sunshine Society has made splendid answer to this question, and the Edison Company is echoing their reply. They have taken blind children out of institutions unfitted for human betterment and placed the helpless little creatures where they no longer live in hopeless solitude to be drawn by dark tortures of the mind into idiocy or death. The work of the association is set forth in series of moving pictures more fascinating than the still ones can possibly indicate, and it is to be hoped that this is only an initial performance.

The Sunshine Ladies are shown going in search of defectives among the tenements, those dark seats of vice into which the rays of refined comfort so rarely percolate. They visit a poor family where one of the little children is blind and more or less of a nuisance to all the others, so restraining their freedom of action that they are forced to tie a sheet over its cradle during absence from the room. The mother of such a family has a thousand vexing problems to solve in the matter of maintainance alone, yet she will not send the helpless creature she has brought into the world where its opportunities will be still more limited, to a public institution. She rebels at the idea of parting with the tiny thing entrusted to her tender mercies even when the ladies give warm assurance of its safety and comfort in their hands—they are humanity's foster mothers—but she finally yields, and the baby is taken to the Sunshine Home in Summit, New Jersey.

Scene from "The Rescue, Care and Education of Blind Babies" (Edison).

We now see the blind children exercising in the kindergarden. Only those unable to act for themselves are assisted. The others go at it from natural inclination, though some falter and display so much caution that they seem to walk sideways. They are allowed to rest or play without coercion, and the pleasure of those able to use their own muscles unguided is manifest in the way they laugh and romp with one another. Some of the kids even play "Indians," just like the motion-picture actors, and execute a highly creditable war dance.

If I may judge from the Edison pictures, the Home provided by the Sunshine Ladies assumes many of the gentle and feminine attributes of that which the babies should have if their natural parents were in better circumstances. Its walls seem to embrace kindly welcome, and those entrusted with teaching the helpless human creatures pure guardians of all that men hold sacred. The house has a soul of its own, that of patient tolerance and sweet beneficence. I only sigh that this can not be extended to poor mothers themselves. Perhaps it will, but one needs sublime faith in the ultimate redemption of mankind from the worship of false gods to conceive of such commiseration.

Collective discipline is shown in a fire drill, and we are given a view of babies learning to feed themselves—it is not astonishing that these little blind creatures do so well with a spoon for a weapon and an open mouth for a target, making a bull's-eye nine times out of ten—but they do not take so kindly to a smooth shute down which they slide. Here is a form of amusement calculated to excite distrust among those who can see where they are going, and the kids seem to balk at its uncertainties.

I was interested when watching a blind child learning to communicate its ideas by form printing, and one of the most delightful pictures in the entire presentation is that of a sightless little girl laughing at something comical conveyed to her mind while reading a book by the sense of touch. What new happiness for a creature condemned to a world of eternal darkness! Nothing is more apparent throughout the production than the desire of children to acquire knowledge, from that of keeping an equilibrium and moving about through the performance of useful acts to the spiritual awakening that prompts their communal sweetness of manner to one another.

That they do not acquire grace of movement is not remarkable, there the eye is deeply concerned, but the hidden precepts of kindly natures are all the more attractive when they spring into bloom. They are fighting for a right to live, and seem to feel that they are aided in their unequal struggle by the Sisters of Sunshine, accomplishing slowly and steadily the complicated operations of keeping house and training one another under difficulties that only those who have been partially blind can appreciate.

One "Little Blessing" by the name of Rachael is shown as she actually appeared before the Governor of the State when a bill was pending which allowed blind children under the age of eight to be placed in homes and training schools especially prepared for them. Rachael is one of those rescued from an institution for the feeble-minded, and she was only a few months old at the time. She appears in the hall of assembly in charge of one Sister of Sunshine and walks up bravely to the Governor's platform. She is taken up to a seat by his side and allowed to remain there, a potent illustration of what can be done by enlightened methods of education, until the bill is passed.

At the conclusion of the voting in its favor, she is given a gavel and permitted to pronounce the measure a law in the executive's name. She is then escorted to his private withdrawing chamber, and there gives such eloquent expression to her gratitude that he is moved to tears. So will many be who see this presentation of what the world's finest examples are accomplishing in behalf of its feeblest. In purity, "Whosoever shall become as one of these little ones, he shall be the greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven."

Scene from "The Rescue, Care and Education of Blind Babies" (Edison).

"Alkali Ike Plays the Devil" (Essanay).

Reviewed by Jas. S. McQuade.

AFTER many months the laughter excited by "Alkali Ike's Auto" may still be heard in faint ripples, and now the Essanay Company announces a successor, under the title, "Alkali Ike Plays the Devil," which will be released on Monday, August 27. There is a wholesome atmosphere about these film laughmakers notwithstanding the crude incidents and humor of the stories, which burlesque life of a certain type in the Far West some thirty or forty years ago; and the surface risibilities of men and women of today are excited by them in much the same way as they are affected by practical jokes that work no injury on the victim.

In these riproarious Western mirth-provokers one is not troubled by unraveling the thread, or guessing the climax, of the narrative; one simply looks on and shakes his sides or breaks into loud guffaws, without a care or bow-wow for dramatic verities. One is out for a good time and lets things rip in their own snorting way, in full confidence that everything will contribute to the mirthfest on hand.

Augustus Dornly is still the same "amoosin little cuss" in the part of Alkali Ike. His experience in the role of the devil somewhat reverses our conceptions and expectations, for he gets considerably the worst of the game and finishes minus the tip of his Mephistophelian tail, which is shot off by a stray bullet as he flees to safety.

The locale of "Alkali Ike Plays the Devil" is Haughton, California, wherever that burg may be. As has been his custom in times past, Alkali Ike has allied himself to a sweetheart 'steen times larger in bulk than himself. The ponderous and aggressive Sophie loves him so well that she is inclined at times to jealousy, which finds vent in physical castigation several times during the run of this farcical skit.

Ike receives an invitation to a masquerade ball in an adjoining town and is requested to bring his "gal." "Fine duds and a mask called fer; com dressed," the letter concluded. Ike consults Sophie as to the dress requirements, but she fails to enlighten him. Then he calls on the postmistress, who knows more about such matters, and she gives him a catalogue with list of costumes and prices. Ike writes for a Mephisto costume, which is received about a week afterward.

When calling for the precious package at the postoffice, Ike comes to grief through sheer goodness of heart. Just as he is passing through the postoffice door, with the package in his arms, he meets a friend who requests him to direct a young strange girl to a certain house. Ike willingly consents.

On this very day Sophie and her dad drive into town and chance to meet Ike and his goodlooking companion. In a fury Sophie alights from the wagon and pounces on the girl, hair and hat suffering grievously from the attack. Then it is Ike's turn, and he and his package fly through the air as if shot from a catapult. The chasm is too wide to be bridged, and Ike determines to go to the masquerade alone. In the meantime Sophie tries to get another partner, but fails.

Dressed in the customary habiliments of Mephisto, with a three-pronged fork in one hand and a bottle of "red eye" in the other, Ike sets out. At sight of him his horse bolts, and Ike is forced to tramp it. At the outset he meets a horseman, who turns and gallops madly away. Further on he comes across a pair of lovers seated on a wall. Catching sight of him they fall backwards and rush wildly from the spot.

By this time Ike is in high glee over the success of his make-up, and makes straightway for a tavern. He had broken his bottle of liquor at the start, in trying to catch the bridle of his horse, and resolves to renew it. Just before Ike enters, the horseman whom he had frightened is telling a group of cowboys that he had seen the devil, and is reviving his courage by draining several glasses of liquor in quick succession. As the cowboys listen in wonder and fear, there is a sudden yell from the saloon keeper as he dives under the counter. All eyes are centered for a moment on the diabolical stranger and, in a twinkling every man has found a hiding place. Ike marches to the bar, seizes a bottle of whiskey and noiselessly passes out. Then he helps himself generously and continues his journey.

In the tavern, complete stillness prevails for a time and is first broken by the keeper, who has reflected that several bottles of liquor had been left unprotected on the counter. An angry oath from him, on discovering that a bottle is missing, brings the startled cowboys to his side. They decide, in grim conference, that no real devil could make away with substantial liquor, and rush outside.

Scene from "Alkali Ike Plays the Devil," an Essanay Comedy.

Ike is regaling himself in refreshing fashion some distance away and waves at them the bottle and his three-pronged fork. Their fright returns and they rush from the scene, but the wiser heads call a halt and open fire on Ike, who is trying his best to increase the distance between himself and them. The volleying continues and Ike draws up sharply while at breakneck speed. We see him examine himself for injuries and look sadly at the caudal part of his costume, the tip of which is missing. Then he throws away his fork and runs for dear life, with the whole pack of shooters close in his wake. Just as he is spent and in great danger from the shower of bullets, he nears Sophie's home. Dad rushes out and assists him to shelter. Sophie and he are in the secret. When the cowboys arrive, vowing vengeance, they view the reconciliation scene between the devil and Sophie. "Why, it's Alkali Ike!" they exclaim as they and Dad quietly move out and leave the lovers to their bliss.

"LUCILE"—THREE-REEL THANHOUSER PRODUCTION.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison

THERE are many delightful surprises in this beautiful play, but the last reel captures us with an unexpected movement when we are completely off our guard. The spirited scenes there depicted fall upon us suddenly and imprison us by a tour de force that is a splendid example of military action. Such soldiers in what has all the appearance of actual warfare! Such magnificent horses in the cavalry maneuvers, dashing into the thick of the fight without swerving from the bomb explosions! It does not seem to be a moving picture of prearranged military strategy, but a view of the real thing. It is battle.

The play is lovingly adapted from a narrative poem published a half-century ago by the Earl of Lytton, "Owen Meredith," and is a veritable restoration. So far as I am concerned the distinguished author has always seemed overshadowed by his still more distinguished father, the noted Bulwer Lytton, but "Lucile" shines forth as the gem of his early conceptions. Its restoration to the modern world in pictured form by Thanhouser is so delicate in finish and complete in detail that I dare to say that the work was a labor of love.

The increasing political power and intelligence of those who frequent the moving picture theaters has been so often manifested during my recent observations that I am constrained to believe most people know and care a great deal about the quality of presentation, and, if there still remain a number who do not know or care, it is part of the exhibitor's responsibility to educate the lower element while catering to the best class of patrons who attend the picture shows.

Here is a story of woman's sweet unselfishness and noble magnanimity—a theme entirely modern—which presents characters of good red blood and questions of moment, amid highly picturesque views of other times and customs than our own, and it is superior to small, silly and temporary aspects of life as we know it. It has a dainty flavor of old-time romance pervading its manners, costumes and settings that is like a whiff of perfume from an old jar of roseleaves. It will please millions who enjoy any form of entertainment that appeals to good taste and enjoy it in a quiet and refined way, the ones who can afford to come often, who keep aloof because of vapid and spineless productions of commercialism pure and simple.

The types are all well-chosen; the acting of the principals is so consistent that the picture should please in France and in England quite as well as at home, the actress who portrays the title role being especially strong in emotional situations. The cast in part one is as follows:

Lucile ..... Marguerite Snow
Lord Alfred ..... James Cruze
Matilda ..... Flo La Badie
Duc de Luvois ..... William Russell

Lord Alfred receives a letter from Lucile stating that she has heard that he is to marry Matilda, a young heiress known as Miss Darcy, and that it is time for them to return certain loveletters exchanged before they "parted as friends, soon mere strangers to grow." Each had made a pledge at this parting to return to the other the pictures and letters given before the quarrel that parted them. Lucile is at Luchon, one of the most beautiful sites in the Pyrenees, and there Lord Alfred rides to restore the pledges of love.

The exterior where he meets her in the midst of adoring friends and is presented to her suitor, Monsieur le Duc de Luvois, is one of rare beauty in itself and gives a sweeping glimpse of distant mountains that is very attractive. It cannot, however, give more than a faint indication of what is in the heart of the woman—the poet, only, can do that—and, more is the pity, Lord Alfred is manly enough as such men go, but is incapable of appreciating that woman's beauty is more than skin deep, that her form is the stem and her face the flower of a soul—a soul that may fade in sorrow, yet bloom again and again in ever-renewed loveliness. He symbolizes unenlightened MAN.

She is described by "George Meredith" as one of a type now becoming familiar, a woman whose high intellectuality and lofty aspirations accentuate her endowment of natural beauty, the one who usually loves most and suffers deepest, the one who learns another's woe and hides the pain she feels.

"To shelter her heart
"From approach, she then sought in that delicate art
"Of concealment, those thousand adroit strategies
"Of feminine wit, which repel while they please.
"A weapon, at once, and a shield to conceal
"And defend all that women can earnestly feel."
"Had her life but been blended
"With some man's whose heart had her own comprehended
"All its wealth at his feet would have lavishly thrown
"For him had she struggled and striven alone;
"For him had aspired; in him had transfused
"All the gladness and grace of her nature; and used
"For him only the spells of its delicate power."

Even when the stage actress indulges in soliloquy it is difficult to penetrate the heart and conscience of a character, yet this is one of the highest delights the drama affords. In the pictured play the opportunities of character portraiture are more limited and more subtle. It is only by significant action, artful gesture and facial expression, that personality is made to emerge from its cave of solitude and stand forth in full view of human perception. The entrancing twilight realms of Lucile's soul are not all explored in the impersonation of Margurite Snow, but the character becomes wonderfully effective in the important scenes.

Scenes from "Lucile," a Three-Reel Thanhouser Feature Production.

Lucile exerts a powerful fascination, that of refined intelligence, upon Duc de Luvois, firing him to desperate measures, and causes Lord Alfred to promptly regret his shabby conduct. After the exchange of letters is made, he meets Lucile while riding through the forest; they are driven to shelter in a storm, and he falls in love all over again. He becomes pledged to two women at the same time. Circumstances bring the impetuous Duc de Luvois knowledge that Lucile is about to throw herself away upon the fickle Englishman and he is about to put the latter where he can no longer torture the heart of woman when Lucile intervenes.

In the pictured version, Lord Alfred sees Lucile and the Frenchman in an attitude of intimacy—she becomes clasped in his arms while taking away his pistol—and this leads to another change of heart. Lord Alfred marries the rich and pretty Miss Darcey. Luvois, his case hopeless, retires to his castle. Lucile consecrates her life to the church. After many years Monsieur le Duc adopts Constance, young and attractive daughter of his sister, and takes her out into the world of society long renounced because of his true-hearted devotion to Lucile. Constance meets Richard, a young officer who is the son of Lord Alfred and Matilda. These new characters in Part II are thus cast:

Constance ..... Mignon Anderson.
Richard ..... William Garwood.

We are now presented with a familiar situation. Constance and Richard fall in love, deeply and passionately, only to learn that their union will not be permitted because of a bitter enmity of the guardian of one and the father of the other. The lovers are violently separated and Richard goes away to the Crimean war then being waged in the Danubian Principalities between Russia, on one hand, and the allied forces of Great Britain and France on the other. The Duc de Luvois responds to the call and meets Richard.

"Enduring and dying, Gaul and Briton abreast,
"Where the towers of the North fret the skies of the East."

In a splendid cavalry charge Richard goes down.

"Thus fighting he fell
"On the red field of Inkerman; found, who can tell
"By what miracle, breathing, though shattered, and borne
"To the rear by his comrades, pierced, bleeding and torn,
"Where for long days and nights, with the wound in his side,
"He lay, dark. But a wound deeper far undescried
"In the young heart was rankling; for there, of a truth,
"In the first earnest faith of a pure pensive youth,
"A love large as life, deep and changeless as death,
"Lay ensheathed. Lives there are though in love,
"Which cling to one faith, and die with it; nor move,
"Though earthquakes may shatter the shrine."

Richard is carried to a tent and there has a vision of a pale woman who ministers silently while cheering him and changing the aspect of all things about him. When he recovers full consciousness it is to find that she knows who he is, and she bears none of the malice in her heart that has characterized the relations of her two suitors all these years. She nurses the young soldier and encourages him during his waking hours and weeps over him while he sleeps. He is the image of the one she loved. When she comes to know his story, she is all compassion and tenderness, and she it is that gives him reason to live. She brings him from the shadow of death that he may be united to the woman he loves, and she carries her noble mission to the end in a spirit of high unselfishness, reuniting those who have been made unhappy by the clash of their baser passions, assuaging a mother's anguish, lifting the cloud of a father's despair, joining loving hearts in supreme happiness, only to become a pale nun once more, mute and suffering, yet glorious in the power of her pure love for humankind.

The poet's own characterization of Lucile is:

"A power hid in pathos; a fire veiled in cloud;
"Yet burning outward; a branch which, though bowed
"By the bird in its passage, springs upward again,
"Through all symbols I search for her sweetness in vain.
"Judge her love by her life! Our life is but love
"In act. Pure was hers, and the dear God above——
"Led her soul into peace."

"Her nature was like a stream
"That breaks its heart over wild rocks towards the shore
"Of the great sea which hushes it up evermore."

FLICKERS.

M. Noto, American representative for the Greater J. D. Williams Co., Australia, has moved his headquarters from Chicago, Ill., to 146 West 23rd St., New York City. Mr. Noto's idea in locating in New York was to keep in closer touch with the trade in general, especially the film end of it.

* * *

Herbert L. Miles, president of the Republic Film Co., 145 West 45th St., New York City, has been directing his efforts to manufacturing feature films since the disbanding of the Sales Co., and declares he has something that when released within the next two weeks "will make them all sit up and take notice."

* * *

Signor Sciamengo, of the Itala Film Company, Torino, Italy, while in New York City, informed us that the American agency for that company will be controlled by Mr. H. Raver, at present general manager of the Film Supply Co. of America.

* * *

If you should meet a distinguished-looking gentleman with a breezy manner, wearing a goatee and real Broadway clothes, and answering to the name of Jim Hoff, now doing duty in Chicago, hold him up, and insist on him telling you where he is going after the convention, and what he is going to do. There is a good time in store for all those who follow this tip. While in Chicago, Mr. Hoff intends visiting the plant of the J. C. Deagan Co., to get accustomed to the sound of those musical (wedding) bells.

* * *

For the past four weeks, manufacturers of and dealers in feature films have been complaining about the poor business weather, and lack of interest of the exhibitor in feature programs. Though business at present is poor, the feature man is not worrying; especially Mr. Dreher, of the Special Film Co., Ltd., 5 West 14th St., who forecasts a large demand for this class of program in the early fall. So positive is he in this prediction that the Special Film Co. has made arrangements for large shipments of two and three-reel feature subjects for early delivery. MAC.

REPORT OF I. A. T. S. E. MEETING.

The first meeting of the new M. P. department of Local 35, I. A. T. S. E., was held at their meeting rooms, 409 W. 47th St., on Friday, August 9, at 9:30 A. M.

The meeting was called to order by Chairman Frank Brennan, with about 175 enrolled members present.

The members present elected a committee of nine to confer with the Executive Board of Local 35, to thoroughly discuss the plan of reorganization and submit their findings at the next meeting, which takes place on Sunday, August 18th, at 10 A. M., at their regular meeting-room, No. 409 W. 47th St., N. Y. City.

A GAUMONT PHOTO-NEWS SERVICE.

The Gaumont has made arrangements to begin an illustrated news service as a by-product of the Gaumont Weekly. The service will consist of photographic prints measuring 11 x 14 inches, which are intended for display in the lobbys of theaters, and which will cover the latest happenings in the World's News and are most exquisite in tinting and toning.

Scene from "The Power of Destruction," Controlled by the Universal Feature Film Co.

"The Refugee's Casket" (Gaumont)

Reviewed by G. F. Blaisdell.

THE French Revolution has been a prolific source of material for the playwright. It is the most natural thing that the photoplaywright, especially he of the French sort, should recur to those bloody days—those days of tragedy in dramatic setting—for inspiration in the creation of entertainment for the millions. For if the playwrights of the speaking stage think in thousands, the photoplaywrights surely are justified in thinking in millions—certainly, at least, those who have arrived at the point where their product is sought by the successful manufacturer.

"The Refugee's Casket," to be released by the Gaumont Company on September 3, depicts a minor phase of the Revolution—for the safeguarding of worldly goods received secondary consideration when the loss of a few moments might mean the sacrifice of precious lives. If in these two reels of film there be no guillotine, no ride in the death wagon, let no one infer that there are not tense moments or dramatic situations. It is probably taking no great hazard to suggest that Gaumont will not deny that "The Refugee's" Casket" represents its best work—from the viewpoint of the dramatist, the artist, the photographer, the stage director—and, above all, the actor. The brunt of the work of the play is placed on the shoulders of Mme. Renee Carl, that serious-faced, splendidly-talented leading woman; and so well does she acquit herself that, writing two weeks after seeing the picture, the impress of her artistic interpretation of the faithful maid remains in the memory of the writer the distinctive characteristic of this drama.

Of the picture itself—as a picture—without reservation it may be said it is a gem. It is hand colored, and the coloring is so deftly done that while it adorns it does not obscure. The photography is sharp, stereoscopic.

THE SEARCH BEGINS

THE DISCOVERY

The play opens in the mansion of the Marquis de Saint Hilaire. The master of the house has been warned that the Revolutionaries are coming. The marquis knows the full meaning of the dread message. It means flight, hasty flight, with his family—his wife; his daughter, just on the dividing line between childhood and womanhood, and his six-year-old son and heir. While he hurries the harnessing of the coach and four, the marquise directs the maid, Marie Jeanne, to take care of a casket containing the family jewels. The casket is trunk-shaped, perhaps 12 by 15 inches and 10 inches in height. There are ample handles at each end.

As the mistress points to the treasure chest reposing on the polished table, the daughter, seated on a couch, has her arms thrown protectingly, reassuringly, about the young brother. A faithful servant stands at the door, which he holds open to facilitate the departure. The marquise seizes a wrap and the family leave the room. Outside the mansion the coach awaits. No time is lost in getting aboard. The whip cracks, the horses break into a gallop; the great gate, held open for them, is cleared and the refugees are away for the border, over which only may they find security.

Marie Jeanne is a maid, but she has that most desirable qualification of the ideal soldier—individual initiative, resourcefulness in emergency. Taking the casket under her arm, she passes through the grounds to her own cottage. Entering the great living-room, she looks about for a hiding place. She can discover none that seems to guarantee that security which her instinct tells her will be necessary to conceal valuables from the looters she momentarily expects. Her eyes suddenly rest on the fireplace, in which lazily burns a log fire. Again she is in action. Taking a poker, she inserts it under the edge of the heavy four-inch hearthstone, which she props with bricks. Hastily depositing the casket in the cell underneath, she replaces the stone and throws straw over the crevice.

The marquis's coach was scarcely out of sight when there passed through the gates a mob of men and women—a motley crew. Two officers were in command—that is, they exercised such supervision or authority as might be expected in these circumstances. Enraged at their failure to nab what they looked upon as legitimate prey, the revolutionists bent all their energy to searching the house for the family jewels, which they felt sure the marquis would not have dared take with him in his journey. Their anger rose as continued prowling failed to uncover the treasure. If they could not discover they could destroy, and that they did in thorough fashion. Statuary went to the floor, the furniture was broken and piled in a heap in the center of the room, and the torch applied. Around and around the blaze, like so many Indians in war dance, marched the crazed citizens, drunk with sudden power.

The officers, however, were not satisfied that the jewels were beyond their reach. They decided to search the home of Marie Jeanne. They found Marie in her house, all alone, She was not put out by the visit. On the contrary, she was smiling, suave. Did she have anything concealed? No, no. Two citizens were detailed to search the house. The two officers, while Marie accompanied the searchers, seated themselves by the fireplace. The sharp eyes of one noted the slight crevice in the hearthstone. Seizing the poker, he lifted the stone. His companion took some straw from the floor and made a torch, to enable them to see the contents of the cell. Their eyes bulged as they fell on the casket.

To lift the trunk out on to the table is the work of a moment. A hasty survey of the contents confirms their hopes. Then, in the manner of so many other patriots, since their time as well as before, the common weal was forgotten. The lust for gold overcame the pride in their new-found citizenship. They decided to replace the casket and return later and secure it for themselves. In trembling haste they returned the trunk to its resting place and let down the stone to its level. But they neglected to remove the traces of their work. There was straw on the hearth. Distinctly the picture shows the outline of several wisps sticking out of the crevice.

The citizens return from their fruitless search of the house. Marie Jeanne, calm, unperturbed, is again questioned by the officers. Again she shakes her head, and the raiders depart. As soon as the door closes behind them, the maid bolts it and hastens to the fireplace. She makes the alarming discovery that the wisps of straw only too obviously foretell. In feverish haste she also removes the casket and puts it on the table. Her eyes survey the shelves. Reaching up, she takes down a large plain stone jar. So ends Part I.

The Return of the Officers.

There is a pounding on the door. With forced calmness Marie draws the bolt. Two officers, the same pair who were in command of the marauders, enter. They are arrogant, confident. They indulge in no preliminaries; they want the casket and they take it. They call for a drink. Marie gets it for them. To their jeering invitation to join them she replies with a shrug of the shoulder. In glee the officers depart, taking the casket with them.

Marie again reaches for the stone jar. Rapidly removing the bags of precious stones, she throws them into the centre of the tablecloth and ties the corners. Out of the house she hastens, the parcel in one hand, a spade in the other, and crosses the grounds until she stands by a great tree near the shore of a lake. Marie digs deep. The jewels are dumped in and the earth carefully returned and the traces of the excavating removed by leaves.

In the meantime the officers have mounted their horses and ridden to a forsaken sand pit. Dismounting, they open the casket to divide their spoil. To their dismay and rage they find nothing but junk. The trunk is left as it was opened. The officers remount their horses and gallop back to the home of Marie Jeanne. They have carefully examined their pistols and are already inside before Marie, warned of their return by the presence of the horses, calmly enters. The would-be thieves storm and threaten and again search the house. Marie refuses to be frightened—at least, not visibly so. The officers bind her hands and feet and then tie her into a chair, straight-backed.

Like so many men confronted by a situation they are unable to master, the officers sought relief in liquor. They took a long drink, and then another; and then a third. Brutally they informed the maid that if in the morning she refused to reveal the hiding place of the treasure they would shoot her. Their manner indicated that there would be no hesitation on their part in carrying out the threat. Firm in the belief of the security of their prisoner, stupefied by the copious draughts of liquor, the officers, sitting at the table in the center of the room, fell into sound slumber.

In the fireplace a bright fire glowed. It was the same fireplace which had figured so conspicuously throughout all the rapidly accumulating trials of Marie. As the heads of the officers fell on their breasts, Marie, with her eyes on the fire, fell gently forward on her knees. Slowly, gradually, she worked her way to the fireplace. She put her hands over the fire. She placed into the flames the bonds that held her hands. As the strands weakened in the heat she struggled to break the grip of the rope. At last the fabric parted. She put her arms behind her. To loosen the bond was the work of a few moments. Once on her feet, it was a simple matter to cast loose the last restraint.

Marie walked softly to the table. Gently she removed from its holster the pistol of the nearest officer. She glided across the floor to the barred door in the corner of the room. As she removed the only barrier between herself and freedom one of the officers suddenly awakened and rose to his feet. He realized that his prey, and with his prey his visions of sudden wealth, was vanishing. He started for Marie. There was a shot from the great pistol in Marie's hand. The officer fell in a heap. His comrade, already aroused by the roar of rage, bent over him. Marie was through the door and mounting the nearest horse.

By the shore of a lake as smooth as if covered with new ice ran a perfect road—one of the highways for which France is famous. In the dim light a horse was tearing madly along, carrying a figure barely discernible. Beyond the lake and away from the road, across fields, now descending into a gully and again at top speed up the side of a knoll, the frightened animal raced with his nervy rider, her blistered hands guiding him to a place where she would be safe from the vengeance of the revolutionists—across the border.

The Return of the Refugees.

The great gate of the Saint Hillaires swings open. Through it passes a coach and four. It bears the same company which so hastily departed at the outbreak of the revolution. Peace has come; and with it the return of those who escaped the keen tongue of Madame Guillotine. The refugees' first thought is of Marie Jeanne. Going to her home they find the doors fastened—and on them the sinister government seals. Sadly the marquise, with her daughter and son, wander over the grounds. On a great uprooted giant of the forest they sit down to talk over the old days—the days of prosperity, the days which it now appears are gone. With Marie among the missing, it follows naturally that a goodly portion of their wealth has likewise departed.

The little dejected group has not noticed the approach of a familiar figure, smiling and happy. It is that of the faithful Marie Jeanne. There are fond embraces. A question is in the eyes of the marquise. Marie leads them down to the lake, the trees on the opposite shore reflected in its mirrored surface. The maid halts under spreading branches that have a familiar look. She calls to a gardener. He comes with his spade. Marie indicates a spot to him and tells him to dig. A few shovelfuls of soil uncovers the tablecloth. The maid kneels on the ground and unties the knotted corners. To the delight of the mother and her children and to the amazement of the old gardener, there are revealed the bags of treasure.

The old gardener had uncovered for the marquise something above and beyond treasure. He had uncovered a friend—a friend in need.

WOODS LEAVES MIRROR FOR KINEMACOLOR.

Mr. Frank Woods, who is well known to the motion picture trade through his seven years' connection with the Dramatic Mirror, has resigned from that publication to accept an official position in the production department of the Kinemacolor Company. He takes up his new duties on August 20th, and it is probable that he will leave for California with the producing company that starts west in September. Mr. Woods was not prepared, when interviewed, to state just what his specific work will be. Whether or not he will act as scenario editor, consulting or active producer, or both, is not yet settled, according to his statement.

Mr. Woods for several years past served on the Mirror as motion picture editor until he was promoted recently to editor-in-chief. He is known widely and favorably through his weekly articles under the pen name of "The Spectator." Prior to joining the Mirror staff, Mr. Woods was engaged in daily newspaper work in Ohio and Pennsylvania. The Moving Picture World extends its best wishes for his success in his new environment.

A MISSTATEMENT FROM CALIFORNIA.

Recently in the California column of correspondence in this paper there was an item to the effect that a Mr. Markowitz, after visiting New York, had made arrangements for the output of certain film manufacturing concerns, including The Film Supply Company of America. The item brought forth a letter from Mr. Harry Raver, secretary and manager of the Film Supply Company, requesting us to deny that his company had had any business dealings with the said Markowitz. He further says that the Golden Gate Film Co., located at 234 Eddy Street, San Francisco, and 514 West 8th Street, Los Angeles, have been appointed as the exclusive agents of the Film Supply Co., and that any of the Film Supply Co. product offered for sale or rent by any other California concern than the Golden Gate Film Co., must necessarily be a counterfeit. Mr. Raver has begun an investigation of the matter.

MR. CH. JOURJON RETURNS FROM PARIS.

We have it officially that Mr. Jourjon, president of the Eclair Company, is returning on the Ocean liner "La France," which is due to dock Saturday, the 17th. Now we shall learn in definite fashion just where Eclair is at. Eclair has rather divided honors with the Bison Company as a topic for rumor and film gossip. The New York office has so far put the answer aside by a reply that Mr. Jourjon alone knew the answer, adding that they were releasing through the Sales Company. Next week we expect definite final news as to Eclair's future program.

ENTER—WILLIS LEWIS ROBARDS, III.

Another young scenario writer and producer has been born; this time to Mr. and Mrs. Willis Lewis Robards, and upon the young man has been conferred the full and unabridged title of his well-known father. The youngster arrived on August 5 and at the time of our going to press he weighed in at ten pounds. Mr. Robards, senior, is at present with the Lubin Company in Philadelphia, in the scenario and production departments. He was formerly producer of the Melies in California, and prior to that with the Eastern Nestor Comedy Company.

WATCH OUR ADVERTISING COLUMNS.

Readers of the Moving Picture World are respectfully reminded that our advertising columns are worthy of careful scanning every week. All live advertisers in the field have found that the World brings results and are using our columns more and more. No matter what it is you have to sell or desire to get in the moving picture field, look in our columns and you will be very likely to find it. Our classified columns bring many buyers and sellers together. Already the inquiry in regard to good locations for theaters has commenced and the next few months will undoubtedly be a busy time throughout the whole country and many houses will find new owners. Whether you are buyer or seller, the Moving Picture World is your best medium.

The Moving Picture Educator

PROGRESS ABROAD.

IF a correct idea may be gained from the published accounts of the results of applied cinematography in England, it would seem that definite progress is very marked and perhaps more distinct than in this country.

In one London church special Saturday evening concerts with suitable moving picture accompaniments are given, while on Sunday evenings special young people's illustrated services are being held. The same authority says that these services are now forming a regular and permanent addition in all the institutional churches in the large cities. In particularizing upon the results of these services we repeat the opinion expressed by one authority: "Ample proof is forthcoming on all hands, that in the future the cinematograph is likely to develop into a very important educational instrument, and it is urged on behalf of living pictures, for instance, that at one attendance at a show at which a film on the 'Eruption of Mount Etna' was thrown on the screen, the children would learn more about this wonder of the world than could be taught them in many geography lessons." Some churches are making exhibitions a permanent part of their parochial work, only suspending them to prevent a conflict with other functions which they are supposed to augment and not supersede.

Under the auspices of the London County Council an educational exhibition was recently given in which geography, embryology, ornithology, entomology, zoology and marine biology were the special subjects added to the usual grammar school lists. This somewhat formidable program was exceedingly attractive; an eminent lecturer introduced each subject.

In another English city the members of the Board of Education attend the moving picture sessions, not only to notice the nature and value of the instruction given, but also for the especial purpose of recording the progress made in the more rapid acquirement of knowledge by the scholars.

Inquiry as to the reason of a more steady advance of the educational picture in Europe than in America brings to light the fact that the moving pictures were not so much abused in their earlier days in Europe as they were here. A steady oversight by the authorities prevented the obnoxious form of nickelodeon, and the lack of a yellow journalism prevented much "muckraking," so that the pictures suffered fewer setbacks and thereby maintained a steadier reputation. Now that in America the moving picture is coming "into its own place," there can be no doubt but that like everything American it will soon outstrip its contemporaries abroad, and become the power always predicted on these pages as its true destiny.

IMPORTANT PICTURES NOTICED BY THE PRESS.

It is a great pleasure to notice the large amount of attention being paid to the high-class pictures by the newspapers in their most important issues, i.e., the magazine portions of the Sunday editions. It need scarcely be pointed out that the highest class pictures are those which come under the heading of the educational characteristics.

The New York American of August 4th had a large sheet, 32 x 21 inches, with nine large pictures of "The Childhood of Jesus," the same being a part of the first issue of the famous Kalem series already noticed by this journal, and from which the greatest possible cinematographic success is expected and awaited.

The American says that the publication of a previous series "aroused so much interest throughout the country that a further publication was demanded." This being true of a simple newspaper production, what may be expected when the pictures are exhibited.

There is no doubt that however difficult the portrayal of the characters of the times, the fact that all the surroundings are identical with the historical incidents presented will give truth and realism to the whole.

The description given by the Kalem workers in the Holy Land of the great difficulties under which they labored are very interesting, as assuring the thoroughness to local scene and detail; despite these hardships they will feel repaid if they prove to have given the world a work that is at once a masterpiece in history, religion, literature and art. While the Moving Picture World is preparing the trade for this great series, the newspapers are preparing the millions of America so that all classes of society will be ready when the date of release is announced.

The New York Herald in its magazine supplement of August 4th devotes a large space to the work of Mr. Raymond L. Ditmars, of the New York Zoological Park, who is filming "musical insects" when engaged in giving their nightly programs. Successful pictures have already been taken of the white cricket, which on account of its color was easiest to begin with. Other sound-producing insects are the meadow locust, greater and lesser cone-headed locust, broad-winged locust, katydid, field cricket, smooth-winged cricket, and two species of tree crickets. To make this work entirely appropriate, it would seem that a phonograph record should accompany the film, as, although the film will be a most interesting exhibit of nature's musical or sound-producing insects, the quality of the music remains to be demonstrated. The main object, however, is the practical value of cinematographic research, as no matter how minute the life photographed, its picture reproduction is most interesting, fascinating and instructive; indeed, when enlarged upon the screen the doings of small insects are more marvelous than those of many awkward ponderous animals.

NOTES

The other day the writer was asked by a city school teacher the following question: "What is Pathé's Weekly and is it a proper thing to see?", supplementing the question with the statement that the children in her class were always talking about it and she was not prepared to rebuke them. Before giving the desired information concerning Pathé's Weekly, the writer first pointed out to this teacher that in this instance at least her scholars were ahead. This is an instance where the inherited evil reputation of those "evil days" through which the pictures passed fastened itself on the mind of this teacher so that she felt compelled to maintain a spirit somewhat akin to an "armed neutrality" lest she lead her scholars astray. After a thorough comprehension of the true nature and purpose of the "illustrative news," it is safe to say that in future Pathé's Weekly will no longer be tabooed in class, but rather used as an aid to many enlightening subjects.

There is undoubtedly a lack of knowledge among the teachers which is restraining the better development and usefulness of the pictures. When this lack shall have been removed, great strides will readily follow along lines only waiting a pedagogical popularization.

BUFFALO JONES IN THE SOLITUDES.

Many weeks ago a letter was addressed from this office to that brave and upright gentleman, Col. Charles J. (Buffalo) Jones, to his address in Las Vegas, N. M. An answer from him received last week tells of one of his trips into the great southern forests where he often goes with his horse, his dogs and his trusty lasso, being absolutely alone with them for weeks at a time and cut off from all communication with the outer world. He is a real son of nature, knowing the ways and thoughts of birds and beasts. Col. Jones has lassoed every species of large wild animal in the world with the exception of the tiger and the gorilla. It is to be hoped that he will fulfill his plans for his next trip, which is an excursion to India and Borneo, in order that his list of lariat captures may be complete.

NEW FIRM TO MAKE EDUCATIONALS AND INDUSTRIALS.

A company has been recently organized under the name of the Great Eastern Film Manufacturing Company with offices at 218 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass., for the purpose of manufacturing educational, commercial and feature films. It has been reported that abundant Boston capital is available to promote this latest film enterprise of New England.

DOINGS AT LOS ANGELES.

THREE complete companies are now working independently of each other at the Western studio of the Selig Polyscope Company in Edendale. Besides the company of which Colin Campbell is director, there is now another company directed by Hobart Bosworth and a third with Fred Huntly as director.

Bosworth is a notable addition to the ranks of the motion picture directors. For many years he was a leading man in legitimate drama and he is no novice in the stage directing game, for he also followed that for several years. In the comparatively short time he has been a motion picture actor he has obtained recognition as one of the stars in the new art.

Campbell and his company have been at Catalina all this week, chiefly for the purpose of making a historical drama depicting the scenes attending the discovery of the island by Rodreguez Cabrillo in 1542. This occupied three days, and the remainder of the week was devoted to making scenes which will be incorporated into other dramas and comedies which are in preparation.

Bosworth's company of eighteen people will go up to Bear Valley soon for an indefinite stay. This is the time of the year when the motion picture actors and directors bless the photoplaywrights who furnish scripts that call for mountain and seashore backgrounds. Catalina and Bear Valley are among the most delightful summer resorts in the West. At the latter resort there is a turquoise lake of about forty square miles area surrounded with snow peaks and pine covered hills. The trout bite best about the time the cameraman announces that the light has vanished.

* * *

George H. Melford, director of the Kalem Glendale Company is back from New Mexico quite excited and enthusiastic about a two-reel picture he went there to make. It is the story of the reconquest of Santa Fe by DeVaigas, late in the seventeenth century, and it covers the principal events in the period from 1680, when the Indians drove the Spaniards out of Santa Fe, until 1690, when DeVaigas took possession of it again. This great Spanish soldier's accomplishment is one of the fine things in history. The Spaniards had settled Santa Fe, which was then in Mexican territory, and the Indians in driving them out had shown great brutality. Considering the ideas which prevailed at that time DeVaigas would probably have been justified in dealing severely with them when he marched out of El Paso in the last decade of the century at the head of a large enough body of troops to annihilate the Indians. Instead he preferred more gentle methods of meeting the situation. He negotiated with the Indians, held many conferences and finally persuaded them to surrender the city without a drop of blood being shed on either side. This feature has been made the most of by Mr. Melford in his production.

Miss Mae Marsh, who has been Melford's leading woman, has left the company and her place has been taken by Miss Lillian Christie, who came out here as leading woman for the Vitagraph's Santa Monica Company and afterward went with the Bison forces.

* * *

Further details of the plans of the new Brand's Advanced Motion Picture Company have been announced by H. J. Brand, head of the company. The company is capitalized for $500,000, he says, with all the stock subscribed, and $490,000 already paid in. No stock is for sale. A large tract of land has been purchased at Brand's Station on the Burbank line of the Pacific Electric Railway, a mile and a quarter from Casa Verdugo and the same distance from Glendale. Contracts have been let for buildings which will cover an area of 1,057 square feet in excess of ten acres. Ground has already been broken for several of the buildings. There will be four glass studios, each 40 by 100 feet. Other buildings of the same dimensions, but two stories in height, will be a carpenter shop and scene room, a stock and costume room, a developing plant and laboratory, and an electric light power house. There will be an office building, 40 by 60, two stories in height, and Mr. Brand will have a seven-room bungalow on the grounds. An open top Roman stadium, 500 by 275 feet, will be built for spectacular productions.

Ben Horning, director of the famous California Mission Play, will be the principal director, and has signed a long term contract. There will be four other directors, with whom negotiations are now being carried on. Mr. Brand does not admit it, but there has been a rumor to the effect that Fred Mace, formerly of the Biograph and Imp companies, and now with the Bison, is to be one of these.

The cameras are scheduled to begin working about the second week in September. There will be 428 people on the permanent payroll, but many supernumeraries will be employed from time to time.

The first production is to be the Siege of Rome, with 4,000 people in the cast, according to Brand's statement. Other productions promised are the "Last Days of Pompeii," the "Fall of Sebastopol," the "Fall of Babylon," the "Fall of the Bastile," the "Reign of Pharaoh," and the "Book of Job." These are to be the big productions, says Mr. Brand. In length they will run from five to sixteen reels. A 16-reel subject, which is planned, will be put out in four sections of four reels each. Besides these there will be a series of one-reel dramatizations of Biblical stories.

* * *

An attempt on the part of one of the downtown exhibitors last week to comply with the city ordinance prohibiting the exhibition of posters "depicting crime" disclosed in a laughable way one of the weaknesses of the motion picture industry.

The exhibitor was showing a special feature put out by one of the independent manufacturers. The posters which accompanied it were full of "action." That is, nearly every scene showed some kind of a "gun play." There was one in particular in which a Mexican, crouching, with one arm drawn, back holding a knife in the striking attitude, was confronting a cowboy hero who had covered him with a revolver. To keep out of trouble with the authorities the exhibitor had pasted squares of paper over the knife and the revolver. Then, to prevent the glaring white patches being too prominent, upon each one a bouquet of flowers had been painted. Thus modified, the poster told a story entirely different from the original intention. The Mexican, while about to receive a bunch of flowers, was trying to conceal the fact that he already had one. The effect was ludicrous, but it also emphasized the fact that the performance inside was probably of a nature that would cause it to be suppressed if the pictures were shown on billboards instead of a screen.

* * *

Apparently James Young Deer, director of the Western Pathe Company, has found an ideal place for the production of motion pictures of Western, Indian and Spanish subjects. The company is at the big S. & M. ranch in Orange County, where it went seven weeks ago for a stay of what was to have been seven weeks. Last week Young Deer brought his people back to Los Angeles for a few days' work on interior scenes at the Edendale studio, but now they have gone back to Orange County for another two weeks.

* * *

Tom McCarey, prize fight promoter, has not been getting the returns he looked for from the exhibition of the motion pictures of the Wolgast-Rivers fight, held here July 4. McCarey kept the motion picture concession for himself, and employed Fred Balshofer to photograph the fight. He sent out two copies along the coast. One was accompanied by a manager at $75 a week and an assistant at $50 a week. After they were out two weeks and McCarey had been figuring on what he would do with all the profits, the manager sent in a statement showing that there was $13 due him for expenses. The other set, after two weeks on the road, showed a net profit of $38.

* * *

Local exhibitors are awaiting the arrival of an organizer for the new Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association of California, who is reported to be working down the coast from San Francisco, where the association was recently organized. There are no members in Los Angeles at the present time, but a number of the exhibitors have heard favorable reports about the association and are prepared to join it and work with it. The first annual convention is to be held in San Francisco for three days beginning September 15, and the northern exhibitors are anxious that there shall be a strong representation from this end of the state.

* * *

E. H. Emmick, head of the recently organized E. H. Emmick Film Exchange, Independent, of Los Angeles and San Francisco, has gone East on a business trip. Before he returns to the coast he will go to Europe on a film purchasing expedition, for big features especially. He will also investigate a new picture machine with a view to becoming the American agent for it.

* * *

Lanier Bartlett, photoplay editor for the Western section of the Selig Company, is taking a two weeks' vacation at Seven Oaks, a Southern California mountain summer resort. That is, it will be two weeks provided the store of photoplays he piled up before he left is not exhausted by the three directors before his time is up. They made him promise not to get out of reach of the telephone or telegraph.

AT THE SIGN OF THE FLAMING ARCS.

By G. F. Blaisdell.

LUBIN will dig deep into the hearts and stir the emotions of thousands of followers of the silent drama with his splendid "Derelict's Return." Many a wayward son, more thoughtless, perhaps, than wicked, will feel the sting of conscience and of remorse as he watches the unfolding of this pathetic story; and his thoughts and possibly his feet will turn to the home where loved ones day after day await his coming. "The Derelict's Return" is a powerful story, and it is carefully staged and feelingly acted. The climax, in which participate Harry Meyers and May Buckley chiefly, and in a minor degree Peter Lang as the sexton and Charles Arthur as the minister, is one of the most effective, most dramatic, pieces of acting this writer has been privileged to see on the screen.

Harry Meyers is the wayward son. May Buckley is the sister of the minister, and she is trying to reform Harry. Harry has a liking for the pool table; yet sometimes he goes to church. His companions joke him about attendance at divine service. When attempts are made at home to show him the error of his ways he quarrels with his mother and the minister and leaves home. This scene affords Charles Arthur an opportunity to show what he can do. A year later Harry's mother dies. The second day following Harry returns to his home; he is in tatters and is hungry. He enters a bakery and steals a loaf of bread. He eludes the pursuit of a policeman by entering a church and climbing to the belfry, where he spends the night. In the morning the wanderer is awakened by the tolling of the great bell just above him. He looks out the window and sees a funeral procession approaching. Slowly he makes his way down to the ground floor. He peers through the door at the sad old sexton, who has just ceased tolling the bell and stands wiping the tears and the perspiration from his face. Through the glass in the door can be seen the minister as he stands by the coffin. The sexton does not at first recognize the unkempt figure before him, but when he does Harry is informed that it is his mother whose funeral sermon is now being preached. Harry throws back the door and sways down the aisle. He falls on the casket.

Back in the rear of the church the sister of the minister sits. She is in mourning for her friend. Her eyes have followed the wanderer as he passed up the church. There never was an instant's doubt on her part as to the identity of the nondescript. The sister of the minister was still the friend of the wayward youth. She went to his side and put her arms about him. Gently she drew him away from the casket. Harry turned and tried to go back, but May dissuaded him. At the door the old sexton, long-time family friend, joined the pair. The minister had not yet resumed his interrupted eulogy. The eye of every mourner was fixed on the strange scene taking place in the aisle. Many of the assembled friends were using their handkerchiefs to conceal their tears. The depth of tenderness and sympathy in May's eyes reveal the power—and the art—of this versatile woman.

The next scene is "The Reformation." Harry, restored to society, is putting a ring on the finger of May. Both are smiling. The minister enters. A glance tells him what has taken place. He folds his sister in his arms.

* * *

The Rev. B. Lack Hodge, speaking before a committee of the common council of Richmond, Va., in favor of a proposed ordinance prohibiting children under fourteen years of age entering a picture show unless accompanied by a guardian, made a remarkable confession. He is reported as being "quite heated in his denunciation, saying that picture houses were debauching, wrecking and ruining the younger generation." This, it is submitted, is a good example of clerical intolerance and shows to what verbal lengths a man may be led through customarily speaking from the pulpit—in which, of course, he may say anything he pleases, without fear of immediate refutation or "comeback." But here is the confession:

He had not attended the picture houses himself!

The proposition was killed, 6 to 3.

* * *

There was commotion in Rochester, N. Y., in the latter part of last month when the Mayor summarily closed the Bijou Theater for displaying a reel declared to be offensive. The house was closed for several days before the license was restored. No opportunity was given the exhibitor to withdraw the picture from exhibition; the film was arbitrarily confiscated and the doors closed. A resume of the drama responsible for this drastic action, as printed in a local paper, failed to reveal anything that on the speaking stage would be given a second thought.

The revocation of the license, however, was speedily followed by the organization of Rochester Local No. 5, M. P. E. L. A.

* * *

The exhibitors of an Illinois town have agreed to charge full admission to all children over two years of age.

* * *

On a Tuesday afternoon the National Board of Censorship had put in rather a long session at the Film Supply. The last reel was near the end. That was indicated by the ascending, tell-tale voice of the film as it passed through the projector. The picture was a Majestic—"The Higher Thought." Just as a sub-title was flashed on the screen there was a sound of something falling to the floor; there was no need to look to see what had dropped; the report of the impact pointed only too clearly to a piece of stiff summer headgear. Brother McKinney, who always keeps everyone in good humor as well as carefully superintending the projection of the pictures, brought a hearty laugh out of the assembled censors and scribes as he shouted:

"Here, here! Cut out that small-town stuff!"

The sub-title was: "The Last Straw—Deserted."

* * *

The first attempt of the screen and the magazine page to join forces resulted certainly not to the disadvantage of the former. Edison's production of "What Happened to Mary" in conjunction with a serial running in the Ladies' World seemed certainly to be a more interesting piece of work than the dead page. Mary Fuller has the leading rôle, and she adds to her laurels. The cover of the magazine has a picture of "Mary" drawn by C. D. Gibson. Far be it from a humble picture scribe to attempt to criticize the work or the judgment of a master artist, but he is willing to wager a good smoke that many a full-grown man who looks on the pictured representation of the flesh-and-blood Mary—wholesome, normal, everyday womanhood—and then on the pictured ideal of the ethereal, goose-necked, ultra-aristocratic, over-bred, clossy creation of the artist will instinctively cast his ballot for Mary Fuller.

* * *

Although there is no apparent effort on the part of the Vitagraph Company to call attention to the fact, film followers must have noticed the remarkable quality of the recent work of little Helen Costello. In two pictures seen by the writer this last week —"Lulu's Doctor" and "Wanted, a Grandmother"—the naturalness of the child, her unconsciousness of the camera, her infectious laughter, and delightful naïveté stamp her as second to none among the small children who have achieved fame on the screen.

While mentioning "Wanted, a Grandmother," it is a pleasure to note another appearance of Miss Turner. Each entrance on the film proves that her popularity is founded on artistic worth; furthermore, in these days of splendid actresses on screen work the Vitagraph Girl can still hold the same place in the hearts of picture-goers she did when she had little real competition. Her interpretation of the "Grandmother" was filled with the individual touches which mark the alliance of intelligence and experience—the distinctive factors which are in and of the player and which are beyond the power of the director to instill.

* * *

Pathe's Weekly of August 12th had a delightful bit of human interest in its marriage picture, a feature of the balloon race at Kansas City. The bride, already in the car and about to go into the clouds, on her wedding journey, cared no more about the camera that was bearing upon her than if it were a mile away. Her thoughts were entirely on the business in hand. The bridegroom also was as unconscious of the camera as if he had been doing the leads in a picture studio for twenty years. In fact, his absolute unconcern might well have reminded one of the remark of the Texan at a Democratic National Convention when he gazed on the immobile features of the late Senator McCarren, of Brooklyn: "What a face to put behind four aces!"

* * *

Speaking of camera-hardening, it is interesting these days to watch the professional manner of President Taft when under the fire of the cameraman. His sang froid at the ceremonies marking his official notification of his late nomination was in strong contrast to his camera-consciousness in the earlier ordeals.

* * *

Thanhouser has a real star in Riley Chamberlain. There is no comedian on the screen to-day putting up finer work. Nor is he limited to comedy. He is doing all-round stuff and doing it well.

* * *

The Weeklies have discovered the pictorial quality of the yacht race. There is no finer thing in motion pictures than the reproduction of the big racing machines ploughing through the water, heeled over, a bright sun shining on immaculate canvas and on dancing and sparkling waves.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT.

Pictorial Paper.

WE spoke last week of the change in the mode of exhibiting motion pictures that led away from the old days of the exhibitor and the store show to the more modern day of the manager of the photoplay theater. There is a growing tendency to follow more and more in the footsteps of the dramatic theatrical managers and one of these signs is the increased use of pictorial paper.

In this connection we quote rather extensively from a letter from Mr. R. W. Midgley, assistant manager of the Liberty Theater, Salt Lake City.

It is no longer possible to draw a good business by merely displaying the old sign "Moving pictures and vaudeville 5c" that is still to be seen in the cities. The proposition must be handled in a businesslike way and Mr. Midgley handles the matter precisely as a theatrical man would do. He writes:

"Since the advent of the two and three reel feature subjects, we have taken considerable interest in the three and six sheet posters and I am enclosing some kodak pictures showing the use we are making of same. Before this time, since we opened, about a year and a half ago, we used nothing in the lobby in the way of posters, our idea being that the majority of the one sheet posters gave a false idea or no idea of the show inside. When we started using the three sheets—'Martin Chuzzlewit' was the first—we had two nice looking galvanized stands with small lights across the top and part way down the sides made to fit around the corner of the lobby. They proved to be such an attraction and the posters being furnished by the A. B. C. Co. were of such a high quality that we decided to build two three and one six sheet stands on the side of our building, which forms one side of an alleyway, the illuminating them at night as shown in the photo. The alleyway is well illuminated also, and as our patrons exit that way, the posters are seen by them as well as by the people from the street.

"Our craze was not yet satisfied, so we had more stands made for the other side of the alley, and one for the space between the double doors on the interior of the theater. This latter stand just fits the space between the doors and is illuminated by an X-Ray reflector, and nine out of ten patrons making their exit through the front doors stop to look at the poster, which advertises the next two or three reel feature. Also one in the lobby between the doors as shown in the photo.

"We have not done yet with the stands we have, as we expect to erect a few in good locations around the business district. As you no doubt see, we consider that they have a good advertising value. There are no doubt other exhibitors who have considered posters in the same light that we have, but who do not know that the present high quality of three and six sheets are obtainable, and it is for this reason that we are citing our experience.

"The first half of this week we are running the Vitagraph feature, 'The Money Kings,' and the last half Selig's 'The Coming of Columbus,' and since you have asked for experience with the 'Columbus' picture in the World, we will give ours:

"We used 'The Coming of Columbus' when it was first released and made a miserable failure of it financially, but a great success artistically, as it was well liked by all who saw it; about 2,000 in a whole week. To explain this, when 'Dante's Inferno' was released we ran it in the Liberty for four days at 25 cents night and 15 cents and 10 cents matinee and cleared over $1,000 net, with an expense of $1,300, of which $140 was for advertising. This success was so encouraging that when 'Columbus' came along, we decided to get a larger house (ours seats 1,000) in order to handle the crowds. We rented one of the legitimate theaters and advertised big—that is, to the extent of $275 and at the same prices as 'Dante's Inferno.' We put the picture on, using special music to fit the picture and a ten-piece orchestra. The people didn't come; whether it was the nature of the picture, the admission price or the fact that the theater was not a motion picture theater that kept them away, we have never been able to figure out. The week following the owner of the State's rights for 'Homer's Odyssey' put it on at the same prices with no better success. We lost almost all we made on 'Dante,' but learned that people here will not pay more than a dime for pictures as yet. We have used all the features and have found that they make more business here at the Liberty, especially 'The Lady of the Lake.' The last half of this week will test the real drawing power of 'Columbus,' and we hope to see that it does as well as the preceding features, and better than it did at the Colonial.

"I am enclosing one of the heralds we distributed on the eventful occasion and wish to ask if you do not think it ought to entice someone to come to the show. We distributed 5,000 of these and 6,000 of the Hennegan heralds, under the doorsteps, too! (the boys were followed with an automobile). We ran six different slides in the Liberty a week before the date, used 10-8 sheets, 125-3 sheets, 600 one sheets, 100 half sheets and 200 window cards, and 85 newspapers. If the picture was not well advertised, it was no fault of ours. What is your opinion?"

A Photograph Exchange.

Mr. Midgley adds a plea for a photograph service along the lines of posters. He points out that photographs of scenes from the play form a most valuable advertisement for theatrical attractions and argues that it should pay someone to start an agency for the handling of photographs of scenes from photoplays. It is his suggestion that these be hired from exchanges, the same as posters may be, but this does not seem to be feasible, since but a small number of prints for each release would be required; too small to show any profit.

At the same time reproductions in genuine photography could be made at so small a cost as to be within reach even of the smaller houses. The Kalem and Selig companies have offered scenes from notable releases, but only for specials, and the manager wants photographs of all releases.

One trouble is that the manager, as a rule, does not know just when he is going to get any particular release in time to order photographs direct, and it is improbable that the exchange would handle them to any great extent, but managers who take a dated service could arrange for photographs of their special runs to be shipped as made and use these ahead. There is no reason why a 5 by 7 print could not be delivered to the manager for ten cents each and as a general thing we think that these photographs could be sold to the fans in large numbers. Certainly any manager could dispose of his old prints at half price and be thanked in the bargain.

Such prints are made by automatic machinery and the usual price in small lots is five dollars a hundred for 5 x 7. Every manufacturer makes from one to a dozen pictures of each release varying in size from 5 x 7 to 8 x 10 and most manufacturers work far enough ahead to supply these prints to the maker. For nearly a week we have had the entire Lublin list for August, the Essanay casts into September. It should be possible to get the prints far enough ahead and there should be a demand for at least a thousand prints of each subject. It might pay someone to get interested in the subject. We will be glad to supply full information to any person really interested in starting such a bureau.

Keep to Class.

In one important matter Mr. Midgley seems to have failed in handling the Columbus reels. Sarah Bernhardt once toured in a circus tent because of the alleged opposition of the theatrical trust, and the novelty of seeing the great French actress under canvas was sufficient to draw the crowds, but it is a well established theatrical fact that a house having a certain clientele cannot draw as many of another class. There are certain theaters in New York where one expects to find musical comedies and others where more serious plays are to be looked for. The problem play in a musical comedy house or vice versa might make a draw, but the chances are very much against it.

The Inferno in a picture theater drew down a profit of a thousand dollars. Columbus and the Odyssey in a theatrical house did not break even in spite of a larger capacity. The picture public went to a picture house to see the Inferno and so did the theatrical public, but the theatrical public stayed away from the dramatic house that ran pictures and so did the picture people. Theater going is more of a habit than most managers realize. Certain houses seem homelike and cozy because the patron is a regular attendant. The others are stranger houses, though these, too, have their supporters. Columbus in the Liberty should draw well, but Columbus in the Colonial was a stranger in a strange house. There were pictures at the Liberty and the picture regular went to the Liberty through the unrealized force of habit, end the regular Colonial patrons stayed away because they unconsciously resented the fact of the stranger show. That left 2,000 curious persons without affiliation to form the patronage of the dramatic house. We hope that Mr. Midley will let us hear how the second appearance went.

Heralds.

The home printed heralds were on coated paper, done in cut ink and well displayed in every way. We have not seen a better looking herald in a long time. The Hennegan heralds were also well done. Eleven thousand heralds should have brought more than 2,000 patrons, but the persons most likely to be tempted by heralds are not the ones most interested in Columbus. But the advertising was done with the same thoroughness in every department and the answer seems to be that the reel was in the wrong house. Make the special release work for your regular theater unless you want to spend some money getting the public used to the idea of switching to another theater with a big reel. We think the time will come when the really big feature will alternate with dramatic attractions, but it is not yet here and pioneering is expensive.

Billboards.

The most efficient advertising, where decent space can be afforded, is in the newspapers, and the Liberty runs big double-column advertisements. It gets into the home and gets people off their guard, but pictorial paper has a value of its own. It supplements the newspaper and reaches in a way that the newspaper advertisement cannot. The two in combination with what lobby display of photographic material is available is the ideal combination.

Until the system employed by the exchanges is altered to permit the houses to know well in advance what they are to have, the pictorial paper cannot be used to the greatest advantage. At present it is most useful in connection with the special releases, but here, even, the high price holds down the use in comparison with theatrical paper. The dramatic advance man or manager orders his paper for the season at one time. He gets a thousand eight sheets, so many thousand three sheets, so many thousand one sheets and so many halves. The paper is run off and the stones are cleaned, the paper being stored and shipped as wanted. There is but one transaction to cover the season and the paper costs from four to eight cents a sheet, most of it being six cents.

The difference between the cost of dramatic and motion picture paper represents the difference in the cost of handling and the smaller order. There is some stock paper, such as the Advertising & Specialty Company and the Photoplay Advertising Company have to offer, that can be ordered in ten thousand lots, but here the cost of handling raises the price and the sheet price will not fall until a more general advertising business is done and the weekly order of a house may cover several hundred sheets.

Spreading Out.

Mr. Midgley expects to go further from home than the front door or side alley presently, and others like him will follow suit, billing the town or section as is done with theatrical paper. It will be remembered that the Liberty does not make a daily change and does not have to advertise a fresh program daily. For daily work the half sheets or the hired three and six sheets will have to stand, but it would not be surprising to find in the reorganization of affairs that the larger house with a larger clientele can draw two and three days to the same program where the small houses must make a daily change to attract the same regulars to all programs. For the present the most effective use of paper will be for the coming special and we reproduce a couple of Mr. Midgley's snap shots to show how he is doing his work. The bill boards had to be taken at too sharp an angle to give perspective, but the arrangement may be seen and others may profit thereby. Where the paper is costly and not easily to be replaced, we think that a gutter to take the wall water off the paper will give the sheets a better chance to stand up under a heavy rain where all the drops that strike the wall cascade down over the surface and on to the paper. It is not often done, but where it is done it may save a stand in a heavy rain.

Educationals Popular.

And, by the way, Mr. Nichols, who introduced into England the system of fixed releases, offers this encouraging comment:

> On this side we note an increasing demand for short scenics about 300 feet in length. This leads me to believe that we are gradually getting the better class of the public interested in our picture shows, and to help the exhibitor I am now getting out a line of small pictorials for this class of work.

The pictorials are those referred to above. We wish that we might reproduce one here in color. The work is crude but effective, the use of mass and line giving almost a two-tone effect to straight and rather rapid work. We are sorry to note that they refer to foreign made subjects, since there is a small supply from this country, since the exchanges and managers are apt to regard the scenic as padding for a comedy subject.

Note that Mr. Nichols believes that the increased demand for scenic subjects is due to the interest of the better (more intelligent) class. We are quite in agreement with Mr. Nichols that the scenic and industrial stuff makes stronger appeal to the educated, and the educated man usually has more money to spend for amusements than the muscle worker. Why not make your own bid for this class of patronage? Get up a special day when you will run good scenic stuff. Most exchanges will be glad to let you have the scenics. Boom this feature day and see if you do not get a more prosperous appearing class of patronage on that day. They are not to be won wholly with scenics, but you can build a program, if you will take a little trouble to get in touch with your exchange, that will make a general hit.

And in this connection a word about the short comedies that usually go with the scenic. Drop them from an educational program. Run only the scenic, unless you have as its reel mate something like the Kalem Barefoot Boy with Easter in Jerusalem. Many of the Kalems are linked scenics and polite releases. Edison, too, combines a good feature with a scenic, but the tendency to pad with a rough comedy defeats the best use of the educational material.

Music.

Mr. Nichols has this to say about music. It is more for the manager than the exhibitor, but will interest all:

> You will note that in The Pictures (publishing the fictionized stories of the films) a column gives the musical selections which we recommend to the exhibitors. We have an expert here who reviews all our films as soon as the program is made up, and makes these selections. These are very much appreciated by exhibitors on this side and our expert is instructed, as far as possible, not to force the exhibitor to increase his musical library; that is, we try to make out recommendations so that they will be able to use the music they have on hand.

Until the manufacturers look after this important matter, why not build up a library and arrange with some good musician to collaborate with your home pianist in selecting the music from that library. In this way you can gain the advice of a well qualified person and make more of your musical program.

Thirty-Two Pages.

The Surprise Theater, South Bend, Ind., dropped the weekly program last spring, but now comes out with a thirty-two page program covering the entire month of August. The weekly edition will be resumed in September. Mr. Ezra Rhodes, the manager, writes that he has not seen as many comments in The Moving Picture World regarding the Independent films. Since the split it has not been easy for the reviewers to locate many releases, and if Mr. Rhodes likes exercise he can find no better fun than coming on to town and looking for first run Independent releases, bar the Savoy, which only recently put in Universal releases. Then, if his boots hold out, he might try to round up all the Licensed first runs for one day.

The booklet is readable and interesting and we think that with a distribution of 15,000, Mr. Rhodes could have made some money with outside advertising. He does not believe in outside advertising, but we do, where it is not carried to excess.

The Surprise puts up a mighty good little booklet, with clean type, good printing, coated paper and an orderly arrangement.

Here is something that is of real moment. He writes:

> I think that the film companies make a mistake in not giving casts more than they do. We can get them in quicker on the strength of the actors than on the title or the maker, but so often it is impossible to bring out this point in our advance advertising.

There still exists in some quarters a tendency to hold back names on account of the fear that by making players popular the manufacturer places himself at their mercy, but since the popularity of the business is founded on the popularity of the players this is a short sighted policy indeed. We think, though, that if Mr. Rhodes will correspond with the various makers whose brands he uses he can get this information.

Here's a New One.

The Rajah Theater has a new scheme. We do not know where the Rajah is located because C. H. Henderson, the manager, forgot to put this information on his bill, but he sends in a well printed sheet announcing the opening of the house and tells a slightly new scheme for drawing patrons. The offer runs:

> Each ticket of admission will be specially numbered, 50 of these numbers have been selected and marked with a red star, which will entitle the lucky purchaser to free admission during the month of August. This is a bona fide offer and absolutely no strings attached to it. You will know at once upon the purchase of your ticket if you are one of the lucky ones. Watch for the red star.
>
> This system of giving free tickets will be repeated the first of each month.

No details of the scheme are given, but we presume that different colors or a number system marks the difference in the monthly tickets. We think that it would be better to make this a weekly rather than a monthly feature of each month. It gives four periods of interest instead of one. We also think we would exclude Saturday and Sunday from the offer.

May we again remind you that once a bill becomes divorced from its envelope the name of the town cannot be ascertained unless you mark it on the sheet.

The PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

CONDUCTED BY EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

The Dinner.

SATURDAY afternoon, September 7th, is the date set for the dinner of the Photoplaywrights. Henderson's restaurant, at Coney Island, has been selected as the place, and dinner will be served promptly at half past five. Two of the persons expressing an opinion have suggested Staten Island as the proper place, but this involves a tiresome trip by ferry and trolley, and it was the consensus of opinion that Coney Island would be better at this time of year than some place in town more centrally located. Henderson's has been decided upon as the place because we know the kitchen there is as well kept as that of any first-class restaurant in town. A seven-course dinner will be served the guests.

Tickets, which will cost $1.50 each, must be purchased not later than August 30th. The price covers the flat cost of the dinner. All orders from the wine card will be extra. Remittances should be made either to Spectator, or this writer.

The original restrictions have been removed and all who are interested in the production of photoplay scripts as writers, editors or producers are cordially invited to be with us.

Please send your acceptance as early as possible.

The number of women playwrights is so few that it has been decided to make this dinner a stag affair. Later on, perhaps, another dinner will be given under different conditions.

Studying Style.

A correspondent wants to know where photoplay scripts may be obtained for the purpose of study and several others have suggested that this department print a series of produced scripts from the leading manufacturers for the same purpose. We do not know where the student may obtain scripts and we do not think it would pay to reproduce any here for the reason that the place to study photoplay is in the theaters and not in the script. The idea and the treatment are far more essential than the question whether the script be single or double spaced or whether it runs three pages or six, and theme and treatment are to be seen on the screen to better advantage than in the script. Go to the theater and study the pictures there. See not only what is done, but why it is done that way. See if you cannot think out some better and more effective way, something that will get the same idea over in fewer feet or some bit of business or some situation that will express the idea more clearly. If you think you can, go home and write down that play. Use no more space than is necessary to indicate the action, but write in the action scene by scene just as you remember it. If you've got it all down scene by scene, with the leaders and inserts, you have a script to study that is far more valuable than a studio script.

Now go over it, scene by scene. Make certain that you have all the essential action down. If you have, take it up scene by scene and see where you can make it better. Perhaps the addition of a couple of scenes will make the points more clearly understood. Put them in, but pull out enough of the other action to allow for their insertion, for the play you saw probably came close to the 1,000-foot limit.

That's the sort of study that will bring some result, but the more you ponder over a studio script the less you will understand. All you can get from the script is the exact manner in which some company words its stories. That doesn't matter. What you need to learn is to take an idea and put it down on paper so clearly that someone else can take the result and make pretty much the same photoplay you had in mind.

Just the other day a well meaning director loaned an acquaintance a script he had worked from. He overlooked the fact that it was one of his own plays and that the script was scarcely more than a memorandum of scenes, with the result that the recipient tried for the same brevity and failed.

There is just one photoplay form that is essential. Convey your idea of the actions and the scenes with sufficient clearness to let the editor and the director grasp your thoughts. If you can get it in proper shape so much the better, but by the time you've learned to get the idea over, you will find that the proper form has almost suggested itself.

Warren Has Returned.

Giles R. Warren has returned from Asbury Park where he has been recuperating from the hustle of getting the Victor company photoplay room in running order in record time and he is back at his desk in the aforesaid room ready to buy some scripts and send the others back with such courtesy that you are glad they did come back because they bore a message of good cheer. We do not know any editor who has made more friends through his courtesy than Mr. Warren.

He pays unconscious tribute to the following of this department when he writes that the grouping the Victor with the other members of the Universal company cut down the supply of scripts alarmingly. Mr. Warren reads all Victor scripts and, as we said last week, these should go direct to him at 575 Eleventh Avenue, and not to 1 Union Square. Remember that all scripts should fit Miss Lawrence's personality, since she stars in every Victor release. If you have any of that kind send them along. Meantime here is a welcome home to Mr. Warren and an invitation to the photoplay dinner.

Seasonable Stories.

Someone wants to know the best time to send out Christmas stories. There is no best time for Christmas stories, but if they are sent out they should be started in September or October. It doesn't pay to waste time over season stories. Releases are made to run six months and the Christmas stories go stale so soon that they are not particularly welcome. Many studios make a special release for Christmas, Decoration Day, Thanksgiving and the Fourth of July, but the list is so small that it does not pay to take a chance. With but three or four Christmas stories offered by twenty-five makers you can figure out the percentage, and possibly remake your story into a general one. Bannister Merwin's The Sunset Gun, the Edison Decoration Day release, is as much of a hit now as it was in May, but it seldom happens that the special story is so generally useful.

But start in now to get up some stories that will fit southern scenery and hold them until the cold weather comes. Late in October send them out to catch the companies that are sending sections south to escape static electricity, dark days and other troubles. Then write some more that can be made all in interiors to catch the companies that are not sending south and so must work almost entirely in the studio.

A Record.

In the Stockton list the Biograph takes top notch with 68 scenes in The Sands of Dee, but they are not quicksands alongside the same company's Man's Lust for Gold. This contains 107 scenes, twelve leaders, the title and the censorship tag all on the thousand feet of film. There is one scene that runs four-fifths of one second according to three trials of a stop watch. We do not mention this as a pattern but as a horrible, a most horrible example.

Stick to your twenty or thirty scenes in writing your play and when some producers either get fired or restored to sanity you'll be in line again. Meantime let them take your proper script and fuss it up to suit themselves. About the time they speed up to 150 scenes in seventeen minutes and forty-five seconds something will drop with a crash that will wake the sleepers up.

Getting in Bad.

Here is part of an editorial from The Editor, the magazine that is the fiction writer's bible, the rest making reference to a song publishing stunt:

> A few months ago there was the advertisement which offered large prizes for scenarios, which had to be written in accordance with directions contained in a certain book on scenario writing, price one or two dollars. ($1.50 Ed.) These prizes have not been awarded and scenarios sent to this concern are not returned to their owners; the man who inserted the advertisement will not answer inquiries from those whose work he has, and the publisher of the magazine in which the advertisement was featured will not give attention to complaints. What is to be done? Not so very much! Complain to the postmaster at the town of mailing, and have a postoffice inspector discover what has become of the property entrusted to the mails; refuse to buy or subscribe to magazines which print advertisements which result to the disadvantage of those who respond to them.

A recent inquiry from one of our correspondents was answered to the effect that some thirty scripts were being held for decision. As the contest was inaugurated in September, it would seem that it is about time some action was had. The editor is in error, however, in saying that it was required in the advertisement that the company's instruction book must be followed. This did not appear until the scripts were received and a reply sent offering book and course, with a gradual revision downward.

Another correspondent demanded and received his script back with a statement that he probably would have won a prize had he waited, which, coming after several months, was a rather diverting statement.

And in this connection it is interesting to note that the photoplay author refused the advertisement of another concern that advertises an alleged "institute building" that is in purely a residential street and not a very pretentious one at that. The principal is the manager of a couple of repertoire shows that tour the Ohio towns when the manager has the money to keep them moving, and he never sold a photoplay in his life, the work being done by an employee.

Once More the Hook.

Two correspondents have written that they have received their scripts back from the Imp Company with markings on the back. One writes:

> Yesterday a script was returned to me from Los Angeles, and on the back of it was penciled: "Property of the Imp Film Co. Hold pending outcome of the Universal-Bison litigation." What does that mean? Is it a mere studio memorandum, do the Imp claim a right to it until they finally pass on it, and wish me to withhold it from the market pending a litigation which may take years to settle, or is it a request for me to resubmit it at a time when the present trouble is patched up?

The probabilities are that the scripts were marked at the time of the famous raid. It was done to make certain that the scripts for which the Imp Company was responsible would be retained. The original plan was to put Western production in charge of Bison, but when the New York Motion Picture Company withdrew from the Universal there were many happenings. The markings should be erased and forgotten, since they applied only to the Los Angeles situation, with which the photoplaywright has nothing to do.

Newspaper Items.

Do you use newspaper clippings?

If you do, do you use the whole idea?

Almost every big happening is followed by a rush of photoplays to the studio. If an ocean steamer goes down a thousand gallant ships are scuttled on paper. If there is a sensational crime there are scores of repetitions in spite of the fact that the Board of Censorship will not pass stories based on crime. It is probable that right now there are in the mails or in editorial desks dozens of stories based on the gambling scandal in New York. Probably not a single one will get on the screen, but the luring advertisements of the photoplay schools have created a class of writers with no ideas of their own and they fall back on fiction and newspaper clips.

There is not a fiction writer who does not use newspaper clips for inspiration, but the trained man does not rewrite the newspaper clipping into a story and send it out, and he seldom even takes the three or four column story for his inspiration. He has learned to look in the corners for the four or five line filler that may give far greater inspiration. The sporting page, for instance, tells of a minor league pitcher who is sent back from the big league because he did not make good. It's only four lines and the heading tucked between the cartoon and an advertisement, but if the pitcher went back to the bushes, discredited, found the girl he loved would have nothing to do with him, was jeered at by his fellows and the crowd in the stand only to pitch the game of his life in the final series, win the championship, the girl, the homage of the home town and another chance with the big league, a better story could be made of it than the sordid recital of gambling, graft and murder that takes up four pages in the front of the same issue.

Then, again, perhaps the pitcher felt all cut up because he was sent back to the bushes. He is ashamed to go back to face the jeers of the old hero worshippers. He stays over in New York, plays the stock market with the last salary paid him, wins, has sense enough to quit the stock game and sets up in business for himself, winning the girl and going back to the home town in purple and fine linen to sit in the grand stand and criticise the boys he used to play with. A dozen other stories could be worked from the same start and that's what press clips are for. They are not first aid to the feeble minded. They are merely sign posts that point the way to the initiated.

Don't copy a story or a newspaper item, but if it gives you a hint take it and say thank you. It's one thing to steal an idea and quite another to be helped to an idea.

For the Kiddies.

Take notice that several companies have followed the Lubin lead in putting on juvenile plays, though none of them yet have a full company organized. We think that some simple plays that do not work in the terribly tiresome "it was a drama" idea might find a market now if they offer a novel plot that is sufficiently simple to be handled by the kiddies. There must be no strong emotional acting, and no complicated story that is beyond the mental grasp of the child spectator. The Kalem Company was a couple of years ahead of the times with their idea for a special weekly release for children, but the idea is coming fast now. Among the companies with clever children are Lubin, Kalem, Thanhouser, Edison and Reliance. Thanhouser is not in the market, but the others might be interested in the order mentioned.

Don't rework old fairy stories, because the companies can do these better. Work for original themes or you'll waste your time.

The Acid Test.

Do you put your stories to the acid test?

If you don't the editor is likely to do it for you; and, since it must be done, do it yourself.

The story that would not be a story were the logical development used, is not a story anyhow, no matter if you have twenty or thirty scenes that move from a start to a finish.

You might make a good story of a poor man who stole a loaf of bread and a bottle of milk from some doorstep because he was starving, but the tale would lose its interest if you should previously show that the man had a good home and a bountiful breakfast waiting him. Of course if he ate the breakfast there would be no story, but is it a story if it is shown that the breakfast is there and waiting? We've seen three stories in the last week that were no more logical than this, and yet each author had faith in his idea because he had not put acid on the plot. He wrote some incident and did not stop to think that if his characters had done the most natural things there would have been no reason for the story.

There is a sharp distinction between the story where the whole chain of events follows a single wrong action, and the story where the facts are distorted to make a yarn. A woman may deny a fact on the spur of the moment and so precipitate a chain of events that is interesting and logical though based on an illogical action; but if you showed that woman, possessed of a bank account, pledging her rings to a pawnbroker, you could not get very much interested in what followed. If she pawns her jewels to hide her gambling debts from her husband, it's a story; but if she just pawns her jewels so the villain can take one of the rings and make a lying boast of her friendship, that's another matter and the audience is so busy wondering why she pledged her rings that they forget to be sorry for her when the trouble comes.

Put the acid test in the shape of question marks to all you write. You may not write as much, but your percentage of sales is likely to increase.

Preparation.

Not many photoplaywrights give the proper care to what is sometimes called "preparation for the event." Lots of plays go out in which, in one of the last scenes, some new character is introduced to clear up the situation and a long leader or a couple of extraneous scenes are used to tell who the newcomer is at a time when the story should be hustling along to the climax like an express three hours behind its running time.

Suppose that this added character is the real thief of the jewels the hero is supposed to have stolen. Run him in in some early scene in some incident that is related to the play and that shows his real character.

We saw a script the other day in which a cash box figured. In an early scene the box was knocked off the desk. At the moment the time spent in picking up the box and apologizing for the clumsiness seemed wasted, but later on when the box turned up again there was no need to identify it. It was instantly recognized.

Another script about the same time offered a bottle for identification and the instructions were that the bottle was to be of a peculiar shape and held until the audience had identified it. That was all there was to the scene. Had it been run that way the hero would have held up the bottle saying in effect: "See this bottle? This bottle has a lot to do with the plot. Remember it. I'm showing it to you now because later on you must remember it."

In one case a seemingly irrelevant bit of by-play marked the box. It just happened that the hero knocked it off the desk. You forgot the box until you saw it again. In the other the bottle was made so prominent that the audience would forget the rest of the story and sit waiting for the bottle to turn up again, knowing that the real plot somehow hinged on the bottle.

If you are going to have a man die of heart disease in one of the late scenes, do not wait until then to show that his heart is weak. Have an earlier scene in which he has an attack. Show it all the way through and then, when the climax comes, and he has a fatal attack, so that his young wife can marry the handsome hero after all her troubles, the audience is quite prepared to see the old gentleman gasp and die, but don't just write in a scene that shows he has heart disease. Have it something that helps the story. Perhaps he sees the hero trying to make love to his wife. He gasps and staggers away and you go back to the scene where the young wife points to her wedding ring and reminds the ardent lover that she is another's. The plain heart failure is the bottle. The audience knows right away that before the film runs through the way will be cleared, but if there is a reason for the heart attack; if it seems only a casual touch to a strong scene, it's the box way. The audience is prepared for the death, but it has not been waiting for the past ten minutes to see it come.

Show It to Them.

Lots of things must be shown in leader because they cannot be clearly told in action, but remember that action fixes a fact and shows some action to illustrate the leader that it may be set in the mind of the spectator. You write that "John is an hour late for supper" to explain the row that starts the story. That is well enough, but when John comes in and Mrs. John starts in to lecture him, have her point to the clock at the start of the argument and the leader will strike with three times the force.

One Contented Man.

Fred Rupert is a contented man. He not only offers a good idea, but he tells that he is willing to wait for a decision and is content with the price paid. Read the letter. You may not agree with him, but it will do you good.

> Whenever I happen to get a good idea for getting over a point and want to remember it I sit down and write it out in proper form and put it away on file and list it in my file index as a comedy or dramatic scene, using so many men and women, and when I am writing a plot and need a certain kind of a scene I merely turn to my index and look it through and see if I have anything of that kind on hand and rewrite it to fit the occasion, tearing up the original so that there is no chance of repeating the scene again. I have never had any kind of trouble with any company and never had a manuscript marked but once, and that was done by the Champion Company.
>
> I sent a script to the Solax Company in January and it was returned on March 15 as unavailable. I rewrote it and sent it back to them on May 29 and up to to-day have not heard from it, but I had Imp hold one for five months at one time before accepting it and I am in no hurry about their accepting or rejecting as the case may be, and don't intend to bother them about it as they know they have it as well as I do.
>
> Lots of writers complain about the price that the companies pay for their scripts and claim that the price is not enough, but I never had any thought in that direction. Take the Solax release of June 26, Love's Railroad; I only received $10 for that, but it was all that it was worth in the form that it was submitted to them, and I thought that it was good money for the idea, as that is all that they bought. This in the hope that it will help some other amateur in the business.

Suiting the Editor.

Did you ever try to study the editor and the style of production he represents? Get in with a crowd of men who write short stories and they can tell you a lot about magazine and newspaper editors. They can tell you that this man likes a story that starts a certain way, that this other wants something entirely different. They have all the peculiarities mentally catalogued. We had a novelette once that was full of action, but the action didn't come until the second chapter and the editor we took it to never got that far. We took it home and killed two men and broke the head of a third in the first paragraph, writing a new first chapter to fit, and the thing went through in ten days. We found out what he wanted.

Photoplay editors are the same way, consciously or not. They have certain likes and dislikes. Why not study them? When you see a photoplay go home and write down what you think sold it, and you'll find that in the course of time you can place your stories more quickly by sending first to the most likely studio.

Take the Vitagraph for an example. They want for Bunny stories where he can be clothed in outlandish raiment and smile at the audience, the story carrying the comedy rather than the player. If you write a story like that, try it on the Vitagraph. Rex wants unusual stories. Don't send them the commonplace.

Try your idea on the man who seems to like ideas like that and see how much more quickly you can sell. We do not believe in reworking a story every time it goes to a new editor, but now and then some change may let it fall into a certain class where the original does not.

Just received from the press—"TECHNIQUE OF THE PHOTOPLAY." Fifty pages of valuable instruction and suggestions for both experts and beginners. On sale at One Dollar per Copy by MOVING PICTURE WORLD. Send order at once, as supply is limited.

Projection Department

Edited by F. H. RICHARDSON.

FOR the first time in two years and a half the editor of this department, whose photograph you see above, is taking a vacation, visiting his father's childhood home in Vermont. Inasmuch as this does not happen very often, I trust those whose letters have not been answered will excuse the delay. The photograph is printed in response to many requests from friends in various parts of the country.

Last week I received my working card in the poet's union, and while I am up in the hills where nobody can shy a brick at me, I perpetrate the following:

Ten Cents Worth of Joy.

F. H. Richardson.

"'Tis only ten cents," the barker exclaimed,
"Ten cents for an hour of joy,
Appealing to women and girlies alike,
As well as to man and to boy,
If laughter you like, then inside you should hike,
For a 'Bunny' we have, sir, to-day;
And Bunny is funny; step up, my dear sir,
It's only ten cents you've to pay.

"Or if you prefer to weep, my dear sir,
We'll fill you with sorrow and grief,
As the heroine dear, of her life makes a smear
That's almost past human belief.
Or perhaps you had rather, in sunshiny weather,
Glide 'round through ethereal blue
In an aeroplane—no, I'm not insane,
We'll run one especial for you.

"Or if it should be that you'd rather see
The slopes of the Andes or Alps;
Or wander out West, where Poor Lo's at his best,
Though he no longer hankers for scalps;
Or see Spaniard prance in whirligig dance,
All in the same hour and day;
You can do each and all, right here in this hall,
And only ten cents you've to pay."

So inside I went, though it took my last cent;
Yes, squandered my very last dime—
That isn't quite true, I'll whisper to you,
But it fits pretty well in this rhyme.
Well, sir, I'll be darned, and likewise consarned,
If that chap didn't more than make good,
And that Im not a-lying in what I'm a-saying,
I'd like it to be understood.

For there on the screen, were, plain to be seen,
A marv'lous assortment of sights;
All over the world I was hustled and whirled
Till they finally turned on the lights
And the show was all done—great scott it was fun
A-jumping all over the sphere,
Till I was not certain, as I gazed at the curtain,
Whether I was off yonder or here.

So I says to the feller—the young ticket seller,
"I s'pose you will think I am green,
But where in creation, is my speculation,
Do you keep all the truck that I've seen?"
The ticket man laughed, and a bystander chaffed,
Remarkin': "Its kept in the loft,"
But that roused my ire, for he was a liar
And must a thought me pretty soft.

But th' ticket chap smiled, when he saw I was riled,
And said: "Come, I'll show you the thing,"
So we went way up high, and came, bye and bye,
Where a dingus went zippety bing.
There were flashes of light, to left and to right,
And a queer little iron machine,
That was clickin' and whirrin' an' growlin' an' purrin'—
The durndest sight ever was seen!

And th' feller explained that out of it rained
All th' truck I'd observed down below;
That it all was inside—do you reckon he lied,
For I don't just see where it would stow?
Hump! Who would a thunk it that all of that junk
Could be bottled up in a machine,
And spewed out with cogs, an' other such togs—
Who'd believe it if he hadn't seen?

Click, click, said th' thing, and right there, by jing,
On th' screen was an ocean with ships!
G-r-r-r, put-t-t, zam, and out it would slam
Some maidens with ripe, ruby lips.
Next it would stutter, and with quite a sputter,
Spew out a whole forest or two,
With beasts by the score—tigers, lions galore,
Enough to start up a big zoo.

Well, well, sir, by golly, that sure was a jolly
Contraption of iron and wheels;
It beats all we've done, in science and fun,
Since the first baby issued its squeals;
And I'm going again, and again, and again,
To the place where a dime you've to pay,
To travel all over, from Frisco to Dover,
And stop where you will on the way.

GLASS WINDOWS.—St. Louis, Mo., writes: "Is it practical to place glass in the observation and lens ports of the operating room? If so, what are its advantages and disadvantages?"

It would be quite practicable to set glass in the observation and lens ports, provided the panes in the lens ports be set absolutely at right angles to the lens; otherwise the rays of light would be bent as they pass through, and, unless the glass be optically perfect, the result would probably be bad on the screen. It is also possible that, unless a very good grade of glass be used, there would be some slight distortion, even though the glass be at right angles to the lens. But a more serious difficulty is encountered as to the observation port, since the reflection from its polished surface would make it very hard for the operator to see the picture plainly. I do not see any particular reason, however, for putting glass in these openings. Modern projection machinery runs very quietly and about the only noise encountered in objectionable degree is where a high amperage of A.C. is used. I doubt, however, if glass would do much good in such cases. If one has a projection machine of the steam roller type, which makes noise enough to disturb an audience, it would be advisable to get rid of it immediately and get a better running mechanism. To sum up: I cannot see any particular advantage in placing glass in the observation and lens ports. On the other hand, I can see possible serious objections thereto.

THOUSAND VOLT CURRENT.—Road man writes from Hannibal, Mo., as follows: "I am on the road with a very successful attraction. We have made a booking about a month from now at a point in the country. The show is to be in the open air, and for farmers. The current must be taken from lines carrying 1,000 volts. The company says we can use all the current we want to, but they will not put in a transformer. Can you suggest any method by which we can handle thousand volt current?"

It is, of course, quite possible to handle almost any voltage by using the proper amount of resistance, but allow me to warn you that it would be a highly dangerous proceeding. Unless you are an electrician and accustomed to handling high tension wires I would advise you not to tackle it. However, it is possible to do it in this way: Set a ladder against a pole; not a flimsy affair, but a good stout ladder, for you do not want any accidents or slips when handling 1,000 volt wires. Attach to the pole a 500 volt single throw, double pole knife switch, so installed that the bars fall downward in opening. Now, using heavily insulated rubber covered wire, make connections between the two 1,000 volt wires and the upper poles of the switch, the switch being, of course, open. Next having located your machine, arrange suitable substantial supports for the wires so that they will not come near the ground. Meanwhile write to the Driver-Harris Wire Co., Harrison, N. J. Tell them the voltage and the number of amperes you wish to use, and have them supply you with the correct length and size of resistance wire to handle the proposition. Now set two stout posts in the ground, being sure they are of dry timber, and near their top, spaced far enough apart to be sure the wires will not touch each other, or come within less than one foot of each other, arrange insulating knobs, one under the other. Set the posts far enough apart so that you will only have to string the wire two or three times from one post to the other. This will form your rheostat. You can now make your connections to the lamp, and switch on the pole in the usual way, connecting to either end of the resistance wire, which takes the place of a rheostat, which it, in fact, really is, and when all is ready, close the pole switch and try your light.

CAUTION:—Set your machine on a platform built of dry timber and place glass or china saucers under its legs. Wear rubber boots all the time you are handling that 1,000 volt proposition.

Understand I do not advise you to attempt this at all. You will use up an enormous amount of energy from the lines, and the whole thing is by no means safe though a competent, careful man might get away with it. I do not believe a water rheostat could be used on voltage that high. Do not allow the pole switch to be closed except when you are actually using current, and do not attempt to open the pole switch until you have broken the arc by separating the carbons sufficiently to do so, (breaking it with a piece of glass if necessary), also do not attempt to use an ordinary operating room switch. You will, of course, install fuses at some point in your line. In order to handle 1,000 volts at all you must have a lamp with very good insulation—even then there is a very large possibility of trouble at the lamp.

Edison Home Projector.

Thomas A. Edison, Incorporated, Orange, N. J., has just placed on the market a very remarkable projector, designed primarily for use in the home, and while this machine is of no particular interest to the theater man, except for the possible effect it may have on his business, still it is of sufficient interest to justify a description in this department. I may say that up to a four or five foot picture the machine projects perfectly.

The scheme includes a film service. The customer buys one, or any other number of films in the first instance; these films being the regular standard Edison films, reduced so that one reel (7, Fig. 3) which is only about three inches in diameter and one inch in width, contains the equivalent of 1,000 feet of standard film. This is made possible by the fact that the pictures are reduced to about 1/4 of an inch in width, there being three rows of them, side by side, on the film, with two rows of sprocket holes, one row between each line of pictures as shown in Fig. 5, which is to exact size. The film comes in a tin box (3, Fig. 3) which is covered by lid 4, the knerled nut, of which is attached to the lid and screws onto stem 8. This fulfills the requirements of the postal department, so that the film can be mailed simply by affixing stamps to the package. The film is, of course, all non-inflammable stock. The customer having bought as many reels of film as he wishes to use at one time, may then exchange them merely by mailing the films to the nearest exchange and paying a nominal fee for the use of each new film.

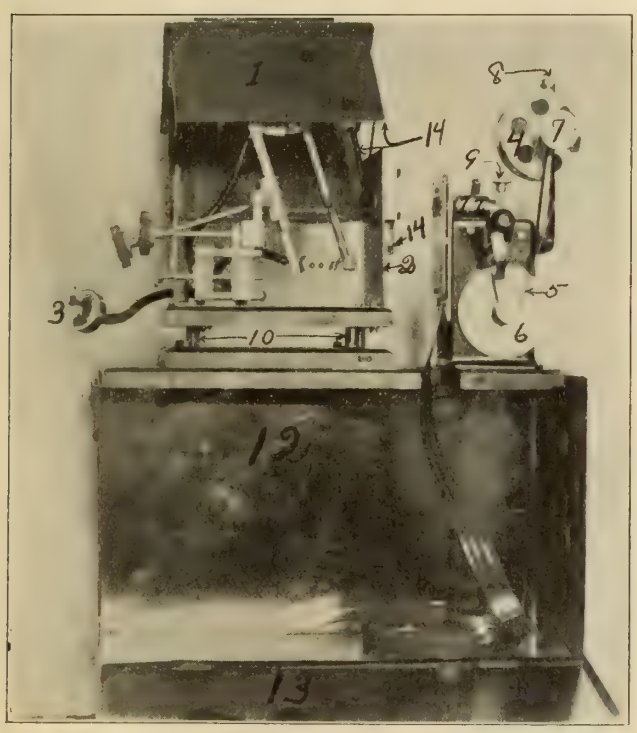

FIG. 1.

When the film is removed from shipping can, 3, Fig. 3, by unscrewing the knerled nut on lid 4, it will be found to be wound on wooden spool 9, Fig. 3. This spool fits on reel 1, Fig. 3, side 2 of which unscrews from spindle A. But first, however, reel 1, Fig. 3, is screwed on the reel hanger 7, Fig. 1. Now wooden hub 9, Fig. 3, is so made that it can only be placed on the spindle of reel, a certain way, so that the emulsion will always be towards the light, and the titles will read properly. The film cannot be put on the machine in any other way. The film passes up from the reel over tension roller 8, Fig. 1, which is held by a spring, and will bend clear down as far as the location of Fig. 9.

This spring tension roller takes the place of an upper loop and it works perfectly. The lenses of the machine, both projection and stereopticon, are shown at 5, in Fig. 3, and the stereopticon slide is shown at 6, each slide containing ten perfect views. The slide is placed in the machine and one line of pictures is projected. It is then pulled out, turned the other side up, which brings the other line of pictures in position for projection.

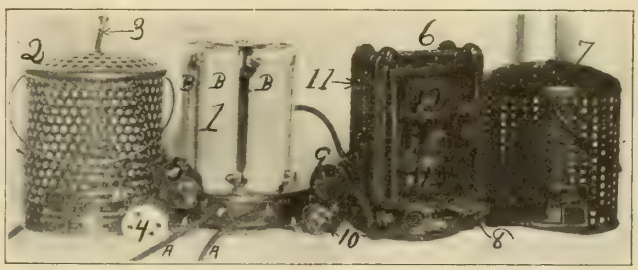

FIG. 2.

Lamphouse top (1, Fig. 1) lifts off, thus exposing the whole lamp. Grooves 14 fit on standard 2, thus holding the lamphouse top in position. The lamp is a miniature reproduction of a standard projection lamp. The electrical connection is made by attaching an ordinary socket, shown at Nos. 5 and 10, Fig. 2, to an ordinary light socket, which has, however, presumably been provided with fuses to suit. The other end (4 and 9, Fig. 2) attaches to 3, Fig. 1. The operating switch is shown at 8, Fig. 2, in the transformer, and is in a similar location in rheostat 1, Fig. 2, but is on the opposite side—hence not shown.

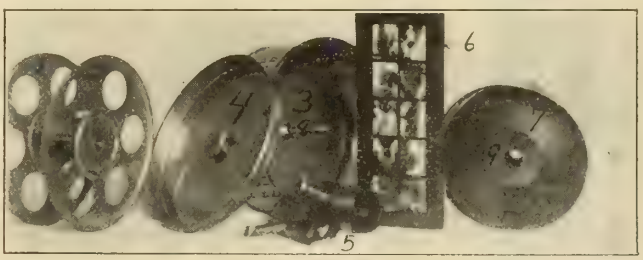

FIG. 3.

The condensing lenses are a little more than 2 inches in diameter, and the pair in the outfit I have at hand are 2 3/8 inch focus—that is to say, each lens is 2 3/8 inch focus. The lamphouse legs (10, Fig. 1) are so arranged that they allow the lamphouse to move sidewise, so as to swing over to the stereo lens. The transformer (6, Fig. 2) is a perfect miniature reproduction of an operating-room transformer (I have removed its cover so that you may see its interior construction.) It has a base for convenience in handling. 8 is the operating switch, which is manipulated by pulling it in or out, thus shutting off or starting the current. At 11 we see a regular laminated core, while 12 and 13 are the primary and secondary coils. 10 is the lamp socket contact, and 9 the contact which fits 3 in Fig. 1.

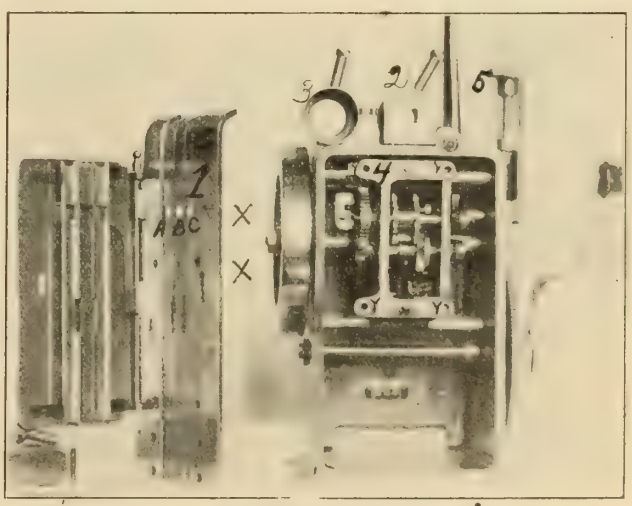

FIG. 4.

At 1, Fig. 2, the rheostat is shown, consisting of five coils, the resistance being covered with some kind of insulating material. The cover is shown at 2, and is attached to the rheostat by screw 3. I have removed it in order to show the construction. 5 is the lamp socket contact and 4 is the contact fitting on 3, Fig. 1. A-A are the wires leading into and away from the rheostat. It, like the transformer, has a bail, for convenience in handling. The outfit shown is a 110 volt rheostat and a 110 volt transformer. The rheostat has a capacity of five amperes, and the transformer has a capacity of ten amperes.

FIG. 5.

In Fig. 4 we have a view of the mechanism, with the aperture plate, to which is attached the gate, removed, showing the interior of the mechanism. 1 is the aperture plate, 2 is the projection lens, and 3 the stereopticon lens, 4 is the carriage and 5 is the shifting wheel, by means of which carriage 4 is shifted sidewise to project through apertures A, B or C, according to which row of images is being run. The movement is a modification of the star and geneva, but the intermittent sprocket is connected to the star by means of two gears x-x. There is no revolving shutter, but there is a very effective fire shutter. The gate construction is very well shown in Fig. 4. It is attached to the aperture plate which, in turn attaches to the mechanism by four screws, fitting into holes y-y-y-y, Fig. 4. The general operation is as follows: The mechanism itself comes packed in metal box 12, the lid of which falls back behind the machine (not shown in the illustration), and the front (13), of which is hinged and drops down for convenience in getting the machine out. It is then raised up; and is attached to the ends by means of hooks, thus forming a perfect film tank. I have left side 13 down in order to show you how the thing works. The film is threaded through the machine, as shown. Crank wheel 6 is belted to reel hanger shaft 7, by means of wire belt 5, so that the reel is revolved by the belt. The machine is run forward to project one of the rows of pictures, let us say, through aperture A, Fig. 4. Then by turning knerled knob 5, Fig. 4, carriage 4, Fig. 4, is shifted over to aperture B, and the machine is run backwards, thus projecting the second or center line of pictures. When this row of pictures has been finished, knob 5 is again turned, switching the carriage over to aperture C, Fig. 4, and the machine is again run forward, thus projecting the third row of pictures. These three rows of pictures are the equivalent of the ordinary Edison Standard reel of pictures shown in theaters. The Edison reels are only released for the home projector after they have served their purpose in the regular thaters.

Taken altogether the projector is a truly remarkable mechanism. It is as nearly automatic in its operation as it is possible to make such a thing, and is practically fool proof. It can be handled by any boy or girl of ordinary intelligence and is unquestionably destined to provide a mentally healthful and interesting form of amusement for the home, as well as to assist in the education of the children.

Mr. Edison and his colleagues should be congratulated on the perfection and production of a machine so perfectly adapted to the purpose for which it is designed. The films are divided into eight classes and sell for $2.50 to $20.00 each, according to class. The exchange fee is from 30 cents to $1.00 per film. Mr. J. H. Hallberg is New York agent for the projector.

COMMUTATORS.—Quincy, Ill., writes: "There is a dispute about the commutator. A claims the office of the commutator to be to convey the current from the revolving armature to the stationary wires, through the brushes, whereas B claims the office of the commutator is to convert alternating current into direct current. Which is correct?"

You are both partly wrong and partly right, Quincy. One office of the commutator, either of the ring or bar type, is to form effective contact between the revolving armature and the stationary circuit wires, through the brushes, as claimed by A. This is always true of the dynamo commutator, regardless of what else it may do. B, is correct to the extent that the direct current dynamo armature changes the current from A.C. to D.C. It is a fact, known to very few but electricians, that all current, whether A.C. or D.C., is generated as A.C. and by means of a bar commutator, such as is found on the D.C. dynamo, it is rectified and changed into D.C.

BELL AND ENUNCIATOR WIRING DIAGRAMS.—There have, from time to time, been an enormous number of requests for information concerning bell and enunciator wiring; fire alarm bell that can be operated from any part of the house, etc., etc. I take this opportunity to set forth brief information concerning these matters.

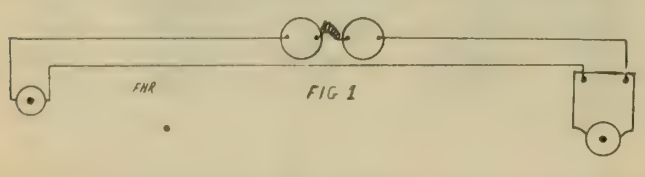

FIG 1

In Fig. 1, we see an ordinary simple, one-bell, one-button installation. The button, battery and bell may be located anywhere in the house to suit convenience. One wire runs from one bell contact to one battery contact, and from the other battery contact to one side of the push button. The other wire runs directly from the other bell binding post to the opposite side of the push button, as shown. Ordinarily it is the custom to use two batteries connected in series, as shown, where it is a one-bell circuit. This raises the voltage of the line, and causes the bell to ring much louder.

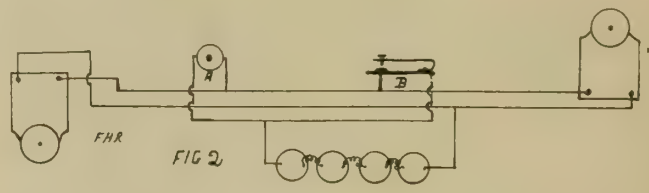

FIG 2

In Fig. 2, we see two fire bells, one located, let us suppose, in the manager's office, and the other on the stage, or at any other suitable point. We also see an ordinary push button at A, and a form of contact more suitable to such work at B, either of which will ring both bells. As many of these may be attached as desired, locating them at any point in the house. Attach one side of the button to upper wire and the other side to the battery wire, as shown. In the illustration we see four batteries connected in series. This being a fire alarm system, it is desired that the bell or buzzers ring very loudly, hence several batteries are connected in series. Employees should be made to understand that it will be an instant dismissal to ring these bells, except in case of actual necessity. The system can be arranged for any number of bells, from one to a dozen, and there can be as many push buttons as desired.

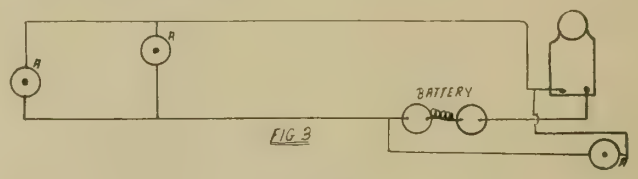

FIG 3

Fig. 3 illustrates the method of connecting a bell so that it may be rung by more than one button. By this plan, as many buttons may be installed as desired, any one of which will ring the bell, provided the wire from push-button to battery wire be not connected between the battery and the bell. A-A-A are push-buttons.

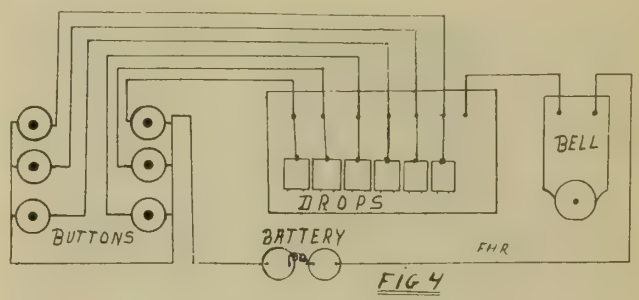

FIG 4

In Fig. 4, we see the method of wiring an ordinary annunciator. The plan is too plain to require explanation. The buttons may, of course, be located anywhere in the building, and are ordinarily widely separated. The three wire bell system will be found described and illustrated on page 156 of the Handbook.

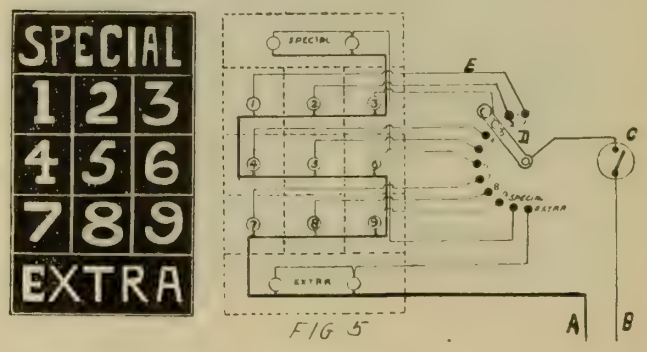

FIG 5

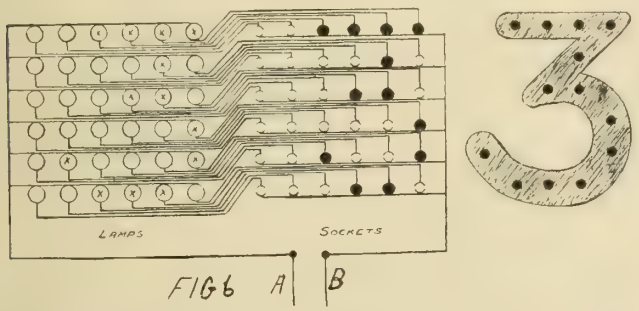
There has been a considerable demand for information as to the wiring of special announcement programme boards and I reproduce herewith a cut from the Bioscope, an excellent English publication, which is the best I have seen to date. I think the action will be plain when you trace the contacts in Fig. 5 through. I have changed the sketch to the extent of making one wire heavier than the other, in order to enable you to more readily trace out the electrical action.

Wire A, we may call the permanent connection. As you will observe, it connects directly to one side of all the lamps. Wire B connects through switch C and movable arm D, to the various contacts 1, 2, 3, 4, etc. Now suppose we place arm D on contact 1. You will observe that the current will flow through wire E, through lamp 1, and thence back on through the other wire, and that no other lamp will be affected. If we move the arm to contact 6, then only lamp 6 will be lighted. Such a contact is simple, entirely practical, and as I have said, is the best plan I have seen. Of course, it is quite possible to substitute single pole, single throw knife switches for contacts 1, 2, 3, 4, etc., connecting wire B to one side of all these switches. The switches or the contacts should be, of course, located at the most convenient point, either on the stage, by the side of the musician or in the operating room. The transparency can be so made that only the figure or name actually illuminated will be visible. This can be done by covering the whole front of the board with ground glass, on which are the figures, or names blocked out in black, as shown in the illustration, each lamp, however, being contained in a light tight compartment of its own. Different colors may be obtained, if desired, by covering the various characters with light shades of gelatine or using colored globes.

In practice, I would by all means, advise a double pole single throw switch at AB, rather than the single pole knife switch at C. The same article contains a description and an illustration of another excellent method of outlining figures, which, with the apologies to the Bioscope, I herewith reproduce, with a few additions to make it plainer.



In Fig. 6, a battery of 36 lamps is arranged in the form of a square, with 6 lamps either way. One wire (wire A, in the sketch) is connected directly to one side of each lamp. A board is now made, containing 36 sockets, arranged in a square, with 6 sockets each way, the same as are the lamps. This board may be placed in any convenient location, either near the lamps or removed at a distance from them, as may be most convenient; but in any event, the other side of each one of the lamp sockets must be connected to one side of each socket, as shown. We now connect the other side of each one of the sockets to wire B, as per the illustration, installing a double pole, single throw switch, at any convenient point in wires A, B. Both sides of the socket are now alive, one directly from wire B, and the other by way of the lamps through wire A. It will, therefore, be readily seen that if an ordinary plug fuse be screwed into any one socket, the lamp connected to that socket by cross wire will immediately be lighted, and will burn until the plug is removed. Now suppose we wish to form a figure 3. It would be only necessary to insert the plugs in the sockets indicated, in order to outline the figure 3 on the board, wherever it might be placed. In using such a plug board, it is advisable to have a pattern of the various figures and letters it is desired to use. Patterns may be made of cardboard, or any other suitable material, as illustrated at the right of Fig. 6. This, of course, is not essential, but is very convenient where the light board is at the front of the house, for instance, the plug board on the stage, or in the manager's office. With this arrangement as many wires are necessary there are lamps in the board, plus one for the supply to the lamps, making in all, in the example shown, 36 wires.

Where printed programmes are used, it is quite possible to install such a board at the side of the stage, with the plug board and the switch controlling the supply wires located in the operating room, within convenient reach of the operator. He can then plug in any desired number and illuminate the same by merely throwing in the switch, i. e.: supposing he is running reel 2, the next being, of course, reel 3, which is described on the programme under that number. He prepares Fig. 3 by placing the plugs in position in the board, and as reel 2 is finished, he throws in the switch, illuminating Fig. 3, thus allowing the audience to look at the programme while the next reel is being threaded, or during the interval between the two reels. Where only one number is to be used the board can be made very small, and it is not necessary to use more than two or three cp. lamps, same being of the proper voltage of course. Such a board can be used to decided advantage in many ways. The lamps, if used within the auditorium, should of course be frosted, or else heavily colored. It is also possible to so connect the various figures through batteries of switches that the plug arrangement is unnecessary. This, however, is more costly, and the plug serves every purpose. Of course, it is quite possible to substitute single pole, single throw switches, or ordinary snap switches in place of the plugs. Everything considered, however, the arrangement shown in Fig. 5 is much the best for programme announcements.

BIG MIRROR SCREEN BUSINESS.

Since July 29th, Frank Manning, sales agent for the Mirror Screen Company, has broken his own previous record with the following list of orders: Riverside Park, Springfield, Mass.; New Garden Theater, Newark, N. J.; Steeplechase Park, Rockaway Beach; Photoplay Theater, Yauca, Porto Rico; Bijou Theater, Derby, Conn.; Central Square, Lynn, Mass.; New Theater, Quincy, Mass.; Victoria Theater, Lawrence, Mass. One of the above is the largest glass curtain in the world so far.

INQUIRIES

A. P.—We stated that Pathe Freres sometimes buy ideas. These ideas are ideas for photoplays. Being ideas, and not photoplays, they are ideas, just as we said. It is permissible to fold scripts. The best way is to fold the usual size paper twice. This makes a package that will go into a number ten envelope. If you have more than 20 sheets, fold but once, but you should not have ten sheets of a photoplay. Photoplayers receive from 50 to 80% of the salary they would receive on the stage, but they get it every week and do not have to walk home from Gooseberry, Oregon, or Odessa, Texas. The Vitagraph has four persons by the name of Costello: Mr. and Mrs. Costello, and Helen and Dolores Costello. The Photoplaywright was started December 16, 1911. You can get back numbers either loose or bound. Write the publishers. Single copies are ten cents each, the bound volumes $1.50 for each three months.

G. F. C.—We do not find Mr. Nelson cast in the Kalem production, but neither is that part cast in the Kalendar.

H. C. F.—Had you been in less of a hurry you would have seen the correction on page 651 of the last issue.

C. E.—Henry Walthall is with Biograph. We do not know where Mr. Kirkwood is now. He left the Reliance before the two-reel subjects were started.

E. W. Y.—It's more or less a matter of choice, but if we ran the program we would put the comedy between the two Westerns, keeping the livelier of the two cowboy stories for the closing number. As a general thing, run your best subject last and a comedy in preference to a drama, but it all depends on what you have to go with it.

P. N.—There are no English films being released in the American market since the National stopped releasing. Jack J. Clark and Miss Gene Gauntier had the leads in Kalem's "You Remember Ellen." You can get the back number by sending ten cents to the publishers. Thanks for your interest, but the foreign market will not yield a return to American playwrights. The pay is more apt to be ten shillings than five guineas. If you have something to sell, you can sell it to better advantage over here.

M. FAN—First time we've heard from you. No Lubin casts have been shown yet in which Mr. August appears.

R. H.—The release dates are correct when published, but just now you have to watch for corrections on account of the Independent muddle. "The Sheriff Outwitted" is the Nestor for June 1. "Memories of a Pioneer" is a Bison, dated June 11. The Bisons lately released are more or less uncertain, and "Memories" does not appear in the official list of Universal releases, and no release of any sort is given for that date.

J. D. F.—Mabel Snyder is the child who played in the Essanays mentioned. Her name does not appear in current casts.

H. B.—Come in and "buy a few." We did not say that Miss Williams never was with Biograph, but she certainly was not with them a "year or two" ago.

F. G. P.—The New York office of the New York Motion Picture Co., which makes the Bison films, is 251 West 19th Street.

F. E. B.—Your question has been referred to our Biograph identifier. Look next week.

M. E. T.—Miss Helen Marten went from Lubin back to Eclair.

S. L. W.—Miss Mabel Normand and Fred Mace had the leads in Biograph's "A Dash Through the Clouds."

M. P. W. READER—To learn how to write photoplays, send one dollar to our publishers for "Technique of the Photoplay." The Biograph player mentioned is still with them. What do you mean by "the essential part of a moving picture play—in the staging of it?" You've got us guessing. You do not stand much chance of getting a job as cameraman with no knowledge of the business. There is no set apprenticeship. They take a photographer, show him the difference between motion and still photography, and set him to work.

L. B.—Why send three letters where one would do? And why write in lead pencil? Just for that you don't get that Biograph name. We have no interest whatever in the "real" names of photoplayers. If John Jones wants to call himself Reginald Fitzallen it doesn't bother us any. We call him Fitz and let it go at that. Miss Reva Greenwood was with Edison last. Joseph Graybill was John de Silva in Thanhouser's "Ring of a Spanish Grandee." "Taming a Tyrant" is outlawed by age, but we think it was Curtis Cooksey. No player has a fixed "film name." Mr. Richardson, of the American, is generally called Jack because that's his own name.

H. S. T.—Fred Mace is with the Bison company. We do not know his previous stage connections. We can't get that Eclair cast. Edna Foster seems to be jobbing, but has done much work for Reliance. Miss Leonard has not yet announced an engagement. Miss Loveridge was the former Biograph player loaned Essanay, but who is now with Bison. Her first name is not Mabel but Helen, we believe. Mabel was the name of the part she played in "Western Hearts."

WALLACE—We know of no film company that does not pay on acceptance. The usual procedure is to send you a release slip, which must be signed and returned, the check going forward as soon as this is done. Better send a polite note at the end of ten days asking that it be looked up. There seems to be a mistake somewhere.

T. R. M.—Carlyle Blackwell was Simple Sam in Kalem's "Suffragette Sheriff."

B. M. D.—Eustace Hale Ball, the then photoplay editor, is the adapter of Eclair's "Robin Hood."

K. C. P.—A set of the Thanhouser players, including Miss Snow, may be had of the company for one dollar.

B. J. W.—"Twenty-pound paper" means paper weighing twenty pounds a ream. The "ream" is 500, instead of 480 sheets, and of a size to cut into 2,000 8½ by 11 sheets. It is a trade term. Essanay is buying some scripts from its regular contributors, but is not asking for contributions.

D. R. B.—In these troublous times it is not easy to capture Bison casts. Sorry.

F. N. H.—Your question is answered at length in the Photoplaywright Department. Send a stamped and self-addressed number ten envelope, repeating your second request.

Peggy—Guess again on that second Biograph title and we'll try and get them both for you.

F. E. W.—There is no average salary for a dark-room man. May run anywhere from $18 to $60, according to what he is worth.

T. B. R.—We have not found that the company pays above ten dollars a script. They offer more in their advertising, but we have not seen any offer for more than that sum.

A. W. M.—The company is entirely within its rights in reserving the fiction rights to your story if they purchase it. It is your privilege to refuse to sell if the offer is not to your satisfaction.

MARK MECHLIN BUYS THEATER.

Mark H. Mechlin has bought the Palace Theater of Washington Court House, Ohio.

Comments on the Films

Licensed.

"BRONCHO BILLY'S LAST HOLD-UP" (Essanay), August 13.—One of the most notable things about these Broncho Billy pictures is the fertility of their writer. The same characters appear in nearly all; but the story is nearly always freshly conceived and interesting. In this number Broncho Billy, to save the girl with whom he had fallen in love and who had contracted the fever, takes, not the express box nor the mail bag, as had been his custom, but the stage itself. He left the stage's crew and passengers by the wayside because he needed the stage to carry his girl to the doctor's. It was his last hold-up. The posse got him and a shot from the sheriff compelled him to cash in. It has the too often noticed sentimental ending, made for the gallery.

"A MESSENGER TO KEARNEY" (Selig), August 12.—A story of early California just about the time the Gringos came. The plot deals with a love episode in which a frontiersman, Clay, rescues a senorita, Isabel Marello, from a forced marriage to a Mexican, her father's choice. The plot is not fresh, but the Selig players have not done much of this sort of thing lately, and it is very interesting. Hobart Bosworth, as Clay, looks very much like the Christ, as he played that part in "The Vision Beautiful," recently; but his kindliness of expression fits very well into the story. Phyllis Gordon plays the girl, and A. E. Garcia the Mexican. Wm. H. Stratton, as Chico, the Indian runner, deserves special notice for excellent work, even in a picture well played as a whole. F. Richardson and Anna Dodge play the heroine's parents. Henry Ennis and Rob Chandler are the trappers with Clay. Edward Philbrook is Kearney and Camille Astor is the Indian maid. There are two or three very pretty girls in the cast. The picture was written by Everett McNeil and produced by Fred Huntly.

"THE HEART OF ESMERALDA" (Vitagraph), August 13.—Charles L. Gaskill has not scored any triumph in this picture, which is rather artificial in its situation and easily done. V. Ranous, its producer, has chosen very interesting backgrounds for his scenes, which are all outdoors; but hasn't succeeded in throwing the illusion of plausibility over the scenario's shortcomings. It is a rural love story in which an authoress, who seems always conveniently placed, acts as the dia ex machina, disentangling a rather knotty situation. Edith Story plays the girl, Esmeralda, and at times makes the character very human. Helen Gardner, as the authoress, is never human; she has the part that Minerva plays in the very early romantic dramas. Ralph Ince and James Morrison play country lads; but the genius of neither is really fitted for such characters. They are very intelligent, however. Tefft Johnson is better as a farmer than is Rose Tapley, who plays his wife. The story seemed to interest a small audience; but never seemed to get a very strong grip upon it.

"THE DANGER LINE" (Cines), August 10.—A picture that makes a good though often used situation very interesting through fine acting. It is decidedly an artistic production which, in spite of its unpleasant theme, can be commended as good entertainment. A wife and mother neglected by her too busy husband, falls in love with a third man. Her brother saves her by plotting with a fast woman to "show the man up." The wife sees how he behaves when out with "the bunch." The leading lady is an accomplished artist; her portrayal of the wife will probably win the sympathy of many spectators, and she is competently supported by a good cast. The scenes are all studio sets. The action is such that they will not be noticed, which is the highest praise that could be given to sets in such a picture.

"THE INNER CIRCLE" (Biograph), August 12.—A melodrama. The "inner circle" is merely a phrase used by a society for promoting the payment of money, funds to be left under some rose bush or other at a time designated by the inner circle. The climax of this picture comes just before a dynamite bomb explodes. It is a picture that is good in little things and it also has a well-made plot; but the explosion didn't get over. This was because there wasn't enough explosive material in the bomb. The producer wanted to have it go off almost as soon as it left the hands of the villain who has become a hero, and didn't dare make it dangerous. The best way is not to have any powder in the fused bomb and to explode a cartridge at the right time and in a safe place by electricity. When that is done one feels that the bomb was real. The picture's strength comes from good acting. Mary Pickford has the chief lady's part; but the interest centers in one of the gang and his child.

"THE CITY OF WASHINGTON" (Edison), August 10.—A well-photographed series of views. Some of them we have never seen before. It makes a commendable offering.

"THE LITTLE SHERIFF" (Essanay), August 10.—A picture in which the chief interest is a little girl, the "little sheriff." Her mamma was, or shortly became, a widow. Between her house and that of the sheriff, a bachelor, there was a stretch of very beautiful road through a wooded valley. This serves as background for many of the picture's scenes. There is some very speedy galloping to and fro along it. This, as indeed nearly everything else in it, for it is a well-designed picture, comes in as it should to make an effective whole. The climax follows the attack upon the widow in her house at midnight by a bad man. It got the audience's attention early and the interested remarks showed that the spectators were following it closely. It is well photographed and makes a pretty good offering.

"THE MINISTER AND THE OUTLAW" (Lubin), August 12.—A good picture that shows careful preparation. The plot is fresh and conducted clearly and, as it is unfolded, many human things (little natural twists of the narative and moments of imaginative acting) give to it a more than passing interest. Behind the reviewer sat a kindly-hearted elderly lady who plainly was carried away by the picture's illusion, she seemed to be looking at a picture of real life, and her comments that we overhead were a first class lecture on it. Her acceptance of the action added much to our enjoyment. It is not very well named. From the title we expected a sentimental picture of a badman's conversion. The hero is a sheriff not a minister; he wears a black robe as a disguise. He wins a girl as well as "gets" his badman; but there is no sentimentality in it. It is a detective picture set in the West and made to conform to cowboy atmosphere. It makes a commendable offering.

"PATHE'S WEEKLY NO. 34."—There are some fine pictures in this issue. An automobile accident during the Dieppe race furnished an unusual thrill. The camera man was close to the scene. The pictures of the tryout balloon race at Kansas City are made additionally interesting by reason of a marriage ceremony in a balloon and the departure of the two for a trip through the clouds in a flower-festooned car. This scene is splendidly photographed—cameolike in sharpness.

"THE JOKER'S MISTAKE" (Eclipse), August 7.—Real comedy, with laughs, amplified by camera tricks.

"FROM SION TO CHAMPERY" (Eclipse), August 7.—Fine Switzerland views, of villages and snow-covered mountains.

"A QUIET BOARDING HOUSE" (Eclipse), August 7.—Comedy of the exaggerated sort, amusing, nevertheless, with an abundance of trick work.

"THE LITTLE KEEPER OF THE LIGHT" (Kalem), August 12.—Little Adelaide Lawrence is the star in a drama not particularly strong in conception. Her work in the scene where she visits the hut of the man (Donald MacKenzie) injured by her father (Lawrence Mitchell) to seek his aid in her father's defense was carefully and thoughtfully done, and furnished the real dramatic incident of the picture. There are good views of beach and cliff and a picture of a life-saving station. Messrs. Mitchell and MacKenzie take their parts creditably.

"BUNNY AND THE DOGS" (Vitagraph), August 12.—This picture is listed as comedy; but if there is any comedy in it, it is of the slightest. It is a good picture of a large dog fancier's kennels, with many fine dogs.

"INGENUITY" (Vitagraph), August 12.—A picture telling a very slight story without much backbone; but in which Miss Adele de Garde plays a very good little storekeeper. Kenneth Casey, as her brother, and others support her. These two together on a split reel make a rather unsubstantial offering.

"WANTED, A GRANDMOTHER" (Vitagraph), August 9.—Miss Florence Turner and Maurice Costello are again seen in a charming story. The human interest in this domestic drama is heightened materially by the work of little Helen Costello. The picture is worthy of the highest praise.

"THE SAND STORM" (Lubin), August 7.—This picture opens with a scene that is unusually strong. After a short introduction, that makes us fairly well acquainted with the picture's hero, one Brooks, we find ourselves with him and others in a very rough bar-room at the edge of the desert. Brooks has carried a fainting girl into the place. He seems a low character, a rotter; but the brutal, fearfully brutal treatment of this strange, sick, fainting woman at the hands of the rough desert men, shocks the forgotten decency in him and he makes a desperate but successful attempt to rescue her from them. This view of brutal doings is not, in itself, a brutal exhibition. It is done artistically. It made one in the audience cry out; but as in agony rather than in revulsion or disgust. It does not disgust; it is too terrible. It reflects great credit on the producer (we understand that Mr. Fielding conducts all these Westerns for the Lubin Company). He, himself, plays the most brutal man. The ending of the picture, the sand storm, is not so effective. It seems after the realism of the beginning, a little soft, a little sentimental as though made to please the public.

"THE ARROW-MAKER'S DAUGHTER" (Pathe), August 7.—A relentlessly tragic picture of the thirsty lands. In it Pearl White plays an Indian girl who doggedly follows the trail of a white gold seeker (Paul Panzer) who had killed her father, the arrow maker, for a hoard of nuggets. She follows him out into the desert and neither have water. The girl is followed by a chief, her lover, who finds her just in time. She has come up with the white thief. The two Indians, together, stand by and watch him in his death struggle. Beautiful photography adds much to the picture first and last. There are fine views of a rocky land where the gold was found and of a cave where the murder took place. The mirage dream of running brooks in the midst of the dry sands is a wonskillful men. There is a girl daughter of the old master, who loves the picture, well acted; it makes a good offering.

"THE GIRL AT THE CUPOLA" (Selig), August 8.—The cupola is a technical term and refers to a kind of blast furnace. Probably not one in a thousand who see the picture will know what the title means. The story deals with a "business doctor," a man who can bring a business up-to-date. He is turned loose in a foundry and makes a bad muss of affairs, because the old, inefficient hands object to giving up their jobs to better, more skillful men. There is a girl, daughter of the old master, who loves the business doctor, but doesn't like his methods. The situation, as developed, makes an irritating story; because it handles unpleasant things with a half-reason that is not true, yet not wholly false. The picture's best part is the foundry scenes; we see the shop where they are pouring molten iron and carrying it to the moulds. There is a lively running scrap at the arrival of the new hands. L. J. Commerford plays the old iron master; Kathlyn Williams plays the girl, his daughter; Charles Clary is the new superintendent. Frank Weed, Vera Hamilton, Evelyn Allen and many others have roles in the picture. It will make an interesting number on the program.

"THE MAN FROM DRAGON LAND" (Selig), August 6. Frank Clark played the Chinaman in a comedy-drama which neither in conception nor execution is deserving of particular mention. Clark did his share, it may be said; but he was overhandicapped by a weak scenario. There were several wolves in the piece, but they surely cannot be described as otherwise than tame.

"THE CROSSROADS" (Vitagraph), August 7.—George Cooper and Hal Wilson do commendable work in this drama of the country. Frank Curry, as the villainous lawyer, was inclined to exaggeration in his endeavor to show how contemptable a man may be. Somehow it reminded one of a characterization of Dickens. Mr. Eldridge and Mrs. Maurice were at their best, and, as every picturelover knows, this is saying enough. Zena Kiefe, as the sweetheart, acceptably filled the demands of her part. Mr. Wilson, as Toby, the half-witted plowboy, contributed to the dramatic as well as to the comedy feature of the picture. There was a happy ending.

"MARJORIE'S DIAMOND RING" (Edison), August 7.—A farce which has one or two very amusing situations; but in which there is so much that doesn't convince at all that it is cheapened. It is an over-acted picture. The artists who played it are good actors; but they were too often under the necessity of making fun out of nothing funny to do good work. Elsie McLeod plays Marjorie and, in herself, is of course delightful, while Alice Washburn, as her aunt, is also an amusing character. Edward O'Connor, playing one of the plumbers, likewise adds to the picture merely by his presence. These three come pretty near making the farce a success. Edward Tilton's role would give no one a chance. Mrs. C. Jay Williams plays, naturally, Marjorie's mother, as Edna Weick does her sister. We also notice in the cast, Edward Boulden, who as Marjorie's beau, does well when the requirements of the situation let him, as do also Arthur Housman, a plumber, and Louise Sydmeth, a servant.

"FREED FROM SUSPICION" (Kalem), August 7.—A careful handling of any situation that is at all possible can often so cover it with a film of plausibility that the mind is temporarily hoodwinked into accepting little impossibilities as natural parts of a story. The majority of spectators are more suggestible than a critic whose business it is to watch, not only for gems of art, but for flaws, and to see how any picture was made. It is, for instance, quite improbable for a signet ring, carelessly handled, to leave a plain impression on an oil painting; but we saw it do that in this picture. We doubt, though, that one spectator in ten would stop to notice the improbability of it. The quality that makes this picture an interesting offering is the skill with which the material was put together. It tells a clear story that did not require finesse in acting and didn't permit its action to drag. It is not a deep nor a substantial picture; but it gives entertainment.

"A CHILD'S REMORSE" (Biograph), August 8.—A picture that, in its settings and in the way it is conducted, strongly reminds one of a former Biograph release, "The Ruling Passion." It also is a picture of children, played by children, and its climax is a rescue of a crew of youngsters who are in an open boat that is sinking far out from the beach. The thrill comes from the speed of the fast motor boats that the old folks send out to save them. The soul of this story, though, is very different from the other. It gets its individuality from one of its characters, a little girl, daughter of a petulant mother. This youngster knew that the boat wasn't seaworthy. She was in a peevish mood and in an ugly frame of mind especially toward one of her playmates who was with the crowd. We could hear her lips shouting at them, "Drown; go and drown." But soon her better nature asserted itself and she got aid as quickly as possible. It is all very vividly pictured and, by the exclamations around us, we knew that it was getting across to the audience with power.

"THE OLD WEDDING DRESS" (Essanay), August 8.—A good and very emotional situation makes the latter two-thirds of this picture a real interpretation of human life. The early scenes—they serve merely as an introduction to the picture—were pitiably weak. They showed a cheap and conventional idea of a country store. No one ever saw anything like it actually. The story follows these scenes. It is told partly by means of dream memories. There is going to be a wedding. The bride-to-be has a very lovable spinster aunt. The dress the bride is to wear was made for this aunt and the memories take the spectator back thirty years and show, by a few tragic pictures, why the dress had never been worn. Then we have the wedding scene in the country church and the departure. The sharp contrasts bring out the picture's intention very strongly. It makes a very good offering.

"SUING SUSAN" (Vitagraph), August 10.—Susan is Miss Flora Finch. She is a spinster and lives next door to John Gorden (Bunny). A discussion as to the ownership of certain tin cans resulted in a spite fence. But Susan's maid (Miss Dorothy Kelly) and Gordon's man (James Morrison) fall in love. James cuts a love hole through the spite fence and before long John and Susan are also using it. Then the fence comes down. The comedy has a somewhat artificial situation; but, as acted, there are good hearty laughs, not too many of them; but as unexpected and irresistible as can be. It is a good offering.

"BUSTER IN NODLAND" (Lubin), August 8.—A very pleasant little melodrama as dreamed by Buster Johnson. The heroine is of course, a little girl of whom he is fond, and the villain is a youngster whom he doesn't like. It kept a ripple of amusement going and a large audience seemed to find it excellent entertainment. It is, in fact, fresh and good.

"A DOUBLE COURTSHIP" (Lubin), August 8.—On the same reel is this farce whose chief fun is made by a young wife flinging the breakfast and then the plates at her husband. There are always a number who laugh at this sort of thing.

"THE TALE OF A CAT" (Essanay), August 9.—A cleverly constructed farce comedy that decidedly amused a large audience. Dolores Cassinelli plays the owner of the cat. She has two admirers, played by Messrs. Cashman and Missimer. The latter steals the cat and the girl offers to marry the man who brings it back. Missimer thinks he has it, but by that time Cashman has it. Missimer has it again before Cashman can deliver it and loses it again. A long comedy like this usually has some obvious things in it; but much of it is unexpected and it made many good laughs. We can commend it as a good offering.

"THE WANDERING MUSICIAN" (Kalem), August 9.—An old musician tells, in memory pictures, the tragic story of his life and finds, in one of his listeners, a long-lost, loving daughter. The old musician is a fine looking old music master and the story is finely photographed and clearly drawn.

"SHORES OF THE OCLOWAHA RIVER AND EVERGLADES OF FLORIDA" (Kalem), August 9.—This scenic is of graybeard moss and swampy forests of the South. It is interesting, but a little monotonous.

"A FLY TIME" (Lubin), August 9.—A farce that made some giggling in a large audience. There is much rough business; but nothing very sensible in it. It fills a whole reel.

"A BURGLAR'S WEIRD RECEPTION" (C. G. P. C.), August 9.—A dandy trick film picture. It makes good entertainment and a good audience plainly liked it very much.

"HOW A LETTER TRAVELS FROM CENTRAL AFRICA" (C. G. P. C.), August 9.—This tropical picture is most decidedly worth while. Its views of the African interior, of desert scenes, of Nile scenes, etc., are sure to be appreciated. The two on this reel make a desirable offering.

"THE BOOB" (Selig), August 9.—A good picture of a country town masher. As Lester Cunio plays him, he was no "boob." In fact, as a lady's man, he had the men of the theatrical company that was stranded in his town beaten a mile. He had saved his money and was no dresser, yet a very pretty village girl (Florence Dye) had engaged herself to him. When the players come he is smitten with the charms of Dolly Flasher (Myrtle Stedman). She "works him" for carfare back to New York. Later, when he follows her and fails to make money in the city, Dolly and her friends of the chorus, chip in and pay his way back home. There is in the picture a marked feeling for character and it has an entertaining freshness. The situation is new and its whole working out, while not realistic, is substantial and good. The "boob" reaches his home town just in time to see the wedding party of his former girl.

"HERE AND THERE IN OREGON" (Pathe), August 10.—A well-photographed scenic of the Oregon Central Trunk Line Railroad and of one or two power houses and dams. It is interesting; but, like almost all scenic films, it sticks close to what the tourist would see and shows very little of the State. No farms, ranches or orchards are pictured.

"KITTENS" (Pathe), August 10.—A very pleasing film of the growing of "Tabby," the family cat. It was liked.

Independent.

"THEIR GUARDIAN ANGEL" (Milano), August 17.—There are some superb views of mountain side and mountain lake, of great Italian villas, in this strong drama, the scenes being laid on and about Lake Como. The story is of a designing woman, the friend of the hospitable wife, who, recently released by divorce from her own matrimonial bonds, loses no time in attempting to annex the husband of her hostess. The wife, overhearing the location of the evening appointment, takes her sleeping child and places her in the appointed pavilion. The intruder discovers the little one and flees. The husband, saved in time, is found by the distracted wife, weeping by the side of the little daughter.

"THE GREATER CHRISTIAN" (Rex), August 15.—Rex puts over a strong story—and a well-told story. There are some striking scenes and some pretty settings—a suburban mansion, a hedge-fringed garden, and old ocean tumbling onto a beach. A girl who is fond of free-and-easy society decides to change her manner of life and go to the Salvation Army. There she is sent as a governess to a Jersey family. She meets a minister, they fall in love, he proposes and she declines, on the plea that she thinks her past life would bar her from becoming a minister's wife. A sermon by the clergyman the following Sunday convinces her that her attitude is wrong. The following day she tells the minister she will accept. A former friend, a man with whom she had associated in the old days, follows her up and enters the house during the interview. The minister, on learning of her former life, spurns her. The governess, turned out by her employers, goes back to the Salvation Army.

"PLAYTHINGS OF FATE" (Milano), August 10.—A love story in two reels of high social life in Italy. Its situation is not new; but it has been treated boldly. We don't imply by this that there is anything offensive in it, for there is not, nor that it runs into morbid things. In fact, it teaches a wholesome lesson with some vigor. The boldness comes in the logical denouement of the sensational situation, a denouement that is unexpected because it is not sentimental.

Two lovers are separated by fate and marry without love. Later, they are thrown together and there is a clandestine meeting. The wife of the man is shot by a burglar with her absent husband's revolver. On his return to the house after his clandestine meeting he is arrested and can give no account of his doings. The other woman owns up to her husband to save her lover. It is pictured tragically and in an atmosphere of warning.

The first reel is taken up with a statement of the situation and seems uninteresting; but the second reel is tensely dramatic. The acting is very good. It is hardly a picture to excite enthusiasm; but is a good, substantial offering.

"THE FOSTER SISTER" (Eclair), August 11.—A picture by the French company played by good artists and dealing with an incident in a rural love story. It is not very convincing; but it is beautifully put on in homely scenes about a very old French farmhouse. These scenes intimately take us into the backyard, the barns, the chicken coop, etc., and there are pretty forest scenes. The four chief players are the farmer's daughter, the heroine—we have seen this talented player in the lead in many pictures by this company—her old mother, her foster sister, who is a flirt, and her beau, a young village swain, whose head is a bit turned by the flirting foster sister. The sister fools both and makes the two fall out with each other.

"CARLSBAD PORCELAIN AND CRYSTALWARE" (Eclair), August 11.—On the same reel an instructive and very interesting industrial. Its best items are those showing glass manufacturing. It will be welcome and will be remembered.

"A TALE OF THE FOOTHILLS" (Nestor), August 12.—A love story of the early West, of old stage coach days. The hero and the heroine are thrown together while traveling on such a conveyance and they become friends. The picture, continuing, reveals the development of the love story. It is made dramatic by the slowness of the man to respond to the girl's growing tenderness and also by the presence of a rough cowboy who plays the villain and who is the means of awakening the hero in the end to a knowledge of his love for the girl. It is a picture, in general outline and in its object, not unlike many others. The action seems carefully planned and the interest is not permitted to fall down. Yet there is nothing new in it, either in the kind of scenery, which is very good, nor in the story or its characters. It gives entertainment, because it shows only pleasing, romantic things. A safe picture to offer rather than a good one.

"WANTED, A PRACTICE" (Powers), August 14.—Two pleasing little children (we have seen them before in Powers' pictures) have an important place in this comedy. The picture, as a whole, is unconvincing, but there is more than one good laugh due to excellent situations that spring up in it. The prettiness of its scenes and the excellent photography add a good deal and we think that it will be generally pleasing.

"THE ANNUAL HORSE SHOW AT LONG BRANCH, N. J. (Powers), August 14.—On the same reel is this very well photographed series of views of prize horses and good riding and jumping.

"IN OLD TENNESSEE" (Imp), August 15.—A two reel love story of the Tennessee Mountains in which King Bagott and Miss Jane Fernley lead, the first as a moonshiner, the second as a lady detective who has been sent to discover the still. The moonshiner has a cripple brother, a lad of about fourteen, played by Joe Moore, who fills remarkably well an important role. This character is the means of raising the tone of the situation, for it was to buy a surgical operation that would cure the cripple brother that the moonshiner went into the illicit business, and he is also the means through which the situation is worked out to its denouement. In fact, he is the picture's turning point all through a carefully made and very interesting story. The acting, even of most of the lesser characters; the scene making with its rough, truly rural backgrounds and the light effects all add to the value of the release. It is a commendable picture.

"HOW STEVE MADE GOOD" (Nestor), August 14.—Jack Conway plays in this picture a character, Captain Steve, leader of a band of prairie outlaws. Before his band attack a prairie schooner, Steve, as scout, looks upon a domestic scene so touching that he keeps the band at his revolver's point, from making the attack and himself joins the party of settlers, made up, he finds, by a brother and two sisters, the youngest one only a child and a cripple. The older sister being a desirable girl there is a love story not unlike others of its kind, but made effective by good acting and careful handling. The denouement is, we must point out, but a cheap solution of the situation not worthy of the picture.

"THE MINER'S WIDOW" (Nestor), August 16.—"Young Wild West," who in this picture is referred to as the "Scout," with his two sisters and the slight help of the "Chink," are the means of saving the widow's claim from being "jumped," and also of saving the widow's daughter and also her lover from captivity. It is a picture with all the atmosphere of a dime novel of the West, commendably full of what may be called real action. We remember the time when we could swallow this sort of thing with avidity. It is aimed at a definite audience. We commend it as making a successful appeal; but have out-grown such flights ourselves and doubt whether the average grown-up audience will grow enthusiastic over it.

"FOR HIS CHILD" (Champion), August 12.—About six months ago a casual spectator complained to the reviewer that one could tell how almost any picture was going to end. We doubt whether one could foresee the denouement of this picture from the first half of it. This is not because the picture has not been developed logically, for, excepting the climax, which is, in part, both arbitrary and unconvincing, it is logical, with a few minor exceptions, as for one instance, the pictured attitude of the community, especially as shown by the doctor, toward the man who, in a drunken row, had stabbed a neighbor in the arm. Such a man would have been intensely unpopular for a time. The story of the picture is kept clear and has some novelty of incident. Some of the scenes are very pretty and, in one, there is an extremely well suggested fall over a cliff. We don't care how short the fall was, it showed some nerve in the actor. A few of the scenes are over-crowded, but the players manage to keep the story smooth at all moments, and the film will be watched by the average audience with interest.

"WIDOW'S CLAIM" (Bison), August 15.—Miss Jane Fernley and Mr. Dunn, both recently with the Imp Company, play leading parts in this picture of the mining country. The first as a widow with many boys, who has struck it rich, and the latter as a gambler whom she has refused, because of his business. The gambler overhears a plot to jump the widow's claim and frustrates it. Then follows a spirited chase to capture the jumpers. The gambler is wounded; the widow cares for him and the love story's denouement comes acceptably. The situation is well acted and there are pretty scenes. It is a good release though not an emotional picture.

"BIG SIM" (Imp), August 12.—A picture of the West whose purpose is to set forth the character of a big-hearted miner. This man, Sim, saves the mining claim of an enemy from claim-jumpers and at considerable risk. The story at first seems obscure, but is convincingly acted and soon begins to picture a definite situation. At no time does it get a very strong grip on emotion. It is played by Messrs. Pollard, Lyons and Kelly and Miss Marguerita Fisher. There is a sameness to stories of this kind; but to people who haven't seen too many, they are good entertainment, because they treat of human things in a very plain, simple way and have good action.

"BABETTE" (Gem), August 13.—A story of Revolutionary France in which Mary Navarro plays the lead, as Babette, a girl of the people. She takes pity on two aristocratic lovers and helps them to escape from rough revolutionary pursuers. Babette is cornered by these pursuers and commits suicide. It is played in the well-known costume of the period and set in pretty backgrounds not wholiy in keeping with the story. Electric lights on gate posts are certainly out of keeping. The plot is perfectly clear; but is slight and incidental with a beginning, middle and end only by courtesy, so to speak; it lacks dramatic building up and has no definite climax. The players are skillful and their work is pleasant to watch. It gives fair entertainment.

"THE LAND OF DEATH" (American), August 19.—A picture by the premier company, with our old friends, the big four (Miss Bush, Miss Von Trump, Mr. Kerrigan and that villain, Richardson) carrying the action. It tells a story in the well-known Flying A style, a story of ruthless doings pictured on the rolling plains with a far background of uplifted mountains. It shows us a most villainous gang of land grabbers who, to warn off all settlers, wipe out every party who crosses their country. One settler, whom they think disposed of, manages to join a small party in a prairie schooner. The gang are chasing this. In the running fight and in the turning at bay by the water pool, every man and woman except hero and heroine in the party and also every man in the gang is killed. The last struggle is a hand to hand fight between Kerrigan and Richardson which the heroine with a knife decides. The photography is not always clear; the film stock seems to be poor.

"A MAN AMONG MEN" (Reliance), August 17.—An acceptable melodrama, fairly effective, because it is pretty well put together and also because it is set on well-chosen, beautifully photographed backgrounds. Miss Gertrude Robinson plays the heroine opposite to Hector Dion, as the man. The girl's father is the owner of the stone quarry around which the story is woven. He objects to their love match. There is a lover's misunderstanding and the man departs. The day he leaves the boss is found murdered (he comes to later) and every finger is made to point to the hero as the culprit. He, himself, confesses in order to save the girl annoyance and is about to be hanged when the quarryman revives and declares who his assailant was. It is well acted; the contrasts are clearly brought out. It has small shortcomings, but it will furnish entertainment. The gallery will like it.

"ORDER IN THE COURT" (Reliance), August 14.—A farce comedy showing us a morning's calendar in an absolutely impossible, but on that account, very amusing court. It is good entertainment.

"THE OLD SWIMMING HOLE" (Reliance), August 14.—On the same reel is this picture of school days, played by children. The story is simple, is true enough to recall old times to the hearts of elderly spectators and it will be very acceptable generally. It is a first class little picture of country life, well photographed and natural.

"THE KIDNAPPING OF DOLLY" (Imp), August 17.—This is a half-reel of juvenile stuff for juveniles—about, say, twelve years old and less. These will be "dee-lighted." For the older it will be very tiresome.

"THE SHOT THAT FAILED" (Bison-101), August 17.—The title is taken from the climax of the play. Jim, a gambler, starts something over a game of cards. He is cracked over the head with his own revolver. The man who strikes him later finds him wandering in the woods and takes care of him. Jim's sister, believing her brother has been killed, begins systematic revolver practice. Teaching her is a man she has recently met. They become lovers. When the instructor inquires the occasion of the interest in pistol shooting, the girl informs him it is for the purpose of enabling her the better and the surer to kill the man who struck her brother. The preceptor tells her he is the man. Holding up his arms he tells her to go ahead and shoot. She pulls the trigger on a bad cartridge. Jim, recovered, bursts upon the scene and explains matters. It is difficult to understand why the instructor could not himself have explained matters without making the apparent sacrifice of life—unless, indeed, he had perfect confidence in the inability of his pupil to shoot straight.

"THE GOLDEN RULE" (Powers), August 16.—Florence Barker is well worth seeing in this drama. Her work is of the best throughout. D. V. Wall, as the minister, notably contributes to the effectiveness of the play. It is a welcome relief to find an author who, having created a woman with a discovered past, endows her with the fighting quality to hit back and not supinely submit to the indignities imposed by the surfaced sanctimonious.

"A CHANCE SHOT" (Victor), August 16.—Another Florence Lawrence-Owen Moore drama which proves that "class will show." There is perhaps nothing remarkable in the scenario as to plot, the basis being the old story of the blackmailer preying upon the fears of a happy woman. In this case it involved no wrongdoing on the part of the heroine. The note sent in to the bride, just established in her home, was: "Does your husband know that your father is a life-termer in Sing Sing for killing your mother? I do. Be wise. A Friend."

The husband, off on a shooting trip with a friend, returns home with an empty bag. There is a question as to marksmanship. A target is posted on the door of an outbuilding. The blackmailer, come the second time to press his demands, had been pushed into the shed by the wife when she saw her husband approaching. One of the bullets kills him. The wife, meanwhile, had decided to tell her husband, and on his entering the house shows him the note. He takes matters rather hard. The bride goes to the shed. She finds the body. As she emerges she meets her husband and tells him what she has seen. He verifies her fears by his own eyes. He finally takes her in his arms—whether from a sense of justice and in recognition of the fact that she is guiltless of the father's sin or from a feeling that he, too, has killed is not clear. The story is strongly told.

"THE BLOOD STAIN" (Solax), August 14.—This is supposed to be a story of a newspaper reporter—in fact, a star reporter. The only star reported in the picture is not the actor, but the man in the telephone harness in the news room scene. His name is Riis, a first-class newspaper man, a real star reporter—on the Brooklyn Eagle, in which office the scene was taken—and the son of Jacob Riis, himself an old newspaper man, sociologist, and close friend of Roosevelt.

Billy Quirk took the role of the star reporter. As a newspaper story the picture is a failure. It is not true to the life in any measurable degree. Lee Beggs played Big Bill.

"CONDUCTOR 786" (Thanhouser), August 23.—Riley Chamberlain plays the conductor in this comedy-drama, for such it is. It may have been intended for a drama, but Chamberlain has injected some real infectious laughter into it. Chamberlain is well supported by the Thanhouser company; also, and this is unusual, he is supported by a crew of street car men, who come very near to the real thing in the actor business. The baseball grand-stand scene is far from new, but Chamberlain and his associates make it well worth while. His action, when he is introduced to his daughter-in-law and has undergone scrutiny through a lorgnette, in pulling an imaginary bell-cord for "Go ahead" must be seen to be appreciated.

"AS OTHERS SEE US" (Thanhouser), August 18.—In the child division; for juveniles it will make fun.

"WARNER'S WAXWORKS" (Thanhouser), August 18.—On the same reel as the foregoing. There is attempt in this picture to make comedy; it is forced.

"GRAZIELLA, THE GYPSY" (Gaumont), August 13.—A strong drama set amid beautiful scenery—better and more adequately described as remarkably so; adding to the charm of the picture is splendid photography.

"TOODLES" (Majestic), August 18.—A comedy in which a young man wants to marry a girl if he can get her away from the stage and from her dog also. He measurably succeeds.

"A GAME OF CHESS" (Majestic), August 18.—Fine comedy drama. Herbert Prior and Mabel Trunnelle have the leads. There is a new idea in this piece which is well worked out.

"THE WRECKED TAXI" (Thanhouser), August 16.—There is one scene in this drama which will make a whole lot of fun—and that is a youngster in a bathtub "enjoying" his daily bath. However, there is plenty of good straight stuff to hold attention and interest all the way. There is good photography and also some pretty park views, in one of which there is a children's May party.

"BIG SISTER" (Thanhouser), August 11.—The Sea Breeze Home for the little unfortunates is featured in this picture. On that account the film will be particularly valuable in settlement work, although for its dramatic quality and workmanlike construction it will be interesting to any audience. It is a pretty story.

"NOW WATCH THE PROFESSOR" (Thanhouser), August 13.—Riley Chamberlain as Professor Gregg "put one over" on a very wise young man who thought he also was slick. It is good comedy—and a little out of the ordinary, in fact, novel.

"THE BAD MAN AND THE RANGER" (American), August 14.—A Western of the lively sort. There is a duel between the two chief characters. The ranger fails to take advantage of his opportunities to shoot the bad man in a rather unusual duel. Later, according to the stereotyped formula, the bad man saves the ranger's life and surrenders to him. Then the ranger shows his gratitude by putting the bad man in jail.

"THE GIRL AND THE GUN" (American), August 8.—There was a girl in the story, but it was mostly gun; then more gun. The sheriff was also on the landscape. There was one scene of distinct educational value—a great trestle carrying the irrigation stream. Over this trestle there was a spectacular hand-to-hand fight at the end of a rope which was some distance off the ground.

"GAUMONT WEEKLY NO. 22," August 7.—Among the more notable features of this reel are close pictures of the Czar and Czarina and high functionaries at a festival in Moscow; some fine baseball pictures taken at a New York National League game; Paris fashions, in colors; a $5,000,000 flood around Waupon, Wis.; and excellent pictures of the water sports at Detroit.

"HER SUPREME SACRIFICE" (Gaumont), August 20.—A picture of French people of culture and means; it aims at pathos and has much to commend it. The thread of the story is kept clear. A widower has fallen in love with a pretty woman—the leaders refer to her as an actress; but she might have been just a woman, any woman. The widower's very little daughter for whom he has a tender affection, is afflicted with eye trouble. At first he keeps his new secret from her; but after an operation has relieved her eyes, he introduces her to her new mother-to-be. The child rebels. They find that her eyes are growing bad again. The doctor says it's the salt of the tears. To save the child's sight, the actress makes "the supreme sacrifice." It is a very pretty, poetic picture to which careful management and good acting give much human atmosphere. It is effective as all its minor good qualities can possibly make it; but it doesn't convince us enough to get really across into emotion. We fail to believe it and fail to get the poignant impression that we should get. The photography is of course perfect.

"THE STORY OF CHOPIN" (Gaumont), August 27.—A very effective and very artistic and imaginative picture, partly hand colored, of the most romantic part of a very romantic life—that of the great poet-musician, Chopin. It is not, taken as a whole, a dramatic picture; it was not intended to be. Each of its scenes, however, is like a great picture and they are all very dramatic, get over very strongly into our feelings. The result is extremely pleasing; we can safely commend it for all classes of audiences.

Chopin came in the midst of the great romantic movement of letters of which he, with George Sand and Alfred de Musset, was among the best known exponents. Extraordinary interest has attached itself to this group. The producer has been very happy indeed in catching for us the very atmosphere in which these people seemed to live. Description of any of these scenes would necessarily be inadequate. They are all good.

There is one reflection that we would like to make. Ghosts very seldom get over effectively. There is one ghost scene in this picture. We feel that if these ghostly monks hadn't acted as much as though they were alive, the scene would have been better. If they hadn't come from the distance and disappeared in the distance; but had appeared walking as at present, but already close at hand, and had been permitted to be seen only for one or two steps, they would have been more ghostly.

KINEMACOLOR AMERICAN HEADQUARTERS.

A hurried visit to the offices of the Kinemacolor Company of America, in the Mecca Building, Broadway and 48th St., N. Y., last week, was somewhat of a surprise. One entire floor is required at the present time and ample foundation is evidently being laid to handle an extensive business. With expert cameramen throughout the world, the parent English company has been gathering a wonderful collection of their well-known color films, but the different Kinemacolor companies of America, Australia, France and other countries expect to add to this production shortly.

A few of the more recent samples of the work of their cameramen were being shown in the handsome exhibition room. A snake being done to death by water beetles was a particularly realistic example of absolutely accurate photographic reproduction, the dull snake colors and the shades of color of the beetles giving a lifelike appearance that made one shudder. A bathing scene at a Southern resort gave another good opportunity of showing the possibilities of color photography. The green rolling surf seemed so much more inviting. It was in the pictures of opening buds of roses, tulips and several other flowers that the possibilities of Kinemacolor most clearly stood out, however, and the flowers were transformed into living things on the screen.

Whether the process will be equally successful in the usual dramatic and comedy reproductions will, we understand, shortly be demonstrated. A producer and company is now at work here and expect to work on the Pacific Coast this winter.

IMPROVEMENTS AT UNIVERSAL BISON PLANT.

Mr. Wm. H. Swanson, secretary of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has during the last month been busily engaged in reorganizing the California plants of the Universal Company. The chiefest of his tasks is that of purchasing more equipment for the purpose of making Bison pictures better than they have hitherto been made. The Bison picture as is well known has dealt with stories which involve the employment of large numbers of Indians, soldiers, cowboys and the denizens of the West, handled by skillful directors, such as Mr. F. E. Montgomery, whose reputation has been made through the Bison pictures. Mr. Swanson's work is nearly completed and the new Bison pictures will shortly be seen on the screen.

Mr. Montgomery is the director-in-chief of the new productions, and many capable actors and actresses familiar with this class of work have been engaged. The engagement of the Indians was made with the co-operation of the United States government. In addition to this, Mr. Swanson has secured the photographic rights to a thousand acres adjoining Griffith Park, where most of the big spectacular pictures will be made.

NEW THEATER FOR SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

On the site of the present Bijou Theater and the Brunswick bowling alleys in Springfield, Mass., a beautiful theater of old Spanish design and having a seating capacity of 3,000 will soon be erected. The new house will be fireproof, constructed of brick and cement, and modern in every way. Mr. Edward L. Knight is the prime mover in the enterprise, and associated with him are Messrs. George Hanscomb and Daniel E. Burbank, all three of whom comprise the Bijou Amusement Company, which has been doing an exhibition business since 1907, their first house having a capacity of 225. The amount of the investment is not given, but is known to be large. The new Bijou is expected to be ready for occupancy by Nov. 1.

THE GAMBLING PICTURE.

Mr. William M. Wilson, representing the big three-reel reform picture, "The Evil Art, or Gambling Exposed," was a visitor at our New York office during the week and reports many inquiries regarding this remarkable feature. Readers will remember a full review of this picture appeared in our issue of August 10th.

Subscribers: Kindly renew your subscriptions promptly. This will save us considerable work and give us more time to make a better paper, if that is possible. If your subscription to the MOVING PICTURE WORLD has expired, send in your renewal to-day. Co-operation spells your success and ours. Domestic, $3.00; Canada, $3.50; Foreign, $4.00.

MELIES GLOBE TROTTERS REACH TAHITI ISLANDS.

By Hanford C. Judson.

MR. GASTON MELIES, who is seeking the unusual and as yet unpictured local color of the South Pacific, has with Mrs. Melies and his company, reached his first stopping place at Papette on the Island of Tahiti, one of the Society Islands, known once as the Sandwich Islands. What a golden mine of romance is waiting for this adventurous picture maker! It was in this neighborhood that Robert Louis Stevenson lived for so long and where so many of his best romances were written. It has been said that here is romance's last great stronghold and that it can be found nowhere else on earth as here. There are stories like fairy tales of strange gods and of magic, and there are stories of beautiful Polynesian princesses (they usually have a hibiscus flower in their hair) who swim like mermaids. There are also stories, quite historical, of great warriors and heroic deeds of valor, of gun-runners, of diplomatic intrigues, of treasure hunters, and no one before this has been on the spot nor dared to make pictures of island life; because they lacked the local color. Mr. Melies has had the boldness and is likely to reap the rich harvest that is waiting for him.

Of course, to take a large party (there are sixteen players and operators) on so long a trip is a very expensive undertaking. They intend to take pictures in many parts of New Zealand after leaving the South Sea Islands, and before they return they will have crossed Australia and taken pictures in Java, where the life and customs are radically different, in India and elsewhere. The pictures that Mr. Melies intends to produce will include dramas and comedies as well as educational films. A taste of the life of these strange lands will be in the dramas and in them will probably be shown the life and experiences of white settlers with natives around them. The educational films will be of great value. The purely native life in many of these out-of-the-way corners of the world is fast changing into a hybrid life. To catch what may still be found of ceremonies and customs of the simple South Sea Islanders is as worthy a work as can be found for a motion picture camera. We have no doubt that it will repay Mr. Melies many times over, although he expects that the trip will cost something like $200,000.

These pictures that he will take, in all probability, rise above an unfortunate condition of the picture market that producers have found it hard to contend with. This difficulty is the purely local popularity that certain types of pictures have found. It is, perhaps, more noticeable in the type of picture called "Western," the picture exploiting cowboy and Indian life. These are very popular in the South; but are not very acceptable to spectators in the Northwest nor on the coast. The picture of any kind that will be liked abroad is seldom the best kind of picture for American audiences. But pictures of life in the South Seas, of life in New Zealand, of life in the Dutch provinces, of Java, of India and Ceylon, etc., will have so great an interest that they will find no hindrance in local requirements, but will appeal as strongly to Americans as to Europeans; they will also appeal to the cultured and the unlearned, for both will find entertainment and the best instruction in them. Things that are new and strange, yet true, are greatly desired. If such are not to be found in the South Sea Islands and in Java, where on this earth, except in Thibet, will they be found? We are looking forward with the greatest eagerness to the releases that the travelers will send back, like letters home, to us. Perhaps the first, which will be sent from Tahiti, will be released late in September.

The purely educational films will be made by George Scott, who has managed the Melies factory for many years. He will travel much alone, taking with him only a carrier to help with the apparatus, and may make adventurous excursions "into the interior" for special films. We hope he will be adventurous, yet not too adventurous. It would be too bad to lose one's life for a picture. Then, also, some good films may be lost, if a head-hunter chief should become very much irritated, for instance.

The dramatic stories will be prepared by Edmund Mitchell, about whom "Who's who" has a long paragraph. Mr. Mitchell is a much-traveled man and has written a shelf full of novels, as well as guide books, etc., to parts of India. He is thoroughly familiar with the islands in the South Sea and with Australasia, and has written many able articles about them. Among his novels are "The Temple of Death," a story of Bombay and Central India, and "The Lone Star Rush," a story of western Australia. These, with many other works of fiction by this author, have, according to competent critics, strong plots and vivid local color. Mr. Mitchell's presence with the company promises stories that will be very well worth while.

Besides these two men the full troupe consists of Bertram Bracken, the director; Hugh McClung, dramatic operator; Gustave Henschen, photographic operator; Samuel Wiel, stage manager; John Ortega, master of transportation; Henry Stanley, characters; Wm. Ehfe, juvenile lead; Ray Gallagher, heavy; Leo Pierson, juvenile; Miss Mildred Bracken, juvenile lead; Miss Fanny Midgley, character; and Miss Betty Tracy, ingenue. The photograph printed herewith shows the party on the ship Manuka, just before sailing.

FIRST ROW—Miss Betty Tracey, Igenue; Mrs. Gaston Melies, Mr. Gaston Melies, Miss Mildred Bracken, Juvenile Lead; Mr. Hugh McClung, Dramatic Operator; Mr. Bertram Bracken, Director; Miss Fannie Midgley, Character; Mr. Henry Stanley, Characters.

SECOND ROW—Mr. Leo Pierson, Juvenile; Mr. Edmund Mitchell, Scenario Editor; Mr. Samuel Weil, Stage Manager and Character; Mr. William Ehfe, Juvenile Leads; Mr. Gustave Henschen, Photographic Operator; Mr. John Ortega, Master of Transportation and Utility.

MISSING—Mr. Ray Gallagher, Heavy; Mr. George Scott.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

MR. G. M. ANDERSON AT SAN FRANCISCO.

The Princess and Globe theaters, of San Francisco, recently provided a star attraction that drew riotously enthusiastic crowds to those houses to see and hear in person Mr. G. M. Anderson, the universally known member of the Essanay firm, who is renowned for his characterization of "Broncho Billy."

The illustration herewith shows Mr. Anderson addressing the great crowd that had gathered to welcome him at the Princess Theater. Back of him on the stage is part of the overflow that could not find seats or standing room elsewhere in the hall. Mr. Anderson as a drawing card broke all previous attendance records at both houses.

MOTION PICTURES IN A FROHMAN HOUSE.

Little by little the citadel of the "high and mighty" legitimate stage is crumbling beneath the healthy advance of the pictures that do move. "Everything comes to him that waits" is a beautiful phrase after the waiting is over and everything is coming up the street of the fellow who waited. Pioneer picture men who had faith enough in their business to wait were not overly surprised when the movies got into some of the Broadway houses, but they have always had a curious interest in the apparently hostile attitude of the astute "Charles" toward what many supposedly wise theatrical managers once considered a "passing fancy." The aforesaid pioneers may exult a little when they learn that Charles has taken the "step." He isn't in the game enough to hurt as vet, but he has one foot in the water after being told for years to come on in, because the water is fine.

Mr. Frohman's first open excursion into the motion picture field is by the use of a reel of Kinemacolor film introduced in the production of "The Girl from Montmartre," with Richard Carle and Hattie Williams, at the Criterion Theater, New York, where it is being used at the present time. The true-to-nature colored picture came as a surprise, and it was quick to get an enthusiastic reception.

Miss Williams exclaims, "Anyone who loves me can try to find me," and runs off the stage. The lights go out, and the moving pictures continued the story. She is pursued through the woods; Miss Williams and Mr. Carle enact a comedy scene, and finally she is overtaken by the tenor. As the tenor begins his song, the picture disappears, lights are on, and there they are in the woods just as Kinemacolor had left them.

In an interview just before the production of the play, Mr. Frohman said he had "discovered something new under the sun." That being the case, he may become known some day as the Christopher Columbus of the photodrama.

"THE DISPUTED CLAIM" (Majestic).

A Majestic "Western" is something that we do not remember having seen before. Heretofore that company has confined its efforts to comedy and comedy drama on the society order. This Western subject has a freshness about it that is difficult to describe. It is not a cowboy picture, but a tale of the gold camps with rugged types of men. The stranger and the miner's daughter are respectively portrayed by Herbert Prior and Mabel Trunnelle, which in itself is a guarantee of excellent acting.

A strange prospector passes a gold seeker's cabin and pauses to ask a drink of water from the hand of the daughter of the occupant. There ensues a little flirtation and some evidences of mutual admiration are noticeable as the stranger goes on his way. In a lonely part of the wood he sets his bear trap and begins to look around for gold. A day or so after, while working near the miner's cabin, the stranger hears screams and hastens there in time to rescue the lone girl from the clutches of a savage half-breed by knocking the fellow sprawling. The wretch slinks away snarling with hate, intent upon revenge. The stranger and the girl's father have been working on the same lode for some time without either one being aware of the other's presence. The men both strike gold the same day and they meet when they select the same tree as a place to hang their claim markers. There is a dispute, during which the girl's father gets the drop on the stranger and binds him to a tree with a rope. He then hastens to record the claim, but gets only a few steps away when he is caught in the stranger's bear-trap. While the two men struggle helplessly there, unable to help themselves or each other, the skulking half-breed comes upon the scene and sees his opportunity to get revenge on the stranger. He builds a fire at the man's feet to burn him alive, but a heavy club well thrown by the girl's father in the bear-trap fells the half-breed and the stranger gets his dirk-knife as he falls. Cutting himself loose the stranger is about to start away to record his claim when he remembers that the other man has saved his life. The two then cease to be enemies and become partners. The stranger makes his abode with his partner, where it is evident that he will soon take as a life partner the pretty daughter of his pard.

Scene from "The Disputed Claim" (Majestic).

The story is clearly told and well photographed. It is also logical and the scenes are well selected. A very natural and pleasing picture.

"THE MUSKETEER'S LOVE" (C. G. P. C. Colored).

One more romance has been built around the personality of Cardinal Richelieu, the famous ecclesiastic of the seventeenth century, and it is shown with characteristic exactness in a C. G. P. C. colored film, entitled "The Musketeer's Love."

Among the enemies of the powerful prelate is the Queen's confidant, the Duchess de Chevreuse, who promises the Count de Chalais that she will wed him when he accomplishes the death of the Cardinal. The Duchess, however, has made a bitter enemy of the Count de Louvigny by spurning his suit. Learning that de Chalais has agreed to carry out the plot against the Cardinal's life, de Louvigny sees an opportunity for vengeance and promptly turns informer. De Chalais, in consequence, is arrested and condemned to die.

The Duchess pleads with her friend, the Queen, to have the sentence commuted, and she does so, but the King refuses to extend royal clemency. The Duchess is heartbroken because of the failure of her scheme, and, goaded to desperation by the taunts and jeers of de Louvigny, she turns upon him and plunges a dagger into his breast until he dies. then buries the dirk in her own heart. This powerful drama, with its harmonious coloring, will be released on August 30th.

"A PRINCE OF ISRAEL" (C. G. P. C. Colored).

The story of Absalom which the Bible tells in the Second Book of Samuel is re-enacted in a C. G. P. C. colored film in a manner consistent with the high standard which has been raised by this firm. The film will be released on August 27th.

Scene from "A Prince of Israel" (C. G. P. C.).

Absalom, the son of David, is ambitious to be king and inflames the minds of the people against the rule of his father. He rides throughout Israel delivering honeyed speeches and making extravagant promises to the multitude, asking their co-operation in a war he is to wage against his father. He soon has a large following of malcontents and marches forth with them to destroy the army of the House of David. The two forces meet in the woods of Ephraim and a fierce battle ensues. Men fall right and left in the wild and bitter struggle, but David's army soon demonstrates its superiority and the horde of insurgents are utterly routed. Absalom is forced to flee, but in riding for safety his long hair becomes entangled in the bough of a tree. He is swung from his mount and hangs from the branch until he dies.

There are numerous ensembles affording opportunities for beautiful scenic coloring, among them the elaborate battle scene, requiring the services of over three thousand players.

KING BAGGOT AS AUTHOR-ACTOR.

King Baggot, leading man for so many weeks with the Imp Films Company, is making quite as enviable a name for himself as an author as he has as a photo-player. Of late he has written many of the plays which have been produced by the Imp Company, among the more recent being "The Breakdown." "His Other Self" and "In Old Tennessee," he having collaborated with William Robert Daly, of the same company, in these. He has several more in process of writing and, judging by the two mentioned, these should prove most interesting. It was recently rumored that Mr. Baggot was to leave the Imp Company, but from reliable sources it seems to have proven false, for he is as loyal to Mr. Laemmle as ever, and his enviable success with the company would hardly warrant their losing his services.

A ROMANCE AT CATALINA (Melies).

Santa Catalina, just off the coast of Southern California, is noted for its glorious scenery, not so grand as graceful. We have seen many pictures of the island; but although we have noted many lovely hillsides and valleys, no views of the place have impressed us as extraordinary. For the chief beauty of Catalina, we are told, lies in its atmosphere and in the marvelous waters that surround it. This little romance by the Melies Company, a release for August 15, has some glimpses of the place that are very lovely. It gives us the impression in seeing it that we know what Catalina is like more than from any other picture that has been released. It uses the waters and especially the island's gem-like harbor for its backgrounds rather than the somewhat barren hillsides. There are glimpses of the pebbly shore and glimpses of the docks; but even in these scenes the ocean or bay serves as the real background. Most of the action takes place out on the bay. It is a story of fishing folk, with a few visitors (like the clergyman who marries the happy heroine to her manly lover) in minor parts.

Scene from "A Romance at Catalina" (Melies).

The story is very melodramatic and the plot conventional; in fact, as in many other very successful pictures, it serves merely as a formula by means of which good players represent human emotions to us, waking our sympathies and pleasing us by their showing of sentiment and romance, poetic things, things that make life worth living. In doing this the Melies Company's ingenue has been very successful. The hero is played by a man who also is a very good actor, and whose remarkable handling of his speedy power boat adds much to the picture's undeniable charm. It is a good offering, one that will please every spectator whose heart is still young and who still believes in the right of true love to be happy.

As the picture opens we are introduced to the heroine and to her father, who wants her to marry a rich yachtsman. Next, in overalls, we see a fine young boatman, not poor except by comparison, for he owns a dandy boat that obeys him as though it were alive. This man is plainly the honest choice of the girl. Her father is insulting to him. He takes the rebuff with unexpected naturalness. The yachtsman sees himself losing in the game and attempts to force the girl to accept him. She flees from him in a boat, but is overtaken by his yacht and made a prisoner. The girl's escape is the only unconvincing moment in this well-acted production. At this moment, the illusion is as thin as can be; but the excellent conduct of the rest of it makes up for this. The attention, though hindered for one moment, is quickly recaptured and he'd to the happy end of the story. There are few pictures indeed without some fault. Among other films this measures up very well indeed. We can safely commend it as good entertainment.

HALLBERG EQUIPS NEW 116TH STREET THEATER.

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," is furnishing a Power's No. 6 moving picture machine, together with spotlight, stage lighting apparatus and all supplies, flame arc lamps and ticket chopper for the new theater on 116th Street, to be opened shortly by the Laurel Amusement Company. Mr. Hallberg also reports the sale of a Power's No. 6A to J. C. Davis, Orpheum Theater, Saugerties, N. Y.

WESTERN OPERATIONS OF THE NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE COMPANY.

Considerable interest has been manifested in the spectacular western pictures produced by the New York Motion Picture Company. The encampment is situated at Ynez Canyon, close to Santa Monica, and twenty-five miles from the city of Los Angeles. It is a series of mountains, chasms and canyons. The scenery is wild and picturesque, and the shrubbery conceals many wild animals.

The scarcity of water in the summer has hitherto proved a serious drawback in the production work, and the passing of spring usually marked the exodus of moving picture outfits from the Golden State. This difficulty has been overcome by the New York Motion Picture Company by constructing a water works with large capacity which is connected with the ocean, a thousand feet away, and in this manner lake and river beds which have dried up with the passing of the winter snows are brought to life again.

Dams have been constructed, and the water is pumped above the dry river bed. When wanted, the water is released and comes rushing along while the picture is being taken. The water is also of great assistance in keeping down the dust when scores of horses gallop along. A sprinkling system has been installed for this purpose. The cowboys, soldiers and Indians live entirely at the camp in tents and cabins. Many of these structures are used in the pictures. The nearest street car line is two miles away, at Venice, and a coach carries the actors to and from the grounds. The leading people, living in Los Angeles, are carried in a large automobile.

The Indians seen in the pictures have been secured from the Pine Ridge agency in North Dakota. They are selected for their physical development, and are splendid types of the fast vanishing race. They plunge into the picture-making with a seriousness that is at times uncomfortable, and they have to be under careful watch at all times. They resent bitterly playing in a battle scene in which they are defeated, and it sometimes requires considerable cajolery to induce them to take certain parts which they do not like. One of the white actors was badly injured by the redskins, who made a too realistic job of attacking him with clubs and tomahawks, and now Director Ince has all their weapons padded. Constant vigilance must be exerted to prevent their securing ball cartridges, as they would undoubtedly use them in battle scenes, and it would be impossible to locate the offender. When battles are taken the squaws watch the scene from a mountain top, and work themselves into a frenzy, swaying their bodies and shouting imprecations.

Group of Sioux Indians Appearing in "101"-Bison Pictures.

Lunch Time in the "101"-Bison Camp at Santa Monica, California.

"DOLLS" (Eclair).

In Eclair's release for August 27th, they have taken a simple of simplest themes and worked it into a most touching wholesome appeal to every spectator's heart. While open to trivial criticism it still remains what should prove a successful release.

There is nothing quite so touching, quite so deep and tenderly compelling, as that first spark of maternal yearning, that first stirring of love, which a child uncovers in her affection for her dolls.

Nellie Simpson, an orphan girl, just coming into young womanhood, has been taken into the home of Dr. Day, who admires and cares for her as though she were his own. Frequently he takes Nellie with him on his visits to his sick.

One day, as they are both in attendance at the bedside of a child of humble parents, Nellie idly chances to pick up a bit of torn cloth from the bed and fashions it into a crude doll. The child is delighted with it, which so touches the kind old Doctor Day, that he quietly asks Nellie if she will dress a doll if he will buy it for her child. Nellie joyfully agrees, the doll is purchased and Nellie dresses it.

Scene from "Dolls" (Eclair).

They are on their way to deliver it to the little sick child when they chance to meet a certain rich man who is a widower with a child of five. He notices Nellie with the doll, hears the story of why she has it and asks her if she would come to his home and redress the dolls of his own motherless child.

Nellie consents, with the result of a love affair and a promise to become wife and mother to his child.

ESSANAY FILMS BIG CHICAGO WATER CARNIVAL.

The great Water Carnival and Naval Review, held off Grant Park, in Lake Michigan, August 10th to 17th, has been filmed by the Essanay Company, who obtained the exclusive rights to picture the pageant, which is said to have cost over $75,000, and has been in preparation since midwinter, rivaling in beauty the Mardi Gras of New Orleans, the Rose Carnival of Portland and the Blossom Festival of the Santa Clara Valley, California. In a small fleet of the swiftest craft obtainable the Essanay photographers followed the splendid program throughout the week, and obtained wonderful scenes of the power-boat championship races, the international yacht races, Lipton cup race, United States life-saving service exhibitions, swimming and diving championships, water polo, aquatic gymnasia, naval reviews, sham naval battles, submarine boat demonstrations and the exhibitions by the United States sailors, marine corps, revenue-cutter service, naval reserves and cadets from the training stations along the great lakes. From the many thousand feet of film taken, the Essanay Company has selected a full reel that teems with spectacular features covering the entire pageant and will release it during the first two weeks in September. This great marine production is unquestionably one of the finest features ever booked and, because of its international interest, should prove a live wire to exhibitors the world over.

"Across the Broad Pacific" and "China and the Chinese" are the titles of two beautiful scenic films the Essanay Company have booked for release during the first two weeks in September. The former is a trip to Japan, the flowery kingdom, and the latter is an intimate view of the new Chinese republic. Both productions are replete with the wonders of the Far East, and the spectator is transported across the sea, acquainted with the cities of Yokohama, Tokio, Kobe, Manila, Hongkong, Shanghai and Canton, conveyed in junks up the Yangtse, Wangpoo and Pasig rivers, shown the formidable array of warships always on hand, representative of the world's great powers; views the customs, agriculture, pastimes and occupations of the natives, and, in short, becomes a living, breathing part of a life going on thousands of miles across the continent caught by the Essanay cameras. The films are exquisitely photographed and have been richly toned.

A STUBBORN CUPID (Nestor).

No reviewer of films can please all spectators on all the pictures. On really good productions, especially on those that like the Nestor picture with the above title, for release August 23rd, have true and unforced comedy, the vast majority will accept his praise of them. Few pictures are so poor that no one will like them. When one considers all things, this is surprising; but the present writer believes it true. A critic's worst trouble comes from his having to account for a definite class of picture, and nearly all of them fall into this, in which there are, mixed with marked shortcomings, real dramatic power, true humor and good characterization. Some readers complain bitterly because faults that are plain to everybody are not pointed out in a review. The fact that a picture gives good entertainment seems to a large number sufficient; they don't like to have small faults pointed out.

Scene from "A Stubborn Cupid" (Nestor).

In this clever picture there are no glaring shortcomings; it is above the average in merit. It is not a picture of life; it stands on humor and makes fun. This kind of picture, the farce-comedy, when poorly done seems silly and is, in fact, the very bane of the picture business. They are like bad pennies; they go because they look like something that is good. This is a good film, no counterfeit, but real coin of the realm. Good coins differ in their value. We don't dare call this a double eagle (we don't know that we have ever seen one), but it certainly is a good, honest dollar—a picture that is fresh and amusing. It will make laughter and spectators will tell the story at home, perhaps, and people will laugh who have never seen it.

The "stubborn cupid" is a foal of a white donkey. It was bought by a cowboy for his ranch-girl sweetheart who wanted one. The picture's first laugh comes when he tries to lead this cupid. He has two rivals for the girl's affections. They leave him still trying. The producer now shows us what the other two did in their efforts to win the girl and interrupts his narrative to give other glimpses of the man who still is trying until he finally gives the job up. What the two accomplished in their efforts is also amusing and goes very well with the rest of the picture; but the best fun comes from that little white donkey. He gives its title to the film and is its true center of interest.

"THE BANDIT OF POINT LOMA" (American).

For the first time, the Pacific Ocean is used in "Flying A" pictures, notwithstanding the fact that the Pacific has been close at hand ever since the American Film Mfg. Co. established its first Western headquarters at La Mesa.

"The Bandit of Pt. Loma" is the title and the unusual subject calls for a pleasing combination of the plains and its cowboys and the Great Pacific and its people.

Scene from "The Bandit of Point Loma" (American).

A bandit reached the little coast town of Point Loma, and, introducing himself as a secret service man, secures lodgings with the light-house keeper and his daughter. Ralph Walthers, the girl's sweetheart, does not like the new-born love seen in his sweetheart's eyes for the stranger. He plots to vanquish the stranger but does not take into account the clever sheriff who pickets his horse and proceeds to make trouble for the bandit. That sheriff proves himself a hero in a number of instances, and, incidentally re-unites the couple after the capture of the bandit.

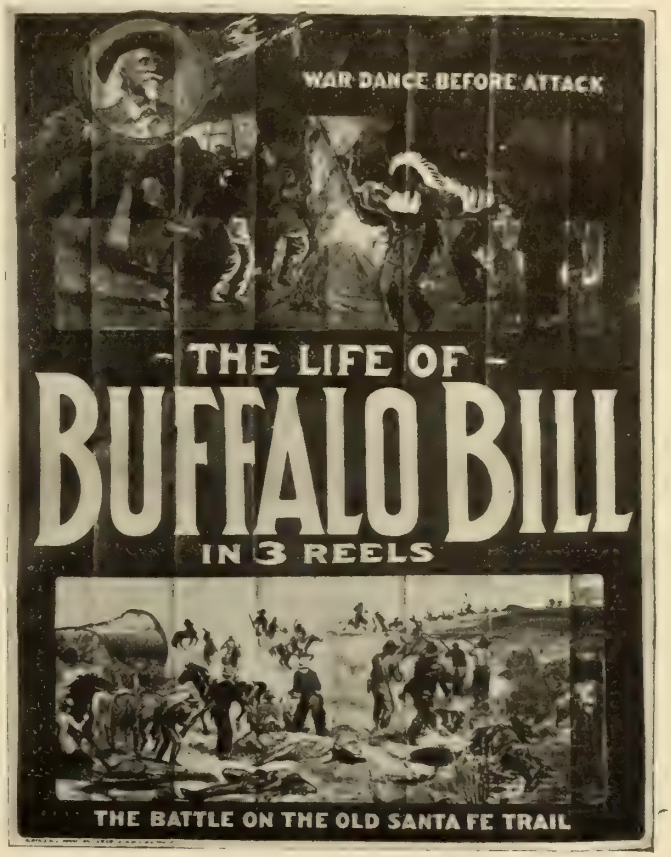
The story is cleverly told, the ocean-land combination a pretty one for the many "Flying A" fans who have been accustomed to the ranch corral and the prairie.

GILLIGHAM & SMITH BUY ANOTHER THEATER.

The Temple Theater, Grand Rapids, Mich., has passed from the management of the Miles Circuit into the control of the well-known Detroit firm of Gilligham & Smith, by purchase, although the purchase price is not given. It is understood that the new owners will change the name to the "Columbia" as soon as the house is remodeled and redecorated. There will be new seats, front lights, scenery, etcetera. The acquirement of the "Temple" places Gilligham & Smith in control of all Grand Rapids theaters using the Licensed service. Vaudeville will be given at the Columbia, with pictures, according to the G. & S. policy.

POSTERS FOR FEATURE FILMS.

Attractive posters have long played the most important part in the proper presentation of feature films. Often companies putting a feature on the market or releasing a feature film, overlook this important part of the business. Instead of making posters of every size depicting many of the important scenes, they have a one and three-sheet posters made for their production, which results in dissatisfaction among the exhibitors. This compels them to buy left-over paper of "melodramatic" days.



Eight-Sheet Poster for "The Life of Buffalo Bill."

To prevent this shortage of paper, the Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill Film Company, of 145 West 45th Street, New York City, have provided a full variety of posters for the proper presentation of their great Western three-reel subject, "The Life of Buffalo Bill." Space prevents us from illustrating all the varieties of paper they have for their feature film. The accompanying cut illustrates one of their 8-sheet posters.

Can you afford to do without the Moving Picture World? 100 pages, up-to-the-minute. Domestic, $3.00. Canada, $3.50. Foreign, $4.00.

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

Current Releases

MONDAY, AUGUST 19th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—With the Enemy's Help (Drama).....1000
KALEM—The Daughter of the Sheriff (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—The Hobo Club (Comedy).....
LUBIN—Won at High Tide (Comedy).....
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 34, 1912 (Topical).....1000
SELIG—The Box Car Baby.....1000
VITAGRAPH—Rip Van Winkle (Special, 2-reel Drama)2000
VITAGRAPH—Her Grandchild (Drama).....1000

TUESDAY, AUGUST 20th, 1912.

EDISON—The Street Beautiful (Edu. and Dr.).....1000
ESSANAY—The Return of Becky (Drama).....1000
CINES—A Matter of Pride (Drama).....1000
C. G. P. C.—His Windmill (Drama).....
C. G. P. C.—The Sedge Warbler and the Cuckoo (Edu.)...
SELIG—The Cowboy's Mother.....
VITAGRAPH—Lovesick Maidens of Cuddletown (Com.)..1000

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 21st, 1912.

EDISON—Mr. Pickwick's Predicament (Comedy).....1000
ECLIPSE—A Day in the German Navy (Naval)..... 425
ECLIPSE—Pulp Mills in the Province of Quebec (Ind.).. 310
ECLIPSE—Microscopical Curiosities (Edu.)..... 280
KALEM—The Frenzy of Fire-Water (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—The Convalescent (Drama).....1000
PATHE—Jealousy on the Ranch (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—The Ancient Bow (Drama).....1000

THURSDAY, AUGUST 22nd, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—A Change of Spirit (Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—A Corner in Whiskers (Comedy).....1000
LUBIN—The New Ranch Foreman (Drama).....1000
MELIES—The Moth and the Flame (Drama).....1000
PATHE—The Hand of Destiny (Drama).....1000
SELIG—Betty Fools Dear Old Dad (Comedy) .....

FRIDAY, AUGUST 23rd, 1912.

C. G. P. C.—The Queen's Pity (Drama).....1000
EDISON—The Cub Reporter (Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—Her Adopted Father (Drama).....1000
KALEM—The Beauty Parlor of Stone Gulch (Comedy)...1000
LUBIN—Work in a United States Arsenal (Edu.).....
LUBIN—A Water Fight (Comedy).....
SELIG—Land Sharks vs. Sea Dogs (Com.-Dr.) .....
SELIG—From Forest to Mills (Edu.).....
VITAGRAPH—Saving an Audience (Comedy).....1000

SATURDAY, AUGUST 24th, 1912.

EDISON—The War on the Mosquito (Edu.).....1000
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Escapade (Drama).....1000
CINES—A Picture, C. O. D. (Comedy)..... 470
CINES—Jenkins, the Watchman (Comedy)..... 250
CINES—Modern Naples (Scenic)..... 305
KALEM—Rube Marquard Wins (Drama) 1323
LUBIN—The Government Test (Drama).....1000
PATHE—The $2,500 Bride (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—The Party Dress (Drama)..... 614
VITAGRAPH—On Board Kaiser Wilhelm the Second (Edu.) 388

Advance Releases

MONDAY, AUGUST 26th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—Mr. Grouch at the Seashore (Farce-Com.)
BIOGRAPH—Through Dumb Luck (Farce-Comedy)..
KALEM—The Little Wanderer (Drama.....
LUBIN—The Deceivers (Comedy-Drama) 1062
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 35—1912 (Topical).....
PATHE—Fire at Sea (Special release, Drama).....
SELIG—The Laird's Daughter (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—A Double Danger (Drama).....1000

TUESDAY, AUGUST 27th, 1912.

EDISON—Alone in New York (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—Alkali Ike Plays the Devil (West.-Com.)...1000
CINES—The Bride of Lammermoor (Drama).....1000
C. G. P. C.—A Prince of Israel (Biblical Drama).....1000
SELIG—The Whiskey Runners (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Flirt or Heroine (Drama).....1000

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 28th, 1912.

EDISON—Helping John (Comedy-Drama) 1000
ECLIPSE—The Golden Curl (Drama).....1030
KALEM—The Woman Hater (Comedy).....
KALEM—Palestine (Educational) .....
LUBIN—The Caretaker (Comedy) .....
LUBIN—A Burnt Cork (Comedy).....
PATHE—The Live Wire (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Two Cinders (Comedy-Drama)..... 555
VITAGRAPH—Bumps (Comedy) 447

THURSDAY, AUGUST 29th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—A Pueblo Legend (Drama).....
ESSANAY—Three to One (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—For the Love of a Girl (Drama).....1000
MELIES—His Partner's Share (Drama).....1000
PATHE—The Detective's Desperate Chance (Drama).. 650
PATHE—The Armless Wonder (Acrobatic)..... 350
SELIG—The Little Indian Martyr (Drama).....1000

FRIDAY, AUGUST 30th, 1912.

C. G. P. C.—The Musketeer's Love (Hist.-Drama).....1000
EDISON—The Boy and the Girl (Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—The Hermit (Comedy-Drama) 1000
KALEM—Jim Bludso (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—Pinned (Comedy) .....
LUBIN—The Overworked Bookkeeper (Comedy).....
SELIG—Just His Luck (Farce Comedy).....
SELIG—Frenzied Finance (Western Comedy).....
VITAGRAPH—Written in the Sands (Drama).....1000

SATURDAY, AUGUST 31st, 1912.

EDISON—Simla (Scenic) 1000
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy for Sheriff (Drama).....1000
CINES—Richard the Lion-Hearted (Drama).....1070
KALEM—Saved from Court-Martial (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—The Sheriff's Prisoner (Drama).....1000
PATHE—An Aeroplane Love Affair (Comedy).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Bond of Music (Drama).....1000

"IF IT'S ANYTHING TO ADVERTISE A PICTURE THEATRE, WE HAVE IT"

Association Posters, 15c for one-sheets; 35c for three-sheets; 70c for six-sheets. Hennegan's Stock Posters, 10c for 1-sheets (12 for $1.00); 5c for ½-sheets (24 for $1.00); 25c for 3-sheets (5 for $1.00). Photoplayers, one-sheet Posters, 10 for $1.50, postage prepaid. Photos (11 x 14); 12 for $2.00, postage prepaid. Post-Cards, $4.00 per 1,000. Snipes (about 50 different sayings), 60c per 100 for 7 x 29; 35c per 100 for 5 x 21; $1.00 per 100 for 9½ x 42. Poster Frames, 15c each, or 10 for $1.00. Six different kinds, assorted, postage prepaid. Printing, Handbills, 6 x 9, $1.00 per 1,000, and 9 x 12, $1.25 per 1,000 in 2,000 lots at least.

TERMS CASH WITH ORDER

EXHIBITORS ADVERTISING & SPECIALTY CO.
30 UNION SQUARE, - - NEW YORK

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE, ETC.

SONG SLIDE RELEASES.

Scott & Van Altena.

"I'm Awfully Glad That I'm a Boy"—Weyman.
"Summer With Its Roses Comes Again"—Forster Music Company.
"Wonder Where My Old Girl Is To-Night"—Leo Wood.
"Harvest Days Are Coming, Jennie"—Stern.
"I'll Be Welcome In My Home Town"—Tracy.
"Somebody Else Is Getting It"—H. Von Tilzer Company.
"Oh, You Baby Face"—H. A. Wayman.
"Tell Me That You Love Me"—Harold Rossiter.

A. L. Simpson.

"Do You Regret the Days Gone By"—Pub. by F. B. Haviland Pub. Co.
"My Girl of the Golden Days"—Pub. by J. H. Aufderheide, Indianapolis, Ind.
"When I'm Away"—Pub. by Robert B. Thompson, Chicago.
"Just a Twig From the True Lover's Tree"—Pub. by J. Fred Helf, New York.

A. J. Clapham.

"The Rosenthal Case."
"The Olympic Games."

WOLGAST BOXES KANGAROO FOR SELIG.

A novelty reel soon to be released by the Selig Polyscope Co. is a visit of Ad. Wolgast, the lightweight champion pugilist, to the Selig wild animal farm at Los Angeles. The fighter is to be seen making the rounds of the cages and corrals, fondling the lion and tiger cubs. He is presented with a young alligator and inspects the bears, hyenas, elephants and other creatures. The feature of the picture is a boxing match between Wolgast and "Charlie," the big Australian boxing kangaroo. The pugilist is attired in ring costume and the affair takes place in a regulation roped arena. The contest is a lively one in which at one part the kangaroo sends Wolgast through the ropes with a well-directed blow. We should like to apprise the reader of the title of the picture, but the information was not vouchsafed.

EXHIBITORS!!!
We will make any LOCAL PICTURE to order, 10c per foot.
FILM TITLES
and Announcements, any length, 3 ft. for 25c.
GUNBY BROS., INC., 199 Third Ave., New York

EXHIBITORS
SELECT YOUR PROGRAM IN THE
OPEN MARKET
Book with the house of Variety. Elaborate Advertising Matter.
2 and 3 Reel Features of all makes and descriptions for rent.
SPECIAL FILM CO., Ltd.
5 West 14th Street, New York

SOMETHING NEW
THE UNBREAKABLE AND WASHABLE E-Z BLANK MICA SLIDE
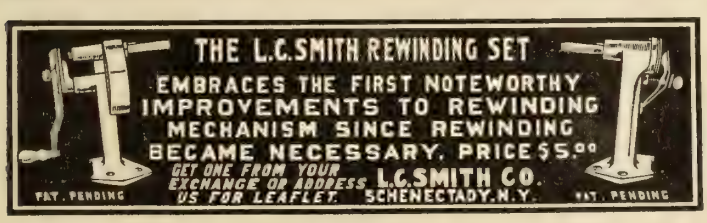
MAKE YOUR OWN ANNOUNCEMENTS
Made of Specially Prepared Mica That Can be Written on as Easily as Paper
PRICE 25 CENTS EACH!
BATTERSHALL & OLESON, 39 W. ADAMS ST CHICAGO, ILL.

THE SENSATIONAL NEW YORK POLICE SCANDAL
THE ROSENTHAL CASE
Produced from original authentic views, supplied exclusively to us by the National Press Syndicate.
20 slides Plain $5.00 — 40 slides Plain $10.00
20 slides Colored 10.00 — 40 slides Colored 20.00
Special lecture and 1-sheet lithos free with each set.
A. J. CLAPHAM, 130 WEST 37TH STREET, NEW YORK.
The Originator of Sensational Feature Lectures.

SLIDES
OF ALL KINDS
Send for Catalogue "W" of our new line of beautiful
ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES
Each slide illustrated from life and most exquisitely colored. The Chicago Song Slide Exchange, 6th floor, Peavers Bldg., Chicago, Ill., have the exclusive agency for our announcement slides in the states of Wisconsin, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Iowa.
Advertising Slides at Reasonable Rates
Our Song Slide Catalogue of 500 different songs free to anyone for the asking.
SCOTT & VAN ALTENA
59 PEARL STREET — NEW YORK CITY

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES
Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and any one can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.
For the sum of three dollars ($3) cash with order, we will send by express, charges not prepaid, or $3.50 by registered mail, prepaid, the following:
24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.



THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS L.C.SMITH CO. US FOR LEAFLET. SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
PAT. PENDING
PAT. PENDING

The Sensational ROSENTHAL CASE
LIEUT. BECKER INDICTED
20 Slides, $10.00. Cash with order or C. O. D.

AMERICAN OLYMPIC CHAMPIONS
20 Slides, $10.00.
Cash with order or C. O. D.

LEVI COMPANY, Inc. 1560 Broadway NEW YORK
BETWEEN REELS USE GOLDBERG'S FOOLISH QUESTION SLIDES, 50c EACH

Calendar of Independent Releases.

Releasing Through Film Supply Company.

CURRENT RELEASES.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 18th, 1912.

MAJESTIC—Toodles (Comedy) .....
MAJESTIC—A Game of Chess (Comedy-Drama).....
THANHOUSER—As Others See Us.....
THANHOUSER—Warner's Waxworks .....

MONDAY, AUGUST 19th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Land of Death (Drama).....
COMET—House of "No Children" (Comedy).....

TUESDAY, AUGUST 20th, 1912.

"101" BISON (N. Y. M. P. Co.)—The Buffalo Hunt (Dr.) 1000
GAUMONT—Her Supreme Sacrifice (Drama).....
MAJESTIC—The New Butler (Comedy).....
THANHOUSER—Her Darkest Hour (Drama).....

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 21st, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Wooing of Waethena (Drama).....
GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly (Topical) .....
RELIANCE—One Against One (Drama).....
SOLAX—Title not reported.....

THURSDAY, AUGUST 22nd, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Bandit of Point Loma (Drama)....
GAUMONT—Androclus and the Lion (Ed. Drama)....

FRIDAY, AUGUST 23rd, 1912.

"101" BISON (N. Y. M. P. Co.)—The Reckoning (Dr.)...1000
LUX—Uncle's Favorite Pudding (Comedy) 774
LUX—Views of the Livran (Scenic)..... 239
SOLAX—The Equine Spy (2 reels, Drama).....
THANHOUSER—Conductor 786 (Drama) .....

SATURDAY, AUGUST 24th, 1912.

COMET—The Deputy's Duty (Drama).....1000
GREAT NORTHERN—For Her Sister's Sake (Drama) 944
RELIANCE—North of 53 (Drama) 1000

FILM SUPPLY ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 25th, 1912.

MAJESTIC—A Corner in Kisses (Comedy).....
THANHOUSER—When a Count Counted (Drama)....

MONDAY, AUGUST 26th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Jealous Rage (Drama).....
COMET—A Divided House (Drama).....

TUESDAY, AUGUST 27th, 1912.

"101" BISON (N. Y. M. P. Co.)—The Bandit's Gratitude (Dr.) 1000
GAUMONT—The Story of Chopin (Drama).....
MAJESTIC—A Disputed Claim (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—Lucile (Reels 1 and 2—Drama).....

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 28th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Lonesome Trail Pioneers (Drama)..
GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly (Topical) .....
RELIANCE—Thelma (2 reels—Drama).....
SOLAX—His Double (Comedy) .....

THURSDAY, AUGUST 29th, 1912.

AMERICAN—Title not reported.
GAUMONT—Marriage on the Run (Comedy-Drama)..

FRIDAY, AUGUST 30th, 1912.

"101" BISON (N. Y. M. P. Co.)—The White Lie (2 reels) (Dr.) 2000
LUX—Title not reported.
SOLAX—Playing Trumps (Drama) .....
THANHOUSER—Lucile (third reel—Drama).....

SATURDAY, AUGUST 31st, 1912.

COMET—The Moonshiner's Task (Drama).....1000
GREAT NORTHERN—Love Is Blind (Drama)..... 943
RELIANCE—The Secret Service Man (Drama).....

Releasing Through Universal Company.

CURRENT RELEASES.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 18th, 1912.

ECLAIR—A Child to the Rescue (Drama).....
ECLAIR—Egyptian Ruins (Scenic) .....
REX—Thus Many Souls (Drama).....

MONDAY, AUGUST 19th, 1912.

CHAMPION—The Bum and the Bomb (Comedy).....
IMP—Padrone's Daughter (Drama) .....
NESTOR—When the Heart Calls (Drama).....

TUESDAY, AUGUST 20th, 1912.

BISON—How He Made Good (Drama).....
ECLAIR—Wanted, A Wife in a Hurry (Comedy).....
GEM—White Dove's Sacrifice (Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 21st, 1912.

POWERS—Her Diary (Drama) .....
NESTOR—The Alibi (Drama) .....
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly (Topical) .....

THURSDAY, AUGUST 22nd, 1912.

ECLAIR—Robin Hood—three reels (Drama).....
IMP—The Castaway (Drama) .....
REX—An Old-Fashioned Girl (Drama).....

FRIDAY, AUGUST 23rd, 1912.

NESTOR—A Stubborn Cupid (Drama).....
POWERS—What the Milk Did (Comedy-Drama).....
VICTOR—Her Cousin Fred (Drama) .....

SATURDAY, AUGUST 24th, 1912.

BISON—For Love, Life and Riches (Drama).....
IMP—Chappie the Chaperon and The Great (Comedy)..
IMP—Geysers of Yellowstone Park (Scenic).....
MILANO—The Courage of Fear (Drama).....

UNIVERSAL ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 25th, 1912.

ECLAIR—The Will (Drama) .....
REX—The Leader of the Band (Drama).....

MONDAY, AUGUST 26th, 1912.

IMP—Making Good (Drama) .....
NESTOR—The Story of a Wallet (Drama).....
CHAMPION—The Foundling (Drama) .....

TUESDAY, AUGUST 27th, 1912.

GEM—Baby Fingers .....
ECLAIR—Dolls (Drama) .....
BISON—For Love, Life and Riches (Drama).....

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 28th, 1912.

POWERS—An Exciting Outing (Drama).....
NESTOR—Uncle Bill (Drama) .....
UNIVERSAL—The Animated Weekly (Topical).....

THURSDAY, AUGUST 29th, 1912.

REX—An Old-Fashioned Girl (Drama).....
IMP—A Happy Family .....
ECLAIR—The Passing Parade (Tableaux) .....

FRIDAY, AUGUST 30th, 1912.

VICTOR—The Winning Punch (Drama).....
POWERS—Life's Lesson (Drama) .....
NESTOR—The Girls and the Chaperon (Comedy).....

SATURDAY, AUGUST 31st, 1912.

IMP—A Case of Smallpox.....
IMP—Her Burglar .....
MILANO—A Circus Romance .....
BISON—A Shot in the Dark (Drama).....

The KINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY

is the original journal devoted to the motion picture industry, and is recognised as the leading organ of the trade. It has a guaranteed circulation of 10,000 copies weekly.

Subscription.—$3.50 per annum, postfree in America. Specimen copy and tariff for advertisements on application.

PUBLISHING OFFICES, 9 & 11 Tottenham Street, Tottenham Court Road, W., London, England.

Fairman Advertising Agency, 250a Kingston Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

PUT THIS IN YOUR NOODLE

The Eastern Feature Film Exchange and The Quaker City Feature Film Exchange

have consolidated. For speedy attention to your orders, address

THE QUAKER CITY FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE

804 Cherry St., Philadelphia.

Correspondence

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

ON C. McCLELLAN of Pekin offered a $10 gold prize for a new name for the Standard. McClellan also controls the Idylhour and Dreamland in Pekin.

W. D. Monroe has resumed the management of the Colonial Theater at Bloomington, Ill., succeeding C. C. Schipp. Isaac Ingle is in charge of the place temporarily.

A special matinee of the Johnson-Flynn fight pictures for women only was given at the Shubert, at Milwaukee, Wis. Women playing in orchestras, actresses and women in any profession were admitted free.

Miss Aydra Lewis of Litchfield has been engaged as cornetist and illustrated song singer at the opera house theater in Hillsboro, Ill.

W. O. Pope of Grayville, Ill., has leased the opera house at Newport, Ky., and will conduct a picture show. Rolla Hocking will be associated with him.

T. E. Smith will remodel a building in Kidgefarm, Ill., for an opera house.

W. E. Galvin of Rossville, Ill., has leased the Family Theater at Charleston, Ill.

The Orpheum Theater at Freeport, Ill., has ordered more chairs to enlarge its seating capacity, and if the Grand Opera House is not rebuilt may cater to theatrical attractions. German Hall, in that city, may be remodeled in order to take the place of the burned playhouse.

All of the theaters in Decatur, Ill.—Powers, A. Siegfried, the Corner and the Crystal—were liberal subscribers to the homecoming fund celebration. The week of August 6 to 10 promised to bring big business to all the picture houses. The new Empress Theater in that city will play Sullivan-Considine vaudeville.

Successful reports are coming from Marshall, Mo., where the Rev. Charles V. Bohn, Episcopal minister, is holding religious service in connection with photoplays in a tent.

An assault growing out of a quarrel over the payment for films is alleged in a suit for $5,000 damages filed in the district court at Lincoln, Neb., by Emil Studor of Havelock, Neb., against William J. Vallery, Joseph L. Woods and Charles Marks, chief of police of Havelock. Vallery and Woods, it is alleged, were engaged in the photoplay business at Havelock on June 28, and some time prior to that date borrowed from Studor some films for use in their show. On June 28 Wood called at the Studor home to return them, but Mrs. Studor refused to accept them, it is said, without some compensation for their use. Later, the deputation runs, Vallery and Woods employed the policeman to return them, and Studor, again refusing to accept them without compensation, was assaulted. He declares the attack made his wife ill and because of medical fees and loss of time for both says he is entitled to damages.

Three hundred children who attended a free matinee at the Princess Theater, Elkhart, Ind., were filmed by Photographer Freeman Owens of the Industrial Moving Picture Company of Chicago. The Chicago company got some interesting pictures of the motorcar and band instrument factories at Elkhart.

Special shows for secret societies, staged after the regular performances have ended, are a feature with Manager Howard of the Bijou at Monmouth, Ill.

The moving picture probably will fare well in Duluth, Minn., where the proposition to make the schools social centers was carried.

The Middle West photoplay managers who run "The Odyssey" are going to give "The Coming of Columbus" a race for the amount of advertising done. Half-pages and quarter-pages have been common for "The Odyssey," and the Court, at Kankakee, Ill., has been liberal with cuts in addition to a full page.

Moving pictures of the 1911 and 1912 horse shows at Dayton, Ohio, and the 1912 horse show at Springfield, Ohio, in Kinemacolor were shown as a surprise to 150 members of the Springfield (Ohio) Country Club recently. The pictures as well as the projecting apparatus were furnished by the National Cash Register Company of Dayton, and supplemental pictures of "Hills and Dales," the beautiful outing and driving park provided by the cash register company, were enthusiastically received.

The quick appeal of the moving picture was the reason urged for its adoption for advertising purposes by J. C. McQuiston, manager of the publicity department of the Westinghouse Corporation, before the National Electrical Contractors' Association at Denver, Colo. Against the time needed for reading written advertisements he advocated the use of the easily comprehended film. His talk was illustrated by an advertising reel, "The Electrical Education of Mr. and Mrs. Thrifty," which showed not only the installation of electrical household devices, but their economical use.

The Doyle Publicity Service of Chicago took pictures of the pennant racing in the Wisconsin-Illinois baseball league at Rockford, Ill., August 7.

The city council of Council Bluffs, Iowa, is standing by owners of moving picture shows and theaters who have invested money and has passed an ordinance making minor tent shows subject to a license of $15 a day.

Max Olsen and I. Ruben are having plans drawn for a theater and hotel building at Des Moines, Iowa.

A picture show has been opened at the Knights of Pythias Hall in South Vienna, Ohio.

As a musical attraction for its patrons, the Majestic Theater, "the house of quality" at Kewanee, Ill., announces Mr. Mat Hilt, who bills himself "singer of comical songs." He has appeared in all the big houses in the big towns.

Fire in the operating room of Dreamland Theater, East Main Street, Springfield, Ohio, July 29, is stated to have caused $650 damage.

The Vaniman airship pictures promised to be a big attraction at the Rex in Virden, Ill., as Virden was the home of the Vanimans. The films did not arrive, and rather than show something else when these were advertised Manager McNamara closed the show for the night.

A new all-steel operating room will be installed in the Majestic at Bloomington, Ill., and the interior of the theater will be re-decorated.

The Saxe Brothers, who have made a success of the moving picture business in Minneapolis, Minn., and Milwaukee, Wis., have entered the producing business and this season will star Rube Welch and Kittie Frances in "A Musical Revue."

Fred Steltzer of Lincoln, Ill., secured the contract to furnish moving pictures for the annual Chautauqua assembly at that place.

Dreamland at Kewanee, Ill., has been re-equipped.

The Star Theater at Mt. Carmel, Ill., has moved to a larger building.

The co-operative plan of the Nolting airdome and the Presbyterian and Methodist Sunday schools at Neoga, Ill., for encouraging attendance at Sunday school during the summer months, will be continued. Pupils who attend the service are given a ticket to the picture show the next day.

A. P. Messiman of Highland, Ill., has had plans drawn for an opera house which will seat 800 persons. It will be used for moving pictures when there are no road shows.

Peter Jacobs has sold the Savoy and Gem theaters at Quincy, Ill., to Peter Pinkleman. Mr. Jacobs will go West for his health.

Don McClellan, for nine years mailing clerk at the postoffice in Pekin, Ill., has resigned his position to devote all his time to his three theaters in that city.

The new Hippodrome in Alton, Ill., is expected to open early in September.

It is reported efforts are being made to secure a location on Chicago Street, near Jefferson, in Joliet, Ill., for a new moving picture show.

Thirty business men of Algona, Iowa, have subscribed $10,000 of the needed $15,000 for the new Call Opera House.

Harry Timmons, of Lovington, will conduct a moving picture show at that place.

The Unit Amusement Company of St. Louis, which has been incorporated with capital stock of $60,000, will operate the Aubert, the Penrose, and the California. The incorporators are O. H. Kortkamp, E. L. Kirtley, Abraham Altman, E. H. Cloudy, Edward Westover, R. L. Phillips, and J. E. Westover. The company succeeds the Aubert Amusement Company.

A new theater is being erected on West Main Street at Belleville, Ill.

Detroit's moving picture censors are now reported to be doing their work at the theaters instead of at the film exchange because several houses are getting service from out-of-town.

Only two kinds of amusements are more popular in Illinois than the moving pictures. The Rev. S. Adams, of Bement, conducted a survey of fourteen counties in the state to learn what the people like. The ratio was as follows: Baseball, 29 per cent.; picnics, 18; picture shows, 11; gymnasium, 5; concerts, 3; skating, 3; dancing, 3; bowling, 2; golf, 1.

Oscar Wernentin has bought the Iowa Theater, Davenport, Iowa, of H. Blanchard.

The Dietze Safety Magazine Company of Chicago has been incorporated with a capital stock of $2,000 to deal in moving picture film magazines. The incorporators are George K. Spoor, V. R. Day, and Walter Dietze.

Elwood Mowroy has purchased the Electric Theater at Fairbury, Ill., from E. E. Bixby. Wesley Hanson will be electrician, and Miss Fleta Rankin will sing. Mr. Bixby has gone to Franklin, Ohio, where he will have charge of two picture shows. The opera house at Dumont, Iowa, will be abandoned.

William Schoch, formerly with Lyman H. Howe, is the new manager of the Vaudette at Woodstock, Ill. A new front and various other changes will be made at the building. The managers wisely will dispose of the vaudeville.

E. M. Henle, before installing the new picture machine in his new A-Muse-U, put the outfits on exhibition in a store window at Clinton, Iowa.

Steps have been taken at St. Louis by the Atlas Manufacturing Company of St. Louis, to appeal to the United States Court of Appeals the injunction suit brought by Street & Smith, New York publishers, to prevent the St. Louis concern from using the name of "Nick Carter," the noted detective, in connection with the manufacture and exhibition of motion picture film.

The ten-hour labor law for women in Illinois has had a peculiar effect upon the Saturday night picture business of the state. This legislation makes it necessary for the night shopping to end at 9 o'clock. Formerly the people went to the picture shows first and then did their shopping, now they do their shopping and then go to the picture shows, which means from 9 to 11 P. M. is a busy time.

Springfield (Ill.) moving picture men were joking Assistant Postmaster John Wilburn, of Ashland, Ill., upon his real experience with bandits. A number of post offices and banks in smaller Illinois cities had been robbed. A farmer coming into Ashland reported two suspicious characters in the shade of a railway trestle. Wilburn volunteered the use of his automobile, and with the village marshal and the other citizen began the chase. When they reached the trestle they found that the bandits had the drop on them. The marshal and the other citizen were ordered to walk back to town while Wilbur was forced to drive the outlaws thirty-five miles into the wilderness of the Sangamon River bottoms.

A new censorship has sprung up at Wilmington, Ill., where Mayor D. E. O'Heron put a stop to the "Midnight in Chinatown" film, at the Bijou Theater, because the advertisement was too sensational.

FRANK H. MADISON.

OREGON.

"FRA DIAVALO," the Solax masterpiece, will soon be shown at the People's Theater. Great interest is being manifested by the public, who are very eager to see the film on the screen.

Pictures taken of the local Elks Convention held in this city July 8 to 15, by the staff cameraman of the Peoples' Amusement Company, has met with great success, calling for ten prints to be made and shown throughout the country. The Seattle Potlatch was also filmed by the Peoples' Company.

The formal opening of the Sunnyside Theater took place on July 31st.

Considerable talk is being heard in the state of organizing a State Exhibitors' League.

The Rex Amusement Company, with offices in the Pantages Theater Building, has been capitalized at $100,000, with H. C. McAllister president of the company. The company intends to enter the field of manufacturing motion pictures in one and two reel lengths. Portland was chosen for the reason that the Vancouver Barracks with the Columbia and Willamette rivers were near at hand.

Chas. N. Ryan, former manager of the Considine & Sullivan's Empress Theater, has been named as manager of the Star.

A prize baby contest is to be held at the Star Theater. Each baby will be filmed and shown on the screen at each performance. Each person who buys a ticket will be entitled to twenty-five votes and, at the end of two weeks, the child who has the greatest number of votes will be awarded the first prize of $25, the second $15 and the third $10. Each mother, who has entered the baby in this contest, will receive the film so she can preserve it and in after years see just how her baby looked in Over 100 babies have been entered in the moving picture baby contest inaugurated at the Star Theater. Great excitement in the voting is taking place and the mothers are very eager to have their babies entered in order to receive the portion of film in which their babies appear.

The formal opening of the Sunnyside Theater took place July 31. A large crowd was on hand to mark the opening of this house, which contains every novel feature of an up-to-date and fireproof house. It is one of the classiest suburban theaters on the Coast.

A special scene, taken from the opera, was introduced at the Peoples' Theater when "Fra Diavolo" was exhibited. Great comment was heard on the way the Peoples' presented this feature.

The Peoples' Amusement Company has sold their Albany house. The deal was put through by the general manager, M. G. Winstock, with the understanding that films will be taken from the Oregon Film Supply Co. for one year.

Plans are being drawn for the Peoples' Amusement Company to build a $25,000 house in Walla Walla, Wash., to seat 800.

Another concern has filed with the secretary of state articles for incorporation, capitalized at $100,000, to manufacture motion pictures, to be known as the Lunograph Company of Oregon. The identity of the officers heading this concern cannot be disclosed at the present time. This makes the second concern to file papers of incorporation within the past month.

Plans have been completed by the Circle Amusement Company to build a Theater at Fourth and Washington Streets, to seat 1,000. It is to be an exclusive 10-cent photoplay house. Construction will begin about the middle of September. It will be known as the Circle Theater.

1912. ED. N. WEINBAUM.

NEW ENGLAND.

THE National Theater, Boston, B. F. Keith's 4,000-seat house, will reopen for the new season on August 26, Licensed pictures and vaudeville to form the programs.

Mr. Charles Cherry is again back at his post as assistant manager of the Star Theater, Boston, after an enforced absence of four months, due to illness.

After making extensive enlargements and improvements, the Broadway Theater, Everett, Mass., reopens for the new season on August 19. The lobby has been greatly enlarged, by the aditional space secured by the leasing of a store just next to the theater. Independent films and vaudeville will form the programs.

The Comique Theater, Boston, has discharged the union operators, and has replaced them with non-union men. The Olympic Theater, another Boston house, has taken a like course. The reason given out for the action is, that the union men have attempted to be dictatorial.

At last the Mutual Film Corporation of 32 Boylston Street, Boston, has its regular manager on the job. Mr. J. A. Eslow has arrived from the West and taken up his duties. Mr. Maurice Tobias, the temporary manager, has gone back to New York. During his short stay in the Hub, Mr. Tobias became well liked and opened up considerable business for the Mutual, which handles the Film Supply Company's service.

Mr. P. F. Shea, known to every New England exhibitor as one of the largest theatrical managers, is seriously ill, and grave fears are had for a recovery.

Mr. S. Z. Poli, operating a chain of theaters in New England, most of which are devoted to vaudeville and pictures, has given out opening dates for the Fall and Winter seasons. September the 2nd is the date set for the opening of the Poli theaters at New Haven, Hartford and Worcester. All these houses will use pictures, as will the Poli house in Springfield, Mass., which opens soon. The Poli interests also report that they have secured the Norton property of Waterbury, Conn., and will have the plans made for a first-class house, to seat about 2,200 people. The price paid for the property was $125,000. Hartford, Conn., is soon to have a second Poli house, according to present plans. This means a large, madern and thoroughly fire-proof theater, as Mr. Poli always does things in the best way possible. The new Poli Theater now being built in Bridgeport, Conn., will not be opened on scheduled time, unless things change very quickly. Slow work has been enforced, due to the tardy arrival of building materials. The Bridgeport house will show vaudeville and pictures.

Mr. George I. Appleby, manager of the Star Theater, Boston, has entered into a partnership with J. J. Donovan, and the new concern will style themselves Appleby & Donovan's Variety Amusement Company. The new concern will book vaudeville acts. This is a side-show, with Manager Appleby, who is still at the helm of the Star Theater.

Recently ten exhibitors in Hartford, Conn., were called before State Police Commissioners W. S. Allis of Norwich, Judge W. F. Henny of Hartford, and H. F. English. These exhibitors were charged with violating the law which forbids moving picture theaters in buildings where there are tenements. A regular session was held, but no action was taken against the exhibitors, and the affair was laid over for a time. Another matter was looked into at this meeting. The board took up the question of concerns that were in business before the present law became operative. After much discussion, this too was laid over for future reference. The exhibitors are greatly incensed at the commissioners. They are doing business under licenses granted them by the authorities before the present law went into effect, and do not feel that they are at all to blame. The whole thing seems childish and absurd, and if there be any fault, it is up to the men who gave the licenses to theaters that are located in the same structures as the tenements.

Rhode Island has found a new use for motography, as moving pictures are now being used by the Edgewood Improvement Association of Providence, in an effort to "swat the fly." Under the auspices of Dr. G. T. Swarts, the secretary of the State Board of Health, moving pictures are shown, depicting the evil caused by the fly. The exhibitions are given in the Norwood Grammar School. The reels showed how the flies deposit their eggs and how they hatch.

A church is to be built in Boston which will have what might be termed a roof-garden, which will be used in the evenings for the exhibition of moving pictures. The Clarendon Baptist Church, at Clarendon and Montgomery Streets, was burned last winter, and a new church will soon be under way. No steeples will be built, in order to make this exhibition of pictures possible. The majority of Pictures will be of a Biblical nature, and will be used to increase the interest in Bible study.

Mr. N. M. Johnson has left Middletown, Conn., and taken up his home in Northfield, Vt., where he purchased the moving picture theater of E. A. Doyle. Mr. Johnson contemplates making many improvements and alterations, and will run a straight picture show.

Manager Woester has sold his theater in Westport, Conn. It will be reopened in the early fall by a New York concern.

Mr. F. H. Story is no longer connected with the Gem Theater, operated as a photoplay house, of Berlin, N. H., as he has sold out his share in the house to his associates.

The Miner Building of Brattleboro, Vt., is now being fitted up into a theater, which will be operated as a moving picture theater house by Mrs. E. Farrington.

Mr. B. E. Hausdorf of Waterbury, Conn., states that he has secured a site and will build a first-class theater, to be devoted to moving pictures. Plans are now being made by a local architect, and work will be under way before long.

Mr. B. P. Hedenson intends to build a theater in New Haven, Conn., to seat 700. Moving pictures and vaudeville will be shown.

Mr. G. H. Barney is the owner of a new picture house in Brookhaven, Mass. Under the efficient management of A. Vontoska, a well-known theatrical man, who grew up in the business. The house should prosper. Vaudeville will be shown and the admission will be ten cents.

HENRY.

LOUISVILLE.

ARTHUR V. SHECKLER, representing the Gomes Vaudeville Exchange, of Cincinnati, has disposed of other interests with which he has been connected, and will devote his entire attention to booking moving picture houses in Louisville and adjoining towns. Mr. Sheckler has taken offices in the Novelty Theater Building. Mr. Sheckler announces that the main office of the Gomes Exchange in Cincinnati has been moved to a suite in the Odd Fellows' Temple.

"Rock of Ages," a Vitagraph subject presented at the Orpheum Theater recently, made a profound impression on Louisville patrons of the animated pictures, and Allen Kinney, of the Princess Amusement Company, has received numerous requests for a repetition of the picture.

The Kentucky Feature Film Company has purchased the Kentucky rights to the "Dalton Boys' Last Stand," an Atlas Manufacturing Company product. The office of the Kentucky Company is located at 818 East Broadway.

The Ideal Theater, now going up at Twenty-third and Market Streets, will be formally opened to the public on either August 18 or a week later. The new house is rapidly nearing completion, and will be the handsomest in Louisville's downtown district.

Clyde Gaines, who has been operating a moving picture show in the opera house in Winchester, Ky., has abandoned that project and will enter the same line of business in Irvine, Ky. Mr. Gaines has leased quarters in Irvine and will open for business sometime in August. This leaves Winchester with but two theaters, the Pastime and the Lyric.

It was announced recently that the new school and clubhouse in Louisville to be erected by St. Philip Neri's Catholic church would contain a hall in which moving pictures will be shown. The entertainments will be given once a week, and oftener if patronage warrants. The building will be located on Magnolia Street, between Brook and Floyd.

The National Theater Company, which is to erect a theater in Louisville in the near future, reported that most of the stock has been subscribed for, and that work on the new structure will begin shortly. David King, who has been in Louisville in connection with the new theater, which he will manage, is now in Detroit on business. Following his return, it is expected that excavations for the new house will begin at once.

A number of Louisville moving picture men will take in the annual convention in Chicago. Louis J. Dittmar, of the Majestic Theater Company, will attend as one of the delegates of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Kentucky; Fred Dolle and Joe Steurle, of the Broadway Amusement Company, will be on hand, while M. Switow, of the Falls Cities Amusement Company, also will attend the annual gathering. Arthur V. Sheckler, of the Gomes Vaudeville Exchange, will be a visitor to the Windy City, while Dave Levinson of the Novelty Theater, will make arrangements to join the ranks of the Louisville boosters. Allen Kinney will represent the Princess Amusement Company at the national conclave.

Work has begun on the new $120,000 theater to be erected in Lexington, Ky., on the block bounded by Main, Limestone and Short Streets. It is thought that the house will be ready for the public by the first of next year. It will be the most costly amusement place in Lexington. James B. Haggin is largely interested in the new enterprise, being a member of the Berryman Realty Company, which is erecting the four-story theater.

Tony Sudekum of Nashville, Tenn., has added another link to his chain of houses in Nashville and elsewhere, by acquiring the Fifth Avenue Theater, Nashville, hitherto devoted to "legitimate" performances. While no definite decision has been reached, moving pictures will probably be shown after the building has been remodeled. Frank Furlong, former owner of the Fifth Avenue, will enter business in New York after a vacation in Louisiana.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

SANTA BARBARA.

THE Western players of the American Film Manufacturing Company have moved to this city from La Mesa, Cal., taking a year's option on a property formerly devoted to the ostrich industry. The property, while vacant a long time, is considered ideal for the purposes of the company. There is a high fence about it, and the company can work in seclusion on scenes that call for interiors. The headquarters of the company will be there, together with offices and developing plant. Allan Dwan, the director, had for some time been of the opinion that the company had worked out the scenery at La Mesa, and he made a personal tour along the coast and found conditions here most ideal. Within a few miles from the studio, the wildest sort of mountain scenery is to be had, and in other directions, beach stretches that have not been marred by civilization, but are as primitive as before the padres came. Rugged islands lie twenty miles out to sea. W. W. Kerrigan, the business manager, then came up and concluded negotiations, and arrangements were immediately made to abandon La Mesa. There are thirty-five people in the company and twenty horses. The principles are: Jack Kerrigan, leading man; Miss Pauline Bush, leading woman; George Pierolot, character; Miss Louise Lester, character; Miss Jesslyman Van Trump, ingénue; Jack Richardson, heavy; Steve Nellen, juvenile. Roy Overbaugh is the operator, with R. D. Armstrong, his assistant. C. P. Morrison is the boss cowboy and property man, and Sid Boldridge, scenic artist. Mr. Dwan has undoubtedly recognized the fact that in coming to Santa Barbara it will be possible to deviate from so-called Western pictures. The famous Santa Barbara mission, the best preserved in California, will suggest a vast material of stuff from early days in California, while for regal or medieval subjects, beautiful homes and estates in Montecito,- a fashionable suburb, would serve. In moving from La Mesa, the "cowboys" drove their horses to Santa Babara, a distance of 250 miles, taking a week for the journey.

PAUL GYLLSTROM.

"THELMA"

Marie Corelli's great novel. In 3 great reels. Eminent cast. Released Sat., Aug. 31st. The biggest kind of feature for any house, any day.

RELIANCE

COMING:

"One Against One," Wed., Aug. 21st; "North of 53°," Sat., Aug. 24th; "The Secret Service Man," Wed., Aug. 28th; "The Bully and the Shrimp," Wed., Sept. 4th; "For Love of Her," Sat., Sept. 7th.

EXHIBITOR'S BUSINESS BOOSTERS!

HOW ABOUT YOUR ADVERTISING?

Realizing that advertising is the life blood of business building, does it not stand to reason that a good campaign of display will benefit your box office?

LET US TALK IT OVER. Have you seen our display of new special three sheets and six sheets? We carry stock enough to keep your front looking LIVE at all times.

PHOTO-PLAY TICKET CHOPPER

Finish: Cabinet is of finest golden quartered oak, mission or mahogany, highly polished, and trimmings are of metal, finished in colored enamel, baked by special process, which retains its brilliancy, or if desired all metal parts heavily nickel plated. Glass is best polished French plate, quarter inch thick.

Size: 45 x 12 x 12 inches.
Weight (boxed) 100 lbs.

Price: $50.00

If It's Anything To Advertise A Motion Picture Show, We Have It

ANOTHER THING, IF WE HAVEN'T GOT IT WE WILL GET IT IF POSSIBLE. OUR SLOGAN IS "SERVICE."

BANNERS

Our Banners Are Works of Art. Lithographed in Four Colors. Printed on Heavy Muslin, 3 ft. wide by 12 ft. long.
PRICE $1.00 EACH.

MADE FOR ALL RELEASES, BOTH LICENSED AND INDEPENDENT.
GUESS WE HAVE A RIGHT TO BE PROUD OF OUR WORK.

America's Popular Photoplayers

Handsome Photographs 11 x 14 of the Leading Stars of the Film Firmament

MAURICE COSTELLO	MARY PICKFORD	ARTHUR JOHNSON
FLORENCE TURNER	G. M. ANDERSON	ALICE JOYCE
JOHN BUNNY	GENE GAUNTIER	MARSHALL P. WILDER
LILLIAN WALKER	CRANE WILBUR	MARY FULLER

Complete set of 12 for $2.00 Charges prepaid

Send Money Order or Bank Draft with Order. NO Personal Checks or C. O. D. The Latest Novelty in Motion Picturedom.
Every One an Established Favorite. The Largest Photographs of These Stars Ever Sold.

ORDER NOW SUPPLY LIMITED

Photo-Player One-Sheet Posters, 15c Each.
Photo-Player Post Cards, $4.00 per 1,000.

Sign, Show Cards, Banners, Posters, Heralds, Photos and Photo Frames, Banner, Posters and Three-Sheet Frames, Novelties, Announcement Slides, and all kind of display.

PHOTO PLAY ADVERTISING & SPECIALTY CO.

Main Offices: 121-123 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

BRANCH OFFICES: 1022 Superior Ave., Cleveland, O. 26 W. Naghten St., Columbus, O. Equity Bldg., Detroit, Mic

PHILADELPHIA

WORKING overtime seems to be the by-word around the Monarch Film Exchange, and Ed Kruapa, the proprietor, is the busiest man. He said that conditions were all that could be expected, and that the theaters were putting on large shows. Mr. Kruapa recently took a trip to Atlantic City, where he was before the commissioners of that city as an authority on the condition of the houses of that city.

After having been closed for the summer, the Fourpaughs Theater will re-open on August 19, showing a fine line of pictures and vaudeville.

The Bijou Dream Theater, at No. 1205 Market Street, is attracting large crowds by the special features they are showing. These features are supplied by the Star Feature Film Company exclusively.

Another moving picture theater will be added to that string of amusement places in Reading. Fred Drexel and Allen W. McKently are erecting a structure which will open up about Labor Day. One of the features of the new house is a private balcony for the accommodation of friends of the management and parties. The new theater will be known as The Savoy.

Re-opening on August 19, the Girard Theater will have a high class motion picture bill combined with the newest vaudeville stunts.

Manager J. Smith, of the Airdome, 69th and Greenway Streets, is very much pleased with the amount of business he has done since he opened.

Frank Bishop, of the Kinemacolor Company of Boston, was a visitor in the city recently, and went on a tour of inspection of the different houses and manufacturers. What interested Mr. Bishop most was the plant of the Lubin Manufacturing Company.

Having a contract to play fifty-five hours without stopping, a performer at a moving picture house in Wilkes-Barre kept the people in the neighborhood awake for nearly a night when a complaint was laid in to the police, and the music was stopped after considerable trouble.

The new picture theater, which is being built by Paul A. Herman, of Kutztown, Pa., is fast drawing to completion. It is expected that it will be opened by Labor Day.

The owners of the Grand Opera House at Reading, Pa., are having extensive alterations made to the interior and exterior of the house and several theater men have been in Reading trying to lease the place for pictures and vaudeville.

A number of the film exchanges and supply houses are offering for sale a small slide with the face of a clock upon it, with movable hands, which the operator can place to the correct time and show it upon the screen. It has a double use, say some of the managers, as it gives people who are hangers on at the shows a gentle hint to get out, and also it is a most convenient thing for people who have only a limited time to see the show, and in some of the theaters it is so dark that the face of the ordinary watch cannot be seen.

Motion pictures will be used for campaign purposes in the coming fight in this state by the Prohibition party. This announcement was made a few days ago by Burton L. Rockwood, the Prohibition chairman: "I propose to use motion pictures in the campaign," said Chairman Rockwood, "and I believe that it will be a distinct innovation in the manner of bringing facts to the people's attention in a political campaign. Two books have been dramatized in motion pictures, and these will be shown at the meetings. These books are well known and they carry home the argument safely. All the large cities of the state will be visited by the campaigners, and the pictures will be shown at the meetings. The largest auditoriums will be rented for the Prohibition meetings. This campaign was started about August 15."

Manager Bell of the Cadet Theater, of Chester, Va., who was recently a visitor in this city, in talking over business conditions, said that they are fine. He is building his theater over, or in other words, making such complete changes that it will be almost entirely new when he is through with it. New seats and fixtures are being added, and in whole, the theater will be one of the finest in the city when completed.

Manager Shuff of the Tacony Airdome, Philadelphia, will soon break ground for a new theater.

One of the men in the business who seems to get around among the trade a lot and who knows what good business conditions are, is Manager Butler, of Butler's Palace. He says business is good.

Making a business trip to Philadelphia to get away from the hot shore, Manager Kellem of the Exposition Theater at Atlantic City, is looking very good.

The Majestic Theater, Eighth and Vine Streets, will open August 17, with a fine bill of pictures and vaudeville.

Two of the best features that have been seen in Philadelphia for some time, and which have been attracting crowds that would do credit to one of the best road companies of the day, have been shown at the Bijou Dream, 1205 Market Street, under the management of E. W. Buhler. These two features, which were repeated by special request, are the "Battle of Two Palms," and "Tom Butler," and it is without a doubt that they are two big money getters. Some of the exhibitors seem to think that features cost too much and that the people are not so much interested in them, but if these exhibitors who think that way would call around to the Bijou Dream and take a look at the crowd they would soon come and think otherwise. As one of the largest exhibitors puts it: "There is nothing like features."

Doc Wilson, who was formerly with the Star Feature Company, has taken a position with the Quaker City Feature Company, with which company he was employed a few months ago.

J. Manviz of Trenton, N. J., was calling upon the different exchanges recently and it is reported that he booked some very good shows while he was here. Trenton exhibitors are somewhat put out over the decision recently handed down which makes it a very grave offence to bar negroes from their theaters.

According to the Calehuff Supply Company, things must be pretty bright, as they have only recently installed two new machines in the Little Theater of M. L. Hoffheimer at Richmond, Va., and one in the Savoy Theater of Jones & Arthoes, at Wilmington, Del., the machines all being manufactured by the Power Company.

Charles A. Calehuff was visited recently by his brother, Robert Calehuff, of Williamsport, and he seems to be the same kind of a happy fellow as his CLEMENT H. CONGDON.

ST. LOUIS

JOHN STRANER, 75 years of age, living at 8439 Church Road, St. Louis, was run down and killed by an automobile last week owned by the St. Louis Motion Picture Company, 2710 North Twentieth Street, in which were O. E. Goebel, president of the company, Nora Mitchell, Al G. Heimeri, George Hale, Lena Watts and Grover Webb, actors and actresses connected with the company.

The party had been in the country posing for motion pictures and were on their way to the city. As the automobile neared Thrush Avenue, Straner was watching some men laying a drain pipe and it is said that owing to defective eyesight did not note the approach of the auto and failed to step back in time. He died two hours later at his home. The occupants were requested to appear at the coroner's office for the inquest.

The Hippodrome will open the third week in August with a banner bill and the patrons of that popular house will be agreeably surprised when they behold the various improvements installed during the summer months. A new method in ventilation is one of the innovations. Vents in the floor, through which the air is carried by means of suction fans in the roof, being the latest idea in sanitary pure air for the patrons, in addition to canvas covered seats that can be removed, washed and laundered. This last idea originated with Mrs. Talbot, wife of the owner. Mr. Talbot announces that his agents have scoured the country in landing "new vaudeville" and promises the first releases in motion pictures.

The Rex Amusement and Realty Company has received a permit to erect a three-story theater at the northeast corner of Grand and Lucas Avenues. Ninety-nine-year leases changed hands on the deal, one calling for a rental of $2,500 for the first three years, $3,500 a year for the next two years, $5,000 a year for the next twenty years and $6,000 a year for the ensuing seventy-four years. The lease, comprising 80 feet on Lucas Avenue, went at $900 a year for ten years, $1,000 a year for ten years, and $1,200 a year for seventy-nine years. The new theater will be erected on Grand Avenue, one of the coming amusement centers, and about a block from Olive Street, and the Princess Theater, which has had such a phenomenal success. The principal stockholders are: William Sievers of the Grand Central, on Sixth and Market Streets, and Edmond Koeln, city collector. FEGAN.

DETROIT

THE Hippodrome is the latest acquisition in Detroit's theater line, opening up at 6.30 on July 29, and entertaining crowds ever since. Besides the regular attractions of such an amusement house, wild animals, freaks, illusions, miniature shows, etc., there is an auditorium where photoplays are shown. According to present indications the project will be a huge success.

Rainey's African Hunt pictures are still showing at the Detroit Opera House to good crowds. The run will close August 3.

It is reported among real estate circles that a number of Chicago men are endeavoring to secure a site for a new vaudeville and photoplay theater, to be erected here at a cost of about $300,000. These men were brought into the project on the recent trip of the Detroit Board of Commerce to Chicago. No definite plans have as yet been announced.

The Colonial Theater has reduced the price of all seats to 10 cents, and this price will prevail until the end of the present season, when it is understood melodrama will succeed the present vaudeville and photoplays.

It is reported that Fred Kunzland, who recently has been singing spot light and illustrated songs in the various theaters, has left for New Mexico for his health. Mr. Kunzland was at one time quite prominent in highest class vaudeville circuits, but ill health compelled him to give up work on the road. He was very well liked and all his friends hope for a speedy recovery. E. M. BOSLEY.

SAN FRANCISCO

THE National Theater, which was the first house to put on a show of any kind in this city after the fire of 1906, has finally closed its doors. Sid Grauman, now manager of the San Francisco S. & C. Theater, the "Empress," began booking acts for the National as soon as his carpenters could erect a temporary stage and canvas top auditorium. The writer was a spectator of this the greatest conflagration of modern times, and was one of the audience that attended the first theatrical performance to be enacted here after that disastrous week. The seats were only unplaned inch planks placed across sawhorses, kegs and other devices, and there were only enough to seat a couple of hundred people or so. The rest of the audience stood up back of the chairs (?) on Mother Earth, which was the only floor the house could boast of for several weeks. In spite of the hardships endured and the crudity of the stage equipment, the performance brought forth more applause than many shows given in more auspicious surroundings. Practically every one who came to San Francisco during the first couple of months following the fire was a visitor to this house, the only theater then running on this side of the Bay. But the National is no more!

P. Wilkerson became house manager of the Richmond Theater, in this city, on July 21st, and reports a continued run of good business. The attractions at this theater were four vaudeville acts and three reels of first-run Licensed pictures, the program being changed twice per week. However, commencing with August 4th the service was switched from Licensed to Independent, and 21 reels per week is being supplied by Miles Bros.' Exchange.

The People's Amusement Company, which controls the largest motion picture circuit in the Northwest, last week switched to Independent releases, this change affecting all their theaters.

Guy Smith added the fourth house to his circuit when the Home Theater opened about the middle of August. The Home has a seating capacity of 400, and four reels of Independent films, with daily change, will be shown. Music will be by a union musician. M. Smith will be resident manager of the Home, which is situated in East Oakland.

The Bert Levey circuit opened the Dienpenbrock Theater in Sacramento on August 4, with a program of Independent vaudeville and pictures. Three reels of film will be shown, they being changed twice per week. Miles Bros.' Exchange will supply the service.

Messrs. Parra & Grogg made a trip to this city August 1 in the interest of their Bakersfield houses, and they report good business despite the warm summer the oil country is experiencing. By means of a scientific and highly developed ventilation system the houses of these men are kept fairly cool, which, of course, means a turn-away business.

The Merced Opera House, under the management of James Jackson, is now showing 21 reels per week of Golden Gate Film Exchange service. This is a $3,500 house with a fully equipped stage, although pictures form the entire program. Mr. Jackson states, however, he will book the larger road attractions during the coming fall and winter.

The San Joaquin Valley is now in the midst of an unusually warm summer, and Fresno is in about this territory. One would not expect to see much doing theatrically there at this time, but, besides the regular vaudeville houses, there are three large airdomes which are doing a rushing business. These open air theaters will continue in business till about the end of October, by which time the weather will have moderated and all the closed houses will be able to resume.

The latest Los Angeles exclusive photoplay theater, the Mozart, opened August 4th, with a five-reel bill of Independent features, Milanos' "St. George and the Dragon," and Thanhouser's "Called Back," constituting the entire program. As previously reported, the employees of this house, including the operating force, are all women, and the experiment is being closely watched by exhibitors throughout the state. Film service is being supplied by the Sales Company Feature Film Exchange, and will consist of features exclusively, the program being changed weekly. Admission charges will be 10, 15 and 25 cents.

Manager A. Richards has just opened the Star Theater in Modesto, and his house is considered the finest in the county. One feature unique in a house of its size, a seating capacity of 600, and especially when located in one of the smaller interior towns, is the corps of women ushers, who assist the patrons to find seats at both the matinee and the evening performances. In direct contrast to the opposition houses an admission charge of 10 cents is made at the Star. One reason Mr. Richards is enabled to charge an advanced price is because of the splendid music furnished by the orchestra, and also for the reason that the four reels of Golden Gate Film Exchange pictures receive careful attention at the hands of the operator.

G. A. Metcalf reports the shipment of an Edison model "B" machine to E. K. Fernandez and Mr. E. G. Myers, both having motion picture houses in Honolulu. E. L. Monroe, of Matinez, Cal., has replaced his old machine with a late model Motiograph. Mr. Metcalf has also placed a Motiograph with the wholesale paint firm of W. P. Fuller & Co., which concern will use the machine in its sales department in conjunction with several thousand feet of educational film.

A suffragette assistant exchange manager was introduced to the profession when Mrs. Dave Bershon presented her husband with a bouncing baby girl on July 22. Mr. Bershon presides over the destinies of the California Film Exchange in the capacity of assistant manager. Congratulations! ANDY.

TWO REELS

"THE WHITE LIE"

TWO REELS

"101" BISON HEADLINER

Produced by the New York Motion Picture Company

Released Friday, Aug. 30

A unique military subject, showing terrific combats. The saloonkeeper's daughter loses her position as school teacher on account of the character of her father's place. His anger is intensified when he is arrested for selling liquor to the Indians, and is ordered from the community. In revenge he supplies the redskins with whiskey and incites them to attack the fort while he lures the soldiers away with a false tale of an attack on an emigrant train. His daughter sees the Indians and warns the settlement, and manages to get the school children to the fort. Her father is horrified when he learns the truth and in a sensational ride brings the soldiers back in time to avert a massacre, but loses his life. The truth is hidden from the girl and her grief is softened by the representation made to her that her father died a hero.

Coming! "CUSTER'S LAST FIGHT" Coming!

Three reels of sensational realism, overwhelming in its bigness. The most wonderful moving picture ever produced.

"The BANDIT'S GRATITUDE"

One Reel. Released Tuesday, August 27

Ned chastises a cowboy for impertinence. His brother is wayward and joins a gang of bandits. The brother is seriously wounded and Ned helps him escape. The cowboy creeps behind Ned with a knife and is shot by Ned's brother. Ned does not know who saved him and is arrested and tried. Meantime Ned's sweetheart is captured by some of the outlaws and is protected by the brother in a sensational scene in which he is mortally wounded. He makes his way to the court-room and exonerates Ned.

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION 60 WALL ST. N. Y. CITY Sole agents for the U. S. and Canada

LICENSED Film Stories

SELIG.

THE LAIRD'S DAUGHTER (Aug. 26).—Robert MacDonald, a poor Scottish lad, is in love with Airleen MacGregor, the daughter of Laird MacGregor of MacGregor Manor. She returns his love and cares naught for his poverty, but their happiness is suddenly interrupted when the elder MacGregor learns of their intentions. His wrath is mighty, and Robert is ordered to keep away from his daughter. That evening, hearing that America is a land of gold, he decides to go and win riches in order to marry Airleen. He writes her a note asking her to meet him that night at the old trysting place. This note is intercepted by MacGregor, who compels Airleen to write him an answer to the effect that she has been amusing herself at his expense, and is through with him. This forced answer is sent to Robert by the Laird. The poor lad is dumbfounded and stunned. Airleen writes him another note, explaining how she was forced to write the first one, but this is lost in the postoffice, and Robert sails to America in ignorance of Airleen's true love. The years pass; Robert has prospered and grown wealthy. Airleen ever and always has waited at the old trysting place, hoping, praying for the return of her "laddie."

One day, by a trick of chance Robert passes through the town of his boyhood days. The old postoffice is being torn down and in moving the fixtures, Airleen's long lost letter is found and sent to Robert. With many misgivings, but a ray of hope still kindled, he makes all haste to the old trysting place and there he finds his boyhood sweetheart still waiting. And sometimes trust and perseverence hath its reward, as in the case of the Laird's Daughter.

THE WHISKEY RUNNERS (Aug. 27).—Far away to the north and west—up in the Canadian wilds—some years ago, when whiskey was tabooed in that territory there lived a ranchman and his son by the name of Moore. The Moores were engaged in handling illicit whiskey, or in other words were bootleggers. Tom Thiel, a devil-may-care young fellow and foreman of the Moore ranch was also in on the game. Thiel was desperately in love with Honey Moore, but that young lady would not listen to his professions, as she preferred Private Fitzgerald of the Royal Northwestern Mounted Police. This made Thiel insanely jealous, as he naturally hated anyone wearing the red coat of the mounted police.

One day, while the Moores are receiving a consignment of whiskey, which had been sent to them from across the border, they are surprised by the appearance of one lone mounted policeman. Thiel, being the first to discover the presence of the officer, shoots him. The policeman's riderless horse wanders back to the barracks. Private Fitzgerald follows the horse and is led back to the scene of the crime. There Fitzgerald finds the top lift of a bootheel, which he thinks may lead to the discovery of the murdered policeman. The clever way in which he traces and finds his man and finally arrests him, makes a most interesting story. When Thiel has finally been disposed of, Fitzgerald returns to Honey and makes her his partner for life.

THE LITTLE INDIAN MARTYR (Aug. 29).—This is the story of a little Indian neophyte boy who lived long ago at one of the California missions. The tale is founded on an historic incident. Chiquito, the Indian boy, is a page, or personal attendant, to Padre Juan, the big, manly priest in charge of the mission. Chiquito reverences Padre Juan very much for his godliness and vast knowledge, while Padre Juan loves the child tenderly for his intelligence and sweetness of character. Padre Juan takes special pains to teach Chiquito his lessons, and the boy is constantly begging the good-natured priest to read to him. Chiquito's own mother thinks he is a good-for-nothing because of his love for the white man's teachings, and all his playmates look at him askance. But he is in nowise swerved from his devotion to the padre.

The time comes when the Indians of this mission determine to revolt, slay the priests and the garrison, and return to their wild mode of life. Chiquito chances to overhear the conspiracy, which is led by his own father and uncle, dragged into the council chamber and threatened with death. The father suggests that the boy shall be appointed to kill Padre Juan with his own hands, as he has easy access to the padre's cell. If he accomplishes this, his life shall be spared. The boy is in a terrible quandary. He is given a knife and instructed in his duty. The garrison is successfully routed at the appointed time, only a sergeant escaping. Chiquito enters the padre's cell while the latter is at early morning devotions, and is on the verge of stabbing his beloved priest to death when love and loyalty overcome him, and instead of slaying he warns Padre Juan. The price he pays is his only little life, for the Indians outside, angered at the failure of the boy to slay the padre, fire into the cell and Chiquito falls. The padre is found by the rescuing party kneeling in his cell with the boy in his arms.

JUST HIS LUCK (Aug. 30).—Jenks, a man in hard circumstances, discovers that he is down to his last one dollar bill. Hungry and discouraged he decides to purchase food with this dollar. On his way to a nearby restaurant, Jenks notices a sign on the window of an insurance office, which reads: "Accident insurance, $1 a week." The idea occurs to Jenks to take out a policy with his last dollar and then intentionally injure himself in order to secure a few hundred dollars from the insurance company. He goes in and takes out the policy with his last and only dollar. He is informed that this policy pays $500 for broken limb, loss of both eyes, etc., and straightway becomes happy at the thought of the small fortune that will soon be his. Jenks resorts to every imaginable method in his attempt to injure himself, but to no avail. He throws himself in front of trains, automobiles, and street cars, falls out of a baloon, allows himself to be blown up in a stone quarry blast, etc., but receives not an injury for his pains. He finally gets so disgusted with his luck that he returns to the insurance office and gets a refund of his dollar in exchange for the policy. As he steps out of the office he slips on a banana peel and suffers several serious injuries, including a broken leg.

FRENZIED FINANCE (Aug. 30).—Another first-class comedy produced by the Selig Western company, amusing in the extreme, full of comical situations.

CINES.

THE BRIDE OF LAMMERMOOR (Aug. 27).—With several well-aimed pistol shots, followed by a few powerful thrusts with his sword, Sir Edgar puts to rout a party of outlaws and rescues the beautiful Lucy Ashton. On the way to her home the young couple fall in love with each other and exchange tokens of betrothal. Nothing occurs to mar the happiness of the lovers until Lady Ashton returns from a distant voyage, and sternly opposes the engagement of her daughter. She urges upon Lucy the suit of Lord Bucklaw, of a neighboring estate, and finally arranges a marriage.

The unhappy daughter is forced to consent and the contract is signed with great pomp and ceremony. Lucy has just unwillingly affixed her signature, when in rushes Sir Edgar, and accusing her of breaking her word, tears the contract to shreds and hastily leaves the room. Lucy is terribly upset at this, and when the parents rush to question her, they find that she has lost her mind. Lucy's condition does not improve, and soon afterward the unhappy bride, not realizing what she is doing, stabs her husband and then sinks to the floor, lifeless, dying of a broken heart.

THE GOLDEN CURL (Aug. 28).—James Parker,

ECLIPSE.

an engineer, misses from his desk a set of valuable drawings for a new machine, and accuses Robert, his secretary, of the theft. Unable to find any trace of the papers, he decides to send for Nat Barnes, the famous detective, to solve the mystery. The latter appears and immediately makes a careful scrutiny of the room. He examines the drawer which contained the sketches, finds a tress of yellow hair, which afterwards proves to exactly match that on the head of Lucy Parker, the daughter.

Barnes leaves the house, and later returns in disguise to watch the girl. Concealing himself in the next room, he overhears a telephone conversation, in which Lucy angrily tells her sweetheart that she is coming right over after "them." •

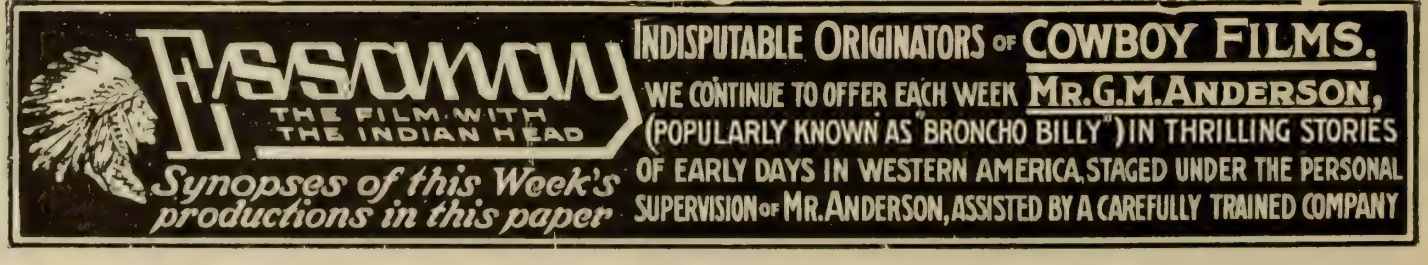
Quietly escaping through the window, the detective quickly changes places with a cabman, and later when the young lady engages the vehicle, obediently drives her to her destination. Upon their arrival he follows her into the house and with his aids, who have kept close behind, completely surprises the culprit, who finally confesses to have induced the girl to loan him the sketches. After placing the fellow under arrest, the able detective returns the papers to their rightful owner.

ESSANAY.

ALKALI IKE PLAYS THE DEVIL (Aug. 27).—Alkali Ike receives some good news one morning in the form of an invitation from the boys of a nearby town to attend a masquerade ball with his best girl. Much elated, Alkali calls on Soffie and she gladly agrees to go. Alkali now goes to the town postmistress, secures the address of a costume firm and writes for a costume. It arrives in the nature of a Mephisto garb, horns, tail and all. On the eve of the ball Alkali is gallantly escorting a young lady, who has just arrived from the East, to her friend's home when he is seen by Soffie, who instantly becomes wildly jealous, wreaks her vengeance on them and is hustled away by her frightened father. Deprived of his gal, Alkali determines to go to the ball alone, dresses in the Mephisto costume and starts up the trail in the moonlight. A lone horseman sees him, dashes madly back to the saloon and gasps out he has seen the devil. The boys are having a great laugh at his expense when Alkali enters to secure refreshments and the boys almost wreck the place trying to escape in wild terror. Alkali continues calmly on his way, but the frightened boys form a posse and start in pursuit. In the shooting that follows Alkali loses the better part of his tail and seeks the protection of Soffie's house, where he is nabbed by her father. It is not until the boys burst in that Alkali's identity is revealed and his outlandish costume explained. Going down on his knees Alkali pleads with Soffie to forgive him and go to the ball. For a moment she hesitates, then plants a resounding smack on his brow and takes him in her arms while the boys file sheepishly from the room.

THREE TO ONE (Aug. 29).—Hinks and Dinks are business partners and a pair of old flirts. Discovering their stenographer frowns on bonbons and flowers, they discharge her. Billy, the clerk, now tells them he knows a charming young lady for the position and brings her down the next morning. Miss Armstrong proves to be a petite, pretty girl, and is engaged at an increase in salary. Both Hinks and Dinks now set out to make their conquests, and bitter rivalry ensues as to the dictating of letters and the supplying of pretty Bertha with necessary candy and bouquets. This rivalry becomes so intense that a quarrel follows and the two old fellows almost come to blows whenever they meet. Bertha now leaves on her vacation and the office is decorated with mourning bands, while Hinks and Dinks mope miserably in the privacy of their rooms, most forlorn because Bertha refused to allow them to accompany her, and discharge Billy, the clerk, on seeing him making eyes at the fair charmer. Next morning both receive letters from Bertha, declaring she thinks their quarrel has gone far enough and that she cannot marry both. Each instantly decides to steal a march on the other, secure autos and hasten out to the summer resort. Armed with huge boxes of roses they meet on the hotel porch. As they stand fussing and fuming at each other the door suddenly opens and Bertha steps gaily out with Billy, the clerk. While the two old fools gape in astonishment she laughingly introduces Billy as her husband, waves ta-ta and starts down to the beach. For a moment Hinks and Dinks stare after them, then both bury the hatchet, lock arms and hasten in to drown their sorrows at the liquid refreshment booth.

THE HERMIT (Aug. 30).—Bob Wayne, a young college boy, has a falling out with his sweetheart, Diana Trevor, and accepts an invitation from some chums who are camping to join them. Bob now writes Diana a letter telling her he is going into solitude to be a hermit, and leaves the city. Bob joins his chums and, when they return to the city, he buys up the camp equipment and begins to "bach" it alone. Meanwhile, Diana receives a letter from some girl chums who are also camping, to come and join them. Bob has already seen these girls, but his experience with Diana has turned him against all creatures feminine, and he disregards their appeals to come up to their stopping place and be sociable. Feeling the need of new environment, Diana joins her chums and learns of the strange young man camping nearby, who has been so rude as to warn the girls to keep away and that he has no desire to be sociable. Out of revenge the



ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON,
(POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES
OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL
SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

BEAUTIFULLY PERFECT PERFECTLY BEAUTIFUL

BLANCHE WALSH

IN TOLSTOY'S

RESURRECTION

FOUR PARTS

Mr. Louis Reeves Harrison
(Moving Picture World)

Here is a great play and one which may rank with the finest of its kind for a long time to come. It is highly dramatic in the best sense of that word—it offers a series of rapid and startling changes in a character deeply affected by circumstances, and it leads through powerful situations to a noble culmination.

Producers, directors and actors contributing to the success of this four-reel play are to be congratulated. The composite sum of their work in following the guiding spirit of Tolstoy has resulted in a production so finished that it may be said to herald the Future Photodrama.

Miss Margaret I. Mac Donald (Dramatic Critic)

Undoubtedly one of the finest modern picture productions is that one produced by the Masko Film Company, entitled "The Resurrection," in which Blanche Walsh, America's greatest emotional actress, has appeared. It is a wonderful story in which Tolstoy struck a hidden key. "The Resurrection" is wonderfully produced—wonderfully acted.

Mr. E. V. Clapp
(Dramatic Mirror)

It is a production which shows much thought and knowledge of the requirements of picture presentation, and it is rarely that a play is seen upon the screen in which the action of both play and players blend in such a complete and compelling harmony. Every move carries the story forward into a complete, impressive whole, as the action is wonderfully explicit in the expression of situation and thought.

A FEATURE THAT WILL REMAIN A FEATURE
For a Record Time

Gets Easy Bookings --- Gets Easier Return Dates

PICK A LIVE ONE

Wire for Territory Still Open
Do It Now

MASKO FILM CO., 145 W. 45th ST. NEW YORK

girls plan to visit his tent that night disguised as "ghosts," and give him a good scare. Out in the moonlight Bob sits on the bank of the stream, smoking his pipe and reflecting on the cussedness of womankind in general, when he happens to gaze toward the tent and sees an array of white figures prowling about. With a whoop he starts for them. In the mad scramble that follows all the girls escape but Diana, who falls over one of the tent-pegs and sprains her ankle. Bob lifts the girl to her feet and is about to demand her identity when the sheet falls away from her face and the lovers are face to face. Excited explanations follow and it is not long before Bob has her in his arms and presses a warm kiss upon her lips, while the girls wave joyfully from the glen below.

BRONCHO BILLY FOR SHERIFF (Aug. 31).—Jim Dunn, county sheriff, is asked to withdraw his name as a candidate for re-election because the boys think he has proved himself incapable in office. Dunn is a fighter, rushes to town, declares he will be in the campaign in spite of all opposition, and has the town placarded with notices urging the boys to vote for him. Meanwhile, the judges have a hard time to find a man with the nerve to run against Dunn. Broncho Billy, a ranchman, is urged to become a candidate and agrees. Cleaning his gun thoroughly, Broncho sits down to eat dinner. Word of Broncho's becoming his rival reaches Dunn's ears and he immediately rides to the ranch house. Bursting into the room he furiously orders Broncho to withdraw his name, but the stalwart ranchman laughs him to scorn and calmly resumes his meal. Wild with rage Dunn now declares he will kill Broncho if he ventures into town on election day, and leaves. The morning of election day Broncho arms himself, mounts and starts for town. Meanwhile Dunn bids his wife goodbye, takes his little girl up on the saddle before him, rides her down the trail a short distance, then puts her down, tells her to run back and rides on. Becoming lost the little one is stumbling about crying pitifully for her papa to come back when Broncho finds her. Dismounting he takes her in his arms and, not knowing whose baby she is, he determines to take her into town. His spirited broncho now gallops off in spite of frantic efforts to catch him, and Broncho is left on foot with the baby in his arms. One look at the child shows she is unconscious from the terrible heat and Broncho strikes out for the town, miles away, to get her to a doctor. After a terrible struggle he staggers up the main street of the town, leaves the child with the doctor and starts for the polling place, when he is seen by Dunn, who instantly whips out his gun and wounds Broncho in the head. Not until it is discovered that Broncho has saved the life of Dunn's baby does the ex-sheriff realize his awful error, but atones for his act by publicly declaring Broncho the next sheriff and pins the badge on the wounded ranchman's breast, while he wrings his hand in gratitude.

BIOGRAPH.

MR. GROUCH AT THE SEASHORE (Aug. 26).—This ill-tempered gentleman accompanies his wife to the seashore, but being so insanely jealous of her makes the stay there rather unpleasant. First of all, he refuses to go bathing in the surf with her, and she, despite his command not to, goes in alone. Towering with rage at his wife's defiance, he gets himself into several embarrassing positions. In fact he makes a fool of himself generally.

THROUGH DUMB LUCK (Aug. 26).—A sneak thief snatches a jewel bag from a woman in the park and gets away with it. His act is seen by another crook who follows him and wants a share of the loot. The affair is reported to the police and a couple of detectives are put on the case. The beat cop of the force begs to be allowed to work, but is denied, the other policemen giving him the laugh for his presumption. Well, he turns the laugh on them by catching the thief and restoring the jewels, although it was by accident.

A PUEBLO LEGEND (Aug. 29).—This production, which comprises two reels, was made in the old Pueblo of Isleta, New Mexico, where the incidents of the story were supposed to have occurred. The costume plates, shields, weapons and accessories were kindly loaned by the Museum of Indian Antiques at Albuquerque, N. M. The opening scene occurs on a feast-day in early times before the coming of the Spanish to that country. During the spring dance of the green boughs, the sun priest tells the story of the turquoise stone that fell from the sky centuries before and was imbedded in the earth, the recovery of which would mean light, happiness and prosperity to the people of Isleta. The great brother, the exemplar of the tribe, is chosen as the one most worthy to be sent on the holy mission. The dangers and hardships which he endures during his long quest go to make a most beautiful portrayal of early Indian symbolism.

MELIES.

THE OBSESSION (Sept. 5).—Lee, after winning Dorothy's affections, breaks his engagement and marries Jessie. Heartbroken, she arrives too late at the church to induce him to right the wrong, or to catch more than a parting glimpse of Lee and his bride as they drive away to the wedding supper. Going to the pier, she takes a long, last look at Lee as the steamer taking them on their honeymoon recedes from view. Discouraged, she would end it all, and is about to jump off the cliff into the sea, when she is persuaded by the gardner of the convent not to sacrifice her life, but to devote it to good works. She thus becomes a sister of mercy, but Lee cannot forget the look of anguish on her face as he gazed upon her from the receding boat. Wherever he goes he is obsessed by her presence and haunted by his conscience. It at last so preys upon his mind that, seeing her spirit once more, he cast himself into the sea. A sailor rescues him and he is taken home, where the doctor, seeing his dangerous condition, sends to the convent for a nurse. Dorothy, not knowing who it is, answers the call. Lee is stricken with fresh fear at seeing her, but is at last persuaded that she is no spirit, and Dorothy's generous forgiveness effects his cure.

PATHE.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 34.—Cromer, England. An improved life-boat for the coast guards is launched amid cheers of the townspeople.

Yonkers, N. Y.—The Federal Cooperage Company's plant is destroyed by fire.

Schwerin, Germany.—The Grand Duke courteously grants an interview.

Oakville, Wash.—The Red and Blue Armies in the manoeuvres against and in defense of Seattle are hard at work.

Berlin, Germany.—The King and Queen of Bulgaria are received by the Kaiser.

Paris, France.—The hospital corps and the hospital dogs of the French Army go through their annual inspection.

College Park, Md.—Lieutenant Faulois of the army aviation corps successfully transmits wireless messages from his plane in flight to the station in Washington.

Chicago, Ill.—The delegates to the Bull Moose Convention, including the Suffragettes, nominate Theodore Roosevelt.

Olean, N. Y.—The Glass Blowers' Association enliven their convention by adjourning in a body to witness an oil well "shot."

Sea Girt, N. J.—Before an enormous crowd Gov. Woodrow Wilson formally accepts the nomination for the Presidency.

THE LIVE WIRE (Aug. 28).—The use of the wonders of science in the settlement of the West impressed the Indians as being nothing short of miraculous, and they underwent some peculiar experiences before they learned the mysteries of the telegraph and telephone. In this film two linemen, repairing a fallen wire, are forced by the Indians to abandon their work and the redmen then run afoul of the charged line. One by one the redskins dance to a lively tune while trying to subdue the power of the copper strand; even the chief, so formidable in war, is an easy victim of the peculiar influence of the bare wire. By this time the electricians have returned to the power station and shut off the current in the section where the break occurred. The Indian chief promises his daughter and his warbonnet to the brave who will overcome the dangerous wire. All refuse to try for the prize except one, a despised cripple, who, now that the current is off, is not in the least affected when he winds the wire about his body.

THE DETECTIVE'S DESPERATE CHANCE (Aug. 29).—A band of outlaws who have been reaping a golden harvest by holding up the overland stage are too cunning for Peter Jones, an Arizona sheriff. Jones, consequently, writes to New York for a detective and one is sent. The sleuth appears in Arizona in the guise of a girl dancer, and the chief of the bandits is soon infatuated with her. It does not take the petticoated detective long to gather his evidence and, single-handed, he turns the outlaw over to the authorities.

THE ARMLESS WONDER (Aug. 29).—A man who is handicapped by the loss of his arms becomes master of his plight by training his legs, feet and toes to serve in their stead. Unusually interesting.

AN AEROPLANE LOVE AFFAIR (Aug. 31).—An aviator has fallen in love with a very pretty girl, whose father is opposed to the match. In an effort to make her forget the young birdman, her father sends her to a boarding school. The latest great invention proves its usefulness in such a situation when the lover in his machine comes gracefully to earth in the school grounds and takes the girl up to the clouds with him. The machine is p ursued by the father and the rejected suitor, but the horses they ride cannot leave the surface. Seeing a minister strolling near a church below him, the aviator again descends and kidnaps the reverend gentleman, who, although badly frightened, performs the ceremony. When the father sees that he has been outwitted he relents and gives his blessing to the young people.

George W. Beatty is the aviator who plays the part of the young lover in this film.

C. G. P. C.

A PRINCE OF ISRAEL (Aug. 27).—Absalom, the son of David, is ambitious to be king and inflames the minds of the people of Israel against the rule of his father. He rides throughout Israel making honeyed speeches and succeeds in recruiting an army to war upon the House of David. David's mighty army and the followers of Absalom meet in the wood of Ephraim and a fierce battles ensues. Men fall right and left in the bitter struggle, but the soldiers of the king soon demonstrate their superiority and the Israelites are utterly routed. Absalom is riding in retreat when his long hair catches in the bough on a tree. He is swung from his mount and hangs thus until he dies.

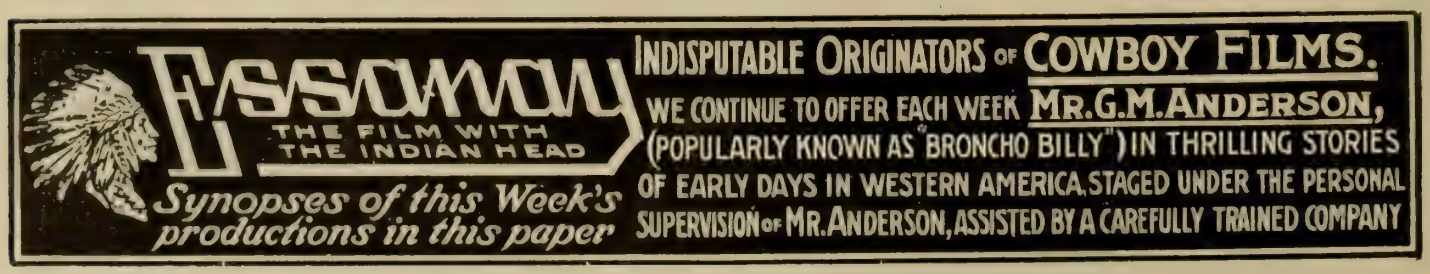
THE MUSKETEER'S LOVE (Aug. 30).—The enemies of Cardinal Richelieu, the famous prelate of the seventeenth century, included the beautiful Duchess de Chevreuse, who promised Count de Chalais, her ardent admirer, that she would marry him if he accomplished the death of the cardinal. But the duchess had a bitter enemy as well. He was the Count de Louvigny, and when he learned that de Chalais had agreed to the request of the duchess, he informed the cardinal. De Chalais was arrested and condemned to die. The duchess was heartbroken at the failure of her scheme, and when de Louvigny taunts her about her unsuccessfulness she becomes so enraged that she plunges a dagger into his breast until he expires and then buries the dirk in her own heart. The coloring of this film and the skill with which it is acted makes it an absorbing and powerful drama.

KALEM.

"RUBE" MARQUARD WINS (Aug. 24).—"Rube" Marquard invites Miss Alice Joyce to the morning practice of the New York Giants at the Polo Grounds and there he shows her the effective deliveries which enabled him to break all records by winning nineteen consecutive games. Miss Joyce, by the way, is an enthusiastic "fan" and we see her with her girl friends at the Polo Grounds, greatly interested in the Giants' struggle for the pennant. A party of sharpers, anxious for New York to lose a decisive game, endeavor to bribe Marquard. Finding their plans have miscarried, the sharpers become desperate and through a ruse, decoy Marquard to an office in the tower of the Metropolitan Building, nearly six hundred feet above the ground. "Rube," imprisoned in the room, opens the window and endeavors to attract the attention of some passer-by, but finds that he cannot be heard at that great height.

As Miss Joyce starts from her hotel for the game she glances at the clock in the Metropolitan tower and sees the figure of a man in a window on the fortieth floor, wildly waving his handkerchief. Picking up her opera-glasses she discovers the man to be Marquard and she immediately surmises that something is wrong. She hastens to the building in her automobile, and with the assistance of a janitor, liberates "Rube." Away they speed for the Polo Grounds. The New York team rallies and secures a narrow lead of one run. Marquard arrives in time to hold down the opposing team and prevent further scoring. That night Miss Joyce receives a handsome token of appreciation from the Giants.

THE LITTLE WANDERER (Aug. 26).—Nettie's stepmother, much overworked, loses her patience with the child and scolds her. The little girl, sick



ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON,
(POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES
OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL
SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

THE HOUSE OF

SELIG

AUGUST 26th

THE LAIRD'S DAUGHTER

A picturesque, human-interest drama of the bonny Scotch heather hills. The quaint characteristics of the beloved Scotch are brought out in strong relief against a background of modern-day situations. About 1,000 ft.

AUGUST 27th

THE WHISKEY RUNNERS

A drama of the old Canadian Northwest in the days when whiskey was taboo and the Northwest Mounted Police enforced its rulings against the bootleggers. A real Western done in Selig's best style. About 1,000 ft.

AUGUST 29th

THE LITTLE INDIAN MARTYR

A historic and dramatic incident of the early California Mission days. Selig's Mission pictures are always popular. This is one of the very best that the Selig Western company has ever done. About 1,000 ft.

AUGUST 30th

JUST HIS LUCK

A rip roaring farce comedy of many laughable situations. One of the most original of situations furnishes the plot for this novel story. About 1,000 ft.

On the Same Reel With

FRENZIED FINANCE

Another excellent comedy subject showing the exasperating experiences of two broken and hungry actors in a Western mining town. About 1,000 ft.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

20 East Randolph Street

CHICAGO, ILL.

SEND IN YOUR NAME FOR OUR MAILING LIST

Weekly Bulletins Sent Free

"THE POWER OF DESTRUCTION"

IT IS---

A Great Big Story told in a Wonderful Sequence of Action. It has a Plot sufficient to animate both Actor and Spectator with a Gripping Sense of Reality. It has every Essential of the Sensational. In short, it is just what the public want to see. That's Business reason enough to buy and exhibit it.

AND AS A PURE MATTER OF BUSINESS PRECAUTION

WIRE FOR YOUR STATE!

This feature is in three parts (over 2,000 feet). Strong feature lithos in three and one sheets; display frames, photos, heralds and slides are ready for immediate shipments. NO WAITING.

J. D. Tippetts, Mgr. UNIVERSAL FEATURES
225 West 42nd Street, N. Y. City

at heart, calls her dog and starts through the woods to find a new home. The little wanderer becomes tired after her long walk and crawls into a barn where she falls asleep on the hay.

Nettie is awakened by the voices of men in earnest conversation close to the hay mow where she has taken refuge. The men prove to be tramps who are planning to rob the nearby home of the squire. Attempting to crawl from her place of refuge, Nettie is detected by the tramps and locked in the barn. The little dog, however, escapes and through its intelligent actions induces Farmer Hodge to go to the rescue of the little girl. Hearing Nettie's story, Hodge goes with the child to the squire and informs him of the plot of the tramps. When the robbers arrive, the village constable and a party of husky farmhands make quick work of their capture. The squire hears the litle wanderer's story and secures permission from her parents to adopt her.

THE WOMAN HATER (Aug. 28).—Henry West, a confirmed woman hater, has his fortune told and is informed that he will meet his fate when he encounters a blonde girl. He escapes from the girls who regard him as eligible and goes on a hunting trip. Henry enjoys the solitude of his cabin until one day he sees a charming young woman approaching. Miss Phyllis Longworth is on her way to visit the attractive cabin, while her chauffeur makes some repairs. In his determination to keep out of the toils, Henry blinds his eyes with a handkerchief and pretends to be blind. His ruse is only partially successful as his supposed plight arouses the sympathy of Phyllis, who begins to prepare his supper. Phyllis accidentally discovers Henry's deception just as the chauffeur arrives to inform her that the car is ready. Henry's profuse apologies touch the young woman and the inevitable happens.

PALESTINE (Aug. 28).—From Ramleh, the residence of Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea, we journey toward Jerusalem and see the natives washing in the public fountain. In the Land of Abraham, eight miles from Jaffa, we find that primitive conditions prevail on every side. Here is a Bedouin blacksmith whose methods are the same as those of his ancestors, thousands of years ago. At the picturesque village of Lifta, near Jerusalem, we stop at a quaint coffee house. Next we visit the Garden of Gethsemane, where Judas betrayed Christ and we have a splendid view of the Russian Church and the Mount of Olives in the background. A panoramic view of Jerusalem concludes this interesting picture.

JIM BLUDSO (Aug. 30).—An adaptation of the famous poem of the late Secretary of State, John Hay. Jim Bludso was the engineer of the Mississippi River boat "Prairie Belle," and true to his life-long boast as to what he would do in an emergency, he held "her nose agin the bank till the last soul got ashore," when the steamer took fire; and Bludso's "ghost went up alone in the smoke of the 'Prairie Belle.'"

SAVED FROM COURT MARTIAL (Aug. 31).—Undine, known in her neighborhood as "the water witch," receives the following letter:

"Through ill fortune my friend, Ned Ferry, at the supply camp near you, is likely to be court-martialed. Only a brilliant exploit will save him.

Your loving brother."

Undine, a strong patriot and naturally tender-heated, realizes the predicament of her brother's friend and determines to save him. The next day she forms a plan to destroy a Federal gun-boat anchored in the river and presents her idea to New. That night at the risk of her life she swims to the gun-boat, reconnoiters and makes it possible for Ned to lead a company of Confederates, who succeed in destroying the gun-boat after a spectacular attack.

Two days later Ned is reinstated in the good graces of his commanding officer and, realizing his present good fortune is all due to the heroic action of his old chum's sister, he promptly proceeds to lose his heart to the fair water witch.

LUBIN.

THE DECEIVERS (Aug. 26).—On the last night of the season, Ormi Meredith, the star of Mr. O'Neil's productions, was sitting in her dressing room writing a telegram to Mrs. Lang, of Cowper Lake, telling her that she will visit her for the Summer. Miss Meredith arrives at the farm and gets an idea that she would like to be a country girl. She borrows clothes from one of the maids and makes up like the farmhands. At the Lambs' Club, Paul Greshman sees an advertisement in the paper for Summer boarders. He writes to John Middleton, Cowper Lake. He later calls on Mr. O'Neil, who tells him that he wants him to play leads in his production next season. Greshman arrives at the Middleton farm and is laughed at because of his clothes. He also gets an idea that he wants to dress like a farmer, so he borrows clothes and does work on the farm. Greshman goes with the farmhand and is watering the horses when Miss Meredith enters. Miss Meredith runs back and asks Mrs. Lang who the handsome farm lad is, but Mrs. Lang cannot tell. Greshman goes to Mr. Middleton and asks who the beautiful farm maid is. He is also ignorant. Miss Meredith visits the Middleton farm again and asks Greshman to come to the Lang farm for supper, which he does. O'Neil, looking up the addresses of his leads, finds that they have both gone to the same place, and leaves for the country to interview them. When Greshman sees O'Neill he runs away and Miss Meredith tells O'Neill that she is in love with a farmer. O'Neill tells Miss Meredith that he is Paul Greshman, the leading man who is going to play opposite her. She makes him promise he wont tell who she is and, when O'Neill introduces him as Paul Greshman, she tells him she loves actors, but is afraid he wont want to marry a poor country girl. He tells her he will marry her at once. Miss Meredith goes to her trunk, gets some wedding clothes and is married to Greshman. fter the wedding O'Neill goes to Greshman and introduces Miss Meredith to him as his leading lady. After that all is happiness.

THE CARETAKER (Aug. 28).—Robert Young, Sr., and Bob Young, Jr., are two devoted husbands. They send their wives away for a six weeks' vacation. The wives, rather loath to go, impress instructions on their husbands to look well after the house, to water the grass and plants, feed the dog and kitty, and duly attend to various household duties. The husbands promise; being left alone, they straightway go to the grocer, the florist and other supply stores and order in feed and equipments to carry out the injunctions. They certainly do work. The grass and plants are deluged with water six times a day, the house is scrubbed inside and out from cellar to roof. A veterinary is consulted on treatment of the dog, and all advantages are worked to the limit. Horror seizes on the women, who return a week before expected. On entering the front garden the grass has grown to such a height that they can hardly wade through it to find their way to the door. The plants have grown to big trees. The dog is four times the size at which they left him, and is still eating, and the climax comes when they meet their husbands, who have developed such abnormal size that they are almost beyond recognition. The women promptly swoon, and on recovery admit that their husbands certainly did take care of the home.

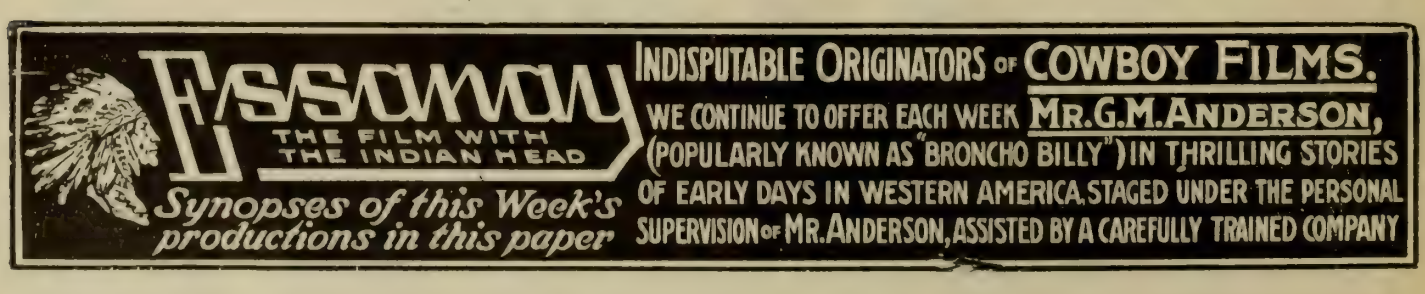
A BURNT CORK (Aug. 28).—Mrs. Diggs, landlady, spends about half of her time trying to collect rent from an actor, and in trying to make her husband work. She loses patience with both, orders the actor out of the house, and makes hubby wash dishes. She seats herself outside of the kitchen door and falls asleep. Inside the kitchen, hubby takes too many draughts from a pint bottle and he, too, falls asleep. The actor, preparing to leave the house, finds the two of them asleep, and for revenge, opens his make-up box and covers both faces with burnt cork. To heighten the joke, he takes an old convict's cap from his wardrobe and puts it on Mr. Diggs' head. Mrs. Diggs is awakened by a telephone call and learns that she is late for choir practice. On the way she enters a soft drink establishment, but is refused service, especially when several women leave in disgust. On the street she is accosted by a negro "swell," much to the amusement of a policeman to whom she appeals. Still ignorant of the fact that she is black-faced, she enter the choir, places herself next to the minister and starts singing. She then lifts her veil to read from the psalm book. The minister looks at her. The women of the choir hold an indignation meeting. The minister chases Mrs. Diggs from the church. The crowd follows her to her home. Mr. Diggs picks up a newspaper and reads a headline, "Negro Woman Maniac Loose." He hears a noise in the hallway. It is Mrs. Diggs. Stopping to fan her perspiring face with a newspaper, she reads the headline, "Negro Convict at Large." Husband and wife meet in the kitchen. She thinks that he is the negro convict. He thinks that she is the negro maniac. He arms himself with the carving knife. She picks up her rolling pin; they circle around the kitchen. Then hubby sees his chance and makes a break for the door. She follows. The crowd starts to chase them; it winds up at the police station. Neither are aware of their make-ups. They insist they are white, and are given mirrors to gaze into. Diggs promptly produces his card and explains.

FOR THE LOVE OF A GIRL (Aug. 29).—John Grant, old and wealthy, has set his heart on the marriage of his orphan niece, Ethel, to Harry Renolds, son of an old friend. Harry loves Ethel, but she does not return it. While visiting a distant city, Ethel falls in love with and marries Charles Lacy, a poor young man. Harry is visiting at the same place, and when Ethel telegraphs her uncle that she is married, Grant assumes that her husband is Harry, and, dying suddenly, never has his mistake corrected and consequently made no change in his will, by which a million dollars is left to Ethel, to be turned over to her when she is the wife of Harry Renolds. Having married another, she, of course, receives nothing. Ethel and Charley suffer extreme poverty, the husband being almost an invalid. Their only child also needs long and expensive medical treatment. Harry still loves Eethel, but not being wealthy himself, can do little to assist her.

Charley determines to kill himself in order that Ethel may be free to marry Harry and fulfill conditions of the will. Harry sees a newspaper announcement of a Supreme Court decision to the effect that conditions impossible of fulfillment, attached to bequests, are invalid, and that the bequests must be paid. With this good news he hurries to the Lacy home and finds Charley upon the point of carrying out his determination. Harry has only to steal away quietly and allow Charley to accomplish his intention, and Ethel will be free. He undergoes a struggle, but prevents Charley from accomplishing his deadly purpose. Harry explains to Ethel and Charley the import of the Supreme Court decision, but the joy this announcement brings is cut short by Charley's sudden death. Ethel claims her legacy and Harry urges her to become his wife, and is happy when at last she comes to his arms.

PINNED (Aug. 30).—Bennie and Barney, two mischievous boys, find a box of large horse blanket pins. Just at this moment a young woman passes wearing a hobble skirt. Seeing this they conceive the idea of having some fun by pinning up people's clothes. Their first venture is on the washerwoman, who, having never worn hobble skirts, finds it very hard to "step lively." Other victims are held in, much to their annoyance and the washerwoman points out the offenders. The chase is a failure and only results in more discomfort to the victims. The boys are reported to the police, who are quickly on the job, only to find that their trousers' legs are also pinned together. Finally the boys are caught, and, after a good whacking, are made victims of their own pranks.

THE OVERWORKED BOOKKEEPER (Aug. 30).—Jerry Jenks, an industrious bookkeeper, has so much work on hand that at 6 o'clock he is still bending over his books. The boss commends Jerry and promises him a raise. When the boss has gone, Jerry gets down to work again. At 11:30 P. M. he is still adding figures, but beginning to feel very sleepy. He sticks to it for a few minutes more, but finds that he can't keep his eyes open any longer, and is obliged to close his books. It is after midnight when Jerry finally gets to bed, but in spite of his fatigue, he cannot get soundly asleep. Figures dance before his eyes; he imagines that his mouth is an inkwell and finger a pen. After a while he is on his feet, although sound asleep. His books are calling to him. Clad only in his pajamas, Jerry climbs out of his window, up the wall and on to the roof. He walked along the edges of several roofs until he came to some telegraph wires. He walked the wires, slid down the pole to the street, and, after various nocturnal adventures which failed to wake him, Jerry reached the office. It being then about 1:15 A. M. the door of the building was locked, but Jerry wasn't going to be kept away from his books by a little thing like that. He felt along the wall until he found the rainspout, up which he climbed six stories, raised a window, and climbed through. He got out his books and spread them on his desk. His mind now at ease, Jerry's head fell forward on his book and he sank into untroubled slumber. Next morning the stenographer arrived at the office and was shocked to see a man in pajamas asleep. She screamed, people rushed in, the boss arrived, and awakened Jerry, who is dumbfounded to find himself in the office. The boss is in a rage, Jerry is thrown bodily out, and kicked into the street. He finally winds up in the mad house,



ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON,
(POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES
OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL
SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

ECLAIR

TUESDAY, AUGUST 27th

"DOLLS"

A drama which runs the gamut of tenderness. After all, a child's love for her dolls is but mother-love inherent.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 29th

"THE PASSING PARADE"

Quite the most novel effort in many a month of pictures. A picture poem, yet as interesting as a novel.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 1st

"TWO BRAVE LITTLE HEARTS"

Children are but men in the making. Here, then, is a powerful object picture of what "little men" can accomplish.

ECLAIR FILM CO., 225 West 42nd St., New York City

DANGER!!

EXPOSURE TO EVIL, RISK, PERIL

A word of warning and few of its unabridged definitions which should be constantly in the mind of every exhibitor in connection with his Film Service.

A carefully selected, well balanced program of correct variety is as essential to the success of the exhibitor as is the lens to the projector.

Avoid exposure to the evils of indifferent service, eliminate the risk of poor attendance, and obviate all possibility of peril by using the following profit making

PROGRAM

MONDAY—AMERICAN, COMET, ALL STAR
TUESDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC, GAUMONT
WEDNESDAY—RELIANCE, SOLAX, GAUMONT WEEKLY, AMERICAN THURSDAY—AMERICAN, ALL STAR, GAUMONT
FRIDAY—THANHOUSER, SOLAX, LUX
SATURDAY—GREAT NORTHERN, RELIANCE, COMET
SUNDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

Address all communications

133-135 West 44th St., New York

where, with plenty of chalk, he is still adding figures on the wall.

THE SHERIFF'S PRISONER (Aug. 31).—Sheriff Clancy, a rather healthy individual, receives word that a notorious highwayman is in his vicinity, and he starts to capture him. Running across Bob Stern, prospector, who answers the description of the man wanted, the sheriff attempts to arrest him. Bob turns the tables on him and arrests the sheriff, locks him up in a closet, where Mary, a miner's daughter, guards him. Bob determines to capture the real highwayman, while Mary watches the sheriff. Mary's father and mother plead with her to allow the sheriff to go, but she is obstinate. Bob captures the outlaw and has a hard time in taking him into camp. He releases Clancy and turns the prisoner over to him. Clancy jubilantly marches the outlaw off.

VITAGRAPH.

A DOUBLE DANGER (Aug. 26).—Little Margaret Mason is crippled. The family physician examines the child and tells her parents that she can be cured by an operation, but the operation will cost $500. Her parents decide to have the operation performed. The father, who is a messenger, is obliged to mortgage the home to pay for it. Preparations having been made, the surgeon, his assistant and the nurse go to the house and proceed with their delicate performance. Mr. Mason, unable to stay at home, is compelled to go to work as usual. Among other things billed is a pine box, containing a body. In transit on this trip he also carries a large amount of gold dust. When the train is under way and he is busy with his billing, the lid of the box opens and a convict who escaped from jail by hiding himself in this way, peers out. Mason sees the reflection in the door of the safe, which is a new one, and dodges behind it, grabbing his gun at the same time. He fires through the pine box, the convict surrenders, but not without a struggle. Mason, after forcing the convict back into the box, nails the lid down, makes out a new label and ships the prisoner to the penitentiary from which he had fled. The operation on little Margaret proves successful. A reward of $1,000 had been posted for the capture of the convict and is paid to Mr. Mason. This enables him to pay the surgeon and clear the mortgage from their home. Little Margaret fully recovers and her little friends join with her parents in making merry.

BUMPS (Aug. 28).—As a member of the troupe of trained elephants, Bumps is a new and valuable acquisition. His introduction to the circus arouses a keen delight in the heart of the little clown, Kenneth. He takes a particular liking to him. This friendliness is readily recognized by Bumps and they become fast friends. The elephant is taken sick and the trainers cannot induce him to take his medicine, but Bumps does not hesitate to take it when it is administered by Kenneth. The little clown can make Bumps do anything for him and appears as his master at each performance in the circus ring. One day, while Kenneth is putting Bumps through his tricks, fire is discovered in the dressing room annexed to the main tent. An alarm of fire is given and a panic takes place in the audience. Everybody rushes into the ring. Bumps lifts the little clown on to his back and forces the people to the exits through which they pass to safety. The elephant then follows with Kenneth and they are both hailed with cheers from the grateful spectators, as heroes. After this, Bumps and the little clown are inseparable.

FLIRT OR HEROINE (Aug. 27).—Jean Harley goes out to visit her married sister, Mrs. Fenton, in India. She is full of life and a flirt. Dr. Kenneth Leslie, a young surgeon, falls desperately in love with her, but he is very serious and becomes jealous of her flirtations. He proposes. She likes him, but does not feel like giving up her liberty and the fun she is having. He thinks that she has been trifling with him and tells her that he never wants to see her again. Time passes and Jean begins to regret her selfish rejection. Cholera breaks out in the post, and she, resolved to show her lover she is something more than a flirt, or jilt, volunteers as an army nurse. He urges her to desist, but she says it is her duty and she will do it, and day by day, he sees her tenderness and courage in nursing the sick. Cholera breaks out at a station up country and they send for help. Kenneth volunteers to go. Jean sees he is ill and tries to dissuade him, but he persuades her that it is the call of duty. He is stricken down with the malady on the way and taken to a native hut. His servant sends word to the post, and Jean insists on going to care for him. He recovers and during his convalescence, Jean with her tenderness reveals her true self and her love for the doctor, and he is not slow to declare his for her.

TWO CINDERS (Aug. 28).—To escape the man her father has chosen for her to marry, Miss Scott, although she has never met him, determines to make her own choice and decides to run away. She boards a train to go to her aunt's to live. At the first station the train stops, and a fat man gets on the car in which she is seated. He tries to be courteous to her, but she repulses him when he offers to open the window for her. As he opens the window, a cinder gets into his eye. He tries to get it out and the girl laughs at his efforts. Suddenly, a cinder lodges in her eye, causing her considerable annoyance, and while he cannot help smiling, he sympathetically offers her an eyestone, which removes the cinder. After this they become very friendly, and before she reaches her destination her fat friend asks her to marry him. She is not altogether averse to such a propostion, for she finds him very companionable. He presents his card, and she sees that he is the very man she has been running away from.

WRITTEN IN THE SANDS (Aug. 30).—Love is awakened in the heart of Peter Hansen when he sees his name written within the outlines of a heart on the sands of the seashore. Above his own name is written the name of "Norma," a daughter of Gyntsen, the aristocrat of the little village. Norma's father is a widower. He idolizes his daughter. Peter is a quiet, noble fellow, a fisherman, with the instincts of a poet and the pride of a king. He is not given to associating with his fellows, being of a retiring disposition. His natural timidity and shyness forbid him to make known his love for her and he worships her in silence. Rowland, a good-looking young fellow, a nephew of Bjornson, an old preacher, falls in love with Norma and is very much favored by Norma's father. Peter notices the increasing fondness of Norma for Rowland, but he is of too high a character to allow his jealousy to corrupt his manhood, and proves this, when Rowland, in exploring the mysteries of the Norwegian coast, enters a rocky cavern and is rescued by Peter from the quicksands into which the young fellow is fast disappearing. Again he shows his courage and manhood when Norma's father is robbed by Kitt, a villainous young fellow, whom he pursues, recovers the stolen jewels and restores them to Mr. Gyntsen. Peter, still hoping against hope that Norma might care for him, is walking along the seashore. He sees within the fresh outline of a heart, the names of Rowland and Norma. This is to much for his overburdened heart to bear. Making his way to the cavern of quicksands, he deliberately enters it and quickly disappears from sight, lost beyond all trace of recovery.

BOND OF MUSIC (Aug. 31).—Oscar, a young lieutenant of the German army, is stopping in a French town getting information. He is passing as a young musician and lodging with Pierre Lenoir. He cultivates a great friendship with Francois Viau, an old 'cellist, firstly because it helps carry out his disguise and secondly, because he really is fond of music. He learns to like the old man very much. Rumors of a spy being in the town get about and Lenoir's suspicions are aroused. He confides his suspicions to his sister and shows her an offer of reward for the capture of the spy, which he hopes to gain. Oscar overhears him and flies the house. Lenoir gives the alarm and Oscar is pursued by the gendarmes and people. He takes refuge with Francois and prays to him to save him, confessing who he is. At first Francois is going to give him up; then their bond of musical fellowship is too strong for him. He hides the young German and assists him to escape. A year after the town is taken by the Germans. They invade Francois' cottage and find him playing his 'cello. They try to turn him out of his house in order to set it on fire. In doing so, they break his beloved 'cello. He seizes a gun and shoots and wounds one of the men. He is arrested as a non-combatant bearing arms and condemned to be shot. Oscar hears of his old friend's sentence and saves him just as the soldiers are about to shoot. The old musician thanks him, but sits mourning over his shattered 'cello, which nothing can restore.

EDISON.

ALONE IN NEW YORK (Aug. 27).—In following Mary through her next happening we first discover her in a small seaport town. She then boards a train on the way to New York. On the train she attracts the attention of a flashy looking individual, who starts to get into a conversation with her. Unused to the ways of the world she does not know whether to resent this or not. However, the conductor interferes and tells the young man to go about his business. He has managed to give Mary his business card. On arriving in New York, Mary is completely puzzled and she feels the loneliness that comes to any stranger in the midst of a great city. She reaches one of the parks and proceeds to look up advertisements for a lodging. Sitting next to her is a chorus girl, entirely out of money and who has been threatened with ejection. She watches Mary nervously and as the latter gets up and drops her purse the temptation is too strong for the chorus girl to resist. She quickly seizes the purse. Mary inquires the way to one of the addresses of a policeman, but upon discovering the loss of her purse they go back to the bench. The chorus girl is still there and during the conversation the policeman discovers that she has the purse folded in her handkerchief in her right hand. He is about to arrest her when Mary catches her look of appeal and with the terror of the law and imprisonment felt by anyone in her station, she tells the officer that the purse does not belong to her at all. Therefore the chorus girl is released and Mary leaves.

Evening is coming on and Mary walks through the streets of New York without money. The strains of an organ coming from a church attract her and she goes in. Here she spends the night. In the morning, hungry and tired, she starts out to find work.

Suddenly she remembers the card given her by the young man on the train and decides to apply to him for employment. He greets her enthusiastically and proposes something to eat and drink. He takes her to a Bohemian restaurant. The chorus girl is sitting almost alongside of her and immediately recognizes Mary. Grasping the situation she takes Mary by the hand, tells her that this is no fit place for her and despite the protests of the young man, takes her from the restaurant. She confesses her own fault, takes Mary to her humble lodging, where she is refreshed by something to eat and a place at least to lay her head and here we leave them for the present.

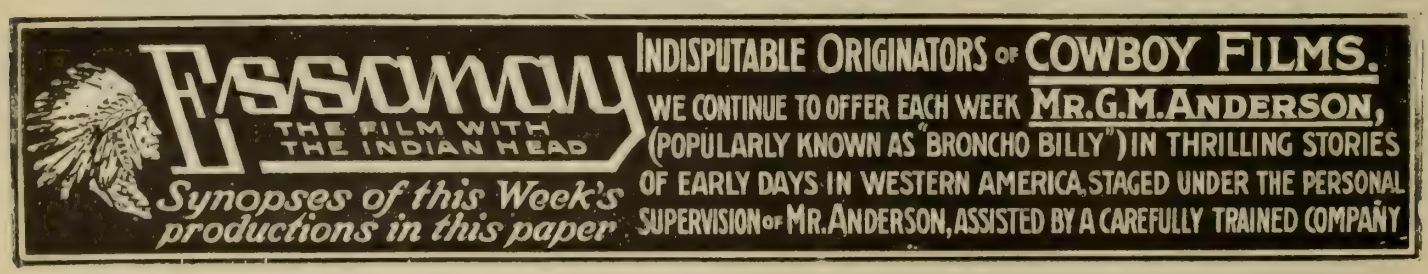
HELPING JOHN (Aug. 28).—John Winter is just inaugurating a campaign in the stock market by which he hopes to gain a firm hold on a company known as the Star Milling Company. John's wife, Edith, is devoted to him. She is rich in her own right and would like to be helpful to John, but he will never tell her anything about business matters. She learns that he is forced to sacrifice his holdings in Star in order to get money.

Edith would give John all the money he needs but she knows his pride would not allow him to accept it. She decides to secretly buy this Star Preferred that he has to sell and give it back to him as a surprise. She goes to a broker's office and begins to buy secretly, just as John, through his lieutenants, begins to sell. Her ignorance of the market leads her to buy the stock with a freedom that experienced traders would fear to use. Her brokers, recognizing her from the signature on her check and knowing her husband's relation to the market, figure that some subtle coup is on and they and their customers follow her unconscious lead, the combination naturally forcing Star Preferred up to an unprecedented figure.

The scenes shift from the offices of Edith's brokers to the stock exchange and to John's office back and forth in increasing excitement.

John is wiped out! Edith gets control of the stock and her broker's statement shows she has made a fortune while she was "helping" John. She arrives at his office just as he wonders how he can ever get his head above water again. Explanations are made and all ends happily when, in the following scene John is patiently explaining to Edith, at home, the details of his business.

THE BOY AND THE GIRL (Aug. 30).—The small son of wealthy young parents is left to the care of a governess while the father and mother enjoy themselves. One day, in the park, a little mischief entices the boy away from his governess and after a long walk they arrive at the foot of the Palisades, and take off their shoes and stockings to go in wading. On the top of the cliff above them workmen are engaged in some blasting, and while the children are playing they are suddenly startled by a cry from above. Looking up they see a huge boulder dislodged and rolling down the declivity toward them. Never having been used to action, the boy hesitates, but only for a second; then the real spirit of the man within



ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON,
(POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES
OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL
SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

GREAT NORTHERN

Release for Saturday, August 17th

THE PRODIGAL'S RETURN

A drama extraordinary. A subject which can be featured big.

Release for Saturday, August 24th

FOR HER SISTER'S SAKE

or THE LOST DIAMOND STAR

A splendidly enacted production of human interest.

SOLD ONLY THROUGH FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 E. 14th St., N. Y.

NORDISK FILM CO. OF COPENHAGEN.

LUX FILMS

RELEASE FOR FRIDAY, AUGUST 23rd, 1912:

UNCLE'S FAVORITE PUDDING

Length, 744 feet.

A Strikingly Funny Comedy.

VIEWS OF THE LIVRAN

Length, 239 feet.

A Very Interesting Scenic.

R. PRIEUR, 10 EAST 15th STREET NEW YORK CITY

Telephone 3427 Stuyvesant

SOLD ONLY THROUGH FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA

USE BRADY'S
LICENSED POSTER
124 EAST 14th STREET, N.Y.

"EVERYONE'S USING"
Our Developing System
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.
11 John Street, New York

"Play Safe!"

When in doubt about what film program to use, PLAY SAFE! Take a tip from one who has never steered you wrong. Get that Universal program from any Laemmle Film Service exchange and GET IT NOW! It's the Big Bull Moose of them all!

CARL LAEMMLE
PRESIDENT

The Laemmle Film Service

204 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.
Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1312 Farnum St., Omaha, Neb.
421 Walnut St., Des Moines, Iowa

The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World.

Headquarters for
ASBESTOS
CURTAINS and PICTURE BOOTHS
SEND FOR BOOKLET
C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co.
39 Pearl St., Boston, Mass.

WATCH FOR OUR NEW LIST
TO BE ANNOUNCED SOON
ROYAL
FEATURE FILM CO.,
538 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

him awakes and he dashes forward, pulling the little girl aside, just in time to save her from the huge boulder, which dashes over the spot where she had stood a half a second before.

The boy delivers her safely to her father and starts to leave, but she tells her father what has happened during their walk. The man takes the boy home to his parents. The little girl's father tells what the boy has really done and the parents realize for the first time that here is a son worth having.

SIMLA (Aug. 31).—Under the canopy of Oriental skies lies the Empire of India, with its mountains, deserts, valleys and cities, all of which abound with limitless interest. Hence this descriptive picture of Simla. Like its predecessors taken in that country, it revels in the wealth of sumptuous scenery and depicts as well the habits and customs of the people, some just as they were in days primeval. Simla, snuggling on the skyward summit of a sturdy mountain, 7,000 feet above the level of the sea, contains many interesting features.

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS.

Hamilton, Mont.—Charles Freshwater has sold the Star Theater to Messrs. Bringle and Irwin of Butte.

Chicago, Ill.—D. T. Davis has had plans prepared for the erection of a one-story brick theater, 726-732 West Sixty-third Street.

New Ulm, Minn.—The English Bros. are building a new moving picture theater in this city.

Virginia, Minn.—The new Royal Theater, East Chestnut Street, has been opened to the public.

St. Augustine, Fla.—The Plaza motion picture theater has been reopened.

West Plains, Mo.—Colonel Jay L. Torrey will erect a new theater in this city.

Brazil, Ind.—The Arc five-cent theater, which has been remodeled by the owner, Samuel Grimes, at a cost of $5,000, has just been opened.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Colonel Edward J. Allen will erect a moving picture theater with a seating capacity of 1,600, to cost $100,000.

Columbia, Mo.—Mrs. Ollie Barnes is sole proprietress of a moving picture theater. The theater will open for business soon.

Avondale, O.—Edgar Freiberg is negotiating with George W. Harris for the purchase of a lot in this city on which will be erected a theater to cost $500,000.

Cantril, Iowa.—Mr. and Mrs. Prosser of Bloomfield, and Editor and Mrs. Car of Paulaski, have opened up a new moving picture theater here for Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

Cleveland, Ohio.—E. C. Patterson has been awarded the contract for the erection of the new moving picture theater to be erected here on the southwest corner of East Twelfth Street and Broadway.

Green Bay, Wis.—Work has commenced on the erection of a new theater which is being erected here.

Mendota, Ill.—Work has commenced on the erection of a new opera house to be erected here.

Philadelphia, Pa.—L. H. Cahan will transform the old market building at Twenty-sixth Street and Girard Avenue, into a picture theater. It will seat 1,700.

New York, N. Y.—Plans are being prepared for a moving picture theater to be erected in Broadway, near Ninety-fourth Street, to cost $10,000.

Davenport, Ia.—The Iowa Theater, a picture house at 324 West Second Street, has been sold by J. H. Blanchard to Oscar Wernentin.

Bozeman, Mont.—H. O. Thayer has disposed of his interests here, which included the Lyric and the Gem theaters, to the new organized Bozeman Amusement Company.

Logan, Ia.—George Erven bought a motion picture theater here.

Paton, Iowa.—A. J. Nowells sold the Elite Theater here to Roy Youngman.

Rockford, Iowa.—G. W. Dawson sold his moving picture theater here to Hubbard, Johnson & Co.

Hillsdale, Mich.—The Casino Theater has been purchased of L. L. Winters, by Era B. Dodge, of Hudson.

Batavia, N. Y.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new theater here on Jackson Street, which will cost $30,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new theater at Fulton Street between South Oxford Street and South Portland Avenue.

Keokuk, Ia.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new opera house here.

Hastings, Minn.—C. J. Morey has sold the Royal Theater on Second Street to Ben Hofseth and John Braaten, of Minneapolis.

Houston, Tex.—A contract has been awarded by A. D. Baker for the erection of a new moving picture theater here on Main Street.

Furham, N. C.—The Edisonia Theater here will soon be opened to the public.

Jamaica, N. Y.—Plans are being prepared for a theater at Twombly Place.

Birmingham, Ala.—Local men are planning to open up a picture theater for the colored people here in the old Belle Theater.

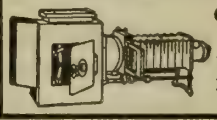
Brainerd, Minn.—Plans are being prepared for a moving picture theater to be erected here on Main Street, between Lefkowitz and Warren Buildings.

Philadelphia, Pa.—John I. Bright is preparing plans for a picture theater at Sixty-second and Woodland Avenues for Charles Futcher.

ROSE'S RING SPROCKET
For Top or Bottom
Mr. F. H. Richardson in M. P. World of May 11, 1912, says: "I certainly can vouch for the excellence of the workmanship put into it. The sprocket is mechanically well made, and I see no reason in the world why it should not work perfectly. The removal and insertion of the tooth ring is a very simple operation indeed."
COMPLETE SPROCKET $2.50
Extra Rings per pair $1.00. Give make of machine
WRITE FOR CATALOG
J. E. BOYLE, DISTRIBUTER
530 MAIN STREET DUBUQUE, IOWA

WE RENT AND SELL
TWO AND THREE REEL REAL FEATURE ATTRACTIONS
SEND FOR LIST
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE
405 Schiller Bldg. Chicago

20,000 roll tickets, $1.20; 50 % cored carbons, $1.15; stereopticon objectives, 50c to $3.00; stereopticons, $15; rheostats, $3 to $5; arc lamps, $1.75, $2 and $2.25; condensers, 50c; calcium jets, $2.50; acetylene jets, $2.50; gas generators, $3.50; moving picture objectives, $2.75; jackets, $2. List of moving picture repair parts at fair prices. Sprocket wheels, 85c; films 1c a foot. Catalogue. All makes of moving picture machines repaired at reasonable prices. L. HETZ, 302 East 23rd St., New York City

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
Stereopticons, Slides, Accessories


CHAS. M. STEBBINS
1028 Main St.
KANSAS CITY, MO
Large Line of Edison Goods
Established 1899

Direction J. D. Williams Management Wm. H. Bell
INTERNATIONAL PICTURES
Controlled by
The Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Company, Ltd
Capital, £200,000.
The World's largest dealers in Motion Picture Films, machines and accessories. We are on the market for everything Biographic. No Moving Picture Film and equipment proposition too large for consideration. Our Specialty—Exclusive Australasian Rights on the best long feature subjects produced, and the latest successful supply novelties.
PRINCIPAL EXCHANGES.
610 George Street, Syndey, New South Wales. Melbourne, Brisbane, Perth and Wellington, New Zealand.
Send samples and communications to our purchasing offices as follows—J. A. Hayden, Dewar House, 11 Haymarket, London, England. Louis M. Noto, 146 W. 23rd Street, New York City.
IMPORTANT:—When writing us direct remember that letters with insufficient postage are delayed.

2nd Hand
Motiograph
Power 5, head for sale cheap
Send for list of Bargains
Chicago Projecting Co.
107 N. Dearborn St.

ELECTRA

PINK LABEL

CARBONS

BRING OUT THE DETAILS AND PRODUCE CLEAR, WELL DEFINED PICTURES; GIVE STEADY, BRILLIANT ARC, AND REQUIRE LEAST ADJUSTMENT. FOR CONVENIENCE OF OPERATORS, ALL 12" "ELECTRA" CARBONS ARE DOUBLE-POINTED.

HUGO REISINGER

SOLE IMPORTER

11 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Endorsement Follows Endorsement
They All Agree
Every Exhibitor Who Has Installed
A "Perfection Concave Screen"
Is Delighted With It.
Jones, Linick & Schaefer Company
Of the Orpheum Theatre, Chicago
Add Their Testimony.
Read and be Convinced.

Each screen made to order to fit the conditions of each theatre.

Prices vary according to size. Screens made to be drawn into the flies same price as stationary.

Send in your specifications and let us quote you.

INVENTORS SPECIALTY MFG. CO.
620 Ashland Block, Chicago.

Inventors Specialty Mfg. Co.
620 Ashland Block, Chicago.

Gentlemen:

Please find enclosed check in full settlement for the Perfection Concave Screen installed in our Orpheum Theatre.

We are well satisfied with same and find that it does all that you have claimed for it. We have experimented with a number of different makes of flat screens and have found it utterly impossible to find any one of them which would produce a picture free from distortion and eye strain.

Your screen being built on scientific principles to fit the exact conditions of all requirements enables us to produce a perfect picture, and makes our front and side seats as satisfactory as any in the house.

We have no hesitancy in recommending the Perfection Concave Screen to all Moving Picture Exhibitors.

Yours very truly,
JONES, LINICK & SCHAEFER CO.
Peter J. Schaefer.

Independent Film Stories

COMET.

A DIVIDED HOUSE (Aug. 26).—To all appearances the Griggs are an ideal and happy couple. They are a middle aged pair, with a family. Their domestic felicity gets a bump, though, when Mr. Griggs sees in the newspaper an advertisement to the effect that a retired farmer about to take a trip around the world wants to either rent or dispose of a farm containing hundreds of acres. Mrs. Griggs does not like the idea of leaving the city, and in her stand she is ably seconded by her daughter, Majorie. On the other hand, Jimmie Griggs, their son, sides with the father and urges him to buy the property, which the old man does. Of course, this causes a division in the household, and we soon see mother and daughter pulling against father and son. Jimmie and his dad go to the farm and investigate the place. They seem to be delighted with it. There is a proviso in the deed that when $10,000 in profits accruing from the farm have been paid to the owner Griggs is to come in full possession of the land.

Mrs. Griggs despairs of her husband ever accumulating this amount, and the friction increases between man and wife. The upshot is that Mrs. Griggs decides to separate from her husband and elects to live in seclusion in the city with her daughter. The two have a hard time of it and are on the verge of being dispossessed when Mrs. Griggs concludes to notify Josiah. Josiah and Jimmy in the meantime are prospering. When old Griggs receives his wife's letter he answers that she can share his home and money on the farm, but that he will not give her a cent if she remains in the city. As a last resort she goes to the farm with Majorie. She is immediately taken up with the place, and both are so pleased that they decide to spend their remaining days in the country.

RELIANCE.

THELMA (Aug. 28).—Phillip Errington, a rich Englishman, is loved by Clara Winsleigh. He repulses her. To get away from the women who run after him he takes three of his friends in his yacht and sets sail for Norway. Here on the shores he meets Thelma, a beautiful Norse maiden. He visits her home and soon learns to love her. With her fathers consent he asks her to be his wife. She consents. Sigured, a half wild boy, is her constant companion; is so jealous that he tries to kill Phillip. Dyceworthy, the English minister, also loves Thelma, but she does not care for him. He gets her to his home by a forged letter and there tries to make love to her. But she is saved by Phillip's friend Dupres and Thelma's maid, Britta. An old woman, Louisa, hates Thelma because her grandchild, Britta, has left her to live with Thelma. Another old Norse woman, Ulrica, joins with Louisa until she sees Sigured—whom she recognizes as her misshapen dwarfted son, whom she cast adrift upon the river in a basket a few days after he was born. The thought of the kindness of Thelma and her father to her poor deserted child softens her heart. Thelma and Phillip are married and return to London.

All London is talking about the Norse girl that Errington has married. None have seen her. She appears at a ball given by Clara, who hates her and makes a great success. A friend of Errington's, Neville, tells Phil that he has married Violet Vere, a stage dancer. She has left him. He wants Phillip to go and see her and ask her to make up with him. Phillip leaves the box where he and his wife are being entertained. Clara tells Thelma he has gone back to see the actress and tries to arouse Thelma's suspicions. Clara gets hold of a letter written from the actress to Neville and gives it to Thelma, making it appear that it was written to Phil. Thelma believes that her husband is tired of her. All alone she runs away from London and back to her father. Britta the little maid finds out why she went and denounces Clara to Phil. Meantime Thelma has returned home. Her father, very ill, sees the Valkyrie. He knows he is about to die. He has his man, Valdemar carry him to his boat and sets afire to the boat so that he may die on a burning ship like his Norse ancestors. Thelma loses her mind. Phil rushes to Norway with Britta and the sight of him and being convinced that Clara lied brings back her wandering mind and all ends well.

THE SECRET SERVICE MAN (Aug. 31).—Officials of a foreign country learn that certain United States war plans they desire are in the possession of a prominent senator, at his country home. An adventuress, high up in society circles, delegated to learn their location, secures the combination of the safe they are in and her confederate enters and is robbing the safe when the senator's daughter surprises him. She is overpowered and he escapes with the plans. The secret service man in attendance follows, and one of the most exciting chases ever seen in pictures follows. The pursuit begins with the fugitive getting away on a trolley car. The pursuer commissions a horse and follows, but finds himself distanced. When the foreigner leaves the trolley and gets away in an aeroplane the secret service man takes after him in an automobile. When he has gained sufficiently on his pursuer, the foreigner drops 3,500 feet in a parachute and manages to jump a train that is just leaving the station. The other man leaves his auto when it breaks down and continues the chase of the train on a motor cycle. From the train the fugitive takes to his heels closely followed by the other and then jumps a high bridge into the river. The secret service man follows closely and at the river bank overpowers him and serves his country by getting the plans back into his own possession.

SOLAX.

PHANTOM PARADISE (Aug. 28).—David Moore is an electrical engineer. He lives with his daughter in a modest home in a small town. Moore conceives a new idea for a dry batery and drops all of his interest in the material things of life—such as earning a living. While absorbed in his invention, gradually his home is reduced to a hovel and his daughter has a difficult time trying to make two ends meet. Finally she is forced to stop caring for her father, who is by this time half-crazed, and seek employment. Because of her limited experience, she finds this difficult, but in a very romantic way she becomes acquainted with a young manufacturer. Although her work is not useful, he gives her work to take home and in other ways takes an interest in the gentle, frail-looking creature.

The young manufacturer's interest in her takes him to her home, where he learns about her father and his invention. He now interests himself in the invention also and promises to take it to capitalists and engineers and have a test made as to the invention's commercial value. Not long after, the manufacturer learns that the invention is worthless. Knowing that this intelligence will break the hearts of both the inventor and his daughter, the manufacturer tells them that the invention is a success. He advances money to the pair and keeps them in ignorance of the true state of their affairs. They live happily and later the "old man" dies without learning that he has been living in a phantom paradise. His daughter, however, accidentally discovers that she has been receiving charity and tries to rebuke the manufacturer, but he tells her he did it all because he had learned to love her. She comes out of her phantom paradise and forever after lives in a real paradise.

PLAYING TRUMPS (Aug. 30).—Tom, Dick and Harry all love Nan. Tom and Dick, becoming jealous of Harry, decide to unite forces, oust him and then settle the affair between themselves. So they proceed to make his life miserable whenever he is with her. At the critical moment they always manage to appear as heroes and bear her off in victory, leaving Harry in various predicaments. Finally, when he takes her automobiling, they extract most of the gasoline, stalling his car in the suburbs. They then whisk her away in their machine. Forced to walk home, Harry takes a cross-country route and finally discovers the others on the road below, stalled by a puncture. Hoping for a chance to turn the tables, he makes his way to the road, and in so doing, stumbles upon a motion picture company just ending a play in which the hero rescues the heroine from desperadoes. This gives him an idea. He obtains the assistance of the actors and there follows a thrilling attack upon the automobile party in which Tom and Dick are securely bound. Just as Nan is about to be kidnapped, Harry appears in the role of hero, and the obliging actors strew themselves upon the roadside. Harry executes a spectacular rescue and wins Nan from under the noses of his rivals.

GAUMONT.

THE STORY OF CHOPIN (Aug. 27).—To give an idea of this film one need but recount the sorrowful life of the eminent Russian composer and pianist, Frederic Chopin. The film recounts the story of his life from the year 1830, at which time his love for Marie Wodzinska was thwarted by the cruel commands of her parents, who had selected for her a hand of less worth, but more power. Again we see him in Vienna and Dresden, and also in Paris in the year 1831, where he finds his fame, but loses his health. Here he became the idol of the salons, employing his leisure time in composition. In 1836 he makes the acquaintance of George Sand (Madame Dudevant), through Liszt. The intimacy lasted for seven years, when George Sand rejected him. Enfeebled by consumption that had been feeding on his weakening body, he dies at Paris, after having composed his most expressive funeral march.

MARRIAGE ON THE RUN (Aug. 29).—Suzanne has been seriously ill. The doctor feels that she must take a trip to the country until her recovery is complete.

Naturally enough Suzanne becomes a source of great interest to the various young clerical students who board at the home of her uncle, where she stays, and one of them, the most promising, as well as as the most bashful, has become smitten with the charms of the visitor. An elopement is decided upon. Benedict, however, has but one suit and that the conventional ministerial robe. Suzanne, however, overlooks so small a fault and the two hasten to the home of a friendly minister some distance away. The minister performs the ceremony. The couple then proceed to a hotel and procure a change of clothing.

At this point Suzanne becomes repentent and decided to advise her uncle of her elopement. The suddenness of the news quite upsets his placid life and he decides that he must pursue them. He, therefore, starts off for the Metropolis, encountering no end of difficulties. Finally, however, he tracks the elopers to their hotel, but Suzanne and Benedict are prepared for him. They prepare an elaborate reception together with a splendid spread, realizing that if uncle has one weakness, it is his fondness for his stomach. Uncle makes his appearance just as the young couple sit down to the table and are drinking to each other's health. He sees there is no other alternative, that it is too late to undo what has been done and consequently makes the best of it by drawing an enormous portion of vermouth for himself and wishing them success and happiness throughout life.

MILANO.

THE COURAGE OF FEAR (Aug. 24).—All Paris is excited over the escape of a noted assassin from prison. Count Orneri, an ex-detective chief who was instrumental in running the criminal to earth, is implored to undertake his recapture. The count expects little trouble in this, and takes leave of the Countess Eve, regretting only that he can not accompany her to an opera which they had anticipated attending. With the assurance of his return in the morning, the Countess leaves for the opera, attended only by her maid.

Conrad, the fugitive, makes for the open country, and finding himself close to the chateau of the count, seeks retreat in it. His cupidity aroused by the discovery of the Countess' jewels, the bandit starts to loot the apartment, but is interrupted by the return of the Countess Eve. Through the mirror of her dressing table the Countess catches a glimpse of the man as he peers from his hiding place, and recognizes him at once from a livid scar across his forehead. Avoiding the least sign of emotion she calls her maid and asks about a large sum of money which is to pay a note due in the morning, and which the count was to have left. The maid disclaims all knowledge of the money, whereupon the countess orders paper and pen, dispatching a message to her husband.

As the countess writes she directs the maid to take the note to the count. The maid gone on her errand, the countess coolly prepares to retire, feeling that her ruse will keep the convict in hiding until the return of the maid with the money. The count on receiving the note, astounds the maid by calling together his forces and ordering them to follow him to his chateau. There, in the nick of time, for the assassin had begun to suspect a trick and had emerged from his hiding place, the detectives secure their man after a sharp struggle, while the frightened woman with a happy cry falls into her husband's arms, glad to be an arrant coward again.

ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD

Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper

INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.

WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON, (POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

A Few More States Open

We own exclusive rights for the United States and Canada for

"The Penalty"

In two reels each, $250.00 per set

"The Circus Girl"

No bonus for exclusive territory

Write, wire or telephone for further particulars

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY COMPANY

145 West 45th Street, New York, N. Y.

Telephone Bryant 6332

Crown Features Draw Crowds!

Saint George and the Dragon

COPYRIGHTED, 1912.

Owners of This Feature Are Reaping Profits!

The First HIGH Class Feature Offered at a LOW Price

Our 12-Page Illustrated Art Book in Two Colors Secures Business. Our Remarkably Attractive Posters, Heralds and Dodgers Fill the House. Very Choice Territory Still Open.

WIRE FOR PARTICULARS AT OUR EXPENSE

Crown Feature Film Company

145 West 45th Street NEW YORK

EASTMAN motion picture film—the acknowledged standard the world over.

Manufactured by

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Comedy! (M) Comedy!

SUNDAY, AUG. 18TH.

"TOODLES" and "A Game of Chess"

A MAN JEALOUS OF A DOG. FUNNY? YES — AND EXCELLENT!!

TWO KINDLY OLD MEN QUARREL — A DELIGHTFUL NEW LINE OF COMEDY AND HEART INTEREST.

TUESDAY, AUG. 20TH.

SUNDAY, AUG. 25TH.

"The New Butler"

HUBBY ACTS AS BUTLER TO PLEASE HIS WIFE — BUT HE CAN'T BUTT:— GREAT!

Majestic

TUESDAY, AUG. 27TH.

"The Disputed Claim"

"A Corner In Kisses"

SHE MEANS CANDY KISSES, HE MEANS REAL ONES—THE MIX-UP IS ONE LONG LAUGH!

TWO PROSPECTORS FIND GOLD IN THE SAME LOCALITY — RESULT? THE STRONGEST DRAMA OF THE YEAR.

Sept. 1.—"The Chaperon."
Sept. 3.—"Mabel's Beau."
Sept. 8.—"The Pleasures of Camping" and "Willie's Dog."
Sept. 10—"Lola's Sacrifice."
Sept. 15.—"Cupid vs. Cigarettes."
Sept. 17.—"Thorns of Success."

Sold only through

The Film Supply Co. of America

Address All Communications to The Majestic Studios, 540 West 21st Street, New York City

REX.

THE LEADER OF THE BAND (Aug. 25).—The leader of the band loved the little tambourine player, but she loved the first violin. The first violin loved her. The leader of the band was in a position to bully both the first violin and the little tambourine—and what's more, he did. But their love was strong. There was to be a fancy dress ball, and the first violin had asked the tambourine to attend with him. On the night of the ball, the tambourine asked him to stay home because she had a headache. The leader of the band heard about the incident.

The second violin was reputed to be a good feminine imitator. So he sent for him and ordered him to dress as the tambourine, impersonate her, and attend the ball. The second violin refused to enter the plot, but the leader subtly reminded him that positions were scarce and if he should lose his job his family would suffer. The second violin consented to impersonate the tambourine.

He went to the tambourine and explained the situation. Then she had an idea. So the tambourine wrote a note to the first violin, stating she would attend the ball, in Salome costume. She advised the second violin to dress in Salome garb, go back to the leader, tell him he would be at the ball, and that she would attend in person and foil him. The leader was ecstatic over the convincing resemblance of the second violin to the tambourine, and even more pleased when he found the first violin at the ball. He yearned for the time for unmasking. He hungered for a sight of the first violin's face when he saw his sweetheart, who had pleaded a headache as the cause to stay away, at the ball with him, the leader. The tambourine had explained the plot to her sweetheart. Next day, the leader was just about to dismiss them both, when the proprietor of the restaurant at which they played learned the whole story and discharged the leader. He then put the leader's baton in the first violin's hand.

BISON.

HOW HE MADE GOOD (Aug. 20).—John Evans, the well-meaning rancher, becomes heavily involved in debt, and is unable to meet the demands of Henry Arnold, who holds the mortgage on about everything of value on the ranch. During Arnold's calls for money he becomes infatuated with Evans' daughter and hits upon a plan. If the father will consent to the marriage, he will extend the mortgage indefinitely. At this point of the story we see Charles Graham, who has been educating a nephew in the East. The young man, fresh from college, fails to come up to his uncle's expectations. The uncle upbraids his nephew for his conduct. The young man suddenly realizes his uncle is right, and determines to make a man of himself. He goes away.

Eventually he turns up at the ranch of John Evans, and is employed as a cowpuncher. He soon finds himself in love with the ranchman's daughter, not knowing that she is the affianced wife of Henry Arnold. Arnold is aware of their infatuation and is making things very uncomfortable for the young man. He is just about to enforce his demands, when Charles Graham, the boy's uncle, relents, leaving his nephew his fortune. Thus the young man doubly makes good. He has made a man of himself, has won the girl and paid off the indebtedness.

GEM.

WHITE DOVE'S SACRIFICE (Aug. 13).—Tom Clifford wrenches his ankle while shooting in the forest. He is found by Indians and taken care of. He falls in love with White Dove, the promised wife of Black Owl, a rich Indian. Iron Hand, the chief, suspects Tom and warns White Dove against eloping with him. They elope, however; the Indians discover their flight and the chase begins. They are almost caught when White Dove remembers a bear trap set up a few days previously. Both take their chance and hide in it, thus saving their lives.

Tom takes his bride to his parents, but he soon compares her to brilliant Nan Travers, who has been in love with him for some time. He, beginning to love Nan, neglects White Dove, who, wounded in her love for him, runs away. We next see White Dove in a shabby room, sewing while her baby sleeps near her. She resolves to go back to Tom for the baby's sake. Arriving at Tom's home, she witnesses a love scene between Tom and Nan. Black Owl, who has sworn revenge on Tom, is also watching. White Dove sees him level his gun at Tom, jumps in front of him and saves his life. She begs Tom to take care of her baby and dies happy in his assurance that both Nan and he will look after him.

VICTOR.

HER COUSIN FRED (Aug. 23).—Flo Ballard, who lives in the city was delighted when she received a letter from her cousin, Fred James and his sister Victory, to pay them a visit and to stay just as long as she pleased. Flo was a lover of animals and she knew that she would have many of them to fondle and take care of at her cousin's house. Fred was a good-natured chap and loved to play jokes on his friends. His sister Victory was not always so pleased with his jokes and did not always "fall in" with his scheming.

After Flo's arrival Fred's brain got busy and it occurred to him that he might make her the victim of his schemes. Now it happened that he had a friend, George Moore—a fellow who would make any girl's heart flutter and to whom he hoped Flo might become attached. But Flo was not so easily taken and Fred had to plan. Fred soon found that it was not so easy to arrange even an introduction between the two.

One day George saw a workman beating a poor, miserable-looking horse which was trying to haul a heavy load. George, shoving the driver away, tries to urge the horse on just as Flo came upon the scene and thinking it was George that she heard beating the horse, she took the whip and hit him. She then gets her cousin Fred to arrest him. This Fred did and George swore to get even, which he did by kissing her. Of course Flo was very angry at his boldness and in a minute the two were at sword's points, but on their way home each decided that there was something attractive about the other. However, they did not meet again until one day some time after the kissing event. Two boys were out shooting and were just about to shoot a pet rabbit when Flo, seeing the object of their aim, grabs the gun. It goes off, hitting some tree near by, as Flo supposes. Meanwhile Fred comes up. Running for his friend George, he brings him back to the place where he had watched it all and pillowing George's head against his shoulder induces him to pretend that he had been shot by the flying bullet. Flo is greatly shocked to think he had been hurt through her fault. Flo soon finds that George can take care of her very well with the one arm which is not wounded.

NESTOR.

WHEN THE HEART CALLS (Aug. 19).—Dick Lee, while hunting, meets James Gordon, an old rancher, who invites him to his cabin. Here he meets the rancher's daughter Mary. They soon become fast friends, and the girl's heart is almost broken when, at the end of the boy's holidays, he is to return to the city. Mary makes him promise to write. Back in the city, Dick tries to forget the country girl, and, as he is engaged to Lillian West, life is very gay indeed. Somehow, he cannot forget the little girl back on the ranch. The promised letter, however, is never written.

Mary looks every day for the letter that does not come, and her father is very sad to see her pine away. At last he cannot stand it longer, and makes up his mind to go to the city and hunt Dick up. In the meantime Dick has grown tired of the gay life, and thinks more and more of Mary. One night in a cafe, he and Lillian have words: they leave the gay party, return home, have a quarrel, and part. The next day Dick receives a letter from her with their engagement ring enclosed; he is filled with joy, realizing that he is free to return to the girl he had left behind. He hurries home, dresses and leaves the city. The old rancher arrives at his home soon after, and learns that Dick has left town. Slowly the old man turns and makes his way back to the station. Arriving home, he is about to enter the house, when hearing laughter, he turns and walking over to the window he looks in and is overjoyed to see Dick placing an engagement ring on Mary's hand.

THE ALIBI (Aug. 21).—John and Mary, with their little daughter, Fay, are homeward bound after a successful trip in the goldfields, but before they are half-way through the desert the last drop of water is gone. As he looks off, however, John sees a man riding along and calls to him. The traveler rides up to them, and proves to be Lem Kid, an outlaw, who insists upon having the profits of their entire months of labor and hardships—all of the gold dust and nuggets—for enough water to take them across the desert. At last they arrive home thoroughly disheartened, while Lem Kid rides on and to his astonishment finds a poster which reads: "$5,000 reward for the capture of Lem Kid, who at 2 o'clock on June 26th, robbed the First National Bank at Bow Springs, Nevada, and killed the cashier." Angrily Lem Kid tears down the sign, for at 2 o'clock on June 26th, he had been in the desert with John and Mary. As the Kid rides along he meets one of the sheriff's men, who recognizes him, and as soon as he tells the sheriff, they gallop off in hot pursuit. In endeavoring to evade the posse after being wounded, Lem Kid falls over a precipice, and is discovered by little Fay, who is picking berries. The child insists upon his accompanying her to their shack, where, although bitter against him, his wounded condition forces Mary to take him inside and do what she could for his comfort. The sheriff arrives, but he is too late, for Lem Kid has made his last fight. He gives little Fay the gold.

A STUBBORN CUPID (Aug. 23).—Bess's pet donkey Sammy, has just died. Her three cowboy lovers call to propose, and as they all arrive about the same time, Bess is in a quandary. Her recent bereavement sharpens her wits. She tells them she would marry the first one that brings her a white donkey, just like her dead Sammy. The lovers get busy. Coming to a cross road, they see an old man leading a white donkey and a wild race ensues. The old fellow thinks he's being held up, and throws up both his hands, but soon realizes that the boys want to buy his donkey. Harry wins the prize, much to his chums' chagrin. Harry, however, cannot budge the donkey.

Tom and Dick separate. Dick sees a white goat, and thinking that it might please Bess better, loses no time in getting it to Bess's home. Bess is afraid of goats and her screams bring in her father, who ejects Dick and his goat. The hapless lover cannot figure out why girls liking white donkeys could not like white goats as well. In despair he goes to the woods and soon dreams of all kinds of white donkeys. Tom, in the meantime, finds a black donkey and hurries home, where he paints it white and then sets out for Bess's home. On the road he passes Harry still struggling with his stubborn donkey. Realizing that he is out of the race, Harry gives his donkey a push and departs. The stubborn donkey wanders into the woods and is grazing close to Dick, who awakens from his donkey dreams by finding one of the species standing beside him. With a shout of joy he jumps up, but finds that the donkey has a will of its own. Dick will not be balked. He leads the white donkey with a long stick tied over its back, and out in front of him a big bundle of grass tied to the end of it, hanging just out of reach of the donkey. He is greeted as the winner by Bess, and gets a wife through the aid of a stubborn cupid.

EDWARDS'

NEGATIVE and POSITIVE RAW FILM

(Extra Fast) (Extra Brilliant)

Sole Agents Write for Terms

THE PHOTO CINES CO., 24-26 East 13th Street, New York

It is that wonderful, exquisite sweetness "Kubelic" draws out of his fiddle that makes his meal ticket spell $1000.00 per hour. A horse fiddle makes more noise but

"What a Difference!"

It is that quaint "humanly human" way "Whitcomb Riley" puts jingles together that makes him loved and famous. Not such great English but his "beat on the heart-strings"

"Makes a Difference."

It was the realism, fine arrangement of color and striking study of light and shadow that immortalized "Rembrandt." A circus ONE SHEET is sometimes even more striking but

"Oh! How Different!"

It is a Motion Picture when you only show "Flickering Shadows" that are meaningless, dull, indistinct, without perspective, roundness or depth and almost without interest. But on a "Mirror Screen" this same picture "comes to life," shows clear, true and sharp. Every detail is visible and not a shade, gleam or shadow is lost and "Believe Me"

"There IS a Difference."

It is a Motion Picture Theatre when your equipment and light is poor and you have a bum curtain. But the "Mirror Screen" insures you a great light so that an ordinary film shows like a FEATURE in comparison. Every foot is so realistic and natural that folks are spell-bound because pictures on a "Mirror Screen"

"Are Different."

It is the Extra Nickels over expenses that means Profits, Bread and Meat and some of Life's Luxuries. It is the "Mirror Screen" that will create a sensation in your theatre, bring the crowds, and it is the only way to get that Wonderful Light WITHOUT EYE-STRAIN. The old and young come and the pictures on the MIRROR are so delightful to look at that they won't miss a reel and that "Keep Them Coming" is what makes, in your bank balance,

"Such a Great Difference."

Please write us today and tell us WHY you don't order that MIRROR.

MIRROR SCREEN COMPANY

Frank J. Rembusch, President. SHELBYVILLE, IND., U. S. A.

Frank Manning, Sales Agent, 922 Sixth Ave., N. Y. City, Phone 401 Plaza.

MAKE 50c DO THE WORK OF 80c

Always buy the regular M. P. Machine size 3 in One —½ pint for 50c. You'll save 30c, for you get 8 times as much oil as if you bought the small bottles.

And remember, 3 in One never deteriorates nor turns rancid. The last drop is just as good as the first.

3 in One is so clear and pure that the finest watchmakers use it. It lubricates perfectly every working part of every moving picture machine, star wheel, flywheel, shutter gear, rewinder and everything else that requires oiling. Makes every part run smoothly and much easier.

Repair bills and bills for new parts are chiefly caused by thick, greasy oils which collect dirt, gum and clog the delicate mechanisms, thus causing them to wear. 3 in One is absolutely free from grease—never collects dirt. Instead, it cuts away all dirt and gum and saves wear, tear and expense.

3 in One cleans and polishes all wood and metal surfaces around a theater. Positively prevents rust, indoors and out.

FREE OIL FOR YOU

A postal will bring you a generous free sample. Get yours today!

10c, 25c, 50c (the economical ½ pint size) for sale everywhere.

FOR LIBRARY SLIPS ONE IN EVERY PACKAGE

3 IN ONE OIL CO.

42 NF Broadway, New York City

About to Start for The Chicago Convention

Monday Night, I Received a Message that Our Water Street Factory Was Afire. Amid Terrific Heat that Shattered the Glass in the Windows, Scorched and Blistered the Woodwork, Amid Dense Columns of Smoke, Lying Ready for Shipment Were Eleven MIRROROIDE Screens. Tons of Water Were Poured into the Building, Causing Scorching Hot Steam.

But These Mirroroide Screens

Stood the Test. These Terrific Conditions Had No Effect on Them.

Do You Honestly and Candidly Think Any Other Screen in the World Could Stand This Test?

MIRROROIDE

Owing to Its Metallic Coating of Glass, Mercury and Foil, Resisted These Conditions. For That Reason It is The Peer of Them All; It is The Greatest, The Best Projection Surface In The World, Bar None.

Our Free Demonstration Samples

Will Prove This to You. Write! Do It Now! Make Us Show You.

THE J. H. CENTER CO.

NEWBURGH, N. Y.

(Patents Pending)

Of Course We're Right!

Haven't we always told you so? You and you also—who want your patrons to have the best that money can buy—who believe in giving them something better than the rest. Read and take comfort:

Keystone, W. Va.

Gentlemen:

We have been using a RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN for one month and will say that I have been in the moving picture business since 1897, and I have yet to see a screen that gives the same satisfaction. It brings out all details, gives a sunlight effect, and causes no eye strain. We use A. C. current, 110 volts, 60 cycles, and are running all films on 20 amperes.

Upon seeing the screen in action Mr. John Evans at once ordered one with frame for his theater at Abington, Va.

Respectfully yours,

Signed .....A. M. GRUBER,
Mgr., The Hippodrome.

P. S.—Sunday we use D. C. current, have no house lights, have two front doors, side door and two windows open, and get fine picture.

N. B.—The above screen was paid for in full and letter is absolutely genuine.

You have tried the rest—Now buy the best.

American Theatre Curtain & Supply Company

105 North Main Street St. Louis, Mo.

Pitzer & Smith, New York City — 32 Union Square, Special Representatives.

AMERICAN.

THE OUTLAW COLONY (Aug. 15).—In the outlaw colony Rattlesnake Ike loved Bessie Vanever, daughter of the old leader. So did handsome John Briscoe, and Bessie reciprocated. One day Jim Wiggins, sheriff, in disguise entered the camp. Ike accepted him, but grew to hate him shortly. And then Jim fell in love with Grace, sister of Bessie, and found himself in a horrible plight. But the end came one day when Ike struck Briscoe. There was a shot and a scuffle and Ike died. Then, taking sides with the sheriff, the old outlaw and his two daughters, along with Briscoe, stood off the camp. A fine battle took place ending in the death of the father. Later it was all explained. Wiggins appointed Briscoe a deputy and Briscoe found a new delight in his love for Bessie.

THANHOUSER.

AS OTHERS SEE US (Aug. 18).—Pyxies are generally better than fairies, for they take a great interest in the doings of their human neighbors, and when they see things going wrong, are very likely to interfere and set matters right. Two energetic pyxies lived near a certain village, and were much grieved to find that the majority of the people overrated themselves. So they decided to straighten things out. Did you ever see a Pyxies' Truth Machine? It is a wonderful invention, and an person who goes in one end of it comes out the other, not as he seems to be, but as he really is. So these pyxies decided to test the contrivance, and place the villagers where they really be'onged.

A notice posted on the village square caused great curiosity. There was no trouble in securing customers, for the privilege of trying the contrivance was free. And a free show always does a big business. The pyxies put the villagers through the machine, and revealed them in their true colors. Then, being kind-hearted pyxies, they restored them to their former station in life, for, of course, it would never do to let others see us as we really are all the time. But these villagers learned their lesson, and each one who had been through the mill tried to correct his or her faults.

WARNER'S WAXWORKS (Aug. 18).—John Strong is an explorer, and returning to his native town after a very successful voyage, he is honored by the proprietor of the local waxworks place by having a life-sized wax figure of himself displayed in the museum. Strong resents the publicity forced upon him thus, and when he sees the wax figure itself, which is a grotesque likeness, he determines that he will not have it on exhibition. He tries to buy the figure. Warner, the proprietor of the wax works, however, is vastly proud of his possession, and refuses to sell.

Assisted by two young men (friends of his daughters) Strong has the figure spirited away, while he himself takes its place in the museum. The two carry off the dummy. The young men are forced to leave the wax figure hanging out of the window. It is spied by a policeman, who starts in pursuit. He suspects foul play. When the policeman and the crowd which follow him finally catch up with the carriage, they are horror-stricken at catching the two young men in the act of hurling their victim overboard. The supposed murderers are arrested despite their protestations of innocence and marched off to jail. The appearance of Strong himself at the right moment turns the supposed tragedy into a farce, when he tells the true story of the affair.

HER DARKEST HOUR (Aug. 20).—The daughter of a wealthy man imagined she was deeply in love with her father's chauffeur, and demanded she be allowed to marry him. When her father very properly and angrily refused, the young woman was urged by her suitor to elope with him and very foolishly consented. In a short time her romance was utterly dispelled. The chauffeur threw off the mask and bluntly told his wife that he had no intention of supporting her. Then he deserted her, and the last that was heard of him was that he was beating his way out West on a freight train.

The wife soon fell into financial straits. The few valuables she had were sold or pawned. She sought her father. The interview was an unsatisfactory one. The man showed no signs of relenting, but with his arms about his niece, told his daughter that the little one had sole possession of his affections. He ordered her away.

She was hardly out of sight before the little girl pleaded with the old man to forget and forgive, and finally won him over. Joyously she raced after the woman, and overtook her. The woman, however, was not grateful. She spurned the child and proceeded on her way.

Then the accident occurred. The child leaned too hard on a frail railing and she fell into water. The woman at first refused to extend any assistance. However, her better nature asserted itself. She leaped from the bridge, rescued the child, and brought her safely to shore.

The woman's father had witnessed the accident, but feebleness prevented him from arriving in time to extend any aid. He realized the temptation to which his daughter had been subjected, and how bravely she had overcome it. The father's arms were outstretched and he embraced his erring daughter.

CONDUCTOR 786 (Aug. 23).—This is the story of an old conductor, whose chief pride was his record of long and faithful service to a street railroad company. His son, however, had achieved wealth and had married a girl of position. The son tried to induce his father to leave his place and come with him to his hotel. The father finally consented, but the first morning slipped out of the hotel and took out his regular run. In order to make sure of getting his father away from his car the son asked the superintendent of the line to dismiss him. That official acquiesced. The old man was broken-hearted. His comrades joined him in an appeal for reinstatement, which was granted.

On the conductor's first trip out the car stopped to take passengers aboad. The conductor saw his son and with him the woman he blamed for his troubles. He gave two bells, and the car went ahead without them. The conductor called back a polite invitation to take the next car—which meant that, in approved fashion, he had cut off his son.

WHEN A COUNT COUNTED (Aug. 25).—The pretty young stenographer in a New York lawyer's office had two weeks vacation coming to her, and decided for once in her life she would cut a dash in society. She expended what for her was an enormous amount of money on clothes, and went to a fashionable seashore resort. At first she was quite a success, but trouble came with the arrival of one of the women clients of her employer. This woman, who was naturally disagreeable, took great pleasure in telling everyone the newcomer was "just a working girl," and she wondered at her impudence in coming there.

Naturally this spoiled the girl's vacation. One of the young men clerks in her office had told her he was coming down to spend the week end at her hotel, but she wrote him that she was going to leave, as everybody was so mean to her.

The young man, being a budding lawyer, settled to his own satisfaction the nature of the trouble. He loved the girl, and determined that while she had been snubbed, those to blame should be compel'ed to bitterly rue their conduct.

To carry out his plans he went to the seashore disguised as a French nobleman. Accompanying him were his "valet and secretary," two of his pals, who were willing to help the joke along. At the seashore hotel, where men were at a premium, the count was a star of the first magnitude. He greatly shocked society, however, by devoting himself exclusively to the girl the others shunned, and when they both disappeared and the announcement was made that they had been secretly married, the grief of the narrow minded women was great. The stenographer and the clerk returned to the city, happy in each other's love, and although the girl was a good American, she admitted that there was one occasion when a count counted.

LUCILE (Aug. 27 and 30).—Lucile, the Comtesse de Nevers, was engaged to a nobleman, Lord Alfred Vargrave. Being deeply in love, Lucile did not conceal her affection, and her attentions finally wearied Lord Alfred, and he neglected his fiancee. They quarrelled finally, and separated, but not until Alfred had vainly attempted a reconciliation. Lucile told him that she was afraid to trust him but proposed a year's separation. Before the year was over the Comtesse received word of the engagement of Lord Alfred to Miss Darcy, whereupon she wrote him asking the return of her letters, which in accordance with his pledge, he was to bring to her personally. Alfred obeyed and started for Lucile's home with the missives.

Upon his arrival he was amazed to see how beautiful Lucile was, and how much other men admired her. His old affection returned and he pleaded with her to forgive him. Lucile refused to listen to him. He managed, by watching her, to meet her presumably by accident, and gained her consent to accompany her. On the road they encountered a furious summer storm and took refuge in a cave. Lucile, whose one dred was of lightning, was hysterical from terror, and did not repulse Alfred when he clasped her in his arms. She consented to forgive her recreant lover.

Part 2.—The Duc de Luvois had long vainly courted Lucile. His jealous eye soon noted that the man who stood in his way was Lord Alfred, and as the latter left the house, the Duc drew a revolver, determined to kill him. The brave Lucile noted the action, threw her arms about him and pinned him fast. Alfred looked around at this moment, just in time to see, as he imagined, his Lucile embracing another man. Deciding she was false, he waited not for explanations, but hurried to the home of Miss Darcy, and they were promptly wedded. The Duke returned sadly to his castle, while Lucile, weary of the world, sought refuge in a nunnery.

Twenty-five years later, Lord Alfred, happy in the affection of his devoted wife and child, now grown to manhood, had forgotten the sadness of his youth. The Duc had remained unmarried, but into his lonely life one ray of sunshine had penetrated. This was the daughter of his dead sister, a girl of sixteen. With her he visited England, as he felt his life of seclusion would not be a happy one for the young girl.

In England, Lord Alfred's son and the Duc's niece met, and promptly lost their hearts.

When Lord Alfred learned of his son's affections, he placed no obstacle in the path of his only child's happiness. He felt no animosity toward the Duc, simply feeling that, although they had been rival suitors at one time for the hand of Lucile, the past should now be buried and forgotten. But the Duc, feeling that it was he who lost him Lucile's love, never forgave. When he learned his niece wished to marry the son of his ancient enemy he refused absolutely to sanction the union.

The Duc, a French General, and Alfred's son, a lieutenant in the English army, were shortly called to the front.

Part 3.—Lord Alfred's son was wounded, and, being carried to the hospital tent, was nursed tenderly by Lucile. The young soldier had no desire to live, knowing that he could never wed the girl of his choice. Lucile gradually learned from him the cause of his secret sorrow, and going to the Duc entreated him for the memory of the love he once bore her, not to make desolate the life of his young niece as her love had been made desolate. The Duc was finally won over, and the young lovers reunited, while Lucile returned to her convent.

MAJESTIC.

A CORNER IN KISSES (Aug. 25).—Tom, after a quarrel with his sweetheart Mabel, writes a note to her friend, Anna, asking her to meet him, as he wants her help in getting Mabel to make up. Anna's fiance, Jim, sees her with Tom and gets very angry. Under his jealous suspicion Anna refuses to explain and they part. Later she goes to the village with Tom, where he buys her a box of candy kisses. Jealous Jim, while walking through the woods, hears Anna and Tom talking. He catches just one sentence "These kisses are delicious." This is enough to set him off again. He tells his sister, Mabel, what he has heard and she starts off to have a reckoning with Anna. Anna is able to explain to her friend and the girls get together to teach Jim a lesson. Mabel returns home and tells her brother that Anna is going to sell kisses at the country fair. She means candy kisses, of course, but Jim does not know this. He thinks of a plan to outwit Anna. Going to the women in charge of the fair he offers to buy out the "kiss booth" and offers her a hundred dollars. She tells the girls who laugh and prepare to give Jim a great reception and also a great many kisses —of the candy variety.

On the day of the fair Jim arrives and seeks Anna's booth. He approaches triumphantly—only to be loaded down with boxes of candy. Not quite understanding he picks up one of the boxes and reads the inscription—"Kisses." He then realizes how he has been fooled and how ridiculously jealous he has appeared. He at once swears "never again." The picture ends with a telescope view of Anna and Jim in a canoe drifting over quiet waters, and shows that, after all, Jim did corner the kiss market.

THE DISPUTED CLAIM (Aug. 27).—Robert Saunders is alone in the world save for his 18-year-old daughter, Grace. He takes her into the mountains of Nevada and establishes her in a comfortable little cabin while he explores the surrounding country for gold. Neil McLeane, a hardy son of the West, is prospecting in the same locality and becomes deeply interested in Grace. He has an altercation with an Indian who forced his attention on Grace, and makes him a deadly enemy. Neil discovers gold in the same claim that Saunders makes a strike and both men are about to register their ownership of the claim by fastening a slip of paper on the same tree at the same time. A dispute arises and Neil is disarmed by Saunders and bound to the tree. But as Saunders backs away from his prisoner he steps into a bear trap and is himself held prisoner not ten yards from Neil. Saunders finally consents to throw Neil his knife if Neil will rescue him from the bear trap after he has cut his own bonds. The knife is tied to a string and thrown to Neil, but falls short of its mark, and as Saunders draws it back to him for another trial, the string breaks and both men are now helpless.

The Indian appears on the scene and, seeing a chance for revenge on Neil, lights a fire around him and is about to leave him to a miserable death when Neil manages to free one of his hands and slay the Indian with his own sheath knife. He then cuts himself loose and frees Saunders. The terrible mental and physical torture both men have experienced has taught them a lesson and the disputed claim is divided equally between them as partners, while Grace further cements the partnership by giving Neil her hand in marriage.

GREAT NORTHERN.

FOR HER SISTER'S SAKE (Aug. —).—Mrs. Wilberg, a widow, is giving a dance, to which Dr. Brown, his fiancee, Irma, and her sister, Anna, have been invited. In the opening scene Dr. Brown is impatiently awaiting the arrival of Irma and Anna. At last they arrive, and the three set out for Mrs. Wilberg's. Here Irma meets an old friend in Arthur, who arouses jealousy in Dr. Brown, who takes Irma away. Dancing proceeds, and Irma at last secures Arthur for her partner, while Dr. Brown dances with Mrs. Wilberg. Irma and Arthur retire to a sitting-out room to talk over old times and are soon followed by Mrs. Wilberg and Dr. Brown. The later son leaves, and Mrs. Wilberg unconsciously drops her diamond star. Anna enters the room, and sitting on the chair just vacated by Mrs. Wilberg, discovers the lost jewel and secretes it. Her action is seen by Irma and Arthur, who are horrified. Mrs. Wilberg makes known her loss, but Anna denies having seen the star, and Irma and Arthur are too shocked to say she has it. At home Irma taxes Anna with the

THREE GREAT FILMS

THE ORLEANS COACH — A NATION'S PERIL — FIRE AT SEA

(June 3rd) (June 24th) (August 26th)

Send us your orders for ONE AND THREE SHEETS FOR THEM

Second Edition on first two is now ready for shipment. Only a Limited Number. Let us have your order Early. W make Special Advertising for the Special Features released by the General Film Co. Ask to be placed on our Mailing List

Write for Catalog.

A. B. C. COMPANY, Cleveland, Ohio

THE CRYSTAL FILM CO.

WHY WORRY?

LET US DO YOUR DEVELOPING PRINTING and PERFORATING

Perforated Negative

THE CRYSTAL FILM CO.
428 WENDOVER AVENUE :: :: NEW YORK

CARBON News Photos

We issue twice a week, four on Wednesday and four on Saturday, CARBON PHOTOS depicting the WORLD'S LATEST HAPPENINGS in the most graphic form. These prints are each 11x14 inches and are easily the most successful drawing cards ever devised for exhibitors. Hundreds of the most profitable motion picture theaters are now regular customers of these photos, which are sold at a price decidedly lower than that charged by other producers for half the service.

These photos are devised primarily to advertise the Gaumont Weekly, but can be used by any house exhibiting topical film.

Write for samples and prices.

Gaumont Company
Congress Avenue
Flushing : N. Y.

LESS THAN 75 COPIES OF THE
FIRST EDITION OF

RICHARDSON'S HANDBOOK

For Managers and Operators are now on hand.
Orders filled in rotation while they last at $1.50 per copy
Second Edition, greatly enlarged, will not be ready for two or three months, and will cost $2.50 per copy

CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY
Box 226, Madison Square Station New York City

theft, and the latter, though at first denying it, finally confesses and gives the jewel to Irma. The next day Irma decides to consult Arthur as to how she can return it to Mrs. Wilberg. When she is ready to set out, Dr. Brown enters, and, failing to get Irma to tell him where she is going, he follows her to Arthur's home. Arthur tells Irma to say she found the brooch stuck in the bottom of her dress, and kneels to show her just how she might say it was fastened. At this very moment, Dr. Brown enters, and, thinking his fiancee unfaithful, throws off his engagement ring and leaves the room in a great rage. He then makes his way to Mrs. Wilberg's and tells the latter that Irma has her brooch. Irma, entering, is surprised to find Dr. Brown there. She goes up to Mrs. Wilberg and restores the brooch, but her story is discredited, and Mrs. Wilberg plainly shows that she believes Irma to be the thief. Irma leaves in tears. In the meantime, Anna has missed Irma, and repairs to Arthur's room to see whether he knows where her sister is. Anna and Arthur arrive just in time to meet Irma coming out. Seeing how things stand, Arthur takes both Irma and Anna to Mrs. Wilberg's, and presenting Anna to Mrs. Wilberg, says, "There is the guilty one." Thoroughly repentant Anna sobs out her story on Mrs. Wilberg's shoulder, and is freely forgiven. Mrs. Wilberg begs Irma's forgiveness for believing her to be the thief. Irma turns to Arthur, and Dr. Brown, who has stood by all the time, quietly leaves, as he can see that Arthur has taken hold of Irma's affections far more than he could ever hope to do.

POWERS

HER DIARY (Aug. 21).—Little Earley sees her grandfather writing in a diary and conceives the idea of chronicling important events as she sees them. Her grandfather provides her with a book and she immediately becomes alert. Her father returns home from the village with a jug of whiske and later takes a drink on the quiet and then buries the jug. He is observed by the little girl and she duly makes a note of the fact in her book. She sees her sister kiss her sweetheart and a memorandum of the act is made. Matty, her brother, steals a pie, and Earley follows. He refuses to share the pie with her and she seeks recourse in showing up the act in her diary, not omitting the fact that she was not given a bite of the luxury. Divers and sundry acts of members of the family are duly noted and there bids fair to be several scandals when the minister takes a hand in the proceedings and the diary of Earley is consigned to the cavernous depths of the well.

WHAT THE MILK DID (Aug. 23).—Major Baldwin, a gay old blade, happens to meet Mrs. Swift, a former sweetheart, and they incidentally compare notes. The widow informs the major she has a son of marriageable age and the major informs her he has a daughter just ripening into womanhood. They decide it would be a capital idea for their children to fall in love and be united in marriage. The widow broaches the subject to her son, but he is quite averse to entering into any such arrangement. Lucy, the daughter of the major, is quite set in her determination to balk the schemes of the old people. The widow sends her son, Edward, to the country and the major banishes his daughter to the rural district. By one of those antics of fate the stubborn children meet on the same farm, where Lucy assumes the disguise of a dairy maid and Edward masquerades as a farmhand. Lucy milks the cows and Edward drinks the milk, and the manner in which they bring about a realization of the hopes of their parents is ingenuous and charming. Lucy writes her father she is engaged to a farmhand and Edward telegraphs that he has met his fate in a dairy maid. The old folks hustle down to the farm and what they discover makes their hearts glad.

IMP.

THE PADRONE'S DAUGHTER (Aug. 19).—Luigi Messano is a prosperous padrone with a beautiful daughter, Rosita. Like many others in the Italian districts, they crowd their household goods on the fire escape, and on account of this a love romance was born. Larry Howard, the chief of the battalion of the Fire Department in the Messano district, receives orders from headquarters to clear off all obstructions from the fire escapes. This he starts out to do, and arrives in time to save Rosita from an attack at the hands of Vincenzo, a young Italian whom Luigi wishes his daughter to marry, but for whom she does not care.

Rosita visits her rescuer the next day, but is seen by Vincenzo who tells her father. The latter forbids the lovers the right to see each other, and for days they do not meet. One day Vincenzo and Luigi call upon the latter's daughter for a final answer regarding Rosita's marriage to the young Italian. Rosita refuses to marry the ruffian, who goes to the floor above to enjoy a bottle or two of chianti with his friend. They both get intoxicated, and the lamp is thrown to the floor. The curtains take fire, and in a moment the entire room is a mass of flames. Rosita is locked in the floor above. Larry happens to be at his desk at the moment the alarm is turned in by the drunken father, and he with his engine and apparatus rushes to the scene and rescues Rosita from her perilous position. Luigi ut of gratitude to his daughter's savior, permits them to see each other more frequently, and as Vincenzo has gracefully stepped from the field, one can imagine the result.

CHAMPION.

THE BUM AND THE BOMB (Aug. 19).—Si Haskins, a farmer, receives word that a case he is interested in is up for trial. Si sets off for the Metropolis. He goes to Central Park. He falls asleep on a bench and a park bum, passing by, steals his bag. Si wakes up and gives him chase, but fails to catch him.

The bum had been reading in an old newspaper an account of the sending of a bomb to Judge Rosalsky. In the bag the bum found the address of Si's attorney and to him he showed the bag and intimated a deadly bomb was contained therein. The lawyer put money into the bum's hand and pushed him out of his office. The attorney then saw that the bum had left the "bomb" behind him. The lawer phoned to the police and pretty soon a policeman was on hand and carried away the "bomb." At the station, the captain called around him his force and they went to McGowan's Point in Central Park. Here they were about to explode the "bomb" by flinging their clubs at it when along came Si, spied his bag, and in spite of the yells of the cops, picked it up and flew. Back at the lawyer's office the latter was congratulating himself on his safe delivery from the fate impending over Judge Rosalsky when who walked in but Si and his bag. The lawyer yelled and mounted his desk. Si went away, believing his case had been settled out of court though his attorney had an odd way of winding it up.

Si made his way to Central Park again and suddenly came to the bum counting over his spoils. Si quickly seized him and carried him triumphantly to the station. In walked the farmer gripping the bum by the collar and the "bomb" by the grip. The officers hurled themselves through the windows. The bum escaped. Si, however, overtook the bum and gave him a sound drubbing.

ECLAIR.

DOLLS (Aug. 27).—Nellie Simpson's father dies and leaves her with but a few dollars and no way of earning more. Dr. Day and his wife take Nellie into their home, until something can be done for her. She seems so melancholy that Dr. Day says she must be roused. To this end he takes her with him on his rounds of visits. At length they come to the home of a very poor woman, whose only child, a girl, is a cripple, not even able to sit up. While talking with little Betty Nellie idly draws a rag which is lying on the bed, and from it fashions a rude doll. When Betty sees it she is so enraptured and lavishes such a world of love on it that Dr. Day tells her he will buy a real one if Nellie will dress it. She promises, and they go and buy a large doll, which she dresses. As they are taking the doll to Betty a rich man sends for them to come and see his motherless daughter, a child of five. The child cries for the doll, and her father hires Nellie to dress all of Lily's numerous dolls. He at length falls in love with her, in a peculiar manner, and she promises to be his wife.

LUX.

UNCLE'S FAVORITE PUDDING (Aug. 23).—Uncle Greedy is particularly pleased with the pudding which is served while he is dining with his nephew. The nephew has great expectations, and is therefore most anxious to please the old gentleman, but to his consternation, his uncle declares that he will marry the cook who made so delicious a dish. The nephew and his wife and family are stricken with fear when uncle declares his intention of getting married, and implore Mary, the cook, not to marry him. Mary has a lover and is not desirous of becoming the wife of old Uncle Greedy. Nevertheless she is very cute and informs them that she must have time to consider their uncle's proposal. The week that follows is anything but pleasant for the members of the household, who are slaves to the wishes of the erstwhile cook. Mary realizes the strength of her position, and insists upon her master and mistress doing all the housework. Mary becomes a regular tyrant, but Lily, the nephew's daughter, finds a way out. She discovers the recipe for the pudding and soon masters the art; however, she keeps her secret to herself. One day Uncle Greedy turns up to dinner and the cook blankly refuses to make the coveted pudding. As she is exhibiting her airs and graces, Lily steals quietly out and re-enters later with a fine pudding all steaming hot. Uncle's ill-humor quickly vanishes and he swears that his charming little niece shall be heir to all his fortune. Mary retires crestfallen to seek consolation upon the manly bosom of P. C. 123, her particular gentleman friend.

VIEWS OF THE LIVRAN (Aug. 23).—Some very interesting scenery which by its beauty will please young and old and will surely be appreciated and enjoyed by all.

REPUBLIC.

THE PICKANINNIES AND THE WATERMELONS (Aug. 26).—Mammy has been blessed with a large brood of youngsters, who, characteristic of the Southern Negroes, are carefree and shiftless, having no thought but that of pleasure and amusement. Their fondness for watermelon, instead of leading to their downfall, merely adds to their pleasure when, through a series of comical adventures, they are enabled to relieve a farmer of his entire wagon load of melons.

A cakewalk, jubilee dance and a custard pie-eating contest by the younger as well as the older members, lends added comedy of a hilarious type to the story, and the mental battle of Parson Jones between piety and love for a watermelon, wherein the watermelon comes off victorious, is an extremely clever piece of comedy acting.

The story is unique as well as original, employing as it does an entire company of Negro performers.

Among the Exhibitors

Decorah, Ia.—E. K. Hoyden has been succeeded by Henry Wolfgram in the Empire.

Northwood, Ia.—Brager & Rue have been succeeded by John M. Slossom in the Airdome.

Oelwein, Ia.—Claude Schneider sold his interest in the Dreamland to T. A. Bryan, who is now sole proprietor.

Bovey, Minn.—James Barlow will rebuild his moving picture theater, which was recently destroyed by fire.

Onalaska, Wis.—Earl R. Dunlap will open a motion picture theater here.

Dayton, Ohio.—Sherman W. and Benjamin Potter will erect a picture theater at the corner of Third and William treets.

River Falls, Wis.—Work has commenced on the Citizens' Opera House.

East St. Louis, Ill.—A winter theater to cost about $30,000, will be erected at Prairie and St. Louis Avenues, on the site of an airdome, the St. Louis Theater, following the incorporation yesterday of the William Goldman Amusement and Investment Company.

Washington, D. C.—Plans are being prepared for a picture theater here at 14th and Irving Streets, Northwest.

Galveston, Texas.—The Ayers Building, on Postoffice Street, is being converted into a moving picture theater for Cliett & Bledsoe.

Harlan, Ia.—Mrs. A. A. Allen and Mrs. Fred Walker bought a motion picture theater here.

Holstein, Ia.—C. L. Voelkers sold his interest in the Scenic Theater to Conrad Claussen.

Monticello, Ia.—O. B. Crane will conduct a motion picture theater here.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Cortland Theater Company will erect a picture theater on Washington Street, to be known as the Strand.

Macon, Ga.—The Savoy Picture Theater here was destroyed by fire at a loss of $500.

Dufur, Ore.—The Princess Picture Theater here was partly destroyed by fire.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Anderson & Haupt are preparing plans for a picture theater here on Frankling and Clearfield Streets, for the Film Exchange Co.

Dufur, Ore.—The Princess Moving Picture Theater here was partially destroyed by fire.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Plans are being prepared for a picture theater at Holton and Center Streets, for Edward Geiger.

Baltimore, Md.—Pearce & Scheck, owners of the Victoria Theater, will erect a picture theater at Third and Roland Streets.

Grandon, Wis.—Work has commenced on an opera house here.

Tripplett, Mo.—Plans are being prepared for an opera house to cost $5,000.

Reading, Pa.—McGently & Drexel have taken out permits for the erection of a picture theater at Tenth and Greenwich Streets, to cost $3,500.

Stillwater, Okla.—Work has commenced on the Jackson Moving Picture Theater.

Passaic, N. J.—The Theatorium Moving Picture Theater was destroyed by fire at a great loss.

Highland, Ill.—Plans are being prepared for an opera house, which will cost $8,000.

Georgetown, Del.—Plans are being prepared for a picture theater for Lowe & Son.

Albany, N. Y.—The Majestic Amusement Company of Troy, will erect a new picture theater here.

Carroll, Iowa.—Snyder & Herman Olerich have purchased the Lamb Electric Moving Picture Theater here.

Ridgefarm, Ill.—Plans are being prepared for a new opera house here.

Quincy, Ill.—Peter Pinkleman, the former well-known East Broadway merchant, has purchased two picture theaters on Hampshire Street, between Fifth and Sixth Streets.

Cedar Falls, Iowa.—Work has commenced on the erection of a five-cent theater on the Dayton Estate.

Eddyville, Iowa.—E. L. Madsen and F. M. Packard of Belmond, are preparing plans to erect a picture theater here.

Monroe City, Mo.—A. S. Burch has sold his interest in the Gem Moving Picture Theater to his partner, R. A. Kirby.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Plans are being prepared for on opera house at Third and Garey Streets.

INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS, INC.

5 WEST 14th ST., NEW YORK CITY

IMPORTERS AND EXPORTERS

DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC FILMS

INTERNATIONAL EXCLUSIVE FEATURES IFT

NEW AND SECOND HAND FILMS

OF EVERY MAKE AND DESCRIPTION

FEATURE FILMS A SPECIALTY

EXHIBITORS' HEADQUARTERS

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY

(Incorporated)

50 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

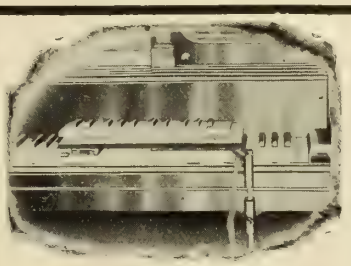
Jobbers in Edison, Powers and Motiograph Machines and Parts

Machines repaired by Expert Mechanics. Genuine Parts Only Used.

SPECIALTIES

Mirror Screens	Condensers	Gas Making Outfits
Chairs	Edison Transformers	Limes Film Cement
Tickets	Ft. Wayne Compsensarcs	Branch General Disinfectant Co.
Pianos	Asbestos State Booths
Bio & Electric Carbons	Asbestos Wire	Scenery, Stage Effects
Special Gundlach Lenses	Switches	Theatres Bought, Sold, Rented
	Plugs Spotlights

CHAS. A. CALEHUFF, Pres. and Gen. Mgr.



Patent Allowed

Musical Electric Bells and Piano played at the same time with a

BARTON PIANO ATTACHMENT

(Patented).

All the big, expensively operated theatres are making money with musical bells.

You can now make the money without the expense. Beautiful chords and harmony played from the ordinary piano music, the accompaniment on the piano and the melody on the bells. Improved bells, play loud or soft. Write to-day.

DAN BARTON, 266 East Irving St., Oshkosh, Wisconsin

Gundlach Projection Lenses Guarantee You the Sharpest and Most Brilliant Picture it is Possible to Produce.

If you want to improve your picture just order a lens for trial subject to approval and see the result with your own eyes. If you give the height and width of the screen, the size of the picture wanted and the distance from the machine to the centre of the screen we can furnish a lens of the exact focus for your operating conditions.

Many Exhibitors have found it an advantage to ask our advice about lenses before equipping new Theatres. Do not be afraid of a long throw. No matter what the distance is to the screen we can supply lenses of suitable focus and great illuminating power. All the best theatres in Rochester use our lenses and every customer has been satisfied of their superiority to ordinary lenses. THE LENS MAKES THE PICTURE, and you cannot get the best result out of the film unless you use Gundlach Lenses.

You can order through any Film Exchange or Dealer in Motion Picture Supplies.

Gundlach Projection Lenses will be furnished to order with the following machines subject to a little higher price than ordinary lenses: Powers Cameragraph, The Motiograph, The Simplex, The American Standard, The Edison. Our Lenses are used by the Kinemacolor Co. and a large number of the finest theatres in the United States and Canada.

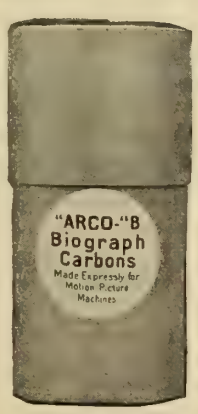
GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN OPTICAL CO., 808 Clinton Ave. So., Rochester, N. Y.



Use the Real

Projector Carbon "Biograph"

Brand

L. E. Frorup & Co.

232 Greenwich St., New York City

THE

Eye Comfort System

OF

Indirect Illumination

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theaters a month.

This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

National X-Ray Reflector Co.,
227 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago.

Distance, Screen to Rear of Auditorium.....
Ceiling Height .....
Width of House.....
Name .....

Among the Exhibitors

Wheeling, W. Va.—The Star Theater is about completed and will be opened soon.

Kansas City, Mo.—Manager Churchill will erect a new theater at Thirteenth and McGee Streets, to cost $25,000.

Winner, S. D.—R. A. Haskins sold his Cosmo Picture Theater to Lakin & Petrick.

Emporia, Kan.—Messrs. Carl Wooton and Joseph Clever will open a picture show here.

Marion, Ind.—C. E. Zink of Monticello, has purchased the Star Theater from Leroy Tudor.

West McLellan, Texas.—Charles Jares will erect an up-to-date moving picture and vaudeville theater here.

Fremont, O.—H. G. Fleischman is making arrangements for the establishment of a new moving picture and vaudeville theater here.

Attica, Ind.—The Lyric Theater has been sold to Arnet Groves by Mr. Murphy.

Kokomo, Ind.—Mrs. Anna Jay is preparing to open an up-to-date motion picture theater in Main Street. It will cost $5,000.

Rochester, N. Y.—Another motion picture theater is to be built at North and Grove Streets, at a cost of $12,500.

Mitchell, S. D.—Martin Alseth is about to build a motion picture theater at Main Street and Fifth Avenue.

Louisville, Ky.—George A. Epstean and Adolph Fernsterwall will erect the Hippodrome Theater at Fifth and Walnut Streets.

Lake City, Ia.—The Grand Theater here was opened Aug. 1st.

Logan, Ia.—George Erven has purchased the local moving picture theater and will take possession at once.

Joliet, Ill.—Joseph C. Henning, S. B. Herrington and J. T. Henderson have leased the Joliet Theater.

Lafayette, Ind.—The Lyric Motion Picture Theater is being remodeled and will be opened in the near future.

Kane, Pa.—The Happyland Motion Picture Theater has been taken over by J. G. Gillbride, formerly of Titusville, Pa. Extensive improvements will be made.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—Charles McKellar and Donald Avey of this city, have purchased a picture show at Pierceton, and taken possession of the same.

Brattleboro, Vt.—Mrs. Emma Farrington will open a motion picture theater in the Miner Building.

Baltimore, Md.—H. J. Keating is having plans prepared for a motion picture theater at 308 South Broadway. It will cost $1,000.

Marinette, Wis.—The Bijou Theater management has discontinued vaudeville and will install motion pictures.

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—Plans have been drawn for a moving picture theater building to be erected on First Avenue.

Grundy Center, Ia.—Charles Johnston will erect a two-story building for a motion picture theater.

New Ulm, Minn.—Dr. J. L. Schoch will erect a one-story fireproof brick moving picture and vaudeville theater on South Minnesota Street.

Winnipeg, Man.—C. H. Millen of Detroit, Mich., will erect a vaudeville and motion picture theater here.

Hastings, Minn.—The Royal Theater, owned by C. J. Morey, has been sold to Ben Hofseth and John Braaten of Minneapolis.

Driggs, Idaho.—H. D. Winger has opened his modern motion picture theater in the Olmstead block.

Piqua, Ohio.—The Campbell Bros. Amusement Company of Chicago, has leased the airdome in Ash Street, near Wayne.

Fort Dodge, Iowa.—The Princess Amusement Company will open its new motion picture theater on September 1. It will be under the management of R. Fobes.

Buhl, Minn.—The new Star Theater opened for business.

West McLennan, Texas.—Charles Jares is installing a motion picture theater in East Oak Street.

Fremont, O.—The Fox Circuit Company, of New York, is to open a motion picture and vaudeville theater in the Burroughs Block.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—The Dutchess Theater, at Main and Crandall Streets, has been reopened with motion pictures as the attraction.

Newark, N. J.—The Ironbound Amusement Company will erect a modern motion picture theater at 128 Hamburg Place. It is to cost $5,000.

Cottonwood Falls, Kan.—Carl Wooten and Joseph Clever, of Emporia, have rented the new Odeon Motion Picture Theater from M. K. Harman.

Wheeling, W. Va.—Chambers & Wade opened their new motion picture theater in Jefferson Avenue, August 1.

Toronto, S. D.—A motion picture theater is to be opened in the Amundson Building as soon as the work of renovation has been completed.

Oakland, Cal.—A new motion picture theater is in course of construction in Twenty-third Avenue, adjoining Castle Hall.

Rochester, N. Y.—Robert Rappaport has been granted a permit to erect a motion picture theater at Jefferson Avenue and Whittlesey Street, at a cost of $4,000.

Jopin, Mo.—A moving picture theater, with a seating capacity of 800 is to be erected at Main and Fifth Streets.

Livingston, Mont.—William Haight of the Orpheum Theater, has purchased the Colonial Theater and reopened it with a motion picture show.

Richmond, Ind.—J. Norris of Liberty, will open a motion picture theater in the Millikan Building.

Madison, S. D.—Fred Kurth is renovating his building in West Fourth Street in order to open a motion picture theater.

Ely, Minn.—The Ely Opera House has been reopened with first-run of motion pictures. Messrs. Toms, Olds, Chinn and Knutson are the lessees.

Beloit, Wis.—Manager C. T. Quinn of the Lyric Theater, is making extensive improvements to his playhouse.

Rensselaer, N. Y.—John J. Sullivan wil open a new motion picture theater adjoining Columbia Hall.

Roswell, N. M.—Charles Abel, formerly of Ft. Worth, Texas, has taken over the management of the Majestic Theater here.

Baltimore, Md.—H. J. Keating is having plans prepared for a new motion picture theater to be erected at 308 South Broadway, at a cost of $7,000.

Madison, Wis.—Sherwood & McWilliams will operate a motion picture show in the Majestic Theater during the summer season.

Wheeling, W. Va.—The old Star Theater is being remodeled and will be opened as a motion picture house.

Winner, S. D.—R. A. Haskins has sold the Cosmo Motion Picture Theater.

Bellaire, W. Va.—The new Roma Motion Picture Theater in Belmont Street, is nearly completed.

Cincinnati, O.—The brick picture show house at 306 West Fifth Avenue, owned by Huss Brothers, is undergoing extensive alterations.

Altus, Ark.—A new motion picture airdome has been opened on the public square and is enjoying excellent patronage.

Rockford, Ia.—G. W. Dawson has disposed of his motion picture theater to Hubbard, Johnson & Co.

Columbia, Mo.—Mrs. Ollie Barnes has bought out the half interest of William McClary in the "M" Theater, and becomes sole owner.

Princeton, Ind.—The Grand Theater in West Broadway, which has been undergoing repairs, has been reopened.

Villisca, Ia.—Dr. F. M. Childs will open a new airdome at the corner of Third Avenue and Sixth Street here.

Granite Falls, Minn.—The Misses Ella and Lily Yaeger have purchased a moving picture theater in this city.

Baltimore, Md.—H. J. Strentny, 1736 East Fayette Street, has plans for a moving picture theater at 308 South Broadway.

Baltimore, Md.—H. P. Roth, 537 Calvin Street, is having plans prepared for a vaudeville and moving picture theater at 322 Forrest Street.

Ft. Dodge, Ia.—The Princess Amusement Company wil open a new theater here.

Ft. Madison, Ia.—J. H. Fleagle and Fred Speilman bought the Crown Theater here.

Lenox, Ia.—Chas. Hennig sold his motion picture theater to Thos. Reiner.

New Hampton, Ia.—The Idle Hour Theater has been purchased by a Mr. Matlock.

Wellsburg, Ia.—Eells & Chase will soon open the Crystal Theater here.

Woodbine, Ia.—Wilkins & Hupp sold their motion picture theater to Fred Cromie.

Hearme, Nebr.—Emmett Rohde wil open a motion picture theater here.

Appleton, Wis.—John Maurer closed out his grocery business and will remodel the building and open a motion picture theater.

Grand Rapids, Wis.—H. H. Hoyt sold the Grand Theater to Peter Mitchell and Chas. Waterman.

Hankinson, N. D.—Arthur Mahar and Frank Drey, have purchased the moving picture theater here.

Rockville, Ind.—The Moving picture theater here has been sold by John Pruett to the International Film Co.

Brownsville, Tenn.—Henry Sonfield has opened up a new moving picture theater here in the opera house.

Gallitzin, Pa.—Work has commenced on the erection of the new theater which is being built here by Jerome Dawson. It will cost $15,000.

Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Plans have been prepared for the erection of a new theater here at the corner of Wayne and Clinton Streets, which will cost $50,000.

Lockhart, Texas.—A contract has been awarded for the erection of a new moving picture theater to be built here.

Huntington, L. I., N. Y.—Harris Golstein will have plans prepared for the erection of his new theater here.

Pomona, Cal.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new opera house here, which will cost $40,000.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Plans have been prepared for the erection of a new moving picture theater here at 503 South Geddes Street, which will cost $5,000.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new theater here in Third Street.

Birmingham, Ala.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new theater here by the Interstate Amusement Co.

Hankinson, N. D.—Felix Kamrowski has sold his moving picture theater to Thos. Maher of Breckenridge.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Irwin & Leighton are preparing plans for the erection of a new theater at Germantown Avenue and Venango Street, for George H. and Walter Stuempfig.

Ebensburgh, Pa.—Brown & Wolfe have secured the first floor in the new Odd Fellows' Building here and will operate a new moving picture show in it.

Nashville, Tenn.—Plans have been prepared for the enlargement of the Crystal Moving Picture Theater here.

Virginia, Minn.—The new Royal Theater being erected on Chestnut Street by R. A. McLean, who also operates the Grand, is nearly ready to open. This will be a vaudeville and picture house.

Forge, Pa.—Plans are being prepared to erect a new moving picture theater here on Main Street.

Grand Island, Neb.—Mr. Jarvis has sold the airdome at West Third and Walnut Streets to T. H. Thompson, of Cotesfield.

Lebanon, Pa.—William R. Storm of Lancaster, has been chosen as manager of the Hippodrome by Owner Louis Samler.

Reading, Pa.—Fred Drexel and Allen W. McKently are building a picture theater at Tenth and Greenwich Streets. It is to be 27.6 by 101.6, and will have a capacity of 500.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Rex Amusement Company is erecting a theater, store and office building at Grand and Lucas Avenues. It will be on a plot 107 by 150, will seat over 2,000, and will cost $150,000. Vaudeville and pictures will be shown.

Lockhart, Texas.—A building 45 by 84 feet, to be used as an airdome and winter picture show, is being erected here.

Windsor, Mich.—Herbert Alice has opened the Princess, in Sandwich Street East.

Newport, Ind.—The Idle Hour Theater Company has been incorporated; capital, $300. Incorporators, H. C. and Elma Sawyer, and S. D. Chipps.

Aniat, Ia.—Schwenneker Brothers have sold their picture theater to E. F. Grace.

Casey, Ia.—R. C. Otis has opened an electric theater here.

Davenport, Ia.—J. H. Blanchard has sold the Iowa Theater to Oscar Wernentin.

FILMS FOR SALE.
New Catalogue just off the Press. You will be surprised at the bargains.
ACME FILM CO., INC.
130 West 37th Street, New York.

Motion Picture Cameras, Printers and Perforators. Bought, Sold and Exchanged. We take Moving Pictures. Camera and Cameramen to Hire. We do developing and printing.
SPECIAL EVENT FILM MFGR. CO., Inc.,
248 West 35th St., N. Y. C.

Now Booking. Western Penn'a.
Wreck of the Aurora—Three Reels.
A thrilling marine picture.
Write for bookings to
FRANK PHYTHYON,
Clymer, Pa. Indiana Co.

California Exhibitors
BUY YOUR SUPPLIES FROM
G. A. METCALFE
Everything in the MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS
153 EDDY STREET, SAN PRANCISCO, CAL.
"All orders shipped same hour as received."

FEATURES FOR SALE

Zigomar vs. Nick Carter	4 reels	$250.00
Flight to Death	2 "	110.00
Desdemona	2 "	130.00
Paris Auto Bandits	2 "	125.00

These prices include posters.
FEDERAL FEATURE FILM SUPPLY CO.,
Fourth Floor, Hartford Bldg., Chicago.

THE TOURNAMENT FILM CO.
TOLEDO, OHIO.
Owners of the following feature films:
1911 Cheyenne Cowboy and Indian Frontier Celebration.
Fall Round-Up on the Y-6 Ranch.
State Rights for These Films for Sale.
Bookings Can Be Made by Writing Us.

ZIGOMAR has escaped again!
AND WILL DASH THROUGH
Three Thrilling Reels of New Pictures
TO BE RELEASED SOON BY
THE F. & E. FILM CO., Cleveland, Ohio

"WARNER'S FEATURES LEAD TO SUCCESS"

HOME OFFICE:
145 West 45th Street WRITE TO NEAREST OFFICE New York City

American Moving Picture Machine Co.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE

STANDARD

Automatic Moving Picture Machine

101-102 Beekman Street New York

"The House of a Thousand Features"

Connect with a live wire; telephone, wire or write for dates and prices. Big advertising for all our features.

REDEMPTION	3	Reels
GLASS COFFIN	3	"
RED FALCON	3	"
FOUR DARE-DEVILS	3	"
AFTER DARKNESS, LIGHT	3	"
RIGHTS OF YOUTH	3	"
WHITE DOMINO	3	"
CYRANO DE BERGERAC	2	"
SIEGE OF CALAIS	2	"
VILLAGE SCANDAL	2	"
SOLD	2	"
GOLDEN BELT	2	"
HEROINE OF DERNA	2	"

IMPERIAL FEATURE FILM COMPANY
121 FOURTH AVENUE, PITTSBURGH, PA.

BARGAINS!!

For Sale - Slightly Used Mechanisms

One Edison Mechanism Model B, outside shutter $55.00
One Standard Mechanism 55.00
One Standard Mechanism 45.00
also
One new Trainer Asbestos Portable Booth, with Leatheroid Case to carry same.... 100.00
(Everything for the Motion Picture Theatre except the film)

PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT CO
21 E. 14th STREET NEW YORK CITY

WHY

Buy Other State Right Features When

OLIVER TWIST

With NAT C. GOODWIN as FAGIN

(5 REELS)

MAY STILL BE HAD

General Film Publicity & Sales Co.
145 W. 45th St., New York City

MR. EXHIBITOR:- "The Fotoplayer" Something Brand New

An Exclusive Musical Marvel (fully protected by patents).
Absolutely the only musical instrument that will play correct music for the pictures continuously or stop at will, marking a new era in the Moving Picture World.

THE FOTOPLAYER

PRODUCES:—"Wonderful Battle Scene Effects."
SUPPLIES:—"The Griefs, Joys and Triumphs of the people on the canvas."
A Storm-Swept Sea on the screen is accompanied by a realistic roaring of the wind and beating of the waves.
The railroad train, a fire scene with galloping horses; in fact, every known sound desired.
WRITE TO-DAY. Mention your seating capacity and we will tell you everything.

Factories: Oakland & Berkeley, California.
The American Photo Player Sales Company
Offices and Salesrooms: 130 Kearny St., San Francisco, Cal.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted

SITUATIONS WANTED.

DESIRES POSITION—Manager and Operator. In business for myself past four years. Best references. Address LOCK BOX 448, Northfield, Vermont.

PIANIST LEADER, Wife, illustrated songs. State salary, jointly. Managing experienced. PIANIST LEADER, Orange Lake Park Theatre, Orange Lake, N. Y.

AT LIBERTY—Moving Picture and Vaudeville Manager. Are you looking for a good man that knows his business? Knows how to handle your business to your advantage, no details overlooked. Experienced operator, best of references. Experience, five years. Sober, an all around good fellow and mixer. I can make your empty seats full, and your house a winner. Address W. L. S., Box 164, New Castle, Ind.

MOVING PICTURE OPERATOR—Experienced, wishes position in New York City or anywhere. SCAVULLI, 2292 Second Ave., New York City.

MANAGER—Moving Picture House or Vaudeville. Thoroughly experienced, no proposition too large. Will go anywhere. Address S. C., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

MASS. LICENSED OPERATOR—Six years. Presently employed. Wishes a steady position in Massachusetts by October on week's notice. Salary, eighteen. No janitor work. Worked fourteen houses. Long period. Sober, reloable. Address LICENSED OPERATOR, care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

OPERATOR—Motion Picture Machine Operator desires a position in Central Illinois. Three years' experience. Address HARVEY CHIM, 309 N. East St., Bloomington, Ill.

A-1 CAMERAMAN would like steady position. Seven years' experience. Address S. R., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

PIANIST—Expert pianist desires position in Moving Picture Theatre. Address LILLIAN MacCULLOCH, 430 East 2nd St., Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y.

THEATRES FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Theatre, only vaudeville theatre in city of 14,000, in central Ohio. Theatre centrally located, two doors from postoffice, on square. Seating capacity, 575. First-class stage and full set of scenery. Operating room equipped with two machines for running pictures. Every modern improvement, large lobby, first-class house in every way. Must sacrifice on account of other business. Will dispose of lease or sell interest to responsible party who would look after the interests of the place. Rent, $100 per month, five-year lease, with five years' privileges. A snap for live, up-to-date hustler. Can be run as first-class picture house or in conjunction with vaudeville or stock companies. No opera house or other vaudeville in town. Address W. G. C., A. T., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

TO LEASE—In Allentown, Pa., picture and vaudeville house. Seating capacity, 1,300. Large and roomy stage. Full stage equipment. Thriving city. Excellent opportunity. Theatre in business section. Write. CHANOCK & SENDEROWITZ, 333 Hamilton Street, Allentown, Pa. Bell 'Phone 921.

FOR SALE—If taken at once. A good moving picture theatre cheap. Address MANAGER, Temple Theatre, Otsego, Mich.

MOVING PICTURE THEATRE, principal thoroughfare, Market Street, San Francisco, the Exposition City. All equipment, good lease, grand future. Address 304 Spruce Street, San Francisco.

FOR SALE—At a big sacrifice, complete moving picture theatre equipment, chairs, machines, piano, etc. Everything in first-class condition. Goods must be sold at once on account of theatre closing. Address H. EDEL, 528 White Bldg., Buffalo, N. Y.

HELP WANTED.

TALKING PICTURES—Professional lady desires respectable, experienced partner with good voice and references. Must assist in booking. Address L. M., No. 459 West 23rd St., New York City.

WANTED—Lady Pianist, must be A-1, and able to play for Pictures and Vaudeville. References required. Address GEM THEATER, Torrington, Conn.

WANTED—Experienced cameramen in all parts of America to cover current events. Wire immediately ARGUS WEEKLY, Los Angeles, California.

WANTED—Pianists to send name and address of theater where playing for big collection of FREE MUSIC. All New York's latest hits—free for a postal. Most remarkable offer ever made. Address S. & B. PUB. CO., 124 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CANDY PRIVILEGES—Advertiser wants candy privilege in Motion Picture Theatre, New York or Brooklyn. Address A. WACHS, 219 Second St., New York.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED—Second-hand Booth that will pass inspection in Pennsylvania. E. H. WISE, Hughesville, Pa.

WANTED—To buy a Motion Picture Camera. Any make. D. MATTHEWS, 1012 Wells Street, Chicago, Ill.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Auto Electric Lighted Traveling Motion Picture Show. The complete equipment is in fine condition and consists of one Garford 7-passenger touring car, equipped foth a 2' W. D. C. dynamo; 1 Powers No. 5 Picture Machine complete; 8 reels of fine pictures. All cables, volt meters, lights, switches, etc., for connecting up. Guaranteed to work perfectly and ready for any trip. E. G. KAY, Box 246, Snohomish, Wash.

FOR SALE—Fort Wayne Compensarc, 110 volt, $45.00. Edison 1 pin Machine, all attachments, $65.00. Piano Player, $70.00. Piano, $75.00. All Good order. BARNELL, 3745 Main Ave., Norwood, Ohio.

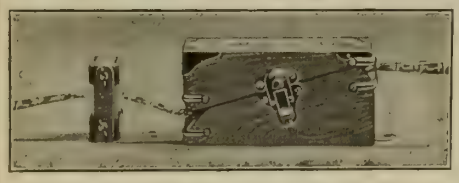
FOR SALE—Moving Picture Theater costing $1400, for $700. $32.50 month, rent. Bargain.

FOR SALE—Film, $2.50 to $5 reel. 2 and 3-reel features $25 and up. Edison, Powers, Lubin, Motiograph, new, $100. For rent, 12,000 feet film, $12 weekly. Songs and posters free. Will buy any make of films and machine. H. DAVIS, Watertown, Wis.

MISCELLANEOUS.

TO FILM MAKERS—Wanted immediately, sole agencies (British Isles and Colonies), for highest quality "Feature Films," all subjects. As preliminary, send best terms. Synopsis subjects published and other particulars. WHITAKER, Certified Public Accountant, Victoria Road, Padiham, Burnley, England.

LECTURE SLIDES WANTED—I want to purchase or rent educational and travel slides. Sets with lectures preferred. R. J. MACADAM, Lyceum Theater, Sydney, N. S., Canada.



The cleaner sets between the rewinds and does the work as the film is rewound.
Removes oil and dust.
Guaranteed not to injure film.
Prevents rain.
No trouble to operator. Write for free literature.
Price $10.00. Pads $1.00 per hundred

Mortimer Film Cleaner Company
703 Fidelity Bldg., Portland, Me.

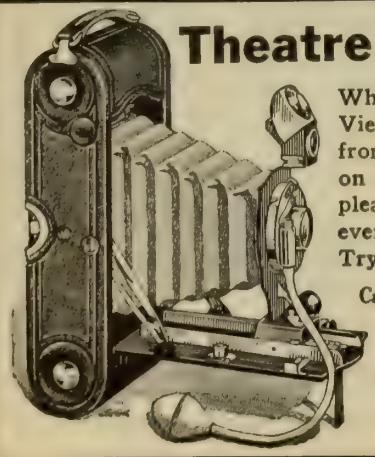
CLEAN YOUR FILMS FOR One Cent Each

If your Exchange cannot supply you order from us.

THE LATEST SONG HITS ALWAYS

Western Song Slide Service, Inc.
OXFORD BUILDING
118 NO. LA SALLE ST. CHICAGO, ILL.
SLIDES RENTED—SPECIAL INDUCEMENTS
PRICES AND CATALOGUE ON REQUEST

Theatre Managers



Why not KODAK Local Views; Have Slides Made from Them and Show on Your Screens? This pleases your audiences everywhere all the time. Try it.

Cameras and All Photo Supplies

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.
21 EAST 14th STREET
NEW YORK CITY

MOVING PICTURE LECTURES

HEAR
Louise M. Marion
in her
NEW ILLUSTRATED POEMS AND FEATURE LECTURES
Highest Testimonials. Now Booking.
LOUISE M. MARION
459 West 23rd Street - NEW YORK
Terms Reasonable.

HIGH CLASS ATTRACTION FOR THEATRES CHURCHES AND SCHOOLS

Exclusive Features!

The Royal Feature Film Company

ONE RELEASE EACH WEEK

THE BEST THAT MONEY CAN BUY

BLAZING THE TRAIL	Bison,	2 reels
POST TELEGRAPHER	Bison,	2 "
THE CRISIS	Bison,	2 "
LIEUTENANT'S LAST FIGHT	Bison,	2 "
DEAD MAN'S CHILD	Gt. Northern,	3 "
THE OUTCAST	Bison,	2 "
ST. GEORGE AND THE DRAGON	Milano,	3 "
MYSTERIES OF SOULS	Gt. Northern,	3 "
WRECK OF THE AURORA	World's Best,	3 "
LAST OF THE FRONTIGNACS	Gt. Northern,	3 "
VEILED INNOCENCE	Ambrosio,	3 "

Every One a Box Office Winner

Watch for future releases and get busy quick before your competitor beats you to it. You will need each one of them at least two days. One, three, six, eight sheets; heralds, booklets, banners, etc.

SPECIAL NOTICE

We have just secured state rights for Ohio and West Virginia on "Last Stand of the Dalton Boys at Coffeyville, Kansas." Book it quick and get your S.R.O. sign ready.

NOTHING BUT { STATE RIGHT FEATURES the Best To Be Had } RELEASED BY US

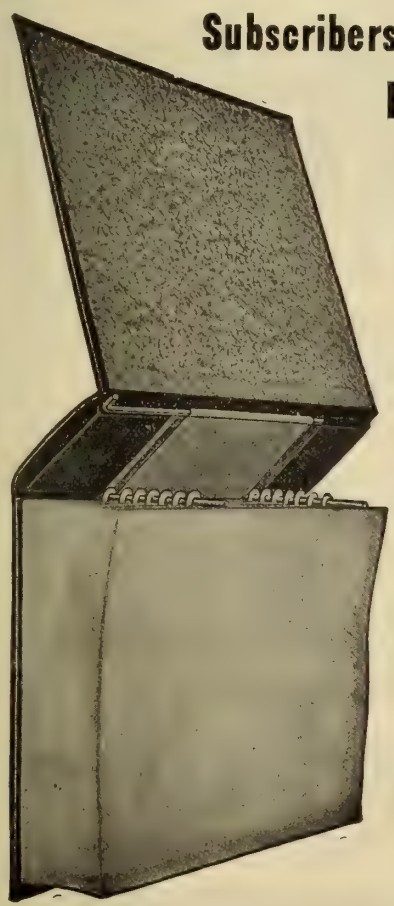
302 Schultz Bldg., High and Hickory Sts., Columbus, O.



Subscribers, Please Note

BINDERS

For each three months' volume of the

Moving Picture World

Can be furnished as follows, express charges additional:

75c each.
$2.60 for four.
$7.25 per doz.

By prepaid mail $1.00 each.

Simple and Secure
Single Copies easily removed

Moving Picture World

125 East 23d Street
New York City

Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia Exhibitors

We are renting the Eclair "Auto Bandits" in 3 reels. The best record breaker ever heard of at 10c.

"Dead Man's Child," "Tom Butler," "Power of Destruction," all on 3 reels. Have photographs, one sheets, three sheets, double banner, heralds, at $1.50 per thousand. Send for a sample.

"TOM BUTLER" for Ohio. Get busy, live wires.

"LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF CHINATOWN," for Pennsylvania. 3 reels. The greatest lobby display of multi colored lithographs and photos ever shown. Heralds $2.00 per thousand.

Unrestricted bookings on "Red Rose of the Apaches," 3 reels, $15.00. Heralds, $1.50 per thousand.

"ROAD TO RUIN," 3 reels	$15.00
"WHITE SLAVERY," 3 reels	15.00
"FOOLS OF SOCIETY," 3 reels	15.00
"DRUMMED OUT," 3 reels	12.00
"PRICE OF BEAUTY," 3 reels	10.00

The "Passion Play," Pathe's hand colored, 3 reels, $15.00. Italian-Turkish Wars, 2 kinds, 2 reels each, $10.00 and $15.00 daily.

Cines No. 1, $5.00. Cines No. 2, $5.00. Cines No. 3, $5.00. Siege of Calais, 2 reels, hand colored, $10.00. David's War with Absalom, 2 reels, $10. Lieutenant Daring, 2 reels, $10.00. Why Girls go Wrong, 2 reels, $10.00. Fire at Sea, 2 reels, $10.00. Dante's Purgatory, 2 reels, $10.00. Victim of Alcohol, 3 reels, $10.00. Lieut. Rose and the Hidden Treasure, 2 reels, $10.00. Great Train Robbery, $5.00. Muggins V. C., or The Defense of Khuma Hospital, $5.00.

The best commercial film service in the United States. 12 reels weekly, $15.00; 18 reels weekly, $21.00. Customer pays all express charges.

Over 50 single reel specials with great lobby display, $3.00.

Liberty Film Renting Co.

105 4th Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Bell Phone 3492 Court

WE HAVE A FEW MORE GOOD STATES OPEN FOR THESE TWO LIVE FEATURES

DEADWOOD DICK

HERO OF THE BLACK HILLS

3 REELS 3000 FEET

OF THE MOST TRUE TO LIFE WESTERN PICTURE EVER PRODUCED WITH ITS MANY EXCITING SCENES, ITS NATURAL AND BEAUTIFUL SCENERY OF THE BLACK HILLS, WHERE PICTURE WAS TAKEN

THIS ONE HAS ALSO PROVED A WINNER!

THE LAST STAND OF THE

DALTON BOYS

AT COFFEYVILLE, KANSAS

A FEW GOOD STATES LEFT

BOTH THESE FEATURES HAVE A LARGE LINE OF SWELL PAPER HERALDS AND THE LARGEST LOBBY DISPLAY OFFERED. YOU HAD BETTER WRITE, WIRE OR PHONE TODAY

ATLAS MANUFACTURING COMPANY

411 CENTURY BLDG., ST. LOUIS, MO. Phone Cent. 2131

COMING OUT SOON
OUR NEXT RELEASE QUO VADIS

WE ARE NOW READY FOR YOU WITH STATE RIGHTS FOR THE GREAT

3 REELS

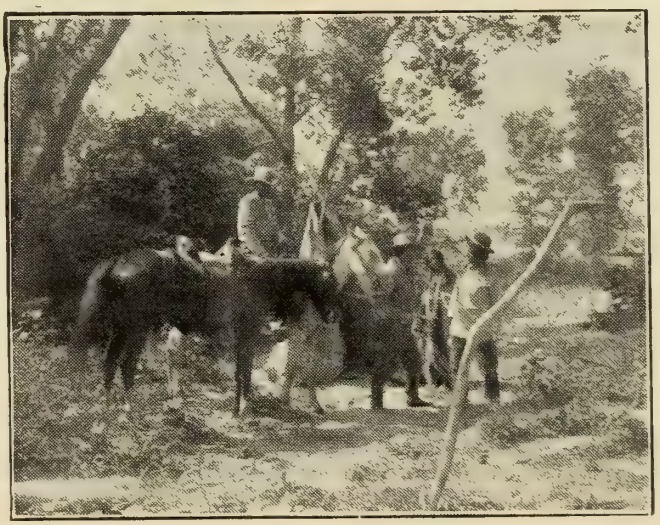
2800 FEET

SAPHO

A PLAY WITH A STRONG MORAL LESSON

THE GREATEST STORY EVER WRITTEN OF WOMAN-KIND

THIS PICTURE WILL POSITIVELY BREAK ALL PREVIOUS RECORDS of any FEATURE EVER PRODUCED!



WE ALSO HAVE A SWELL LINE of PICTORIAL PAPER from ONE-SHEETS up to TWELVE-SHEETS AND THE MOST ATTRACTIVE LOBBY DISPLAY EVER MADE FOR ANY OTHER FEATURE!

DO IT NOW! WRITE, WIRE OR PHONE

ATLAS MANUFACTURING COMPANY

411 CENTURY BLDG., ST. LOUIS, MO. Phone Cent. 2131

COMING OUT SOON OUR NEXT RELEASE QUO VADIS

INDEPENDENT Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Aug. 8—The Girl and the Gun (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 12—The Battle-Ground (2 reels).....2000
Aug. 14—The Bad Man and the Ranger (Com.-Dr.) 1000
Aug. 15—The Outlaw Colony (Drama).....1000
Aug. 19—The Land of Death (Drama).....
Aug. 21—The Wooing of Waethena (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—The Bandit of Point Loma (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 26—The Jealous Rage (Dr.).....
Aug. 28—The Lonesome Trail Pioneers (Dr.)..

"101" BISON (N. Y. M. P. CO.).

July 30—The Desert (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 2—The Gambler and the Girl (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 6—The Reformed Outlaw (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—The Garrison Triangle (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 13—The Bugle Call (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 16—The Other Girl (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 20—The Buffalo Hunt (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 23—The Reckoning (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 27—The Bandit's Gratitude (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 30—The White Lie (2 reels) (Dr.).....2000

BISON (Universal).

July 30—An Even Break (Dr.).....
Aug. 3—His Partner's Share (Dr.).....
Aug. 6—A Western Girl's Dream (Drama)...
Aug. 10—Her First Choice (Drama).....
Aug. 13—The Widow's Claim (Drama).....
Aug. 17—The Shot That Failed (Drama).....
Aug. 20—How He Made Good (Com.).....

CHAMPION.

July 29—The Poisoners (Dr.).....
Aug. 5—What a Woman Will Do (Drama)....
Aug. 12—For His Child (Drama).....
Aug. 19—The Bum and the Bomb (Comedy)...
Aug. 26—The Foundling (Dr.).....

COMET.

July 27—The Tomboy Ranch Girl (Dr.).....
July 29—Reconciled in Reno (Com.).....
Aug. 3—The Hold-Up in Buckeye Canyon (Dr.)
Aug. 5—A Bachelor's Romance (Dramatic)...1000
Aug. 10—Hold-Up in Buckeye Canyon (Dr.)...1000
Aug. 12—Two Women and One Man (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 17—Western Chivalry (Drama) 1000
Aug. 19—House of "No Children" (Com.).....1000
Aug. 24—The Deputy's Duty (Drama).....1000
Aug. 26—A Divided House (Dr.).....
Aug. 31—The Moonshiner's Task (Dr.).....

ECLAIR.

Aug. 8—Boys Again (Com.).....
Aug. 11—The Foster Sister (Com.-Dr.).....
Aug. 11—Carlsbad (Scenic).....
Aug. 13—Daddy (Comedy) .....
Aug. 15—Aunt Hetty's Gold Fish (Com.-Dr.)..
Aug. 18—A Child to the Rescue (Drama).....
Agu. 18—Egyptian Ruins (Scenic) .....
Aug. 20—Wanted, a Wife In a Hurry (Com.)..
Aug. 22—Robin Hood (3 reels; Drama).....
Aug. 25—The Will (Drama).....
Aug. 25—A Moslem Lady's Day (Novelty)....
Aug. 27—Dolls (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—The Passing Parade (Tableaux).....
Sept. 1—Two Brave Little Hearts (Dr.).....

GAUMONT.

Aug. 7—Gaumont Weekly (Topical).....
Aug. 8—The Phantom of the Night (Dr.).....
Aug. 13—Grazielle, the Gypsy (Drama).....
Aug. 14—Gaumont Weekly (Topical) .....
Aug. 15—Their Lives for Gold (Drama).....
Aug. 20—Her Supreme Sacrifice (Drama).....
Aug. 21—Gaumont's Weekly (Top.).....
Aug. 22—Androclus and the Lion (Ed. Dr.)....
Aug. 27—The Story of Chopin (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—Marriage on the Run (Com.-Dr.).....

GEM.

July 16—Two Men (Dr.).....
July 23—Bread Cast Upon the Waters (Dr.)..
July 30—Back to Her Own (Dr.).....
Aug. 6—'Neath the Homespun (Drama).....
Aug. 13—Babette (Drama).....
Aug. 20—White Dove's Sacrifice (Drama).....

GREAT NORTHERN.

July 13—Circumstantial Evidence (Dr.).....
July 18—Moving Pictures (Com.).....
July 20—Almost a Tragedy (Com.-Dr.).....
July 20—Uncle Reuben Goes to Town (Com.)..
July 27—Don't Go On a Spree (Comedy).....
Aug. 3—The King's Power (Drama).....
Aug. 10—Thou Shalt Not Kill (Drama).....
Aug. 10—The Springlock (Comedy).....
Aug. 10—When the Cat's Away (Comedy)....
Aug. 10—Thou Shalt Not Kill (Drama).....
Aug. 17—The Prodigal's Return (Drama).....
Aug. 24—For Her Sister's Sake (Drama)..... 944
Aug. 31—Love is Blind (Dr.)..... 943

IMP.

Aug. 3—The Cure that Failed (Comedy)....
Aug. 3—In and Around Chicago (Topical)....
Aug. 5—The Hindoo's Prize (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 8—Blood is Thicker Than Water (Dr.)..1000
Aug. 10—How Jones Saw the Ball Game (Comedy) .....
Aug. 10—Ferdie's Family Feud (Comedy).....
Aug. 12—Big Hearted Sim (Drama).....1000
Aug. 15—In Old Tennessee (2 reels; Drama)..2000
Aug. 17—Kidnapping Dolly (Comedy).....
Aug. 17—In and Around Charleston, S. C. (Sc.)
Aug. 19—Padrone's Daughter (Drama).....
Aug. 22—The Castaway (Drama).....
Aug. 26—Making Good (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—A Happy Family.....
Aug. 31—A Case of Smallpox.....
Aug. 31—Her Burglar .....

LUX.

July 19—Stones that Rebound (Dr.)..... 970
July 26—Mr. X and the Unfortunate Heiress (Dr.)..... 967
Aug. 2—The Mysterious Flowers (Drama).... 983
Aug. 9—A Race for Liberty (Dr.)..... 580
Aug. 9—The Postman's Escapade (Com.)..... 272
Aug. 16—Tommy Saves His Little Sister (Dr.)
Aug. 23—Uncle's Favorite Pudding (Com.).... 744
Aug. 23—Views of the Livran (Scenic)..... 239

MAJESTIC.

Aug. 4—Farmer Allen's Daughter (Dr.).....
Aug. 6—The Higher Thought (Com.).....
Aug. 11—The Matrimonial Substitute (Com.)..
Aug. 11—The Striped Parasol (Comedy).....
Aug. 13—A Summer Idyl (Comedy).....
Aug. 18—Toodles (Comedy) .....
Aug. 18—A Game of Chess (Com.-Dr.).....
Aug. 20—The New Butler (Comedy).....
Aug. 25—A Corner in Kisses (Com.).....
Aug. 27—A Disputed Claim (Dr.).....

MILANO.

Aug. 3—The Battle of Two Palms (2 reels) (Dr.)
August 10—Playthings of Fate (2 reels, Dr.)..
Aug. 17—Their Guardian Angel (Drama).....
Aug. 24—The Courage of Fear (Drama).....
Aug. 24—The Courage of Fear (Dr.).....

NESTOR.

Aug. 2—Young Wild West Washing Out Gold (Dr.).....
Aug. 5—Fortunes of War (Drama).....
Aug. 7—Fatty of E Z Ranch (Comedy).....
Aug. 9—A Mexican Mix-up (Drama).....
Aug. 12—A Tale of the Foothills (Drama)....
Aug. 14—How Steve Made Good (Com.-Dr.)..
Aug. 16—The Miner's Widow (Drama).....
Aug. 19—When the Heart Calls (Drama).....
Aug. 21—The Alibi (Drama).....
Aug. 23—A Stubborn Cupid.....
Aug. 26—The Story of a Wallet (Dr.).....
Aug. 28—Uncle Bill (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—The Girls and the Chaperon (Com.)..

POWERS.

Aug. 7—As the Wind Blows (Comedy).....
Aug. 9—The Burglar and the Rose (Dr.).....
Aug. 14—Horse Show at Long Branch (Top.)..
Aug. 14—Wanted, a Practice (Comedy).....
Aug. 16—The Golden Rule (Drama).....
Aug. 21—Her Diary (Drama).....
Aug. 23—Life's Lesson (Drama).....
Aug. 28—An Exciting Outing.....
Aug. 30—Life's Lesson .....

RELIANCE.

July 20—Love Me, Love My Dog (Com.-Dr.)...
July 24—The True Love (Dr.).....
July 27—The Soldier Baby (Dr.).....
July 31—Where There is Soap, There is Hope (Comedy) .....
Aug. 3—The Wood Nymph (Drama).....
Aug. 7—Phillip Steele (2 reels) (Dr.).....
Aug. 10—The Two Fathers (Dr.).....
Aug. 14—Order in the Court (Comedy).....
Aug. 14—The Old Swimming Hole (Comedy)..
Aug. 17—A Man Among Men (Drama).....
Aug. 21—One Against One (Drama).....
Aug. 24—North of 53 (Drama).....
Aug. 31—The Secret Service Man (Dr.).....
Aug. 28—Thelma (2 reels) (Dr.).....

REPUBLIC.

July 15—The All-seeing Eye (Dr.).....
July 22—Evil be to Him Who Evil Thinks (Dr.)
July 29—A House-top Romance (Dr.).....
July 29—Evolution of a Duck Egg (Edu.).....
Aug. 5—The Octoroon's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—The Borrowing Simp (Comedy).....
Aug. 19—The Curse of Drink (Drama).....
Aug. 26—The Pickaninnies and the Watermelons (Com.) .....

REX.

Aug. 8—The Troubadour's Triumph (Dr.).....
Aug. 11—None Can Do More (Drama).....
Aug. 15—The Greater Christian (Drama).....
Aug. 18—Thus Many Souls (Drama).....
Aug. 22—An Old Fashioned Girl (Drama).....
Aug. 25—The Leader of the Band (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—An Old-fashioned Girl (Dr.).....

SOLAX.

Aug. 9—The Pink Garters (Com.).....
Aug. 14—The Blood Stain (Dr.).....
Aug. 16—The Strike (Dr.).....
Aug. 14—The Blood Stain (Drama).....
Aug. 16—The Strike (Drama) .....
Aug. 23—The Equine Spy (2 reels; Drama)....
Aug. 28—His Double (Comedy).....
Aug. 28—Phantom Paradise (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—Playing Trumps (Dr.).....

THANHOUSER.

Aug. 13—Now Watch the Professor (Com.-Dr.)
Aug. 16—The Wrecked Taxi (Drama).....
Aug. 18—As Others See Us.....
Aug. 18—Warner's Waxworks .....
Aug. 20—Her Darkest Hour.....
Aug. 23—Conductor 786 (Drama).....
Aug. 25—When a Count Counted (Dr.).....
Aug. 27—Lucile (reels 1 and 2) (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—Lucile (reel 3) (Dr.).....

VICTOR.

Aug. 2—Taking a Chance (Dr.).....
Aug. 9—The Mill Buyers (Drama).....
Aug. 16—The Chance Shot (Drama).....
Aug. 23—Her Cousin Fred (Drama).....
Aug. 30—The Winning Punch (Dr.).....

MISCELLANEOUS.

NEW YORK FILM CO.

July 15—Lights and Shadows of Chinatown (Dr.).....

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY COMPANY.

July 15—The Penalty (Dr.).....
July 29—The Circus Girl (Dr.).....

GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM COMPANY.

March 18—The Call of a Woman.....3000
April 8—Cell Thirteen.....2000
April 22—The Dead Man's Child.....3000
April 15—The Dead Man's Child, 3 Reels (Dr.)

SHAMROCK.

May 7—A Gypsy's Love (Dr.).....
May 11—Algernon's Busy Day (Com.).....
May 14—On the Verge (Dr.).....
May 18—Algernon's Busy Day (Com.).....
May 21—The Thorny Path (Dr.).....
May 25—A Cold Reception (Com.).....
May 25—The Kissing Germ (Com.).....
May 28—White Fawn (Dr.).....
May 31—A Petticoat Ranch Boss (Com.).....

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS THE BIG TICKET. ANY PRINTING ANY COLORS

5,000	-	-	$1.25	20,000	-	-	$4.60	50,000	-	-	$7.50
10,000	-	-	$2.50	25,000	-	-	$5.50	100,000	-	-	$10.00

GET THE SAMPLES STOCK TICKETS, 6 CENTS

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - - Shamokin, Pa.

The 1913 Model Motiograph

THE PEER OF ANY PICTURE MACHINE ON EARTH—IS NOW READY FOR SHIPMENT

Specifications:

MECHANISM.

Contains hardened Intermittent Sprocket. Steel Idler Rolls. Heavier Balance Wheel. All gears of steel and spiral cut teeth which means a closer fit and longer wear.

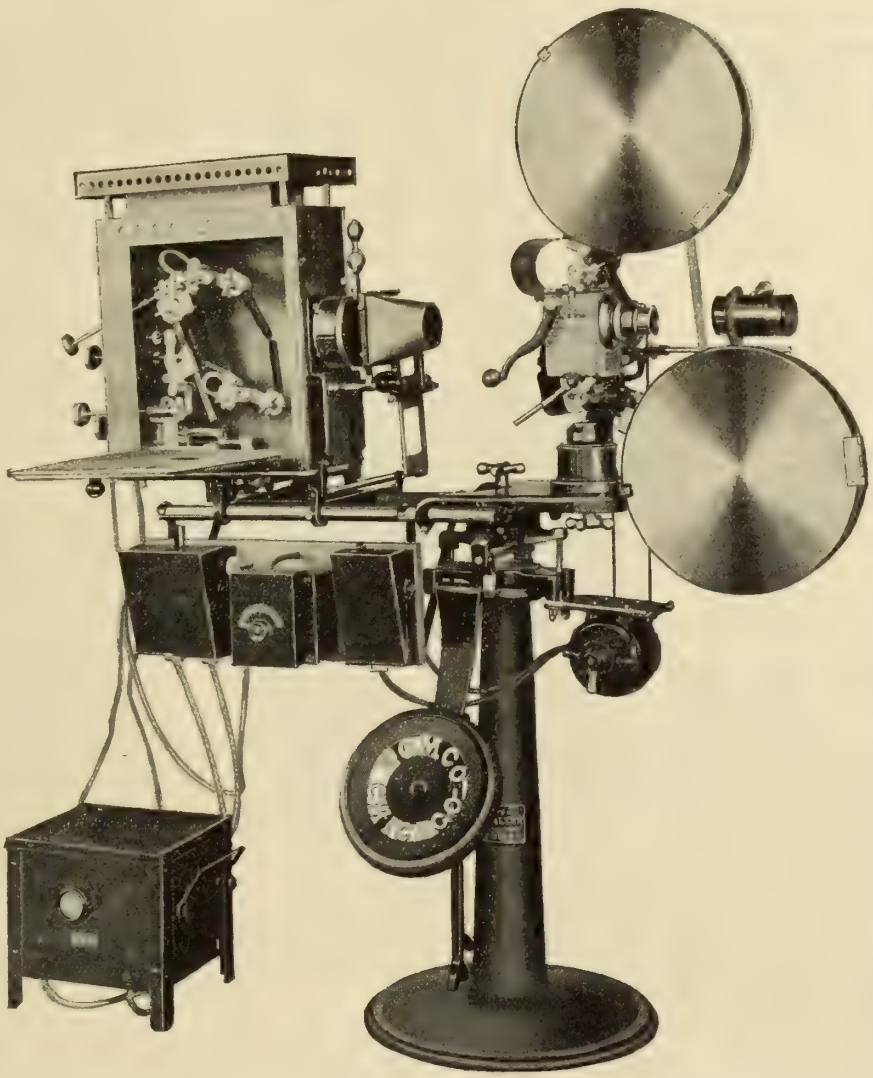
LAMP HOUSE.

The largest and best now in use. Thoroughly ventilated on all sides with large vents for the escape of heat in top hood. Carefully lined with best quality transite board in bottom, front and top. Passes inspection anywhere. Supplied only with spring hinged doors.

ARC LAMP.

125 Ampere Capacity

Heavier and better in every way. Has Universal Arm and Clamp with two adjustments added on upper carbon arm. Either backward and forward or sideways. The Universal Clamp will hold any diameter of Carbon from ¾ down to ⅜. Racks provide for a TWENTY-INCH CARBON FEED—a 12″ upper and 8″ lower.



Specifications:

MAGAZINES.

Fifteen-inch diameter to hold 2,000 feet of film at one threading.

DOWSER SHUTTER.

Large diameter with ball balanced handle. Firmly mounted on condenser mount, thus also acting as protection for lantern slides. The handle may also be used for lifting out hot condenser chamber for changing of glasses.

FILM SHIELDS.

Large and strong. Thoroughly protect film in its entire passage from one magazine to the other.

RHEOSTAT.

Either heavy grid type or coil, on 110-v. line. Our grid is adjustable from 20 to 55 ampere. The coil from 30 to 45 ampere.

STAND.

The original Gibraltar base, perfect rigidity; 3 heights with every desired adjustment.

REWIND.

We will discontinue the patented rewind heretofore incorporated in mechanism and with the 1913 model we will supply the TOGO No. 2 REWIND at no extra cost.

SWITCHBOARD—Suspended from metal sliding base. Rigid and efficient. Made of best quality slate—one inch thick. Contains main switch, spring contact motor switch, and speed control.

MOTOR DRIVE—The most efficient ever designed. Quickly attached by anyone.

MOTOR—Of high quality—strong, compact and efficient—of special construction for up-side-down use on the Motiograph.

METAL OPERATOR'S SEAT—Simple and strong and designed to do away with the dangerous and cumbersome wooden stool. So fitted to the Motiograph to take up small space and in most convenient place. May be dropped completely out of way.

Prices—Complete and Packed for Shipment

$250.00 without motor, switchboard or seat.
285.00 with motor (any voltage), switchboard and seat.
300.00 special Massachusetts, with motor, switchboard and seat.

The price has gone up for three reasons:

1st: Because of the advance in Material and Labor Cost.
2nd: Because we furnish a complete metal equipment.
3rd: Because the introduction of the Motiograph is complete.

OUR GUARANTEE

FREE UPKEEP FOR ONE YEAR COVERING PARTS of the 1913 model Motiograph mechanism, that may become worn out in service, or which may show defect in material or workmanship, with the understanding that the part be sent to us, charges prepaid, for examination.

Manufactured by - - - The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company

564-572 W. Randolph Street - - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR SALE BY LIVE DEALERS EVERYWHERE

LICENSED Release Dates

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, C. G. P. C., Cines, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Eclipse, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Pathe, Selig.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, C. G. P. C., Vitagraph.

Saturday—Edison, Essanay, Cines, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

July 29—Black Sheep (Dr.).....
Aug. 1—The Narrow Road (Dr.).....
Aug. 5—The Tourist (Com.).....
Aug. 5—What the Doctor Ordered (Com.).....
Aug. 8—A Child's Remorse (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—Rameses, King of Egypt (Special—2 reels—Drama) .....
August 12—The Inner Circle (Drama).....
August 15—An Interrupted Elopement (Com.)..
August 15—The Tragedy of a Dress Suit (Com.)
Aug. 19—With the Enemy's Help (Drama)....1000
Aug. 22—A Change of Spirit (Drama).....1000
Aug. 26—Mr. Grouch at the Seashore (Com.)....
Aug. 26—Through Dumb Luck (Com.).....
Aug. 29—A Pueblo Legend (Dr.).....

CINES.

(G. Kleine.)

Aug. 10—The Danger Line (Dr.).....1067
August 12—Rameses, King of Egypt (Special; 2 reels; Drama) .....
August 13—Mona Lisa In Disguise (Com.).... 600
August 13—Vicovara, Italy (Scenic)..... 400
August 17—A Convict's Gratitude (Drama)....1025
Aug. 20—A Matter of Pride (Drama).....1000
Aug. 24—A Picture C. O. D. (Comedy)..... 470
Aug. 24—Jenkins, the Watchman (Comedy)... 250
Aug. 24—Modern Naples (Scenic)..... 305
Aug. 27—The Bride of Lammermoor (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 31—Richard the Lion-hearted (Dr.).....1070

EDISON.

July 19—The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves (Dr.).....1000
July 20—The Little Artist from the Market (Dr.).....1000
July 23—The Sketch With the Thumb Print (Dr.).....1000
July 24—The Grouch (Com.-Dr.)..... 985
July 26—The Escape from Bondage (Dr.).....1000
July 27—The Relief of Lucknow (Hist.-Dr.)....1000
July 30—More Precious than Gold (Dr.).....1000
July 31—When She Was About Sixteen (Com.)1000
Aug. 2—The Lord and the Peasant (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 3—Ninth International Red Cross Conference, Washington, D. C., May 7 17, 1912 (Top)..... 700
Aug. 3—Mary Had a Little Lamb (Com.)..... 300
Aug. 6—In His Father's Steps (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 7—Marjorie's Diamond Ring (Com.)....1000
Aug. 9—The Librarian (Dr.)..... 980
Aug. 10—The City of Washington, the Capital of the United States (Scenic)..... 960
August 13—A Dangerous Lesson (Drama).....1000
August 14—Holding the Fort (Comedy).....1000
August 16—The Harbinger of Peace (Drama)..1000
August 17—Spring Log Driving, Maine (Ind.)..1000
Aug. 20—The Street Beautiful (Edu. Dr.)....1000
Aug. 21—Mr. Pickwick's Predicament (Com.)..1000
Aug. 23—The Cub Reporter (Drama).....1000
Aug. 24—The War on the Mosquito (Edu.)...1000
Aug. 27—Alone In New York (Drama).....1000
Aug. 28—Helping John (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Aug. 30—The Boy and the Girl (Drama).....1000
Aug. 31—Simla (Scenic) 1000

ESSANAY.

July 26—Twins (Com.).....1000
July 27—A Moonshiner's Heart (Dr.).....1000
July 30—Broncho Billy's Pal (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 1—Her Hour of Triumph—(Dr.).....1000
Aug. 2—The Browns Have Visitors (Com.)...1000
Aug. 3—The Loafer's Mother (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 6—The New Church Organ (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 8—The Old Wedding Dress (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—The Tale of a Cat (Com.).....1000
Aug. 10—The Little Sheriff (Com.-Dr.).....1000
August 13—Broncho Billy's Last Hold-up (Dr.).1000
August 15—An Adamless Eden (Comedy).....1000
August 16—The Magic Wand (Juvenile).....1000
August 17—On the Moonlight Trail (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 20—The Return of Becky (Drama).....1000
Aug. 22—A Corner in Whiskers (Comedy).....1000
Aug. 23—Her Adopted Father (Drama).....1000
Aug. 24—Broncho Billy's Escapade (Drama)..1000
Aug. 27—Alkali Ike Plays the Devil (W. Com.).1000
Aug. 29—Three to One (Com.).....1000
Aug. 30—The Hermit (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Aug. 31—Broncho Billy for Sheriff (Dr.).....1000

KALEM.

Aug. 2—The Barefoot Boy (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 2—Easter Celebration at Jerusalem (Scenic) .....
Aug. 5—The Mine Swindler (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 7—Freed From Suspicion (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—The Wandering Musician (Dr.).....1000
August 12—The Little Keeper of the Light (Drama) 1000
August 14—Kentucky Girl (Drama).....1000
August 16—The Prison Ship (Drama).....1000
Aug. 19—The Daughter of the Sheriff (Drama).1000
Aug. 21—The Frenzy of Firewater (Drama)....1000
Aug. 23—The Beauty Parlor of Stone Gulch (Comedy) 1000
Aug. 24—Rube Marquard Wins (Drama).....1323
Aug. 24—Rube Marquard Wins (Dramatic)....1000
Aug. 26—The Little Wanderer (Dramatic).....1000
Aug. 28—The Woman Hater (Comedy).....
Aug. 28—Palestine (Educational) .....
Aug. 30—Jim Bludso (Dramatic).....1000
Aug. 31—Saved from Courtmartial (Dramatic)..1000

LUBIN.

August 12—The Minister and the Outlaw (Dr.)..1000
August 14—The Stubbornness of Youth (Dr.)...1000
August 15—Baseball Industry (Ind.).....1000
August 16—The Hindoo's Charm (Comedy)....1000
August 17—The Deputy's Peril (Drama).....1000
Aug. 19—The Hobo Club (Comedy).....
Aug. 19—Won at High Tide (Comedy).....
Aug. 21—The Convalescent (Drama).....1000
Aug. 22—The New Ranch Foreman (Drama)....1000
Aug. 23—Work In a United States Arsenal (Educational) .....
Aug. 23—A Water Fight (Comedy).....
Aug. 24—The Government Test (Drama).....1000
Aug. 26—The Deceivers (Com.-Dr.).....1062
Aug. 28—The Caretaker (Com.).....
Aug. 28—A Burnt Cork (Com.).....
Aug. 29—For the Love of a Girl (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—Pinned (Com.).....
Aug. 30—The Overworked Bookkeeper (Com.)..
Aug. 31—The Sheriff's Prisoner (Dr.).....

MELIES.

July 25—A String of Beads (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 1—The Will of Destiny (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 8—The Ranger's Girls (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 15—A Romance at Catalina (Dr.).....1000
August 22—The Moth and the Flame (Drama)..1000
Aug. 29—His Partner's Share (Drama).....1000
Sept 5—The Obsession (Dr.).....1000

ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

Aug. 7—The Joker's Mistake (Com.)..... 390
Aug. 7—From Sion to Champery, Switzerland (Scenic)..... 220
Aug. 7—A Quiet Boarding House (Com.)..... 390
August 14—The Rivals (Drama).....1000
Aug.21—A Day In the German Navy (Naval).. 425
Aug. 21—Pulp Mills in the Province of Quebec (Industrial) 310
Aug. 21—Microscopical Curiosities (Edu.)..... 280
Aug. 28—The Golden Curl (Dr.).....1030

PATHE.

July 24—His Second Love (Dr.) .....
July 25—The Redman's Friendship (Dr.) .....
July 27—For the Sake of the Papoose (Dr.)..
July 29—Don Juan and Charles V (2 reels; Dr.; Special).....
July 29—Pathe's Weekly No. 31—1912 (Top.)
July 31—Anona's Baptism (Drama).....
Aug. 1—In God's Care (Drama).....
Aug. 1—A Little Trip in the Colorado Mountains (Scenic) .....
Aug. 3—Memories (Drama) .....
Aug. 5—Pathe's Weekly, No. 32, 1912 (Top.)
Aug. 7—The Arrow Maker's Daughter (Dr.)..
Aug. 8—The Famous Scout to the Rescue (Dr.)
Aug. 10—Here and there in Oregon (Sc.).....
Aug. 10—Kittens (Juvenile).....
August 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 33—1912 (Top.)
August 14—Silver Wing's Two Suitors (Dr.)..
August 15—Cupid's Stolen Arrows (Com.).....
August 17—The Cactus County Lawyer (Dr.)..
Aug. 19—Pathe's Weekly No. 34 (Top.).....
Aug. 21—Jealousy on the Ranch (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—The Hand of Destiny (Dr.).....
Aug. 24—The $2,500 Bride (Dr.).....
Aug. 26—Pathe's Weekly, No. 35, 1912.....
Aug. 26—Fire at Sea (Special Release) (Dr.)..
Aug. 28—The Live Wire (Drama).....
Aug. 29—The Detective's Chance (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—The Armless Wonder (Acrobat.).....
Aug. 31—An Aeroplane Love Affair (Com.)....

C. G. P. C.

July 23—Jane Seymour and Henri VIII of England (Hist.-Dr.) .....
July 26—A Bold Game (Dr.).....
July 26—Over Monaco in a Hydro-Aeroplane (Scenic) .....
July 30—The Martyrs (Drama).....
Aug. 2—The Lightning Paper Hanger (Com.)
Aug. 2—Havana, Its Streets, Buildings and Fortresses (Scenic) .....
Aug. 6—Death of Chevalier Albertini (Dr.)..
Aug. 9—The Burglar's Weird Reception (Com.)
Aug. 9—How a Letter Travels from the Great Lakes of Central Africa (Edu.)....
August 13—The Tyrolean Doll (Comedy)....
August 15—Some Inhabitants of Stagnant water (Educational) .....
August 16—A Love Story of Old Japan (Dr.)....
Aug. 20—His Windmill (Dr.) .....
Aug. 20—The Sedge Warbler and the Cuckoo (Ed.) .....
Aug. 23—The Queen's Pity (Dr.).....
Aug. 27—A Prince of Israel (Bib.).....
Aug. 30—The Musketeer's Love (Hist.-Dr.)....

SELIG.

July 19—A Day Off (Com.).....1000
July 22—On the Trail of the Germs (Edu.)....1000
July 23—The Double Cross (Dr.).....1000
July 25—The Miller of Burgundy (Dr.).....1000
July 26—A Wartime Romance (Dr.).....
July 26—In Maoriland (Edu.).....
July 29—The Three Valises (Drama).....1000
July 30—The Peculiar Nature of the White Man's Burden (Drama).....1000
Aug. 1—Officer Murray (Drama).....1000
Aug. 2—The Wreck of the Vega (Topical)..
Aug. 2—The Right Way and the Wrong Way (Educational) .....
Aug. 5—An Unexpected Fortune (Com.-Dr.)...1000
Aug. 6—The Man From Dragon Land (Dr.)...1000
Aug. 8—The Girl at the Cupola (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—The Boob (Com.-Dr.).....1000
August 12—A Messenger to Kearney (Drama)..1000
August 13—The Wayfarer (Drama).....1000
August 15—In the Tents of the Asra (Dr.)....1000
August 16—Two Gay Dogs (Comedy).....1000
Aug. 19—The Box Car Baby (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 20—The Cowboy's Mother (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—Betty Fools Dear Old Dad (Com.)....1000
Aug. 23—Land Sharks vs. Sea Dogs (Com.-Dr.)
Aug. 23—From Forest to Mills (Ed.).....
Aug. 26—The Laird's Daughter (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 27—The Whiskey Runners (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 29—The Little Indian Martyr (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 30—Just His Luck (Farce-Comedy).....
Aug. 30—Frenzied Finance (West.-Com.).....

VITAGRAPH.

Aug. 2—The Awakening of Jones (Com.)....1000
Aug. 3—The Fatherhood of Buck McGee (Dr.).1000
Aug. 5—Too Much Wooing of Handsome Dan (Com.).....1000
Aug. 6—At the Eleventh Hour (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 7—The Cross Roads (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—Wanted, a Grandmother (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 10—Suing Susan (Com.).....1000
August 12—Bunny and the Dogs (Comedy).... 300
August 12—Ingenuity (Drama)..... 700
August 13—The Heart of Esmeralda (Drama)..1000
August 14—Vultures and Doves (Drama)....1000
August 16—The Bogus Napoleon (Comedy)....1000
August 17—Two Battles (Drama).....1000
Aug. 19—Rip Van Winkle (Special 2 reel Dr.).2000
Aug. 19—Her Grandchild (Drama).....1000
Aug. 20—Lovesick Maidens of Cuddletown (Comedy) 1000
Aug. 21—The Ancient Bow (Drama).....1000
Aug. 23—Saving An Audience (Comedy).....1000
Aug. 24—The Party Dress (Drama)..... 614
Aug. 24—On Board Kaiser Wilhelm the Second (Educational) 388
Aug. 26—A Double Danger (Drama).....1000
Aug. 27—Flirt or Heroine (Drama).....1000
Aug. 28—Two Cinders (Com.-Dr.)..... 555
Aug. 28—Bumps (Comedy) 447
Aug. 30—Written In the Sands (Drama).....1000
Aug. 31—Bond of Music (Drama).....1000

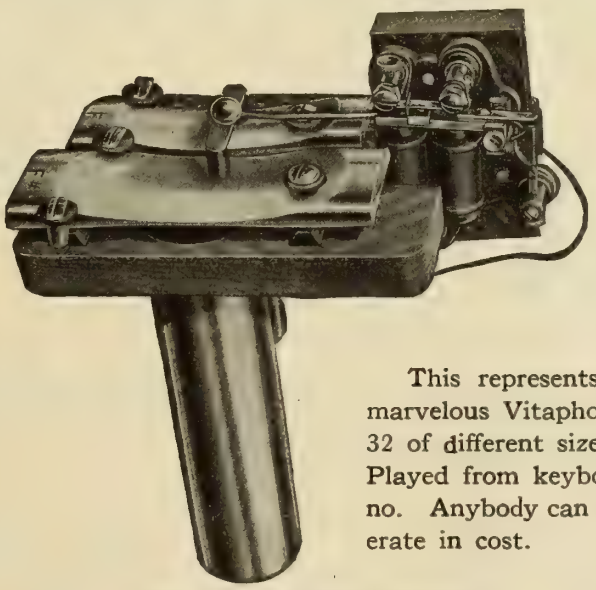
POSTERS For all the above releases, also one, three and six sheets furnished by

THE AMERICAN SONG SLIDE AND POSTER CO., 5th Floor, 1st Nat'l Bank Bldg., Chicago

SONG SLIDES Absolutely the best song slide service in America. Week's supply in advance in one shipment. ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴

Vitaphone

Is the Name of the Marvelous Instrument we Played at the National Convention in Chicago



This represents a note of the marvelous Vitaphone. There are 32 of different sizes in the outfit. Played from keyboard like a piano. Anybody can play it: Moderate in cost.

WE ALSO MANUFACTURE

New Electrical Cathedral Chimes

played from Keyboard like a Piano. The Most Beautiful Chimes in the World.

Famous Musical Electrical Bells

Improved in Construction. Thirteen Hundred Sets Sold During Past Year.

XYLOPHONES ALUMINUM CHIMES
MARIMBAPHONES PARSIFAL BELLS
ORGAN CHIMES ORCHESTRA BELLS, Etc.

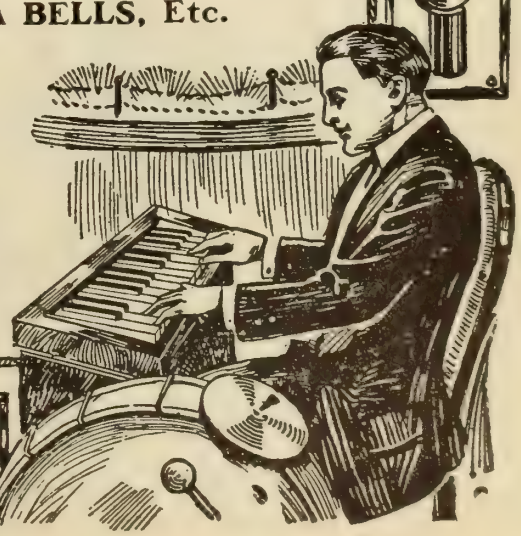
We will be pleased to see exhibitors at our new $250,000 plant during the Convention.

J. C. DEAGAN

Berteau and East Ravenswood Park Avenues

CHICAGO, ILL.



THE EVIL ART
OR GAMBLING EXPOSED

In Three Reels

Think of the World Wide Publicity given to the gambling evil through graft disclosures in New York! This picture shows how the gambler can pay the enormous sums for protection, and also the terrible advantages taken of players at Faro, Roulette, Crap, Poker, Bridge, Etc. A story of great human interest, and a most Remarkable EXPOSÉ. For a complete detailed description of this extraordinary picture see page 534 of Moving Picture World, issue of August 10th, 1912. It's dollars in your pocket if you read that article.

Has the unqualified endorsement of the best people everywhere. And as a box-office attraction it is unexcelled.

For State Rights and General Booking Address

WM. M. WILSON, 710 FIRST NATIONAL BANK BLDG., CHICAGO

Or Care Calvert Hotel, 41st St. and Broadway, New York City.

Bookings for Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin: Tom Quill, 710 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago.

Independent Films

SWANSON-CRAWFORD FILM COMPANY

CENTURY BUILDING ST. LOUIS, MO.

LARGEST Independent Film Exchange in the West buying the following makes of Film Supply Company Program: All 101 Bisons, Thanhouser, American, Solax, Reliance, Majestic, Gaumont, including Gaumont Weekly, Great Northern, Broncho, Comet and Keystone.

WE ALSO CARRY ALL MAKES OF MACHINES, SUPPLIES and REPAIRS

MOTION PICTURE SUPPLIES

PHOTOGRAPHIC SUPPLIES WHOLESALE and RETAIL THEATRE SEATING

EDISON
MOTIOGRAPH
POWERS
SIMPLEX
STANDARD

MACHINES

ARCO
BIO
ELECTRA
EXCELLO
SIEMEN

CARBONS

Ticket Hangers Carrying Cases Machine Parts Asbestos Booths
Reels Rewinders Disinfectants Exit Signs

Everything for the Motion Picture Theatre except the Film

PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT Co., 21 E. 14th St., N. Y. City
Phone Stuyvesant 2478

Feature Films For Sale or Rent

Titles	Reels	Rental	Sell'g Price
The Outcast (Asta Nielsen)	3	$15.00	$275.00
Great Moment (Asta Nielsen)	4	15.00	175.00
Gypsy Blood (Asta Nielsen)	3	15.00	250.00
An Old Man's Darling (Asta Nielsen)	3	15.00	100.00
The Traitress (Asta Nielsen)	3	15.00	200.00
Peep Behind the Scenes (Asta Nielsen)	4	15.00	200.00
Red Rose of the Apache	3	15.00	175.00
Four Dare Devils	3	10.00	125.00
Nursing a Viper	3	15.00	200.00
Flower of the Mormon City (Western)	3	15.00	250.00
The Trap	2	10.00	250.00
Written in Blood	3	15.00	180.00
Course of True Love (A. Nielsen)	3	15.00	180.00
Inventor's Secret	2	10.00	150.00
Poison of Humanity	2	10.00	100.00
Lady of Lourdes (Religious)	3	15.00	150.00
Fisherman's Sweetheart, or Saved from the Sea	3	15.00	200.00
Great Mine Disaster	2	10.00	100.00
Lt. Rose & Hidden Treasure (Naval)	2	10.00	100.00
Revenge	3	15.00	125.00
Mystery of the Banker's Safe	2	10.00	150.00
The Weed	2	10.00	150.00
Cripple Creek (Reliance)	2	5.00	120.00
Waneta's Sacrifice (Western)	2	5.00	120.00
A Merry Night	2	10.00	100.00
A Woman's Honor	3	15.00	250.00
Might of Gold (A. Nielsen)	4	15.00	180.00
Siege of Calais	2	10.00	75.00
White Slave	2	10.00	125.00
Macbeth	2	6.00	50.00
Fall of Troy	2	5.00	50.00
Golden Wedding	2	5.00	75.00
Germany's Glorious Days	2	8.00	50.00
Martin Luther	2	8.00	100.00

G. W. BRADENBURGH,
231-233 N. Eighth Street, Philadelphia.
Harrisburg, Pa. — Maxwell Hite—Mgr.
Baltimore — Arthur Gans—Mgr.

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theater Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Write for Catalog.

Don't fail to visit our complete New York showroom, 101-103 4th Ave.

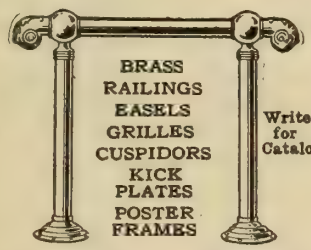
THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-721 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O,
Established 1882

The Simpson Solar Screen

Is the best Daylight Screen in existence. Fully covered by U. S. Patent No. 890,161. Don't buy imitations.

ALFRED L. SIMPSON, Inc.
No. 113 W. 132nd St., New York City

McKENNA



Write for Catalog.

McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
PITTSBURGH

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES.

Edison Exhibition 1 Pin, $125. Powers No. 5, $115, and others. Machines Repaired. Parts for Machines. Supplies of all kinds. Stereopticons and Slides. Send for Catalogues and Lists.

HARBACH & CO.
809 Filbert St., Philadelphia.

GOLDEN GATE FILM EXCHANGE

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

GOLDEN GATE
INC.
FILM EXCHANGE

Exclusive
Independent
Service

30 REELS PER WEEK

514 W. 8th Street
Los Angeles

234 Eddy Street
San Francisco

CALIFORNIA

ANOTHER ENTERPRISE TRIUMPH

TOGO CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Complete with Rubber Tubing and Keyless Jet

SUPERIOR WORKMANSHIP and HIGH GRADE MATERIAL combined with SAFETY and SIMPLICITY place the TOGO far ahead of any other cheap outfit.
PORTABLE and ready for instant use - $25.00.

Anyone can operate it

MANUFACTURED BY
The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564 W. Randolph St., Chicago
FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS

Lights and Shadows of Chinatown

OR THE YELLOW PERIL

3000 feet

Ready for delivery in all territory excepting Ohio, Pennsylvania, Oregon, Idaho and Missouri.
Six styles of lithographs, photographs and heralds.

NEW YORK FILM CO., 12 Union Square, New York

The Buckeye-Lake Shore Film Company

Exclusive Film Service

You know us, Mr. Exhibitor, and you know whenever there's a "fuss" we get the cream of the program—and we've got it, the best we ever had.
We now have exclusive rights to the Film Supply Co. program—the greatest ever put out—for Central Ohio (East and West), Southern and Southeastern Ohio and West Virginia.
Now taking bookings and arranging shipping routes. Better wire or 'phone your application. We will treat you right.
All Features—many of them two- and three-reel.

422 N. High St., Columbus, Ohio

AgfA

CELLULOID POSITIVE
CELLULOID NEGATIVE
AND
NON-FLAM POSITIVE
(MADE UNDER LICENSE OF THE PATENTEE)

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.

15 EAST 26th STREET - - NEW YORK
Tel. Mad. Sq. 7876. Cable Rawfilm New York

Repairs

The most modern shop and best picture machine repair men in the country guarantee you promptest service and complete satisfaction. Second-hand machines bought and sold.

Full Line of Supplies

Selling agents for all makes of machines.

Chicago Moving Picture Supply Co. 107 N. Dearborn Street CHICAGO, ILL.

GET THE CROWDS

Keep your theatre cool

Good pictures may draw the crowds sometimes, but to ensure a steady attendance all year 'round, you must also have a well-ventilated theatre. You must remove the stuffy, irritating air.

WATSON VENTILATING FANS

are Motor-Driven, giving satisfaction in many up-to-date money-making theatres. Our fan booklet sent on request. We can make Immediate Delivery.

Mechanical Appliance Co. Milwaukee
43 W. 23d St., New York; 709 Fisher Bldg., Chicago.

$50.00 REWARD

For information leading to the recovery of two sets of films, namely, "OLD WYOMING DAYS" and "THE LAND OF DARKNESS" in two reels each, which were stolen Aug. 9 from the office of the Feature Photoplay Co., 145 West 45th St., New York, N. Y.

LECTURES ON SPECIAL FILMS

EACH $1.00 PER COPY Prepared by W. STEPHEN BUSH POSTAGE PAID

Lectures for French-American Film Company
"CAMILLE" BY SARAH BERNHARDT and "MADAME SANS GENE" BY MADAME REJANE
One Dollar for Both (Typewritten)
Also in printed form the following:

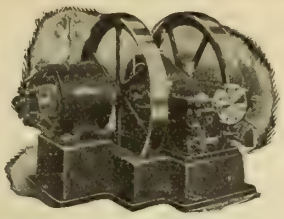
HOW TO PUT ON THE PASSION PLAY (Second Edition)
For Pathe Freres World-Renowned Production

HOW TO PUT ON THE CRUSADERS, OR JERUSALEM DELIVERED
For World's Best Film Co., Feature Film (Copyright 1911)

KEY AND COMPLETE LECTURE FOR DANTE'S INFERNO
For Milano Film Co. (Italy), Five-Reel Production

ORDER NOW Only a limited edition of each $1.00 PER COPY

COPYRIGHTED AND FOR SALE ONLY BY
MOVING PICTURE WORLD, Box 226, Madison Square P. O., New York City



THE Foos

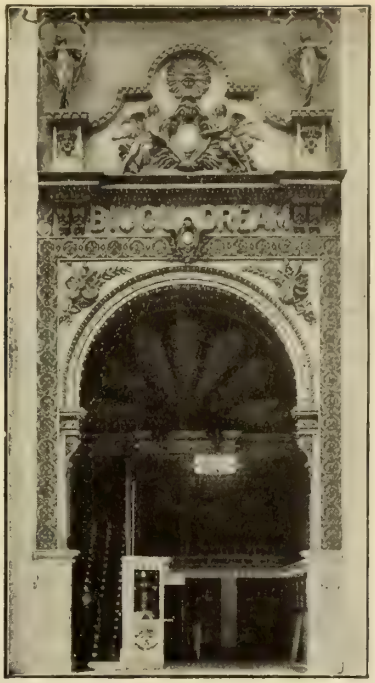
ELECTRIC

Generating Set

will furnish direct current for your show and give you better quality of light than you can get from the best Central Station service. With a Foos Engine you can save 50 to 75 per cent. of the money you have to pay for electric current and have all the light you want when you want it.

Send for Bulletin F-98.

The Foos Gas Engine Co.
809 Linden Ave. Springfield, O.



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
2549 Archer Avenue, :: CHICAGO, ILL.

FEATURE FILMS FOR SALE

2 3 4 Reels — Feature Productions — 2 3 4 Reels

WRITE FOR LISTS QUICK

SUPERIOR FEATURE FILM CO.
32 Union Sq., New York City

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing

Why don't you send it to us?

We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.

We buy second hand machines.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO., 176 N. State St., Bet. Lake & Randolph Chicago, Ill.

Orchestra Music FOR MOVING PICTURES

Violin, Cornet and Drum parts have been added to the popular "Orpheum Collection" of piano music (dramatic and descriptive) for Moving Pictures. Practical for piano alone or any number of above instruments. Issued in two parts: No. 1 and No. 2.

Piano, 58 cents each; both No.'s $1.15
Violin, 40 cents each; both " 75c
Cornet, 35 cents each; both " 65c
Drums, 30 cents each; both " 55c

Send for free sample pages.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 Sedgwick St., Chicago, Ill.

For a short  time only

$12.00 ACTIONS, LAVEZZI'S - - - - $9.75
For Power's 5, and Edison One Pin Machines
$11.50 REPAIR KIT - - - - - - - - $10.00
$4.00 SHUTTERS ABOVE MACHINES - - $3.75

Write for No. 3, 1912 Catalogue.

Lavezzi Machine Works, 2940 Herndon St., Chicago, Ill.

Make Your Own Films of Special Events!

Buy the Junior Professional Film making outfit comprising the World's Greatest Camera, Printer and developing outfit—you would not hesitate for a minute if you would know how good it is—or—buy the camera only and let me do the finishing work—better films as what some manufacturers turn out. Everything of supreme quality for the projecting room and the laboratory. Mirror Vitae Projector, the best machine in the world from which all others have been duped—with single arc slide dissolvers, something others cannot offer you, special lenses for any size picture—film stock, slides, repairing catalogues to your service.

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER,
219 Second Ave., near 14th St., New York.

MANUFACTURERS!

We are sending two operators this month to make a complete tour of the world. They will visit Honolulu, Japan, Manila, China, Java, Singapore, Penang, Burma, Siam, India, Ceylon, Egypt, South and Central America, South and East Africa, Australia, New Zealand and many other less known countries. We can offer for sale any quantity of film depicting scenes and life in foreign lands. Many exclusive features. Can begin to supply 15th October and regularly weekly thereafter. Highest class of photography. Attractive rates. Write or wire us your proposition for developed or undeveloped negatives.

The Globe Motion Picture and Advt. Co., Inc.
Majestic Theater Bldg.
Santa Monica, Cal.

WE LEAD THEM ALL IN MAKING MOTION PICTURES TO ORDER.
ANYWHERE OR ANY TIME.
10 CENTS PER FOOT.
All Work Guaranteed.
SPECIAL EVENT FILM MFG. CO.,
248 West 35th St. New York City.

Increase Your Income

SEND FOR OUR
32 -- PAGE -- 32
EXCLUSIVE
MOVING PICTURE THEATRE Catalogue
—OF—
100 CLASSIFIED SOUVENIRS 100
AND COMPLETE PLANS NOW USED BY THOUSANDS
OF THEATRES
PLAYING TO STANDING ROOM ONLY
— WRITE TODAY —
United States Factories Co.
500 Great Lakes Bldg., CHICAGO

36 Licensed Posters
A WEEK FOR $2.00
EXHIBITORS ADVERTISING CO.
Hobbs Bldg. Chicago

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

Fort Wayne Electric Works
OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE INDIANA 733

WURLITZER
World's Largest Mfrs. Established 1856

Wurlitzer PianOrchestra in Bijou Theatre, San Francisco, Cal.

Write for 32-page booklet, showing
Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments
in the leading picture theatres of the country.

The Wurlitzer Instruments furnish better music than musicians and reduce expenses. 50 different styles; time payments; big catalog free. If you can't call, write to our nearest branch.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company

CINCINNATI 117-121 E. 4th | NEW YORK 25-27 W. 32d | CHICAGO 329-331 S. Wabash | PHILADELPHIA 1805 Chestnut
ST. LOUIS 912 Pine St. | CLEVELAND 800 Huron Road | BUFFALO 701 Main | LOUISVILLE 426 W. Greene | COLUMBUS, O. 57 E. Main

To Exhibitors in

CONNECTICUT

Remember the money that was made in Conn. with Dante's Inferno.

HOMER'S ODYSSEY

The new Milano three reel Production will be

OPEN FOR DATES AFTER SEPT. 2nd.

Address Immediately

WORLD'S MOVING PICTURE CLASSICS.

Box 485, Madison Sq. Station, N. Y. City.

BIO
RECOGNIZED
STANDARD
CARBONS

BIO BIO BIO BIO

ADMITTED

by operators everywhere that

BIO CARBONS

are the most

POPULAR

because of their

GOODNESS

many thought so in the beginning—they KNOW SO

NOW!

Charles L. Kiewert Co.

NEW YORK 165 Greenwich St. MILWAUKEE 114 Huron St. SAN FRANCISCO 19 Sutter St.

I Equip Theatres Completely

And the Increased Demand for My Services Has Forced Me to Add an Architectural Department to My Business. I am Prepared to Furnish Detailed Building Plans and Specifications for Your New Theatre.

The "Hallberg Electric Economizers" for all circuits, made only by Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," save you the most money on your electric bills and produce the best light possible on your screen.

For Sale--At A Bargain--Slightly Used Machines

1 No. 1A Motiograph, 1911 Model, first-class condition $135
1 No. 5 Powers, remodeled head, balance of machine new No. 6 Equipment..... 125
1 No. 5 Powers complete in good running order 100
1 Edison Exhibition Model One-Pin Movement, with fire shutter, first-class condition..... 85
1 Edison Head Only, Model B. Outside shutter, used very little 50
Second-Hand Current Savers for 110 volts, 60 cycles, of all makes but Hallberg (which I have replaced with my Standard Hallberg Economizers) .....$20 and up.

Any information to help you in your difficulties along the above lines cheerfully furnished.

I am jobber of ALL MAKES of Moving Picture Machines

Through my Exchange Department I am prepared to make liberal allowance for your old machine in part payment on purchase price of new M. P. machine of any make.

FANS

Ventilating and Exhaust
$7.50 and up

Separate catalogues of different makes of machines, supplies and economizers furnished free upon request, BUT Hallberg's Big Complete Catalogue costs you 25c.

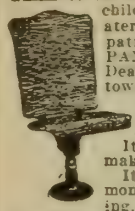
I carry the Largest Complete Stock of
Electra Pink Label Carbons

J. H. HALLBERG
36 E. 23rd St. New York City

OH! MR. EXHIBITOR!!

Think of the motherless, the fatherless, and the childless homes as the result of theater panics. Protect the lives of your patrons by installing our "ANTI PANIC" THEATER CHAIR. 26 Dead at Cannonsburg, 176 at Boyertown. 575 at Iroquis Theater, Chicago. Make these horrors impossible. Our chair is a friend to the Public.



It advertises your theater and makes your business grow.

It is a space-saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.

It will make your theater all aisles. It is the only sanitary chair. It is the world's greatest theater chair, perfected to the highest degree. Write to-day for Circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio. U.S.A.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE

1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865

WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

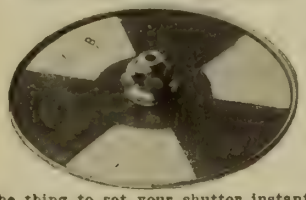
The A. H. Andrews Co.

Branches in all Leading Cities

New York Office, 1165 Broadway. Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.

San Francisco Office, 728 Mission St.

HOW CAN I GET BETTER PICTURES?
Use a Surehold Shutter Setter



Just the thing to set your shutter instantly and accurately, giving you a sharp, clear picture. Anyone can use it. Made to fit any outside shutter. All those who have bought one say they would not part with it for any price. Send for circular, or, better still, send $5.00 and we will send you one prepaid by return mail. Money back if not satisfied. Price, $5.00.

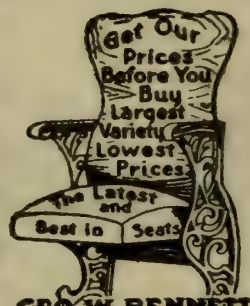
SUREHOLD SHUTTER SETTER CO.,
P. O. Box 428, Bellingham, Wash.

Get Our Prices Before You Buy

The Wisconsin Seating Company

New London, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

OPERA CHAIRS



GEO. W. BENNETT
34-36 E. 3rd Street
CINCINNATI, OHIO.

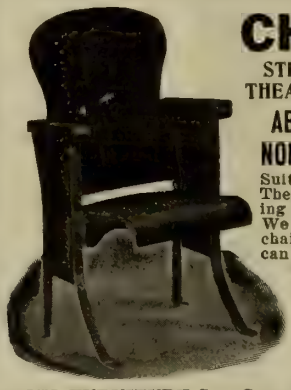
America's Feature Film Co.

406-7-8 Schiller Building, Chicago

We buy and sell Second Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines

WESTERN FILM BROKERS

538 S. Dearborn Street Chicago, Ill



CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS

ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use.

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE Co., Grand Rapids, Mich

New York: 150 5th Ave. Pittsburgh: 318 Bissel Blk. Philadelphia: 610 Flanders Bldg.

WE CAN HURRY

YOUR ORDER OUT. STAFFORD Chairs excell all others.

Heavy Five Ply seats and backs.

The last-forever kind, that you are using long after you have forgotten the price.

STEEL CHAIRS TOO

We carry several kinds of good chairs in stock, all guaranteed.

ASK FOR CATALOG 305

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO, ILL.

SCENARIO WRITERS!

If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made saleable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism for a fee of only $2.

Exhibitors!

Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

Epes Winthrop Sargent
Box 70, Madison Square Station
New York City

In answering advertisements kindly mention the Moving Picture World.

MANAGERS

Picture shows using vaudeville—Write or wire for terms for booking your houses. New acts, best terms, split or full weeks. Now booking for winter season.

GOMES VAUDEVILLE EXCHANGE

A. V. SHECKLER, Manager Louisville branch, Novelty Theater, Louisville, Ky.

It pays to discriminate when you buy

THEATRE SEATING

WRITE TODAY for Cat. V2 (Mov. Picture Chairs) and Cat. V3 (Upholstered Chairs)

Send Floor Sketch for Free Seating Plan

Widest range of styles and prices. Large stocks.

American Seating Company

218 S. Wabash Ave., CHICAGO 15 E. 32nd St., NEW YORK

G.MÉLIÈS

RAY LEARNS THAT PAUL HAS SOLD THE MINE

His Partner's Share

A story of the gold prospectors. Paul and Ray make a lucky strike and fate seems to play into Paul's hands, for Ray, slipping from a cliff, falls to his death on the rocks below. Paul, selling out for a large sum, retires to the city to enjoy his wealth. Ray, however, was not dead, and is nursed back to life by the strangers who found him. Penniless and desperate, the pictures graphically show how Ray chanced to find Paul and how the great wrong was righted.

G. MELIES, 204 EAST 38th St., NEW YORK CITY

Length, 1000 ft. 8-29-12.

The World Our Home

North, South, East or West,
By lowland stream or mountain crest,
In torrid or in frigid zone,
Power's Cameragraph is known.*

IT might almost be said that we are without a country because every land claims us. There is not a civilized country on earth where Power's Cameragraph has not found a home; and wherever it goes, it makes new friends;—and keeps them. We have sold over 6300 of our No. 6 machines.

¶ In our newest equipment, No. 6-A, the mechanism of our No. 6 has been retained. This is the most advanced type of moving picture machine on the market, and into it have been incorporated many vital advantages which our fifteen years of experience and expert scientific knowledge afford.

¶ Power's Cameragraph is used by a large majority of prominent houses in America, Europe and Australasia. Why not in yours?

¶ LET US SEND YOU PAMPHLET "G" GIVING COMPLETE DETAILS

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

90 Gold Street, New York City

For Fifteen Years the Leading Makers of Motion Picture Machines

CAREY PRESS, N. Y.

Vol. 13. No. 9 August 31. 1912 Price. 10c.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "The Beach Combers" (Melies).

125 East 23rd Street New York—Chicago 169 W. Washington St.

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

EVERY INDEPENDENT EXHIBITOR WHO ATTENDED THE CHICAGO CONVENTION HAS HIS BOOKING DATE NOW ON

"LUCILE" THE PICTURE THAT "STOPPED THE SHOW" 9.30 O'CLOCK, THURSDAY EVENING, AUG. 15, AT THE CONVENTION FILM EXHIBIT, ORCHESTRA HALL, CHICAGO

SEE Love, Jealousy, Adventure, Battle.

DON'T MISS The Charge of The Light Brigade!

IN THREE REELS
Nos. 1 and 2, TUESDAY, AUG. 27
No. 3, FRIDAY, AUG. 30
A De Luxe Adaptation of Owen Meredith's Poem

THANHOUSER PERFECT PUBLICITY FEATURE

PERFECT PUBLICITY Two Kinds of One-Sheets and a Three-Sheet at YOUR EXCHANGE. Illustrated Heralds from HENNEGAN & CO., CINCINNATI, OHIO. Cuts for Newspapers and Circulars (2-column), 40 cents, and (3-column) 75 cents apiece from STANDARD ENG. CO., 560 7th AVE., N. Y. CITY. Slides 30 cents apiece from NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 20 E. 14th ST., N. Y. CITY.

SPECIAL — 8-SHEETS AT YOUR EXCHANGE — SPECIAL

THE CAPTURE OF NEW YORK

THE STORY OF THE BIG WAR GAME SEE 20,000 20th CENTURY FIGHTING MEN IN ACTION HOW BATTLES ARE NOW WON BY WIRELESS SCOUTING by the AMAZING AERIAL SQUADRONS REGULAR RELEASE OF SUNDAY, SEPT. 1

20,000 IN CAMP AND IN BATTLE

CAVALRY INFANTRY | ARTILLERY AUTOMOBILERY | COOKING WASHING | PLAYING AVIATING | BOMBARDING CHARGING | RETREATING C-Q-D'ING

MARVEL AT THE WONDERS OF TWENTIETH CENTURY WARFARE!

RELEASED TUESDAY, SEPT. 3

THE VOICE OF CONSCIENCE

Another plot-with-a-twist. Two girls fall in love with the same man. Out motoring one day they are thrown from the machine and carried to the hospital. Here one of the girls pours poison into the medicine of the other, and later the Dread White Screen is placed about the rival's bed. Here the "twist" enters, and the story swings into a very pleasant finish.

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUG. 30

HIS FATHER'S SON

This is one of those "dynamiting stories" that this producer can put on more realistically than any other. There is the usual UNUSUAL Thanhouser plot and you are spared no thrills in the working out of it. More gripping, more intense, more exciting than "On the Stroke of Five."

THE NEXT THANHOUSER TWO-REELER UNDINE TUESDAY, SEPT. 24 A De Luxe Adaption of the Famous Riverside Classic!

THANHOUSER PERFECT PUBLICITY FEATURE

GETTING 3 3 A WEEK?

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

Film Supply Company, Agents for U. S. and Canada

GETTING 3 3 A WEEK?

FOUR-A-WEEK ESSANAY

THIS WEEK! THIS WEEK!

"ALKALI" IKE

In the Greatest Western Comedy Riot Since "ALKALI" IKE'S AUTO! Remember It?

Also a Gripping BRONCHO BILLY Melodrama!

Released Tuesday, August 27th

"'Alkali' Ike Plays the Devil"

Unquestionably the screamiest, breeziest Western comedy riot of mirth released since "Alkali" Ike's Auto, the great laugh film that turned the photoplay world topsy-turvy! Augustus Carney, Essanay's famous comedian, in his popular role! A de luxe feature of fun!

Released Thursday, August 29th

"Three To One"

The week's second big com "hit," with a rollicking plot entirely original. Two staid old business men—a pretty stenographer—bitter rivalry and—a finish too funny to divulge. Lily Branscombe and Howard Missimer at their best.

Released Friday, August 30th

"The Hermit"

A captivating comedy-drama redolent with the breath of the pine forests in the good old summer time. The meeting of two young estranged lovers under the most extraordinarily ludicrous circumstances. Billy Mason, Beverly Bayne in splendid portrayals. A summer show feature!

Released Saturday, August 31st

"Broncho Billy For Sheriff"

Mr. G. M. Anderson in the third great "BRONCHO BILLY" characterization for the month. The grim savagery of the western feudal grudge and the bitter agony of repentance embodied in one of the most powerful productions of this renowned series.

ESSANAY'S MASTERPIECE OF FILM CRAFT!

"The FALL of MONTEZUMA"

(THREE GREAT REELS)

COMING! 3 SHEET POSTERS

of "BRONCHO BILLY FOR SHERIFF," in full 4 colors, beautifully lithographed, 35c each. Order from your exchange or direct from Morgan Lithograph Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

Now that you have seen our splendid one sheet lithographed posters of the world's most popular photoplay star, G. M. Anderson, and those classy postal photos of Anderson and Francis X. Bushman in two poses, send in your orders at once! Remember your patrons demand the best!

GET YOUR NAME ON OUR MAILING LIST!

ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Factory and Studio. 1333 Argyle Street, Chicago

Branch Offices in London, Paris, Berlin, Barcelona

UNABATED POPULARITY IS THE SHARE OF THE WESTERN SUBJECT

There's a Reason. Western stories are of the OUT-OF-DOORS — CLEAN, BREEZY and Charged with action of a Natural, Healthy Sort.

You can't lose on Westerns—they're reliable standbys for the dull season—they've done more to popularize the motion picture than any other kind of subjects—

Insist upon "AMERICANS"—give your preference to a house that KNOWS HOW — Specializes in Westerns—Is Drilled and Trained by Experience to Know Just What Is Best in Westerns.

"The Will of James Waldron"

(Release Thursday, August 29, 1912)

How old man Waldron died leaving odd provisions in his will. A typical Western subject, full of adventure and fine situations—a genuine money-maker.

"The Marked Gun"

(Release Wednesday, September 4, 1912)

A strong Western of exceptional power. How the sheriff's son, through possession of a marked gun, is accused of crime. His rescue and adventures make a picture that will appeal to old and young.

"The Greaser and the Weakling" (Release Monday, September 2, 1912.)

Another dramatic, gripping "American" of the out-of-the-ordinary kind—a delightful story combining some splendid situations with superb photography.

COMING!

Two Giant 2-Reel Subjects. Both Historical

(Release Thursday, September 12, 1912)

"Geronimo's Last Raid"

A magnificent two-reel historical subject of the out-of-the-ordinary kind. You remember Geronimo—the famous Indian chief, whose death a few years ago removed a constant source of trouble to southwestern settlers and army posts on the border.

A delightful love story winds its way through beautiful settings—a story of love and intrigue between two post officers and the Major's daughter. Beautiful battle scenes where close to 300 Indians and soldiers participate. Altogether the exception in motion pictures—a subject you, picture-tired, will find inspiration in..

"The Story of Starved Rock"

In Two Reels. A magnificent pageant—a spectacular giant, made on the very ground. A large company of "Flying A" players, by permission of the State of Illinois, encamped at Starved Rock while the pictures were being made.

This gorgeous costume subject covers the history of the famous Rock, showing the discovery by Father Marquette, the later journey of La Salle and Tonty and the mighty battle from which the Rock obtained its name. Watch for future announcements.

American Film Manufacturing Company

5th FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK, CHICAGO

"All Hail the Big Chief"

The Exhibitor is Now the "Big Chief" instead of the Goat of the Moving Picture Business.

THE SLEEPING GIANT AWAKENS TO THE FACT THAT HE IS A POWER. A REVIEW AND A SUGGESTION!

The exhibitors of America are at last awakened to the fact that they are a power in themselves; that they need no longer seek favor of any one nor crook the pregnant hinges of the knee to any person or any faction. They are now the BIG CHIEF!

The National Convention at Chicago has proved that the men who now conduct the Universal Film Manufacturing Co. were right, when, for years, they urged the exhibitors to organize, unify and exercise their power.

Carl Laemmle, P. A. Powers, David Horsley and W. H. Swanson have spent vast fortunes fighting to improve the film business; to make it a safe, sane and conservative industry; to throw it open for all comers and to destroy monopoly.

For years they have encountered bitter antagonism. For a period of several months many exhibitors were actually afraid to show independent pictures.

Exhibitors were not in a position to demand their rights because at that time the exhibitors were not organized. And all the time, Laemmle, Powers, Horsley and Swanson kept constantly at the exhibitors with the cry of "Organize! Organize! Use the power that lies at your command."

So the exhibitors organized. The exhibitor is now the Big Chief! The exchange man kowtows to him. So does the manufacturer. So it is and so it should be! No one who has attended this great convention can deny that at last the exhibitor has come into his own.

All this is preliminary to the main point we are aiming at. It is this: Laemmle, Powers, Horsley and Swanson ask nothing of the new Big Chief in the way of gratitude for the fight they have helped the Big Chief win. They ask no favors. They want none. In fighting to establish the exhibitor in power, they also fought to protect themselves.

The point they now dwell on is QUALITY and nothing else. They ask your business on the pure merit and strength of the Universal program. They know what you want better than any set of men in the film business and they intend to produce it. They are producing it every week. They will continue to produce it.

The Universal is now the strongest film concern in all the world—and it intends to use this strength to your advantage in the future just as Laemmle, Powers, Horsley and Swanson have done in the past.

The Universal's executive work is divided into four great branches with Laemmle at the head of one, Powers another, Horsley another and Swanson another. They are working in perfect harmony. They have encountered obstacles that were worse than old Benedict Arnold and Judas Iscariot rolled into one—but they have conquered in every instance. And each victory meant better assurance of QUALITY for you from the Universal.

You are now the BIG CHIEF! The Universal hails you! The Universal congratulates you!

And on the basis of QUALITY alone, the Universal urges you to

"DEMAND THAT UNIVERSAL PROGRAM."

UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO., 1 Union Square, New York City

"DEMAND THAT

There Wasn't a Single Exhibitor at astic About the Universal Program.

IMP

"MAKING GOOD."
Monday, August 26th.

One of those hero-worship pictures in which the lover and the loved one are finally wedded though their courtship is frowned upon by an irate parent. Plenty of action and romance. The kind that will please and entertain.

"A HAPPY FAMILY."
Thursday, August 29th.

A screamingly funny marriage entanglement that will bring tears of laughter to your eyes. If you want to make friends with patrons of your house, book this. It will make you and your house more than popular.

"A CASE OF SMALLPOX"
"HER BURGLAR."
Saturday, August 31st.

Two laugh producers that have never been duplicated in the history of motion pictures. Novel stories and mirth-provoking situations. The best treat that has ever been offered you for your Saturday show. Go after them now.

CHAMPION

"THE FOUNDLING."
Monday, August 26th.

There won't be a dry eye in your house after this picture has been projected. Pathetically beautiful, yet robbed of the somberness which is so often objected to. Not a bit of romance has been lost in the masterful manner of producing.

GEM

"BABY FINGERS."
Tuesday, August 27th.

You really couldn't class her as a criminal. What she did was prompted by a higher motive than the mere taking of money. She wanted to save her brother's life and she "borrowed" the money to do it with. Baby June, the little tot, saved the day when her big frank eyes penetrated beyond the callous of the commercial heart and Bernice's employer saw her act in a new light. Her liberation from prison and the happiness of all was brought about by that pretty baby stare and those cute baby fingers. Perfectly adorable.

IT'S ALIVE
The Animated Weekly
This Week's News--This Week

NESTOR

"THE STORY OF A WALLET."
Monday, August 26th.

Honesty, the policy which though hard to follow out, is best in the end, is the basic idea of this efficient drama. The hard lot of a poor workman and his desire to furnish his wife with beautiful raiment goads the thoroughly honest man to keep a wallet filled with valuables. 'Twas merely the prick of conscience that drove him to save the man unjustly accused of the theft and the restoration to the dutiful clerk of his good name. A prettily pathetic picture and one that will please.

"UNCLE BILL."
Wednesday, August 28th.

The strategy of two young lovers and the enmeshing of the uncle ot one of them in a love entanglement with an old maid aunt forms some excruciatingly funny situations. Your house will resound with laughter when this spirited comedy is projected. Lots of fun, and a good story running through the farce. Cleverly presented and staged.

"THE GIRLS AND THE CHAPERONE."
Friday, August 30th.

When a bunch of cowboys get together to play a practical joke you can bank on it there's goin' to be a riot of fun. And that's just what happened in this picture. The chaperone never showed up until the tail end of the picture and one of the cowboys took her place. The many funny situations in which the impersonator is placed will bring forth howls of laughter. It's a scream from start to finish.

BISON

"FOR LOVE, LIFE AND RICHES."
Tuesday, August 27th.

It fairly breathes with excitement. Thrill after thrill will stir within you the most powerful emotions. There isn't a dull moment from the time when Tom falls over the precipice until the defeat and capture of the cowardly band of claim jumpers. If you want to draw patrons from the opposition, go after these Bisons now.

"A SHOT IN THE DARK."
Saturday, August 31st.

Simply teems with excitement. A Western in point of story and production. Not a foot that doesn't sizzle with some great big "punch." If you ever had a chance to book a big production that will act as a magnet to your box-o..ce this is it. These Bison are getting more spectacular every day. Follow the release dates closely if you want to book winners.

Don't Miss It!

"STRONGEST IN UNIVERSAL PROGRAM"

the Chicago Convention Who Didn't Feel Enthusi-
Here's Next Week's Big, Masterful, Popular Releases

POWERS

"AN EXCITING OUTING."
Wednesday, August 28th (Split).

You'll grin from ear to ear when this comedy starts off and before it is finished you will be screaming with laughter. The situations are all new, novel and funny. A real offering for a hot night and a pleasant entertainment for a cool one.

"U. S. ARMY MANEUVERS."
Wednesday, August 28th (Split).

Showing tactics, etc., used by our army during hostilities. Hospital corps at work, field manoeuvres, etc. Interesting and highly instructive.

"LIFE'S LESSON."
Friday, August 30th.

There has been many a brilliant, inspiring drama conceived of, but this picture involves a story so new, so strong, so novel and you will agree with us that it is beyond a doubt the greatest theme ever woven into the photoplay. If you want a picture that will make a decided hit with your patrons and cause them to talk about it, book this sensation now. You can't go too far in boosting it. It's a sure fire winner.

VICTOR

"THE WINNING PUNCH."
Friday, August 30th.

It may have been because Tom knew that Nellie loved him that gave him the courage he had, or it may have been natural manhood. At any rate, Ross, the rejected suitor's plans failed and Tom not only succeeded in getting his girl but he routed his rival and his confederates completely. A brilliant cast with Florence Lawrence and Owen Moore in the stellar roles.

MILANO

"A CIRCUS ROMANCE."
Saturday, August 31st.

Many stories have been moulded around life in a circus but never before has the theme been so pleasantly and thrillingly handled as in this Milano masterpiece. Stirring, gripping situations are intermingled with romance and love. Handsomely staged and most brilliantly produced.

ECLAIR

"DOLLS."
Tuesday, Aug. 27th.

A most original sort of romance and the "kiddies" will go wild with enthusiasm when they see the doll and the important part it played in bringing happiness and love to a sorrow-stricken girl. Exceptionally fine acting and staging.

"THE PASSING PARADE."
Thursday, August 29th.

Patriotism, the theme so dear to us all is cleverly worked into this picture. There is not a man, woman or child who won't enthuse over it. Cleverly portrayed and effectively staged. A release much out of the ordinary and one that will entertain and please.

"TWO BRAVE LITTLE HEARTS."
Sunday, September 1st.

Everybody warms up to a picture when the kids are responsible for the righting of a wrong. Here's a story in which two children manage to save the honor and reputation of their aged father and by their astuteness manage to restore happiness. It's the kind that your patrons will pay an extra dime to see over again.

REX

"A JAPANESE IDYLL."
Thursday, August 29th.

A love story told in the Orient. Even the little olive-tinted maiden knew where her heart was wont to be, and she managed through the strategy of her American friend, the consul's daughter, to appear hideous, although she was indeed pretty, when her undesirous suitor came. He fled and the little girl married the man of her heart. Beautifully staged and most effectively enacted.

"IN HONOR BOUND."
Sunday, September 1st.

One of those tempermental tit-bits which is so acceptable after the week is over. The kind of picture that appeals to the tired business man and the people who relax from the strain of the week's employment. Most masterfully interpreted and brilliantly staged.

You simply can't afford to! THE MASSACRE OF THE SANTA FE TRAIL
Bigger and Better Bison than Custer's Last Fight. Watch for Release Date.

THE UNIVERSE"

FIRST RELEASE
KEYSTONE FILMS

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 23rd

"Cohen Collects a Debt" and
"The Water Nymph"

A split reel comedy, featuring Mack Sennett and Mabel Normand, the beautiful Diving Venus

On Monday, September 30, two more rollicking comedies on one reel are presented in

"Riley and Schultze" and
"The New Neighbor"

A SPLIT REEL RELEASED EVERY MONDAY--Lose No Time In Booking

¶ Keystone Films are new in name only. They are produced by the company heretofore with the Biograph Co., and directed by the same man--- Mr. Mack Sennett. The quality of these films is well known to exhibitors.

KEYSTONE FILM COMPANY

Mutual Film Corporation, 60 Wall St., New York City

Sole Agents for the U. S. and Canada

THE ONLY REAL AND GENUINE
"101"--BISON HEADLINERS--"101"

Are produced by the New York Motion Picture Co.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS!

"FOR THE HONOR OF THE TRIBE"

ONE REEL RELEASED TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3rd ONE REEL

A shepherd guarding thousands of sheep is killed by an Indian, who gives a great feast with the sheep he steals. Through a clever ruse the identity of the guilty man is discovered by the soldiers, and when confronted by the troops he admits his guilt. The tribe is disposed to prevent his arrest, but for the honor and peace of the tribe he consents to the execution, claiming the privilege of choosing his own death. This occurs in a highly sensational scene.

ONE REEL "AN OLD TUNE" RELEASED FRIDAY, SEPT. 6th

A boy with a passion for music is often entertained by the parish priest who plays an old tune on his violin. Grown to manhood he loses his memory through hardship and privation on the desert, and falls in with bad companions. While eluding a posse he seeks refuge in the old priest's house, as the latter is playing the old tune. The familiar strains bring back his memory and he defends the priest from an attack, losing his own life.

Coming! "CUSTER'S LAST FIGHT" Soon!

IN THREE REELS

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION 60 WALL ST. N. Y. CITY Sole agents for the U. S. and Canada

FIRST RELEASE

BRONCHO FILMS

Frontier - Indian - Military and Pioneer Subjects

Produced Upon the Largest Scale Ever Attempted in the History of Motion Pictures

Stirring Themes---Tremendous Casts--- Perfect Photography

Order from Your Exchange the following Features:

"SUNDERED TIES"

The Biggest One-Reel Feature Ever Made

Released Wednesday, September 18

The North against the South—Father against Son—in wonderful and thrilling battles, booming cannon, hand to hand conflicts, sensational cavalry charges. Through it all runs a heart-gripping story, splendidly acted.

"HIS BETTER SELF"

1 REEL Released Wednesday, September 25 1 REEL

In the hot desert, beneath the blistering rays of the sun, the rivals battle for the canteen of water—and life. As one falls wounded the hand of his conqueror is stayed in a death thrust by the picture of the woman they both love, and he carries his erstwhile opponent to shelter.

A BRONCHO EVERY WEDNESDAY

THE BEST FILM IN THE WORLD

BRONCHO MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

Mutual Film Corporation, 60 Wall St., N. Y. City Sole Agents for U. S. and Canada.

To Motion Picture Exhibitors

from far and near
We extend a cordial invitation to visit our new

Model Photoplay Theater

Built by the Decorators Supply Co., and decorated by Huber Bros. of Chicago.

We have now on Exhibit :

The new 1913 Model Motiograph.
The Edengraph.
The Perfection Concave Screen.
Indirect Light System by National X-Ray Reflector Co.
Indirect Light System by Inventors Spe. Mfg. Co.
Brass Frames and Easels from Newman Mfg. Co.
Brass Frames and Easels from McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
Poster Frame from Exhibitors Adv. Co.
Lobby Frame of Photoplayers from Exhibitors Adv. Co.
Slide Display from Kansas City Slide Co.
And a number of other exhibits.

Advertising literature of every description.

New exhibits coming in all the time.

When in Chicago make the Moving Picture World your headquarters. We are always pleased to see you.

The
Moving Picture World
167 W. Washington Street
CHICAGO, ILL.

KLEINE
CINES URBAN ECLIPSE
TRADE MARK

RELEASES FOR NEXT WEEK

CINES, Saturday, Sept. 7, 1912.

THE SACKING OF ROME

Showing the terrible plundering of the city by the Duke of Bourbon in 1527.

PICTURESQUE SARDINIA, ITALY
(A Charming Scenic Subject.)

ECLIPSE, Wednesday, Sept. 4, 1912.

AN ECCENTRIC SPORTSMAN
(Comedy.)

SMALL GAME AT THE ZOO
(Nature Study.)

FROM LAUTERBRUNNEN TO MURREN
(Scenic.)

CINES, Tuesday, Sept. 3, 1912.

A TRAGEDY OF LONG AGO
(A Powerful Drama.)

Advance Synopses Free. Write to

GEORGE KLEINE

166 North State St. CHICAGO

Licensed by Motion Picture Patents Co.

SPECIAL

COMING SEPT. 16th, 1912

CINES "Daughter of the Spy" 2 REELS

Romantic Story of Revolutionary Days Dramatically Portrayed in which Daughter of Spy gives her life in vain attempt to save her Nobleman Lover.

FOUR REELS

A Wonderful Presentation by Pathe

SEPT. 9th 1912

THE BLIGHTED SON

Story of a prodigal son who, having killed his mother and sister and made a street beggar of his aged father by his extravagances and wild deeds, suffers a career of unbelievable hardships, but finally returns home—a man. The prodigal's life dramatically told in wonderful pictures.

AUG. 26

2 REELS

FIRE AT SEA

Great interest already manifested in this exciting story of the sea

GENERAL

FEATURES

AUG. 19, 1912 VITAGRAPH'S Rip Van Winkle TWO REELS.
A GREAT FILM FROM A GREAT PLAY MADE FAMOUS BY THE LATE JOSEPH JEFFERSON

AUG. 12, 1912 CINES Rameses, King of Egypt TWO REELS.
ROMANCE IN THE DAYS OF THE SPLENDOR OF THE PHARAOHS

JULY 29, 1912 PATHE'S Don Juan & Charles V TWO REELS.
A WONDERFUL OLD WORLD STORY OF LIFE AT THE COURT OF SPAIN (COLORED FILM)

JULY 22, 1912 KALEM'S Siege of Petersburg TWO REELS.
A MASTERFUL PRESENTATION OF THE CIVIL WAR PERIOD

JULY 15, 1912 VITAGRAPH'S The Money Kings THREE REELS.
A VITAL SUBJECT SUPERBLY HANDLED BY THESE COMPETENT PLAYERS

JULY 8, 1912 PATHE'S The Adopted Child TWO REELS.
A FILM FULL OF HUMAN INTEREST AND INTENSE HEART THROBS

JULY 1, 1912 KALEM'S Tragedy of the Desert TWO REELS.
A FAITHFUL PORTRAIT OF THE ROMANCE AND TRAGEDY OF THE SEA OF SAND

JUNE 24, 1912 PATHE'S A Nation's Peril TWO REELS.
AN EXCITING FILM WITH A MARVELOUSLY THRILLING BOAT EXPLOSION

JUNE 17, 1912 VITAGRAPH'S The French Spy THREE REELS.
AN ENTHRALLING STORY OF MILITARY LIFE IN REAL VITAGRAPH STYLE

JUNE 10, 1912 EDISON'S Martin Chuzzlewit THREE REELS.
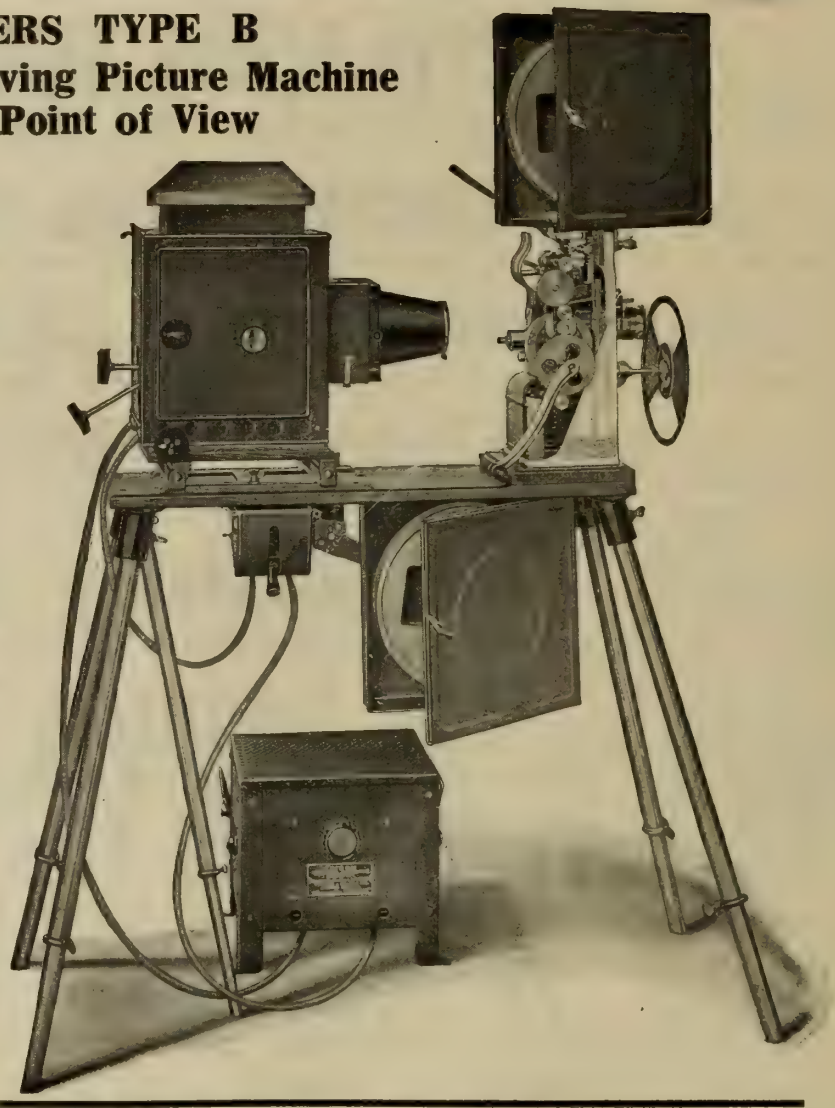
DICKENS' FAMOUS CHARACTERS ARE BROUGHT TO LIFE—PERFECT

FILM CO.

THE EDISON KINETOSCOPE

UNDERWRITERS TYPE B
An Unsurpassed Moving Picture Machine From Every Point of View



"Once used, always used"

If you've just about given up all hope with that cheap moving picture machine—if it's always breaking down and discouraging the crowd with blurred, flickering pictures—get rid of it, now, before it does your business any more harm, and get an Edison Kinetoscope.

The Edison means certainty of success. It projects the sharpest, steadiest pictures, is a simple machine to operate, the most accessible, and is built to stand up to the work. Many have bought Edisons after finding the cheap machines a failure. Write today for catalog 500 and a copy of the Edison Kinetogram.

SPECIAL FEATURES of Edison Underwriters' Type "B"

The only machine with hardened steel shafts running in hardened bearings throughout.

Adjustable Outside Revolving Shutter, Chain Take-Up, Extra Large House, with square condenser holder, Double Magazine Rollers, Heavy Brass Terminals on connecting cords, set of Heavy Extension Legs, four of which are 1¼ inches in diameter. A very substantial stand.

Thomas A Edison INCORPORATED

239 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

Price, with Rheostat, 110 volt, 24-40 amperes, $225.00
Price, with 110 volt, 60 Cycle Transformer, - $245.00

Edison Releases for Sept. 1912

Sept. 3—"The Triangle." 1,000 feet. Comedy-Drama.
" 4—"Aladdin Up-to-date," by William Henry Kitchell. 1,000 feet. Comedy.
" 6—"Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," suggested by Thomas Moore's famous poem. 1,000 feet Dramatic.
" 7—"Bridget's Sudden Wealth." 600 feet. Comedy.
" 7—"Opening of the Y. M. C. A Island Playground, Lynchburg, Va., 1912. Produced in co-operation with the Industrial Dept. of the International Committee Y. M. C. A. 400 feet. Descriptive.
" 10—"The Manufacture of Paper, Maine. 1,000 feet. Industrial.
Sept. 11—"The Stranger and the Taxicab," by E. J. Lucke. 1,000 feet. Comedy.
" 13—"The Dam Builder," by Bannister Merwin. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 14—"The Rescue, Care and Education of Blind Babies." Produced in co-operation with the International Sunshine Society. 1,000 feet. Descriptive.
" 17—"The Governor," by Bannister Merwin. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 18—"Lazy Bill Hudson," by E. J. Montague. 490 feet. Comedy.
" 18—"National Soldiers' Home, Virginia." 510 feet. Descriptive.
" 20—"Hearts and Diamonds," by Herbert E. Morgan. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 21—"The Grandfather," by Lillian E. Sweetser. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.

If You Bore Your Patrons You Lose Them

AVOID THE POSSIBILITY!

BOOK

C. C. P. C.

FILMS

THEY FURNISH THE NECESSARY VARIETY

First In General Excellence!
Best Dramas! Best Comedies!
Best Staging! Best Acting!

C. C. P. C.

The Perfect Pictures!

LUBIN FILMS

LENGTH 664 FEET — RELEASED WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 28th, 1912 — LENGTH 370 FEET

THE BURNT CORK

Catching Mr. and Mrs. Diggs dozing, a wicked actor covers their faces with burnt cork. On meeting each other they take each other for dangerous negroes which the newspapers state are at large. They fight for their lives and finally land up in the police station.

THE CARETAKER

Mrs. Robert Young, Sr., and Mrs. Bob Young, Jr., go on a vacation and charge their husbands to take good care of themselves and the house. When they return, the husbands, the plants, the dog and everything else has grown to such a size that the ladies collapse.

RELEASED THURSDAY, AUGUST 29th, 1912
LENGTH 1057 FEET

FOR THE LOVE OF A GIRL

John Grant dies suddenly, leaving a will by which his niece, Ethel, will inherit a million dollars if she has married Harry Renolds, which is her Uncle's choice. She, however, has married another man and the money is tied up in chancery. Ethel, her husband and Renolds are all respectable poor, and Renolds hears of a decision given by a judge that the conditions of the will are impossible and that the money must be paid over. He hastens to inform the married couple, the good news is quickly followed by the death of Ethel's husband and Renolds wins his old love at last.

RELEASED SATURDAY, AUGUST 31st, 1912
LENGTH 1060 FEET

THE SHERIFF'S PRISONER

Sheriff Clancy on the lookout for a notorious highwayman runs up against Bob Stern, a prospector who very much answers the description. Stern, who is pretty husky, turns the tables, arrests the Sheriff, and locks him up in a closet, leaving his sweetheart Mary to keep guard. Bob then starts out and captures the right man, brings him back and turns him over to the law, and Mary makes Bob a prisoner for life.

Released Friday, Aug. 30th, 1912 — Length 728 Feet

THE OVERWORKED BOOKKEEPER

Jerry Jenks has bookkeeping on the brain, so much so that he cannot rest. One night he walks in his sleep, walks over roofs, slides down telegraph poles, climbs the water spout of the office building, gets in at the window and still in his pajamas gets his books out and tries to work. In the morning he is discovered and kicked out.

Released Friday, Aug. 30th, 1912 — Length 391 Feet

PINNED

Bennie and Barney, two mischievous boys, find a box of horse blanket pins. Just at the time a young lady in a hobble skirt passes and it suggests some fun. The boys make the wash-woman their first victim, pinning her skirts. She tries to chase them, but finds it impossible to "Step lively." Other victims are nailed, not only female, but the policemen, who, when they get on the job, find that their pants are fastened. Finally the boys are caught and get what is coming to them.

LENGTH 363 FEET — RELEASED MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 2nd, 1912 — LENGTH ABOUT 691 FEET

HIS NEW CANE

John Smith, who in his young days has been an exquisite dude, endeavors to improve his son's deportment, and presents him with a cane with instructions of how to carry it. Billy, however, is clumsy and the cane is unruly. It hooks a bank clerk's coat pocket and tears it; it upsets tables in the cafe, pulls a scaffolding down and does so much damage that finally Billy is chased to the creek and gets a ducking.

A SUBSTITUTION

Harry Lawn and Dorothy Somers are in love and each has rival admirers. Lem Durpee, the hired man, thinks he would like to win Dorothy, and Priscilla Vane, an old maiden, has eyes on Harry. The lovers agree to elope and the rivals each plan to outwit them. Priscilla dresses up as Dorothy and Lem does the same, as Harry. They get married without knowing each other.

EXTREMELY BEAUTIFUL ONE and THREE SHEET POSTERS of our PHOTO-PLAYS, printed in FIVE COLORS, can be obtained from the A. B. C. COMPANY, CLEVELAND, OHIO. These handsome bills will offer a GREAT ADVANTAGE to your Theatre.

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY,

MODEL NEW STUDIOS,
20th and Indiana Avenues,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago: 154 West Lake St. — B. Nichols, 86 Wardour St., London, W., England. — Berlin, 35 Friedrich Str.

VITAGRAPH
LIFE PORTRAYALS

"A DOUBLE DANGER" — Monday, August 26th

WITH SPLENDID RESULTS. A little child undergoes a surgical operation. The poor father unexpectedly encounters an escaped convict, whom he captures. He receives one thousand dollars reward for his apprehension. Everything turns out happily.

"FLIRT OR HEROINE" — Tuesday, August 27th

NEVER WAVERS. She appears to be a flirt. On the field of battle in India she cares for the sick. She risks her life for others, and the man she loves. Do you wonder that he marries her?

"TWO CINDERS" and "BUMPS" — Wednesday, August 28th

TWO OF THEM. A young girl gets a cinder in her eye on a railroad car. A good-natured man helps her get it out. He gets one in his eye. She laughs at him. Before she gets out of the car, they are engaged to be married. How did it happen?
Bumps is an elephant. He and a little circus clown become fast friends. Bumps saves the little clown from a fire. Wouldn't that bump you?

"WRITTEN IN THE SAND" — Friday, August 30th

A DELICATE TOUCH OF ROMANCE. A young fisher lad sees his name written in the sand with that of a lovely girl. Later he sees his name displaced by another. His dream of love is over. Like a vision it fades away forever.

"THE BOND OF MUSIC" — Saturday, August 31st

IT HATH CHARMS. The tie that binds in kindred friendship. Two men with a mutual taste for music save each other from death, during the Franco-Prussian War.

NEXT WEEK	NEXT WEEK
"TOMMY'S SISTER"—Right in Line	MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 2d
"CORONETS AND HEARTS"—Hearts Win	TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3rd
"CAPTAIN BARNACLE'S LEGACY"—A Rich One	WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 4th
"BUNNY'S SUICIDE" / "SHE WANTED A BOARDER" —Two Laughs	FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 6th
"A WASTED SACRIFICE"—Well Credited	SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 7th

KALEM

NEW-YORK
235 West 23d Street
LONDON
86 Wardour Street

"International Producers"

BERLIN
35 Friedrich Str:
PARIS
13 Rue du Faubourg Montmartre.

The Girl Reporter's Big Scoop

Alice, the girl reporter, secures the photograph of a black-leg foreign Count who is about to marry a rich American girl, frustrates the theft of the wedding presents, and secures a sensational story for her paper.

Released Monday, September 9th

Dr. Skinnem's Wonderful Invention

Dr. Skinnem falls asleep and dreams of a remarkable invention that makes him rich. The Kalem comedy company finds a rich field in this side-splitting farce.

(ON THE SAME REEL)

The Ancient Port of Jaffa

This world-renowned port was known in Bible times as Joppa. As an ancient historical town it is of great interest to the traveler. The Kalem photographer secured views of the most interesting scenes.

Released Wednesday, Sept, 11th

The Street Singer

An Absorbing Story of a Prima Donna's Rise to Fame

This romantic drama features Miss Alice Joyce with a specially selected cast.

Every exhibitor knows a good strong story with the peerless Alice in the cast is a business getter.

One and three-sheet, four-color lithographs for this headline attraction.

Released Friday, Sept. 13th

A Railroad Lochinvar

A Sensational Comedy Drama

The railroad president's son just out of college starts work at the bottom and while climbing up has a number of thrilling experiences and a lot of fun.

Special one and three-sheet posters for this feature

Released Sat:, Sept. 14th

FOUR A WEEK

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.

Published by
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY,

Telephone Call, 1343-1344 Gramercy
125 E. 23rd Street (Beach Building), NEW YORK

J. P. CHALMERS, SR., PRES.; E. J. CHALMERS, SEC. AND TREAS.; JOHN WYLIE, VICE-PRES. AND GENERAL MANAGER.

The office of the company is the address of the officers.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Se cond Class Matter.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: $3.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada, $3.50. Foreign Countries, $4.00, Post Paid.

WESTERN OFFICE: 169 W. Washington St. (Post Bldg.), Chicago, Ill. Phone, Main 3145. Automatic Phone 32732.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES ON APPLICATION.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS (No Display), Three Cents per Word; Minimum Charge, 50c.

Address all correspondence "Moving Picture World, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square, New York," and not to individuals.

Vol. 13 AUGUST 31, 1912 No. 9

INDEX TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS.....872
AT THE SIGN OF THE FLAMING ARCS.....883

BANQUET OF THE M. P. E. L.....860

CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES.....892
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES...890
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS.....880
CORRESPONDENCE 898

"DARLING OF THE C. S. A." (Kalem).....884
DOINGS AT LOS ANGELES.....870

ELECTION OF NATIONAL OFFICERS.....853

FACTS AND COMMENTS 844

"GLAD TIDINGS, THE," IN MOTION PICTURES, by W. Stephen Bush.....846
"GRANDFATHER, THE" (Edison) 847

HEAD OF ITALA FILM CO. SAILS.....868

IMPRESSIONS OF THE NATIONAL CONVENTION 863
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES 912
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES 920
INQUIRIES 891

LICENSED FILM STORIES 904
LICENSED RELEASE DATES 922
LIST OF ALTERNATES AND DELEGATES....856
LIST OF VISITORS 857
"LOVE STORY OF OLD JAPAN, A," by Hanford C. Judson.....864

MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES 884
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR, THE.....866
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURE.....871

OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN.....869

PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE 874
"POWER OF DESTRUCTION, THE" (Universal Feature) 867
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 876

S. LUBIN BUYS $100,000 ESTATE.....864
SONG SLIDE RELEASES 894
SPEECH OF HON. JOHN J. LENTZ 849
STAN. TWIST'S PRESS DINNER.....854
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed).....904
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent).....912
SUIT AGAINST THE PATENTS COMPANY....868

WHAT CONSTITUTES A REALLY GREAT PLAY? by Louis Reeves Harrison 845

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.

FRORUP, L. E. 928
KIEWERT, CHAS. L. 927
REISINGER, HUGO 921

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.

CHICAGO PROJECTING CO. 926
CHICAGO M. P. SUPPLY CO. 914
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO. 925
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO. 919
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO. 925
HALLBERG, J. H. 929
LAVEZZI MACHINE CO. 930
MOORE, HUBBLE & CO. 914
PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT CO. 905
SCHNEIDER, E. 930
SMITH, L. C. 894
SUREHOLD SHUTTER CO. 926

FILM IMPORTERS & DEALERS.

INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS.....918
WESTERN FILM BROKERS.....926

FIREPROOF APPARATUS.

TRAINER, C. W. 924

FILM EXCHANGE.

ACME FILM CO. 924
BRADENBURG, GEO. 926
CALEHUFF, CHAS. 917
HETZ, L. 926
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE.....926
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE....926
SPECIAL EVENT FILM CO. 924

FILM MANUFACTURERS.

CRYSTAL FILM CO. 924

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS. (Film Supply Co.)

AMERICAN 828
BISON "101" 833
BRONCHO FILM CO. 834
ECLAIR 897
FILM SUPPLY CO. 921
GAUMONT 893-913
GREAT NORTHERN 901
KEYSTONE FILM CO. 832
LUX 901
RELIANCE. 919
SOLAX. 895
THANHOUSER. 826

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS. (Universal.)

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURERS...829-30-31

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.

EDISON 838
ESSANAY 827
KALEM 842
KLEINE 835
LUBIN 840
MELIES 931
PATHE FRERES 839
SELIG 897
VITAGRAPH 841

MISCELLANEOUS.

A B C CO. 911
AMERICAN SONG SLIDE & POSTER CO.....922
BOYLE, J. E. 930
BRADY, A. 924
BRUNSWIG BROS. 924
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS 891
CORCORAN, A. J. 925
EASTMAN KODAK CO. 911
EXHIBITORS' ADV. CO. 924
EXHIBITORS' ADV. & SPECIALTY CO.....892
FEDERAL FEATURE FILM SUPPLY CO.... .924
GLOBE M. P. & ADV. CO. 926
HARBACH & CO. 930
HOKE, GEO. M. 930
McKENNA BROS. 930
M. P. W. BINDERS.....928
NATIONAL TICKET CO. 920
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.....928
NEWMAN CO. 930
PHOTO CINES CO. 912
PHOTOPLAY ADV. & SPECIALTY CO.....923
PHILOGRAPH FILM BUREAU 928
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.....917
SARGENT, E. W. 926
STELZER BROS. 924
UNITED AMUSEMENT CO. 918
VONEGUT HARDWARE CO. 928
WILLIAMS AMUSEMENT CO. 926
ZENITH MFG. CO. 924

LENS MANUFACTURERS.

BAUSCH & LOMB 915

LECTURERS.

BUSH, W. S. 917

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.

AMERICAN 917
EDISON 838
MOTIOGRAPH 925
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH 932
SIMPLEX 889

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

BARTON, DAN. 894
SOUSA, C. E. 919
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH 913

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.

AMERICAN SEATING CO. 930
ANDREWS, A. H. 930
BENNET, GEO. 930
HARDESTY CHAIR CO. 930
STEEL FURNITURE CO. 930
WISCONSIN LUMBER CO. 930

PROJECTION SCREENS.

AMERICAN THEATER CURTAIN CO 915
INVENTORS' SPECIALTY CO 929
MIRROROIDE CO. 915
MIRROR SCREEN CO. 915
THOMAS, A. G. 918

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.

BATTERSHALL & OLESON 894
CLAPHAM, A. J. 894
ERKER BROS. 924
LEVI CO. 894
NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO 924
SCOTT & VAN ALTENA 894
SIMPSON, A. L. 930
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO. 894

FEATURE FILMS (Released by).

AMERICA'S FEATURE FILM CO 926
ATLAS MFG. CO. 907
CROWN FEATURE FILM CO. 913
DUHEM & HARTER M. P. CO. 909
FEATURE & EDUCATIONAL FILM CO 924
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO. 913
GARDEN OF ALLAH FILM CO. 905
GENERAL FILM CO. 836-837
GENERAL FILM PUB. & SALES CO 917
IMPERIAL FEATURE FILM CO. 924
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS 918
MASKO FILM CO. 917
NEW YORK FILM CO. 924
QUAKER CITY FILM CO. 890
ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO. 928
ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO. 924
SPECIAL FILM CO., LTD. 894
SUPERIOR FEATURE FILM CO. 919
TOURNAMENT FILM CO. 924
UNITED FEATURE FILM CO. 905
UNIVERSAL FEATURES 899
WARNER'S FEATURE FILM CO. 911
WORLD, M. P., CLASSICS 911

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.

DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO. 919

Facts and Comments

THE re-election of Messrs. Neff, Christenson and Rieder as officers of the National League of Motion Picture Exhibitors was a foregone conclusion. These officials had discharged their duties in a thoroughly acceptable and efficient manner. They had earned another term of office. It is a sensible rule in political and other organizations to reward capable presidents, secretaries or treasurers with a second election. In choosing the present head of the organization for a new term the convention paid a tribute not only to the man, but also to the state from which he hails. Ohio has the best organization, the most compact and the most complete. Few, if any, of the other states are so well organized. Some of the states were organized within a few weeks of the holding of the convention, while in other states the number of the unorganized exhibitors far exceeded the membership of the organization.

The energy and experience of the national officers will make the next convention bigger. THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, which has lent its aid to all efforts at representative organization in the past, will continue to be the friend and champion of the organized as well as the unorganized exhibitors. We earnestly hope that harmony, toleration and general good will are to characterize the League in the future and that its further growth will be an undoubted benefit to every exhibitor and to every branch of the League. We hope that the program of the League will continue to be liberal, progressive and constructive. The modern trend in an organization is to increase the power of the great mass of the members and to make the officers respond quickly to the genuine sentiment of the majority. The exhibitor is the source of all power, which flows from the advantages of organization. That policy will be the most useful and successful which bears this fact in mind. The broader and deeper the foundations the longer will be the life of the structure.

* * *

THE Edison Company will receive the thanks of many thousands of Dickens lovers for its splendid production of "Mr. Pickwick's Predicament." It will be worthy of them. With one or two exceptions it has given of the best of its fine company of players. The single adventure of the lovable and benevolent Pickwick it has elected to feature in this single reel is that best known to readers of the famous Englishman as "Bardell vs. Pickwick." Those who have not read this story in a decade or a generation will find deep enjoyment in watching the picture. They will laugh at the overeagerness of Mrs. Bardell as she misconstrues the simple announcement of Mr. Pickwick that he has decided to take a companion. So also will they enjoy the consternation of Mr. Pickwick when at a meeting of the Pickwick Club, surrounded by all his cronies, he receives the ominous letter from Dodson & Fogg. Perhaps the characterization of Dodson by Marc MacDermott will stand out as the notable feature of a notable production. It is in no measure in derogation of the fine work of all the others in this carefully selected cast to say this. Sergeant Buzfuz is most competently portrayed by Charles Ogle, and this sterling actor will materially add to his reputation by his representation of the pleader. Mrs. Erskine as the joyful and tearful Mrs. Bardell adds her full share to the artistic quality of the picture. William Wadsworth plays the leading character, and he plays it well. He is ably seconded by the ever-faithful Samuel Weller, portrayed by Barry O'Moore. Julian Reed plays Fogg, and true to the well-known original he is the veritable echo of his tall partner. "Mr. Pickwick's Predicament" will be an ideal selection for educational programmes. It will stimulate a desire to read more about the famous characters depicted on the screen. Nor will this desire be confined to the younger generation. It will extend to many who have put by Dickens as a task accomplished, but who will turn again to his works with a new pleasure.

* * *

AFTER the great theaters of the land had exhibited the Inferno of Dante in motion pictures, meeting everywhere not only with crowded houses but with the approval of the most intelligent and cultured people of the country, it has remained for the famous settlement known as Union Hill to come forward and denounce the pictures as "vulgar and immoral." We are informed that Mayor Rannenberg and Chief of Police Kriger are investigating complaints of various citizens against the pictures of Dante's Inferno. We would have taken no notice whatever of this display of midsummer madness had it not been for the bold assertion that the "National Board of Censorship had recently rejected the pictures as being unfit for production." This statement is absolutely false. We are authorized to say that the National Board of Censorship approved of the pictures over a year ago and that no other action has since been taken by the National Board of Censorship. Six centuries have set their stamp of admiration and approval on Dante's Inferno and the greatest men and women of all ages have paid it fervent tribute. It is not likely that the police department of a suburb of Hoboken will reverse the verdict of humanity.

* * *

IN another part of this issue of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD will be found a report of the action of the Federal Government against the Motion Picture Patents Company and other defendants. The object of the suit is the dissolution of the M. P. P. Co. on the ground of alleged violations of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. It is not known whether the government acted of its own accord and initiative or whether it is merely giving its formal consent to the action. As is well known no action for the dissolution of a corporation can be brought by a private person, though the government may, if it chooses to do so, accept evidence obtained by private parties and then proceed for dissolution. It will take a year at least to bring the matter to a final judgment. While these questions are under judicial advisement it is manifestly the proper thing to await the action of the courts before offering any journalistic comments. The litigation must be carried on in the courts and not in the newspapers. The readers of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD will be advised from time to time of all important steps in the further proceedings before the courts.

What Constitutes a Really Great Play?

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

I trust that the Biograph Company and the Vitagraph Company will pardon my using their productions to illustrate my meaning in this argument. I am simply agitating a point with a view to eliciting truth, even though I use a regressive and scientific method of discovery at times, besides, discussion of an important production affords the finest kind of publicity, and I am unaffected by overruling traditions in either premises or promises. I admit in advance that my ideas may need the test of confirmation.

I was told by a critic who is both capable and honest that I missed a remarkable interpretation in not seeing the Vitagraph picturing of "Lincoln's Gettysburg Address." I was unable to get a private view of it at the studio, but finally saw it admirably presented at the Wadsworth Theater, New York. I was informed by a professional critic, one who watches every photoplay released, that the Biograph "Man's Genesis" opened up an entirely new field in a powerful way. This opinion was shortly after substantiated by one of the ablest of Independent Producers, who said that "Man's Genesis" outranked anything done by members of the older organization for a long, long time. Again I was too late to get a private view, but the accommodating management of the Wadsworth presented the photodrama in splendid style that I might have opportunity of studying it in actual performance.

That both of these plays should prove interesting to men of high intelligence indicates very plainly that there was genius back of them, whether or not it found full expression. Both were progressive in spirit, one inspiring us to finer effort and the other modifying our primitive egotism. Both, therefore, respond in a measure to requirements already indicated in these columns.

Wherein do they fall short?

The Vitagraph release is entirely too short to impress the lesson it was intended to convey. Its crowded events are highly dramatic and cluster about one of the most interesting figures in history. Characterization in the important role is so perfect as to be beyond praise. The noble words of Lincoln raise our appreciation of him as a man to the highest point. His simple dignity is impressive and we are given swift glimpses of an epoch marking the topmost crest of Confederate invasion, but the magnitude and importance of the occasion are lost to all but keen minds. So much is compressed in the illustrative action accompanying the speech that not enough time is given to the address itself, and slower comprehensions in a mixed audience are confused by the rapid shifting of scenes. On account of this unnecessary condensation the full and complete purpose of so costly a release is not impressed on the audience. It is "Lest we forget."

The Biograph release deals with the long education in hatred which man brought with him from the lower life to his human station, and it is essentially tragic. His gain in power led him to perceive that nearly all about him was unfriendly to his desires. He must destroy except when it was possible for him to propitiate. In the face of a strong tendency to sympathetic relations with wife and children he found that his fellow men were his foes quite as well as the dumb beasts he overcame. "Man's Genesis" deals with the evolution of an idea suggested by deadly competition, but the director mischose to give a monkey-like characterization to the human creatures for comedy purposes and thereby destroyed the tension and sympathetic interest he is usually so careful to preserve. The people in front, especially those of intelligence, have received no evidence of such ancestry—Darwin's theory is simply an explanation of the origin of new species—and are unwilling to acknowledge the relation as suggested in this picture. It is commonly believed that Man passed through infinite hardship during the silent ages—there was something heroic in his overcoming deadly competition—and even the events of "Man's Genesis" confirm this belief. Man was slowly acquiring that intellectuality which made him supreme on earth, and there was grand opportunity in this photodrama to exhibit the nobility of his upward struggle. It is shown, as is also the development of the monogamic habit, but this is done in spite of supposed ape-like attributes. The magnificent exhibition of determined combativeness shown by the fighting males in the battle to the death is that of manhood. Here is a splendid tragedy converted to an impossible comedy for no other purpose that I can see than that of responding to a claim made by exhibitors who have not correctly gauged the public taste.

No great photoplay will come from slighting the highest purposes of the drama. Here are two magnificent subjects, both handled so well as to evoke the highest praise from competent critics, both handled ably in many respects, yet both lacking in complete development. I think this is due to a lack of time for suitable consideration of the ideas involved. I cannot, therefore, look for any really great play except from those who have ample time to make a study of the New Art.

In speaking of the American audience as an average, I feel justified in asserting that its members will highly appreciate any impressive motive or topic, imaginatively presented, which is put justly and truly before them. I am ready and willing to be convinced that I am wrong, but the evidences of our literary and ethical tastes are all confirmatory, and I have yet to meet a man or woman who did not express a hope that moving pictures would rise to the requirements of the whole people. There exists no perceptible reason why moving pictures should not become the true mirror of the world.

Once a grand theme is selected, the director should be enabled to proceed along the lines of its natural and consistent development irrespective of time limitations and mistaken demands of those whose knowledge of public taste is confined to comparatively small individual requirements. A manager may be sure that he knows his own audience, but this restricts rather than broadens his view. A great play is one that reaches out to all classes and conditions with its appeal.

A great play must have ample time for its adequate presentation to slow minds as well as to those of quick comprehension. A great play must proceed on lines that are true to our finest ideals where nothing authoritative exists to make it true to life. A great play should never belittle humankind and its struggles up the path of progress. A great play must stir our thoughts with recognition of beauty. A great play may stir our emotions to a revolt against injustice, or cause us to forget our antipathies, or awaken our loftiest aspirations, or cheer us in a moment of sorrow and discouragement, but it must reach out and take a strong grip on those human sympathies which appear to be universal.

"THE GLAD TIDINGS" IN MOTION PICTURES

By W. Stephen Bush.

NO one can understand the Bible who does not understand the East. How are we to understand the East, so thoroughly different from us in its thoughts and its manners, its habits, its social conditions, its way of viewing life? The best way is to go there and study conditions on the spot. This of course can only be done by the select few. The next best way, until the coming of the motion picture, was to read books on the subject and listen to men who had been there. The cinematograph is better than the book and better than the lecture. It brings the East before our eyes just as it is and just as it was in the days of Christ. The East changes but little. Scholars and students, fascinated by the pursuit of knowledge, have gone to Palestine, skeptical and full of doubts. As they traveled through Galilee and Judea and looked about them with the gospel records before their mental vision, their understanding of the great subject grew to profound belief and conviction. What until then had seemed to them hazy and mythical, shadowy and obscure, became as clear and plain as the facts of every day life. Not without reason has Palestine been called the fifth gospel. While in the passing of the centuries there were some changes affecting even the topography of what we designate as the Holy Land, many of the sacred landmarks still exist and impress the mind profoundly. Nor have the customs or the character of the people and their everyday lives changed much since the days of Herod and Caiphas.

When therefore a producer of films goes into Palestine and adjacent regions and seeks by means of the camera to show to the world at large what the East is and looks like, he has started the motion picture on a wonderful mission, the results of which cannot be foreseen at this time. Wholly regardless of the intrinsic or artistic merits of such films, every friend of the motion picture is bound to proclaim the fact that a new field has been opened up and that the possibilities of the cinematograph are well worthy of engaging the attention of the whole Christian and civilized world. If this plan of promoting the knowledge and proper understanding of the gospels is to be extended further under the guidance and with the assistance of the great Oriental scholars of the day the coming generations as well as our own will learn as much about the subject as is known to-day only to a handful of experts. We surely need not detail here the benefits to civilization resulting from such a great advance in knowledge. The purpose of these lines is to point out in a few practical instances how the motion picture will make our impressions more vivid and every line of the gospels more convincing.

Unless we realize that the larger part of Judea is a stony wilderness, gloomy, forbidding and yet awe-inspiring it is difficult for us to understand the mission and the characteristics of the young prophet who, according to the writers of the gospel, preceded the coming of the Messiah. The neighborhood of the Dead Sea and the Jordan has the appearance of a desert. Once we see it either in reality or in a cinematographic reproduction we no longer wonder at the popular belief which regarded it as the abode of demons. As a famous writer puts it: "There are few regions in the world more desolate, more God-forsaken, more shut off from life than the rocky slope which forms the western border of the Dead Sea." How much clearer too becomes the story of Christ's seclusion near this wilderness and how much better we understand the story of the temptation. The cinematograph in a few hundred feet shows us a fitting and most probable theater for the exertion of the arts of Satan.

Again, take Nazareth. No matter how much we may read and study, the word remains to most of us a geographical term or a name in history. The magic of the moving picture camera presents to us a faithful animated reproduction of the Nazareth in which the childhood of Christ was spent. We have the testimony of one of the greatest of Oriental scholars for the fact that "The town of Nazareth in the time of Jesus did not perhaps much differ from what it is to-day. The streets where he played as a child we can see in the stony paths or in the little cross-ways which separate the cabins. The house of Joseph no doubt closely resembled those poor dwellings, lighted by the doorway, which serve at once as workshop, kitchen and bedroom, having for furniture a mat, a few cushions on the floor, one or two earthen pots, and a painted chest."

The pastoral and agricultural character of the northern part of Palestine and especially of ancient Galilee makes clearer and plainer many of the sayings and parables of Christ. It would be impossible within the scope of this article to enter very fully into details.

We rely upon the same authority in saying that the touching and beautiful ceremony of marriage with its attendance of joyous virgins and its typically Eastern glorification of the bridegroom has undergone no substantial change from the wedding at Cana to the present day. The charming and pathetic parable of the wise and foolish virgins will be better understood and its lesson will seem more real after we have seen a motion picture of such an event as it may occur in any of the small villages or larger towns of the modern Palestine. Instances of this kind might be multiplied at will.

One effect of these pictures will be to disarm criticism and conquer prejudice in those quarters where criticism, prejudice and ignorance have run rampant. The advantage to the exhibitor will be direct and immediate. However crude and inexperienced some of these efforts at the reproductions of the land and the customs of the Bible may seem to scholars, there is no community on our continent where the clergy will not be drawn to these pictures. Wherever they will be exhibited they are sure of the best kind of an audience. Much of course must of neccesity be left to the intelligence and initiative of the individual exhibitor. It seems to us, however, that in any hands and under any circumstances these pictures will demonstrate both the great educative powers of the picture and the high and praiseworthy ambition of the manufacturer.

An illustrious writer who had spent many years of his life in the Holy Land and who had often lingered about the town of Nazareth, the Lake Tiberias and the immortal towns of Capernaum, Bethsaida, and Chorazin, has expressed in words of touching sweetness and pathos the hope that the world would some day "build its temple upon this hill of Nazareth." "Here, at the spot where Christianity appeared, and at the center of its founder's activity, should arise the great Cathedral in which all Christians might worship."

The monuments erected by means of the cinematograph are more enduring than brass or stone. The noble dream of that writer may yet be fulfilled by a series of pictures showing the hill whereof he speaks and reproducing the people and the scenes for which Nazareth will remain forever famous in the history of the race.

THE GRANDFATHER (Edison).

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THIS is a humanizing story with an exceedingly tender strain in its song. An old soldier has contracted a debt in the defense of his country which it seems that he must pay in pain and humiliation. He has been crippled in action, forced to live on a scant pension, and deprived of any fitting reward for his splendid service, being condemned to the weary solitude of decent poverty until his farmer-son invites him to spend his remaining days in better companionship than that he has enjoyed. The veteran responds hopefully, trudging part of the way, but enters upon a strained social condition.

His young daughter-in-law is already carrying a heavy burden in meeting household requirements for her growing family and the farmhands, and can only see in this old and lame man an addition to the drudgery which she is already called upon to perform. Here is another care and another mouth to feed. She exhibits resentment from the outset—she is looking forward, not backward—and ill-naturedly turns the old soldier and his pipe out of the house and sets him t owork at the wood-pile.

This young wife has a little daughter, who is drawn into a sympathetic relation with the veteran by the gentle tolerance and broad affection of sweet old age, and her tiny hands strum the heart strings of the lame soldier until he becomes as happy as a child in his devotion to one. She revives both the paternal and maternal instincts in a man who deemed himself to be deprived of earthly ties and stirs the fire long dormant in his heart. He becomes a man again instead of a human creature counting the lonely hours before his last day.

A silent intertwining of affection is shown in many scenes between the human bud and chastened spirit of an old man who has read the book of bitter experience to the end and is content to leave the rest to the Power none of us comprehend. These two become friends inseparable. When it becomes known that there is to be a township picnic and reunion of old settlers, the veteran takes his grandchild to his room and shows her with pride the uniform he is to wear on that grand occasion.

It is to be an affair so important that a distinguished judge has consented to make an address, and the old soldier is determined to appear at his best. His suit of blue is brought forth with a mixture of secrecy and reverence very impressive to the child, but when the day arrives and the family rig is ready for departure to the scene it is found that there is not room for the man whose regiment was victorious in a hundred battles of the Civil War. He is left behind to shed his unchecked tears of disappointment alone.

So much for the heroes of other days—we honor them only when we bury them. The grandfather wanders away to a quiet spot in the woods and resumes his old-time habits of reflection. While he is sitting there a motor car stops and a distinguished looking man descends to inquire the way. He is the judge who is to be the most honored of all guests at the Old Settlers' Reunion. He notes the uniform of the pensive old man and displays with pride his medal of honor. He, too, fought with the men of the North, "whose sons and sires gather no more about their fires," and the two enter an animated discussion.

A slight illustration of battle at this point would have been very effective. As it is, the fine old fellows became so absorbed in their reminiscences that time flies unheeded until the chauffeur reminds them that there is an engagement to keep. Meanwhile, a large company has gathered to hear the address and the most important personage of the day cannot be found. Finally it is announced that he has arrived. He appears from the foreground with his arm over an old comrade whom he conducts to the steps ascending to the speaker's stand, and there he makes it known that the old veteran deserves to share all the honor and applause with which he is greeted.

This is only a revelation of merit to the thoughtless wife and mother who made her father-in-law so unwelcome. After the ceremonies are over, the two war comrades go to the steep bank of a nearby lake to renew their discussion, and a number of children come to play in their neighborhood. Among these is the little granddaughter. She ventures too near the edge and falls into the water. Now, grandpa becomes a modern hero, and gives evidence of the fire that was in him a half century before. He leaps in and saves the little one after a struggle and restores her to her mother. His reward is the combined love of a united family.

Scene from an Excellent Rural Drama Entitled "The Grandfather," by the Edison Company.

National Convention of Exhibitors.

A DETAILED REPORT OF THE SECOND ANNUAL GATHERING OF THE MEMBERS OF THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA.

M. A. Neff Re-elected President Unanimously and the Other National Officers by Acclamation. New York Selected as the Next Meeting Place of the National Organization.

By Jas. S. McQuade.

THE opening session of the second annual convention was held on the nineteenth floor of the La Salle Hotel on Tuesday, August 13, 1912. A record-breaking attendance of State officers, delegates, alternates and visiting exhibitors and their friends marked the occasion.

President M. A. Neff called the convention to order at two o'clock, p. m., and introduced Mr. Maclay Hoyne, of Chicago, who had been selected by Mayor Harrison to deliver an address of welcome to the visitors. He spoke as follows:

"I am not going to burden you with any address. I don't understand that that is the usual function of any one representing the Mayor on these occasions. I am here, however, to say that His Honor had hoped to be here in person, but he has been exceedingly busy with the negotiations between the street railways and their employees, and with the special meeting of the City Council which occurs to-morrow; and in his absence it is my pleasant duty to say to the delegates who are here from other States and other cities that we welcome you to Chicago, and we hope that you may have a good time while you are with us and that your deliberations here may be both profitable and pleasant for all of you.

"During the time you are here I want to say if there is anything the city officials can do to make your stay pleasant, we would be very glad to assist you, and you can find some one in the City Hall at any time who will aid you.

"You will find the present Water Carnival, I believe, a rather pleasant form of entertainment. I will say to those of you from afar, who have heard in the past that the city of Chicago is a wild and woolly west and that the lake front is a dangerous place for strangers, that the practices of the past have been abolished and you are invited to visit the lake front to look at the explosions and I wish to assure you that you can accept the invitation with safety (applause). I was there last night myself, and the only explosions I saw were those in connection with the fireworks, and I came back without being any lighter in pocket, and I can recommend to all of you a trip to the lake front.

"Now, as I have said, I am not here to deliver an address, but to deliver to you the keys of the city and to wish you a very pleasant time and to thank you for the opportunity of being present (applause)."

Sidney Ascher, of New York, then sought the recognition of the chair and was invited to the platform. "I want to apologize for my physical disability," he began. "I have been shouting 'New York, 1913,' so much that I am hardly able to hear myself, and speaking is rather difficult.

"I didn't come here to praise the Empire State or to make a peroration on its great doings, but I came to tender a message of good will from the State of New York. I came to express the appreciation of New York for the efforts that Mr. Neff has rendered in our behalf. We want to express our appreciation in concrete form. We want to tender Mr. Neff something more than a few words of good will. We want to tender to him something that will be a constant reminder of the deep appreciation that New York feels for the good work that he has done. Mr. Neff has worked tirelessly. He has bent every effort and energy to the uplift of this business throughout the Union, and New York more than any other State feels the effects of his good work. New York has observed that in previous conventions when the body was called to order by its president, he either had to rap for order with his elbow or his thumb or his pocket knife; so New York, being observant, takes this opportunity to present to its first national president a gavel with which he can call the conventions to order in the future. It is the wish of New York, it is the sincere hope of New York, that its presidents in the future may wield the gavel as well and as ably as Mr. Neff has done in the past and as we expect him to do, if it is our good fortune to have the honor of seeing him in the chair, for another year."

President Neff responded in the following words: "I wish to thank New York for the gift of this gavel, and assure you that I appreciate all that the representative from New York has said. I will not enter into a speech in regard to this token of sincerity and friendship, because when I say sincerity I mean that this convention is a serious matter to the exhibitors of this country. We are passing through an era of cinematography which demands that we as motion picture exhibitors consider everything seriously at this convention.

"I am not going to dwell upon either the seriousness or any other subject at this time, but instead take great pleasure in introducing to you not only a friend, but a statesman, a man that is known throughout the length and breadth of the United States, a man who has ever stood for the people—not for a few, but for all the people of this country—a man who is enlisted and is as earnestly engaged in thought and action for the motion picture exhibitors of this country as though he were a motion picture exhibitor himself; a man who said, when I went to him and asked him to serve as attorney for the motion picture exhibitors of Ohio, 'I will serve.' He never asked a question about a retainer, although he receives retainer fees of a thousand dollars from other corporations and other bodies, but he never spoke about a retainer fee to me when I asked him to represent the State organization of Ohio as our attorney.

"Ladies and gentlemen of this convention, I have the pleasure of introducing to you the Hon. John J. Lentz, of Columbus, Ohio, who will now address you."

John Saxe,
Saxe Amusement Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

Thomas Saxe,
Saxe Amusement Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

L. P. Washburn,
Salem, W. Va.

W. Clarke,
Princess Theater, Jersey City, N. J.

Speech of the Hon. John J. Lentz.

"In every fiber of my being I appreciate as I could appreciate no other honor, the privilege of an invitation from your president and secretary to meet with you on this the second anniversary of a work that I believe is destined to be the most potent in the next generation of any work that has been consummated in any generation in all the centuries.

"Many of you men and women are probably aware that Edison has recently said that, with all that he has been credited in the inventive world, he believes that Ford, the inventor of a moderate priced and serviceable automobile, has succeeded in outstripping him in the work for humanity. If the Ford machine, in setting a modest price and compelling others to bring their price down within the reach of the many, has surpassed and exceeded in inventive ingenuity and in service to humanity the great Edison, then, my friends, how much more are you succeeding in surpassing Edison and Ford when you bring the entire world before the vision of the boy and the girl, the schoolmaster and the preacher, the doctor and the lawyer, the merchant and the mechanic in a few minutes' time for the paltry sum of a five cent piece?

"Kings and bishops, potentates and princes were long supposed to be the masters of the human flock. It was for them to travel and to read and to govern the millions who were in ignorance. If there ever was any credit in being a king or a bishop or a potentate of any kind, how much more credit is due men and women engaged, as you are, in making kings and bishops and princes and potentates of every boy and girl that comes in from the sidewalk?

"In the coming winter you men and women will, for a nickel a show, educate the boyhood and the girlhood, the manhood and the womanhood of the United States to a higher degree of intelligence and efficiency than any king or bishop ever obtained in the history of the world. You show them the civilizations of the entire earth. It was the dream of a great literary character to make a trip around the world in eighty days. I was going to say that you do it in eighty minutes. I believe it would be equally true if I would say that you can take up a trip around the earth in about eighty seconds if you wanted to do it with a moving picture seconds if you wanted to do it with a moving picture machine.

"Yes, my friends, I am rather proud of Mr. Neff's introduction. We in Ohio sometimes have been accused of being somewhat conceited about that State. We are no longer standing back of Virginia and allowing her to be called the mother of presidents. We think that Ohio is the mother and that Virginia has become superannuated and is the grandmother of presidents (laughter); and in Ohio we are rather proud of the fact that we have M. A. Neff (applause), who has organized a creative and molding influence in the United States.

"The time is ripe when you men and women should be known to the law makers of the land as a potentiality that will not be trifled with, and that you will not allow every Tom, Dick and Harry of some little municipality to hamper the progress of the picture play, the greatest luminary in the universe of intellectual life (applause).

"Organizers are born, not made. They twitted us of Ohio and said: 'Some people are born rich, some are born lucky and others are born in Ohio (laughter).' I know that Neff was not born rich in shekels, but he was born rich in ideas (applause). A man who can organize the manhood and womanhood here to-day is a man of whom any State could be proud; and when Mr. Neff walked into my office and asked me whether I would serve as counsellor for the organization of the State of Ohio, I didn't stop, he says, to ask for a retainer. Well, I am not quite so greedy as that.

"If every church in this land would put in a moving picture every Sunday, I believe we would all go. Good men and women like you could not stay away. I would go myself if they would have the film there. It would be a drawing card for the churches, and you would not find so many articles in the magazines asking, 'Why do the men not go to church and why are the women beginning to leave the church pews empty?' Why? Because they haven't got a moving picture (applause). They are behind the times.

"Neff asked, 'Will you be the attorney?' and I said 'Yes.' Why? Because I knew there was very little to do. He is the attorney of the moving picture men in the State of Ohio. He understands what the future will be. There are some men who project the necessities of the business and comprehend them, and realize where the statutes are deficient and where the municipal and State codes are deficient with reference to the buildings within which these great educators are to be installed in the future; and so, instead of the State league coming to me for a lawyer, I am smart enough to turn to Neff because he is the best equipped lawyer on that subject that I know of anywhere, with all due respect to your national counsellor, Senator Foraker, of Ohio, or the State counsellor, your humble servant.

"The subject of the moving picture appeals to me, possibly, as no other subject does. All my life from my boyhood days I have hoped in some way to be identified with the great uplift of the ninety-six million, or the thousand million or fifteen hundred million who make up the human family. They are all my brothers and my sisters, and I know of no influence in the world to-day that is lifting all humanity up to as high a degree with as little friction, with as little labor, with as little trouble, with as little care, as the men and women who are giving the world the benefit of the moving picture education—a university, if you please (applause); and I would rather be here in Chicago with you and in New York next year (applause from the New York delegation), if you go there, than anywhere else for the same amount of time. I see I hit a lucky number over there near New York's flag, and I don't wonder. I am willing to say that so far as I am concerned you are big enough and strong enough, and you ought to go not only to the cosmopolitan city of America, but the best city in all the world. It may not be quite the largest, but it is ahead of all of them, with all due respect to my friends from Chicago, who have still got to play second fiddle to New York for another year or two.

"I like Chicago. I come here very often, and there isn't any question but that Chicago in growing to its present proportions has done wonders; but this organization ought to go to New York City, because the New York City papers ramify this country as no other papers do, not even excepting the great school house that is conducted by the newspapers in the city of Chicago. The United States is fortunate in having a city like Chicago, with its hundreds and hundreds of railway trains carrying its splendid newspapers out over a thousand miles in every direction from this city. That is worth something to a nation, that is worth something to a republic; but New York City is equally fortunate in that she ramifies this republic with her great newspapers; and an organization of men and women such as you—identified with the moving picture play, identified with the theater, identified with the sermon, identified with the oration, identified with the art of the world—ought to hold its next meeting in the greatest city upon this continent, so that the whole world may sit up and take notice of the holy and moral purpose that is back of many of you who realize the future possibilities of this great institution.

F. B. Croissant,
Lyric Theater, Orange, N. J.

Charles Fergison,
Delegate—Indianapolis.

Charles T. Beeching,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

David Miller,
Auditorium, Jersey City, N. J.

A Group of Executive Officers of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America—Taken at the Selig Plant.

"I said at Dayton, in talking to our State league, that I believed that the time was not far distant when you would take your place in our public schools and give to the boys and girls, within a single winter's course, all the history, all the physical geography, all the knowledge of human enterprise and industry, government, religion and science that they are now accustomed to get by the time they graduate from a university (applause). Why not save this time?

"I believe in not one Sunday and six work days. I want the time to come when we shall have six Sundays and only one work day (laughter), and I believe, with the machinery and the electricity and the inventive ingenuity of the people, such a time is coming to pass in your day and my day. Carroll D. Wright said we could produce all the clothing, shelter and food we now have if each one of us worked two hours and thirty minutes a day, using electricity and steam power and all the appliances that we now have. If that is so, work would be like playing golf two hours and thirty minutes; it would only be wholesome exercise (laughter).

"I see no reason why we should make education a distasteful and disagreeable thing; no reason why developing mental muscles, if you please, should be repulsive to a boy or to a girl; and the moving picture could make the common school, the public school, the high school and the university come home to the children by the time they are fifteen years old, instead of coming to them as now by the time they are twenty-five years old. Why not do it?

"I will go one step further. The church—and I do not say it in a jocular way—could improve its methods and its service to humanity very materially if it incorporated in its work the moving picture; and if they will not do it in the churches, the people who claim to be serving the Master, or Prince of Peace, who say they love their neighbors as themselves, ought not object to the moving picture show being open from morning till midnight every Sunday in the year (applause). It would do great good, if knowledge of Scriptural history is worth anything to the church to have it known early in life. It would be much better to be given to the young boys and girls and the older boys and girls in the way that you can give it in the picture play than the way that the average preacher can give it. I say it seriously.

"In centuries of time a few men have carved immortal names. One of them we call Michael Angelo. We speak of another as Raphael. We speak of Rubens and Rembrandt and others; but what was the history of Raphael's greatness? What was the greatness of Michael Angelo? It was to take from the brain and heart and put upon canvas or upon a wall a picture that had a suggestion of form and above all of motion; and they worked for centuries to produce a Michael Angelo. They worked for centuries to produce a Raphael, who could by a touch of something put into the color and the light of a great portrait that which would suggest motion, the divinest thing of the universe; motion, that which makes of spirit matter.

"The scientists tell us from the one school that there are eighty-three or four or five elements, out of which all matter, such as wood and water and air and the like, is made. These scientists say that you will never get through discovering new elements. The latest, by Madame Curie, of radium and two or three others will not finish the list. Some other will discover another and another and another. The other scientists say that all in the universe is but spirit. There is no matter, and what we call matter is but spirit in motion, in different vibrations, and thus we have the different forms of matter, as we see it with our five senses. I believe they are right. It is the only explanation of the doctrine of immortality. It is the only logical basis upon which you can build a faith in a future life and prove that the spirit of a human being is the essence of God himself, and that the form in which we find Him is the form in which we find the trees and the flowers, the mountains and valleys, the earth, the sun and the stars, which are but the clothing of God himself; and you with your miracle of the moving picture step to the front in my age and our generation and perform the latest miracle of all the miracles. If the preachers of the land want the lesson of Eve and the temptation preached, it can never be preached or taught in as little time, or so completely as by the men and women who are engaged in presenting to the public the temptation and the fall of man in Eden by the use of the moving picture.

"Think of the pathetic story of Abraham and Sarah; think of Hagar and Ishmael driven out! See them upon the desert, and you can't conceive of any preacher or orator ever portraying that picture of that woman and that child driven from the household of Abraham as it could be presented to the world in a few minutes by the moving picture! (Applause.)

"Think of Jesus of Nazareth laid in a manger; think of Jesus of Nazareth at the age of twelve propounding the questions to the doctors and philosophers of the Jewish religion! Think of Jesus in His humble garb, in His miserable plight so far as this world's goods were concerned, down with fishermen by the seaside. See Him in your moving picture with publicans and sinners. Are these lessons worth learning? Yes. How soon? At the earliest moment in a child's career. Give the child mental muscle. Think, if you please, of Solomon with the two women, each claiming the child. Think of the wisdom and the psychologic power of Solomon when he said, 'Bring me a sword that I may divide the child.' Think of the one woman saying: 'Oh, just judge, divide it,' and the other saying, 'No, give it to her.' He learned in a moment which was the mother, a lesson that is at the foundation of the processes of a cross examination and decision in the mind of every lawyer and every judge that is a student of human nature. Why not bring that to the boy and the girl at the age of ten? Why wait until they have wasted another fifteen years before they get this lesson and this philosophy?

"My friends, 'A small fire kindleth a great mass,' is a Scriptural proverb. You are but in the infancy of this great work, and you are now progressing so much more rapidly because you are a national organization. The thing for you to do is to make the national congress and the state legislatures and the municipal councils of the whole country sit up and take notice that you are organized. The mere fact that you bring the greatest education in the world for the least price is no evidence that you are to be sneered at, or that your work is to be treated with contempt. To bring the best to the humblest, has been the mission of all the great reformers and philanthropists of the world. The division of property, or the doctrine of live and let live, was one of the teachings of Jesus. It is the one doctrine of all the great religious philosophers of all the denominations of the world. It was the grandest message of a great human heart that was given in the last hundred years, the message of Joseph Mazzini, that great heroic soul of Italy, which was banished and crucified, so to speak, because he loved all humanity. 'Democracy is the progress of all, through all, under the leadship of the wisest and best,' Mazzini said. He had in mind the intellectual qualification of the humblest boy and the humblest girl in the land. It was Thomas Jefferson's idea, when he proclaimed the doctrine of universal education at State expense, that the mission of mankind is not to be busy in building jails and penitentiaries and equipping a standing army with guns and policemen with clubs. Jefferson believed and taught that our highest purpose was to make intellectual kings, queens and princes of all mankind. It is not simply the business of Illinois to raise fine cattle and fine horses; but the business of Illinois and of New York and other States is to breed and rear the highest type of manhood and womanhood, and you, the moving picture people, are developing the mental muscle every time you get a boy or a girl into your show.

Group of Visiting Exhibitors at the Selig Plant, Chicago, Watching a Scene for "The Fort Dearborn Massacre."

"The progress of all through all under the leadership of the wisest and the best. You are teachers, you are ministers, you are serving the people. Some of you are doing it for mercenary purposes, I know, just as there are men in every community who are in it only for the money there is in it; but among you there are many men and women who realize the moral obligation and opportunity of your business. In every walk of life there are men who are manufacturers, there are men who are doctors, there are men who are lawyers, there are men who are preachers, and so there are men in the moving picture business who realize that the common uplift of the entire human family is the God given duty and responsibility imposed upon each and every one of us. It is true that we carry along with us some with coarser grained fiber and less qualification to appreciate and understand. Every brain is a receiving instrument, every brain. Take the crude brain like the crude soil of a prairie or a swamp, if you please; it will depend upon how you treat it as to what it will grow. It will depend upon what kind of a germ you put into it. Much of this talk about our heredity is nonsense. Most of the development of mankind and womankind is through environment. Take an ordinary brain in any ordinary waif, in any ordinary city, and begin to plant in it the germs of high purpose, the beautiful pictures of manhood and womanhood, and it will grow up into a royal personage even though it may not have money for fine raiment, and you are contributing to that growth and future of our citizenship as no teacher and no preacher, no lawyer and no doctor to-day.

"I think I can say this, and I believe I can reduce it to the concrete, of Ohio, where there are over a thousand moving picture shows. All the schools and all the churches combined haven't done as much to build mental muscle in the last two years as those moving picture shows have built.

"I agree with your organization as voiced in a daily paper to-day, in an interview with your president, Mr. Neff, that you should favor censorship and that the board of censors should be appointed by the government of the nation or the State, and that it should be composed of men and women qualified to appreciate the mental growth of the manhood and womanhood of the community—not some cheap little politician who is given a job, but men and women of character and intellectual horizon, so that they may eliminate that which is debasing and degrading. There are people who would run a picture that would appeal to the baser and lower elements. You don't want it. No man and no woman wants that. That you ought to have eliminated.

"Sunday should be a day of education. It ought to be your harvest day, because the tens of thousands and millions of boys and girls and men and women who are in the shops and factories through the work days, expending practically all the energy they have got for food, clothing and shelter, ought to have Sunday for intellectual growth, if you please, because that it what it would be. A change is a rest. You ought to organize in State and national bodies to insist upon your own claim that you are doing your duty, as God gives it you to see the highest development and progress of the human family

"One of the wisest and best things said for the human family was said by Thomas Jefferson, if it wasn't said by Mr. Mazzini, and I believe it is wiser than that of Mazzini. Jefferson wrote down several things in a book which he kept and one of them was this: 'Resistance to tyrants is obedience to God.' He said that tyrannies do not all consist in the autocratic power of kings.' There are tyrants of the human mind. Then he wrote these immortal words which I think are the best to illuminate a human mind beyond anything I have ever found in literature: 'I have sworn on the altar of God eternal hostility to any form of tyranny over the mind of man.'

"Mathew Arnold said that the world has always been governed by passion and prejudice. How many women and men have been murdered for being witches and wizards! Five hundred thousand in Europe and down at Salem, Mass., only two hundred and fifty years ago we yielded to that tyranny over the mind. I went and examined the record at Salem and I saw where a preacher cross-examined a little girl. I saw on file pins that they had sworn to as exhibits A, B and C, which had been thrust into the flesh of their bodies by a certain woman who was called a witch, and this preacher cross-examined, instead of the prosecuting attorney, as we now have, and when he got through and summed up his argument the judge on the bench found that this woman was a witch. I read with my own eyes the legal order of the judge to the sheriff to take this woman to yonder height and there put her to death, and I read with my own eyes the record brought back by the sheriff saying he had executed the commission and the order of the court. Do you think prejudice has played its part? No, it is still in the marrow of some men. Some men and women have prejudice that only goes through the skin; with others it goes through the skin and muscle, with others it goes clear through the bone and with it goes to the very center of the marrow.

"Now, think of it, You hate somebody who is a Jew because you are a Christian. You hate somebody that is a Catholic because you are a Protestant. You hate somebody because you are neither Jew, nor Catholic nor Protestant. Now, you are a pretty small potato to allow that kind of stuff to tyrannize over your mind. Many lower animals kill for food, many kill to protect their young, but it remains for men to assassinate physically, intellectually, morally, socially and professionally their rivals in the world.

"Whom can you name to-day who bring before them the Catholic and the Jew, the Protestant and the Agnostic and educate and liberate them from these miserable tyrannies over the mind so effectively, so fortunately and so completely as the moving picture men and women of the world?

J. M. Rhodes,
Delegate—Indianapolis.

John B. Hubert,
Alternate—Inudianapolis.

Max Stearns,
Columbus, Ohio.

Charles F. Haring,
New York.

"I solemnly believe that battleships are to be abandoned. I believe that in this generation we shall see the beginning of the beating of swords and spears into ploughshares and pruning hooks; but it will not be done by the man in one pulpit lying about the denomination that supports another pulpit. It will not be done by the man of one religion filling a people with prejudice against another; it will be done by the men and women who bring all nations before the eye and the brain and the heart of the little boy and the little girl of the future. Then the Peace Congress at The Hague will be a success and no State, no ambassador of any country, of any republic, of any kingdom, of any empire, will contribute so much to the peace of the world in 1932 as the manhood and the womanhood that I have been honored and permitted to address to-day.

"I want to congratulate you, I want to commend you, and in any way that I can be of service, command me. Your work is the work of the God of love, of the God that makes for the brotherhood of all mankind. Organize and continue to organize into national and State leagues, and put your force and power upon the statute books; because, after all, legislation is the greatest education. (Applause lasting about five minutes.)

"I only want to say this in closing, in recognition of the very generous and cordial applause you have given me, that nothing ever appeals to me quite so much as to find a manhood and a womanhood for whom I have made their own speech. You have demonstrated to me that you are in accord with my views on this subject, and you are upon the great highway to finish the work which you have begun."

At the close of Mr. Lentz's speech, Mr. John H. Blumenthal moved that a rising vote of thanks be given the speaker for his able treatment of his subject. This was done by all assembled in the convention room.

Other Addresses.

President Neff then addressed the meeting and said in part: "Now, ladies and gentlemen, I am not going to try to make you a speech. As you all know, I have been here since Saturday. I have slept but little since I came to your city, and I have done a little work. I wish to state at this time, as there are some here who are not acquainted with the motion picture principles and the conditions that exist, that to-morrow we will hold an executive session. To-day we invite you. We invited the manufacturers, the film exchanges, and the press, and we have invited many people to come here. Those who are far away and have not come here to meet with us cannot lay the fault on the motion picture exhibitors. We have extended to every branch of this industry a welcome and invitation to meet with us here. We want to meet you. We want to become acquainted with you. We want to advise with you and receive suggestions from you. This is a grand organization, and as I look upon your faces I remember that not two years ago, back in the city of Columbus, Ohio, where I had the honor of calling a convention of that State together, there were just ten who met me in the Southern Hotel at Columbus. Since the meeting of those ten we have fought the battle of the motion picture exhibitors. We are proud to say we have not lost the battle. We are proud to say to you there is not a grievance that has been presented in the State of Ohio that we have not adjusted satisfactorily, so far.

"Ladies and gentlemen, this is a grand work that we are engaged in and we are earnest. We are sincere. We ask the friendship of every man and every woman that is engaged in our line of work to help us to uplift cinematography and place the motion picture business on the highest plane possible.

"To the manufacturers that are here to-day we extend a welcome, and to the film men who are here we say welcome. We welcome the press of the country, and I desire to say here that through the press we have received assistance that probably none of you know of. It was my good luck or fortune to meet several of the managers and editors of our papers and not one of them has refused to help us. They have joined with us in making this a grand organization, and I would advise from this platform to-day that every man and every woman engaged in our line of business take some one of the papers. If you can't take more than one, at least take one, and know what is going on in our line of business. That is the way to learn. Assist those who are assisting us. They have helped build this organization and they deserve great credit.

"There is another class of people who deserve credit whom, probably, you have not heard of. I will say to you that I have traveled a number of years throughout this country, visiting every town of importance in the United States. My friends, the traveling men of this country have been working for you, for almost two years, and you didn't know it. I have asked them to step into the picture shows and get me the addresses and send them to me. They did it. I wrote to those exhibitors and tried to interest them in this line of business, and they have all responded. I want to say that we desire to thank every man, every woman, and every one who has made it possible for us to meet here to-day and who have contributed to this grand meeting of the motion picture exhibitors of this country.

"We are receiving letters and telegrams not only from the States in our own country, but in other countries, and, later on, you will hear more about these things.

"Now, just a word more, Several have come to me and asked, 'What are you going to do at this convention?' Now, my friends, in order that there may be no mistake and that we may understand each other from the start, we are here not only for the purpose of legislating for the motion picture exhibitors, but also for the purpose of getting acquainted and co-operating so as to bring about a condition whereby men and women engaged in this line of business will get a fair and square deal (applause).

"Some have asked if I favored this or that. I desire to say right here that I have never, as president of this organization or president of the organization in the State of Ohio, advised an exhibitor to take either the independent or the licensed film service, only in so far as my judgment made me believe it was best for him to do so. If there were three exhibitors in a town and all used independent, or all used licensed goods, I would naturally advise the third or fourth man to use the other. I did that because it looked like a good business proposition.

"Now, I want it understood that this is a motion picture exhibitors' convention. We are going to try to look at the goods and articles on exhibit. We are going to try and give time to exhibitors so that they can see every exhibit here. We want them to see the exhibits, but at the same time we are here for business."

President Neff then appointed members for the committees on credentials, on rules and order of business, and on membership. Following are the names of those who served on the committee of credentials: F. J. Rembusch, chairman; George Henry, Harry Reid, Samuel Trigger and Mrs. Louis Smith.

Peter J. Juepp, chairman; L. R. Thomas, L. H. Ramsay, G. W. Wiley and G. A. Robinson served on the committee on rules and order of business.

H. S. Kline, chairman; Fulton Modesky, Mr. Michaels, Mr. Blumenthal and Charles C. Goff were the members of the committee on membership.

These committees were instructed to report Wednesday morning at the executive session. Meeting was then adjourned, the announcement being made that a boat ride on the Pere Marquette would be made at 7:30. This boat ride was arranged by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company and was much enjoyed by the large number of visitors who took advantage of it.

Second Day's Events.

Wednesday morning's executive session was devoted to the reports of the committees already referred to. The seating of delegates immediately followed and the meeting was adjourned at 1:00 o'clock, just in time to catch the special cars arranged to convey members of the convention to the Selig Polyscope plant. Twelve large surface cars were required to accommodate the host of visitors, and, besides, five "rubberneck" motor cars to convey the guests of the Vitagraph Company, by way of the Essanay plant, to the Selig studios. John R. Rock arranged for this pleasant excursion trip. At the Essanay plant, the party made a stop for about fifteen minutes and were received by President George K. Spoor.

Following is a list of the Vitagraph guests: W. C. Quimby, H. C. Hanson, I. Van Ronkel and wife, Miss Rose Telser, E. Jones and wife, D. Munstock, M. S. Marks, Fred Fisher, J. D. Rose and wife, Mrs. J. F. Fisher, Miss Marion Rose, Miss Ida Mertski, Miss Rothschild, V. R. Day, C. A. Mehrs, M. Marks, J. D. Hoffman, D. Hyman and wife, Mrs. Watzinger, Mrs. Lindon, Harry Munn, F. Cook, A. Eisner, J. Rhodes, B. S. Beadell and wife, Miss Patterson, Miss Aiken, C. K. Cregier, J. Miller and wife, Mr. Lockett and wife, Jno. R. Rock and wife, S. A. Canton, Mrs. P. Powell, Harold Desky, Pearl M. Sahlin, A. L. Hasse, A. Powell, Arthus Poli, M. Sahlin, Arthur Markwalter, Clara Nilka, F. E. Samuels, Wm. Heishberg, Allen Beckett, W. H. Claibone, J. J. Riedn, H. C. Dorsey, Henry Hoeft, Louis Phillips, J. N. Barry and wife, A. F. Pond, Mrs. Margaret Knopfel, J. L. Bell and wife, T. F. Howe and daughter, Henry H. Turner, J. R. Brennen, W. A. Daniels and wife, Mrs. Chas. Camp, Mr. and Mrs. Scates, Mrs. Afelt, W. K. Hollander, Joseph Farnham, P. A. Keppler, Mr. Tischart, J. J. Gilmore, Mr. and Mrs. Harlan, Mr. Barney and wife, W. J. Sweeney and wife, E. J. Mark and wife, Warren A. Patrick, Mrs. H. H. Hemmelick, F. X. Bushman, S. M. Spedon, Morris Jones, Jos. G. Holmes, Jas. L. Hoff, J. S. McQuade, F. G. Jones and wife, George H. Morriss, Maurice Johnson and B. J. Courtney and wife.

Election of National Officers.

A night executive session, behind closed doors, was called at 7 o'clock, immediately after the return of officers and delegates from the Selig plant. The first business in order was the election of national officers. M. A. Neff's name was placed in nomination by Chas. T. Beeching, of Cincinnati. Mr. Beeching said in part: "It is an honor to place in nomination before this assembly a man whose name is familiar to all of us and whose personal acquaintance has been the privilege of many exhibitors.

"Mr. Neff is a man whose years of broad experience and constant efforts have given to him the ability, personality, and creative genius to call forth from the four corners of our great nation the pioneers, the veterans and the recruits of all the powerful institutions of the motion picture world. He is a man who cast his lot amongst the ranks of the exhibitors when the motion picture theater was in its infancy; a man who, from the very day of his enlistment, realized that until the exhibitors banded together, banished petty strifes and jealousies to take their right place in their community as organized representatives of one of the greatest educational institutions of modern times, they must be harassed, restricted, and maligned—yes, even pillaged—by fanatical reformers seeking notoriety by the mighty, sitting in the councils of both church and State, seeking semblance of righteous activity, or, because of commercial interest, having no thought for the future, but seeking only to gratify their insatiable lust for ill-gotten gains.

"Mr. Neff is a man who, realizing the enormity of the undertaking, felt himself unequal to the task; a man who, with becoming modesty, sought to find a leader in whose army he could serve.

"Failing to find a man of ability, with the courage of understanding the task, he, himself, assumed the initiative and called together a convention of exhibitors to outline the work that was to be done, and at least form the nucleus of an organization based on the right and justice that his knowledge of human nature told him must eventually succeed. He is a man whose heart and soul are with the exhibitors, whose every minute is devoted to their interest. He knows not the meaning of fear, and is one to whom the threats of politicians and powerful commercial interests are but passing annoyances; a man with the breadth of vision that enables him to see beyond the trivial obstacles of the present, beyond the trifling interests of personalities, beyond the clouds of unjustified disapproval, into that not too distant era when the picture play shall be unanimously held as an institution equal to, yes, even greater, than the art of writing or of the printing press; yet not an idle dreamer.

Louis F. Blumenthal, National Vice-President from New Jersey.

"This man who has gladly sacrificed thousands of dollars for the welfare of exhibitors, who has been slandered and attacked in every conceivable and underhanded way by those whose unrighteous interest he jeopardized, who has been forced in many cases to conceal his financial interests in theaters to prevent unwarranted and unjustified attacks, made for the sole purpose of accomplishing his financial ruin, that his effective fighting strength might be weakened for the greater strife which is yet to come.

"He is the man to whom organized exhibitors of America must look to lead them in that great battle, of which we now can hear the distant rumbling, when it becomes a fight to the finish. We need his wise and efficient leadership. He is a man who has proven equal to every occasion. He is familiar with every department of the motion picture business. He is at all times the same in attitude of greeting, whether he is welcoming his patrons or discussing the interests of the exhibitors with the President of the United States.

"The progress our organization has made under his wise and judicious administration is not equaled in the history of any other organization. Leaders are born, not made. In Mr. Neff we have a leader who will guide us successfully, intelligently and honestly. The result of his effort is apparent here to-day. In justice to Mr. Neff the convention should be unanimous in its choice of his leadership for another year and thereby show its appreciation of efficiency, integrity and masterful guidance."

Mr. Neff's nomination was seconded by E. Swartz, of Cleveland; by F. J. Harrington, of Pittsburg, vice-president of the Pennsylvania branch, and by T. A. Keppler, of New York.

Wm. J. Sweeney was placed in nomination by R. R. Levy, of Chicago, and seconded by Mr. Choynski, of Chicago. Before a vote was called, Mr. Sweeney withdrew and moved that the election of Mr. Neff be made unanimous. This was done amid deafening applause.

C. M. Christianson, national secretary for the past year, was placed in nomination to succeed himself by C. F. Ruhlman, of New Jersey. His nomination was seconded by F. J. Harrington, of Pittsburg, and Wm. J. Sweeney, of Chicago.

J. J. Rieder, national treasurer for the past year, was named for re-election by Dr. J. N. Rhodes, of Indianapolis, and the motion was seconded by Fred R. Remler, of Detroit. Dr. Rhodes, who had been previously named for the office, withdrew in favor of Mr. Rieder. Both the officers just named were immediately re-elected by acclamation.

The reading of the reports by the national president, secretary and treasurer, for the past year, was then engaged in. The next business in order was the appointment of an official press committee by President Neff. This committee is composed of J. A. Maddox, of Columbus, chairman; Sidney Ascher, of New York, and C. A. Anderson, of Chicago.

A vote of thanks was then moved and passed to the Chicago delegation, for the splendid way visitors were being entertained and for the perfect arrangements made for the work of the convention. Adjournment took place at 10:30 p. m., the next executive session being fixed for Thursday at 9:00 a. m.

Stan. Twist's Press Dinner.

As each guest took his seat at the press dinner, given by Stanley E. Twist at the Union Restaurant, Wednesday evening, August 14, the first thing that caught the eye was the following legend, within a neatly etched border on the first page of the tasteful menu bill: "In memory of a few hours spent with a few good fellows, at the love feast given by Stan. Twist, Selig dopester." Now every guest desires to change the legend so that it may read: "A few hours spent by a few good fellows with one of the best of good fellows."

Not even on such an occasion could Stanley forget his calling, as witness the plea of the diamond S. dopester, as it revealed itself craftily as one of the inner leaves of the bill:

Breathe there still men,
Or are they dead?
Who never in the papers
Read—
Of Selig.
If such there be,
Go! Mark them well.
And in the future be sure to tell Them—
Of Selig.

But it must be said, in order to avoid charging Stan. H. with "shop," that his mind was so surcharged with the genial cares of mine host that all else was forgotten for the nonce

After the good things on the menu were discussed, a rising toast was drunk to the absent host, Wm. N. Selig. "He is my bible and your friend," Mr. Twist said to the guests at the close of the toastmaster's remarks.

There was no "speechifying" at this dinner; the convention afforded the scribes enough of that entertainment. Instead, there were a few stories passed around that aided the generous bubbles of the grape in promoting perfect digestion. The time was all too short even for these, as the party was due at Orchestra Hall to view the picture program scheduled among the convention events of the day.

Mr. Twist, however, had provided a balm for the regrets felt at the breaking up of the party. This was in the form of a l'envoy, which read:

Come you back, you picture scribblers,
Come you back to me, I say;
Come you back when short of copy
for the story of a play.
Can't you hear the "devil" calling
For the copy you should write--
Take it easy, don't you worry—
Selig's your topic for to-night.

There were present: Stanley H. Twist, John F. Prybl, Joseph W. Farnham, Jos. D. McArdle, Warren A. Patrick, E. J. Mock, Paul H. Woodruff, Alfred H. Saunders, F. J. Beecroft, Chas. E. Nixon, Allen Lee Haas, H. C. Baker, W. K. Hollander, Watterson R. Rotacker, Chas. J. Ver Halem, W. Stephen Bush, Jas. L. Hoff, V. R. Day, and Jas. S. McQuade, toastmaster.

Third Day's Events.

The most important business of Thursday morning's session was the appointment of the following committees Committee on resolutions—Wm. J. Sweeney, chairman; E. V. Richardson, Shreveport, La.; W. L. Rupert, Ottumwa, Ia.; Peter Juepp, Detroit, and C. H. Phillips, Milwaukee. Committee on ways and means—L. H. Ramsey, Lexington, Ky., chairman; H. S. Dickson, Winchester, Ind.; Samuel Trigger, New York; W. H. Wiley, Kansas City, and Otto Ludeking, Cincinnati. Committee on censorship—Clem Kerr, Dayton, O., chairman; W. J. Carroll, Muskegon, Mich.; Dr. J. M. Rhodes, Indianapolis; Robert R. Levy, Chicago, and E. M. Day, New York. These committees were instructed to formulate resolutions to be submitted and discussed at the afternoon session on Thursday. The committee on censorship, it was arranged, was to meet Walter Storey, of New York, of the national board of censorship, on Thursday afternoon.

The afternoon session was called to order at 2:30 p. m. The committee on ways and means submitted a resolution that ex-Senator Foraker be retained as counsel for the M. P. E. L. of America for another year. This was carried unanimously. A motion was then carried to admit Paul Le Marquand, of Winnipeg, general manager of the Starland, Ltd. Mr. Marquand's object is to organize Canada under the jurisdiction of the M. P. E. L. of America. He attended the convention in order to familiarize himself with the mode of procedure and to get other necessary information.

The next question considered by the convention was that of salaries for the national officers—the president, secretary and treasurer. The convention arranged that the salary of each officer will be substantially increased.

A per capita tax on members of $2.00 per year, for the carrying on of the work of the national organization, was then approved.

Exhibitors' Insurance Plan.

The following communication deals with one important question that was to have come before the convention, but did not for the reasons given therein:

"The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America has perfected and put into operation a system of insurance for members of the league, under which both their fire and liability insurance will be handled on the inter-insurance plan. This plan has been in operation among the leading concerns in other industries for more than thirty years and has been found to be by far the strongest, safest and most desirable form of insurance in use. In addition to these advantages, the cost is reduced nearly one-half as compared with the rates of the public companies insuring all classes of risks. John W. Daugherty, of St. Louis, Mo., an experienced and successful manager of this class of insurance organizations, has been put in charge of this system for league members, and he is rapidly putting the department into the same successful condition as the other systems he manages for other industries. There are many important advantages of this system which cannot be mentioned in this brief notice, and the members of the league now have the same advantages in this respect as most of the organizations in the principal lines of trade and manufactures, such as banks, breweries, mills, lumber interests, steam laundries, coal operators, druggists and wholesalers. This subject was briefly discussed in the annual report of the national secretary, and was to be explained in detail to the convention by Mr. Dougherty, who, unfortunately, did not reach the convention in time.

C. M. CHRISTIANSON, Sec'y.

The evening session was called to order at 8:30 p. m. The first work accomplished was the selection of New York City as the place of meeting for the third annual convention of the M. P. E. L. of America. Cincinnati aspired to the honor at the outset, but gave way to New York with good grace. A motion was then carried to eliminate death-bed scenes from all films, after which the convention adjourned until Friday morning.

Fourth Day's Events.

The session on Friday morning was devoted to reports and resolutions of a minor character and at the afternoon session the constitution and by-laws were thoroughly overhauled and amended. Future conventions will be held without any misconception or mistakes on the part of those participating.

CARTOONS BY R. MERRE 1912.
SIDNEY ASCHER NAT'L VICE PRES. IS SOME ORATOR GREAT!
C. M. CHRISTENSON NAT'L SECRETARY OF N.P.E.L. OF A.
STANLEY H. TWIST SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY
ALL ABOUT THE SELIG PLANT
A FINE TRIP STAN!
HOORAY! NEW YORK 1913!
NEW YORK
F. E. SAMUELS ONE OF THE NEW YORK BOOSTERS
SAMUEL H. TRIGGER OF NEW YORK GOING HOME WITH THE BACON
A FINE CONVENTION AT CHICAGO BUT JUST WAIT TILL YOU GET TO NEW YORK IN 1913!
CHICAGO
CONVENTION 1913
TO NEW YORK
EXTRA!
F.S. DAILY
HARRY R. RAVER, SEC- AND MGR OF THE FILM SUPPLY CO
R. R. NEHLS MG'R AMERICAN FILM CO
H. E. AITKEN
MUGS CAUGHT AROUND THE CONVENTION HALL
J. D. TIPPETT MGR UNIVERSAL FEATURES
PLEASE LET ME IN!
HAROLD ROSENTHAL STATE SEC N.Y.
BERT ADLER.
C. J. HITE TREAS. FILM SUPPLY CO
J. A. MADDOX PRES. COLUMBUS, O LOCAL 4
RESOLUTION
H. S. DICKSON PRES. INDIANA LEAGUE
G. A. ROBINSON PRES. NEW JERSEY LEAGUE
JOHN J. HUSS PRES. CINCINNATI LOCAL 2

The States of Iowa, Nevada, Tennessee and Minnesota were organized during the second national convention.

It has been conservatively estimated that fully 2,500 people attended the second national convention, including State and national officers, delegates, alternates and visiting exhibitors and their guests. Many exhibitors who attended failed to register, and it is impossible to give the names of the friends accompanying the exhibitors who did register. It is, therefore, impossible to judge of the attendance by the list given at the end of this article, which shows over 600 names.

All whom I met expressed themselves as delighted with their stay in Chicago. They saw all the sights worth seeing, and every minute was spent to advantage. In addition to the sightseeing and entertainments provided, not including the banquet, held on Friday evening, which is treated in an article to be found elsewhere in this issue, visitors found considerable pleasure in viewing licensed and independent films at Orchestra Hall, on Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

Following is the licensed program given Wednesday evening, in the order named: "The Golden Curl" (Urban Eclipse), "The Moth and the Flame" (Melies), "The Convalescent" (Lubin), "Rameses, King of Egypt" (Cines), "Pathe's Weekly Review, No. 34," "As You Like It" (Vitagraph), "Rube Marquard" (Kalem), "The Rivals" (Urban Eclipse), "Alkali Ike Plays the Devil" (Essanay), "With the Enemy's Help" (Biograph), "Spring Log Driving in Maine" (Edison), "Kings of the Forest" (Selig), and "Members, Visitors and Friends of the Exhibitors' League of America Entering the Selig Studio." The last mentioned film was gotten out in record-breaking time by the Selig forces, and was received with great applause. Fully fifteen hundred visitors to the convention saw themselves as others see them during the presentation.

The following independent films were presented at the same place, on Thursday evening: "Sigfried (Ambrosio), "The Alibi" (Nestor), "The Equine Spy" (Solax), "Japanese Idol" (Rex), "The Stolen Cub" (Gaumont), "Animated Weekly" (Universal), "Lucile" (3 reels, Thanhouser), "The Great Event" (3 reels, Great Northern), "One Against One" (Reliance), "The Great Land Swindle" (Bison 101), "Geronima's Last Raid" (American), "In Old Tenessee" (2 reels, Imp).

There was a good representation of exchange men from all factions. Among those noted in the corridors of the hotel were: Louis Beck, Henry E. Brient and Harry Olsen, of Indianapolis, Ind.; I. W. Jackson, Cincinnati, Ohio; J. E. Willis, Cleveland, Ohio; Phillip Gleichman and A. J. Gilligham, Detroit, Mich.; Will Craig, Tulsa, Okla.; John Tippett, New York; J. W. Dillon, Dansville, Ill.; Julius Singer, Des Moines, Iowa; H. R. Slocum, Chicago, Ill.; Slim Brickhouse, Chicago; Ervin Simons, Louisville, Ky.; H. E. Aitken and J. R. Freuler, New York; H. R. Ashbrook, Toledo, Ohio; Bennie Judell and Sam Mergler, Milwaukee, Wis.; Alfred DeSomers, Kansas City, Mo.; Fred Aiken, I. Van Ronkel, Joseph Hopp, W. R. Scates, C. E. Plough, Maurice Fleckles and W. H. Bomb, of Chicago. The Film Supply Company was represented by C. J. Hite, Harry R. Raver, Geo A. Magie, D. W. McKinney, C. Lang Cobb, Jr., Bert Adler and A. K. Greenland.

The following represented the Universal Film Manufacturing Company: David Horsley, Joe Brant, Jos. W. Engle and A. M. Kennedy.

List of Delegates and Alternates.

The following is the official list of delegates and alternates:

INDIANA—State Delegates: F. J. Rembusch, S. B. Sampson, W. R. Deaton. Alternates: Earl Rife, Joe Bommerschein, J. R. Brannen. Indianapolis Local, delegates: J. M. Rhoades, John R. Victor. Evansville Local delegates: Phillip Skora, William Huddy.

ILLINOIS—State Delegates W. J. Sweeney, George Henry, Sidney Smith, Louis Frank, Julius Alcock, C. A. Anderson, C. L. Hull, Fred Schaefer, I. Natkin, Robert R. Levy.

IOWA—State Delegates: Morris Lince, Walter L. Rubert, H. C. Jurgensen. Alternates: F. P. Lennon, O. A. Kintz, Fred F. Keyes.

KENTUCKY—State Delegates: L. J. Dittmar, A. B. Arnet, L. H. Ramsey, Orme Parker, National vice-president. Louisville Local Delegates: Max L. Simons, Joseph Steuerle, Covington Local Delegates: Thomas Tarvin, George Strottman.

LOUISIANA—A. D. Sanger.

MICHIGAN—State Delegates: Carl Ray, W. J. Carroll, Peter J. Jeup, B. L. Converse, National vice-president. Detroit Local Delegates: Lesley Levy, Fred R. Remler.

MINNESOTA—State Delegates: Thomas Furniss, Otto N. Path, L. G. Roesner. Alternates: George Osborne, E. A. Nelson.

MISSOURI—State Delegates: J. E. Haggard, George H. Wiley, F. B. Wilson. Alternates: N. E. Field, Winthrop Allen, J. H. Gilday. Kansas City Local Delegates: N. J. Flynn, W. R. Shelton. Alternates: J. F. Fitzsimmons, H. B. Sappe. Springfield Local Delegates E. E. Richards, W. J. Flynn.

NEVADA—Glen D. Hurst.

NEW JERSEY—State Delegates: G. A. Robinson, C. Fred Ruhlman. Hudson County Local Delegates: Frank P. Daley, R. Epstein. Trenton Local Delegates: William Roberts, James Clark.

NEW YORK—State Delegates: Joseph Coufal, E. M. Day, Tobias Keppler, Sidney Ascher, National vice-president. New York City Local Delegates: Samuel H. Trigger, Louis Rosenthal, H. W. Rosenthal. Albany Local Delegates: Louis Rosenthal, George F. Wright. Utica Local Delegates: W. A. Doque, F. E. Samuels. Syracuse Local Delegates: Robert H. Watson, Robert H. Whitten. Rochester Local Delegates: William McGreal, George Griffin. Buffalo Local Delegates: G. W. Erdman, W. Kennedy. Elmira Local Delegates: M. D. Gibson, James Wilson. Binghamton Local Delegates: R. M. Davidson, Samuel Hoff.

OHIO—State Delegates: Mrs. Louise Schmitz, J. H. Broomhall, W. A. Pettis, S. E. Morris, State president. Cincinnati Local Delegates: Charles T. Beeching, Otto Ludeking. Dayton Local Delegates: Clem Kerr, Val Reyberg. Columbus Local Delegates: Max Stearns, J. A. Maddox. Cleveland Local Delegates: Edward Kohl, F. M. Kenney.

PENNSYLVANIA—State Delegates: Harry E. Reiff, Harry McGowan, G. E. Miller, F. J. Herrington, National vice-president. Pittsburg Local Delegates: Henry Poke, James Delves. Philadelphia Local Delegates: Charles Segall, Morris Speier.

TENNESSEE—State Delegates: Howell Graham, W. C. Morris. Alternates: W. H. Wasserman, W. H. Peck.

WISCONSIN—State Delegates: Max Weisfeldt, Roy

Schuyler Colfax,
Chicago.

H. S. Klein,
Pres. Milwaukee Local—E. L.

Ben Huntley,
Winona, Minn.

Cummins, Neal Duffy, C. H. Phillips, State president. Milwaukee Local Delegates: E. K. Fisher, H. S. Kleine.

WEST VIRGINIA—State Delegates: M. M. Wier, L. R. Thomas, E. W. Waugh. Alternates: A. L. Cottrell, D. B. Eagan, A. C. Johnson.

CALIFORNIA—Mr. Michaels.

List of Visitors.

Following is a list of the visiting exhibitors who registered in the National Convention register at The La Salle Hotel:

Arkansas: Saul S. Harris, Gem-Royal, Little Rock.

California: H. J. Werner, American Photo Player Sales Co., San Francisco.

Canada: Paul Le Marguand, Starland Theater Co., Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Australia, N. S. W.: D. C. Jeffrey, The Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Co., Minneapolis.

Georgia: A. C. Bromberg, Atlanta; W. H. Peck, Atlanta.

Illinois: Abram & Son, Chas. David, Jr., 3410 Ogden Ave., Acme, Chicago; Mrs. O. C. Affeld, Theater Sheridan, Chicago; Walter S. Altland, Ideal, Chicago; S. H. Altland, Swanson, Chicago; Julius A. Alcock, Edna, Chicago; C. A. Anderson, Hermosa, Chicago; C. Anderson, Buffalo, Chicago; H. S. Archibald, Casino, Chicago; A. Arkin, Wonderland, Chicago; H. E. Ascher, Campus, Chicago; Balaban Bros., Circle Theater, Chicago; Robert R. Barker, Vitagraph Co., Chicago; B. W. Beadell, National Waterproof Film Co., Chicago; C. D. Beran, Industrial M. P. Co., Chicago; J. A. Bell, Bell Theater, Chicago; E. B. Berkley & Bros., Eddys & Forest, Chicago; N. Bloome, Katz Theater, Chicago; William G. Bobb, Rex Theater, Chicago; John Boheng, Bismarck, Chicago; W. H. Bomb, General Film Co., Spoor Branch, Chicago; Geo. Booth, Bridgeport Theater, Chicago; W. E. Bradley, Edna Theater, Chicago; L. Breck, Wentworth Theater, Chicago; C. M. Bunn, Chicago; Jules Breitschnieder, Monroe Theater, Chicago; William H. Cadoret, La Petite, Kankakee, Ill.; J. G. Carlson, American Seating Co., Chicago; James C. Cermy, Victoria Theater, Chicago; B. Charuhas, 18th St. Theater, Chicago; E. J. Chelina, Bower Theater, Chicago; I. Coskey, Ideal Theater, Chicago; M. A. Choynski, Chicago; F. A. Clark, Enterprise Opt. Mfg. Co., Chicago; Fred C. Cleveland, Circle Theater, Chicago; Miss S. Colson, Arrow Theater, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. C. Colson, Arrow Theater, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Cressey, The Clifton, Chicago; W. J. Crowley, York Theater, Chicago; W. A. Daniels, National Waterproof Film Co., Chicago; S. Deutsch, Saluform Prod. Co., Chicago; W. A. Ditze, Gen. Film Co., Spoor Branch, Chicago; B. G. Drummond, Alvin, Chicago; M. Eckmann, Liberty Theater, Chicago; A. M. Eisner, Gen. Film Co., Wabash Branch, Chicago; G. E. Cumming, Copley Mfg. Co., Chicago; E. Elkins, Motion Picture Adv., Chicago; William H. Jenner, Monroe Theater, Chicago; Sig. Faller, Bijou Dream, Chicago; H. B. Fitzpatrick, The Cupid, Chicago; Miss Eunice Fitch, Manhattan Theater, Chicago; F. S. Fisher and Wolf, Jewel Theater, Chicago; F. B. Fissinger, General Film Co., Chicago; M. Fleckles, Gen. Mgr. Laemmle Film Co., Chicago; James Foreston, The Monarch, Chicago; C. H. Foster, The Lexington, Chicago; F. H. Franke, Californian Theater, Chicago; E. E. Fulton, Lubin Film Co., Chicago; Fred Galluzzo, the Elm, Chicago; C. W. Gallop, General Electric, Chicago; H. W. Geiss, General Film Co., Spoor Branch; J. B. Gelder, the Forum, Chicago; J. G. Gilmore, Ideal, Chicago; Richard Goldman, the Clarendon, Chicago; J. Goodman, Colonial, Chicago; Herman Grace, the Rex, Chicago; F. W. Grovers, New Theater, Chicago; Ed. Haliday, Vitagraph Co., Chicago; Ed. Hanselman, Casino, Chicago; F. W. Hartman, the Fay, Chicago; A. L. Haase, Motography, Chicago; William Halen, the Park, Chicago; J. P. Mercer, Chicago (guest of Mr. Miller); A. M. Harmon, Gen. Electric Co., Chicago; P. M. Hazel, Flashagraph Co., Chicago; Harold A. Hill, Star Theater, Chicago; L. W. Siebert, Gen. Film Co., Chicago; L. G. Rover, Winchester, Chicago; J. S. Tank, South Park Theater, Chicago; J. R. Hallstaedt, Geo. Kleine, Chicago; A. J. Hill, the Glen, Chicago; G. H. Hines, the Lydia, Chicago; G. F. Hesch, the Principal, Chicago; George Henry, Board Palace, Chicago; Morris Hellman, Laemmle Film Co., Chicago; William Hershberg, the Magnet, Chicago; Mrs. Geo. H. Hines, the Lydia, Chicago; S. S. Hopper, Lyric, Freeport; A. L. Haase, Motography Co., Chicago; G. Hutchins, H. & H. Film Exchange, Chicago; Max Hyman, the Barry, Chicago; Harry Hyman, the Janet, Chicago; E. D. Smith, the Dell, Chicago; H. C. Igel, Solax Co., Chicago; Louis J. Jones, Orpheum, Chicago; J. E. Johnson, General Film Co., Chicago; Aubrey J. Kennedy, Animated Weekly, Chicago; J. W. Kenfield, A. H. Andrews Co., Chicago; Leo Karlsberg, the Elite, Chicago; S. Randall, General Electric Co., Chicago; S. W. Kaufman, the Paragon, Chicago; S. Katz, the Wallace, Chicago; S. A. Edlam, the Bell, Chicago; M. Katz, the Illinois, Chicago; Andrew Krazes, Comus Theater, Chicago; H. Kahn, Columbia Theater, Chicago; Ed. J. Mock, Pub. Motography, Chicago; A. N. Lewis, the McKinley Park, Chicago; A. Lindskog, the Lindskogs, Chicago; P. Lewis, Feature Films Sales Co., Ltd., Chicago; L. Lunn, The Yale, Chicago; C. C. R. Lundgren, Warners Features, Chicago; E. W. Robinson, New Lyric, Chicago; H. Busch, the Hillside, Chicago; M. Taub, Standard Film Co., Chicago; H. L. Lieberthal, the Colleen, Chicago; Harry Lindner, the Janet, Chicago; I. L. Leserman, wife and son, Laemmle Film Service, Chicago; J. and H. Lamb, the Palace, Chicago; C. P. Lautenschlager, Ideal and Grand Theaters, Chicago; Wm. H. MacCollin, the Lyric, Chicago; M. K. Berkeley, Erie Amusement Co., Chicago; M. S. Marks, Marshfield, Chicago; L. L. Marks, the Colonial, Chicago; N. N. Blackwell, American Seating Co., Chicago; C. J. Carlson, American Seating Co., Chicago; L. A. Forbes, Jefferson Theater, Chicago; G. H. Moore, Orpheum, Chicago; H. M. Glickauf, Power Theater, Chicago; Miss Ida Mertskey, Montrose Theater, Chicago; C. C. Cull, Sans Souci Park, Chicago; A. C. Stange, the Bluebell, Chicago; Kellogg & Post, Crown Theater, Chicago; B. Burger, the Archer, Chicago; Harry Wolf, the Washington, Chicago; Arthur Shuk, the Brooklyn, Chicago; W. N. Conway, Davis Square, Chicago; C. B. Runquist, Progress Theater, Chicago; C. A. G. Kinpus, the Devon, Chicago; H. W. Glickauf, Powers, Chicago; L. Brown, the Pilsen, Chicago; A. D. Markwalter, Bryn Mawr, Chicago; John Miller, the Glamour, Chicago; H. W. Mitchell, the Pilsen, Chicago; A. J. Duffey, Kleine Optical Co., Chicago; F. C. Davern, Gen. Electric Co., Chicago; F. G. Monroe, Edison Co., Chicago; P. M. Esser, the New Theater, Chicago; C. A. Hofman, Kleine Optical Co., Chicago; A. C. Man, Crystal Theater, Chicago; D. Munstock, the Sangamon, Chicago; Myers & Buehlman, the Juliet, Chicago; G. P. Nielson, American Film Mfg. Co., Chicago; Rocco Navigation Co., the Verdi, Chicago; I. Martin, the Ideal, Chicago; R. R. Nehls, American Film Mfg. Co., Chicago; H. Taunhauser, Kleine Opt. Co., Chicago; H. E. Urdell, Warners Features, Chicago; F. O. Nielson, Parkway, Chicago; National Waterproof Film Co., Chicago; Geo. Outman, the Foster, Chicago; P. M. Perretz and wife, the Aberdeen, Chicago; J. Powell, the May, Chicago; Mrs. A. Powell, the May, Chicago; A. Posthoff, Kleine Optical Co., Chicago; Leo Puls, American Seating Co., Chicago; Fred Leinick and wife, Orpheum, Chicago; Chas. C. Pyle, Exhibitors' Adv. Co., Chicago; R. M. Power, Ashland and Odeon, Chicago; Geo. L. Pladte, the Calumet, Chicago; Chas. C. Ison, the Charm, Chicago; Mrs. N. Peach, the Neighborhood, Chicago; Albert G. Reider, Lincoln Park Theater, Chicago; Mrs. E. F. Rose, the Marion, Chicago; John B. Rock, Vitagraph Co., Chicago; F. M. Rosseland, Gen. Electric Co., Chicago; A. Rosenthal, Wonderland, Chicago; J. H. Redder, the Ideal, Chicago; E. A. Fraake, the Clark, Chicago; J. E. Robin, Simplex Mach., Chicago; J. D. Cole, Pyrene Co., Chicago; F. W. Redfield, Gen. Film Co., Spoor Branch, Chicago; Mrs. E. M. Rosenthal, Wonderland, Chicago; Mrs. G. B. Saunders (Powell's guest), Chicago; Wm. Hassett, the Montrose, Chicago; J. Stough, the Playhouse, Chicago; E. H. Schulze, the Columbia, Chicago; A. F. Solomon, H. M. Hirschberg & Co., Chicago; H. Schoenstaedt, the Ashland, Chicago; Elmer E. Rogers, Stereopticon Lectures, Chicago; A. Schoenstaedt, the Ashland, Chicago; J. C. Shaw, the Sheldon, Chicago; W. N. Simons, the Center, Chicago; F. G. Schaefer, the Crystal, Chicago; W. H. Sherman, the Clarendon, Chicago; Fred W. Schaefer, the Crystal, Chicago; Harry Siff, the McKinley Park, Chicago; A. W. Strange, the Ruby, Chicago; Chas. G. Stewart, Palais Royal, Chicago; N. Sampanis, the Royal, Chicago; Chas. J. Stark, S. & A., Chicago; R. C. Seery, Majestic Film Service, Chicago; C. H. Sedell, Theatrical Promoter, Chicago; N. Smith, the Royal, Chicago; Wm. J. Sweeney, the Standard, Chicago; Sidney Smith, Kedzie Ave., Chicago; Wm. H. Sherwood, the Clarendon, Chicago; Nick Sampanis, the Royal, Chicago; C. E. Sinn, Moving Picture World, Chicago; D. L. Swartz and wife, the Erie, Chicago; S. Schiller, the Drexel, Chicago; F. S. Taub, the Dealer, Chicago; A. H. Talbott, the Alcazar, Chicago; H. F. Freulich, the Robey, Chicago; R. C. Valentine, the Magnolia, Chicago; S. Van Ronkel, Amer Song Slide Poster Co., Chicago; C. W. Taylor, General Film Co., Chicago; C. J. Uonesh, the Avers, Chicago; H. L. Wallick, the Ellisk, Chicago; A. E. Wandel, the Hamlin, Chicago; Thos. Wenig, Electric, Chicago; J. S. Weil, Lithuanian, Chicago; Miss B. Westcott, Chicago (guest of Powell); C. C. Whelen, the Washington, Chicago; P. H. White, Kleine Optical Co., Chicago; Jos. Wopota, the Model, Chicago; L. A. Woodward, Motiograph Machine Co., Chicago; Paul H. Woodruff, Motography Co., Chicago; L. Zahler, the Empress, Chicago; B. F. Whitrey and wife, Dante's Inferno, Chicago; John G. Berscheit, Aurora; W. F. Chelins, the Bessener, South Chicago; Frank Thielen, the Star, Aurora; Joe E. Tabor, the Majestic, Belvidere; J. G. Gesell, Nickeldome; Bloomington; Sey. S. Keppel, the Princess, Blue Island; H. H. Johnson, Lyric, Champlain; J. W. Dillon, the Exhibit, Danville; Jay Sitts, Danville; I. M. Martin, Majestic, Danville; M. J. Meedham, Lyric, Elgin; H. R. Slocum, the Gem, Fairfield; H. W. Pittner, the Gem, Fairfield; Mrs. L. Waltzinger, Majestic, Freeport; W. S. Johnstone, Arcade, Galesburg; Henry F. Hoeft, The Armory, Genesco; J. H. Roff, the Lyric, Gibson City; S. L. Rotenberry, Idle Hour, Herrin; H. A. Rubens, Crystal Stairs, Joliet; C. J. Clark, Olympic, Kensington; R. C. MacMullen, Colonial, Joliet; E. Haase, Princess, Dixon; G. Slothhower, Princess, Dixon; Wm. Avery, Kewanee; Chris. T. Taylor, Dreamland, Kewanee; R. D. Halbower, Imperial, La Harpe; David Stone, Imperial, La Harpe; Chas. Birkeabeul, Royal, La Salle; L. J. Weis, Electrical Theater, Naperville; E. E. Alger, the Crystal, Paxton; M. Schermis, Lithuanian, Chicago; C. G. Steinhardt, Columbia, Peoria; C. J. Isle, Majestic, Peoria; D. R. Spooats, Idle Hour, Peoria; D. C. McClellan, the Standard, Peoria; W. R. Walter, Lyric, Peru; C. H. Brown, Lyric, Polo; F. M. Bord, the Bord, Pontiac; E. Thalman, Jr., Grand, Chicago; F. L. Dudley, Auditorium, Prophetstown; Mrs. F. L. Dudley, Auditorium, Prophetstown; Mrs. C. C. Taylor, Dreamland, Prophetstown; H. E. Nelson, Colonnade, Quincy; W. A. Peterson, Sr., Colonial, Quincy; L. A. Morest, Savoy and Gem, Quincy; H. Heiss, Ravenswood, Ravenswood; H. Noben, Rockford; Mrs. M. Knopfel, the Park, Rogers Park; S. R. Brind, the Park, Rogers Park; Q. A. Berkson, Roseland, Roseland; Jas. C. Kunz, Wm. J. Sweeney,

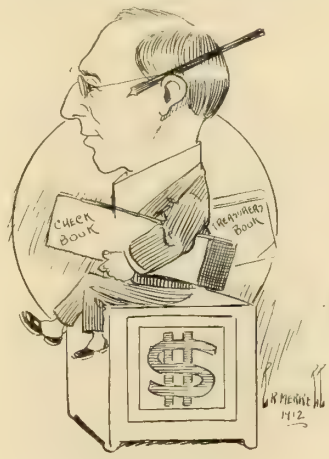
Chicago.



J. R. Reider,
National Treasurer, Jackson, Mich.

J. R. Freuler,
Gen. Mgr. Mutual Film Corp.

Grand, Springfield; W. W. Watts, Vaudette, Springfield; Isadore Burnstine, Capitol-Quincy, Springfield and Quincy; Chas. Vance, the Dawn, Streator; H. C. Luedtke, the Star, Waukegan; Thos. O'Dow, Photoplay, Hite; H. Kirkhoff, the Princess; R. W. Horn, Kleine Optical Co., Chicago; Wm. Dedlow and wife, McKinley Park Theater, Chicago; J. G. Shafrank, Ind. Curtain & Slide Co., Chicago; J. C. Snow, Illinois Life Ins. Co., Chicago; P. Lun, the Yale, Chicago; E. W. Robinson, New Lyric, Chicago; Geo. Pastor, the Fullerton, Chicago; H. N. Srilling, the White Rose, Chicago; B. W. Everett, the Seeley, Chicago; J. D. Poorman, South Park Theater, Chicago; S. B. Blakely, the Kedzie Avenue, Chicago; J. V. Seaver, the Theatorium, Chicago.

Indiana: H. Kirckhoff, the Princess, Anderson; S. B. Sampson, Star-Princess, Anderson; Mrs. J. Kirkhoff, Princess-Star, Anderson; Mrs. S. B. Sampson, Princess-Star, Anderson; H. W. Summers, the Orpheum, Anderson; Chas. Angel, Wonderland, Bluffton; O. L. Jarodski, Colonial, Danville; E. E. Cole, the Star, Elkhart; R. J. Rush, the Princess, Elkhart; H. F. Mosiman, the Majestic, Elwood; J. R. Brannen, Savoy-Colonial, Evansville; M. G. Perrin, the Lyric, Evansville; H. W. Bruce, the McClan, Indianapolis; R. R. Luster, American Amusement Co., Evansville; Gus Muhlhauser, American Amusement Co., Evansville; Sprague Green and wife, the Lyric, Ft. Wayne; Abe C. Heisler; Oscar E. Holbrook, Hippodrome, Ft. Wayne; Joe Boramerscheim, the Gaiety, Ft. Wayne; E. Rubel, Grand, Gary; C. J. Simon, the Grand, Gary; V. W. Young, the Art, Gary; H. E. Rosebrough, the Huntington, Huntington; F. L. Walker, Lyric-Palace, Huntington; C. E. Lewis, the Bijou, Indianapolis; J. L. Van Buskirk, the Palace, Indianapolis; E. H. Bryent, Mutual Film Corp., Indianapolis; Frank Green, the Green, Indianapolis; D. Brown, Jr., the Imperial, Indianapolis; E. J. Adley, My Theater, Indianapolis; J. M. Rhodes, the Imperial, Indianapolis; J. B. Hubert, Big-2-Jones, Indianapolis; A. M. Beck, Central Film Service, Indianapolis; A. C. Farrell, Central Film Service, Indianapolis; C. Furniss, the Imperial, Indianapolis; J. A. Victor, 2-John, Indianapolis; L. A. Kleine, the Arc, Lafayette; A. J. Inks, the Crystal, Ligonier; Geo. L. Sawyer, the Century, Mishawaka; W. H. Peeling, the Royal, Muncie; D. Williston, the Lyric, Muncie; O. J. Chandler, the Dallas, Peru; O. G. Murray, the Murratte, Richmond; F. G. Rembusch, Alhambra, Shelbyville; H. F. Prentice, Fountain Theater, Terre Haute; W. R. Deaton, the Royal, Warsaw.

Nebraska: W. A. Walden, Wonderland, Hastings.

New Jersey: C. Fred Ruhlman, the University, Trenton; B. M. Corbett, The Thos. Edison Co., Orange; L. F. Blumenthal, Jersey City; G. A. Robinson, West Hoboken; Geo. A. Magie, Solax Co., Ft. Lee.

New York: Geo. Griffin, Rochester; H. H. Turner, Rochester Theater, Rochester; Allen Beckett, Lyric, Saratoga Springs; Mrs. A. Beckett, Lyric, Saratoga Springs; J. H. Dougherty, Gen. Electric Co., Schenectady; I. Cohen, Variety, New York City; Eric Morrison, New York City; H. W. Rosenthal, the Apollo, New York City; Louis Rosenthal, City Hall Theater, New York City; S. M. Spedon, Publicity Mgr. Vitagraph Co., New York; Samuel H. Trigger, New York City; Geo. A. LeRoi, Nicholas Power Theater, New York City; J. D. Tippett, Eclair Film Co., New York City; A. Warner, Warner's Features, New York City; Geo. A. Blair, Eastman Kodak Co., Rochester; E. M. Day, Motion World, Auburn and Rome; L. Germain, the Park, Brooklyn; Alb. K. Greenland, Gaumont Co., Flushing; H. Obrock, Gaumont Co., Flushing; R. C. Whitten, the Goldenrod, College Point; C. J. Hite, Thanhouser Film Co., New Rochelle; Bert Adler, Thanhouser Film Co., New Rochelle; L. B. Adler, New York City; Sidney Ascher, New York City; E. Barry, Raw Film Supply Co., New York City; F. J. Beecroft, New York City; C. Lang Cobb, Jr., Reliance M. P. Co., New York City; Jos. F. Coufal, the Lyceum, New York City; Jas. L. Hoff, Moving Picture World, New York City; D. Horseley, Universal Film Mfg. Co., New York City; L. A. Keppler, Senate and Victor Theaters, New York City; D. W. McKinney, Gt. Northern Film Co., New York City; W. Stephen Bush, Moving Picture World, New York City; Joe Brandt, Universal Film Mfg. Co., New York.

Ohio: Dave Sternberg, Dolly Varden Theater, Cincinnati; Wm. Kitt, Pavilion, Cincinnati; John J. Huss, the Royal, Cincinnati; L. S. Wise and wife, Dreamland, Chicago Junction; G. D. Sprang, Grand-Olympic, Bellaire; Gus Sun, Columbia, Springfield; B F. Newman, Pearson, Toledo; W. C. Bettis, Colonial, Toledo; John Cooper, Sterling Economizer Co., Warren; R. H. Colman, the Palace, Washington C. H.; Mrs. R. H. Colman, the Palace, Washington Court House; S. E. Wall, Opera House, W. Jefferson; P. D. Pebbas, the American, Zanesville; Jas. Collins, American, Zanesville; W. C. Quimby, Casino, Zanesville; Wm. Stansburg, State Light Pictures, Marion; M. Fishman, the Central, Cincinnati; C. J. Ver Halen, Billboard, Cincinnati; J. H. Mayer, the Billboard, Cincinnati; F. A. Bott, the Royal,

L. H. Frank,
Publicity Chairman.

Fred J. Harrington,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

M. A. Neff,
National President, Cincinnati, O.

Iowa: A. W. McIntosh, the Crystal, Waterloo; C. A. Pratt, Winfield Electric Co., Winfield; R. E. Pratt, Winfield, Ia., Electric Co., Winfield; J. H. Newell, Idle Hour, Bloomfield; F. W. Young, the Dealer, Cedar Rapids; Chas. Lage, Jr., West Side, Cedar Rapids; F. P. Lemen, the Star, Colfax; Oley A. Kintz, the Colonial, Grinnell; H. E. Baumgartner, the Lyric, Osage; D. B. Baker, Pastime, Ottumwa; J. S. Bassett, the Gem, Independence; M. Liance, Empire, Ottumwa; W. L. Rubert, Empire, Ottumwa; Clay Kreese and wife, the Bijou, Muscatine; Phil Judell, Empress, Sioux City.

Florida: F. T. Montgomery, Montgomery Amusement Co., Jacksonville; H. C. Dorsey, Montgomery Amusement Co., Jacksonville.

Kansas: H. S. Michel, Newton.

Kentucky: Carl D. Herman, Bowling Green; J. M. Robertson, Opera House, Bowling Green; Preme Carter, the Temple, Covington; G. H. Stroman, Victoria, Covington; H. N. Brice, Brice's Theater, Covington; C. E. Saroin, the Casino, Dayton; L. H. Ramsey, Hippodrome and Annex, Lexington; John L. Steurle, Broadway Amuse. Co., Louisville; L. Dittmar, Majestic, Louisville; M. L. Simons, Hippodrome, Louisville; Arthur V. Shedder, the Novelty, Louisville; G. B. Balch, Courier-Journal, Louisville; L. F. Steurle, Broadway Amuse. Co., Louisville; Fred J. Dolle, West Broadway, Louisville; Fred Hoffman, the Globe, Louisville; J. M. Wentzeville and wife, Norman, Louisville; A. B. Arnett, the Majestic, Midway; Geo. A. Bleich, the Empress, Owensboro.

Louisiana: E. V. Richards, Jr., Shreveport; A. D. Saenger, Shreveport.

Missouri: Geo. H. Wiley, Kansas City; John A. Schott, Kansas City; A. V. Conger, Kansas City Slide Co., Kansas City; J. L. Wagner, Swanson and Crawford Film Co., St. Louis; J. E. Haggard, Photoplay, Nevada; C. Page, Central Exchange, Poplar Bluff; Chas. E. Palmer, Majestic, Queen City; N. E. Field, Orpheum, St. Joe; E. M. Swiehaus, Palace-Casino, St. Louis; W. A. Page, Fire Indemnity Exchange, St. Louis; A. R. Choimard, Palace, St. Louis; Wm. L. Skyhlm, St. Charles Theater, St. Louis; J. S. Fitzsimmons, Shenandoah Theater Co., St. Louis; Mrs. and Miss J. H. Gilday, Iliad Amusement Co., Kansas City; Jos. H. Gilday, Iliad Amuse. Co., Kansas City; W. L. Sheldon, the Ashland, Kansas City; E. E. Reehards, the Subway, Kansas City; N. J. Flynn, Wonderland, Kansas City; G. H. Wiley, the Sapphire, Kansas City.

Michigan: W. Corey, Bijou, Petoskey; S. H. Zekind, the Princess, Benton Harbor; W. S. Bastar, the Princess, Benton Harbor; G. Holladay, Israelite House of David, Benton Harbor; Phil Gleickman, Mutual Film Corp., Detroit; C. J. Sullivan, the Grand, Escanaba; Mrs. F. R. Rumler, the Wagner, Detroit; W. L. Levy, the Lester, Detroit; A. J. Gilligham, Theater Exchange, Detroit; Fred R. Rumler, Warren, Detroit; Peter T. Jeup, the Pastime, Detroit; H. L. Pavey, the I. N. L., Hillsdale; W. J. Wyman, the I. N. L., Hillsdale; F. J. Rieder, the Semple, Jackson; W. J. Carroll, the Ben Lon, Jackson; F. P. D'Arcy, the New, Kalamazoo; Carl Ray, Orpheum, Muskegon; Mrs. Zimmerman, the Colonial, Owosso; Mrs. B. L. Carpenter, the Temple, Owosso; J. M. Zimmerman, the Colonial, Owosso; Simon Polk, the Royal, So. Saage.

Minnesota: Thos. Furniss, Odeon and Lyric, Duluth; O. N. Raths, the Gaiety, St. Paul; Myrtle Huntley, Winona; Ben Huntley, Winona; L. G. Roesner, Colonial Princess, Winona; V. M. Sherman, Motographic Supply, Winona.

Nevada: Chas. P. Trux, the Unique, Sparta; G. D. Hurst, the Girard, Reno.

Cincinnati; Chas. Sternberg, the Dolly Varden, Cincinnati; Jas. H. Hannigan, the Lubin, Cincinnati; G. W. Hill, Liberty, Cincinnati; C. M. Christenson, Dreamland, Cleveland; Emil C. Meyer, Penn Sq., Cleveland; Edw. Kohl, the National, Cleveland; Ernst Schwartz, Erie Amuse. Co., Cleveland; L. H. Wilk, Cleveland; Louise C. Schmitz, the Fulton, Cleveland; Sam E. Morris, Cleveland; Frank M. Kearney, Cleveland; H. A. Lustig, Erie Amuse. Co., Cleveland; Mrs. S. A. Lustig, Erie Amuse. Co., Cleveland; Miss D. Kuhn, the Columbia, Cleveland; Mrs. G. W. Heimbach, Cleveland; Mrs. W. Slimm, Cleveland; C. C. Spiks, the Alcazar, Cleveland; L. H. Becht, the Mall, Cleveland; W. C. Kunzman, Natl. Carbon Mfg. Co., Cleveland; Chas. F. Schroeder, Enjoy U, Cleveland; W. J. Slim, Marquis, Cleveland; Geo. W. Heimbuch, the Superior, Cleveland; A. Mahrer, the Avenue, Cleveland; W. C. Kasperin, the Fairyland, Cleveland; Phil Bock, World of Amusement, Cincinnati; Otto Luedeking, World of Amusement Co., Cincinnati; F. E. Simmons, Dreamland, Cleveland; S. A. Lustig, the Erie, Cleveland; J. A. Maddox, Columbus; J. Pekras, Dreamland, Columbus; Max Stearn, Exhibit Theater, Columbus; W. A. Pitts, Theatorium, Conneaut; C G. Chacos, the Pastime, Coschocton; Paul C. Henry, the Grand, Crestline; Mr. and Mrs. Clem Kerr, Dayton; Mr. and Mrs. Val. Rayburg, Dayton; M. C. Eberstein, Montgomery's Majestic, Dayton; P. O. Warren, N. C. R. Theater, Dayton; W. Rayner, Dreamland, Dayton; G. L. McClintock, Columbia, E. Liverpool; Jas. H. Broomhall, the Jewel, Hamilton; N. E. Chaney, the Orpheum, Hillsboro; W. A. Seymour, Seemore, Leckland; Geo. Schaker, Pastime, Lorraine; Wm. G. Georgian, the Arris, Mansfield; W. H. Schull, Pastime, Martin's Ferry; M. W. Miller, White Palace, Mt. Vernon; A. F. Lee, Lee's Theater, Ravenna; F. M. Shelley, Royal, St. Mary's; A. L. Botkia, Edison Theater, St. Mary's.

Oklahoma: Albert Jackson, the Jackson, Panhuska; J. L. Sels, Wonderland, Tulsa; Carl Gregg, Lyric, Tulsa; F. P. Yeager, Wonderland, Tulsa; L. W. Brophy, Yale Theater Co., Muskogee.

Pennsylvania: H. A. Victor, McKeesport; S. S. Victor, the Savoy, McKeesport; F. J. Harrington, Coliseum, Mt. Olive; Morris Spiers, the Royal, Philadelphia; Chas. Segall, Hippodrome, Philadelphia; F. G. Bowers, Pastime, Pittsburgh; Henry Poke, Pittsburgh; Jas. Delues, the Crescent, Pittsburgh; Oscar Bowers, Pittsburgh; Oliver McKee, Pittsburgh; F. J. Herrington, Pittsburgh; A. McGowan, Pittsburgh; Harry E. Reiff, the Lyric, Pittsburgh; Homer Saunders, Jas. H. Matthews Co. Theater, Pittsburgh; Harry McGowan, Pastime, Pittsburgh; O. McKee, McKee's Theater, S. S. Pittsburgh; G. C. Miller, the Lyric, Plymouth.

South Dakota: C. S. Smithers, Idle Hour, Aberdeen; Mrs. C. S. Smithers, Idle Hour, Aberdeen; J. E. Hipple, the Bijou, Pierre.

Tennessee: Howell Graham, Chattanooga; McMorris and wife, Union City; Frank Rogers, Lee-Grand, Knoxville; Wm. H. Wassman, Nashville and Knoxville.

Texas: H. C. Stearns, Stearns' Theater, Pt. Arthur; A. F. Dittman, Dittman's Theater, Brownsville.

Wisconsin: Max Kostak, the Lincoln, Milwaukee; E. Burger, the Clifton, Milwaukee; Neil Duffy, Elite, Appleton; H. H. Coleburn, Orpheum, Burlington; G. A. Podto, Cudahy; J. J. Disch, the Majestic, Cudahy; Edw. C. Prinsen, the Ida, Fond du Lac; A. Gotschalk, Climax Theater Co., Fond du Lac; W. E. Smith, the Bijou, Fond du Lac; L. G. Rhode, Rhode Opera House Co., Kenosha; W. D. Burford, Lyric-Bijou, La Crosse; H. H. Burford, Lyric-Bijou, La Crosse; O. A. Woolke, Majestic, La Crosse Mills; Roy Cummings, Amuse U, Madison; E. F. Ludwig, Aurora, Milwaukee; L. N.

Mergener, W. Film Exchange, Milwaukee; J. J. Crowley, Silver City-Gem Theater, Milwaukee; H. N. Griggs, the Circuit, Milwaukee; Wm. Jacobs, the Lexington, Milwaukee; B. Judelle, the Atlas, Milwaukee; Geo. F. Kiewert, Chas. L. Kiewert Co., Milwaukee; Mrs. M. Rice, the Owl, Milwaukee; M. Rice, the Owl, Milwaukee; B. K. Fisher, Mozart, Milwaukee; S. Trinz, the Empire, Milwaukee; M. R. Sylet, the Murray, Milwaukee; Chas. H. Phillips, Apollo, Milwaukee; H. S. Klein, Liberty, Milwaukee; O. J. Jacobs, the Park, Milwaukee; J. Schwartz, the Park, Milwaukee; O. Sprecher, the Avenue, Milwaukee; Frank Cooke, the Princess, Milwaukee; C. H. Krebs, Chas. L. Kiewert Co., Milwaukee; L. Leo, the Milwaukee, Milwaukee; M. J. Weisfeldt, the Crystal, Plymouth; J. D. McWilliams, the Liberty, Prairie du Chien; Jno. T. Bartlett, the Grand, Racine; C. W. Tiede, the Bijou, Racine; J. W. Clark, Idle Hour, Sheboygan; A. Ponto, Mojuvati, S. Milwaukee; Jacob Moelk, Lyric, Stoughton; Geo. B. Frellson, Unique-Park, Waukesha.

West Virginia: L. R. Thomas, Orpheum, Moundsville; A. W. Lambert, the Lyric, Newfield; A. L. Cottrill, Wonderland, Pt. Pleasant; B. D. Eagan, Amuse U, Ronceverte.

Germany: Herman Klicke, Wurlitzer Co., Berlin; Chas. P. Trux.

Callers at the World's Chicago Office.

The following is a list of exhibitors and others who called at the World offices and exhibition room during the Convention:

Ed. J. Adley, prop. of "My" Theater, Indianapolis, and Secretary of Indianapolis Local No. 1; W. A. Peterson, Sr., Colonial Theater, Quincy, Ill.; Isadore Burstine, Quincy Theater, Quincy, Ill.; O. J. Chandler, Palace Theater, Peru, Ind.; Frank P. Cook, Empire Theater, Redlands, Cal.; Otto N. Raths, Gaiety Theater, St. Paul, Minn.; Thomas Furniss, Odeon and Lyric theaters, Duluth, Minn.; Dan Barton, maker Barton's piano attachment, 266 E. Irving Street, Oshkosh, Wis.; Howell Graham, Theatro-Colonial, Waneta, Chattanooga, Tenn.; M. C. Eberstein, Montgomery Amusement Co., Jacksonville, Fla.; H. C. Dorsey, Vice-Pres. Montgomery Amusement Co., Savannah, Ga.; W. H. Taylor, Elite Theater, Burlington, Iowa; J. S. Bassett, Gem Theater, Independence, Iowa; A. H. McIntosh, Crystal Theater, Waterloo, Iowa; D. C. McClellan, Idyl Hour, Dreamland and Standard theaters, Pekin, Ill.; Max Stearn, Exhibit Theater, Columbus, Ohio; J. J. Disch, Majestic Theater, Cudahy, Wis.; Ben Huntley, Winona, Minn.; J. R. Brannen, Savoy and Colonial, Evansville, Ind.; W. O. Edmunds, Majestic Theater, Winnipeg, Man.; Earl T. Brown, Lyric and Majestic theaters, Janesville, Wis.; J. D. McWilliams, Grand Theater, Madison, Wis.; Arthur E. Ponto, Mojuvati Theater, South Milwaukee, Wis.; W. H. Wasserman, Crystal and Rex theaters, in Nashville and Knoxville, Tenn.; C. R. Suber, Burlington, Iowa; H. H. Jonson, Lyric Amusement Co., Champaign, Ill.; E. E. Alger, Crystal Theater, Paxton, Ill.; George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.; A. V. Beckett, Lyric Theater, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.; Fred W. Young, Manager United Supply Co., Cedar Rapids, Iowa; H. E. Nelson, Colonnade Theater, Quincy, Ill.; Morris Lince, Empire Theater, Ottumwa, Iowa; Dwight B. Baker, Garrick, Pastime, Vaudette and Photoplay theaters, Ottumwa, Iowa; J. J. Rieder, Temple Theater, Jackson, Mich.; W. J. Carroll, Bon Ton Theater, Jackson, Mich.; Fred R. Rummler, Warren Theater, Detroit, Mich.; J. M. Zimmerman, Colonial Theater, Owosso, Mich.; R. H. Coleman, Palace Theater, Washington C. H., Ohio; Joseph C. Rhode, Rhode Opera House, Kenosha, Wis.; W. K. Deobler, Estelle Theater, Chicago, Ill.; W. J. Johnson, Elite Theater, Appleton, Wis.

Harry E. Reiff, Lyric Theater, Pittsburgh, Pa.; M. Spiers, Royal Palace, Philadelphia, Pa.; Charles R. Trux, Unique Theater, Sparta, Wis.; T. M. Vaughn, Battle Creek, Mich.; R. C. Honeck, Chicago Song Slide Exchange, Chicago, Ill.; Fred W. Sheaffer, Central Theater, Chicago, Ill.; H. E. Baumgartner, Lyric Theater, Osage, Iowa; Charles R. Dobey, Imperial Theater, Chicago, Ill.; George W. Kiewert, Milwaukee, Wis.; J. E. Robin, Precision Co., New York; H. B. Mick, Keithsburg, Ill.

John Cooper, Sterling Economizer Co., Warren, Ohio; C. H. Rees, Urichsville, Ohio; C. F. Smithers, Aberdeen, S. Dak.; Henry F. Hoeft, Armory Theater, Geneseo, Ill.; E. F. Lading, Waukesha, Wis.; Carl Gregg, Lyric, Palace and Wonderland theaters, Tulsa, Okla.; Albert Jackson, Jackson Theater, Powhuska, Okla.; George Pollack, Chicago, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Steuerle, Broadway Amusement Co., Louisville, Ky.; Arthur B. Sheckler, Gomes Vaudeville Exchange, Louisville, Ky.; Joseph H. Gilday, Kansas City, Mo.; A. V. Beckett, Lyric Theater, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.; J. Colson, Arrow Theater, Chicago, Ill.; W. H. Peeling, Royal Theater, Muncie, Ind.; C. S. Faehnderech, Lethbridge, Alta., Can.; J. R. Lend, Chicago, Ill.; George Scheulser, Pastime Theater, Lorain, Ohio; M. Frishman, Cincinnati, Ohio; E. E. Algier, Paxton, Ill.; B. R. VanValkenburg, American Photoplayer Co., San Francisco, Cal.; Morris Oesteneuber, Grand Theater, Chicago, Ill.; J. Tilsey, May Theater, Chicago, Ill.; B. D. Eagan, Amusu Theater, Roncevert, W. Va.; A. L. Cottrill, Wonderland Theater, Point Pleasant, W. Va.; H. W. Rosenthal, Secretary New York State League, New York City; G. A. Robinson, Colonial Theater, West Hoboken, N. J.; G. G. Schoeneberger, Cincinnati, Ohio; C. Fred Ruhlman, Trenton, N. J.; Joseph G. Goodman, Floral Theater, Chicago, Ill.; L. W. Brophy, Jane Theater Co., Muskogee, Okla., controlling theaters in Muskogee, Tulsa, Bartlesville, McAlester, Lawton, and Dewey, Okla.; E. V. Richards and A. D. Sanger, Sanger and Palace theaters, Shreveport, La.

Richard L. Cresey, Chicago.

EXHIBITORS VISIT SELIG PLANT.

The Selig Polyscope Company's plant, out on Western Avenue and Irving Park Boulevard, had all past records broken on Wednesday, August 14, when visiting exhibitors to the national convention, numbering over 1,500, fairly took it by storm. They went out on twelve specially chartered street cars provided by the Selig Company, in rubberneck motor cars hired for the occasion by John R. Rock, and in a long row of private and hired autos furnished by local exhibitors and film men for visiting guests.

As the visitors marched into the plant, two abreast, they were bombarded by a Selig camera man from an advantageous position. Considerable mirth was created by several of the visitors, who returned after entering to look at the camera man, thus exposing themselves a second time and affording unconsciously a bit of comedy for the spectators who viewed the film in the evening at Orchestra Hall. A moving picture was also taken of President Neff, the national vice-presidents and the delegates and alternates from various States.

Two big scenes had been provided by the Selig management for the entertainment of the visitors. In one of these, showing a panic in the pit of a metropolitan board of trade, fully 300 exhibitors participated. This scene was directed by Lem Parker, who considers it one of the most realistic panic scenes ever produced, so thoroughly did the visitors enter into the spirit of the occasion. Many of them came out of the melee minus hats and some of them without coats, collars and neckties. Some of them, too, carried away bruises that will remind them for weeks to come of the strenuous fight in the pit, where they had fallen and been trampled by the frenzied mob. This scene was taken in the spacious new studio.

John A. Victor,
Delegate—Indianapolis.

Carl Jarvin,
Delegate—K. & C. Branch No. 2.

The other scene was laid in the grounds and was participated in only by the acting and supernumerary forces of the plant. It was under the supervision of Producer Eagle and showed the attack on Fort Dearborn by Indians, in pioneer days. The Indians used in the scene were brought from Indian reservations, permission from the Government having been obtained. This scene had been rehearsed repeatedly for the occasion and the dash and savage attack of the redskins were brought out strongly. The three-reel Selig picture, in which this scene will be used, will be released either under the title "The Fort Dearborn Massacre," or "When Wilderness Was King." The story is based on the history of the massacre by Randall Parrish. Chas. E. Nixon and Wilmer Thompson have collaborated in writing the scenario, the latter confining his attention to the historical treatment and Mr. Nixon to the dramatic.

After the visitors had satisfied themselves in viewing the sights in the plant, they were conducted to a shady picnic grove nearby, where food and refreshments were thoroughly enjoyed. The visitors were loud in their praise of the Selig management, and heartily pronounced the outing the most enjoyable feature of their visit to Chicago.

BUFFALO EXHIBITORS' ORGANIZATION.

Just prior to the Chicago convention the exhibitors of Buffalo, N. Y., got together and formed a local association, with 26 charter members. It is the intention of the Buffalo local to include theater managers of surrounding smaller towns, and to affiliate with the national body. The secretary is Mr. G. W. Erdmann.

Banquet of the M. P. E. L.

Of America.

By Jas. S. McQuade.

THE praiseworthy arrangements made by the national convention committee for the work of the convention and the entertainment of their guests found culmination in the banquet given in the La Salle Hotel on Friday evening, August 16. Plates were laid in the great banquet hall for over 600 guests and the menu was begun about 8 o'clock. William J. Sweeney was the toastmaster, and he and his hardworking associates were deservedly complimented by many of the speakers during the evening.

The first speaker introduced by the toastmaster was Mr. McGann, who had been specially selected by Mayor Harrison to represent him for the occasion. This gentleman showed that he had thoroughly familiarized himself with the history of motion picture presentations in Chicago, and had studied the needs and safeguarding of picture theaters. He also revealed that he was greatly interested in the future success of the motion picture, both for entertainment and instruction.

W. Stephen Bush, one of the editors of the Moving Picture World, was the next speaker. In the course of an able address, Mr. Bush paid an eloquent tribute to the late James Petrie Chalmers, the founder and former editor-in-chief of the World. The applause that greeted this reference to the incessant labors of the dead publisher and editor in the interests of exhibitors generally afforded grateful evidence that his life work has been appreciated and is still bearing golden fruit. The speech of Mr. Bush follows:

Address by W. Stephen Bush.

Mr. Toastmaster, Ladies and Gentlemen: It is no small honor to address so notable and distinguished a gathering, all animated and fascinated by one interest, a friendship and admiration for the motion picture. I do not think there is any vocation quite so enthralling and absorbing as ours, and it is a pleasure indeed to see you here to-night with faces so cheerful, with a spirit so happy after the week's important labors have been finished. Not the least bright spot in this splendid assemblage is right near me, and I am sure I am only voicing the sentiments of other members when I say I take this occasion of thanking the fair and brilliant artists of the Selig studio who have stepped forth from the screen where we have so often seen them, and have lent to this banquet the dainty graces of their actual presence. (Applause.) The work which the press has done on behalf of the motion picture has not always been prompted by mere motives of business, but more often sprung from an honest and sincere desire to be of help to all who are interested in the motion picture, to the exhibitor, the manufacturer, the exchangeman. No great achievement is recorded in the annals of our race which did not have its origin in a desire for genuine and unselfish service. And when we speak of genuine and unselfish service, there is a name which instantly suggests itself to everyone within the reach of my voice. The name of the foremost practical exponent of genuine and unselfish service; the name of a man who gave the best years of his life to the motion picture and who, when death overtook him, was found in the midst of useful activities, seeking to strengthen the hands of the exhibitor. (Applause.) If we inscribe this day upon the rolls of cinematograph history as its most significant and memorable, we must illuminate the record with the name of a man who has done more for moving pictures than any other single influence. I hope that whenever friends of the motion picture gather in harmonious council, his name will never be forgotten, but ever be remembered; it is a name which will awaken none but pleasing and grateful echoes in this convention, the name of James P. Chalmers. (Prolonged applause.)

It is a notable fact and one full of meaning to the thoughtful that no great newspaper exists in this country to-day but owes its influence to the efforts of one man whom Nature had endowed with the previous gifts of leadership. William Cullen Bryant founded the Evening Post, Horace Greeley founded the Tribune, and Charles A. Dana founded the Sun. All these men were giants who did giants' work. Their papers exist to-day, generations after their deaths, because the usefulness of these men did not end with their deaths; they bequeathed their spirit to other men of lesser gifts, but inspired with the courage and example of the founder. Of this immortality, the one immortality of which we have assurance, James P. Chalmers may always be certain as long as the motion picture shall endure. He, too, has left behind him his monument of service and usefulness in The Moving Picture World. They upon whom the task of carrying on Mr. Chalmers' work has fallen have but one source of inspiration, the memory of the beloved founder, and but one ambition, and that is to follow his ideals and to never forsake his policies. We like to believe that in this work we have the good wishes of every man directly or indirectly connected with the motion picture, and we hope we have the support and approval of the exhibiting branch of our industry so splendidly represented by the delegates to this convention. (Applause.)

To us as well as to the exhibitor and the manufacturer is entrusted the guidance of the good and noble ship of cinematography. We, too, are members of its crew. We earnestly desire to keep it away from the shoals and rocks and we rejoice to see it sweep on in splendor and dignity to its glorious destiny. (Applause.) Now let me confide to you, that the task of motion picture journalist for thanklessness and hard work compares favorably with your own chosen vocation of entertaining the great American public by means of motion pictures. We are both targets for the public to shoot at and I suppose many a time with the shafts of public criticisms painfully adhering to your flesh you have sought to get even with Fate by mailing your own little arrow of criticism to the Moving Picture World. The little human mosquitoes who go through the world buzzing and stinging and whom we know under the general name of reformers have tarred us with the same stick and they would draw their skirts closer at the approach of a motion picture editor just as quickly as at the sight of an exhibitor. Then we have fought the good fight together and I tell you that but for the letters of good cheer and encouragement from exhibitors we would many a time have faltered. It is a fine feeling when you know by the loud cheers of a goodly multitude that they are with you and whether you are trying to steal a base or to fight foolish prejudice and willful ignorance, it is good to hear the roar from ten or twenty thousand "Go ahead, we are all with you." And some of the letters, yes, I might say almost all of them are equal to a good deal more than just one roar of approval. The result is an intimate friendliness between our readers and ourselves, which is found in mighty few papers anywhere in the world. We infer from these letters that the Moving Picture World is useful to you, that you are glad when you see its pictured cover and that you get a little impatient when the mail with your paper is behind time and that you swear more or less at our hard working delivery department. This feeling of mutual trust and confidence between yourselves and the Moving Picture World has always worked for our mutual benefit and there is every reason to expect that the relationship will continue. (Applause.)

It had always been the desire of the founder of the Moving Picture World to represent in his paper the entire industry, the smallest interest as well as the largest. The Moving Picture World will always live up to this aim and to these traditions of the founder. Its influence will always belong to the entire industry, and it will seek to represent every one of the fifteen thousand exhibitors in this country. Our relations with our readers do not end with their payment of the subscriptions, they realize the sincerity of our efforts in helping the industry in every possible way to advance and to widen its fields of unselfishness. Our subscribers are not only readers, but friends as well, and we are always glad to hear from them and thankful for the suggestions which they often make to us and which have frequently proven of great benefit to all. (Applause.)

On behalf of the Moving Picture World I want to thank all those present for the friendly feeling with which they have always regarded this, their favorite paper. The Moving Picture World will ever keep step with the progress of the picture and will ever seek to maintain its present friendly relations with the ever widening circles of its friends. (Applause.)

Other Addresses.

Miss Flo Jacobson, of Chicago, was then called on and sang several songs in such happy vein and voice that she was repeatedly encored.

W. A. Daniels, president of the National Waterproof Film Company, was the next speaker. Mr. Daniels is decidedly the humorist of such film gatherings, and on this occasion he sustained his reputation admirably, for his remarks created laughter and applause all the time he was on the platform.

Miss Alice Walsh, of Chicago, then entertained the assembly with songs, receiving several encores. C. C. Whelan, of Chicago, joined her in the last number and their united efforts put the audience in a roar. They were followed by George Magie, of the Film Supply Company, whose remarks treated chiefly of the business of this firm.

The toastmaster then introduced President M. A. Neff, who congratulated Chicago for having so many people in the exhibition business. Looking around on the great audience, Mr. Neff expressed himself as being much encouraged in his work, and proud that he had not labored in vain. He then made a touching reference to the death of Mr. J. P. Chalmers, and thanked the trade press generally for the valuable aid given to the organization. He also declared that conditions with the exhibitors are now much better than formerly. "The motion picture is the cornerstone of education and civilization," said Mr. Neff during his remarks. He had found by experience that the exhibitor is always figuring how to improve his picture. "Exhibitors who refuse to join the organization will soon eliminate themselves from the business," was one of President Neff's utterances. Mr. Neff warmly thanked the Chicago convention committee for their fine work in making preparations for the convention and in entertaining guests. "You have done much better, even than we could have wished for," he assured the members, and the statement was loudly applauded.

Stanley H. Twist, of the publicity department of the Selig Polyscope Company, was then introduced. He expressed regret that Mr. Wm. N. Selig has been called out of the city, and was, therefore, unable to be present. On behalf of Mr. Selig, he congratulated the organization on its remarkable growth in so short a time.

E. J. Mock followed. He was introduced as the "Goat" by Toastmaster Sweeney. During his humorous remarks, Mr. Mock spoke in high praise of the Chicago entertainment committee.

Sidney Ascher, vice-president of the New York branch, was then given five minutes, so he said, for a speech. He had asked Jim Hoff to write a speech for him which would occupy that time. Mr. Hoff had kindly done so, Mr. Ascher humorously said, but he had found that Mr. Hoff had written the same identical speech for Mr. Neff, and the latter had already delivered it. This put him in a bad place, but he believed in never taking water. He referred to the oppression of exhibitors by various municipalities and closed by inviting all present to join in a still greater demonstration next year, in New York City.

Joe Engel, of the Universal Company, was next called upon. He pronounced a flattering encomium on the members of the Chicago convention committee, which he called "a great one."

J. W. Farnham, the genial representative of the New York Morning Telegraph, was the next speaker. He drew attention to the present decadence of the legitimate theater and to the remarkable uprise of the motion picture house. He concluded with a story about "the dog who ate roasted horse flesh and then died," a humorous skit that put the audience in fine humor.

J. R. Freuler, general manager of the Mutual Film Corporation, was then introduced, and briefly told of the work done by his company. He was followed by C. M. Christenson, national secretary, who warmly thanked the Chicago convention committee for the handsome and efficient way in which they had taken care of the large number of visitors.

F. J. Harrington, vice-president of the Pennsylvania branch, then came to the platform. He reminded all present that much had been said about the exhibitors during the evening. He wished to remind them that the public is a big factor. Complaints made by the public to exhibitors should be met, and he expressed the opinion that the organization will enable the exhibitors to improve their programs, so as to meet the demand. In his opinion, censorship, at the present time, is not quite careful enough.

Mr. Eisner, of the General Film Company's branch at 17 South Wabash; George U. Stevenson, of the Billboard; John R. Rock, of the Vitagraph Company, and Joseph Hopp, of the Standard Film Exchange, made the closing speeches.

ESSANAY'S CONVENTION EXHIBIT.

The Essanay Company during the recent convention of exhibitors was the only licensed manufacturer having an office at the La Salle Hotel headquarters in which to entertain the exhibitors, their wives and friends. A big electric sign blazing "Essanay" greeted the eye as one stepped from the elevators, and the steady stream of badge-bedecked "conventionists" crowded down the hallway and into the Big Chief's wigwam, having discovered a welcome oasis in the midst of a vast and thirsty desert. Souvenirs consisting of handsome Indian Head watch-fobs for the gentlemen, and Indian Head hat-pins for the ladies were distributed, and tables at which an elaborate menu of refreshments was served were constantly filled by representatives from all parts of the country. Throughout the entire week the popular members of the Essanay Eastern Stock Company were at Essanay's headquarters daily to welcome and meet the exhibitors and their friends personally. At the conclusion of the brilliant banquet in the La Salle roof garden, a committee of six representatives extended to the Essanay Company, on behalf of the Exhibitors' League, a vote of warm thanks and appreciation for the courteous hospitality and entertainment provided by Essanay during the convention.

Manufacturers' Convention Exhibits.

Largest Exposition of Motion Picture Supply Goods on Record, Occupying a Full Floor.

Manufacturers' "Midway" was on the 18th floor of the LaSalle, where about forty different firms had engaged rooms for the display and demonstration of their goods. Probably no other one agency contributed more to the success of the convention than did this very interesting feature. Exhibitors, always deeply interested in things pertaining to their business, filled the various rooms and gave liberal orders, with the result that the manufacturers without exception proclaimed the meeting to be a splendid success from their point of view.

The trade exhibit was most comprehensive. The line of supplies that was not represented by at least one manufacturer was insignificant indeed, and everyone had a good showing. Of course there were film manufacturers and exchange men everywhere. It was a veritable gathering of the clans.

American Seating Company—This firm is one of the leading makers of opera seats with headquarters in Chicago, and a very comprehensive display of chairs best suited to the needs of the picture theatre manager was shown in Room 1816 under the direction of Mr. A. E. Dickerman, assisted by J. G. Carlsen and George Anderson. Mr. Dickerman reported a satisfactory number of sales and expressed himself well pleased with the meeting.

A. H. Andrews Company—This firm made a special effort to interest the exhibitors in its line. The factory in Chicago occupies a full city block and is eight stories high. Automobile busses were engaged to take all who wished over to see the big plant and many took advantage of the opportunity to inspect a most interesting industry. The Andrews exhibit was in Room 1814 and in charge of J. M. McLaughlin, assisted by J. D. Carr, W. A. Bishop, A. N. Carstens and G. P. Shea. This firm announces that it has 1000 men employed making 1000 different styles of seats. The company was established fifty years ago and its present factory is located at 22d and Fisk Streets, Chicago.

American Photoplayer Company—This company was unfortunate in having its principal exhibit in a room that was too small to accomodate all who wished to witness the demonstration, but it attracted a great deal of attention, nevertheless. The home of the photoplayer is San Francisco and Oakland, Cal., but its renown will presently be spread to all corners of this country. As has been told in a former issue of this paper the photoplayer is a musical instrument of the automatic type. We will not attempt to give a detail description here beyond saying that it is possible to obtain about all the music and effects by its use that could be desired. One instrument was installed in Room 1847 and another in the convention hall. The exhibit was under the direction of Mr. C. C. Spaulding, president of the company, assisted by B. R. VanValkenburg, secretary of the company and inventor of the instrument. The Photoplayer will be distributed by the American Photoplayer Sales Company of San Francisco, of which Mr. H. J. Werner is manager. Several sales were reported.

American Song Slide and Poster Display Company—Under the direction of Mr. L. A. Heyman this company made a display of A.B.C. posters, photoplayer photographs and announcement slides, in Room 1850.

Decorators Supply Company—A. F. and R. D. Powers presided over the representation made by this company in Room 1850. Owing to the nature of its business the Decorators Supply Company could not give a practical demonstration, but catalogs and circulars were distributed to the visitors, with invitations to visit the company's plant while in Chicago. Many took advantage of the invitation to see some of the beautiful decorations made by that concern.

J. C. Deagan—The maker of the famous Deagan's Bells and other sound effects had an interesting exhibit in Room 1845. The constant flow of melody that came from that room indicated that more than usual attention was being given to the exhibit. Mr. Deagan himself was in charge most of the time and Clarence E. Sinn, music editor of the Moving Picture World, dropped in occasionally to play the bells.

D'Arcy Ticket Vending Machine Company—Mr. F. P. D'Arcy demonstrated this device, which is of his own invention. He owns a theater at Kalamazoo, and his clever ticket vending device grew out of his own needs. The machine is made at Kalamazoo, Mich.

General Electric Company—In Room 1815 an interesting demonstration was made by the General Electric Company of Schenectady, N. Y., of its Mercury Arc Rectifier, Transformer, Flood Light, Fans, Radiator and Ozonator. The exhibit was in charge of Mr. C. W. Gallup of the Chicago office, assisted by Mr. J. L. Buchannan, Mr. J. H. Dority and Mr. F. M. Rosseland. Exhibitors took considerable interest in the demonstration and the room was crowded most of the time.

Hunton-Fell Elliott—Under the direction of Mr. E. F. Renner and T. D. Hume of the Chicago office the Hunton-Fell Elliott Company of New York had an exhibit of Current Event Slides and Photographs and Motorgraph Display Rack for Lobby display in Room 1817. Good business was reported.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company—In Room 1716 the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company exhibited several of its instruments. Another was set up in the convention hall and still another in Orchestra Hall, where the pictures were shown. The performance of these instruments was very satisfactory and several important sales were reported. The exhibit was in charge of Mr. T. P. Clancy, General Sales Manager from the Cincinnati Office; G. H. Parker and A. Libbin of Chicago and Mr. Hope-Jones, the inventor of the Unit Orchestra, from New York.

Commercial Sign Company—W. C. Grant, president of the Commercial Sign Company of Ashtabula, Ohio, exhibited a lobby display rack and changeable letter sign in Room 1817.

Charles L. Kiewert Company—Bio-Carbons, already well known to the trade, were displayed in Room 1819, in conjunction with Siemens' Arc Lamps. Mr. Robert W. Kiewert and Mr. George F. Kiewert were in charge of the display which was a very popular one. Mr. A. F. Salomon of Chicago, represented H. M. Hirschberg & Co., of New York, dealers in the Siemens Lamps.

Pyrene Company—Mr. J. D. Cole demonstrated the efficacy of Pyrene as an extinguisher of film fires in Room 1825. This is a very convenient and effective appliance and is especially adapted for use in operating rooms.

International News Service—Lafayette M. Davis occupied Room 1853 with a display of International News Service and Current Event Slides and Lobby Displays. He also had the Pathe Weekly Lobby Display.

Mirror Screen Company—Although busy with the work of the convention , Mr. F. J. Rembusch found time to expound the virtues of the famous Mirror Screen, which was demonstrated in Room 1849. When Mr. Rembusch was not present he was ably represented by Mr. F. P. Bloomfield, a most courteous and able demonstrater.

Novelty Slide Company—Thomas G. White, of Chicago, represented the Novelty Slide Company of New York in Room 1822. Announcement slides, advertising slides and pictures of the players attracted considerable attention.

Saluform Products Company—A ventilating and air purifying device was displayed in Room 1822 by E. L. Gross, representing the Saluform Products Co., of Chicago.

Kansas City Slide Company—The display of advertising, announcement and photoplayer slides made by the Kansas City Slide Company, of Kansas City, Mo., attracted a great deal of attention. One feature worthy of mention was a novelty clock slide with movable hands which do not come loose. The exhibit was in Room 1807, and a "land-office" business was transacted all through the convention.

Exhibitors Advertising Company—V. R. Ronk and C. C. Pyle had charge of this firm's exhibit in Room 1806, assisted by Herman Lewis, Harry Slush and Charles J. McKinney. The company is located in Chicago and carries a line of licensed posters and photoplayer slides. Its Licensed Poster System is one of the best. This company is also handling a new ticket registering device.

Russell & Erwin Mfg. Company—W. P. Hudson demonstrated the virtues of a "panic door" made by the Russell & Erwin Company of New Britain, Conn. This door is so constructed as to open when pressure is exerted on a bar across the door. An idea worth investigating.

National Waterproof Film Company—W. A. Daniels, well known to most of the trade, had his film washing machine in Room 1812. He was assisted by Ben W. Beadell. Mr. Daniels always had an interested crowd of exhibitors in his room.

Enterprise Optical Company—Motiograph, with all its latest features, was displayed in Room 1820. Mr. L. A. Woodward was in charge of the display, assisted by F. A. Clark and F. W. Horn. It was one of the busiest corners of the manufacturers' midway. All the nice points of this popular machine with its 1913 improvements were carefully examined and as carefully explained. A very satisfactory exhibit.

Nicholas Power Company—The renowned Power's Cameragraph No. 6A was located in Room 1818. Mr. H. B. Coles, General Sales Manager from the New York Office, was in charge, assisted by F. W. Swett. Large interest was shown in this deservedly popular projector, and both Mr. Coles and Mr. Swett had all they could do to keep up with the demands for information.

American Moving Picture Machine Company—Eric Morrison of New York, had charge of the display of the Standard machine in Room 1826. He was never in want for an audience, and many compliments were paid to his ability as a demonstrator as well as to the machine, which is very popular throughout the middle west.

Precision Machine Company—J. E. Robin had the "Simplex" machine on demonstration in Room 1821. He is a good demonstrator and made many friends for his excellent projector. Many compliments were paid the "Simplex" for its good work at Orchestra Hall.

Essanay Film Manufacturing Company—The staff of the Essanay Company in charge of V. R. Day and Charles F. Stark met all comers at Room 1811, where all kinds of good cheer were dispensed to the weary pilgrim. At one time this spot was the most popular in the La Salle Hotel and there was seldom a time that Room 1811 was not crowded like the lemonade stand at a county fair. Essanay really led the procession of entertainers.

Film Supply Company—Headquarters of this branch of the independent interests was located at Room 408, somewhat out of the main push, but quite popular at that. It was a busy place at most any time, since it was the editorial rooms of the Film Supply Daily, issued by Editors Raver and Magie with the able assistance of Farnham and McArdle of the New York Morning Telegraph and Bert Adler of the Thanhouser Company. Some paper, that F. S. Daily.

Universal Film Manufacturing Company—Room 1848 was just about the busiest spot on the 18th floor of the LaSalle. Here it was that Joe Brandt, Joe Engel and Aubrey Kennedy, assisted by several handsome stenographers, edited the Universal Daily. We have got to hand it to this hustling trio for the enterprise they exhibited. They got on the job as soon as they stepped off the train and by midnight of Monday they were passing copies of the Universal Daily. The Film Supply crowd had planned a similar stunt on their way to Chicago, but Brandt, Engel and Kennedy beat them to it. On Tuesday morning they were up bright and early and met the Cincinnati delegation at the train with a brass band; then they followed up their hand by chartering a boat and taking about 1500 delegates and their friends out on the lake. But on this they stubbed their toes—think of 1500 picture people drifting about Lake Michigan for three hours with nary a soda water fountain within swimming distance.

Trade papers were well represented. The Mirror had an able hustler in Mr. Beecroft; J. H. Mayer of Cincinnati, and C. J. VerHalen of Chicago, represented the Billboard, which had Room 1804. Motograph was in Room 1813, where E. J. Mock, Paul H. Woodruff, A. L. Haase and John B. Rathbun extended a glad hand to visitors. Warren Patrick had the Clipper in tow. The Morning Telegraph of New York was ably represented by two eminently popular newspapermen, Joseph D. McArdle and Joseph White Farnham, both from the New York office, and W. K. Hollander of Chicago. Their headquarters in Room 412 was popular at any hour.

The Moving Picture World had Room 1846 and there was a constant stream of visitors coming and going. The Chicago staff, consisting of James S. McQuade, G. P. von Harleman, and G. M. Gabe, assisted by W. Stephen Bush and James L. Hoff from the New York office, were well distributed about the hotel.

The Moving Picture News was represented by its editor.

Notes.

W. J. Turner, representing the Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Company of Rochester, N. Y., was an interested spectator of the proceedings at the convention. Gundlach-Manhattan Lenses are popular with exhibitors.

* * *

C. Lang Cobb, jr., was extremely liberal with his near-gold coin, which he distributed broadcast about the hotel. To meet Cobb was to receive some of his foolish money. But Cobb let 'em all know that Reliance pictures were on the program.

NEW YORK EXHIBITORS' BOARD MEETING.

A meeting of the State and Local Board of Directors will take place at the meeting rooms of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of New York, No. 136 Third Avenue, on Wednesday, August 21st, at 11 a. m., to commence work and select committees to make arrangements for the National and State conventions, which will be held at the Grand Central Palace, New York City, July 7th, 1913.

IMPRESSIONS OF THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

Upon the floor of every convention and about its lobbies there is one chamber always for which no rent is paid and in which Dame Rumor holds her court. Dame Rumor was very busy every day of the convention and has not even yet subsided. No particular harm has resulted from the many wild rumors floating about, but Dame Rumor would have had very little to busy herself with had it not been for the rule to exclude the representatives of the press from the deliberations of the convention. The convention itself did by no means seem unanimous on the question of barring the reporters from the sessions; on the contrary, at least a score of delegates to whom the writer addressed himself on this question were very emphatic in their opinion that the press should have been admitted to every session. It is needless to say that the reporters did not want to attend the meetings of the convention to satisfy their own curiosity; they were there in a representative capacity. The fifteen thousand exhibitors, most of whom read the Moving Picture World, were naturally interested in the proceedings of the convention. The questions of censorship, or of service, or of organization, etc., are all public questions and had best been discussed in the presence and hearing of the press. If the object of excluding the press was to smother the news, it failed, of course. Whether the press is present officially or not, it always manages to obtain the news. For that is one of its duties and one of the reasons of its existence.

The press of Chicago, which in the beginning had paid no attention whatever to the convention, changed its attitude during the last few days by printing stories of fierce factional fights, which were wholly without foundation. The only thing approaching the dignity of even a friendly dispute resulted from the desire of a majority of exhibitors to suspend business on Friday afternoon and accept the invitation of the Selig studio to become its guests. The official register of the Selig offices shows the arrival of 1,100 delegates and other friends of the motion picture. Nothing was enjoyed more keenly by the visitors to the studio than the performance of the Indians. As Brother Nixon explained to the wondering multitude, "these Indians belong to the Winnebago tribe and were guaranteed to be full-blooded redmen and red-women and papooses." There were dancing and singing in which every member of the camp joined with unrestrained enthusiasm and which drew an enormous crowd around them. One of the Indians who looked remarkably like Pierpont Morgan is said to be the richest Indian in this nation, but he joined in the exercises with the same vim as the rest. The al fresco lunch served in a nearby grove was greatly enjoyed by everybody.

The banquet on Friday night was a most happy and fitting conclusion. The spirit that prevailed was one of cheerful brotherhood. Great credit is due to the ladies who graced the occasion with their presence. The leading ladies from the Selig studio, escorted by Mr. Schuyler Colfax, a son of the famous speaker of the House of Representatives, occupied a special section in the banquet hall and were, as they deserved to be, the cynosure of all eyes.

The convention left none but pleasant memories. As the delegates and their numerous friends and the guests of the convention started on their homeward journey, the opinion was expressed freely that the convention had been a decided success. Everybody is looking forward with great anticipation to the next convention, which will be held in New York City. The New York delegation made such a fine and creditable showing that they helped materially in inducing the convention to hold its next meeting in New York City. There is every reason to believe that the next convention will exceed in attendance and importance the meeting which has just come to such a pleasing and harmonious end.

W. STEPHEN BUSH.

GEORGE TERWILLIGER LEAVES RELIANCE.

After August 31 the many friends of George Terwilliger, scenario editor of the Reliance Moving Picture Company, will miss him when they visit the Reliance studio, for George is going away. For two years he has been doing the publicity work there, besides editing and writing scenarios, and everybody likes him. During his service at the Reliance Mr. Terwilliger has written at least one half of all the stories for the regular releases. His "Bedelia" stories, featuring Tony O'Sullivan, were surely mirth provokers, and the splendid Natural History series of the Reliance owes much of its interest and educational value to his careful personal supervision.

First of all Mr. Terwilliger will take a couple of weeks' vacation, after which he will decide on the better of several promising propositions that have been made to him. He is a conscientious, painstaking gentleman and the Moving Picture World wishes him success.

Coming—NEW YORK EXHIBITORS' BALL—Coming.

Keep Thursday evening, November 14 open. That's the big day. Or, we should say, the large evening. The New York City Exhibitors' League is going to hold another entertainment and dance. Now anyone who attended the last ball of the New York Exhibitors' League does not have to be told what kind of an affair it was. They know. In fact, they will never forget it. Those who stayed away from it were mighty sorry they did when they heard what a glorious success it was. It was the largest gathering of motion picture people there ever was, up to that time, and it is not so certain that the recent Chicago convention surpassed it in point of numbers.

This next ball is going to be just as good, if not better. The former soiree was held at the Palm Garden, but it is not decided at this writing whether to hold the next gathering there or elsewhere. The New York exhibitors want a bigger place if they can get it. Two thousand people slightly crowded the Palm Garden last time.

Mr. A. Coleman, chairman of the entertainment committee, is busy these days digging up features for the evening. Already he reports that the Hon. John A. Dix, Governor of New York, has stated his intention of being present if official business does not interfere. Mr. Wm. N. Selig, of the Selig Polyscope Company, Chicago, has promised to send on his Eastern comedy company to take part in the entertainment. Mr. Siegmund Lubin, president of the Lubin Manufacturing Company, has likewise promised to bring a large number of his actors over from Philadelphia, and will himself be present, with members of his staff. Mr. M. A. Neff, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, will be there, and United States Senator Jos. B. Foraker, of Ohio, counsel for the National Organization of Exhibitors, will positively be at the ball. He is refusing all other invitations for Thursday evening, November 14th. Those who did not attend the last reception of the New York exhibitors are advised to turn back to the Moving Picture World of February 10, 1912, and see what they missed.

FLICKERS.

Mr. John R. Rock and wife, of Chicago, are to visit his father, William T. Rock, of the Vitagraph Co., and his sister, Mrs. Doc. Willet.

* * *

In a recent interview with P. P. Craft, president of the Monopol Film Company, he requested that the following news be published:

"While exhibiting in La Crosse, Wis., Aug. 15th, the Buffalo Bill Wild West Show Co. was served with notice of a suit for $100,000 damages for alleged libel upon the Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill Film Company, a concern operated by P. P. Craft and P. A. Powers, who allege their business was damaged when Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill published advertisements warning exhibitors against using their films. Litigation brought by Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill to prevent Craft and Powers from using the Wild West films is still pending in the higher courts."

* * *

While in the Eclair offices this week I was very glad to meet Mr. C. Jourjon, president of the Eclair Co. Having just arrived from Paris, Mr. Jourjon was too busy to be interviewed. He said he still had his sea legs on, but would have a lot to say very soon. Suffice it to say, there are many anxious ears waiting for the announcement.

* * *

At the offices of the Universal Feature Film Co., 225 West 42nd St., I was introduced to Mr. Herman Rifkin, who is to handle the Universal Features in New England. Mr. Rifkin is stopping temporarily at No. 5 Monteith St., Brooklyn, and is very enthusiastic over the outlook for Universal Features in his territory. He will make his headquarters in Boston, Mass., and as soon as he gets his rugs on the floor, and the shades on the windows, he will have something big to say that will interest all New England readers of the Moving Picture World.

* * *

I met John Warren, official scribe for the Victor Film Mfg. Co., on the street and hardly recognized him with his coat of tan and lately acquired avoirdupois. It's surprising what a roll of lucre and a few weeks at the seashore will do to a man's appearance.

MAC.

PICTURES NOW UNDER COPYRIGHT PROTECTION.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19th, 1912.—The Senate passed the House bill putting moving pictures under the distinct protection of the copyright laws of the U. S. Instead of providing for a fine for each moving picture which infringes another, the bill provides that in case of an innocent infringement, the total amount of damages shall not exceed $100.

A Love Story of Old Japan.

A Recent Picture of Much Merit and Some Thoughts on Japanese Acting.

By Hanford C. Judson.

An exceptionally beautiful picture, "A Love Story of Old Japan," was released by the C. G. P. C., on August 16. It is a hand-colored film, made in Japan and acted by Japanese artists of ability. The story is a simple love tale. Five players take part in it; the heroine, her father, her two lovers and a brigand of the mountains. One lover, who is jealous, hires the mountain free lance to carry off the girl. She is captured in her home, faints and is borne away to the rocky cave. But when the brigand sees her face he, too, falls in love with her, and protects her from the lover who had had her abducted, and who soon appears. There is a heated parley at the entrance to the cave, a haughty returning of the gold coins given for her capture, and a very spirited jiu-jitsu duel in which the brigand kills the lover. The girl is then returned to her father and the lover of her choice.

The picture's charm lies in grace and in perfume rather than in stern dramatic energy or even in convincing realism. It tells a thoroughly Japanese story; but its object is not to illustrate a phase of external life in the flowery kingdom; it catches an inner mood. Its object is romance and its appeal is to the soul. Entirely free from mawkishness and sentimentality, and set in pretty scenes the effect it has is like that of a clover-scented breeze. This picture, as a true romance, appeals to the chivalrous sense that valor and courtesy go together. But where they really are found together they make this work-a-day world of ours seem for a moment like a fairyland, and so a picture that desires to create a romantic atmosphere does not have to make all its incidents convincing to the common light of day. The laws of art that bind it in another direction are every whit as exacting. The artist usually deals with types rather than with characters; he desires to show the action as springing from an ideal, not from a special motive. He makes use of two prominent elements; the sentiment he wants to paint, and its counter-sentiment. His result is to be something graceful; he can use roughness only as a background. The producer has skillfully hidden his canvas.

The means used to give us the changing emotions created by the situation are happy. It it an extremely well-acted picture. The players represent its action by what seems to be conventional pantomime and it is marvelously effective. Every now and then we notice traces of conventional pantomime in pictures made in this country, and more often in those made in Europe. We feel safe in saying that it never is effective; it seems unnatural, stilted and decidedly takes from the effect. Our pantomimes, when they were in their prime, were common in shows given at fairs. Harlequin appeared in most of them, or Punchinello with Columbine. Their story was made plain on tip-toe, as it were, with pirouetting, dancing, funny tumbling and other kinds of clown work. Some of the worst acting that we see to-day is bad chiefly because it is still tinctured with these frills. Some people think that is the proper way to act before a motion picture camera. Yet, as we said, this picture is acted in what seems to be pantomime and we feel that, without it, it would have seemed bald. This acting is extremely graceful. It is typically Japanese; yet is not an exact copy of everyday deportment. It is art. Art does not copy life; life seems to copy it. In American pictures, one often is wearied by long, unintelligible conversations. These are accurately copying life, but they are not art. In this picture there are no obscure conversations; the action is wholly acting and it is art. The acting in pictures on this side of the Atlantic is, as a whole, more effective, we think, than that in many pictures made in Europe; it is apt to be more unconstrained. Because we aim at naturalness in effect, long conversations have crept in. They are the bane of American photoplays. It would never do to imitate the Japanese method for American action, but a new convention of acting is desired, fit for us, and which would give us more freedom.

HANFORD C. JUDSON.

S. Lubin Buys $100,000 Estate.

"Betzwood," the 250-acre country seat of the late John F. Betz, has been recently purchased at a price of $100,000 by Mr. Seigmund Lubin, president of the Lubin Manufacturing Company, of Philadelphia. "Betzwood" is situated on the Schuylkill in the suburbs of Philadelphia. As the accompanying illustrations will show, the estate is a magnificent expanse of architectural and natural beauty. Its original cost was far in excess of the price paid by Mr. Lubin. "Betzwood" is a small city in itself, being equipped with workshops of the various trades, such as blacksmithing, woodworking, painting, machine shop, dairying, horticulture, farming, quarrying, etc.

The estate, of course, will be used in summertime, and often in winter, as a part of the regular Lubin moving picture equipment. The landscapes are many and varied, and there is enough natural beauty on the place to provide the Lubin pictures with pretty and exclusive backgrounds for many years to come. There are many quaint bits of architecture on the place that are decidedly romantic in character. These will not only be used as picture settings, but will be used in quartering the 600 employes of the Lubin Company during the summer season.

The largest structure on the grounds is the Betz mansion, which is a house of a hundred rooms, or more. Here will be quartered the professional and business departments of the company, and, as might be expected, Mr. Lubin and his family will occupy a certain portion of it themselves as their summer home. In effect the Lubin Company when quartered here will be one large family having a common interest. On the spacious lawn before the mansion there is room for numerous tennis courts and baseball diamonds. The Schuylkill River, running through the estate, will afford a splendid opportunity for those of the company who are fond of swimming and boating. Members of the company will be rather envied their good fortune in having such a delightful engagement.

The Schuylkill River will, of course, play a prominent part in the Lubin pictures, both in the dramas and comedies. The trees on the estate are not common every-day American trees, such as we are accustomed to seeing. Every one of them was brought from Germany by Mr. Betz, and planted and raised by him. Mr. Lubin, being himself a native of Germany, will probably be very proud of these trees, and if any trespasser should attempt to sink his axe into one of them, it is quite likely that Mr. Lubin will immediately appear and recite the beautiful lines of "Woodman, Spare That Tree," with variations and ad libitums in the imperative mode.

The accompanying illustrations show less than half of the various buildings on the estate, and only a minute proportion of the beauty spots that are profusely scattered over the place. In addition a large modern, fully equipped studio will be erected on the estate which by its completeness may render the present Philadelphia studio entirely superfluous, in which case "Betzwood" will become an all-year resort. When contemplated plans are carried into effect it is estimated that the new Lubin home will represent an outlay of $1,000,000, and without a doubt it will be one of the greatest picture plants in the world.

Scenes at "Betzwood," the Magnificent Estate of the Late John F. Betz, Purchased by Mr. S. Lubin.

Scenes at "Betzwood," the Magnificent Estate of the Late John F. Betz, Purchased by Mr. S. Lubin.

The Moving Picture Educator

The great display of educational cinematograph in London (of which notice announcing the project has previously appeared) took place on the 26th of July and was more than a pronounced success; a London paper calls it a "distinctive and memorable success." The outcome of this exhibition is spoken of as having afforded "educational authorities an opportunity to give official expression to a common knowledge felt unofficially for a long time past." It is now predicted that the installation of the cinematograph is a foregone certainty in every Government school in London, if not in the Kingdom. There can be no doubt that on this side of the Atlantic this will be looked upon as a most acceptable advance along lines already laid down in this country, and only awaiting some definite movement to give them shape and bring them to a successful and definite plan for general adoption.

* * *

"The Black Sheep" (Vitagraph) is mentioned here because, while somewhat of an old story it has some clean, strong, moral points. The act whereby the daughter of the "black sheep" of the family, forsakes her uncle's luxurious surroundings to redeem her father, is a commendable point, as is also the test of true and personal affection shown by her lover, who joins with her in her determination while his rival discards her when he finds out that her father is not rich. These properly balanced positive and negative actions are always strong points of influence on young people who see the pictures.

* * *

"Memories" (Pathe) is a distinct lesson revealing the dire result of fickle affection on a man who after returning from the war—time 1861—65—finds his lady love affianced to a former rival; a life wasted by drink is the result, until old age comes when poetry and picture portray the whole story. The double pictures are remarkably clear and the story well told:—but a child remarked to the writer "what good steady handwriting for a trembling old man."

The C. G. P. C. continues a steady release of educational pictures for which they deserve both thanks and congratulatory praise. One seen recently by the writer "Culture of Manioc, and the Making of Tapioca in the Philippines" is another of those instructive pictures of the wonderful revelations concerning the origin of a commonplace domestic article. To many it is surprising to know that tapioca is a root and not a grain as commonly believed. The process of shredding and washing is very like paper making, while the treading out with bare feet will perhaps not encourage the appetite to the sensitively inclined. The rivers and canals of Siam reveal a new country and show to what extent the C. G. P. C. is going to bring both far off countries and their industries to our notice. The dates of these releases are of little importance; they are standard pictures for continuous use.

* * *

A double piece of practical education was witnessed in New York recently, when a lady representative of the Society of Good Cheer invaded the Italian district, and from her automobile distributed one thousand tooth brushes among the scrambling children.

This practical hygienic educating of the masses is commendable, its relation to cinematography lies in the fact that a moving picture machine was present to film the occasion for other purposes. The program as arranged in a scenario was not carried out, as so soon as the thousands of youngsters realized what they were to receive they arranged in the mad scramble. Their own scenario, and a film far more natural and less formal than contemplated is the result, and practical, hygienic moving pictures received an enthusiastic impetus.

* * *

Perhaps the strangest and most unadulterated description of the moving picture is that given by a Hindoo lady of rank, who traveled from Bombay to the tomb of Mohammed in Mecca. "When at Port Said," she says, "we were taken in a carriage that went very fast, without any animal drawing it. I forget what they called it. We were then taken in a place where all had to sit in the dark. Then we saw on the wall right in front of us, people moving and running after each other and falling, while some seemed to be killing others, but we could see it was not real; they were pictures that were moving and looked like real, but they did not speak. I got very frightened and wanted to leave."

This crude, candid description from a mind narrowed only to Orientalism, must have been much broadened by this first experience of the automobile and the cinematograph; the story also shows how these two modern inventions are now found in every seeming out-of-the-way place; proving beyond doubt their universal value and application.

* * *

Only recently on these pages has it been shown how the educational film continues in use when others have passed into oblivion; it is worth noticing that the series of social life pictures first used in New York more than a year ago, have been in constant use in all parts of the country ever since, especially at conferences. They are now being exhibited without charge in the open air, under the supervision of the park authorities in New York city, being taken from one park to another so that all classes of people may become familiar with them and benefited thereby. These pictures were used at the recent Red Cross conference in Washington, where also "first-aid to the injured" pictures were shown. The value of the educational picture was much praised at this conference, where delegates from all parts of the world were present.

* * *

Suitable portions of Charles Dickens' famous works are now passing into the film; surely no writer offers so great and thorough a variety of characters.

The great value of the Dickens stories to the social well being of the London of his times is inestimable, that the principles involved are equally valuable to-day is proved by the eagerness with which his works are read, and the great hold they still have on the public mind. The "Pickwick Papers" possess a strange blend of humorous and natural life; the forthcoming section of the "Bardell and Pickwick Breach of Promise Case," by the Edison Company, will revive that quaint and illustrative court scene, which brought to light many a hidden fault, and without sensationalism or "yellow" methods, did much good and remedied many evils; we cannot have too many Dickens pictures.

* * *

Just at this time, when the law authorities of New York are driving the "loan sharks" either to jail or out of business, the Vitagraph film entitled "Vultures and Doves" is very timely and appropriate, and may do much good. There are many people, especially the financially crippled poor, who need to be educated to the deceitful tactics of those who, under the pretense of helping, are planning to rob. The story as told in this Vitagraph film is very real and portrays not one instance, but perhaps scores of hapless, helpless victims of these vicious and nefarious schemers. It is to be hoped that this picture may have a long life and a far-reaching influence wherever its lesson can do good.

* * *

The Eclair Company is to be commended for keeping the educational film as a steady and constant release. Even though of diversified subjects, they will ultimately form a valuable series. Among the latest noticed are "An Arabian Theater," weird and droll in its native surroundings, and "Picturesque Portugal" is a pleasing scenic addition. This country is little known by pictures in any form, and this film brings to the front both an ancient and interesting country, together with its beauty spots.

In preparing "Robin Hood," the Eclair people are certainly ambitious, as, without doubt, the subject presents many difficulties beclouded by time and tradition, judging by the announced outline. The presentation is along meritorious lines, and will no doubt measure up to its promises.

"THE POWER OF DESTRUCTION"

(Universal Features).

Reviewed by G. F. Blaisdell.

WHEN a great actress swims into a man's ken, it is with trepidation that he approaches or should approach the task of putting down in cold type his impressions of her work. The writer on Monday last, through the courtesy of Mr. Tippett, of Universal Features, was permitted to see two pictures about to be placed on the American market. The first was "A Parisian Stage Tragedy." But that, as Mr. Kipling frequently says and as others before him had said, is another story—which will be referred to in another issue. The first picture exhibited is here mentioned because it served to introduce to one picture lover a young woman who is going to be much talked about in countries other than her own. There she already is famous.

Miss Cecile Guyon plays leading roles in du Theatre de la Renaissance and Theatre Vaudeville. She has won a Paris Conservatory contest, a most distinguished honor in Europe. Also it is said, and it is easily believed—it would be more than strange were it otherwise—that she is one of the highest salaried of French picture actresses. There will be no attempt on the part of this writer especially to describe Miss Guyon's work. There is one particular, however, which should here be set down—and that is her apparent youth. She seems to be well within the first quarter-century mark. This fact will furnish cause for congratulation to all picture lovers. It means, if we may judge Miss Guyon by other great actresses, and particularly great French actresses, that the many years in front of this young woman are going to mark steady progression in her art.

Scene from "The Power of Destruction" (Universal Feature).

"The Power of Destruction" tells, in three reels, a story of a family divided against itself. The underlying theme is the cupidity of a brother-in-law—his elation at first over a great discovery by his sister's husband and his bitter disappointment at the sudden determination of his relative to destroy all trace of his invention, firm in the belief that mankind in general would be better off without his wonderful explosive than to be subject in case of war to its terrible destructiveness. It is a story with many strong situations, and the company that has been selected to portray it adequately and competently carries out the design of the author. Among the more thrilling scenes are the charge by the brother-in-law that the chemist is mad; the denunciation of the wife of the chemist by her daughter, and in this scene Miss Guyon, who portrays the latter, is at her best; the ensuing struggle of the father to escape the clutches of the employees of the unscrupulous mad-house keeper; the antics of the lunatics in the yard of the asylum; the gathering around the chemist of all the unfortunates and his breaking down under the strain and fighting his way through them, only to collapse later when thrown into his cell; the escape from the asylum; the discovery by the daughter of the unbalanced mind of her father and his maniacal attack upon her; the struggle between the chemist and his brother-in-law, and the accidental explosion which wrecks the room, kills the good-for-nothing and restores the reason of the chemist; and the reunion of father and daughter—and the forgiveness of the wife.

Professor La Coutte has discovered a wonderful explosive. He is elated. So also are the members of his family—Mme. La Coutte, his wife; Carmen, their daughter, and her finance, Mareau; especially pleased is the brother-in-law of the chemist, Victor Dauchy, a well-dressed ne'er-do-well, who sees in the impending shower of gold a possibility of lining his own pockets through the aid of his sister. His dreams of golden days are rudely dispelled by the altruistic determination of the professor to destroy the sheets on which he had so painstakingly worked out his formula.

Dauchy loses no time in getting to work to circumvent the benevolent intentions of the chemist. By some means he involves his sister in the plot against her husband—by intimidation, apparently. He enlists the aid of a private madhouse keeper. The crooked alienist comes to the professor's home with his strong-arm men. Mme. La Coutte imprints a Judas-like kiss on the cheek of her husband and cajoles him. He smiles in his benevolent way. The smile fades, though, when the alienist, after an introduction, turns to Dauchy, and the latter loses no time in denouncing the chemist as a madman. The attendants seize the professor. Carmen is at her father's side, her right arm about his neck. Her left points straight at her mother, whom she denounces as being a party to the conspiracy.

Professor La Coutte goes to the asylum, a sane man among lunatics. We see him sitting apart, the horror of his situation increased by the pathetically grotesque figures about him. There are great generals, arctic explorers and princes—so they construe themselves. The professor tries to get word to the inspector. The attendants refuse to convey it. Finally, though, he gets a note to Carmen. Immediately Carmen tries to enter the asylum. She is repulsed and temporarily disheartened, but her courage does not fail her.

Scene from "The Power of Destruction" (Universal Feature).

In the asylum grounds bricklayers are at work. Carmen, accompanied by the ever-faithful Mareau, goes to them as they are eating their mid-day luncheon outside the grounds. She unfolds her plan to them after explaining the cause of her father's detention. They agree to help her. The following day Carmen is arrayed as a fruit-woman and she carries a basket. Under the fruit is a bricklayer's working garb. Mareau is dressed as a bricklayer. The two accompany the mechanics as they return to work from their lunch. They pass the gates without discovery. Carmen seeks her father. She finds him sitting apart, as always, from the other inmates. Cautiously, she puts her finger to her lips. She leads her father to the rear of the asylum. A flight of steps leads into the cellar. She hastily guides her father below, where it is the work of a moment to transform him. The alienist stands at the entrance of the asylum and watches Mareau, accompanied by Professor La Coutte, pass from the grounds ostensibly to bring back a ladder. Carmen, with her basket, is just behind them. And then—straight home, where there is a reunion, all the happier by reason of the temporary absence of the mother.

The professor's mind has suffered under the horrors of his restraint It is the daughter who is the first to note the sinister symptoms—and who is the first to feel the weight of his maniacal strength. We see the father affectionately greet his daughter. Something in his manner causes her to watch him closely. She sees the wild look in the eyes, the convulsive, throat-clutching torture of the fingers.

Carmen shrank from her father. He grinned and reached out for her. Pleading with him, yet keeping just out of his reach; pushing chairs between them and calling for assistance, she eluded him for a minute. Passers-by attracted by the cries broke in and saved her.

It was not unnatural perhaps that the professor should in his lucid moments turn to subjects which in other days had engrossed so much of his thought. Dauchy had never been able to supply the missing link in the composition of the explosive. The professor enters his laboratory and begins work. He hears someone approaching and crawls under the table. Dauchy and his sister, the professor's wife, enter. Dauchy putters away at the chemicals. The chemist softly creeps out from under the table and greets his wife as if relations were normal and happy. She is horrified. The brother-in-law asks about the explosive. La Coutte proceeds to show him how it is mixed. He takes from one bottle and then from another; from this tube and from that tube. Dauchy seeks to obtain possession of the finished product. La Coutte denies him. There is a struggle for the possession of the flask containing the composition. La Coutte all the while is warning Dauchy of the consequences of breaking the glass container. There is clever dodging on the part of La Coutte, but the flask comes in contact with the corner of a table. An explosion follows.

Dauchy is dead. La Coutte is stunned. It is Carmen who discovers the beneficent result of the concussion. Her father's reason is restored. Her joy is unbounded. Her arms are tightly wound about her father's neck. Mareau is by the side of father and daughter.

To a man who would give up riches rather than impose upon humanity what he feared might under conceivable circumstances prove a scourge it is but natural that he should exemplify the truth of that old, yet always young, that immortal utterance of Alexander Pope: To err is human, to forgive divine.

Mme. La Coutte joins the little group. She craves forgiveness. The professor takes her in his arms.

Suit Against The Patents Company

The Federal Government Takes Action in the Federal Courts.

A PETITION has been filed in a federal court in the city of Philadelphia, praying for the dissolution of the Motion Picture Patents Company, organized under the laws of the state of New Jersey, and the General Film Company, organized under the laws of the state of Maine All the manufacturers composing the Motion Picture Patents Company are also named as parties defendant. On the petition appear the names of United States District Attorney John C. Swartley, Special Assistants to the Attorney General Edwin P. Grosvenor and James A. Fowler. A writ was duly issued out of the Court and placed in the hands of a federal marshal, who will serve each of the defendants. So far none of the defendants have been actually served. The writ is returnable for the October term of the Court.

The Government's petition avers that between 2,500.000 and 3,000,000 feet of pictures are made and distributed annually to the exhibitors all over the country. The Government declares that a sum greatly in excess of $100,000,000 has been invested in the different branches of the business. The defendants control, it is further alleged, seventy to eighty per cent of the film business.

Under agreements alleged to have been entered into by the defendants, all patents relating to the motion picture business were transferred to the Motion Picture Patents Company and others were acquired by that company. Through this company, which the government contends reserved the sole authority to issue licenses to manufacturers and exhibitors, it is alleged the defendants secured the power to determine who shall be excluded from it.

"Defendants, through the Patents Company," the petition adds, "were enabled to and did determine whether new motion picture theatres should or should not be opened and whether one should be closed, although the defendants had no proprietary interest in such theaters."

The Government contends that the General Film Company has acquired the business of every rental exchange in the country, except one, at a cost of $2,243,089 in cash and $794,800 in preferred stock.

By numerous agreements between the defendants, the Government adds, restrictions and unlawful restraints were dovetailed into each other in such a manner that the manufacturer, distributor and exhibitor is compelled to use all or none of the machines covered by the patents held by the Motion Picture Patents Company.

It is also alleged that the defendants have prevented the importation of foreign films, except in small weekly quantities by two of the defendant companies.

The suit is regarded by the Department of Justice as one of its most important moves under the Sherman law, as it squarely asks for a judicial determination of the relation of that statute to the patent laws. The suit will test the right of corporations and individuals to join their respective patent monopolies into one big monopoly through alleged combinations and agreements.

Head of Itala Film Company Sails

After a short stay of only a week in America, Sig. Carlo Sciamengo returned August 13 to Torino, Italy, which is the headquarters of the Itala Film Company, represented by him during his sojourn in New York. We had the pleasure of interviewing him at the Hotel Plaza, where he was stopping. He is in character very much different from the usual type of swarthy Italian that Americans are accustomed to seeing. His hair and mustache are a soft brown, which with his pink complexion and perfect teeth make him very attractive, while his manner and well-spoken English stamp him as an Italian of the higher class, of which there are indeed too few to be found in this country.

Sig. Sciamengo's visit to America was for the purpose of arranging a new agency for the Itala films. The former agreement with the New York Motion Picture Co. was terminated amicably between the Itala Company and Mr. Bauman, and the severance was for the reason that the latter found that his many business affairs precluded his handling any foreign product and give it the necessary amount of attention. The Itala Film Co. will still continue as the European agent of the "101"-Bison pictures. The new American representative of Itala Films will be Mr. Harry Raver, manager of the Film Supply Company, who will conduct the Itala business independently of his official connection with the Film Supply.

Contrary to general belief, the Itala Film Company is not a stock company but a plain partnership consisting of Sigs. Sciamengo and Pastrone. The head of the firm was hurrying home because he believes that to produce the best results the guiding spirits must not go away and leave the factory in the hands of lieutenants. He is a great believer in the theory that if you want a thing done well you must do it yourself. Quality is his watchword. The price a film brings is plainly a secondary consideration with him. For several months past the Itala films had practically disappeared from the American market, and many in the trade were wondering what had become of them; but the facts are, as most well-posted men surmised, that the Italian film firm had gone in for feature pictures. They have been turning out big subjects and some of them are already on exhibition in Europe. These features will soon arrive in America together with others that are now practically finished.

The Itala Company is making preparations to excel if possible anything in feature pictures that has yet been made. As a first step in that direction, they have secured the services of Italy's foremost actor, Sig. Ermete Zacconi, for their feature pictures. To give an idea of the value of his work, that gentleman has only recently refused an offer to appear in Cape Town for sixty days at $1,000 per day, and from that it can be imagined that the Itala is paying him a handsome sum.

Speaking about American pictures in his country, Mr. Sciamengo says that few of them are seen, with the exception of one or two well-known brands, one Licensed and the other Independent. "Western" pictures do not go very well with the peasant class because they are not familiar with the cowboy mode of life, but, oddly enough, the educated class understands and likes them.

Mr. Sciamengo informed us that the censor idea had struck Italy rather hard quite recently, as well as most other parts of Europe. There was a time in Italy when the authorities would stand for murder and other such affairs in pictures, but no more. There is better money in the film line in America, he avers, because there are more cities. In Europe the population is spread over the land, whereas here the people cluster more in the cities. This makes it hazardous for one to open a picture theater there in any but the few large cities. It also limits the demand for reels, hence the manufacturing branch is circumscribed. There are better programs over there, however, because all pictures sell on their merits and the public will quickly repudiate a house that exhibits inferior pictures.

It is the intention of the Itala people to resume at once putting out a regular one-reel release once a week, with an additional feature picture about once a month.

I. C. OES SAILING FOR COPENHAGEN.

On August 27, Mr. Ingvald C. Oes will start across the Atlantic on a business trip to the headquarters of the Great Northern Film Company at Copenhagen, Denmark. After making the rounds of some of the larger European cities, Mr. Oes will return in Santa Claus fashion, laden with choice two and three reel features for the American trade. He expects to return with at least a dozen high class products of the Great Northern brand.

OBSERVATIONS
BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

AS the summer rapidly closes so suggestions of various natures bearing upon the fall and winter season in picturedom multiply. They come from all quarters and angles. The manufacturer gives voice to what he thinks the exhibitor should do to make his place attractive and entertaining to the public, and what he should do to instill in the mind of the picture patrons that the "movies" are grander than ever. The exhibitor comes back with an equal number of hints to the manufacturers as to what they should do and what is expected of them to help the work along, and occasionally slips over a sharp rap to the exchanges over the manufacturers' shoulders, to arouse them to a more active realization of what the middleman can and should do.

* * *

Nothing new or novel has been heard in the line of these suggestions, but in some instances greater scope is given to certain ideas, notably the question of advertising. This is due to a recent resurrection of the question of newspaper advertising in connection with film productions—that is, advertising in the daily press—and it has brought out many arguments, pro and con. Somebody started the ball rolling again by pointing out that if arrangements could be made to supply the newspapers with newsy material bearing upon current events in the picture field the editors of the papers would welcome the contributions and most cheerfully publish them as a matter of news.

* * *

A prominent film manufacturer thought the idea an excellent one and said his company would heartily co-operate in such an undertaking if it was launched in a systematic and business-like way. The first step, he thought, should be a meeting of the representatives of all interested in the moving picture business, irrespective of branches or alliances, and the formation of a press bureau composed of people qualified to intelligently compile and prepare matter for publication. Manufacturers and exhibitors should co-operate actively in the work until the bureau of information is established, when they could retire and merely act occasionally in an advisory capacity.

* * *

This has met with warm approval in picturedom, but the newspapers have not been heard from thus far. What is known as the daily press is in many ways a peculiar institution. One of its striking characteristics is to carefully weigh all new ideas to see if there are any commercial possibilities. They publish news items bearing upon current events in church, theatrical and fraternal organizations, but jealously guard against anything that may have a strain of advertising in it. When anything of this character is detected a schedule of advertising rates is promptly forthcoming.

* * *

Now the proposition is presented; what can be furnished the newspapers that will not be construed as advertising matter, and which they cannot glean without the aid of the picture people's press bureau? After all, like many other things in this world, the public press is in business for revenue, and no opportunity to secure it is allowed to slip by. The first step before seriously undertaking the news venture, it would seem, would be to sound the newspapers as to the latitude that would be accorded by them to the picture press bureau. It is true that the daily press devotes space to items bearing upon theaters, their productions, and the movements of the people owning, managing and appearing in them, which at times are quite newsy and interesting; but, almost invariably, this is contingent upon the quantity of advertising done by the theatrical people, and the news items are condensed as much as possible, the extended notices being left to the professional publications that get the greater part of the theatrical advertising.

* * *

A well-known picture exhibitor who listened to views as given above was decisive in his statement that a grand opportunity was being missed by failure to get the daily press in line with the pictures as it is with other amusements, even should it be necessary to pave the way with advertising. He admitted that the publications devoted to the moving picture industry and the exhibition field are doing invaluable work, but argued that hundreds of thousands of people would be drawn into closer touch with the pictures if the newspapers would devote space to them similar to that given to other amusements. These people, he said, never see the publications devoted to the picture field. They look upon them more as trade journals and have not subscribed to them because they think the publications are of interest only to the people who are directly connected and interested in the moving picture business. These papers and magazines are gradually attaining a general circulation and have taken their place upon the newsstand, but for quick results the daily press is the key to the situation, the exhibitor said.

* * *

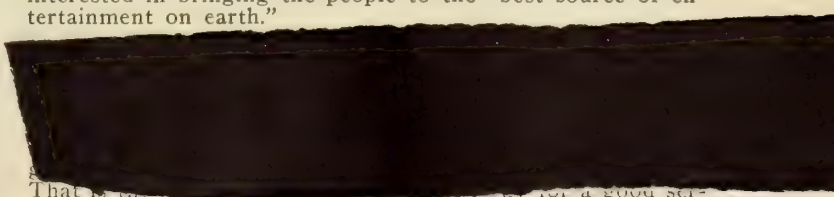
"I think," said another, "the manufacturers should allot a certain percentage of their receipts to advertising in the direction suggested. By calling attention of the public to some of the splendid photoplays that are now being put on the market they would excite the interest of many people of the better class who still look upon moving pictures as a rather inferior means of entertainment."

* * *

This declaration woke up a manufacturer who summarized his views in this strain: "There is no use in advertising anything if you do not tell the people where they can see it. The object, as I take it from the discussion, is to interest the amusement seeking people in film productions and get them to go to the theaters where they are exhibited. This is certainly beyond the scope of the manufacturers, as they have no means of telling when and where the exhibition of a particular subject is to take place. The exhibitor is the man behind the gun in such a case. He stands in the same position as the manager of a regular theater and, like him, is the only one who can tell the people what he has, or intends to have, as an attraction, more especially as he changes his program daily. So far as my vision goes, the only advertising an individual film manufacturer could do, other than that intended to reach exhibitors directly, would be something in the nature of this: 'If you want to see the best pictures see those made by ———,' or 'Patronize the houses that exhibit the ——— pictures," which is not in line with the point in discussion."

* * *

Now take your choice. To slightly alter the title of a popular song of the day "everybody is discussing it." Everybody agrees that news items in the daily press would be of great benefit to the exhibitors of the photoplays. How can it be accomplished? Let somebody offer a prize for the best solution of the problem. In default of this, there is a rare opportunity for voluntary suggestions from those who are interested in bringing the people to the "best source of entertainment on earth."



That is the ... for a good service, have competent people to put on the show and learn what your patrons want. If you do that the people soon learn where to find a good thing. The news item idea that you have been talking about is all right, but I can't get that advertising business through my nut. If I were a Marcus Loew or a Fox perhaps I could see through it. My house is not built that way and I don't think the advertising would bring me any more people from Hohokus than I'm getting now."

FINE NEW THEATER FOR FAIRBURY, NEB.

On September 2nd, Labor Day, Steele's Opera House will open at Fairbury, Neb., as a photoplay theater, in the finest of style. There will be occasional road attractions booked for the house, but pictures will be the regular thing. The house has been overhauled and remodeled at considerable expense, with the result that the people of Fairbury will have a theater that will be the equal of any in the larger Nebraska cities, and one of which they may feel proud.

The seating capacity is 637, including the balcony. Space has been set apart for a rest room for ladies and children. An orchestra of ten pieces will furnish the proper kind of music, under the direction of Mr. F. B. Furse. The management is determined to give the very best of service in every department, and will spare no expense in doing so. We are in receipt of a convincing circular announcement of the opening of the house that ought to draw patronage from the outset. The management will consist of C. W. Bartlett, lessee and business manager; Carl Bartlett, secretary and treasurer, and F. B. Furse, assistant business manager and musical director.

DOINGS AT LOS ANGELES.

PLANS for the biggest outdoor motion picture studio in the world have been completed by the Universal Company and will be carried out within the next year. The Universal Company has just purchased 12,000 acres of land in the San Fernando valley near the railroad station of Lankershim and about eight miles from Los Angeles.

Surveyors are now laying it out and preliminary construction work is in progress. The property, which has been named "Oak Crest," takes in among other natural objects, a mountain range, a river and a grove of timber. Leasing arrangements have also been made whereby the Universal Company will have the exclusive use of 8,000 acres of land adjoining its new property, with the privilege of purchase.

Those who have time and inclination may figure out for themselves that a tract of land eight miles long and four miles wide contains, in round figures, 20,000 acres, and this will give some idea of the magnitude of the Universal's new plant.

There are to be six mammoth stages capable of accommodating the biggest productions, and two of them will be of solid concrete, so that horses and heavy wagons may be used on them, and fires built if necessary. The stages are now being built.

At one place the river is to be dammed and an artificial lake constructed. A few buildings are now under way and others are to be erected without delay. The initial outlay will amount to about $60,000, but the plans call for the expenditure of more than $1,000,000 in the next five years.

It is the intention of the company to make the new plant merely an addition to its present holdings in this locality. In all probability the Western headquarters of the Universal Company will remain at the old Nestor plant, Sunset Boulevard and Gower Street, Hollywood. A large part of the Western output of the company is now being made at this studio, although the cameras will be sent out to the new place within a week.

On August 13 fifty Chimallo Indians from the Isleta reservation near Albuquerque, N. Mex., were moved to Oak Crest and installed in their new quarters. With them went 100 head of horses recently purchased in New Mexico. Accommodations for 300 people, in addition to the Indians, are being built and Mr. Gilmore, the Western general manager, says that the payroll will exceed $250,000 a year.

At the Hollywood branch of the Universal Company, which was the Nestor plant before the consolidation, there are now four companies at work daily. One is headed by Thomas Ricketts, director, and is engaged in putting on two-reel Western dramas. Margarita Fischer, Harry Pollard,

[redacted]

Straight Western [redacted] ing the attention of Milton H. Fahrney, who is directing the third company. His leading people include Dorothy Davenport, a niece of the famous actress Fanny Davenport, Harry Davies, Jack Conway and William Rhino.

Frank Montgomery, a new director, is putting out the two-reel spectacular and historical pictures which bear the Bison brand. In his company are Virginia Chester, William Bartlett, Warren Ellsworth, Roy Watson and Jane Keckley as the principals.

Exhibitors and others who have the welfare of the motion picture industry at heart will be glad to hear that the Universal Company has abandoned the Young Wild West series which was started by the Nestor Company. The change of policy resulted from the protests which were made by exhibitors all over the country who objected to the sensational films, and it shows that the exhibitors really can exert an influence when they try.

William Horsley, brother of David Horsley, one of the directors of the Universal Company, arrived from the East lately and is spending his time at the Hollywood studio, where he is exercising a sort of general supervision.

Richard Willis and James Dayton, the latter formerly of the Selig Company, are now looking after the photoplay department of the Western branch of the Universal. Recent announcement in the Moving Picture World of the company's need for plays of a certain kind brought in a great many extra scripts, but with four directors grinding away steadily and two more companies to be put to work soon in all probability, the demand is always a little ahead of the supply. Mr. Willis says that good scripts are so hard to get that he has been forced to devote a great deal of time to writing letters of encouragement and instruction to writers who show promise. The minimum price now being paid for acceptable scripts is $15 for split reels and $25 for full reels.

* * *

The Moving Picture Men's Association of Los Angeles, which has been asleep for more than a year, has finally been forced to wake up and begin hustling. More than once attention has been called in this column to the stupidity of the local exhibitors in failing to keep alive the organization which was formed here about two years ago, but which, since about two months after it was brought into existence, has been so shamefully neglected that there has not been a meeting for more than a year and all the officers had either resigned, moved out of town or died, or their terms had expired. The writer of this department has been predicting that, sooner or later, if the exhibitors persisted in neglecting their own organization and their own interests, the time would come when trouble would appear on the horizon and they would be only too glad to try to pull it together again.

Well, the expected happened. A slight epidemic of infantile paralysis in Los Angeles caused the health department to quarantine all the motion picture houses and forbid the exhibitors to admit any children under 15 years of age. The exhibitors were perfectly willing to co-operate with the health department until they found that the quarantine was not being generally observed and about the only class that was being held to it rigidly was the motion picture men who, having no organization, were unable to look out for their own interests. As soon as they learned that they were being imposed upon they began to talk about reviving the organization, but they did not get really excited about it until they discovered a conspiracy to use the epidemic scare as an excuse to put the motion picture houses under temporary police supervision which was later to be made permanent. The one thing that the exhibitors have been fighting has been the attempt to put them at the mercy of the police department.

The result of the agitation was that a meeting of exhibitors was called at the Shell Theater the forenoon of August 9, at which about 60 exhibitors were present. A proposal to revive the association was received with wild enthusiasm and within fifteen minutes forty new members were taken in. The old members paid up their arrears and the association immediately proceeded to the election of officers to fill the full list of vacancies. Judge A. P. Tugwell was elected president; G. H. McLain, vice-president; R. O. Starrett, secretary; T. C. Jensen, treasurer, and W. C. Rolfes, sergeant-at-arms. Committees were appointed to take up the quarantine regulations with the city authorities at once and a public mass meeting was called for the purpose of acquainting the public with the exhibitors' side of the argument.

Charles A. Neale, State organizer for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of California, the new State organization recently formed in San Francisco, had arrived in the city the day before and he addressed the meeting, explaining the purposes of the State organization. As a result of his talk the board of directors was instructed to take the necessary steps to affiliate the Los Angeles organization with the State association.

* * *

Earl Miles, of Miles Brothers Film Exchanges of Los Angeles and San Francisco, has been in the city for several days on business. It is expected that the entrance of the Golden Gate Film Exchange in this field, handling exclusively the Film Supply programs which were formerly handled by the local branches of Miles Brothers and the California Film Exchange, will require some local readjustments of the business.

The Golden Gate Film Exchange has opened pretentious offices at 514 West Eighth Street and began furnishing the Film Supply programs to exhibitors August 12. They will also handle feature subjects. Lester L. Kahn has come down from San Francisco to be the resident manager.

With seven film exchanges now in operation this city is getting to be a motion picture metropolis, and exhibitors cannot complain about not having plenty of good things to choose from. The exchanges now operating are the General Film Company, the California, Miles Brothers, Golden Gate, Emmick's, Sunset, and Stutz & Campbell's.

* * *

The old Grand Opera House, for many years the leading legitimate theater of Los Angeles, has finally been taken over by W. H. Clune, as forecasted in this column several weeks ago. Hereafter it will be devoted exclusively to motion pictures. Carpenters and decorators are now at work making over the interior of the theater and it will be ready for the public in about a month. Licensed programs are to be used.

POWELL.

Music for the Picture

BY CLARENCE E SINN

OUR old friend, Will H. Bryant, writes: "I have moved from Indianapolis to this city (Terre Haute, Ind.), and have been managing the house and leading the orchestra since June 3. Am enclosing my program for the Sara Bernhardt film "Camille." The manager of these pictures was good enough to ask for a list, saying it fit the picture better than any yet found. Hope it may be of use.

"Camille."

1. Waltz lento until Camille and Armand alone, then:
2. "The Flatterer" (Chaminade) twice through.
3. "Scarf Dance."
4. "Serenade" (Puerner) or "Spring Song" (Mendelssohn).

SECOND ACT.

5. "Confidence" (Mendelssohn). Twice.
6. "Berceuse" (Godard) or Waltz lento until title:

"CAMILLE'S HOME IN THE COUNTRY."

7. "Evening Star" (Tannhauser), until Armand's father leaves Camille.
8. "Calm as the Night" (Bohm), until next title.
9. "Song Without Words" (Tschaikowsky). To end of act. Tempo according to action.
10. "La Boheme Fantasie" (Puccini), until Camille out of bed.
11. "Barcarolle" (Tales of Hoffman), until Camille's arm drops to her side.
12. "Asa's Death" (Peer Gynt Suite—Grieg), until end.

This program looks good to me. Hope you will find time among your two-fold duties to call again.

Through the courtesy of the George Kleine Company, who extended all possible assistance in viewing the film, the following suggestions are offered for

"Rameses, King of Egypt" (Cines).

1. "Festmarsch" from Tannhauser. (Begin when three leading characters are introduced and continue through first two scenes of picture.
2. "Pastoral" (or first movement in Peer Gynt Suite, by Grieg), until title "Disguised as a Peasant."
3. First movement of Bendix' "Hindoo Priest's Incantation." Play through two scenes, then:
4. "Egyptian Love Dance" (Pryor), moderate tempo until title:

"RAMESES TRIES TO AMUSE THE UNHAPPY MAIDEN."

5. "Zallah" (Egyptian Dance by Lorraine), until dancer stops.
6. "Egyptian Love Dance" again until:

"EPHRIAM SWEARS VENGEANCE," ETC.

7. Intermezzo "Salome" (by Wm. Lorraine), through two scenes.
8. Agitato pp. until prison scene.
9. Plaintive minor until end of reel.

N. B.—Suppe's overture "Light Cavalry" can furnish the last two numbers; take the 2d movement (agitato) for No. 8, and the 4th (adagio) for No. 9.

Second Reel.

1. Meditation "Thais" (Massinet), until:

RAMESES ORDERS THE RELEASE OF THE SHEPHERD.

2. Minor plaintive until: "Marriage of Ephriam and Selime."
3. March from "Aida" until: "The Wedding Gift of Rameses."
4. Mysterious (watch for gong), until change of scene.
5. March from "Aida" until change of scene.
6. Intermezzo "Salome" (Lorraine), until letter shown.
7. Massinet's "Elegy"—swell at finish.

"The Detective's Conscience" (Lubin).

1. Intermezzo through two scenes.
2. Agitato p and f (shots) until disguised convict in house.
3. "Love in Idleness" (Carl Fischer), until title:

BUD WELCOMES HIS NEW BROTHER-IN-LAW.

4. Intermezzo until title "The Next Day."
5. Agitato until after the arrest.
6. Waltz lento until title "Campbell Has Been Promoted."
7. "Autumn" (by Losey), until title: "Free."
8. Plaintive until Bud arrives at house.
9. Agitato until she comes on with the baby.
10. Waltz lento until close, increasing tempo slightly at end of picture.

"The Arrow Maker's Daughter" (Pathe).

1. "Indian Summer" (by Moret), through first two scenes.
2. "Fawn Eyes" (or any "Indian" intermezzo), until donkey is led off, then;
3. "Sun Dance" (Witmark), until title:

PAUL STARTS ACROSS THE DESERT.

4. "Indian Summer" until title:

MOOSE HEAD FINDS AND FOLLOWS THE TRAIL.

5. Mysterious until Paul falls in desert (2d time), then:
6. Plaintive until end.

A correspondent writes from a neighboring city: "The other night I dropped into what is supposed to be our leading picture house, where the big pipe organ holds sway, while a Bison film was being run, and during an exciting hold-up scene the organ pealed a sad and solemn measure entirely out of keeping with the action."

The performer on the organ mentioned probably thinks the instrument is only suited for church music. Let him alone—he'll get over it in time, maybe. It is the general custom so far as I have observed to choose one picture in the bill for an "organ picture"—usually one of a sympathetic character, and accompany the others by the piano or orchestra as the case may be. However, I have heard a skillful instrumentalist play to a comedy picture and "rag it" all the way through. It is not necessary to confine oneself to dirges and anthems simply because you are playing on a pipe organ. The instrument is capable of every mood of musical expression under the hands of one who knows how to bring them out.

Mr. B. M. Billinger, pianist of the Virginian Theater, Petersburg, Va., writes: "In the M. P. World I read with pleasure and benefit to myself the criticism of picture music by the Los Angeles Municipal News of July 24. It is a far cry from Los Angeles to Petersburg, Va. The audiences in this city are critical in regard to their music, and, as the 'Virginian' M. P. Theater is patronized by the most refined element, care is taken to select feature films at times and to exhibit them in connection with appropriate music. Recently this theater exhibited 'The Holy City' (Eclair) and gave a classy musical setting to the reels, which attracted many who do not often visit picture houses and served to stimulate interest in the theater. An exceptionally fine soprano sang the 'Holy City' with organ and violin accompaniment and between the two reels sang 'The Songs the Church Choir Sang,' which made a favorable impression. Organ and violin accompanied the picture all through, varying the program at each show. Among the numbers offered were a Wagnerian number, the 'Traumerei,' Intermezzo from 'Cavalieria Rusticana,' 'Calvary,' 'Eternity,' and others appropriate in theme. The enthusiasm aroused was in a great measure due to the music. As the Los Angeles critic states, good music cannot keep patrons away from the motion pictures and it does attract a percentage of patrons who appreciate it. I have heard intelligent people declare that they are never conscious of music while watching a motion picture. It appears incredible to me, since I have experimented on my audiences for five years and find that the ear leads the eye before the screen. In military or Indian or dramatic pictures I can get a hand if I follow the picture correctly and if I play the identical picture the next hour and offer only catchy music, not attempting to interpret the scenes, the picture is received in silence. People will respond to real music anywhere and are asking more of M. P. pianists each year. With orchestra there is no difficulty in handling music, but with piano working singly there is much thought and skill required and also much responsibility in regard to the popularity of the house."

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

A Little History.

HERE'S what magazine writers like to refer to as a "human document." It comes from Joseph Goldman, who is manager of the Jefferson Theater, Jefferson City, Mo., as well as editor of the Daily Democrat-Tribune. Mr. Goldman writes:

> I have been reading your advertising columns with much interest as I am a great believer in advertising. I am enclosing you a copy of my paper with some of my advertising and a bill I got out for "The Money Kings." Besides the program I have in the forty-inch space, I usually run a reading notice of the pictures to be seen that night. I have been the manager of the theater of the city for the past three years, but as we played all the big shows I did not care to have my name connected with the picture end of the game and it has always been a losing proposition until recently when my last partner ran away and left the proposition on my hands with the result that I had to take it over myself.
>
> I was so disgusted with this fellow's actions that I determined to have no more partners, swallow my pride and become the manager of a 5-cent show. Before coming to my management of the show I want to relate briefly a little history of the house. I believe these things will be interesting because when I read your columns I am always interested in these things, viz.: How a losing proposition was made to pay.
>
> I first let the foreman of my printing office and one of my reporters run the theater for pictures. They first ran it for five and ten cents with pictures and a singer. At that time there was no big picture house for opposition as there is now. So they made money. Later they decided on vaudeville for the same price of admission. They lost money. I, of course, was a partner in all these things. That about ended the first season. So last season they were going to try a new stunt. Three acts of vaudeville, an orchestra and pictures at 10 and 20 cents. It failed. They sold out. Then came a stranger to the city and I fell for his bunk (pardon the slang). He put in a five-cent show and was making it go fairly well until he began trying to fool the people. He left it on my hands with a lot of debts. He left between suns.
>
> I paid up his bills and began to give the theater my personal attention. I determined to make it pay although it was just the beginning of the heated term. I put a pretty girl in the ticket office and a boy on the door and stepped down at 7:30 from the editor of the leading Democratic paper in the city to an usher in a five-cent theater. I asked my wife to give theater parties. I had my society editress do the same. I invited the leading society women in the city to do the same. I put on features like Martin Chuzzlewit and The Money Kings without an increase in price and when it did not pay for the evening when there was a special, I charged it to advertising.
>
> I put in an electric piano with high grade music. Plenty of ice-water and fans. As a result of my personal attention I am making it pay even during these hot nights and there is an Airdome, with a stock company; an amusement park, where they show pictures, besides two other picture houses. As I see my name in print every day it was not a desire to see it in the paper that prompted me to write this letter, but with the hope that some other man struggling with a picture proposition might get an idea that will help him to get out of the rut.

Do It Yourself.

It's the old answer to lots of business troubles. If you want something done right you must do it yourself. Employees and partners may do things right, but if you do it yourself you're sure it's right. Mr. Goldman does not state whether the 40-inch ads (the two sent are 27 and 30 inches) are charged to the house or run free, but that doesn't really matter. You may not be able to afford as much space, but perhaps you can catch the trick of making less space do as much for you. In a 27-inch space Mr. Goldman gives but a single eighteen point line to each reel, though he has plenty of room for a ten or fifteen line description for each of the reels. Just one descriptive line would help and being an editor, Mr. Goldman knows how to write. We think that a snappy five-line description of each feature would help hurt the airdome more and take a few from the amusement park. Mr. Goldman has changed the result from loss to profit, but it would seem that with a large house he could do even better than he is and gain larger audiences. The entire advertisement reads:

SEE THE Splendid Program
at the
Jefferson Movies
Tonight.

PROGRAM

A Tenacious Solicitor (Edison), comedy.
Twixt Love and War, drama.
According to law (Selig), comedy drama.
Me and Bill (Selig), drama.
Two shows, 7:45 and 9:00 P. M.
When you can't get cool any place else
COME TO THE JEFFERSON.

The highest letter is the house title, in 60 point. The advertisement fills 678 points of which but 396 are in type, the rest being blank. We think that Mr. Goldman can do better in this respect. It's too much waste space.

Not Movies, Please.

And we hope that Mr. Goldman drops the "movies." At a time when the friends of the motion pictures are trying to raise it to a deservedly higher plane and the manufacturers are seconding their efforts with special subjects, it is discouraging to have this street slang suddenly sweep the country. The children have used it for a couple of years, but the word is cheap, inelegant and not in any way suggestive of the entertainment it is supposed to represent. Jefferson Photoplays will be far more descriptive.

Getting back to Mr. Goldman, though, it will be noted that he not only has his wife but his society writer give theater parties. The issue of the paper sent contains reports of two such parties by other persons. You don't have to own a paper to try this scheme and you'll be surprised to find that puzzled hostesses will welcome the novelty and that society writers will welcome the items. The small town papers and many of the larger ones want names because most of those whose names are mentioned will want extra copies of the paper, and this helps circulation. If you make a list of the names of those in attendance, find out what is going to be done after the performance or what has been done before, the papers will be glad to get the information and it will come to be known that theater parties in your house get in the papers. If you have no wife to get the fad started get after some social leader. Offer her reservation of seats, or merely suggest that a photoplay theater party will be a novelty. You'll get the advertising and perhaps you'll make some regular customers of those guests who have never paid much attention to photoplay before. There are dozens, perhaps hundreds of persons who might be made regular patrons could they be induced to come just once.

The Right Idea.

Mr. Goldman has the right idea in charging any loss on a special to advertising for this very reason that the special will bring into your house those who may become regulars. You charge up newspaper advertising because it makes patrons. Why not give the special the same credit? Anything that rouses interest in the pictures is good for your house as a whole and if a special costs you fifty dollars extra and brings in forty dollars above the regular receipts, isn't it no more than fair to suppose that at least a part of the extra attendance is new business that may be made regular?

Mr. Goldman uses dodgers and plenty of newspaper space for his specials and makes everyone in town know that they are coming. He also uses readers in the local department, repeating the line from the general advertisement and adding this clincher:

> The Jefferson is the biggest theater in the city. It has the highest ceiling. It is therefore the coolest in the city.

He might have added something about the fans and ice water that he speaks of in his letter. It all helps to create the impression that the patron will be looked after. Mr. Goldman is headed right and if he speeds up the hustle a little more he will find himself tempted to sell the paper and devote all his time to the theater.

An Apology.

We offer apologies to William Barie, Jr., of the Marple Theater, Wichita, Kansas, for spelling it Barrie. It's Barie henceforth. Mr. Barie, to show that he is not angry, offers the suggestion that you get your printer to show you about type sizes and then mark your copy by points, marking each line eight, ten, eighteen or whatever the point may be. He also adds a note like this:

> Composer: This is not a graveyard ad, so please do not bury.

He claims that it helps him get a good position, but as the man who sets the type seldom puts it in the form, we don't quite see how it can.

We would suggest that the typesetter be called a compositor and that Mr. Barie, and others, get not only the type sizes but the various faces the office has. Any office will supply a good advertiser with a sheet showing the different job faces run and then not only the size but the style of type may be marked in. Instead of saying "10 point black," you say, "10 point Cheltenham Bold," and know what you will get.

If you will remember that it is 72 points to the inch, that a heavy rule across is usually 6 points and that two-point leads and six or twelve-point slugs are used for spacing, you can add up the points in rule, spacing and type and come close to your measurement in inches.

This is the best way for newspaper advertisements, but for larger printing it is better to have a talk with the compositor or foreman and leave it to the office beyond the really important lines.

The Marple Press Book.

Mr. Barie sends the press book of the Marple Theater, Wichita, Kan., for inspection. The book runs from the end of December, 1910, to date and at the start the advertisements are headed with white letters on black block design of the title and "the home of the aluminum screen." Later this is dropped in favor of the Marple, with the first and last letters double the size of the other four, but the most satisfactory seems to be the name of the house in block letters set in a six-point border, which throws it into relief and catches the eye. The use of the heavy border is much like drawing a ring around the name, and unless you use some device as the cipher of the theater, the framed name is the best.

For a time vaudeville was used and made the feature, the pictures being made to retire into the background, but vaudeville passed and in an orchestra Mr. Barie seems to have found the real solution of the added attraction, the musicians; a well known local organizer being a b tter drawing card than vaudeville of the small time sort.

We have spoken at length of the use of spoons by Mr. Barie. Other trade catchers seem to have been a baby contest and a prize pony, though the book gives but one advertisement of the latter and there is no announcement of the winner. By arousing the rivalry between the police and street car men the baby show was made a success, the leaders polling 5,280 and 5,159 votes respectively; the trolley baby winning, but the next candidate dropped to 644 votes. Baby shows are mostly small town winners and Wichita is a bit too large for such a contest unless the prizes are really worth while. Frank Montgomery got a whole city talking, but it took an automobile as first prize to do it.

Timely Lines.

An echo of the recent past is a fifty line ad that is headed

TEDDY BOLTED

The Republican Convention and we bolted out of the ordinary class of picture shows

Because we are the People's Choice and are not showing THREE FEATURE PICTURES with a FULL ORCHESTRA playing the music at each performance.

Catchy, if less timely is another advertisement that is headed "Why Girls Leave Home" and goes on to explain that they, like the rest of the people, leave home to go to the Marple. Other catchlines are

So far ahead we're lonesome
Oodles and Oodles of Comedy
A Mile of Smiles
Wind up the day right
The stork has a good bill, but you will see a better one at the Marple
You can't beat it, why try?
Every little movement has a meaning of its own, which is why the crowds move to the Marple

Mr. Barie has a fondness for large, black type and does not make the mistake of overcrowding his advertisement. It takes a little thinking to get in neither too much nor too little, and one is as bad as the other. White space is useful, but too much white space is bad; to say nothing of being a waste of money.

Some Hot Air.

The latest Barie stunt was to send up some hot air balloons that at a proper altitude could not be told from passenger carriers. As there had been a balloon race from Kansas City the week before there were wild rumors in town that these were two of the racers and one enthusiastic citizen actually identified one of the craft. The papers the next day explained the hoax and gave the theater more valuable advertising than a page of puffery. Anything that gets people talking without thought of the theater, but which later may be traced to the theater is the sort of stuff that sticks.

Another in Line.

We have recorded the appearance of a number of photoplay departments in the daily papers of the West and South and are glad to welcome to their number the photoplay department of the Philadelphia Evening Times, which is conducted by F. V. Armato, who writes that he has the endorsement and assistance of the Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania. As a starter he opened with the statement of the Director of Public Safety of Philadelphia that the photoplay theaters of Lubinville are in good shape. They are inspected twice a week by the fire and electrical experts of the Bureau of Public Safety and kept up to the mark. It is not so long ago that the papers delighted in fire scares, but there is a new day dawning and we hope that Mr. Armato will soon have company in his work.

A Strip Calendar.

Charles W. Tiede, of the Bijou Theater, Racine, Wis., sends in a four-day program on a sheet about eight by seventeen. Each day is boxed in with three on six-point border, but the date rises above the box. We would suggest that the date be moved to within the box and space gained to allow at least a twelve-point slug between the boxes. Apparently Mr. Tiede uses two or more lines where he can get the material and one where he cannot. We think he makes a mistake in not announcing the make of each film even though this may betray the fact that a four-title show includes one split reel.

One Biograph is identified as is a Vitagraph inferentially through the mention of John Bunny, but the rest are nameless and in these days of favorite brands and favorite players in those brands the wise manager makes all possible use of trademarks and the personalities of the players.

We would also suggest that the hours of performance should be mentioned in all printing. Don't take it for granted that everyone knows that you start your show at one or two or three o'clock. Tell the times of performance and the prices of admission and give your location unless you are in a very small town. Don't take it for granted that everyone knows. This is not for Mr. Tiede, but for everyone. Not one per cent. of the samples that come in give this information and yet every piece of printing should carry it. The man you want most to reach is the man who knows little or nothing about you. Reach out for him with your paper because you never can tell what particular piece of paper will be the one that might bring him in.

You advertise to tell your regular patrons what you have but you do not advertise for your regular patrons alone. Get after the man you never have had as a guest. Make some bid for him. Try something like this, for instance:

If you don't know what you're missing, we're sorry for you.
When you find out you'll be sorry for yourself.
Three big dramatic companies for one admission.
If you never saw a photoplay you'll be surprised. If you've not seen them lately you'll be still more surprised at their improvement. Gripping dramas and sprightly comedies, three to the hour and always something new.

Rush Work.

J. C. Rathbone, of the Exeter (N. H.) Opera House sends some good stuff, a part of which we shall try to run next week, and the Opera House News, concerning which he writes that copy was prepared in two hours, the issue being on the street five hours after the first line of copy was prepared. It is only a single sheet, printed on both sides with a type page 6¾ x 10, but it tells a lot in compact space. One announcement tells of the return of Miss Pickford to the Biograph (which will please the A. B., of course) and each issue gives a short editorial chat about pictures generally. Here is a good idea that we have not seen before. It should be useful to others:

EXETER'S NIGHT SCHOOL IS OPEN ALL THE YEAR AROUND

A modern, up-to-date institution of learning for all classes and ages. An endless chain of variety, culture and enlightenment, where wisdom, high morals and laughter go hand in hand.

MOTION PICTURE COURSES IN Geography, History, Industry, Botany, Surgery, Thought, Laughter, Morals.

Some Rathbone Hints.

Here are some extracts from his other paper:

Circuses and Peaches they're here and away,
But Pictures and Lemons they come and they stay.

THERE'S A REASON

But we'll close up shop to-morrow if anyone fails to get their money's worth to-night.

COME AND HAVE A DIME GOOD TIME

We Get All the Big Ones

TURN ON THE LIGHT

There are only two things you can find in the dark, a tack and a limburger sandwich. Get into the limelight and cast your optics on these features at

THE EXETER OPERA HOUSE

To-Night

If there is an unhappy, grouchy individual in town to-day it's a cinch he hasn't been to see us this week. Get busy.

Mr. Rathbone is using a lot of paper, just now, but it helps keep the house open and full and it's better to make a small profit and keep open than to pay rent on a dark house.

Some Edison Features.

The Fly Pest has been overworked in most places, but the Edison release for August 24th offers "The War on the Mosquito." This is a little late in the season for a crusade for this year, but if you will make this the opening gun of next year's campaign you can work up just as much excitement as though this was April with fly time still a month away. The reel shows the work of exterminating the pest in New Jersey and it is a matter of newspaper comment that the work of the campaign has very materially reduced the nuisance this year. Get the Board of Health and the medical men interested, see your newspaper people and welfare societies. Harp on the fact that now is the time to get the people interested in a plan for next season with the "skeeter" still on the job and all winter in which to lay plans. Working this way you can keep the reel live until snow flies, but get after it with the same enthusiasm that you would show in an immediate crusade. Mosquito extermination reduces itself to the treatment of ponds and stagnant water and lends itself well to talk. Your local library will give you data.

In this connection this paragraph from the Newark Town Talk may be worked over:

Among the Edison releases for motion pictures is an educational film of one thousand feet, entitled "The War on the Mosquito." The press agent unnecessarily adds: "It was taken in New Jersey." Where else could it have been taken, friend Plimpton?

Two Others.

"The Dam Builder" (no, they are not cussing the contractor) is a photo-drama made at the Kingston dam, a part of the new water supply for New York City. It is an educational with a story woven into it that culminates as the heroine saves the dam from being destroyed by dynamite. The story is dated for September 13th.

The following day's release deals with the care and education of blind babies and is done in co-operation with the International Sunshine Society. This picture was reviewed in our last issue.

The second of the "What Happened To Mary" series comes August 27th. Miss Fuller is going to make her big hit in this series and the stories are done with uncommon care. If you've not had the first get it and run it if you can before the second is due. Each is a story complete in itself and can be run alone, but if you miss any you're cheating yourself. We caught the first reel the other night down on Chatham Square with a mixed audience of Chinese, Italians, Greeks and Syrians and the hit it made with a polyglot crowd was surprising.

The PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

A Question of Quality.

WE have read with more than usual interest the lengthy letter of a professional man in the Middle West, whose name we omit because he is a photoplaywright. He offers the usual argument that he writes better scripts than those seen on the screen, although he has no means of knowing this to be a fact since he has not seen his plays produced and the play that may read well will not always act well. But it is very evident that he makes a close study of photoplay and as a matter of interest we brief his comments on certain companies. Some of the comments will fit more than one company, but we think that photoplaywriters will be interested in supplying names for these companies, which are all those coming under the observation of the commentator. Here is what he says:

———— Most novel ideas and best acted. Women all look refined and attractive, but too many stories by ———— ————. Photography very good though lacking at times.

———— Splendid photography, usually, having produced some of the finest films, technically, in existence. Last year produced new ideas and had good acting, but this year are doing poor work with their grotesque farce comedies with the jumping figures and constantly changing scenes, resembling a three-ring circus.

———— Offers films of variable quality, some excellent and others not worth producing. The photography is bad, the film being very contrasty, with the high lights atrocious. This company has a big staff and is capable of fine things.

———— Usually give us excellent photography. Western company going around in a circle to feature leading man. Western plots made in office to avoid expense. Other company is working up new stuff and evidently is buying. One leading man paws the women in the play too much. Gentlemen do not usually stroke the arms and backs of ladies they have met for the first time. The comedy company can produce things worth while, but usually overdo it.

———— Improved very much in the past year, but still crude. They pay little attention to details and make many absurd blunders.

———— Same old themes worked by the same old crowd in the same old way.

———— Produces the most dramatic films in their affiliation and offer the worst photography. There is no depth to most of their interior work and the definition in almost all their pictures is very bad. They need new lenses or operators. They sacrifice realism to unreal melodramas. Have many new ideas and probably buy a good many outside offerings.

———— Unconvincing as a rule. Some of their photography is amateurish and they do not seem to understand the value of proper lighting.

———— Usually very fine photography. They offer many new ideas.

With two exceptions this is an accurate summing up of one of the combinations of picture makers, taking the average work. One company credited with large purchases actually buys fewer outside scripts than another company which states that it is not in the market, but which buys from certain well-known writers. It is not so much a question of outside purchases as of the faculty of seeing what a picture is. There are some editors and many directors who use studio scripts because they cannot visualize the outside story. The independent offering may contain a greater idea, but this cannot be exploited in the small space at the command of the photoplaywright, while the studio script of equal brevity is susceptible of verbal amplification. The photoplay editor is born, not made, and he is born with a gift of imagination that his training should have intensified before he takes the editorial chair. It is not his official title, but his ability that makes him an editor, and if he cannot see the picture he is apt to pass the outside idea and take the studio script that some player or director can explain to him.

The outside writer may have a better idea and yet be unable to get it on paper clearly, or being able to get it all down, it may not be the sort of story that will lend itself to filming. Office scripts are not, as a rule, run to save money, though a few editors are supposed to supply one free script a week as part of their work. Generally some player or director is paid for his work on the outside basis. Generally this blinds the director to the work of others and he can see good only in his own story. Other player-directors write all their own scripts because they know just what they want and inevitably they must repeat themselves.

The real gravity in the situation lies in the fact that there is a fiction in the studios that the producer must like his script or he cannot make a good production, and some producers refuse to "like" any script that entails hard work. In our own experience we have suffered from a director who refused to make anything but Western stuff in the summer time. Given anything else he would persuade his employer that the story was poor and would be directed to make something else. In another studio, but one man out of five directors could be appealed to with a script entailing much outdoor work.

There are some directors who are earnest students and enthusiastic workers, who regard no labor as too arduous so that a good production is the result, but there are others who hold the average down.

It cannot be denied that there is vast room for improvement in the average of photoplay no matter from what maker, and that manufacturers must turn to the outside contributor for ideas. No fiction magazine ever maintains a staff of tame writers and finds success, though it is easier to write five fiction stories a month than five photoplays, since there is a broader field where words can be employed. One magazine takes two and three stories a month from some writers under different pen names, but none maintains a staff of four or five authors to write thirty stories a month every month.

We think that some good might obtain if every lover of the photoplay, whether photoplaywright or otherwise, would write the film companies when they note something wrong. This will entail some work, but it will have effect if followed up. Write briefly and to the point, explaining wherein the film story fails, and address the letter to the general manager.

As a starter we quote from the one in question, though we urge the ten line rather than the ten page letter as a rule. The soundness of this argument is its excuse for length:

> I don't know whether criticisms, of photoplays, made by the general public interest you or your readers, but I am taking the liberty of sending you this communication in the hope that outsiders may get a hearing. Evidently from the letters you publish many of the public are much disgusted with the frequency with which their manuscripts come back to them and I am free to confess that I am in the same condition of mind. Now, you tell us not to be discouraged because the film companies are all hunting for new ideas and are glad to pay well for them, and we naturally expect the converse to be true and that is that the moving picture plays which we see should usually have some new ideas in them. But, on the other hand, any close observer can see there is almost a famine of novel or interesting scenarios. I hear much disgust expressed at the theaters, which I attend constantly, at the kind of "trash" which is now offered the intelligent public. Of course, there is no doubt about the public having become more discriminating, but there is something radically wrong or the moving picture companies would do better. Are they all becoming so rich that they know the public will go to see anything that moves?
>
> I am a college graduate, have been a constant theater goer for thirty-five years, and have seen all the greatest American actors and actresses of my time and many of the foreign ones, have made some study of dramatic art and an extensive study of photography, have been a constant student of moving pictures and moving picture plays for years, and I believe that I am as good a judge of the plays offered to the public by the moving picture companies as their editors are of the plays offered them for production. I do not insist on these companies accepting more of my plays or the plays of the public than they do, but I do insist on them giving us something better than we offer. It looks very much to me as though the companies want to save the money they might pay out for new ideas because the public will go to see whatever they offer. The only company I will except is the Edison. All the educated people in my locality watch for the Edison pictures because they offer something different from the old hackneyed subjects.

That's the opinion of a man who pays his ten cents to see a program. Right in line with this is a letter from M. D. Stilson, who pays more than ten cents when he looks at a show, because it is his own program he watches. He is the manager of the Schuyler Opera House, Cobleskill, N. Y.

> The writer has had something to say before in the space you have kindly given him, also read with much interest the ideas of others in the column that is conducted by you.
>
> To me it seems we have reached a stage in the picture game that will admit of some airing, and that in justice to the manager of the picture theater should be looked into. The great question with me is, who is to blame for all the film that is wasted, or, in other words, all the poor pictures that are placed on the market? Many and many of them not even an apology for a motion picture.
>
> I wonder how many of the editors or directors of the several firms manufacturing film ever managed a picture theater. A short experience of this kind would do some of them a world of good. The local manager pays big rental money for what they tell him are feature pictures. He advertises them as such to his patrons and has the right to suppose he is telling the truth. The show goes on, no one has to tell you it is bad; you know it yourself. But it makes you say, "Bill, you have a rotten show to-night."
>
> Again I ask, why are so many, many poor pictures put out? No one manufacturer makes them all. The writer has paid good rent money, and seen poor pictures run that were made by nearly all of the people that manufacture film.
>
> I have written scenarios, also sold some. But to have them sell they had to be mighty good stories. Where do they get the poor ones? Who is to blame for their being accepted, made up, sold and floated around the country to fool the public?
>
> Should be pleased to hear from others through your paper. Have my idea and would gladly state it, provided you think the subject worth while.

We most assuredly think it worth while and hope that Mr. Stilson will come forward with his suggestion. One great reason for poor work is the number of releases made each week irrespective of the grade. It may not be a good play—but the exchange must take it and therefore so must the manager.

"Small Town Stuff."

The heading is a phrase in use among actors to suggest an action unworthy of a city man and this letter, which is dated from a diminutive town in Ohio and which in the past week has been sent to the photoplay editor of every company on both sides of the licensed fence, is very much small town. It reads:

> We are new parties in the field—that is, in a business way. We have had our experience as scenario writers, but want to turn our talent in another direction, and need a little help in getting ourselves known. If you will, you can help, and not put yourself or office force to any trouble whatever, some of the others have already consented. We want to get in touch with authors who have their plays rejected. If we send you some neatly printed cards reading like this:

M.....
.....

We are returning your play herewith, as it is not available for our use. However, we will be pleased to receive any others you care to submit.

——— ——— ——— Co.

If you cannot sell your plays, or would like to, and do not know the form, it will be greatly to your advantage if you drop us a card or letter.

KINSEL & RESSLER, Box 714, Struthers, O.

(If the above is not to your liking, we would be glad to change it to any thing you think would be more suiting.)

We would be more than thankful if you would enclose them with rejected manuscripts. This is what we will endeavor to do. Typewrite manuscripts, prepare manuscripts for sale, and revise manuscripts from the story form to the proper scenario form, etc.

We look at it in this light in asking you to do this, that you never get anything in this world unless you ask for it; that is, those who have not the money to buy it. We think it will be a great help in the field that is growing so wonderfully. Hoping to receive a satisfactory reply from you, etc.

The use of such a card would carry with it the tacit endorsement of the film company. Such an endorsement would be worth many times the fifty cents a thousand those slips would cost and naturally this would gratify two nervy young men, neither of whom has established his name as a writer of photoplays. We have seen some audacious propositions in connection with photoplay schools, etc., but these two unknowns are wasted in the Ohio wilderness. The phrasing of the letter suggests their qualifications as editors and copyists. Two of the three copies we have are not even originals, but blue carbons filled in in black ink.

Another One.

This seems to be the week for the men with the chilled steel nerve. Here is a letter that is going the rounds:

The ——— ——— ——— Bureau is conducting a Scenario Contest which will close on September fifteenth.

We are offering eight cash prizes for the best plots entered in the contest and wish to appoint as judges five or seven scenario editors of film manufacturers. If you will agree to act as one of the judges, please let us know at your earliest convenience.

There will be only about five hundred scenarios to examine and we do not think judges will have to spend more than two days' time on the contest.

Several of the editors we have seen have expressed their great joy that they will only be expected to read 500 scripts and in so doing give two days of the boss' time to the promotion of a "prize scheme" that is no more than the effort of a Brooklyn school and sales bureau to get hold of the addresses of likely clients.

The man who enters a prize contest that is not opened by some concern having an outlet through one of the three distributing companies deserves all the follow-up letters he gets, but in the hope of enlarging their information we offer this contribution to their knowledge.

Graft.

While the New York District Attorney is looking for the well-known Man Higher Up, the Man Lower Down has revealed himself to George W. Terwilliger, the editor for the Reliance Company. He comes from one of those near towns in New Jersey and he writes:

Enclosed find scenario entitled: "They Can't Kid Billy" for consideration. After realizing the severe strain of an Editor's duties, I will agree to give you 25% of whatever I get for any accepted scenario submitted; that is every scenario I deem advisable to submit will entitle you to twenty-five per cent. of its selling price: same to be adjusted at your office after I receive notice to call. This agreement to remain in force (upon your acceptance of it) until I shall cancel it, which right I reserve.

The letter was addressed to the office boy, who rubber stamps all outgoing script envelopes to show who handled the mail. We would suggest that the title of the script be changed to "They Can't Kid George."

In every line of business there is to be found the incompetent ass who thinks that he doesn't get ahead because he doesn't give up, but we think that in the photoplay field there is no chance for this clumsy form of bribery. The best way to bribe an editor is to give him a story so much better than the others that he can't help taking it, and would be bribers do not, as a rule, write that sort of stuff.

Plus One, Minus One.

Photoplay will lose one clever editor and gain another in the impending changes, though it is with regret that we announce these changes.

Frank E. Woods, "Spectator" of the Dramatic Mirror, goes to the Kinemacolor, as announced in the general columns last week. He was the first to take the photoplay department to the dramatic papers and his work has been brilliant, discreet and helpful. He did much to stem the falling tide when the Mirror needed a new department and since his appointment as Managing Editor of the publication he has wrought many changes in the old fashioned make-up.

On the thirty-first George W. Terwilliger retires as photoplay editor of the Reliance Company. Since going to Reliance Mr. Terwilliger has written about half the scripts and his editing has done much to bring the other stories to the high standard the company now maintains. We hope soon to be able to chronicle his acceptance of another position.

Sure.

Here's a letter that seems to have been written in good faith. It runs:

Do producers buy outside "stuff?" Really, now, do they?

I've been endeavoring to write photoplays for over a year, that is, to have them accepted, and up to date have had no returns, but the most beautiful set of rejection slips you ever saw.

My own reverses have not prompted me to ask the above question. I have a number of friends who have been interested in photoplay writing about as long as I have, and success in that line has smiled upon them with the same sweet expression it has me. We are still at it (the Post Office Dept. is glad) and intend to have a play produced if the whole bunch are obliged to club together and erect a studio of our own.

Why I am credulous is this. Some of these near photoplay authors I speak of are men of literary talent and have had stories and articles accepted time and again by magazines and newspaper syndicates. The "Technique of the Photoplay" is our Koran, and the MOVING PICTURE WORLD our guide.

Have heard from other down-in-the-mouths that the producers were more than supplied by their own staff and that an outsider had about as much chance of having plays accepted as the proverbial snowball, etc.

A word of encouragement will at least induce us to do some more typewriting and buy more stamps.

Most assuredly producers do buy outside stuff, but they do not buy outside stuff that is no better than that produced by the studio staff, and they won't buy unless they get new ideas reasonably worked out.

The fact that some of this writer's "friends and near-photoplaywrights" are literary workers does not figure in the case. We tried for more than a year to help an old newspaper acquaintance get the hang of the thing, but he persisted in trusting to style rather than freshness of ideas and at last he gave it up simply because he could not make his mind conform to a new mode of thought. On the other hand one of the best stories we ever handled was written by a young farmer who had no idea of technique but who did have the trick of writing vivid action in the strong scenes.

You've got to think and think original thoughts if you want to sell your photoplays, but if you can do that you can sell and sell regularly. Three years ago Capt. Charles Kiener started to write photoplays and good ones. He contributes to Kalem on contract. Emmett Campbell Hall used to write magazine feature stories and fillers until he found that he could buy automobiles on what his photoplays brought him. William H. Kitchell used to write magazine stories and help build houses alternately until he hit the photoplay pace. He sold five in two weeks and was asked for more. We know one driver of a delivery wagon who writes a play now and then and sells most of those he writes, because he writes only those that are good, and we know another magazinist who spends his time thinking up titles and writing plays around the titles.

These men all sell their stuff with no other "pull" than good work. If a group of men have spent a year writing photoplays with no results, it is largely because they think along hackneyed lines.

Do some more typewriting, by all means, but don't tackle the machine without some hard thinking that will produce a play that is really novel.

I don't know whether or not I am adding anything new to the originality discussion as continued by the letter in issue of Aug. 10 regarding "The Musical Message." I can say, however, that the Messiah message on the post card is not and was not original with any of the film companies that produced it. Something like ten years ago the Black Cat magazine printed it as the winner in a prize contest and probably regarded it as original for they paid, I think, $2,000 for it. You are probably aware of this.

What I am asking is: How is the question of copyright arranged? Did Selig, Lubin, et al make some arrangement with the Black Cat or is it allowable under the general practice to lift the "heart" idea of a copyright story provided the story made on it is different in details? I judge the latter to be the fact because I often recognize O. Henry and other gentlemen in the films. I can write as nearly original matter as anyone can, after 2,000 years of competition, but if it is standard practice to knowingly cut out funny or strong incidents from older work for use, it will simplify the production of plots. Anything that will make this easier is welcome because at $15 per it is hard to spend the extra time needed to think out original business and make it pay.

The Edison Company has arranged with the publishers for the use of some O. Henry stories, but we have seen some other photoplays that came dangerously close to thefts from that versatile writer and others. But with the settlement of the Ben Hur case and the passage of the Townsend Bill we think that publishers will find that it pays to watch production and this, in its turn, will make some editors more careful in their selection. In any event it will not pay a photoplaywright to become identified with thefts. We don't suppose this correspondent really means to drop creative work, but he raises an interesting question.

Just received from the press—"TECHNIQUE OF THE PHOTOPLAY." Fifty pages of valuable instruction and suggestions for both experts and beginners. On sale at One Dollar per Copy by MOVING PICTURE WORLD. Send order at once, as supply is limited.

Projection Department

Edited by F. H. RICHARDSON

Disgraceful State of Affairs.

LOCAL Union No. 194, I. A. T. S. E., Indianapolis, Ind., sends the following, through its business agent, under seal:

> Since Local 194 was established we have not been writing to the department as a body. In your issue of July 20th, however, you speak of operators' working conditions in Los Angeles, Cal. As we have a somewhat similar state of affairs in this city, the local has instructed me to also make a kick. The license examination in Indianapolis is a farce, pure and simple. Anyone with the required $5.00 can get a license, and I have proof that the city building inspector has issued license to men of practically no knowledge of the moving picture machine and projection; also that he has issued license to boys fifteen and sixteen years of age, who have been in the business three or four weeks, whereas the law requires them to be at least twenty years of age. The law also requires that operators be examined by a board of three, composed of the city electrician, building inspector and president of the city council. The building inspector, however, does the work without any assistance. I would like also to say that there is a law in this state prohibiting the running of a moving picture machine with a motor, and if one of our union boys puts a motor on, the inspector is after him immediately. Two theaters here, however, are each running their machines with motors and I have ample proof that the non-union men employed in these houses have left the operating room and stayed outside several minutes, while their machines were running, yet these houses have never been molested. The local here has progressed satisfactorily during its two years of existence. We have been fighting the above propositions and expect to make the city officials treat us fairly within a short time. We trust we shall see at least a part of this letter in print in the best moving picture magazine in existence, The Moving Picture World. We wish both the Editor of the Propection Department and the I. A. T. S. E. boys all over the country all kinds of prosperity, and hope to have a better report to send in in the near future.

The Building Inspector of the City of Indianapolis on assuming office took a supposed-to-be solemn oath to uphold the laws. If he is, as this letter asserts, industriously engaged in smashing them, or any one of them, to pieces, then it is high time a halt be called. This Building Inspector is not the law. He is merely the hired servant of the people. It is his duty to uphold and assist in the enforcement of the law, utterly regardless of whether or not he thinks the law is what it should be. If he does otherwise then he is false to his trust, a violator of his oath and is not a fit man to hold office of any sort or kind. If the charges contained in the letter are true then what I have said applies.

But I might ask what the City Building Inspector and the President of the City Council know about practical operating anyhow. What knowledge have they of practical projection which would qualify them to sit in judgment on the ability, or lack of ability of an operator? Could either one of these two gentlemen project a decent picture for three consecutive minutes to save his soul from purgatory? Could either of them make a mechanically and electrically perfect wire splice to save his ghost from perdition? Could their combined knowledge of projectional matters enable them to so arrange a set of wall shutters that they would fall within two seconds of the time a fire started, and so arrange matters that absolutely no fire or smoke could possibly show in the auditorium, no matter how much film be burned? Could they, by their combined knowledge, explain intelligently the reason why a rheostat gets hot, or what is the accepted limit of heat for that price of apparatus? Allow me to take the liberty of answering my own questions by saying no, they most likely cannot answer any one of those queries, simple as they are, and yet they gravely assume to pass judgment as to the competency or incompetency of operators. Piffle!

The City Electrician could no doubt give a practical examination, well calculated to determine the applicant's knowledge of electrical action, wiring and appliances, and form intelligent judgment as to whether he is a safe man to handle an arc light circuit. Aside from this, however, he most likely could not tell whether the man was or was not a competent operator.

Presumably if the City of Indianapolis were to enact a law requiring all locomotive engineers running through that city to be examined as to their competency and be licensed for the city, it would proceed to appoint its Chief of Police, Fire Marshal, or Building Inspector and its Water Works Engineer to examine and pass judgment as to what the applicants knew about running a locomotive. There would be just as much sense in such a proceeding as there is in turning over the examination of operators, upon whose knowledge depends the safety of the public, they claim, to a City Building Inspector and Chief of Police. There should by all means be at least one practical operator of acknowledged ability, not less than 30 to 35 years of age, on every such examining board.

As to the motor proposition, the law should be obeyed, but at the same time I do not think that the two theaters in question, which are claimed to be breaking the law in this respect, need disturb the local. The local is not charged with enforcement of the law and the use of motors in these two houses is not doing the local any harm as I can see. I have taken up the matter of unionizing the two houses with the owner, and he has agreed to straighten matters out with the local. I presume it will be done in the very near future; if it is not, let me know. I might add, however, that the owner of these theaters informs me that he has never had a communication on the subject, either by writing, telephone or by word of mouth, from your local. Presumably you have dealt with his manager, where you should have gone direct to the owner, when refused satisfaction by the manager. I am indeed glad to know that the Indianapolis local is progressing so nicely. I should presume that if the local is determined to stop the use of motors in the two houses in question, they could accomplish that end by taking the matter up directly with the Mayor of the city. However, as I have before said, what difference does it make to you boys whether the motors are used in those two houses or not? I presume, however, that your opposition comes from the fact that you feel it to be unfair to allow non-union men to use motors and prevent their use by your members. However, I think the motors will soon be handled by members of 194.

A Roast.

Detroit, Mich., writes:

> I have just finished reading the report of the I. A. T. S. E. convention held at Peoria, Ill., in August 3d edition of the department, and want to say, in the first place, that in printing the report, a mistake was made by not printing the writer's name in big letters, for that would have pleased him. The reporter says that a lot of good was accomplished at this convention, and I endorse that statement, but not much of that good can or will ever be applied to the moving picture machine operators of the I. A,, because of the swelled headedness of a certain delegate. The reporter finds fault with the Cincinnati and Boston delegates (no doubt you will hear from them), but I want to say that had the Western crowd taken the advice of the Boston delegation, the moving picture operators would now have one, and maybe two of their number as vice-presidents. Then, too, what did the Western boys do to get for the operator the financial support of the International? Nothing. They just laughed at it and let it go by, though it was by far the most important resolution offered by the operator delegates. Now to explain just what I mean by that, let me say that the I. A. constitution and by-laws give financial assistance to its members who are road-men only, and as the moving picture operator locals have none, or at least very few road-men with shows, this financial assistance is a joke. All the operators get now is the moral support of the I. A. and the services of an executive officer. However, the operators pay the same per capita tax, assessments, etc., that the stage hands do. Let us bear in mind the fact too that they have to help pay the expenses of the executive officer, whose services they have. Brother Corbett and Brother Burke, of the Boston Local, put this up to the operator delegates before it came up on the floor of the convention, but certain delegates had too much political ambition to give the matter consideration. Personally I have no fault to find, and have no interest whatever in the Boston boys, but I do object to anyone knocking them, as I think all three of the Boston delegates were equal, mentally and every other way, to any delegate in the convention. As regards the speech of the Cincinnati delegate, I do not think he realized what he was saying, and will freely admit his error.

I considered the matter for several days before deciding just what to do with this letter, which I have taken the liberty of toning down considerably, omitting all names. I finally concluded, however, to publish a revised edition on the ground that all sides should have a hearing in any matter. My doubts arose from the fact that there have been seven different reports of the convention sent in, and that every one of them was essentially the same, insofar as the criticisms of the Cincinnati and Boston delegates are concerned. Where there is so much smoke there must certainly be some fire. Cincinnati, I think, made an error, but we all do that sometimes, therefore he may readily be forgiven. All the reports, however, intimated that the Boston delegates were inclined to work for Boston only, to the exclusion of anybody else. If this is wrong, I will only be too glad to have that fact set forth, but even if it is right it does not necessarily follow that the Boston boys intended any wrong. It might have been merely a little unintentional selfishness on their part. But let that be as it may, I want to say that, as a general proposition, I have found that the Western man is much more progressive than his Eastern brother. There are individual exceptions, of course. As to the Boston boys, I know little or nothing of them, or their affairs, since I have no personal acquaintance with either the membership or officers of that local. This much I can say, however, viz: That the Boston local has accomplished a great deal of excellent work in that city. They have done remarkably well, considering the time they have been organized, and it was therefore, a matter of regret to me that their delegates should be criticized, and seemingly justly criticized. I was also perhaps a little predisposed to credit the criticism, due to the fact that one of the Boston delegates wrote me some two or three months ago asking me not to take up the discussion of proposed convention action in the department, as they (Boston) had made certain plans which might be seriously interfered with by such discussion. I held up a great many letters dealing with convention matters, and wrote the delegate asking his reasons, but I thought I had run the risk of offending a great many of the men by withholding their letters from publication at the request of the Boston delegate, still he did not have the common courtesy to even make reply. This naturally did not predispose me to hold the best opinion in the world of the Boston delegates, or at least one of them. I do not, however, hold the Boston local responsible for the act of one man, but I do feel that his action prevented discussion which might have been very valuable to operators.

Insufficient Data.

Vermont writes:

Here is something which has surrounded my goat: (1) I have a 66-foot side throw with a No. 4 lens, and all my slides are out of focus on the right side. If I throw my light on that side, it is out of focus on the left and on the top. I would like to know if I have to have a special lens made for side throw. (2) When I put on my song slides and leave them for any length of time, say when running a slow ballad, they seem to fade away or melt. I am pulling about 40 amperes, and never had any trouble with slides until now. (3) Suppose I had two rheostats connected in multiple on 110 volts, one for seven ohms, and the other for three ohms. I would like to know if this would be the correct total resistance: 7+3=10; 7×3=21; 21÷10=2.1 ohms; also suppose we had three rheostats for 7, 3 and 2 ohms, respectively, is the following correct: 7+3=10; 7×3=21; 21÷10=2.1; 2.1×2=4.2; 4.2÷4.1=1.1 ohms resistance?

(1) Your data is insufficient. You say you have a 66-foot side throw. Presumably you mean you have a 66-foot throw, and that your machine sets to one side of the screen. You do not say anything about your moving picture being out of focus on one side. Tell me the length of throw and the distance your machine sets to one side; also the width of both your moving picture and stereo lens, and I will then be able to reply intelligently. (2) 40 amperes is altogether too much for the stereo. However, just why the effect described should occur I cannot say, unless you are using mica slides, the picture upon which sometimes burns off under intense heat. I should suppose, however, that if you are using glass slides they would crack badly. Better hitch another rheostat in so that you can cut it in series and reduce the amperage instantly to about 18 or 20, when you throw over to the stereo. (3) Good-night! Just what your system of figuring is, is altogether too many for me. You speak of a rheostat "for" seven ohms. Rheostats are not "for" seven ohms, or any other number of ohms. They are for certain voltages and must contain the ohmic resistance necessary to handle that pressure. In this connection I would refer you to pages 8 and 9 of the hand-book. The ohmic resistance of a rheostat is found by dividing the voltage by the number of amperes flowing, and subtracting the resistance of the arc. For instance: Assuming we have 25 amperes flowing from 110 volt lines; 110÷25 tells us the total resistance is 4⅖ ohms, part of which, however, is in the arc. Assuming the current to be d. c., we shall have a drop of about 48 volts across the arc itself. Now, assuming the current to be d. c., the drop across the arc will be about 48 volts, and 48÷25= almost 2 ohms as the resistance of the arc. We would therefore have 4⅖—2=2⅖ ohms resistance in the rheostat. A simpler method is to first subtract 48 from the line voltage and then divide by the amperage, thus: 110—48=62÷25= about 2⅖ ohms in the rheostat.

Long E. F. Lens.

Elyria, Ohio, writes:

I have two Standard machines: 122-foot throw; 16 ft. 6 inch picture; 40 amperes d. c.; Bio carbons; use two ⅝ cored; one 7½ and one 9-inch condenser, with the 7½ next the light. Have moved lamphouse back and forth. Have a nice clear picture and good focus, but we have a bad blue ghost in both machines. Carbon set is O. K. Optical system is in line. What is wrong?

You have a very long E. F. lens. You are using a nine-inch front condenser and I think you will find that the present machine tables will not allow the lamphouse to be moved back far enough to accommodate the very long focal length of your condenser. You have to use that thin condensing lens and I believe if you can find any way of getting the lamphouse back further your ghost will disappear. Theoretically the light from the condensers must converge to a point half way between the two factors of the objective lens. Your light is converged quite a way ahead of that point now. If you pull your lamp back from the condensers your ghost will disappear, but the spot will be too small, therefore the lamphouse must go further back.

Patches.

Ft. Worth, Tex., writes:

I noticed in the department recently an article concerning the making of patches, in which it was said the proper way is not to cut through a sprocket hole. That is all right where you use films made by a Pathe or Kalem camera, in which the sprocket hole is just South or just North of the dividing line, but with films made by the Vitagraph or Selig, the line goes through the center of the sprocket hole, and you would therefore have to cut through it. In proof of this I am sending you samples of the various films. The reason girls make bad patches is because they are compelled to inspect from 75 to 100 or more reels in eight hours, where, as a matter of fact, they should put in from thirty to forty minutes on each reel.

I am not quite certain about that sprocket hole business—that is to say, whether the sprocket hole necessarily comes in one set position with one camera, and in another position in the next one in relation to the dividing line, though I presume this could be true. However, there is another equation that must be considered, viz.: the printing machine, though I suppose that the printer would place the sprocket hole in exactly the same relative position that the camera did. This is something I had not thought of, and inasmuch as this is a very busy week, I cannot give it time now, but as soon as I can get around to it, I will look the matter up, as it seems to be of considerable importance. I thoroughly agree with you that girls in exchanges are compelled to inspect altogether too many reels of film in a day. I have called attention to this matter repeatedly. The inspection in a great many exchanges is merely perfunctory, but the exchanges themselves are not entirely to blame for this state of affairs. The exhibitor will demand a reel the minute it is returned and kick like a steer if he has to wait more than five minutes for its inspection. However, a larger part of the trouble lies in the endeavor by the exchange to get too much work out of a reel. It comes into the exchange and is shot right out again with an inspection that amounts to almost nothing, since if the inspecting were properly done it would mean, in many instances, that the reels would have to be held in for a day. It must be conceded, however, that even where there is opportunity to inspect reels properly, it is seldom done.

An Old Style Machine.

Massachusetts writes:

I have Power's Five machine, with the usual two-wing inside shutter. My throw is 74 feet 10 inches, with an 18-foot picture. Am using 110 volts, a. c., through a Ft. Wayne compensarc. We have a new screen called a mirroroide, which makes the picture much brighter, but of course shows the flicker more. Would you advise installing a three-wing outside shutter? Will a three-wing outside shutter reduce the light more than the two-wing shutter, and, if so, how much? Can the N. Power Company attach a three-wing outside shutter to the No. 5? Now, Brother Richardson, I am going to tell you just what I am up against in this town. There is an opposition house equipped with two Power's Six machines, with the outside shutter. They have everything to do with so they can get a good picture, while all I have is the Power's Five and an extra head. My machine is over four years old. I have run it three years myself, so you see it is not the latest model. The company gets new parts every little while, but that does not bring the machine up to date. My employers hear about the steady, flickerless picture the operator puts on at the other house, and then they come up and jump all over me. If I speak to them about a new machine—it is "Oh, you're a bum operator. You ought to keep your machine in shape, etc." I have, upon occasion, worked all night on the machine and have gotten up mornings and worked until it was time to start the show, without dinner too. Still they say, "Oh, well, you should do that." The manager, however, is reasonable and I believe if he owned the place would get me everything I would want to work with. The company I work for have a chain of theaters and I believe I have the poorest outfit of them all. As long as the crank will turn, they think the machine is all right, and because I am a union operator I can get good results on an old out-of-date mechanism. I have been working hard to put on a creditable picture, but I simply cannot do it with the present outfit, and I tell you it is discouraging.

I have given this letter considerable space because I thoroughly sympathize with our Massachusetts Brother. He is working under a good manager, but the owners are demanding impossibilities. They have an old out-of-date machine and expect the operator to compete with an up-to-date outfit. I would like to meet those gentlemen face to face and tell them exactly what I think of such exhibitors. I can assure them their ears would be red when I got through. Here is an operator who is conscientiously trying to produce good results, but he is working for employers who are either too penurious to buy a modern projector, or else too short-sighted to realize the fact that progress is being made in the perfection of projectors every week in the year, and that even though they had bought a machine four years ago, set it on a shelf and never used it at all, and though it was kept from rusting, it would not be fit to use to-day, particularly in a town where there are competing houses having up-to-date projectors. Exhibitors of this kind are, in the near future, either going to have to mend their ways, or get out of the business. They are being forced out right now every day in the year. Now as to the three-wing shutter, I do not know whether the N. Power Company would install one on a No. 5 or not. You will have to write them about that. Anyway it would be pretty costly, but, be that as it may, it would be foolishness to add a three-wing shutter to a four-year-old out-of-date outfit. Better get a new one. Then, too, there is another equation which enters: The three-wing shutter is not suitable to 60 cycle a. c., though it works all right on that current, provided you do not speed up above 65 turns of the crank per minute. Faster than that the blades get into synchronism with one side of the alternations and produce flashing of the light. A properly proportioned three-wing shutter cuts a little more light than the Powers Five shutter, the difference being about as between 41 and 51 per cent., but such a three-wing shutter eliminates all the flicker, which is more than worth the added necessary current to produce the same brilliancy given by the No. 5 shutter. Another thing I must speak of before closing, viz.: The rank foolishness and conceit of exhibitors who speak to an operator the way these fellows have. Here is a man who worked all night (and I will wager that his salary does not admit of indulging in automobiles either) in an endeavor to repair a machine, only to be greeted with: "Oh, you ought to do that anyhow." I would like to have them make that remark to me just once, under those conditions. I will guarantee they would not make it to anybody else in a hurry again, unless he was a very small man. Such exhibitors, as I before said, are simply forcing themselves out of the business, and the quicker they do it, the better. See reply to Cambridge, Ohio.

Three Wing Shutter, and A. C.

Cambridge, Ohio, writes:

Have Powers Six machine, 110 volts, 60 cycle a. c., 57-foot throw with a 14-foot picture on a concave screen. Use three choke coils connected in multiple series; 3½ inch E. F. projection lens. My trouble is: (1) To eliminate the yellow corners I have to enlarge my spot on the cooling plate and when I do this I get a beautiful perpendicular blue elliptic ghost in the center of my screen. What condensers could I use to eliminate this? (2) There seems to be plenty of current at the arc, but Oh! that fickle a. c. My light waves like the wind was blowing clouds of smoke between my screen and machine at equal intervals. To remedy this I have tried different carbon settings; also made a two-wing shutter, which helped the trouble a little, but I am not yet satisfied. Have not got a hand-book, but will certainly get one when the new one comes out.

(1) You have about a four-inch E. F. objective lens. I think you will find two 7½ condensers to be the right thing. I should say you probably have two 6½s now. Try two 7½s; and one 6½ and one 7½, with the 7½ next the screen. I think with one of these combinations, with the lamphouse located properly, your ghost will disappear. Be sure, however, that your optical system is in perfect line throughout, and that your condensers come within ⅛ of an inch of each other. (2) The waving of the light occurs, I think, only when you run at 70 or more revolutions of the crank per minute. If this is true it is due to the wings of the three-wing shutter getting into synchronism with one side of the alternations so that the light is cut off when it is at its strongest, and the lens is open just as the current changes its direction and has no voltage or amperage. The N. Power Company will furnish you a two-wing shutter, which will obviate this trouble. This two-wing shutter will produce more flicker, and also give you more light than will its three-wing brother. I would advise you by all means to secure one of the hand-books, and if I were you I would even invest in one of the old ones. $1.50 does not count for much when it brings you knowledge of your profession, and I am afraid it will be along in October before we can get the new one out, though we are working on it as hard as we can.

Light Trouble.

Tabor, Iowa, writes:

Am using Standard machine with a 50-foot throw. Condensers are both 7½. Current is 60 cycle, 110 volts, alternating through a 25 ampere rheostat. My light shows up bright for about five minutes, then gets dim and the picture gets out of focus. Have tried setting carbons every way, but it does not seem to help matters. Kindly explain the best way to remedy this trouble, as it is hard on my nerves.

Sometimes it is hard on my nerves explaining these things too, Tabor, and in a case of this kind there is necessarily considerable guesswork attached to it. I believe, however, it is likely that you will find the following will perhaps explain your trouble: (a) Your wires are too small and get warm after being used a few minutes. Most likely your asbestos cable is No. 8 and quite old. After you have been running the machine a few minutes, and your light gets dim, feel of your wires, particularly the asbestos cable, and if they are warm have the place re-wired, and by all means put in No. 6 asbestos cable. (b) Your rheostat passes considerably more current when cold than when hot, hence you are getting more current when you first strike the arc than after the wire heats up. Very likely your rheostat is quite old and a new one might help matters considerably. But all this does not explain the out-of-focus effect, nor can I explain it for you. I do not know any reason for anything of this kind. The various lenses in the objective lens should be set in their mounts so that the heaviest bulge of the lens is toward the screen. Possibly the out-of-focus effect is not present, but only apparent, being due to the dimming of the light.

This does not seem likely, but I cannot imagine any reason for the picture being out of focus after a few minutes' run, if it is all right in the beginning.

Mirror Screen.

Nemo Theater, Johnstown, Pa., writes:

If my memory serves me right I have never seen an article of any kind in the Projection Department from a Johnstown operator. Probably the outside world will think that we have no picture houses here, or else we are know-it-alls, who don't seek information elsewhere. But no, Brother, we don't know it all here, and the department has at least one reader here who is just as anxious for the next issue as he is for his Sunday dinner. Yes, we have some very nice moving picture theaters here, and projection, taken as a whole, is far better than I have seen in some larger cities. I am chief operator at the Nemo Theater, which opened November 29th last. We think we have about the finest house in the country. It is 120 x 54 ft.; 45 ft. high, and has 1,000 seats on one floor. The enclosed circular describes it better than I can. We use two Power's Six machines, one of which has the dissolving stereopticon attachment. The throw is 100 ft. We have a mirror screen 12 ft. 6 inches x 16 ft. 8 inches, and this is what prompted me to write this letter. You asked for information regarding the "mirror screen." It was installed February 19th, 1912, and has proved all that was claimed for it. Prior to its installation, we used the plain white wall for a screen, but when the representative from the firm gave us a demonstration with a mirror by holding a small one over our screen while the picture was being run, we saw the difference, and wherever he held the mirror it looked like a spot light being thrown on. I can get as bright a picture with 25 amperes d. c. on the mirror screen as I could with 40 amperes on the plaster wall. Judging from the comments of our patrons, I am sure the mirror screen has proven a profitable investment. As I said before, the screen is 12 ft. 6 inches by 16 ft. 8 inches and is entirely covered by the picture, the lens being adjusted to cover said size at the 100 ft. throw. The lens is 5.61 inches E. F. When the theater was built I was on the job, and erected the operating room myself. It is 8 x 12 x 7 ft., giving us ample room, and is ventilated with a 16-inch exhaust fan (which is large enough for ventilating purposes, but I think not in case of fire) and there is an air duct 16 inches x 20 inches running from the lower corner of room to the outside of the building, thus giving us pure outside air at all times. Have all openings in the wall (lookouts, etc.) equipped with shutters held up with common cord, and all run to one point, at which they are tied to a fuse link, and in case of fire they would close almost instantly. Am using d. c., pulling about 35 to 40 amperes and am getting a fine picture. Our pictures are as steady as you can get them (not nailed to the screen, or pasted on), for the best of them are going to have some movement either sidewise or up and down, which I think comes from carelessness in printing, or imperfect perforation. Have often been amused at some of the questions asked you through the department, but—well, that is the way to learn. Last winter, I remember, someone asked how much of a load Noah carried at his arc (k). I laughed heartily at some of the answers. Let me give you my theory of it. From the data I have been able to collect, I find that Noah had two "plugs" on board, with a carrying capacity estimated at one horsepower each, or a consumption of 1,492 watts. Assuming the voltage to be 110, and allowing for an overload of about 25 per cent., I should judge that Noah drew close to 17 amperes. But as you said, his arc (k) was grounded in the end, and we will accept that as final. Let me ask you one more question: Do you think a device for setting an outside shutter while the machine is being operated would be of any value to the manufacturers?

We are indeed glad to have your report on the mirror screen. There has, to my mind, been no question as to the value of this article, except that there has been trouble with an out-of-focus effect when seated at an angle to the screen in a wide house. This, as was demonstrated to me in Rochester, has been practically overcome. Your house according to description must indeed be a beautiful one. The shutters must drop instantly instead of "almost instantly." In the new hand-book the method of doing this will be fully set forth and illustrated, and I will guarantee that shutters installed as per direction, which are entirely practical, will drop within two seconds of the starting of a fire. I very much prefer an open vent pipe of ample size where it is possible, instead of a fan, since with an ample vent pipe the fan is unnecessary and the trouble is that in case of fire when the fan is most needed it would be probably shut down. Things most always happen that way, and in any event the fire would put it out of commission in a hurry, then it would merely serve to obstruct the vent and prevent the free escape of the smoke. Once more, I will say that it is not the fire that injures the audience, as a rule, but the panic resulting from the first glimpse of even a small wisp of smoke or flame. It is the prevention of the audience from seeing any such thing which constitutes real fireproofing more than anything else. I had not thought of that plug business in connection with Noah, but I have no doubt that their watt consumption was cut down if they did not "pull" a sufficient number of amperes. Without knowing the details of the proposed shutter I could not answer intelligently.

Pulsating Current.

Schenectady, N. Y., writes:

I have just noticed under the subject "Pulsating Current" page 550, August 10 issue, Philadelphia, Pa., writes to the effect that an alternating current rectifier is not as efficient as one for direct current, by which I presume he means direct current from a generator. There is so little difference between the two that it is hardly worth considering. For instance: In tests which we have made at Schenectady, a carbon lamp with 30 amperes going through it gives 8,600 c.p. from rectified current, and 8,700 c.p. from direct current. Forty amperes gives about 12,150 c.p. from rectified current, and 12,350 c.p. from direct current. This shows a difference in all cases of less than 3 per cent., which is negligible. This very slight difference is accounted for by the fact that on the G. E. Mercury Arc rectifier the pulsating wave does not go to zero on each ½ cycle, but resembles more a straight line, as will be seen by the attached sketch, which shows the current wave form of a G. E. rectifier. As to the balance of your correspondent's letter, I assume this does not refer to rectified current, so am not making any comment.

In this connection there is another letter, from Danvers, Mass., as follows:

The diagram of rectified current as printed on page 550, August 10th issue, is incorrect. Your argument is that a. c. is made up of two alternate pulsations, one in each direction, per cycle, and that a rectifier makes the waves form like sketch A. But is that all? Do you remember in wiring the rectifier how you had to connect up the choke coil? Now that choke coil did the same thing in relation to the current pulsation as a fly does in a reciprocating engine. It sends an after pulsation along, making the wave form like B in the sketch. This after wave probably is enough to hold the arc, since otherwise there would be, theoretically, as much hum and sputter to the pulsating arc as there is with an a. c. arc. Kindly state your views on this question, as I shall be looking for them.

I have stated several times that I consider the pulsating current from the rectifier as very nearly equal in efficiency to d. c. direct from a generator. I am glad to have my opinion upheld by the actual tests made at Schenectady, and while I am not a good enough theoretical electrician to pass an opinion upon the proposition advanced by Danvers, in relation to the choke coil, still I presume he is correct. I will ask Schenectady to set this matter forth if he will, as he is an undoubted authority on such matters. I am sorry I cannot offer my opinion, as per your request, Danvers, but I do not usually pass an opinion on anything unless I am, or at least think I am, prepared to back that opinion up, which I am not in this case.

An Error.

On pages 346 and 347, July 27th issue, in answering St. Louis I was somehow or other made to say that there should be two amperes of current per square foot of screen d. c., or three amperes a. c. President Woods, of San Francisco Local 162, called my attention to the matter and remarked that he had a picture twenty feet wide. He says: "I love my juice, but oh you 600 amperes." It should have read 2-10 of an ampere and 3-10 of an ampere respectively.

Buffalo, Rochester and Syracuse.

The editor has just returned from a trip taking in Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Rochester and Syracuse. The reason for this excursion was a desire to examine the mirror screen in the Grand Theater of Rochester, which screen has a new finish. The mirror screen people claim this finish does away with the out-of-focus effect when sitting to one side of the screen. I landed in Buffalo Saturday night and was met at the depot by Brother P. L. Steves, Business Agent, Moving Picture Machine Operators' Local Union 194, and Brother Solly Prince, who handed me the following communication:

> Whereas, Local No. 220 M. P. M. O. have at different times received friendly communications from Mr. F. H. Richardson, of New York City, editor Projection Department Moving Picture World, and whereas we have received a message stating that Mr. Richardson will pay a brief visit to Buffalo, and vicinity, therefore be it Resolved, That Local 229 reserve accommodations at the Hotel Statler, and make arrangements for entertaining Mr. Richardson while in Buffalo, and be it further Resolved, That this Local instruct its Business Agent, Mr. P. L. Steves, to act as an escort to Mr. Richardson and do all in his power to make his visit to this city a pleasant one, including an automobile trip to Niagara Falls. Signed, James A. Buck, Henry Erneuil, Ed. W. Van Scriver, M. J. Affachiner, Fred C. Taylor.

Let me remark just here and now that when the Buffalo Local starts out to do a thing, it certainly goes the limit. The editor was conveyed to the Statler Hotel, which is Buffalo's finest hostelry, in a taxi, and installed in one of the finest suites of that very swell inn. Next day the balance of the resolution was carried out and Brother Steves proved himself a most excellent entertainer. He showed me Niagara Falls, top, bottom, and sides. We rode on the Maid of the Mist, and did all the various stunts made and provided for the purpose of separating the tourist from his coin. It was a matter of much regret that I was unable to meet more of the Buffalo boys personally, but I wish to sincerely thank them for their kindness during my stay in that charming city. In Rochester my time was limited and there were several things to do. First I went out and had a long talk with the head of the Scientific Bureau of the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company. I learned a good many things while there, and the Scientific Department has promised an article, for the department, dealing with certain phases of the lens proposition. When through there I went up and called on the management of the Grand Theater, Messrs. Thompson and Tyler, who have recently installed a mirror screen, said to be made from the largest piece of plate glass in the world. This was the screen I had come to look at and it was worth the trip. The house is quite wide and quite long, incidentally very tastefully and beautifully designed and decorated. I tested this screen from all parts of the house and find that the results are excellent. From the rear of the house the picture was certainly a marvel of beauty, clear, brilliant and as sharp as a knife. Down close to the screen the picture was still good, though of course a little of its sharpness was lost, as would be the case with any screen. Off to one side, at a very sharp angle, the picture was still fairly clear, and here was where a queer effect occurred. Those who have wide houses and an ordinary screen, know that when the picture is viewed at a sharp angle, the figures of actors appear to be abnormally tall and very thin. This seemed to be entirely absent with this screen, but there was a slight out-of-focus effect, though not enough to present serious objection. I figured that the loss of the elongation fully balances any out-of-focus effect present, and I feel that I can say that the mirror screen with the rough finish, such as Messrs. Tyler and Thompson have, can be successfully used in any house, regardless of its width.

The Grand has a very neat operating room, equipped with two Standard machines. The walls of the room are thoroughly fireproof, and there is a large vent pipe through to the roof. There are shutters for all wall openings, but as usual they were fastened up with cords and fuses which it would take a big blaze to sever. I instructed Messrs. Thompson and Tyler how to so arrange their shutters that they would drop within two seconds of the starting of a fire. It would then be a really thoroughly fireproof operating room. In this connection let me again say that it is not the fire which is usually dangerous to the audience, but the alarm caused by the sight of the blaze or smoke. With a proper vent flue and shutters so arranged that they will drop within two seconds after the starting of a blaze, and with walls thoroughly fireproof, half a dozen reels of film can be burned in an operating room, and the audience would never know a thing about it. Messrs. Thompson and Tyler are experienced showmen, particularly Mr. Thompson, and the result of their experiences shows in the excellence of their projection, as well as in the beauty of their house; also in the fact that they do a land-office business, with automobiles lined up in front of the house every night. The projection, as has been intimated, was very good, though the speed cannot be properly controlled, due to the fact that a two-wing shutter is being used; also the boys were just a little bit careless in handling their light. I dropped in at the Victoria for a few moments, but I did not have time to meet the manager. The light at the Victoria was handled very well indeed during the time I was there, but there is considerable daylight in the house, and the picture showed very dim on the screen, particularly after having viewed the brilliant projection at the Grand. The Victoria will please understand that I am not saying this from any desire to criticize, but merely as a statement of undisputable fact. Mr. Thompson, of Thompson and Tyler, learning that I intended stopping at Syracuse, proposed to take me there, 104 miles distant, in his automobile. Needless to say, I accepted the invitation, and we viewed all the scenery between Rochester and Syracuse—and viewed it in a streak. He has a gasoline buggy that can climb a tree backwards, and not half try.

Resistance Problem.

Illinois writes:

> I think I may say my projection is good, but I would like to ask a question in connection with resistance, the study of which has several times caused me to run a slide where it should have been a spot light, or the reverse. Electrical books state that the drop in voltage in any circuit is equal to the amperes multiplied by the resistance. According to this, assuming an arc lamp to be working on 110 volts, taking 30 amperes and testing 50 volts across the carbons, with 50 volts still remaining, there would only be a drop of 60 volts, which divided by 30 would give you resistance of two ohms for the entire circuit. Now, with only two ohms in the circuit, why is it that the whole 110 volts do not drop when they have a chance, and give us 55 amperes through the arc, instead of only thirty?

Like many another, Kewanee, you are considerably muddled in your ideas as to the action of resistance. I am unable to follow your idea through, but I think you are going at things backward. The voltage drop is the direct effect of the current being forced through resistance. That is to say, when current is forced through resistance, power is consumed in the process, and the only power we have is the pressure or voltage, hence it is consumed, or a part of it is, in forcing the current through. Now in a projection arc light circuit there are two separate resistances, viz.: the rheostat and the arc itself. The d. c. arc ordinarily offers sufficient resistance to consume 48 volts. The theory is that all the voltage is consumed in the rheostat and arc—hence there would be 110—48=62 volts, which would be consumed in forcing the current through the rheostat. The total resistance would be, when pulling 30 amperes, 110÷30=3⅔ ohms, of which 62 ÷30= approximately 2 ohms is in the rheostat and the rest in the arc. I trust this will make the matter sufficiently clear to you. Electrical books state that the resistance equals volts divided by amperes—not amperes multiplied by volts, as you have it.

Condensing System.

New York City writes:

> To settle an argument, will you kindly tell me whether an attachment to be placed upon a cinematograph instrument, which would entirely do away with the condensers, yet give as fine a picture as we now have, would be of value, and if so, what value? Stamp enclosed for reply.

Replies are not made by mail, unless a fee of $1 be enclosed. How in the world do you suppose I can answer your question without knowing something about the nature of the proposed substitute for condensers. It might be something that would work all right, but be entirely too costly to manufacture, or of such size as to render it impractical, or there might be other objections. I cannot answer questions of this kind intelligently without knowing what the proposed substitute is. I think a moment's thought will convince you of this fact.

Instruction Wanted.

Reading, Pa., writes:

> I want to learn the moving picture business thoroughly, from A to Z. To compass this end I want to take a reliable course in projection machine and moving picture camera operating. Would you recommend the correspondence course offered by the American School of Correspondence, of Chicago? If not, which one would you recommend? My idea is to start work as an operator's assistant until I can save enough money for the correspondence course, and also to serve as assistant while studying the course so as to have access to a machine. Then after I am qualified to work as operator I shall get a job at that and save (helping the saving by investments in features) until I have enough to buy a camera and equipment, when I shall start in the manufacture of educational films, in which I believe there is good money for the one who has sense and grit enough to get it out. My mother says "It's all right if you can do it," but father says it's foolish, and wants me to learn the electrical business. There's nothing in armature winding for me, though. I have every confidence in myself and any information you can give me through the columns of your useful paper, which I read from cover to cover each week (ads and all), will be gratefully received.

I have not seen the course offered by the American Correspondence School, therefore can neither recommend nor condemn it. I should say, however, that it is probably as good as any course of the kind you could get, and that it ought to be of value if you do as you have proposed, viz.: secure a position as an assistant and combine the practical knowledge thus acquired with the theoretical knowledge supposed to be contained in the course. Whether you can follow out the program you have laid down will depend on the amount of grit you have got. It can be done all right, but the pathway to success will be a laborious one. However, I admire the man who sets out to do something, and has a definite idea of exactly what he wants to do; therefore I wish you success. After all, about four-fifths of what we call success in life is due to one having confidence in himself.

Flattened Carbons.

Columbus, Ohio, writes:

> I agree with Chicago that the Essanay sub-titles are out of frame. It is not caused by bad patches, but by difference in sprocket holes. Scraping carbons may be an old stunt, but carbons flattened by hand and manufactured flat are entirely different. It is dirty work to flatten them, but I would not do without it, because there is such a difference in the light. My Edison lamp is the old style, but I expect to have a new machine some day soon.

The out-of-frame matter is respectfully referred to my good friend Mr. George K. Spoor for attention. Evidently there is something wrong there, and I guess it is up to the Essanay. As I said before, I found no particular benefit in flattening the carbons, though I gave it a thorough try out. When will managers learn that it is a losing game to continue to use an old out-of-date equipment? It pays to keep up with the procession in the purchase of improved projection machinery.

Comments on the Films

Licensed.

"VICORARA, ITALY" (Cines), August 13.—Vicorara seems a very old city. This release gives us a large number of interesting views of old houses and churches, quaint streets and romantic looking dooryards. The photography is fair, but it might have been better. The pictures are well-chosen and the offering will be acceptable.

"MONA LIZA IN DISGUISE" (Cines), August 13.—A farce giving, according to its subtitle, the very latest version of the theft. It is cheaply conceived and cheaply executed. We doubt whether many will find it funny.

"BASEBALL INDUSTRY" (Lubin), August 15.—A good, interesting industrial. It closes with portraits of the chief players of the Athletics of Philadelphia and shows some speedy views of a game. It will be popular.

"HOLDING THE FORT" (Edison), August 14.—Bannister Merwin has, it seems, a very fertile mind. Seeing pictures like this suggests to one that their author is lucky in happening to be at certain places when interesting or amusing things take place and sees them. This is not the way, though, that art is made. The observation is only the seed; imagination furnishes the final result. The seed is thrown on every mind impartially, the harvest is given only to the fertile mind.

In this picture, a very slight idea is developed into a very amusing character comedy to which a large audience gave emphatic approval. Miss Alice Washburn plays the chief role as an efficient spinster and she is very funny. The situation comes from the assigning of the same room at a hotel to this woman, who is a delegate to a convention, and also to a young newly-married man, played by Edward Boulden. Elsie McLeod plays the bride. Harry Tomlinson and Frank A. Lyons also have roles. It is a desirable comedy offering, a good fun maker and will be liked everywhere.

"THE HINDOO'S CHARM" (Lubin), August 16.—A picture that made one or two laugh; but distressed, or seemed to distress, the majority of the spectators. Any one who can laugh at such a picture must have had a pitiable education, in fact, must be inhuman; its fun comes solely from its suggestion of vulgar possibilities.

"THE BOGUS NAPOLEON" (Vitagraph), August 16.—A good comedy release giving a thoroughly delightful situation, quite fresh and laughable. Its early scenes are, as was proper, very serious; but when the conspirators, who have advertised for a man who looks like Napoleon to play a part in a theater, look over those who are applying for the job, the audience gets plenty of hearty laughs. It is a long scene and it is fine. Ralph Ince and E. R. Phillips, with the good help of Messrs. Bunny, Shea, Chapman and M'Gee, have the honors in this part. Another phase of the same situation is given when these two are considering Napoleon himself for the job, and this scene also is "a scream." The climax stands up with the rest of the picture which, as a whole, is a very desirable release. It was produced by Wm. Humphrey, who plays in it an excellent Napoleon. Messrs. Kent, Edward Lee, Travers, Barry and Morey have good parts.

"THE MAGIC WAND" (Essanay), August 16.—A delightful and very promising situation was quite ruined by its treatment in this particular picture. It illustrates a somewhat watery poem that had a good idea which it treated sentimentally. Its center of interest is a poor little raggedy child who got a job as fairy queen in a Cinderella production. This, as shown, seems highly improbable when there are so many more available children in the world. If her mother had been a once famous star, it might have seemed more convincing. The little tot steals the magic wand hoping to change the complexion of her mother's cheerless den through its power. This brings the manager to her attic and results in the inevitable basket of groceries. The great trouble with the picture is the child player, who never for a moment forgot the camera and was quite wooden throughout. The picture's story cannot help pleasing; but the production is almost without atmosphere.

"IN THE TENTS OF ASRA" (Selig), August 15.—A good picture, telling a story of the Arabian desert, but taken in America with a desert background for its early and its closing scenes and with studio sets for the intermediate scenes. The story is interesting and clearly pictured. The characters are a wild, poetic sheik of the free-footed Asra tribe; with the daughter of the sultan of a city and with palace people and desert folk. The picture's charm comes from its scenes with their graceful figures dressed in silks and gems, etc., rather than from anything in the narrative which doesn't convince. The troupe of players of another company who were in Egypt do much truer work in this atmosphere than any producer at home can ever hope to do. Hobart Bosworth, with Miss Besserer, plays the leading role. It is an entertaining offering.

"AN ADAMLESS EDEN" (Essanay), August 15.—Not good acting even of the Essanay players, nor extremely fine scenes, nor perfect photography, nor a good producer, even if he were as skillful as Belasco, who never would touch such a play, can make an acceptable artistic offering with a crazy man for its hero. It is astonishing to find the Essanay producer attempting it. This release, because of this tremendous handicap, falls as flat as a heavy and watery pancake.

"AN INTERRUPTED ELOPEMENT" (Biograph), August 15.—A good farce comedy that is quite fresh and very funny. We usually enjoy these amusing sketches on the Biograph split-reels. Both readers of this periodical and people we meet on the street find fault with what we say about them. We have been told that we like them only because we have a fixed idea that anything with the Biograph name on is good. It isn't true. The ideas in many of these farces are good (not in all) and they are often played by actors who know their business. They nearly all have one great fault. There is in most of them, in minor parts usually, not always, so much waving of arms and feet and puckering up of lips that it wearies and leaves the impression of silliness. There is some of it in this picture, especially in the lover's man friend who seemed to like the center of the stage. We do not think that the girl's father could have been played better.

"THE TRAGEDY OF A DRESS SUIT" (Biograph), August 15.—On the same reel is this true mirth-maker, with a truly human situation. It has humor mixed with heart-interest and is very well conducted and acted. The audience liked it.

"THE STUBBORNNESS OF YOUTH" (Lubin), August 14.—A farce comedy, in situation and in management like many others that have gone before it. It deals with the same inevitable two fathers, old college chums, who want their children (one has a daughter, one a son) to marry. It is extremely artificial and is no longer fresh. Here, good players were employed; but the fathers were plainly as young as the children. It has some extremely pretty scenes.

"A ROMANCE AT CATALINA" (Melies), August 15.—A pleasant, sentimental love story that is well acted. The views of Catalina are much better than any we have ever seen and are full of the delightful sea-atmosphere of the famous fishing, pleasure resort. There is one incident in the picture that is hard to accept as probable; but there is much in it that is highly commendable for perfect naturalness and, as a whole, it gets over very well and will furnish excellent entertainment.

"KENTUCKY GIRL" (Kalem), August 14.—A race track melodrama of a kind that may safely be warranted to get over with a big, emotional thrill. They all do, when they are well put together; this one does, but they are all very much alike. This one is not quite so good as the best we have seen; but it is pretty effective and has some first class race pictures. There are two stereotyped ways of working out this situation. One is to make the villain "dope" the jockey, compelling the girl to ride in order to pay the inevitable mortgage. The other is to have the villain frustrated in an attempt to "dope" the horse and then confound him on that basis. This picture chooses the latter. Its one fault lies in the fact that it has two heroes, the girl's brother and the jockey whom she kisses. Because it doesn't really tell a love story (all melodramas should, that is what they were invented for) it is weakened. Among the other releases, it makes a good offering.

"THE CACTUS COUNTY LAWYER" (Pathe), August 17.—A picture by the company in the West in which Geo. Gebhart plays the lead as a high hatted and frock coated cactus lawyer. The girl is an heiress and her sweetheart is a cowboy. The lawyer schemes to get the girl for the sake of her estates; but his evil scheme has its weak links. An Indian sees his bandits capture the hero. This brings the cowboys riding to the rescue and the hero arrives home in time to save the girl from wedding the schemer. It is a picture that is well acted by the leads, but not always by the minor figures. The story is so old that it needs more perfect handling. The scenes and riding are good. It makes a fair, average film.

"ON THE MOONLIGHT TRAIL" (Essanay), August 17.—A picture of bandits breaking into a house to steal a package of money. The father of the family lies outside, sandbagged. The mother is sick. The older child, a girl of about twelve who can ride like the wind, has gone for the sheriff. The younger child is smilingly hoodwinking the bad men. It is not convincing. This is partly because it is, in some parts, poorly put together and partly because it is not strongly acted, especially by the children.

"A CONVICT'S GRATITUDE" (Cines), August 17.—A picture telling an incident that happened on an Italian land owner's big farm. An ex-convict has been given work and kindly treated. He shows his gratitude by making the evil son of the house, who is troubling his father's ward, swear that he will never come home again. The story fails to interest keenly; it doesn't really get very far. Also there are some long obscure conversations. The backgrounds are small, but interesting and there are some pretty scenes.

"TWO BATTLES" (Vitagraph), August 17.—In this picture Van Dyke Brooke has produced again, but from a somewhat different angle, a story (by W. Hanson Durham) that was pictured by the same actors, mostly, about a year ago. It is a story of the Boer War. The battle scenes are good. There seems to have been a regiment of English soldiers in the cast and we are given a picture of one of those famous British hollow squares such as have won many a battle. Rapid fire guns were used and there is much smoke. Maurice Costello plays the lead with Miss Rosemary Theby (who, of course was not in the former picture). James Morrison plays the girl's brother whom the other officer takes for her lover and who, outside of the picture, has forged his father's name. It is a better picture than the former; but it fails to convince. It stands for its battle scenes and was probably produced again because of the chance of using British soldiers.

"PATHE'S WEEKLY NO. 34.—This issue is filled with an unusually interesting list of news pictures, many of them marked by especially fine photography. The views of the maneuvers of the French army hospital and dog corps will attract attention. The ambulance has a triple deck, each tier accommodating two patients. The picture wherein the Grand Duke of Mecklenberg is introduced to the patrons of the Weekly will also interest the women and children. The Duke is a husky youngster of several summers—say three or four.

"WITH THE ENEMY'S HELP" (Biograph), August 19.—This story of the prospector for gold may not be on a new theme, but it is served up in a new way—and very interestingly. Little Mary, as the wife of the claim-jumper, takes the part of Faro Kate, and as one of the untamed "wild and wooly" proves that she can hold her own with the best of the specialists in that department of moving picture entertainment. Mr. Mailes played the part of the claim-jumper for all there was in it and added materially to the realism of the picture. Miss Sweet, as the wife of the prospector, was all her name implies. The prospector, his children—a boy and a girl—and in fact the entire company give us in this film their best work. It may be added that this picture was a feature of the Biograph programme at the Chicago Exhibitors' Convention.

"THE DEPUTY'S PERIL" (Lubin), August 17.—Romaine Fielding has produced a thrilling picture—not essentially a Western; its locale well might be any part of the United States. It is a story of the discovery and raiding of a band of counterfeiters; it is all well done from beginning to end. There is a bit of a love story, but it is subordinated to the main business in hand. "The Deputy's Peril" will stand out in any program.

"THE PRISON SHIP" (Kalem), August 16.—A first class historical drama of the Revolution. The British authorities held American prisoners of war in an old hulk anchored in New York harbor. It was a most deplorable fever hole and many a patriot died in it. This picture uses an effective melodramatic formula and works up to a thrilling escape from this ship. The heroine gets word to her lover in the ship and brings a boat under his windows into which he lowers himself on knotted bedding. They are pursued by British soldiers almost to the American camp where the red coats fall into an ambuscade and are cut to pieces by a well-aimed volley. It is as good as the best of this kind that we have had; far better than the average.

The first scene opens in a colonial manor house, the home of the heroine. This set is very well made and the acting is fine except that the servant should not have had his hat on in the presence of his mistress in the house. That didn't belong to colonial times; but to the present. The old ship that was used in the following scenes served very well to suggest the prison. The escape is perfectly conducted. The pursuit, which is conventional, falls down a little now and then; but the climax, where the blue coats volley into the pursuers, is a fine thrill. The photography is excellent.

"SILVER WING'S TWO SUITORS" (Pathe), August 14.—An Indian love story with no white people in the cast. It is very much like other pictures, pretty well acted when it permits acting, which isn't often, and set in pretty scenes. It is neither exciting nor is it convincing. The photography is good.

"SPRING LOG DRIVING IN MAINE" (Edison), August 17.—The other pictures of what may be termed the Edison lumber series, taken in the Maine woods, were, like this picture, received with enthusiasm. The camera man who took this picture knew his business. It makes a desirable release.

"THE HOBO CLUB" (Lubin), August 19.—A short farce in which ten actors dressed as hoboes make fun. It might have been called "The Muddy Creek Yacht Club." It is amusing.

"WON AT HIGH TIDE" (Lubin), August 19.—A very farcial love story. There is very little of it that is really funny.

"THE DAUGHTER OF THE SHERIFF" (Kalem), August 19.—A Western love story like hundreds of others in outline and in quality. It has the usual hold-up scene. There is a little freshness in the rescue of the heroine who lies unwillingly fallen into the hands of a band of outlaws. The running fight with its hard riding and its pistol smoke and the rescue by the sheriff's posse we have seen before.

"A LOVE STORY OF OLD JAPAN" (C. G. P. C.), August 16.—A most charming and graceful picture. It is hand colored, was made in Japan by native players of exceptional ability. We commend it highly. It will please all kinds of audiences.

"VULTURES AND DOVES" (Vitagraph), August 14.—This is a story with a moral—and a warning only too plain. It is not entertainment—at least not in the ordinary sense; it is unpleasant. At the same time, in a well balanced programme, where there are no other "weepers," an exhibitor will do his patrons a distinct service by showing this picture. A widow is lured by an advertisement promising 30 per cent. dividends to withdraw her money from the savings bank and "invest" it in wildcat mining stocks. The banker, aware of her intention, tips off the Federal authorities, and the slick promoter is later raided. The widow, of course, and a lot of other widows and people of small means lose their all. The story is well put on.

"LOVE SICK MAIDENS OF CUDDLETOWN" (Vitagraph), August 20.—The very last scene in this picture has a new twist. The idea, which in the way it is usually shown, is hardly what one could call substantial, has been used more than once by both Licensed and Independent makers and lacks freshness. It is a farce and shows the weakness of the love sick maidens of Cuddletown, who fall in love with the handsome young doctor and pretend to be sick. The Vitagraph people act it pretty well, as well as was possible.

"THE BOX CAR BABY" (Selig), August 19.—A picture of sentiment dealing chiefly with the tramps and a baby they found in a box car. The baby won the hoboes' hearts and the responsibility made them grow respectable. Then they find its parents. There is good humor in the film and the story is fresh enough to be acceptable. There are some unconvincing scenes near the close that show lack of imagination; the mother doesn't seem very real in showing the situation. The picture will stand on its story alone. It gives fair entertainment.

"HIS WINDMILL" (C. G. P. C.), August 20.—A short hand-colored film telling a slight story, but showing a most sensational fire. The mill burns down and it makes a scene very worth while. It is a desirable release.

"THE SEDGE WARBLER AND THE CUCKOO" (C. G. P. C.), August 22.—An educational picture of exceptional merit. It could hardly be more absorbing in interest and might have been entitled a little tragedy in bird life. This week's C. G. P. C. release is exceptional. It surely is a desirable number.

"THE RETURN OF BECKY" (Essanay), August 20.—A picture in which Miss Beverly Bayne plays the lead in a charming role. The situation is old; but is worked out with unexpected freshness, making a delightful human heart story. The country girl who is a good singer and to whom a metropolitan impressario has given a card, is on her way to the city to become a star opera singer, but is turned back home by a sad story. Because of good acting and also because of its pleasing sentiment the picture stands up very well.

Independent.

"THE DISPUTED CLAIM" (Majestic), August 27.—Majestic makes its bow as a producer of Western pictures. The setting was admirable, the plot was acceptable. One situation was especially strong—that wherein the claim jumper had tied to a tree the owner of the claim, only a moment later to be himself caught in a bear trap. Had it not looked as though Prior could easily have lifted his arm out of his bonds the situation would have been even more convincing.

"CHAPPIE, THE CHAPERON" (Imp), August 24.—John Cumpson does a female impersonation in a farce comedy. He is in love, and things come his way so well that he is able to secure a position as chaperon in the family of his sweetheart. The father of the young woman, however, discovers the imposition and telephones for the police. Before the bluecoats arrive, father has been thrown into a closet and locked in. The alleged chaperon and the daughter in the meantime are on the way to the minister, the chaperon getting back to his usual togs en route. Father is being taken away by the police as a real burglar, and appeals to the returning couple to identify him. He yields his forgiveness and blessing willingly. There are some amusing situations.

"THE WILL OF JOHN WALDRON" (American), August 29.—A strongly tragic picture with good characterization. The Flying A people are pulling a strong oar in the photoplay business with these tragic pictures of human lives in the rough. There is a breath of surrounding wilderness in them. They show the forces that made the conquest of the American Southwest possible, choosing moments when the energy was turned inward to self-destruction. They are vivid presentations. They, at their best, are like flashes of electric fire. The storm is clearing the atmosphere and they open at the moment when the flame is about to strike.

The best of them even may not be, surely are not, the greatest American pictures; but they are truly and thoroughly American pioneer pictures. They picture us. No one in this country could rightly be ashamed of what they show, very few of us would be. We are not a nation of mollycoddles. Some of us are as thoroughly bad as men have ever been and some of us are as thoroughly good. In these pictures the good triumphs. In real life it doesn't always; but we, as a nation, like to have it so, will have it so if possible. We are still a fighting people. We are not yet ready to put up with evil, just because it is.

"THE GREAT GEYSERS OF YELLOWSTONE PARK" (Imp), August 24.—On the same reel as the foregoing are some fine pictures of this great national institution.

"DOLLS" (Eclair), August 27.—This is a pretty story. It brings out the capacity of the little folks for bringing together those they love—little ones who are not shackled by conventionality. Clara Horton has the part of the child, and she takes it well. Barbara Tennant takes the role of Nellie Simpson, a girl whose father has just died, and who seeks refuge from her sorrow in good works. She is aided in these by Dr. Day, played by Leslie Stowe. Robert Frazer takes the part of the father of the little girl. It is all well done.

"THE COURAGE OF FEAR" (Milano), August 24.—There is a particularly strong situation in this picture, and the two leading characters have made the most of it. A murderer breaks out of jail. In his escape he enters private grounds. Seeing a window open in the residence he enters through it. It is a bedroom. The mistress of the house returns and prepares to retire. She sees in her mirror the face of the murderer, who is under her bed. As she has a description of the convict she recognizes the man. Calling her maid, she writes a note, repeating aloud what she pretends to write. Verbally she indicates that she is sending for money to be sent to her immediately. Actually she is writing to her lover, an officer of the police, telling him of her desperate situation. The picture depends on this scene for its value, but it is enough. The work of the leading woman and of the man who portrays the convict is of a high order.

"THE CASTAWAYS" (Imp), August 22.—King Baggot and Violet Horner make much of a scenario that is not overstrong. There is a good surf scene, and there are some hand-to-hand contests which hold interest. The work of the company is first-class.

"AN OLD-FASHIONED GIRL" (Rex), August 29.—Lois Weber takes the title role in a typical Rex production. She plays the part and looks the part. She is more than interesting. She charms; she is wholesome—good to look upon. Phillips Smalley takes the character of a country lawyer, and the support he gives is of the best. There are some fine backgrounds, among them a garden such as city dwellers—and for that matter suburban dwellers—are rarely privileged to see. Aunt Mary also is good. The characterization of the father of the girl is overdrawn—stagy.

"HER COUSIN FRED" (Victor), August 23.—Florence Lawrence and Owen Moore have the leads in a story that does not quite measure up to its Victor predecessors. It gets over, though, with the push that these two competent players are able to put behind it.

"HER DIARY" (Powers), August 21.—John Cumpson lends his presence to a half-juvenile comedy in which the chief character is a little girl who contracts the diary habit.

"THE JEALOUS RAGE" (American), August 26.—A picture in good style by the Flying A premier company that is strongly dramatic and satisfying. Miss Von Trump plays the most interesting role and shows much ability in depicting a half-wild, uninstructed girl who is called "the waif of the canon." There was love-making going on in her vicinity and she was shut out of it. The love making wasn't smooth; it wasn't likely to be when a stranger (Kerrigan) steals this girl (Miss Bush) away from a man (Richardson) who has rough friends in the canon. Things needed only a spark to explode a tragedy. The jealous waif supplies it and the result is a thrill. More than one man bites the dust and, at the end, the waif too crumples up, a stray bullet through her fiery heart. It is another live wire by the Flying A.

"A CORNER ON KISSES" (Majestic), August 25.—A pretty picture with an amusing comedy situation that is very acceptably acted. The "kisses" were really candies; but the lover, he was shown as being of a jealous disposition, understood the term as a man who was in love naturally would. The characters are people of culture and act like such. It is not what one could call a strong picture, yet it pleases from first to last and the amusement will now and then rise into laughter. The scenes are often lovely, the best of them are narrow glimpses of a quiet stream, also wood scenes or a bit of a porch and garden.

"ANDROCLUS AND THE LION" (Gaumont), August 23.—A widely known classic story has been filmed in this picture, which is hand-colored. The story, gracefully acted and beautifully costumed, is not tensely dramatic. The fact that a real tame lion was used (the beast did not seem any too tame either) gives it a peculiar interest. It ranks high as entertainment; but it is not the best example of colored film. Coloring is apt to make a film dim and naturally some products of camera and developing both are better adapted to it than others. This picture needs a strong light behind it.

"THE WOOING OF WATHENA" (American), August 21.—A picture telling the story of a white girl who was stolen by Indians and brought up as a squaw. She, later, attracts a young civil engineer and through him, find her father. It is very melodramatic and fails to get over strongly or to convince our emotions. The photography also is poor.

"ONE AGAINST ONE" (Reliance), August 21.—A picture illustrating a very slightly dramatic incident. A northwest mounted policeman follows a fugitive into a wild rocky valley and has a sharp revolver duel with him. The picture, as entertainment, rests largely on its forest scenes and beautiful wild backgrounds. Some of these views are perfectly photographed. Hector Dion plays the officer and James Cooley the outlaw. Miss Gertrude Robinson plays the girl whom both love. We recognize, in one of the minor figures, our confrere Hugh Hoffman of this paper. Hugh was taking a vacation. Director O'Sullivan probably saw his chance to get even for past criticisms.

"TOMMY SAVES HIS LITTLE SISTER" (Lux), August 16.—A detective story with a juvenile leading part. It is a picture that holds the interest; but, as it fails to convince (except at moments when good business relieves it) it never reaches breathless suspense. There are excellent and well-pictured scenes in it.

"THE HOUSE OF NO CHILDREN" (Comet), August 19.—A comedy in which a hard-hearted appartment house agent has a dream that softens his attitude toward possible tenants who have children. He is made to live for a while in a land where no landlords are wanted. There are a number of children in the cast and it has a situation that will appeal to many; but it has been done before and lacks, at least for those who have seen many pictures, true freshness. We commend its present handling. It gives entertainment.

"UNCLE'S FAVORITE PUDDING" (Lux), August 23.—A good farce comedy in which a pretty niece steals a march on the family cook. A rich uncle loved a certain kind of pudding and had proposed to the cook so that he could have it always. Pride made the cook a little too independent and niece found the receipe for the pudding. Situations like this have too often been forced and made to bore spectators. It is refreshing to find this picture done naturally and simply. The situation is necessarily exaggerated, yet such have possibilities of fun. There is amusement in this. It isn't a substantial offering; but it is good entertainment.

"VIEWS OF THE LIORAN" (Lux), August 23.—The Lioran seems to be a mountainous land and these interesting views of it were taken in winter. They give something of the industries of the land and also some lovely scenery. Together they make a good offering.

"THE ALIBI" (Nestor), August 21.—A pretty good film. It has a strong situation; for a Western, one of the best we have seen in some days. We think that a better, more convincing ending might have been written for it. As it is, the outlaw, who in the midst of the desert, made a grinding, ruinous bargain with a miner whose family was dying of thirst, is, later, chased by a posse to the miner's house. The crime they thought he had committed had been perpetrated the very moment the man had been exacting all the miner's hard-earned gold for a little water. The alibi was good. But if the sheriff believed the miner and his wife after the outlaw had died, he might just as well have believed them before. The outlaw's state of mind, after their testimony had freed him, would have been even more interesting than anything in the picture, good as it now is. It is a pretty well acted picture and has some fine scenery. One cannot help thinking that the usual running fight between the outlaw and the posse was what kept it from a better ending. As we said before, it is among the best Westerns we have seen in some time.

"A CHILD TO THE RESCUE" (Eclair), August 18.—A cleverly written picture by Andrée Hugon; it deals with a crafty "gentleman" burglar, made to seem uncannily skillful by the mysterious apparatus in his fine house. The producer has heightened the effect of the unfolding story by truly remarkable lighting and by lovely photography. The plot is melodramatic, in general outline not much unlike other pictures, but the characters are freshly conceived and splendid acting makes them intensely interesting, so that the suspense is well maintained and very real. The stage work, as usual with this make of film, is highly commendable. It is a desirable release.

"WHITE DOVE'S SACRIFICE" (Gem), August 20.—An Indian picture, written by Lawrence A. Hasse and told in very beautiful backgrounds of forest, mountain stream and tepee village. There are some pretty civil life scenes also. A white man elopes with an Indian girl and there is a cleverly conducted chase in canoes and through the woods. The reception of the squaw by the white men's friends and his treatment of her and her rebellion and final sacrifice have much that is both human and dramatic; but also much that is too inhumanly heartless to be pictured, as is done here, as though they had a natural part in life. Skillfully as the picture was conducted, it is probable that sensitive people won't like it. No one could help liking many of its scenes; they are lovely. No one could help admiring the way it is acted.

"WHEN THE HEART CALLS" (Nestor), August 19.—Soft-toned, Nestor photography is one of the excellencies of this picture. It tells a love story with a city man coming, for a vacation, to the ranch where the pretty heroine lives. They fall in love with each other; but later, in the city, the man tries to forget. The girl's father comes to the city to find him, just as he starts for the country, back to the girl. It is a very old situation treated with some freshness, but hardly enough freshness to make it really worth while. Yet the story is wholesome, pleasant and has been liked in the past. Among many pretty scenes there are two (one is a leafy porch and one is a rural free delivery mail box) that were shown too many times from the same angle. This is very apt to make a picture seem manufactured rather than natural.

"HOW HE MADE GOOD" (Bison Universal), August 20.—The photography of this picture is just a trifle misty; but it seems strangely like real life. It is more stereoscopic than usual and all the tones and details come out as the eye sees them. The story is romantic with a very conventional situation; but although a good deal of it is just riding it is clearly and smoothly told and made effective by good acting and wise scene-choosing. The characters are well drawn and do much to make it convincing, while it is on the screen at least. Many of the scenes are fine; but one is worth especial notice—the dooryard scene at the ranch house; it was taken from outside the gate and looks in under what seem to be plum trees. The offering gives good entertainment and can be commended.

"WANTED, A WIFE IN A HURRY" (Eclair), August 20.—In this picture, Aunt Mary refuses to increase her hopeful nephew's allowance till he is married. Nephew tries to fool aunty, but fails and has to make good. The picture shows us his wild attempts to find a spouse. Everybody knows that there are preposterous people in the world, and the fun in such a situation depends on keeping up the illusion that the hero is surely one of these. When it is worked out, as in this picture, with the help of a man impersonating a woman, as the wife, it is hard to keep up the illusion. The plot of this picture shows much care; but not enough to make it really live. The first part promises well, but the action quickly becomes unbelievable. It is speedy and very well acted; but it won't entertain the critical.

"A STUBBORN CUPID" (Nestor), August 23.—There is a very old fairy story in which, to win a princess, several knights start out to find and bring to her a pearl of great price or some other rare gem. In this comedy picture the ranch girl, who is of course, the princess, promises her love to the first of three suitors who will bring her a white donkey. The luckiest one did get a white donkey; but had trouble in delivering it. The most foolish one bought a white goat which he could carry; but this was not what was wanted. The cleverest one whitewashed a grey donkey. Which one won and why the picture shows; but not until is has given the spectators many a good laugh. It is a very fresh and clever picture, one that we can recommend for all kinds of spectators and do it with pleasure. By the way, the Cupid referred to is the white donkey.

"THE BOMB AND THE BUM" (Champion), August 19.—A very pointless farce. The idea is not bad and even a picture of it acted as this is will give some amusement. There are also some good views of New York City in it. It makes fun, pointless fun, of the police department.

"NIAGARA FALLS" (Champion), August 19.—On the same reel is this view of the falls, probably taken in early winter. It is good, but we have seen better photographs than most of it. Some close views of the water are superb.

"THUS MANY SOULS" (Rex), August 18.—Marion Leonard plays in this picture's early scenes a young woman struggling to earn a livelihood by writing stories. The plot takes a melodramatic path that is somewhat out of the ordinary as showing a phase of modern literary life not often pictured. This fact takes it out of the usual experience of common people and consequently blunts a little the edge of sympathy that the average spectator will feel for it. Miss Leonard does much to counterbalance this defect; but coming to the plain truth, the picture is not convincing and, with all its excellencies, is not very effective.

"THE PADRONE'S DAUGHTER" (Imp), August 19.—There is a great difference in the quality of pictures. This is a melodrama mixing realism and romance. The heroine is played extremely well by Vivian Prescott, while Mr. Crane fills the role of heroic fireman who rescues her from a burning house. From its early scenes, which show the struggles of the girl in her home environment, we expected a first class picture. The latter scenes did not wholly disappoint us, except in this that they were conventional and did not show any fresh imagination at all. The fire pictures are fair, but we have seen better. It is a good release to show; but it will hardly excite special notice. The villain's role is filled by Wm. Shey and H. Smith plays the girl's father, the padrone.

"THE LONESOME TRAIL PIONEERS" (American), August 28.—A picture by a new Flying A company. There are many faces in it, but we recognize none of them. The story is melodramatic; but not like other pictures of this brand. It is complicated and obscure, too obscure for us to be able to tell the story. It is queerly conducted. The photography is poor.

At the Sign of the Flaming Arcs

By G. F. Blaisdell.

ALL followers of Dr. A. Conan Doyle will be glad to learn that Sherlock Holmes is to be put into serious pictures. There have been few characters in modern fiction who have attained wider popularity than has this fascinating creation of the medico-author. Not only is Sherlock Holmes to be "filmed," but he is to be staged in a manner in some ways unprecedented even in these days when the motion picture achievement of yesterday is outstripped by the distinct advance of to-day.

"Sherlock Holmes" will comprise ten reels. Of these six are already finished and will be in this country by September 1.

These pictures have been made under the personal direction and supervision of Dr. Doyle. The sum paid for the rights of the stories and for supervision by the author has not been publicly announced. When it is given out film lovers will gain new faith in the permanence of the motion picture. It is sufficient at this time to say that the figure will be by far the largest amount ever paid one man or woman for work in motion pictures, and that it is fully commensurate with the extraordinary sums paid to Dr. Doyle for purely literary work.

The Eclair Company of Paris is making the pictures. They will be exhibited in the United States through the agency of Universal Features.

* * *

John Steppling has broken the corking comedy trio of Essanay. Missimer and Mason will look lonesome without him. In Biograph's half reel of comedy entitled, "The Tragedy of a Dress Suit," released August 15, Steppling makes his debut as a Biographer. Essanay's loss is Biograph's gain. Steppling's work has brought him deserved popularity. That the esteem in which he is held by picture-goers will be augmented in his new alliance there is no question.

* * *

Alfred Sutro, famous English dramatist, interviewed by Garnet Warren in the Sunday Times, declared his disbelief in the approach of a time when the great dramatic stars would find it more profitable to appear in film and phonograph in conjunction, by which the stars could be seen in a hundred places in an evening, rather than to depend upon the single audience.

"Such an arrangement," said Mr. Sutro, "makes no allowance for the human element, either from the star's point of view or that of the audience. It makes no allowance for the actual love of dramatic work on the part of the actor; for it is an impossibility that any one could become a great actor who does not love the actual grind of work. An actor or actress loves to act, craves to act; and the apparently desirable proposition by which he or she could eliminate the hardships of 'the road,' and appear luxuriously but once in a play, is really, to the great actor, not desirable at all. The question of the lost applause and acclaim and the fascination of the limelight, too, must be taken into account. These are things which can never be changed into dollars. The star's shadow would fail to satisfy."

* * *

At the convention of the New York State Library Association, to be held at Niagara Falls, September 23 to 28, the Russell Sage Foundation, which has made a careful investigation of the subject, will submit an illustrated outline of the possibilities of motion pictures in the educational field.

* * *

General Manager Harry Raver, of the Film Supply Company of America, was one of the manufacturers' representatives at the recent Exhibitors' Convention in Chicago. Speaking generally of the results attained, Mr. Raver admitted that the exhibitors had accomplished far more than he had believed possible. The Film Supply had been concerned in interesting the exhibitors in the adoption of a policy which would mean the elimination, the extermination, of the junk exchanges. It is estimated that $30,000 to $40,000 a week goes into the treasuries of concerns which do not handle new films.

"The exhibitors have it in their power," said Mr. Raver, "to change this condition. Legitimate buying exchanges invest money every week in new films. When these attain a certain age there is no further use for them—their trade does not want old films. The consequence is these are sold into some junk exchange in another territory and put on by the cheaper class of exhibitors, who show five or six reels of this stuff for a nickel. We figure if this thirty or forty thousand dollars could be converted into legitimate exchanges all theaters could be taken care of and the exhibitor would get a better service for the same price he is now paying for junk because the buying exchange could afford to spend the money for new films.

"The Film Supply tried to point out a constructive policy the adoption of which it believes will be for the good of the entire industry. We believe the old films, the rainy, streaky, oily films, do irreparable damage to the business, and that it is better for an exhibitor to show three new reels for ten cents than five abominations for five cents. Let the exhibitors encourage the public to go to two good shows in one evening. That is far better than seeing one wretched one."

* * *

The writer of Selig's "Box Car Baby" knew human nature. He could not have built a stronger line than when he made the sick mother write to the men who for three years had cared for her little one: "God bless you, wherever you are, for taking care of our child." It turned a semi-comedy into real drama.

* * *

Kalem is using a spider on its trailer, varying the well known pencil.

* * *

S. E. Monfort, in charge of the City Newsboys Bureau in Cincinnati, is anxious to start a movement for the purification of the popular song. He declares, and with how much truth those who are obliged to listen to a few of these musical-literary efforts can sorrowfully affirm, that matters have reached such a stage where Uncle Sam should step in in some cases and invoke the statute against obscene matter in the mails. Mr. Monfort says the popular song of to-day is "doing more harm among the boys and girls than any moving picture show that ever was produced."

* * *

A voluntary commission has investigated moving pictures in Cincinnati. The Cincinnati Star says one of the curious results of the investigation was the number of men found in the audiences. "They predominate," says the report, "even during the afternoons. In spite of the general opinion, the real support of the theaters comes from adults rather than from children." This may be news to the general public; it is not to the general exhibitor.

INTERNATIONAL FEATURES.

In the feature film camps these days one cannot help but notice the hustle and bustle. Everywhere everyone is in action. Not that they are doing such a tremendous business for they are not. They will tell you that themselves, though they haven't much time for chatting with visitors. They will also tell you, if you happen in on any one of them, and this without exception, that this fall is to witness the largest feature film season in the history of the business.

The offices of the International Film Traders, 5 West 14th St., was visited by a representative of the Moving Picture World this week, and during an interview with the president of the concern he was informed that this company, like the rest of the feature film companies, expect a large demand for three-reel special subjects, and through their agents on the continent are fortifying themselves for the rush. Correspondence from their foreign representatives shows large purchases with promises of early delivery. To date, five shipments of three-reel dramatic subjects have been received with the following titles: "A Noble Lie," "Sicilian Love," "Unknown Mother," "The Past That Returns," and "Madeline," an episode of the war of 1870-1871 between Germany and France.

DIRECTOR AT LIBERTY.

Mr. Horace Vinton has recently severed his connection with the Comet Film Company. He had held the position of producer and scenario editor with the American, St. Louis and Comet companies and has had a long and varied experience both in dramatic and moving picture work. During his connection with the above company he has been responsible for the following among other successful photoplays: "A Bachelor's Romance," "The Interrupted Wedding," "My Wife's Birthday," "Two Women and One Man," "Reggie Breaks the College Rules."

PATHE FRERES REPUDIATE "DR. BLAKE."

Pathe Freres recently received a letter from E. M. Rall, of the Rose Theater, Sumas, Wash., stating that a man calling himself Dr. Blake is circulating the report that Pathe Freres agree to equip men with camera, developing tank, etc., free of charge and give 75 cents per foot for all negative films turned in by the recipient of the outfit, who would thus become a cameraman for Pathe's Weekly.

Pathe Freres are desirous of having it distinctly understood that they have no connection with any Dr. Blake, that he is not authorized to make any such statement, and that the statement is not true.

EVER DANCE THE "FLYING A" POLKA MARCH?

Pobably not. But there is just such a dance or, rather, march. It was written by La Monaco and dedicated to the American Film Manufacturing Company, by the great musician, and played by his band for the first time on Sunday, July 28th, at Santa Barbara, before the assembled company of the American Film Manufacturing Company.

The Darling of the C. S. A. (Kalem.)

ROMANCE is worthy in itself; like good wine, it needs no bush and, like the rose, is its own excuse for being. The best kind of romance flowers is the Kalem release for Sept. 7—"The Darling of the C. S. A.," a war-time and battle picture. This does not tell a love story strictly speaking. Its hero is the army of the Confederacy and its heroine is a very lovely Southern girl who acts as a spy to help the cause, and who is the idol of the army. On this fact the story depends. The loyalty of the whole army to the girl is made convincing and the idea is given dramatic energy by it and carried over in good shape. The story is said to be founded on a historical incident. Let that be as it may; neither the Nibelungen lied, nor the Saga of the Volsungs, tells a more heroic or more worthy incident. There is more than one thrill in the picture, but the climax is a big thrill.

Miss Anna Nilson plays the leading role as Agnes Lane, the spy. She is herself the personification of romance, has youth, much beauty and light, slightly curly hair that the breeze catches at as she turns in the picture. The little wind-sprite tips it with his wings and turns again to play with another lock, the rascal. She is practically the center of every scene except those in which the troops maneuver. The battle scenes are very well done. They are hard scenes to make pictorially convincing, and always are helped much by good sound effect and military music. These scenes will stand by themselves, the troops are well trained, the bursting shells, especially when they drive back the Confederate ammunition wagons, looks like the real thing; and the belching cannon with the rifle smoke fills the picture without hiding it: but they will be greatly helped by special preparation on the exhibitor's part. The acting is of high order. Slight faults will be found in nearly every film; but the excellence of this picture far outweighs its shortcomings.

Like a beautiful frontispiece, the opening scene presents the heroine. She sits gracefully on her black horse and is dressed in a flowing 1860 riding habit and has a white willow plume. An old darky shuffles up, hands her a written message and she gallops off to the Confederate camp, where the soldiers greet her coming with cheers. Her position in the story is made clear at once. Other scenes come; the action develops quickly. Gen. Beauregard, we find, needs powder, but it can't be got to him for the Federals hold the ford. They have built a fort to guard it. The heroine enters this to get information and is captured, but manages to escape in the confusion caused by a pretended attack. This gives her an idea which she uses in a very heroic way later. Gen. Beauregard is growing desperate for powder. The wagons try to pass again, but shells from the fort drive them back. Three attacks on the Federals have failed. The girl, knowing the situation, enters the fort of her free will. The soldiers, being told of this, attack the position again furiously and this time capture it. It is a worthy release.

MICHELFELDER BREAKS THE MONTCLAIR ICE.

For several years past, the town of Montclair, N. J., has enjoyed the dubious distinction of being the only town of its size in America that has had no regular moving picture exhibitions. Influence of many kinds was brought to bear upon the proud though somewhat hypocritical selectmen who controlled the municipality, all without avail. Even the arguments of the astute Frank L. Deyer, general supervisor of all the Edison enterprises, fell upon ears that heard, but did not heed, and he a wealthy resident of the town. Horace G. Plimpton, superintendent of the Edison Moving Picture Company, also an exemplary resident, spoke to the village solons with tears in his eyes and a lump in his throat, trying to get them to listen to reason, but they maintained a Puritanical silence and voted—"Nay."

Then, a short while ago, came one Carl Michelfelder to Montclair. Yellow of hair, blue of eye, and silent of tongue, he quietly turned the trick. How he did it we do not know, but the next time we see him we intend to find out. Mr. Michelfelder was first heard of in the motion picture business four years ago when as a green exhibitor he bought a "lemon" theater on Jersey City Heights. He received much sympathy from his fellow exhibitors at their meetings. But finally the old Auditorium began to pay. The next heard of him was as proprietor of the Michelfelder Circuit, being a chain of theaters he had bought or erected in several New England cities. Now out of fifteen applicants he is granted a license in the forbidden city of Montclair, N. J., and is erecting a beautiful theater there, seating 1,200 people, at a cost of $90,000. His former sympathizers would do well to ask him how to make a picture theater pay.

DEATH-DEFYING FEAT.

Climbing a twenty-story building, on the outside, without any artificial aid of any kind, is the death-defying feat performed by Law, the famous dare-devil steeplejack, for the exclusive use of the Animated Weekly.

A twenty-story Wall Street skyscraper was selected by the management of the Weekly for this feat, and the picture of the occurrence as shown in issue No. 24 of the Animated Weekly is a thriller. The photography is exceptionally clear and the action breathlessly interesting.

In this same issue of the Weekly is pictured one of the largest and most destructive dock fires that has occurred in New York in years. The fire is depicted from start to finish and the picture shows, in a comprehensive manner, the New York Fire Department fighting the flames through the medium of four or five fire tugs from the Hudson River, and the regular Fire Department from Manhattan Island. The balance of this issue is replete with interesting views of timely current events from all over the globe.

Scene from "The Darling of the C. S. A.," by the Kalem Company.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"THE GREASER AND THE WEAKLING" (American).

When old man Crawley died, there was general sorrow on the big N Ranch; sorrow, however, which was not shared by one of the ranch hands, a handsome Mexican, generally disliked for his bullying ways. When the news reached Europe, the two daughters came home and on the day of their arrival Jack Harding, foreman, called to pay his respects to the widow and to meet the girls. It was love at first sight between him and pretty Florence, although no mention of the matter was made to anyone.

Then the greaser asserted himself. He found in Johnny Williams a reluctant and hesitating ally. They plan to marry the girls and thus obtain control of the ranch. Pursuant of this policy, the greaser often threw himself in Florence's path and finally declared himself. She spurned him promptly. But affairs proceeded more smoothly with Johnny. Evelyn soon learned to love him and he to love her, sincerely and honestly. He repented of his bargain and finally, conscience-stricken, confessed the plot to Evelyn and she, out of bigness of her heart, forgave him. He then confessed to Florence, who consulted her sister and finding a real attachment between them, forgave him also. At last, screwing his courage to the sticking point, Johnny went to Jack Harding. Jack, however, was not so easily satisfied. He sought out the greaser and thrashed him roundly and then confessed his own love for Florence.

Scene from "The Greaser and the Weakling" (American).

The greaser fled. A few days later he returned and finding Evelyn alone in the fields, kidnapped her. He did not escape the vigilant eye of Johnny, however, who opened fire on him. A royal battle followed and the greaser sank to the ground mortally wounded. This picture will be released Monday, September 2.

MONTREAL THEATERS BUILDING.

The Colonial Amusement Company is at the present time operating two picture houses in Montreal. One of them, the "Passe Temps," corner St. Denis and St. Catherine streets, lately built, is the model of perfection and has everything a good show house needs. Mr. J. Arthur Hirsch is looking after the management. The other house in building is the "Colonial," located in the heart of the shopping district of the city, on St. Catherine street, corner University street. When completed it will be a marvel of architecture and hold over 1,000 seats. The Passe Temps has over 500 seats. In construction there are several others, "The Laurier Palace," "Scala," "The Strand" and "Wonderland."

BETTY AND THE ROSES" (Lubin).

This is a pretty and romantic picture with all of the dainty little tricks used by sweethearts to win in the game of love. Flowers and notes are slyly placed and sometimes lost by a wind puff. If the missives had been entrusted to Uncle Sam there would be no risk of delivery. The romance of the story verifies the lines of Omar Khayyam: "A book of verses underneath the bough. A jug of wine, a loaf of bread and thou."

Tom White's father is wealthy; Tom is lazy, fond of luxury and averse to work. His father receives a letter that a relative has died and left him a country estate at Rosedale. Here is the chance to get some work out of Tom. White sends his son to Rosedale to assume charge of the estate.

Scene from "Betty and the Roses" (Lubin).

Tom tears himself away from the city, angered at his father. In Rosedale Tom is miserable. He loathes the solitude and writes his father that he cannot exist in a "deserted graveyard." His sole companion is a grumpy butler, who is perpetually sad. One morning, while Tom is eating breakfast, a bright, winsome smiling face is reflected in the mirror across from the dining table. He leaps to his feet, impressed with the idea to gain the girl's friendship.

She is called "Betty of the Roses" because of her penchant for spending most of her time in the rose garden adjoining Tom's property. But she is a worrying, teasing young miss and while Tom tries vainly to impress her with his love, she wears a tantalizing air of indecision that is maddening. At the same time, Hiram, a country lout who imagines he loves Betty, worries her with his advances. She laughs at him. Hiram's real admirer is Sallie Rhodes, a country damsel. But Hiram will have none of her. Finally Tom, in his room, reads that in the language of flowers the red rose stands for love. He writes a note to Betty asking her if she really loves him to leave a rose on her window-sill next morning. He creeps forth to slip his note under Betty's window. Betty receives the note with secret delight, sleeps with it under her pillow, and early next morning she places a red rose on her window sill, with a note reading: "If the rose means love, this will show you just how much I value your affections." Before Tom arrives at the window, Hiram accidentally passes by. His eye catches sight of the rose and he carelessly thrusts it in his button hole. He reads the note. He is carrying a bunch of carrots at the time and replaces the note with one of the carrots. Tom finds the note and the carrot. In despair he packs up to go back to the city. Outside his front door he encounters Hiram. Hiram ironically offers him a carrot. As Tom angrily dashes it to the ground, he sees the rose in Hiram's coat lapel. He gives Hiram a punch in the head after Hi has confessed, and rushes around to find Betty. He finds her, and papa White gets this message: "This is the finest place in all the world; my wife and I are going to settle here."

"WIFFLES AND THE MAGIC WAND" (C. G. P. C.).

Wiffles and his wife are both invited to witness the demonstrations of a fashionable magician at a friend's house, but, unfortunately, before setting out they begin to quarrel. The tirade continues throughout the journey and upon reaching the hostess' house, after a particularly scathing insult, the wife gives Wiffles a black eye, and leaves him there.

His hostess comes to console him and by a little deft use of the powder puff, Wiffles finds that his eye escapes comment. He can now devote himself to watching the marvellous feats of the Professor, and in doing so, wife and eye are alike forgotten. The Professor, with the aid of the magic wand makes vases and so forth appear and disappear at will.

Scene from "Whiffles and the Magic Wand" (C. G. P. C.).

Wiffles has an inspiration, and, in the hope that he will be able to control his wife, he purchases the magic wand from the Professor.

Wiffles returns home where his wife, impatient at his tardiness, has begun her dinner. She begins to storm at him again, but Wiffles smiles with confidence as he hugs the wand beneath his coat. His wife becomes exasperated and aims a blow at his head. With a majestic flourish, Wiffles taps her head with the wand, but, alas! with the wrong end, and a facsimile of his wife appears on the other side of him. Between the two he is forced to his knees, made to apologize, and the wand is wrested from his nerveless grasp.

On the same reel is "The Bud, the Leaf and the Flower"; a splendid colored illustration of the growth of a beautiful flower, same to be released on September 6th.

"BEATRIX D'ESTE" (C. G. P. C., Colored).

Beatrix d'Este, after the death of her husband, sends word to her father, the Duke of Ferrare, of her wish to be given asylum and protection. The Duke, grieving with his daughter in her sorrow, welcomes her warmly and gives all that she asks. Beatrix is very beautiful, and soon after her advent to the Duke's castle, Orlando, an Italian nobleman, falls deeply in love with her. He skilfully declares his affection and Beatrix confesses to returning it.

Scene from "Beatrix d'Este" (C. G. P. C.).

At the end of her period of mourning, Beatrix is asked for in marriage by the Duke of Milan, and her father, wishing her to enter into so powerful an alliance, commands her to accept the offer. Beatrix, however, refuses, much to his anger and much to the Duke's disappointment.

Anxious to know Beatrix's reason for refusing him the Duke of Milan sets a spy to secure the information. The servant is not long in discovering the real circumstances. He schemes to make Beatrix believe Orlando untrue and his ruse succeeds. Beatrix agrees to marry the Duke of Milan. On her wedding morn, news comes to her that Orlando has killed himself for love of her, and in an agony of grief she rushes away in her bridal robes to hear from his dying lips that she is the victim of treachery.

This romantic love tragedy is colored, conveying an accurate impression of the grandeur of Italian scenery, and is produced with the usual C. G. P. C. excellence. It will be released on September 3rd.

"BRONCHO BILLY FOR SHERIFF" (Essanay).

The grim savagery of the Western feudal grudge and the bitter agony of repentance are embodied in this drama, another of Essanay's popular series with Mr. G. M. Anderson in his well-known characterization of "Broncho Billy."

Jim Dunn, county sheriff, is asked to withdraw his name as a candidate for re-election because the boys think he has proven incapable in office. Dunn is a fighter, rushes to town, declares he will be in the campaign in spite of all opposition and placards the streets with notices urging the boys to vote for him. Meanwhile, the judges try to find a man with nerve enough to run against Dunn and finally secure Broncho Billy, a ranchman, who agrees. Word of this is brought to Dunn and he immediately rides to Broncho's ranchhouse while Broncho is at dinner and furiously orders him to withdraw his name. Broncho calmly laughs him to scorn and continues his meal. Wild with rage Dunn declares he will kill Broncho if he ventures into town on election day, and leaves. Election morning Broncho cleans his gun carefully, mounts and starts for town. Suddenly he comes upon a little child lost on the trail, dismounts, takes her in his arms and tries to catch his bronco, but the stubborn beast gallops away and leaves him stranded on foot at the edge of the desert with the baby. One look at the child shows Broncho she is unconscious and he strikes out resolutely for town, miles away, to get her to the doctor. After a terrible struggle with heat and thirst he staggers up the main street, leaves the child with the doctor and starts for the polling place when he is seen by Dunn, who instantly whips out his gun and wounds Broncho severely. Not until it is discovered that Broncho has really saved the life of Dunn's little girl, does the ex-sheriff realize his awful error, but atones for his hasty act by publicly declaring Broncho the next sheriff and pins the badge on the wounded ranchman's breast while he brokenly wrings his hand in gratitude. Arthur Mackley plays Jim Dunn.

Scene from "Broncho Billy for Sheriff" (Essanay).

The production contains many superb views taken on the edge of the desert, and is replete with good old fashioned thrills dear to the hearts of picture fans. The film is booked for release August 31st.

"FLYING A" PLAYER IS GIVEN UNIQUE COWBOY FUNERAL.

Staid Chicagoans awoke last Monday morning to find in all big Chicago morning dailies four, five and six column cuts of a unique burial given Alex Philby, a cowboy employed by the American Film Manufacturing Company, who died recently of injuries sustained by a fall from his horse.

Mr. Philby lived at 3523 North Clark Street with his wife and three children. On Tuesday, August 6, while cantering slowly down the road, Philby's horse tripped, throwing him to the ground. Philby's injuries resulted in his death on Friday, August 16.

The boys of his company decided to give him a cowboy funeral and the unique spectacle was watched by thousands of Chicagoans and a half dozen newspaper cameras were trained on the scene. The horse which threw him followed the hearse with saddle turned backward, his lariat and a piece of crepe dangling from it. Members of the regular company and all extras turned out in full force. Du Brock, from whom the American rents some of its horses, turned his entire stable over to their use, with the result that sixty cowboys and girls, in everyday costume, preceded the funeral down Clark Street to Rosehill cemetery.

As the casket was being lowered into the grave a company of cowboys, under command of Producer Lee, fired a volley of three shots in honor of their dead companion.

Mr. Philby was one of the best liked men in the company and his loss will be mourned by everyone who knew him.

"THE ACTRESS PULLS THE STRINGS" (Eclair).

September 3rd is a picture preachment done in that most poignant manner of using a comedy in its telling. One big moral underlies the whole story. It warns against quick or prejudiced judgment and uses a mighty striking example to present its moral.

An actress arrives at a small summer hotel, and with her is her trunk. Common to her profession it is plainly marked "Theatre," so the highly respectable women about the hotel acting upon the rule that those of the stage aren't eligible to the inner shrine of cultivated people, snub and ignore her just because of her profession. But surreptitiously the men folk try to make a hit with her, because she is an actress.

She angers at their insolent reception and from anger is born a plan of revenge. She pretends to leave the hotel and returns in the disguise of an old maid missionary. As a missionary she becomes an idol of attention to the women and an undesirable to the men. The way she drives home her lesson is the point of the pictured story, and one that will get over clearly, especially to alleged gentlemen who cease to be courteous to a lady after she turns thirty.

FILM SUPPLY EXCHANGE IN MINNESOTA.

Milwaukee, Wis.—It has officially been made known to the trade that the Mutual Film Corporation will at once open a Mutual Film Exchange in Minneapolis, Minn. As the Mutual offices distribute the Film Supply Company releases, and as there is no Film Supply distributing center in Minnesota, the exhibitors in that territory will hereafter be sure of a carefully selected Film Supply program, as well as the Bison 101, Broncho and Keystone releases of the Mutual Film Corporation, from this new Mutual Film Exchange.

Mr. Benjamin N. Judell, booking agent of the Milwaukee Western Film Exchange for years, will have charge of this office. "Benny" left Milwaukee on Tuesday, August 20, for Minneapolis, and as soon as the office, which has been rented, is in presentable shape, he will start his "political" campaign in Minnesota.

Minnesota exhibitors are requested to call at the Mutual Film Exchange when they are in Minneapolis, and Mr. B. N. Judell, through these columns, assures them a hearty welcome.

D. W. McKINNEY JOINS GREAT NORTHERN.

From his recent position at the Film Supply Company's New York offices, Mr. D. W. McKinney, well known in motion picture circles, has gone to the Great Northern Film Company, to act in the capacity of assistant manager. His gentlemanly demeanor and his long experience in the business qualify him as a worthy representative of the Great Northern, both at headquarters and on the road.

Scene from "The Actress Pulls the Strings," by the Eclair Company.

KLEINE'S CINES AND ECLIPSE FILMS.

The scenes of "A Tragedy of Long Ago," the release of Tuesday, September 3rd, are laid in the romantic surroundings of Southern Italy, during that exciting period when the numerous provinces were governed by the powerful and tyrannical dukes and when treason, conspiracy and plotting were the principal occupations of the day and honored professions. The beautiful Beatrice of Tenda is persuaded by the Archbishop of Milan to marry the Viscount Philip in spite of the fact that she has little affection for him. Thus begins an enthralling tale of conspiracy, plotting and counter-plotting, love, hatred and revenge. The self-sacrificing love and loyalty of the followers of Beatrice stand out in warm relief from the tragical story. Costumes and settings are in keeping with the period, and Anthony Novelli as the faithful and valiant friend of Lady Beatrice is particularly strong in the part. The photography throughout is good.

Scene from "A Tragedy of Long Ago" (Cines).

One of the finest travel pictures the Urban-Eclipse people have ever put out is, "From Lauterbrunnen to Murren, Switzerland, by Rack Railway" (5,200 feet high), which will be seen Wednesday, September 4th, on the same reel with the excellent topical subject, "Small Game at the Zoo," which pictures in highly amusing fashion the antics and adventures of "An Eccentric Sportman." This is an unusual reel full of instructive diversion and entertainment and, as usual with the Eclipse subjects, beautifully photographed.

Scene from "The Sacking of Rome" (Cines).

The Saturday's Cines for September 7th is a thrilling and intensely interesting military subject depicting battle scenes and hand to hand conflicts, which occurred during the terrible period of "The Sacking of Rome," May 5th, 1527. The fact that it is based on historical data attaches additional interest and importance to the story. When the Duke Bourbon refused to grant Pope Clement's request not to pass through the pontifical territory great terror was spread throughout the city of Rome; the people fled to their homes to barricade them against possible plunderers while the garrison rushed to man the city's gates and walls to repulse the invaders. The Bourbon's army proves the more powerful and on May 5th, 1527, they effect breaches in the walls which enable them to enter the city and commence their robbing, murdering and burning orgies. Woven about these exciting incidents is the love story of the Duke Renzo of Ceri and Giulia Vallati, his betrothed. The Duke's effort to save the beautiful Giulia, their hasty flight in which they are overtaken by the marauders and the duel in which the Duke and his followers are outnumbered and the poor lady accidentally receives a fatal wound, are scenes of absorbing heart interest which can but thrill with human sympathy any class of audience. Many beautiful scenes are shown, including the famous and historical St. Angelo Castle Bastions and scenes in the vicinity. The action is vivid and very realistic, being ably portrayed by a selected company of Cines players and beautifully set forth by perfect photography. A short scenic has been added to complete the reel and in "Picturesque Sardinia, Italy," are shown beautifully colored and highly interesting views of the principal town, the harbor, cathedral, Royal Palace, St. Remv's Ramparts and a delightful view of the sea.

"THE HERMIT" (Essanay).

A summer show feature—a comedy-drama with the breath of the pine forests in the good old summer time, portrayed with snap and vigor.

Bob Wayne, a young college boy, has a falling out with his sweetheart, Diana Trevor, and accepts an invitation from some chums, who are camping, to join them. Bob now writes Diana a letter saying he is going into the solitude to be a hermit and leaves the city. Bob joins his chums and, when they return, he buys their camp equipment and begins to "bach" it alone. Meanwhile, Diana receives a letter from some girl friends who are also camping to come on and join them. Bob has already seen these girls, but his experience with Diana has turned him against all creatures feminine and he disregards their appeals to come up and be sociable. Feeling the need of new environment, Diana joins her chums and learns of the strange young man camping nearby who has been so rude as to warn the girls to keep away and not bother him. Out of revenge the girls plan to visit his tent that night disguised as "ghosts" and give him a good scare. Out in the moonlight Bob sits on the bank of the stream, smoking his pipe and reflecting on the cussedness of womankind in general, when he happens to gaze toward the tent and sees an array of white figures prowling about. With a whoop he starts for them. In the mad scramble that follows all the girls escape but Diana, who trips over one of the tent-pegs and sprains her ankle. Bob lifts the girl to her feet and is about to demand her identity when the sheet falls away and the lovers are brought face to face. Excited explanations follow and it is not long before Bob has her in his arms and presses a warm kiss upon her lips, while the girls wave joyfully from the glen below.

Scene from "The Hermit" (Essanay).

The Essanay Company has made a pretty production of this story, and the film abounds in exquisite views of cool forest and delightful shady nooks along the stream. The film is booked for release August 30th.

SOLAX MOVES TO NEW STUDIO BUILDING.

The exodus of the Solax Motion Picture Company from the village of Flushing, L. I., N. Y., to their fine new studio building in Fort Lee, N. J., began last week and continued for several days while the immense amount of paraphernalia was being transferred. The town of Flushing will feel the loss of the Solax Company keenly, as the various needs of such a large organization were many, and a source of much profit to local dealers. Fort Lee tradesmen, on the other hand, are quite satisfied with the move, finding much to commend in the discretion of the Solax management.

The new Solax studio and factory are not far from the Eclair plant in Fort Lee, which is a village that stands high on the Palisades, overlooking the Hudson on the shore opposite New York. The surrounding country abounds in splendid natural scenery, both of the rugged and the pastoral types. The new Solax plant is a model of construction for picture making purposes, being complete in every detail, and equipped with the most up-to-date machinery and other facilities. With such a place to work in the Solax quality will no doubt show signs of improvement over previous results, which were obtained under conditions that were far from being the equal of the new order of things.

AMERICAN TO PRODUCE ANDREW JACKSON STORY.

Much interest has attached to the work of preparation in producing the Battle of New Orleans by the company of "Flying A" players encamped at Starved Rock, Ill. The costumes are of the period of 1815 and no little expense and much hunting about has resulted from Producer Emerson's desire to make his costumes historically accurate.

For instance, he has called for twenty flint-locked revolvers, which are obtainable only at Bannerman's Philadelphia establishment at the modest price of $35 apiece. He is bringing an old cannon from the same supply house at a cost of $350. The Union Jack of England has been in use for 114 years; so the women of the company have been kept busy making the "Betsy Ross" flag, at that time the national emblem of England among its troops encamped at New Orleans, although the Union Jack was then in use in other countries. Cutlasses of the period are almost impossible to get and as there is a reproduction of La Fitte's pirates in the picture, it was necessary to dig them up, one by one.

McINTIRE & RICHTER MAKE THEIR DEBUT.

A new firm of film brokers has been established under the name of McIntyre & Richter, with offices at 23 East 14th Street, New York City.

It is the intention of McIntyre & Richter to sell and exploit feature films, and they have already secured the agency for several European and American film producing companies. With their features they will supply posters, lobby displays, synopses and press matter. They will also have a private exhibition room for demonstrating purposes. Combined with their brokerage business the new firm will conduct a film exchange. Their advertisment appears in this issue.

MR. V. MILLER.

Chief cameraman for Eberhard Schneider, Mr. V. Miller has just returned from a successful trip through the Holy Land and Europe. Mr. Schneider's latest Senior camera was used in taking 5,000 feet of pictures in the vicinity of Jerusalem, around the Jordan and Jaffa, for an educational lecture.

OTIS TURNER JOINS UNIVERSAL WESTERN CO.

For the past two months Mr. Wm. N. Swanson has been laying his plans for the production of some spectacular Western pictures. He not only has secured a great number of horses and quite an army of Indians, but he has gathered around him some of the most capable directors that have produced pictures in this country as well as abroad.

The latest to join Mr. Swanson's company is Otis Turner, who produced Selig's greatest picture play, "The Coming of Columbus." Mr. Turner has, for some time past, been connected with the Imp brand of the Universal pictures and has produced many photoplays of exceptional merit, among which are "Lady Audley's Secret," "Shamus O'Brien" and "Winning of the Latonia Derby."

Calendar of Independent Releases.

Releasing Through Universal Company.

CURRENT RELEASES.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 25th, 1912.

ECLAIR—The Will (Drama)
REX—The Leader of the Band (Drama)

MONDAY, AUGUST 26th, 1912.

IMP—Making Good (Drama)
NESTOR—The Story of a Wallet (Drama)
CHAMPION—The Foundling (Drama)

TUESDAY, AUGUST 27th, 1912.

GEM—Baby Fingers (Drama)
ECLAIR—Dolls (Drama)
BISON—For Love, Life and Riches (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 28th, 1912.

POWERS—An Exciting Outing (Drama)
NESTOR—Uncle Bill (Drama)
UNIVERSAL—The Animated Weekly (Topical)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 29th, 1912.

REX—An Old-Fashioned Girl (Drama)
IMP—A Happy Family (Drama)
ECLAIR—The Passing Parade (Tableaux)

FRIDAY, AUGUST 30th, 1912.

VICTOR—The Winning Punch (Drama)
POWERS—Life's Lesson (Drama)
NESTOR—The Girls and the Chaperon (Comedy)

SATURDAY, AUGUST 31st, 1912.

IMP—A Case of Smallpox (Comedy)
IMP—Her Burglar (Comedy)
MILANO—A Circus Romance (Drama)
BISON—A Shot in the Dark (Drama)

UNIVERSAL ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 1st, 1912.

ECLAIR—Two Brave Little Hearts (Drama)
REX—In Honor Bound (Drama)

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 2nd, 1912.

IMP—The Love Test (Drama)
NESTOR—On the Border Line (Drama)
CHAMPION—The Maid of the Rocks (Drama)

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3rd, 1912.

GEM—The Celebrated Case (2-reel—Drama)
ECLAIR—The Actress Pulls the Strings (Comedy)
BISON—The Arizona Land Swindle (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 4th, 1912.

POWERS—Love Will Find a Way (Drama)
NESTOR—The Evidence (Drama)
UNIVERSAL—The Animated Weekly (Topical)

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 5th, 1912.

REX—From the Wilds (Drama)
IMP—Tares of the Wheat (Drama)
ECLAIR—The Guest at the Parsonage (Drama)

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 6th, 1912.

VICTOR—After All (Drama)
POWERS—His Weakness (Drama)
NESTOR—The Girls and the Chaperon (Comedy)

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 7th, 1912.

IMP—Lem's Hot Chocolate (Comedy)
IMP—Queenie and the Cannibal (Comedy)
MILANO—Victims of Ingratitude (2-reel—Drama)
BISON—(Title not reported)

Releasing Through Film Supply Company.

CURRENT RELEASES.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 25th, 1912.

MAJESTIC—A Corner in Kisses (Comedy)
THANHOUSER—When a Count Counted (Drama)

MONDAY, AUGUST 26th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Jealous Rage (Drama)
COMET—A Divided House (Drama)

TUESDAY, AUGUST 27th, 1912.

"101" BISON (N. Y. M. P. Co.)—The Bandit's Gratitude (Dr.) 1000
GAUMONT—The Story of Chopin (Drama)
MAJESTIC—A Disputed Claim (Drama)
THANHOUSER—Lucile (Reels 1 and 2—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 28th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Lonesome Trail Pioneers (Drama)
GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly (Topical)
RELIANCE—Thelma (2 reels—Drama)
SOLAX—Phantom Paradise (Drama)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 29th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Will of James Waldron (Drama) 1000
GAUMONT—Marriage on the Run (Comedy-Drama)

FRIDAY, AUGUST 30th, 1912.

"101" BISON (N. Y. M. P. Co.)—The White Lie (2 reels) (Dr.) 2000
LUX—The Modern Child (Drama) 990
SOLAX—Playing Trumps (Drama)
THANHOUSER—Lucile (third reel—Drama)

SATURDAY, AUGUST 31st, 1912.

COMET—The Moonshiner's Task (Drama) 1000
GREAT NORTHERN—Love Is Blind (Drama) 943
RELIANCE—The Secret Service Man (Drama)

FILM SUPPLY COMPANY ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 1st, 1912.

MAJESTIC—The Chaperon (Comedy)
THANHOUSER—The Capture of New York (Military and Educational)

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 2nd, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Greaser and the Weakling (Drama) 1000
COMET—The Dentist's Dilemma (Comedy)

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3rd, 1912.

"101" BISON (N. Y. M. P. Co.)—For the Honor of the Tribe (Drama)
GAUMONT—The Refugee's Casket (Drama)
MAJESTIC—Mabel's Beau (Drama)
THANHOUSER—The Voice of Conscience (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 4th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Marked Gun (Drama) 1000
GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly (Topical)
RELIANCE—The Heart of a Cossack (Drama)
SOLAX—The Fight in the Dark (Drama)

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 5th, 1912.

AMERICAN—Title not reported.
GAUMONT—A Midnight Encounter (Comedy-Drama).
GAUMONT—The Launching of the Imperator (Top.)

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 6th, 1912.

"101" BISON (N. Y. M. P. Co.)—An Old Tune (Drama)
LUX—A Cripple's Folly (Drama) 990
SOLAX—Open to Proposals (Comedy)
THANHOUSER—His Father's Son (Drama)

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 7th, 1912.

COMET—Title not reported.
GREAT NORTHERN—The Afflicted Governor (Com.) 496
GREAT NORTHERN—The Spring Lock (Com.) 457
RELIANCE—The Bully and the Shrimp (Drama)

The KINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY

is the original journal devoted to the motion picture industry, and is recognized as the leading organ of the trade. It has a guaranteed circulation of 10,000 copies weekly.

Subscription.—$3.50 per annum, postfree in America. Specimen copy and tariff for advertisements on application.

PUBLISHING OFFICES, 9 & 11 Tottenham Street, Tottenham Court Road, W., London, England.

Fairman Advertising Agency, 250a Kingston Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

PUT THIS IN YOUR NOODLE

The Eastern Feature Film Exchange and The Quaker City Feature Film Exchange

have consolidated. For speedy attention to your orders, address

THE QUAKER CITY FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE

804 Cherry St., Philadelphia.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted

SITUATIONS WANTED.

MOVING PICTURE OPERATOR—Experienced, wishes position in New York City or anywhere. Address SCAVULLI, 2232 Second Ave., New York City.

AT LIBERTY—Leader (Pianist) Vaudeville experience. Wife Ill. Songs. Have seven years' experience as manager. Address PIANIST LEADER, Orange Lake Park Theatre, Orange Lake, N. Y.

A-1 CAMERA MAN—Dark Room worker and high class Lantern Slide Maker wants situation. Address HOFBAUR, 107 4th Ave., New York City.

MOTION PICTURE CAMERA MAN—wants position with responsible company. Am also expert still photographer. State salary in letter. ELBA, care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—Pianists to send name and address of theater where playing for big collection of FREE MUSIC. All New York's latest hits—free for a postal. Most remarkable offer ever made. Address S. & B. PUB. CO., 124 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

FILMS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—100 reels of films. A-1 condition, all titles and endings. $5 per reel. Also copies of Dante's Hell, Purgatory, $75 per copy. Address J. C. KEITH, Box 271 Harrisburg, Pa.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LIGHTING OUTFIT FOR SALE—Valuable information along this line free, by people with twenty years' experience with gasoline engines. The people that use gasoline engines improve them, they find the weak places and rectify them. We claim to be experts. Write us your wants. Address THE PRAKERS, Rich Hill, Mo.

25 SHEETS different colored gelatin (cut slide size) 10c blank; film leader, 15 feet, 25c. Postage prepaid. Send 2c stamp for samples. Address CHARLES A. GUNBY, 6412 18th Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

OUR PHILIPPINE QUESTION—With forty-five beautifully colored slides and two reels of motion pictures. Lectured by Prof. Jos. G. Howard (recently of the Philippine Service). Will book the large theatres of New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio. Address JOSEPH G. HOWARD, Newark Valley, N.Y.

TO FILM MAKERS—Wanted immediately, sole agencies (British Isles and Colonies), for highest quality "Feature Films," all subjects. As preliminary, send best terms. Synopsis subjects published and other particulars. WHITAKER, Certified Public Accountant, Victoria Road, Padiham, Burnley, England.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

POWER'S No. 6 MACHINE, complete, $100. Fort Wayne Compensare, 60 cycle, 110 V., $35. Mirror and Screen 12 x 16 feet, $35. Act quick. Address A. DRAGER, Belding, Mich.

FOR SALE—At a bargain, Power's 6A, complete, Ft. Wayne Compensare, Silver Curtain, etc. One of the best outfits money can buy, only used eight nights here at the Chautauqua grounds. Price $225.00 for all, C. O. D. on deposit. Address STELZER BROTHERS, Lincoln, Ill.

THEATRES WANTED.

WANTED—Picture or Vaudeville show, central Northwest preferred. Give full particulars. Address M. H. CAREY, Pipestone, Minnesota.

THEATRES FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Theatre, town 2000, best location, good business, seating 204. Beautiful place, one opposition house. Must be sold quick. Address JNO. W. ROBERTSON, New London, Ohio.

CAMERA WANTED.

WANTED—to buy a second-hand motion picture camera in first class condition, only A-1 machine. Address F. C., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

"SAINT GEORGE AND THE DRAGON."

The Crown Feature Film Company, which handles the big features as well as the regular one and two-reel releases of the Milano Films Company, reports an active demand for State rights for "Saint George and the Dragon," its present big three-reel feature output. "Saint George" is an absorbing drama of love and heroic adventure which has proven very popular with all ages and classes of motion picture playgoers.

NEW THEATER INSTALLATIONS FURNISHED BY HALLBERG.

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports the sale of a large 60 amp. Hallberg A. C. to D. C. economizer to the Lyceum Theater, New London, Conn. Also a Simplex moving picture machine to Mozart Theater, Elmira, N. Y. A Power's No. 6A, with Hallberg A. C. economizer and full line of supplies to the Dixie Theater, Prospect Avenue, Bronx, N. Y. An Edison Model B machine to the Scenic Theater, Willimantic, Conn.

INQUIRIES

NOTE—No questions can be replied to by mail. Look for your answers here. A list of studio addresses, kept up-to-date, will be sent if a stamped and addressed return envelope accompanies the request.

C. B. M.—We believe that the Biograph Company uses its own camera. We do not know the make used by Kalem. This does not come under the head of general interest. There is no book on the operation of the camera for the same reason that there is no department for cameramen in this publication. There are not enough of them to make it worth while. The projection department is the rule and guide for some 15,000 operators. There are not two hundred cameramen. It's a business to be learned only through study under some experienced person and in actual practice. A school could not teach you unless it reproduced exactly field and studio conditions. "Technique of the Photoplay" deals with the construction of the script. We do not know that a date has been assigned the weekly you mention.

HARRY C.—We think the Solax Company turned back your script and then made it because they supposed that you got it the same place you got the idea. It is one of those ideas that comes into the studio every week. It has been done several times. Look at Lubin's "An American Count," for example. No writer can claim the idea as his own and prove the point, though you may never have seen it done. And don't write editors telling them you are sending a good story. If you did not think it good you would not send it, would you?

CURLS—Our Biograph identifier has not that name. Max Linder is not part owner of the Pathe Company. Republic is making releases. It does not sell through any distributing company, but sells direct to the exchange.

J. K. W.—The Kalemites (and probably the Lubins), will be back in Jacksonville along in October or November. Address Mr. Buel, in care of the home office, as the company is working around New York.

J. R.—Sorry, but we cannot name the player.

L. W.—The nurse is not cast in Kalem's "Saved by Telephone." We do not recall Mr. Morrison with the American. Mr. Bunny will remain in Europe for some time. Edison's "The Man who Learned," was released about December, 1910. "The Red Cross Seal." Vitagraph's "The Barrier that was Burned," was done in part in the studio, the snow scenes being made there.

MRS. S.—Miss Lawrence left the Lubin company because her contract was ended and she wanted a rest. She went to the Victor because she has a financial interest in that company other than her salary. We can't run a picture of Miss Lawrence every week just to hold your subscription, but you'll find many pictures of her week by week. We think your admiration of Miss Lawrence blinds you to the fact that we print her picture as frequently as we do that of any other photostar. We know of no publication that does more.

B. J. W.—To "match" an exit to the next scene means simply this. John leaves the room in scene ten and you match his exit to scene 11. It may be that eleven is made before 10 or vice versa, but whichever is the case, the exit in 10 is matched to the entrance in 11, so that John seems to leave one room and enter the other with a continuous motion. Properly done it is like looking on both sides of the door when a person passes through and is used only where you wish to emphasize the fact that John goes into the next room instead of one in some other part of the building. A "setting" is the painted scenery and properties used to suggest the interior of a room or other structure. In stage parlance a scene is "set" when the scenery is roped or otherwise fastened together, and a setting is a scene thus set, plus the furnishings.

J. M. B.—The name of the author of the poem from which Pathe took "An Indian Idyl" is not given. The title is the same as the story. Its source is not remembered.

LOUISE—In Vitagraph's "Rock of Ages" the cast does not give Mr. Northrup a wife. His friend was Miss Rosemary Theby.

B. G. U.—We did not see the Solax "Pink Garters," so cannot decide this question. The theatrical ingenue is simply an ingenuous young person: a sweet young thing as distinguished from the soubrette, who is more lively. Some of Miss Mary Fuller's roles with the Edison company have been ingenue, but not all. In "What Happened to Mary," for example, the lead is an ingenue role.

C. J. K.—The reason that two companies used the same plot is probably that someone saw the copy of the "Smart Set" in which the idea originally appeared some years ago. George Lessey was the lead in Edison's "The Boss of Lumber Camp No. 4." We do not know his Alma Mater. Gaumont and Pathe Freres are not connected in a business way. There is nothing to prevent both from using the same standard subject.

MILDRED B.—Please mention some of the roles the pompadoured person has played. We do not identify actors by their hair when wigs are so cheap.

E. A. B.—There was no "nigger in the woodpile" as you suggest in the Powers Contest. Your inquiry was made at a time all of the companies were torn up by the changes making and pending. If you had asked for Mr. Hoadley at the downtown address, the information would have been supplied. It is merely that the person at the telephone was unintelligent and lazy. Details of the contest were twice given in this paper. The lack of a rejection slip on the script was due to the same upset. They now have a printed form similar to that lately used by Lubin, Reliance and others.

L. K.—Most photoplayers are paid for on the basis of value as judged by the story and the amount of work the company editor must perform. Send your photoplays to the addresses on the list given you. Where more than one office is maintained the fact is stated. It is necessary to submit typed scripts if you would have them read.

B. G.—Miss Blanche Sweet is still with the Biograph. Miss Mary Marsh was Lilywhite in "Man's Genesis."

DOROTHY—The Fairbanks sisters are the Thanhouser Twins. They come from vaudeville.

D. E.—James Cooley was the son in Reliance's "Two Fathers." Bison casts are not to be had these troublous times.

G. J.—Make a courteous inquiry of the company for the overdue script. Three months is a little over their time, but not much.

A. R.—Send your western stories intended for the Universal to the Nestor Company, as stated in the list sent you. This is the only case where more than one reading office is maintained.

R. T.—You state a poor proposition. If two scenes are taken in one setting, to be broken by another scene, the camera will be stopped between the two scenes to provide for splicing and marking, therefore the scenes would not be taken without stoppage. Two scenes in one setting divided by another scene in a second setting form with the last three scenes, and should be so marked.

J. S. M.—We have no casts for Film D'Art, so cannot decide this question for you.

O. F. H.—In Essanay's "On the Cactus Trail" the mother is not cast. The Mexican girl is Miss Vedah Bertram. Mr. Powers and Mr. Northrup are still with Vitagraph. "The Little Bride of Heaven," in the Edison of that title, and the child in the same company's "Western Prince Charming," were both played by Miss Edna Hammond. The reason some photoplay railroad trains have a baggage coach in the rear is that a picture is taken at some small station where the locals stop. These have the baggage car next the engine going out and at the rear coming back as the run is too short to make it worth while remaking the train.

E. F. J.—You've told us a new one. We do not believe that there is any machine for use in amusement parks that will make mutoscope booklets while you wait. Write the Biograph company. They control the patent.

I. M. P.—The Lubin release for the date mentioned is "The Shepherd's Flute," the cast of which does not correspond to your list of questions. In Nestor's "The Fortunes of War." Howard Lindsay was the son and Jefferson Osbourne was the Northern spy. We do not answer Rex questions and cannot place that Bison.

F. E. B.—In Biograph's "The Spirit Awakened," Miss Blanche Sweet had the lead, Miss Mae Marsh was the girl who was forsaken by the villain, and William Christie Miller was the heroine's father. Miss Pickford did not appear in this.

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

CURRENT RELEASES

MONDAY, AUGUST 26th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—Mr. Grouch at the Seashore (Farce-Com.)
BIOGRAPH—Through Dumb Luck (Farce-Comedy)..
KALEM—The Little Wanderer (Drama.....
LUBIN—The Deceivers (Comedy-Drama) 1062
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 35—1912 (Topical).....
PATHE—Fire at Sea (Special release, Drama).....
SELIG—The Laird's Daughter (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—A Double Danger (Drama).....1000

TUESDAY, AUGUST 27th, 1912.

EDISON—Alone in New York (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—Alkali Ike Plays the Devil (West.-Com.)...1000
CINES—The Bride of Lammermoor (Drama).....1000
C. G. P. C.—A Prince of Israel (Biblical Drama).....1000
SELIG—The Whiskey Runners (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Flirt or Heroine (Drama).....1000

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 28th, 1912.

EDISON—Helping John (Comedy-Drama) 1000
ECLIPSE—The Golden Curl (Drama).....1030
KALEM—The Woman Hater (Comedy).....
KALEM—Palestine (Educational) .....
LUBIN—The Caretaker (Comedy) .....
LUBIN—A Burnt Cork (Comedy).....
PATHE—The Live Wire (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Two Cinders (Comedy-Drama)..... 555
VITAGRAPH—Bumps (Comedy) 447

THURSDAY, AUGUST 29th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—A Pueblo Legend (Drama).....
ESSANAY—Three to One (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—For the Love of a Girl (Drama).....1000
MELIES—His Partner's Share (Drama).....1000
PATHE—The Detective's Desperate Chance (Drama).. 650
PATHE—The Armless Wonder (Acrobatic)..... 350
SELIG—The Little Indian Martyr (Drama).....1000

FRIDAY, AUGUST 30th, 1912.

C. G. P. C.—The Musketeer's Love (Hist.-Drama).....1000
EDISON—The Boy and the Girl (Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—The Hermit (Comedy-Drama) 1000
KALEM—Jim Bludso (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—Pinned (Comedy) .....
LUBIN—The Overworked Bookkeeper (Comedy).....
SELIG—Just His Luck (Farce Comedy).....
SELIG—Frenzied Finance (Western Comedy).....
VITAGRAPH—Written in the Sands (Drama).....1000

SATURDAY, AUGUST 31st, 1912.

EDISON—Simla (Scenic) 1000
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy for Sheriff (Drama).....1000
CINES—Richard the Lion-Hearted (Drama).....1070
KALEM—Saved from Court-Martial (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—The Sheriff's Prisoner (Drama).....1000
PATHE—An Aeroplane Love Affair (Comedy) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Bond of Music (Drama).....1000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 2nd, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—In the North Woods (Drama).....
KALEM—The Hoodoo Hat (Comedy) .....
KALEM—From Jerusalem to the Dead Sea (Scenic)...
LUBIN—A Substitute(Comedy) 691
LUBIN—His New Cane (Comedy) 363
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 36—1912 (Topical).....1000
SELIG—As the Fates Decree (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Tommy's Sister (Drama) 1000

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3rd, 1912.

EDISON—The Triangle (Comedy-Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—Back to the Old Farm (Drama).....1000
CINES—A Tragedy of Long Ago (Drama).....1000
C. G. P. C.—Beatrix d'Este (Drama).....
SELIG—An Equine Hero (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Coronets and Hearts (Drama).....1000

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 4th, 1912.

EDISON—Aladdin Up to Date (Comedy).....1000
ECLIPSE—An Eccentric Sportsman (Comedy)..... 455
ECLIPSE—From Lauterbrunnen to Murren, Switzerland (Scenic) 382
ECLIPSE—Small Game at the Zoo (Educational)..... 165
KALEM—Down Through the Ages (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—The Bank Cashier (Drama).....1000
PATHE—Locked Out of Wedlock (Comedy).....
VITAGRAPH—Captain Barnacle's Legacy (Drama)....1000

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 5th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—Getting Rid of Trouble (Comedy).....
BIOGRAPH—He Must Have a Wife (Comedy).....
ESSANAY—The Wildman (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—The Smuggler (Comedy-Drama) 1000
MELIES—The Obsession (Drama) 1000
PATHE—The Penalty Paid (Drama) .....
SELIG—Sergeant Byrne of the N. W. M. P. (Drama)..1000

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 6th, 1912.

EDISON—Believe Me, If All Those Endearing Young Charms (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—Twilight (Drama) 1000
C. G. P. C.—Whiffles and the Magic Wand (Comedy)...
C. G. P. C.—The Bud, the Leaf and the Flower (Science)
KALEM—The Loneliness of the Hills (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—A Romance of the Coast (Drama).....1000
SELIG—Circumstantial Evidence (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Bunny's Suicide (Comedy) 400
VITAGRAPH—She Wanted a Boarder (Comedy).... 600

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 7th, 1912.

EDISON—Bridget's Sudden Wealth (Comedy)..... 600
EDISON—Opening of the Y. M. C. A. Playground, Lynchburg, Va. (Descriptive) 400
ESSANAY—(Title not given) .....
CINES—The Sacking of Rome (Historical Drama)..... 770
CINES—Picturesque Sardinia, Italy (Scenic)..... 242
KALEM—The Darling of the C. S. A. (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—A Little Family Affair (Comedy).....1000
PATHE—Gee! My Pants! (Comedy) .....
VITAGRAPH—A Wasted Sacrifice (Drama).....1000

POPULAR PHOTO PLAYERS
Costello, Bunny, Joyce, Gauntier, Turner, Anderson, Johnson, Fuller and other favorites. Posters, 28 x 42, 10 for $1.50 Prepaid. Photos 11 x 14, 12 for $2.00 Prepaid. Postcards $4.00 per 1,000.

LICENSED EXHIBITORS — TAKE NOTICE
We carry in stock, posters (one-sheet 28 x 42 pictorial lithos) of all the above licensed releases and all back releases; also 3-sheets for all Biograph and Lubin subjects and 3- and 6-sheets on feature releases of Bio, Lubin, Edison, Kalem, Pathe and Vitagraph; also 3-sheets for feature releases of Selig, Kleine and Essanay.
One sheets 15c. Three sheets 35c. Six sheets 70c. Add 1c per sheet for prepaid postage.
"If It's Anything to Advertise a Picture Theater, We Have It."
EXHIBITORS' ADVERTISING & SPECIALTY CO. 30 Union Square, New York

THREE-SHEET POSTER FRAMES
With top sheets reading Special Feature, Extra Feature, Extra Attraction, To-Day's Newest Feature, Special Attraction, Coming Soon. Complete set of 10 (assorted), for $1.20 Postage Paid.

Gaumont

A HANDCOLORED OPPORTUN ITY

Gaumont

Our Films Are Protected by Copyright

Two Reels of Teeming Sensation. One and Three Sheets, Lobby Displays, Photos, Cuts, Pamphlets. Let us hear from you in time.

Watch for the September issue of the PHOTOPLAY MAGAZINE.

This will make them long remember your house if you feature it properly.

Write us for a copy of the Gaumont Graphic, which will explain its importance.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 3—Handcolored

The Refugee's Casket

NEXT IN LINE! SEPT. 19—TWO REELS

Kings in Exile

A film that deals with the events of great empires. Here's a serious, dignified monarchy exposer. Not anarchistic, but treated rather from the angle of love and princely sorrow. The everlasting evil of title marry title!

Thursday, Sept. 5th

A Midnight Encounter

Tuesday, Sept. 10th

Love's Serenade

Scene from A MIDNIGHT ENCOUNTER

Thursday, Sept. 12th

The Plague Stricken City

Tuesday, Sept. 24th

The Heart of the Red Man

Thursday, Sept. 26th

The Stolen Cub

Gaumont

Gaumont

GAUMONT CO., FLUSHING, N. Y.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA, Sole Distributors

Here We Go!!! Handcolored, One Reel

TUESDAY, SEPT. 17th

Queen Elizabeth's Token

WHY PAY A BONUS for a State right picture when you can get the same thing as an ordinary release? The same story as advertised elsewhere?

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS!

Song Slide Releases

Scott & Van Altena.

"Harvest Days Are Coming, Jennie"—Stern.
"I'll Be Welcome In My Home Town"—Tracy.
"Somebody Else Is Getting It"—H. Von Tilzer Company.
"Oh, You Baby Face"—H. A. Wayman.
"Tell Me That You Love Me"—Harold Rossiter.
"Somebody's Coming to Town"—Smith & Brown.
"Humming Bird"—H. A. Weymann.
"Come to Dolly's Party"—H. Von Tilzer.
"Won't You Let Me Take You Home"—Crown.

A. L. Simpson.

"Do You Regret the Days Gone By"—Pub. by F. B. Haviland Pub. Co.
"My Girl of the Golden Days"—Pub. by J. H. Aufderheide, Indianapolis, Ind.
"When I'm Away"—Pub. by Robert B. Thompson, Chicago.
"Just a Twig From the True Lover's Tree"—Pub. by J. Fred Helf, New York.

De Witt C. Wheeler, Inc.

"I Always Knew the Girl I'd Love Would Be a Girl Like You"—M. Witmark & Sons.
"What Made the Boys Like Rosie"—J. H. Remick & Co.
"Rainy Days"—Jerome & Schwartz Pub. Co.

A. J. Clapham.

"The Rosenthal Case."
"The Olympic Games."

EXHIBITORS

SELECT YOUR PROGRAM IN THE

OPEN MARKET

Book with the house of Variety. Elaborate Advertising Matter.

2 and 3 Reel Features of all makes and descriptions for rent.

SPECIAL FILM CO., Ltd.
5 West 14th Street, New York

SLIDES

OF ALL KINDS

Send for Catalogue "W" of our new line of beautiful

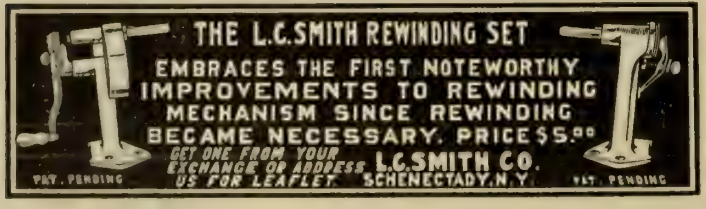
ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

Each slide illustrated from life and most exquisitely colored. The Chicago Song Slide Exchange, 6th floor, Powers Bldg., Chicago, Ill., have the exclusive agency for our announcement slides in the states of Wisconsin, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Iowa.

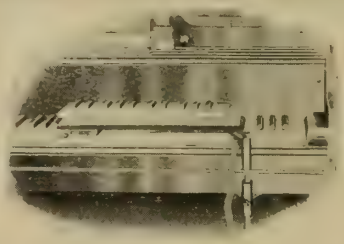
Advertising Slides at Reasonable Rates

Our Song Slide Catalogue of 500 different songs free to anyone for the asking.

SCOTT & VAN ALTENA
59 PEARL STREET NEW YORK CITY



THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET
L.C.SMITH CO.
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
PAT. PENDING
PAT. PENDING



Patent Allowed

Musical Electric Bells and Piano played at the same time with a

BARTON PIANO ATTACHMENT
(Patented).

All the big, expensively operated theatres are making money with musical bells.

You can now make the money without the expense. Beautiful chords and harmony played from the ordinary piano music, the accompaniment on the piano and the melody on the bells. Improved bells, play loud or soft. Write to-day.

DAN BARTON, 266 East Irving St., Oshkosh, Wisconsin

SOMETHING NEW

THE UNBREAKABLE AND WASHABLE E-Z BLANK MICA SLIDE MAKE YOUR OWN ANNOUNCEMENTS

Made of Specially Prepared Mica That Can be Written on as Easily as Paper
PRICE 25 CENTS EACH
BATTERSHALL & OLESON, 39 W. ADAMS ST CHICAGO, ILL.

THE SENSATIONAL NEW YORK POLICE SCANDAL

THE ROSENTHAL CASE

Produced from original authentic views, supplied exclusively to us by the National Press Syndicate.

20 slides Plain $5.00 — 40 slides Plain $10.00
20 slides Colored 10.00 — 40 slides Colored 20.00
Special lecture and 1-sheet lithos free with each set.
A. J. CLAPHAM, 130 WEST 37TH STREET, NEW YORK.
The Originator of Sensational Feature Lectures.

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and any one can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of three dollars ($3) cash with order, we will send by express, charges not prepaid, or $3.50 by registered mail, prepaid, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

We don't use Newspaper Prints. ∴ No Lecture required. ∴ Explanation on every slide.
Get the Genuine

American Press Association Copyrights on the
New York Police Scandal & Rosenthal Case
20 Slides - - - - $10.00

Cash with order or C. O. D.
LEVI CO., Inc.
1560 BROADWAY, N.Y.
Exclusive Makers

A BIG BOX OFFICE ATTRACTION

BARNEY GILMORE

The Matinee Idol, for years appearing in popular productions, known in every State of the Union, a favorite everywhere, appears in a revival of his sensational melodrama

DUBLIN DAN

THREE REELS

Barney Gilmore plays the title role; that of an Irish Detective. The story is exciting, thrilling and has a number of powerful situations. Mr. Gilmore is supported by an all-star cast

COPYRIGHT PROTECTED BY BEST LEGAL TALENT

STATE RIGHTS SOLD ONLY

THROUGH FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA.

READY FOR SHIPMENT - SEPTEMBER 25th, 1912

Unusual Abundance of Advertising Matter

OTHER REGULAR FEATURES

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 4th, 1912

THE FIGHT IN THE DARK

A story revolving about the adventures of a government purchasing agent in Mexico. Showing splendid light effects, sensational incidents, riding and driving by experts and tense dramatic situations.

RELEASED FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 6th, 1912

OPEN TO PROPOSALS

A Westerner reads in an Eastern paper that all rich women in the East prefer the men of the West for husbands. This Westerner takes the next train East and soon discovers to his sorrow that not "all" women prefer Western husbands. A fine Solax Comedy with the all-star comedy cast.

Solax Company

FORT LEE, NEW JERSEY

A FILM D'ART

Another Feat in Feature Production

NOW READY FOR STATE RIGHTS RELEASE

THE DIVINE

Sarah Bernhardt

IN

LA TOSCA

Victorien Sardou's Greatest Drama

When thoughts and speech of film men turn to talk of trade one name reigns supreme, pre-eminent and unapproached in genius of inspirational acting, SARAH BERNHARDT.

Yet what avails this Divinity of Art were it not as super-excellently produced? Announce the fact that it is a Film D'Art and a supreme confidence of the production rests in their minds. 'Tis a combination Unapproachable.

No drama of all the ages is so adapted to the silent stage. No tragedy contains so many striking situations wherein not a part of power is lost through lack of speech.

THE ONLY WAY—WIRE!

UNIVERSAL FEATURES 225 West 42nd Street
New York City, N. Y.

THE HOUSE OF

SELIG

SEPTEMBER 2nd

AS THE FATES DECREE

An exceedingly dramatic picture depicting the fate of one man who trifled with love. Set in the city, country and at the seashore. About 1000 ft.

SEPTEMBER 3rd

AN EQUINE HERO

The wonderful story of a girl and her all but human horse. By far the best equine picture of the season. The kind of feature that you have been looking for. About 1000 ft.

SEPTEMBER 5th

SERGEANT BYRNE OF THE N.W.M.P.

A western drama of the unusual sort. A story of the days of the northwest mounted police and bootlegging along the Canadian border. About 1000 ft.

SEPTEMBER 6th

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

The human heart interest story of a triangular love affair which comes to a dramatic climax. A right good story and excellent action. The principal scenes are laid in the Colorado State Penitentiary. About 1000 ft.

ON THE WAY

"KINGS OF THE FOREST" "MONTE CRISTO"

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

20 East Randolph Street

CHICAGO, ILL.

SEND IN YOUR NAME FOR OUR MAILING LIST

Weekly Bulletins Sent Free

ECLAIR

FILMS OF QUALITY

TUESDAY, SEPT. 3rd

"The Actress Pulls the Strings"

Get your strings out for this one. A hearty comedy with a great big underlying moral.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 5th

"The Guest at the Parsonage"

It will pack your theatre with guests. The play takes a good-natured slap at hypocrisy which all will enjoy.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 8th

"The Kind Old Man"

Through his kindly designing a very bashful pair of lovers attain their hearts' most inner desire. A splendid comedy drama.

ECLAIR FILM CO., 225 West 42nd St., N.Y. City, N.Y.

CORRESPONDENCE

NEW ENGLAND.

JAMES W. GREELEY, who recently came into control of the Congress Theater of Portland, Me., is a very busy man these days, even though the theater is closed. Many improvements have been made in this house, and its re-opening took place on Thursday, August 15th. Mr. Greeley has announced that the vaudeville he will use is to be booked through the M. R. Sheedy Agency of New York. This means a good quality of acts, which are sure to be of much better grade than the usual run seen in vaudeville and picture theaters. Manager Greeley has the right idea.

Boston, Mass., will not be bothered with a strike of theatrical musicians, according to H. C. Kingman, of the Boston Musicians' Protective Association. There has been considerable anxiety on the part of local managers, who were worried lest the troubles of the New York theaters should shift on to the Hub.

Messrs. Spitz & Nathanson, owning a string of theaters throughout New England, have closed their Empire Theater of Providence, R. I., in order that some needed improvements and alterations might be made. The Empire opened for the new season on August 15.

John Hathaway of New Bedford, Mass., announces that he opened the Hathaway Theater on August 5. The house has been put in first-class shape.

"A Victim of the Mormons," a three-reel feature picture made unusually good for Proprietor Wentworth of the Pastime Theater, Old Orchard, Me., recently. Business is on the boom at this house, which is brand new this season.

Various union organizations showed their sympathy for the men engaged in the car strike in Boston, but none gave more assistance than did the moving picture people, including the local operators' union. A benefit was recently held at the Pequosette Hall, Watertown, Mass., and moving pictures were furnished by the Moving Picture Operators' Union, Local 182, which also furnished both the machine and operator. Geoffery Whalen, a well-known New England picture man, lectured on "The Striker," which he "put across" in his usual entertaining manner.

The Shawmut Theater of Roxbury, Mass., has been closed recently, due to the hot weather. Manager Frank L. Broune states that he will re-open his house as soon as the weather becomes more in keeping with indoor amusement. Independent pictures from the W. E. Greene Film Exchange of Boston, and vaudeville, have done splendidly for the Shawmut ever since its first opening to the public last winter.

The Bowdoin Square Theater, Boston, playing to vaudeville and Pictures, has not been forced to close at all this summer. Very fair business has been reported for the Bowdoin, taking the hot weather into consideration. The house has now followed the lead of the Hub Theater, and cut out the vaudeville acts. Moving pictures and specialties will now be used until the fall season opens.

Dr. George E. Lothrop, proprietor of the Bowdoin Square Theater, made a trip to Europe this summer, which was a mixture of business and pleasure.

Freebody Park, a summer resort of Newport, R. I., reports the very best season to date. As this park is one of the most prosperous in New England, that statement means quite a little.

Another summer park to report unusually fine business is J. J. Flynn's Massabesic Lake of Manchester, N. H.

The new Covered Theater, of Central Park, near Dover, N. H., has a new manager in the person of John E. Coutts, who has succeeded W. S. Hale. Mr. Coutts comes well recommended, with an admirable record behind him, and should make a winner out of his new theater.

The Howe Theater of Portsmouth, N. H., was forced to close its doors earlier in the summer, but it is now open once more, and business is anything but dull.

A. C. Morrison of Kansas City, states that he and some associates intend to invade the New England territory, which he considers excellent ground for a long string of theaters, built for vaudeville and picture shows. The first house to be built by the newcomers will be in Hartford, Conn. Mr. Morrison has secured the ground upon which the Hartford National Bank now stands, and on August 15 the premises were vacated and demolition begun. A theater will be built immediately, to cost approximately $50,000. Plans have been made by L. D. Bayley, and have been accepted by Mr. Morrison. The construction work has been given over to James O'Loughlin, a Hartford contractor, thought to be one of the best.

The Lubin stock company which visited Portland, Me., in search of local color for some pictures, attracted much attention. The company recently visited Willard Beach, near Portland, where a capsized boat and a heroic rescue was thrillingly enacted before the camera. Of course excitement was intense and the Lubin folks got a whole lot of free advertising for themselves.

Preble Street, Portland, Me., has been repeatedly spoken of as the site of a new and expensive theater, to be devoted to popular vaudeville and pictures, but no real definite information has been given out on the matter.

Riverside Park, a summer resort near Springfield, Mass., has a new manager, and his name is Arthur Wooley. Mr. Wooley's regular vocation is that of acting, but he can also fill an executive position.

Another house has just been added to the already long string of vaudeville and picture theaters owned and operated by the Goldstein Brothers' Amusement Company of Springfield, Mass. The latest acquisition is the Columbia Opera House of North Adams, Mass. As is their regular custom when taking over a theater, this concern will thoroughly renovate and improve the Opera House. Vaudeville and pictures will be given, and if the Columbia Opera House is not a winner it will surprise New England picture interests.

The death of John C. Patrick, who was manager of Austin & Stone's Theater, Boston, for many years, came as a shock to all that knew him. Mr. Patrick had been in ill health for some time.

These columns have told of the new theater planned for Tremont Row, Boston, which was to cost around the million mark. It looks as if the theater would be held back for a couple of years or so, due to existing leases on the property. The restaurant keeper who refuses to sell his lease, together with several things, have held matters up, as is known to readers of these columns. Frank Howard, well known throughout the country as the man who owned the first Licensed exchange in New England, and Nathan Gordon, of the Gordon Brothers' Amusement Company, are two of the men interested in the new deal. Now that the new combination is in control of the property, and unable to build the theater, it is casting about for a means of making their investment pay for the next couple of years. A temporary moving picture theater may be built, to cost about $10,000, on a portion of the property—namely, the premises occupied for many years by Austin & Stone's Museum. As the Comique and Star theaters are within fifty yards of Austin & Stone's, it is extremely doubtful whether a third theater could pay back its original cost to its owners in such a short time, and also pay rent, general expenses, etc. Plans have been made for this temporary theater, which would seat about 800. Nothing else has been done on this scheme as yet. It is rumored that when the big theater will be built (not the make-shift house) a corporation is to be formed to the size of $1,300,000.

Jack Donovan, well known to the local trade, has just acquired possession of the Bijou Theater, of Newton, Mass. Extensive improvements and alterations are now scheduled, after which time Manager Donovan hopes to open to good business.

The King Edward Theater, Halifax, N. S., is now closed, and will remain "dark" for a couple of weeks, while some needed repairs are being made. Manager Couture is a live, energetic manager, and often drops into Boston, in order to "get a line" on anything new. "In this way, I keep my house up-to-the-minute, and my trade appreciates the fact," says Mr. Couture.

Taken as a whole, and judging my intimate information, the summer parks of New England are having an off season. Business doesn't seem to have any "punch" to it.

Here's a boost for the Mutual Film Corporation of Boston, and, of course, for the Film Supply Company. Loew's South End Theater, Boston, opened for the new season August 5, and this exchange furnishes the service. The South End will show a daily change of reels, illustrated songs and no vaudeville. The writer believes this is the first Loew house to leave the Licensed camp, and Independent forces in Boston are happy.

Manager Jack Levy, of the Superb Theater, Roxbury, Mass., has cut out his vaudeville acts, and is using Licensed service and illustrated songs. Manager Levy will probably add the vaudeville to his bills again, as soon as the weather becomes more suited for business. Manager Levy is a mighty clever manager, and a hustler. Result—the Superb is a winner, even if it is located at Roxbury Crossing.

Irving F. Moore, well known as a principal of the Moore Amusement Company, has given up that line, and intends to embark in the taking of moving pictures. Mr. Moore is busy at his offices at 218 Tremont Street, Boston, getting things in shape.

HENRY.

LOUISVILLE.

THE elements have been kind to Louisville exhibitors recently. The weather of the past few weeks has been remarkably cool, considering the season, and has exercised a most beneficial effect on the attendance at various Louisville motion picture houses. With the major portion of the summer past, the outlook is now unusually good, it is believed.

Louisville was fairly well represented at the annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. Louis J. Dittmar, of the Majestic Theater, made the trip, both as the delegate from Kentucky and as the representative of the Louisville Photoplay Association, of which he is president. Max Simons, treasurer of the same organization, attended as a delegate of that body. Others who took in the national affair were: Joe Steurle, Broadway Amusement Company; J. M. Wentzel, Norman Theater; H. B. Strube, Pastime Amusement Company, and Arthur V. Sheckler of the Gomes Theatrical Exchange of Cincinnati.

Johnson Musselman, well known in Louisville moving picture circles, has assumed the management of the Olympic Theater, and is making a big success of his new house. The first week's business, under Mr. Musselman's management showed an increase in receipts amounting to $75.

The Hippodrome Theater, Second and Market Streets, has made numerous improvements recently, the most important being the addition of several hundred powerful electric lights. The Hippodrome now is one of the brightest spots in Louisville.

After having experimented with several film services, the Novelty Theater of Louisville, has announced that in future it will use the Universal service exclusively. The Novelty will get the first service in Louisville, having preference over all other houses using the Universal.

An important visitor in Louisville recently was O. T. Crawford of St. Louis. Besides being prominently connected with the Atlas Manufacturing Company of St. Louis, Mr. Crawford operates eleven big moving picture houses in the Mound City, and also is connected with the Princess Amusement Company of the Kentucky metropolis. Mr. Crawford was the guest of Allen Kinney of the Princess, during his stay in Louisville. President Simon, of the Princess is in Chicago, and took in the national convention.

A. F. Beck, of the Central Film Exchange, of Indianapolis, Ind., spent several days in Louisville recently on business, incidentally renewing his pleasant relations with exhibitors of the Gateway City.

M. Switow, president of the Falls Cities Amusement Company, is in French Lick for a couple of weeks' stay. Owing to the lateness of the season, Mr. Switow has decided to postpone the erection of a new theater on the site of the Grand, in New Albany, Ind., until next summer. In the meanwhile, the Grand will run without cessation. The Grand, as well as the Crystal Theater, in Louisville, will hereafter use the Mutual film service, getting first run pictures.

"Don Juan and Charles V," was the title of a recent Pathe Freres offering at the Majestic Theater, which excited much favorable comment.

The Morton Theater, Madisonville, Ky., which has been closed for the past two years, will be again thrown open to the public in the fall. C. H. Bleich, an exhibitor of Paducah, Ky., is the head of a stock company which has been formed to operate the house. The Morton is now being thoroughly renovated and will be put in first-class shape for the coming season.

R. L. Braemer of Manchester, Ky., is to operate a moving picture theater in Dover, Ky.

The Garrick Theater Company has been incorporated at Hopkinsville, Ky., with a capital stock of $24,000. The incorporators are: George A. Bleich of Owensboro, R. S. Dulin of Madisonville, and W. T. Cooper and H. W. Linton, of Hopkinsville. The company will operate the Garrick Theater in Hopkinsville, reserving the right to open other houses and handle real estate in that connection. Vaudeville will be used in the Garrick.

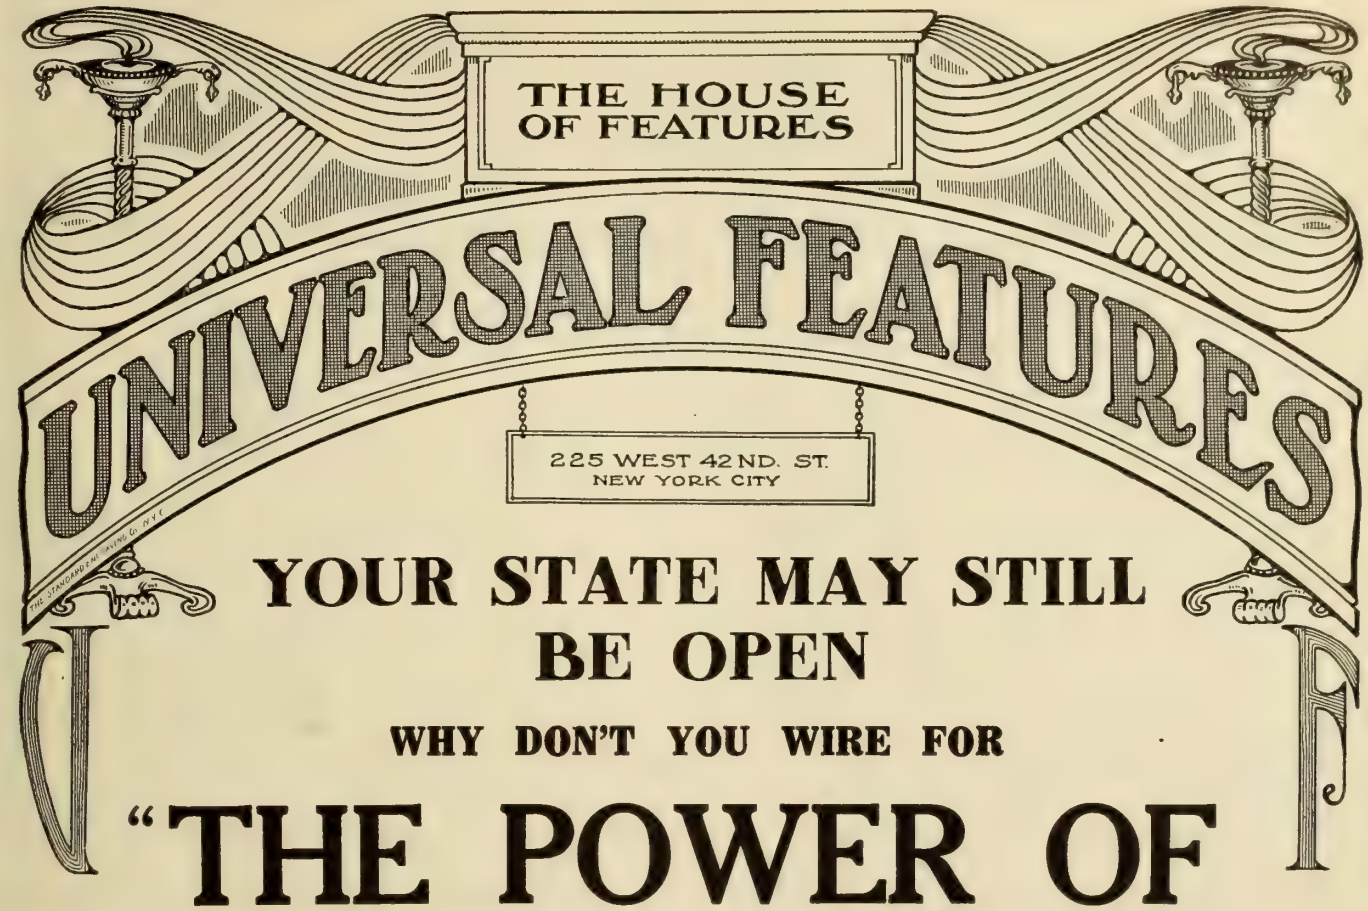
Clyde Gaines, of Winchester, Ky., has leased a site in Irvine, Ky., and has begun the work of erecting a moving picture theater. The new house will cover ground 75 by 30 feet in dimension, and will be completed in the early fall.

The Young Men's Christian Association of Bowling Green, Ky., has opened a moving picture theater, the association quarters being used for the performances. Pictures will be shown only on Friday and Saturday nights of each week.

A. J. Wellman, a well-known exhibitor of Catlettsburg, Ky., has taken over the Scenic Theater, in Ashland, and will operate that house in conjunction with the Lyric, in the former city. Mr. Wellman will give daily matinees at his new house. A daily change will be featured. C. B. Clerk is the former owner of the Scenic.

W. C. Brewer has opened a moving picture house in Cadiz, Ky., with satisfactory results at the initial performances. Three performances will be given weekly.

The moving picture houses of Lexington, Ky., after a rather strenuous struggle with the daily press of that city, are now getting the mention to which they are entitled. Hitherto the Lexington newspapers have shown a decided reluctance to review the films shown at the animated picture houses. It was argued by opponents of the pictures that they were altogether distinct from the drama, and accordingly were not entitled to free press notices. While it is admitted that the moving pictures are a departure from the old-style legitimate, it was pointed out that the moving pictures certainly are of vital interest to the general public and are as much entitled to criticism as an ordinary theatrical venture, or any other enterprise which depends on public patronage for success. The result of the Lexington exhibitors' campaign was gracefully yielded by the press and advance notices are now customary. Louisville newspapers were probably the first in Kentucky to adopt the plan



YOUR STATE MAY STILL BE OPEN

WHY DON'T YOU WIRE FOR

"THE POWER OF DESTRUCTION"

It is a great big heart-absorbing story. It is alive with "I-wonder-what-will-happen-next" situations. An invention worth millions upon millions is the motive for a treachery as base as another Judas. The finish will chill you to your spine.

There is chaos and then all things settle. Your breath returns and things are as you wished to see them end. Why the word "sensational" was written by the hand of Fate that it might BE to fit this photoplay.

Recently developed arrangements have left us with a few States open on the two following feature Fortunes:

"Tom Butler"

A terrific, dominant detective drama

"Bridge of Notre Dame"

A woman's revenge causes this sensational tragedy

WRITE ME—WIRE ME—OR SEE ME

J. D. Tippett "UNIVERSAL FEATURES"
225 West 42nd Street, N. Y. City

of giving reviews and mention of picture theaters, having taken that step several months ago. The new attitude of the press toward moving pictures marks the advent of the animated picture press agent in Kentucky, and several houses have sought the services of high-class men for that purpose.

Miss Stella Stamper, of Lexington, Ky., is still winning a good deal of fame in the Bluegrass section of Kentucky as a soloist. Miss Stamper is the possessor of a voice of real merit and has a big following in Lexington and elsewhere.

The Board of Education of Nashville, Tenn., has shown that it has a grasp on the situation by purchasing a machine for installation in the new high school building in that city. Moving pictures will assist the teachers in instructing pupils. Nashville is the first city in the South to realize the possibilities of the animated picture in this respect. Prof. J. W. Brister, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, said apropos of the new plan: "Moving pictures have come to stay and the schools should be quick to grasp their great possibilities of usefulness. I think that teachers will find them of decided advantage. I hope other cities will soon follow our example."

The old truism to the effect that one man's meat may be another man's poison is being worked out to a finish in the Louisville amusement field. A period of remarkably cool weather has ensued, bringing with it record-breaking minimum temperatures for the month of August, so far as the history of the local Weather Bureau extends, and the parks are getting the gristly end of the bone while the moving picture shows enjoy white meat and giblets.

It is true that the present state of affairs may not be expected to continue for any appreciable length of time, but the exhibitors are making the most of that which is afforded them in the way of unusually favorable natural conditions, and all local houses are doing business on the capacity limit scale. Special attractions are strongly advocated just now, when the public turns to a cozy photoplay-house rather than to any other recognized entertainment. As a matter of fact, the entire summer has been directly unfavorable to the amusement parks and propitious for the moving picture exhibitors, and the former competitors are almost ready to capitulate. A persistent rumor has been circulating for a couple of weeks to the effect that one of the biggest riverside resorts in the city is to be closed permanently at the end of the current season, inasmuch as its proprietors have decided that concrete dividends from the property are surer in the form of building lots than when it is occupied with outdoor devices and the stock in trade of the Coney Island capitalist.

The last week in August will find the old reliable line of the Fourth Street playhouse, melodrama, again staged upon the Avenue Theater. Morton Shaw, manager of the Avenue, is enthusiastic over the success of that playhouse with its hot weather attractions of a cool auditorium, moving pictures, and scoreboard, portraying the games of the Louisville Club on the road. Pictures are a fixture for the summer program of the Avenue henceforward, said Mr. Shaw.

B. F. Keith's Mary Anderson Theater commences its 1912-13 run September 1, billing high-class vaudeville and a finale of moving pictures, including some of the choicest releases of the day. James Weed, manager, is arranging to have the popular house completely renovated from orchestra circle to loft, and it is the plan of the Keith management to feature the pictorial wind-up of each show more prominently than heretofore.

"The Money King," a three-reel Vitagraph feature, is doing all that its name implies for the Broadway Amusement Company at the Broadway. The special has been introduced only a few days and is attracting capacity-limit houses during a time when the suburban exhibitors would ordinarily count themselves lucky to maintain normal mid-summer business.

Joseph Steurle and Fred Dolle, members of the Broadway Amusement Company, left a few days ago for a trip through Lexington, Paris, Frankfort, Versailles, and other Central Kentucky cities, where arrangements are to be made with local exhibitors for the showing of "The Redemption," a cracker-jack Warner feature, and other special releases now under the control of Messrs. Steurle, Dolle and their associates. The success of their trip thus far forecasts that the features in question will be widely shown through the Bluegrass section during the next few weeks.

The Crown, at Seventh and Oak Streets, is doing the best business of its career. The house has been renovated throughout.

The first Roman Catholic church in Louisville to recognize the educational and entertainment advantages of the moving picture is that of St. Philip Neri, at Floyd and Woodbine Streets. A fund raised by the congregation of that institution has provided a beautiful parochial hall adjacent to the church, and the new building, which will be used for settlement work, is to be permanently equipped by Father Oscar Ackerman with an up-to-date machine and screen in an apartment that will be set aside for the exhibition of suitable films at regular intervals. Father Ackerman is enthusiastic over his project to entertain his parish in the most approved fashion.

It is understood that Louis H. Ramsey, a prominent moving picture exhibitor of Lexington, Ky., is heading a syndicate of Lexington business men which will provide Mount Sterling, Ky., with a handsome new photoplay house. The new theater in Mount Sterling is to cost upwards of $5,000, and will boast of a commodious auditorium 40 by 150 feet in dimension. Col. B. F. Cockrell is handling the Mount Sterling end of the project.

Duff Creech and B. F. Creech have purchased the Lyceum Theater in Hazard, Ky., and have remodeled that establishment, re-christening it "The Hipp." The reincarnated Hazard Theater is launched upon a most auspicious career.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Crescent Amusement Company, of Bowling Green, Ky., was held a few days ago for the purpose of completing arrangements for the introduction of feature films in the two Crescent houses, the Elite and the Columbia. The Bowling Green company has determined to allow itself latitude to bring the latest and best in the moving picture world to that city, where J. P. Masters has charge of the twin theaters.

Having completely recovered from recent illnesses, which left him in a weakened condition, C. S. Graves, of the Princess Theater, in Lexington, Ky., has returned to his home in that city after a long stay at French Lick Springs, Ind. Mr. Graves has pronounced himself to be in trim for the best business in the history of the Princess.

With the view of injecting local interest in the shows of the Princess Theater in Hopkinsville, Ky., Manager J. B. Guill has caused a number of moving picture views of Hopkinsville and its features to be taken.

An up-to-date moving picture theater has opened for business in Cadiz, Ky., under the management of W. C. Brewer. A specially planned building next door to the Hotel Cadiz has been erected by Mr. Brewer, and the amusement enterprise has been successfully launched.

About 850 new chairs for the auditorium of the Pineville Opera House at Pineville, Ky., are to be purchased in the immediate future by F. A. Heath, secretary of the company.

With an eye to the future, the owners of the Paris Opera House in Paris, Ky., have closed a contract with a Cincinnati, Ohio, machinery firm for the installation of complete new heating apparatus for that theater. Two hot-air furnaces with vents supplying every nook and corner of the picture show auditorium are to be provided for the Paris house against the approach of winter.

The old Elk Theater in Fulton, Ky., has been leased by Cornelius Owen, a well-known business man of that city. Mr. Owen is having the house remodeled throughout and proposes to open for business within thirty days, offering a line of up-to-the-minute photoplay attractions.

In order to insure constant brilliancy for the machine lights of the Red Moon Theater and to preclude the possibility of flickering annoyances forcing themselves upon the patrons of that establishment, a new lighting plant has been installed in the Red Moon by John Milwain in Carlisle, Ky. The Carlisle house is equipped in a fashion to compare with the biggest and best in that section of the state.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

PHILADELPHIA

MANAGER J. Fred Zimmerman's Keystone Theater, on Lehigh Avenue, which was a decided success last year, with its pictures and vaudeville, has opened for its fall and winter season, showing a first class bill, combined with the best of moving pictures.

Luna Park, Sixty-fifth and Vine Streets, was the scene of a fight a few nights ago when the Italian populace of the city held their annual outing at that place. A young Italian miss was insulted by one of her countrymen and she proceeded to make things pretty lively for him for a while. Managers of the two moving picture houses which are located in the park had several extra policemen on the job and no serious outbreaks occurred.

The moving pictures of the Johnson-Flynn fight which were exhibited at the Gayety Theater were met with approval, and it was the thought of all those that witnesed the production that they were the finest of their kind in photography only, as the fight did not amount to much. Crowded houses saw the pictures at each show.

The Ocean Pier Amusement Company of Camden, N. J., has just been incorporated under the laws of Delaware, with a capital of $10,000. The object of the company is to build piers for amusement purposes, and operate them. The incorporators are: E. G. C. Bleakley, K. S. Falser and J. T. Sutton.

The Moving Picture Publicity Company, which has been working in Allentown for the past month, has finished taking the pictures of that city, and they were shown to the city council for approval a few days ago. The Mayor and councilmen were pleased with them.

"Saved from Siberia" is the latest feature of the Star Company, and it has been meeting with the best of success.

The Fairhill Palace has closed for a few weeks in order that the house may be thoroughly renovated for the coming season.

Carr & Schad have purchased the Empire Theater of Reading, from F. E. Stetler, and will try to make it one of the finest theaters in Central Pennsylvania. Of course this cannot be done in a few weeks, but these two men are hustlers and will no doubt make their venture a success.

Headquarters will be established in a few days at the Calehuff Supply Company's Offices by Walter Evans, traveling representative of the Thomas A. Edison Company, who will be pleased to have all the local as well as out-of-the-city exhibitors call upon him. Mr. Evans is at present on his vacation, which will be of a few weeks' duration.

A. H. Woods will have his general offices in the Eltinge Forty-second Street Theater on and after September 1. F. F. Proctor has taken the rooms formerly occupied by Manager Woods in the Putnam Bldg.

As an interesting feature of the Durbar films, which have been drawing large crowds to the Garrick Theater, were views of the camel corps kept by the British Government for service in Egypt and India.

L. Samler of Lebanon, Pa., was a local visitor, and while in the city purchased two No. 6 Powers machines complete, with supplies for his theater.

Brau Krammes, who several months ago sold the National Theater of Hamburg, Pa., to his brother, has repurchased the theater and taken full charge.

H. R. Lynn, manager of the Noaw Theater at Allentown last season, has opened an open-air theater at the same place for the rest of the summer. Sunday shows will also be given, at which time religious pictures will be shown and part of the proceeds given to charity.

W. L. W. Jones of the World in Motion Picture Theater, with several other men, has made plans to build an opera house at Coatsville, Pa., which will be used as a picture house when there is no other attraction playing.

C. H. CONGDON.

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

S. J. WAGNER has remodeled his opera house at Bluffs, Ill.

Miss Marie Uhl, of Pana, Ill., has succeeded Mrs. George L. Whiteman as pianist at the Dixie Theater, in Vandalia, Ill.

Albert Shields, who has been operator at the New Remington in Kankakee, Ill., has accepted a position as electrician with a musical comedy company.

L. J. Bulger, the new proprietor of the Lyric Theater, at Greenville, Ill., and Miss Estella Mason, of Belment, Ill., were recently married.

Hampton Albright has resigned his position as operator at the Daley airdome in Carlinville, Ill., to accept a similar position in St. Louis.

The Shoaff Opera House at Paris, Ill., included a new picture outfit in its pre-season improvements.

The Masonic Order of Rockport, Ill., is building a new hall, one floor of which will be used as an opera house.

Arthur Boggis has sold the Gem Theater at Mt. Carmel, Ill., to O. L. Taylor, manager of the Colonial in that city. The Gem will be removed to the site of the old Star and Mr. Boggis will remain in charge for a time. The Star has removed to the old Clark clothing house building.

The Gem Theater, Sixth Street, St. Louis, Mo., has opened for the winter and has reduced its admission from ten cents to five.

The Idle Hour Theater at Newport, Ind., changed its schedule to three nights each week—Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

W. E. Colvin, proprietor of the Airdome at Villa Grove, Ill., will open a moving picture show in Charleston, Ill.

Chris Jackson, who is manager of the Majestic Theater, at Lincoln, Ill., announces that moving pictures will be shown when road attractions do not conflict.

Manager Striewing, of the Crystal Theater, at Decatur, Ill., willingly donated half a day's receipts to the Macon County Hospital Association, as before her marriage Mrs. Striewing was a graduate nurse.

C. B. Burkhardt, who has been giving moving picture shows at the park near Homer, Ill., transferred his operations to the Homer Opera House, August 17.

"Life," a moving picture theater, has been opened at 324 West Second Street, Davenport, Iowa.

Albert Jackson, manager of the opera house and airdome at Pawhuska, Okla., has been visiting relatives in Clinton, Ill.

The use of moving pictures in the schools of Decatur, Ill., is said to be practically assured, as money has been donated for the machine. The high school building is already wired, but the outfit will be accessible to all schools of the city. History, literature and geography will be given special attention in the selection of films.

The buildings on Chicago Street, in Joliet, Ill., now occupied by the Royal restaurant and A. C. Rott, are said to have been leased for a term of years beginning March 1, 1913, by an eastern film company at $500 a month, and will be remodeled for a picture house.

Wilmington, Ill., has been visited by a man looking for a site upon which to erect a moving picture theater.

A moving picture show has been opened in Reddick, Ill., operating three nights a week.

Charles H. Hale, proprietor of the Blue Jeans moving picture theater, at Kilbourne, Ill., has been giving regular shows in Sbicarte, Ill., an isolated river town.

Howard King has purchased the interest of his partner, John L. Peterson, in the Airdome at Sycamore, Ill. Clyde H. Wilson, who has been operating the machine, will be the active manager. It is said that Mr. Peterson has sites in view for a new picture house in Sycamore.

The Champaign County Fair at Urbana, Ill., will be preserved to posterity by means of moving pictures.

George Mills, of Moline, Ill., has purchased the Lyric Theater, in Rock Island, Ill., and taken possession. Independent films will be used.

GREAT NORTHERN

Release for Saturday, August 24th.

FOR HER SISTER'S SAKE or The Lost Diamond Star

A splendidly enacted dramatic production of human interest.

Release for Saturday, August 31st.

LOVE IS BLIND

A powerful drama, vividly portrayed, containing many thrilling situations. See the sensational duel in the dark.

Release for Saturday, September 7th. Split Comedy Reel.

THE AFFLICTED GOVERNOR — A comedy film sure to make a hit.

THE SPRING LOCK — A snappy comedy with laughs all the way through

Release for Saturday, September 14th.

AUNT JANE'S WILL

An elaborate comedy-drama of the very highest order. Don't overlook this big feature. One of the best comedies of the year.

SOLD ONLY THROUGH FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 E. 14th St., N. Y.

NORDISK FILM CO. OF COPENHAGEN.

LUX FILMS

Release for Friday, August 30th, 1912

The Modern Child

Length, about 990 feet.

A FILM FULL OF HUMAN INTEREST

Release for Friday, September 6th, 1912

A Cripple's Folly

Length, about 990 feet.

A vital subject superbly handled by competent players

R. PRIEUR, 10 EAST 15th STREET NEW YORK CITY

Telephone 3427 Stuyvesant

SOLD ONLY THROUGH FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA

George H. Hopper, operator at the Gaiety, Springfield, Ill., has started on a cross-country walk from Springfield to Denver. He expects to cover an average of thirty miles a day. He is making the trip as representative for a shoe company, and expects to pay his expenses enroute by the sale of post cards. The Gaiety has ended the summer season of Independent pictures and, after two weeks of renovating, will be ready for vaudeville.

John Laughran, a baritone singer, is singing at the Empress Theater, at Fairbury, Ill., and Miss Fleta Rankin is singing at the Electric.

J. Ewart has leased the opera house at Greenup, Ill., to William Nolting, who is also manager of the Airdome at Neoga, Ill. The new manager will use Licensed service.

Col. Channing W. Meek, fifty-seven years old, at one time connected with the American Mutoscope and Biograph Company, is dead at Marble, Col., where he was president of the Colorado-Yule Marble Company, one of the largest concerns in the country.

Vaudeville and pictures at the Lyceum Theater, Peoria, Ill,, will be continuous instead of three a day.

Louis Frick, Jr., of Grayville, Ill., has purchased the Albion Theatorium, at Albion, Ill. He has installed an electric piano with harp attachment.

The Empire Theater, Moline, Ill., which opened the vaudeville season August 25, has announced that it will pay more attention to the moving picture end.

The Globe Amusement Company, of Chicago, has been incorporated with capital stock of $2,500 to engage in theatrical business. The incorporators are Nathan S. Schoenbrod, Ella Graham, and Samuel G. Grodson.

The City Amusement Company of Chicago has been incorporated with capital stock of $2,500 to conduct theaters. The incorporators are Nathan S. Schoenbrod, Ella Graham, and Samuel G. Grodson.

The Admiral Amusement Company of Chicago has been incorporated with capital of $10,000, to operate theaters. The incorporators are Seymour N. Cohen, Branard J. Brown, and Robert S. Nahin.

Manager W. M. Sauvage, of the Hippodrome at Alton, Ill., will install his own electric light plant.

C. H. Dutton, manager of the Majestic moving picture theater, at Mount Carroll, Ill., and Miss Genevieve Cletz, of that city, were recently married.

Elliot Crull, owner of the Princess, 612 South Main Street, Elkhart, Ind., will make a 90-foot extension to his building and other improvements, the whole to cost $10,000. A solid concrete operating room will be equipped with an automatic fire door. Four hundred and eighty seats will be installed with a 6-foot aisle the entire length of the auditorium.

J. Naylor and George R. Hunt have purchased an interest in the Gaiety Theater at Galesburg, Ill.

Dreamland Theater at Kewanee, Ill., was host to the members of the local post of the Grand Army of the Republic when it showed "Lincoln's Address at Gettysburg."

Petitions are being circulated by theater men of Danville, Ill., asking the City Council to revoke the Sunday closing ordinance.

John H. Wood, building inspector of Joliet, has given nearly all the theaters in that city a clean bill regarding safety.

The Star Theater at Belvidere, Ill., was opened August 15 by Pratt & Rawson as a picture show.

The picture show at the Piasa fish-fry, one of the leading outdoor events in Illinois, was so successful last year that Manager Stevenson of the Airdome, at Jerseyville, has been given the concession this year.

The new Orpheum Amusement Company of Chicago has been incorporated, with capital stock of $5,000, to operate theaters. The incorporators are Louis L. Marks, Julius Goodman, and Louis H. Harrison.

The Jesup State Bank Corporation of Jesup, Iowa, will add a story to its building to be used as an opera house.

The Walker Opera House at Urbana, Ill., will be remodeled.

John Buss has purchased the interest of his partner, Charles Bender, in the Orpheum Theater, at Freeport, Ill.

The American Museum Association at Evansville, Ind., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $5,000, to conduct theaters. Incorporators are August Mulhausen, J. E. Cox, and C. H. Hendricks.

The Green River Amusement Company of Amboy, Ill., has been incorporated with capital stock of $800.

Assistant State's Attorney Samuel King, of Will County, Ill., has reported that because of heavy patronage many picture shows in Joliet are disobeying the law regarding the over-crowding of theaters, placing chairs in the aisles and allowing patrons to stand close to the exits.

S. R. Wooley and Mrs. Francis Nelms have sold the Crystal Moving Picture Show at Champaign to H. H. Johnson, owner and manager of the Lyric, and his brother-in-law, C. L. Hunter, who will manage the new acquisition. The house will continue to run Independent films, but the name will be changed in a prize contest for women only.

The best answer in the advertisement essay composition, conducted by the Champion Gazette, is a real boost for H. H. Johnson, of the Lyric.

The Fountain Park Congregational Church of St. Louis, Mo., has opened a moving picture show in the grove adjoining the church, at Fountain and Albert Avenues. All young persons attending the Sunday service who arrive before the services begin will be given a ticket to the moving picture show. Others may purchase them. The pastor, the Rev. M. E. Alling, says that the pictures will not be confined to religious subjects, but anything that is good will be shown. If the plan is successful, the show will be held each night in the grove and this winter in the church.

Harry Franks has increased the capacity of the Grand Theater, at Macomb, Ill., to 300 persons.

W. W. Watts, manager of the Vaudette, Springfield, Ill., was host to the children from the Illinois Odd Fellows' Orphans' Home, at Lincoln, August 7. The invitation was a surprise to the officials and to the little visitors to the Capital city.

Miss Nina Aikman is the musician for the new Idle Hour Theater at Newport, Ind.

Manager Foufas has received permission from the City Council at Morrison, Ill., to give religious pictures on Sunday nights.

Superintendent Bauman, of the Quincy (Ill.) schools, has taken up with the school board the feasibility of films in the schools of that city. He referred to the discussions at the National Educational Association meeting in Chicago upon the topic "What School Facilities Should Be Provided for Instruction by Motion Picture Machines?" He has also written to schools which have taken up the use of the moving picture machine and will present the answers to the board.

The Lyric Theater, of Dayton, Ohio, recently gave its patrons a concert by the Ohmer Fare Register Company Band in addition to the usual four reels of pictures.

Frank W. Williams, manager of the Liberty Theater at Peoria, Ill., is one of the incorporators of the Illinois Feature Film Company of Peoria, which has been granted a charter with a capital stock of $2,500 to deal in films and operate pictures. The other incorporators are Robert N. McCormick and Josephine Johnson, both of Peoria.

The Williams Goldman Amusement and Investment Company of St. Louis has been incorporated with capital stock of $15,000 to operate picture shows. The incorporators are Paul Dillon and Bertha Goldman.

H. Corley has purchased the Crystal Theater at Rantoul, Ill., from E. E. Alger, of Paxton, Ill. Mr. Corley has been manager of the theater for over a year.

A. R. Campbell, of Danville, Ill., took a moving picture of the automobile hill climb at Newport, Ind., August 8.

Louis P. Anderson, of Springfield, Ill., and Mayor John R. Davis, of Jacksonville, Ill., are said to be contemplating a new theater at Jacksonville.

The Ziegfield Amusement Company of Chicago has been incorporated with capital stock of $15,000 to operate theaters. The incorporators are W. K. Ziegfield, Charles R. Lindsay, Jr., and J. D. Inderrieden.

The Majestic Theater at Waterloo, Iowa, which has been remodeled for a vaudeville house, is expected to reopen August 26.

George De Bolt, of Farmer City, Ill., has discontinued vaudeville and is running pictures exclusively.

The Princess Theater at Rockford, Ill., successfully repeated the "Odyssey."

The cool weather in Illinois has had a reviving effect upon the moving picture business, but few of the managers have been careful enough to take down their signs "The Coolest Theater in——."

Bids have been opened for the new La Salle Theater, which is to be built at La Salle, Ill., by the La Salle Enterprise Company. It will cost about $25,000.

The J. R. Brannen Amusement Company of Evansville, Ind., has been incorporated with capital stock of $10,000, to do a general amusement business. The incorporators are J. R. Brannen, Cathern I. Brannen, and Edward Mooney.

FRANK H. MADISON.

SAN FRANCISCO

DURING the army maneuvers which began August 10th and will continue for several days, the more important encounters during the mimic war are being photographed by three cameramen, who are acting under the instructions of Miles Bros. Exchange. All the accessories of modern warfare will be in actual use, and flying machines will not be the least upon the list as in addition to the two regular United States Army aeroplanes there will be several machines loaned to the department by local owners.

Organizer C. A. Neale is doing excellent work among the moving picture exhibitors in Southern California, he having talked recently to fifty-two exhibitors in Los Angeles at a meeting called for the purpose. At the meeting the exhibitors expressed a desire to affiliate with the State League and a charter will soon be issued, its title being "Local No. 2 of State League No. 12." The San Francisco League extends, through its secretary, Mr. W. A. Cory, a hearty welcome to these new members and will be glad of the opportunity to meet them personally at the September Convention.

The Arthur Spaulding Co., a firm of commercial photographers, are just finishing an advertising film for a local wholesaler of paints. The film method of advertising seems to be getting very popular here, the Spaulding Company having recently made films for that purpose for the Pacific Hardware and Steel, and A. Schilling Company. In each of the above named pictures a diversion from the usual "advertising" film is made by introducing a comedy story which is carried throughout the entire reel. This is a unique invocation and the demonstrators claim the results are much more satisfactory than where merely the different stages of manufacture are shown in the advertising film.

Mr. Sol Lesser, of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, is in receipt of a letter from Mr. H. B. Coles, sales manager of Nicholas Power Company, in which is given Mr. Coles' plans for the Power's exhibition at the California Exhibitors' Convention. Mr. Coles will bring with him a complete Powers equipment, and he has retained space in the hall for the purpose of demonstrating the machine.

The Fairyland is now making Friday nights a "Feature Night," running special pictures in addition to the regular program and advancing the admission to ten cents. The proprietors, Cory Bros., announce that the opening of their new house, the "Cory," took place on the 17th. The program is straight moving pictures and music, 5 reels being shown at each performance at a price of ten cents.

The Palace Theater has just been opened at Santa Barbara by Louis Ducker, and Independent pictures will be on the program. Three reels changed three times a week will be furnished by the California Film Exchange, which also supplied a Simplex projection machine for the Palace.

The exposition officials report the invitation of President Taft to all foreign nations to participate in the 1915 exposition, has been accepted by fourteen foreign powers. Commissions have been appointed to select sites for State buildings by the Governors of thirty-one States, and the commissions of fourteen of those States have already made their choice. Motion pictures have been made of the ceremonies already enacted.

"ANDY."

SEATTLE.

ONE of the handsomest motion picture houses on the Pacific Coast is the Clemmer Theater, in Seattle. It was built especially for moving pictures, by J. Q. Clemmer. The house is modern throughout and seats 1,200 persons. Mr. Clemmer has just installed a large pipe organ. He is also the owner of the Dream Theater in Seattle, and has moving picture interests in Spokane.

When the rights for the Wolgast-Rivers pictures were being sold, C. J. Reilly and G. J. Mackenzie, respectively treasurer and manager of the Metropolitan Theater here, thought they'd take a "flier." For what has proved an inconsequential amount they got the Northwest rights. The row over the decision made the pictures good, and the buyers sold a slice of their rights to Alexander Pantages for his vaudeville houses, for $5,000. Besides that, they have a nice rake-off from showing the pictures in British Columbia.

Eugene Levy is known as the "moving picture king" of the Northwest. Starting in a modest way in Seattle, he has gradually acquired control of a string of houses. His latest acquisition is The Melbourne in Seattle. It is a model house with a substantial and attractive art front. Louis Dimond, one of the leading pianists on this coast, is the musical director of the house. At the Grand Opera House, which Levy took over sometime ago, he runs photoplays and vaudeville. Here he has inaugurated the "split week" idea and the result is a large and steady patronage.

In 1909, when Seattle had a world's fair, the Alhambra Theater was built for the Schuberts and their independent attractions. It never paid and was finally closed. Jensen & Von Herberg, who had made a success of moving pictures in a small way, obtained a five-year lease on the Alhambra and converted it into a moving picture house with vaudeville. It made good from the start. Now, that the National has been razed to make way for a ten-story building, Jensen and Von Herberg have bought the lease on the City Theater, a motion picture house formerly run by C. S. Johnson, paying $5,000 for it. It is on Second Avenue, in the busiest part of the city, next door to Pantages vaudeville house. The new owners expect to modernize The City Theater.

The Seattle city council has been asked to adopt a graduated license scale for moving picture houses. At present, the price is $250 a year, irrespective of capacity or income. The managers of some of the smaller houses protest that this is oppressive. They ask that the matter be adjusted and the finance committee has taken the matter under advisement.

H. O. STECHHAN.

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS.

Scranton, Pa.—The first floor front of the Italian Citizens' Clubhouse on Jackson Street, will be converted into a moving picture theater.

Rochester, Minn.—Wm. Barned has leased the Bijou Theater of J. F. Reid and will conduct it as a moving picture theater.

NOTHING $UCCEED$ LIKE $UCCE$$!!

A TRIP TO

"THE GARDEN OF ALLAH"

CONTINUES TO BE A BIG BOX OFFICE WINNER—SOME GOOD TERRITORY STILL OPEN—WIRE TODAY FOR PRICES

ONE OF THE BEAUTIFUL SCENES TAKEN FROM THIS WONDERFUL 3-REEL FEATURE

REPRODUCED AS A THREE-SHEET LITHOGRAPH

$ $ $ $ $ $ $ $

Cleveland, Ohio,
July 24, 1912.

Garden of Allah Film Co.,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

We are pleased to report that our gross receipts last week for your feature film "A trip to the Garden of Allah," which was played at the Euclid Ave. Opera House in this City were $1,714.80.

This is an indication of the success we will have in the Fall when the regular season opens.

Yours truly,
The Metropolitan Theater Company.

$ $ $ $ $ $ $ $

OUR FEATURE USED AS A DRAMATIC AND ARTISTIC AUTHORITY

TELEGRAPH, SUNDAY,

The Film Stage Director.

Out in Chicago also theatrical managers have discovered the availability of moving pictures as assistant to the overworked stage director.

In the second act of "The Merry Widow Remarried," playing at the Colonial, there is an Oriental dance performed by the chorus. Max Faetkenheuer, the producer, said he wanted the dance to be perfect. As he was giving this direction, Harry A. Smith, the business manager, approached and listened to the conversation.

"I know how you can get just what you want," declared Smith. "I recall a film in the pictures of 'The Garden of Allah' in which such a dance is shown in every detail."

The film was obtained and the chorus imitated the movements as revealed in the pictures.

...B. F. Keith Staff.

By ... announcement last ... E. F. Albee, in his capacity ... general manager, disclosed the ... B. F. Keith's staff for the new ... and in-

THREE THOUSAND FEET OF PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY. ALL SCENES BEAUTIFULLY TINTED.

Over ten million people have read the book! Over 400,000 have seen the play! Tens of thousands of dollars have been spent in advertising the book and play!

YOU GET THE ADVANTAGE OF THIS PUBLICITY!

One, three and eight sheet lithos, lobby displays, heralds, slides, newspaper cuts, special music and song. Wire for rights and bookings.

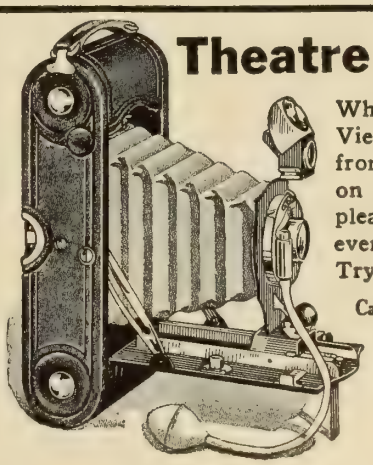
The Garden of Allah Film Co., 145 West 45th St., N. Y. City

WANTED

Negative Developer. Must be capable of producing Eclair quality of work. Apply

ECLAIR COMPANY

225 W. 42nd St. New York City



Theatre Managers

Why not KODAK Local Views; Have Slides Made from Them and Show on Your Screens? This pleases your audiences everywhere all the time. Try it.

Cameras and All Photo Supplies

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

21 EAST 14th STREET
NEW YORK CITY

LICENSED FILM STORIES

EDISON.

THE TRIANGLE (Sept. 3).—After having lost his job in asweat shop, a poor workman, living from hand to mouth with a family to support, is nearly driven to distraction by his inability to secure employment. The workman meets a Mr. Goodfellow. He, being rich and philanthropically inclined, has his sympathies aroused by the workman's pitiful story of distress. He goes to the manufacturer, where he is informed that the former operators of the idle machines in the shop were discharged because of the fact that he was making more goods than he could sell. Mr. Goodfellow suggests that if the employees work slower and fewer hours it would afford work for the unemployed, but this ingenious suggestion is not received with enthusiasm. Mr. Goodfellow next visits the retailer to ascertain why he does not replenish his stock more frequently and is informed that trade is poor and it is not feasible to buy more goods than can be sold to his customers.

Mr. Goodfellow then goes home more perplexed than ever, realizing that the question has resolved itself into a triangle which almost baffles him. He finally argues thus: Supply the workman with a little money and he will patronize the retailer, who in time will replenish his stock and thus compel the manufacturer to employ more workmen to enable him to meet the demand. The following day he puts his idea into practical use by distributing money among the idle workmen. Played mostly in comedy vein the film is a distinct novelty.

ALADDIN UP-TO-DATE (Sept. 4).—Three bad boys come into possession of the famous Aladdin lamp and without realizing its marvelous power cast it away at the lake side as a valueless article, where it is found by poor penniless Tim, the gardener, who is about to commit suicide because Farmer Jenkins objects to him as a son-in-law. He picks up the lamp and examines it curiously.

In trying to remove the sand and dirt he rubs it vigorously when to his astonishment a slave of the lamp suddenly appears coming from nowhere and informs Tim the slaves of the lamp are at his service, and by simply rubbing it his every wish will be granted, then he disappears as mysteriously as he came. This is a delightfully unusual comedy, full of trick work, which is wonderfully well done.

BELIEVE ME, IF ALL THOSE ENDEARING YOUNG CHARMS (Sept. 6).—All lovers must hold dear in their memory and secret within their hearts the name of Thomas Moore, for perhaps no other singer of sweet songs has played more upon the tender chords in the lovers' litany than the Irish bard, Tom Moore. A famous artist is in search of a model to pose for a picture entitled "In Love," and he finally engages a sweet-faced young girl whose beauty and simplicity capture his heart.

One night after a reception at his studio, where the simple model learns of the artist's love for her, a society lady, whose imagination had led her to believe that she would soon become his wife, wakes up to the fact that she has a rival. An accident to the model bids fair to disfigure her for life. Still having faith in her artist lover, she awaits his coming in the hour of her misfortune, but by a ruse of the society lady the model is prevented from knowing that her lover is hastening to her with a famous specialist, and she, poor girl, believes that the loss of her beauty is the cause of his loss of affection, so she flees from her rooms leaving no traces behind her to tell where she is going. After months of searching the artist gives up hope of ever finding her again. She returns thoroughly restored to health and beauty, and on entering his studio she finds him asleep in his chair. Not knowing whether he entertains any further affection for her, she leaves a note upon his table. But fate decides it is never to be read and he burns it up, not knowing that it contains the one knowledge he most longs for. Months afterward they are brought together, and "the heart that has truly loved never forgets, but as truly loves on to the close."

BRIDGET'S SUDDEN WEALTH (Sept. 7).—Bridget O'Hoolihan, a domestic in the employ of a wealthy family, is in love with Patrick Callahan, a policeman. Love runs smoothly until one day she receives a letter informing her that she has fallen heir to a small fortune, by the death of a relative. At the possession of so much money she swells with arrogant pride and her love for Pat, the policeman, turns cold. She visits all the big stores, making many purchases. She sojourns at a high-class hotel with servants to wait on her, buys a pet dog, and finally an automobile. It does not take her very long to get the habit of speeding with almost serious results.

She is on the point of being arrested for exceeding the speed limit when to her surprise the policeman turns out to be Pat, who seems compelled to perform his duty in arresting her. The situation seems to be twixt love and duty. After some pleading the old love is rekindled and a compromise is made by Pat resigning from the force and marrying the now wealthy Bridget.

OPENING OF THE Y. M. C. A. PLAYGROUND, Lynchburg, Va., 1912, (Sept. 7).—This is the finest Y. M. C. A. recreation ground in the United States and was formally opened early this summer. Governor Mann, of Virginia, was present at the opening and appears prominently in the film. The exercises attendant upon the ceremony were many, including a canoe and motor boat parade, water sports, baseball, and athletics of various sorts.

VITAGRAPH.

TOMMY'S SISTER (Sept. 2).—Left with two small children, Mrs. Morgan finds it difficult to make both ends meet. Polly, her daughter, does the housework. Tommy is looking for a situation to help his mother. He applies for one in the office of Hervay & Porter, real estate, etc. Porter refuses him because he has had but little experience, but Jack Hervey, touched by the boy's earnestness and hard story, takes him on. His mother and sister are jubilant. A week after he has the place he falls ill and the doctor says he must stay in bed. In this dilemma, Polly suggests that she dress in Tommy's clothes, pass herself off as his brother, and get them to let her fill his place till he gets well. The scheme works. Jack Hervey and Porter are both in love with Estelle to whom Jack is engaged. Porter tries to make love to Estelle and is indignantly repulsed. Porter resolves to ruin Jack and give away a big land deal, on which he hopes to make a fortune, to a rival real estate man. Polly becomes suspicious, and, hiding herself in a cupboard, overhears what they have to say. She warns Jack, who closes his deal quickly and outwits his enemies. Polly then confesses her sex, and the deception is willingly forgiven for what she has done. Jack and Estelle, who are about to be married, resolve to take a special interest in Mrs. Morgan and her family and help them in every possible way.

CORONETS AND HEARTS (Sept. 3).—Leaving England, in search of an American wife, young Cyril, son of the Earl of Creston, on reaching America meets Lilly Penn, and immediately lays siege to her heart and her fortune when he learns that she is an heiress. The Earl of Creston has advised his son that if he marries an American woman he must marry money, and in order to impress others with their social standing, he gives him a jeweled family coronet as an evidence of inherited rank. Lilly, who is a trusting, perfectly natural girl, is urged by Cyril to marry him, quoting his family standing in England, and as an inducement says he will bestow upon her a coronet which he will bring to her the following night.

The next day he goes to a vault to get the jeweled crown, and while in the vault he drops a letter which he has recently received from his father, reminding him again that if he marries, he must marry a fortune. Just after Cyril has left Lilly has occasion to go to the vault, and finds the letter which Cyril has dropped. She is distressed to learn that he is a fortune hunter, scorns his proffered coronet, and rejects him. Cyril realizes that true worth is found in women, not in their fortunes and he must prove his real worth. He sends the coronet back to his father, and relinquishes all claim to his title. He goes West and becomes a rancher. A couple of years later, Mr. Penn takes a trip West with his daughter Lilly and his doctor. A party of desperadoes try to wreck the train and rob the passengers. Cyril discovers them at their work and drives them away, signals the train and saves it. In the scrimmage, he is shot and wounded. The trainmen carry him back to his cabin and he is attended to by Mr. Penn's doctor. Lilly and her father visit Cyril's cabin. He is surprised to see Lillian and they are both glad to meet again. He tells her the hardships through which he has passed, preferring to depend on his own efforts than upon a title. He points to her head and says that he has no coronet to place there now. She reaches through the window, plucks a branch of vine, twines it into a wreath and places it upon her head. Her father and the doctor withdraw and the two lovers agree that hearts of love are better than all the coronets of jewels.

CAPTAIN BARNACLE'S LEGACY (Sept. 4).—Captain Barnacle receives a letter telling him that Mr. Markham, a South African whose life he saved some years ago, has died, leaving him a legacy in money and some property and jewels in South Africa. The will stipulates that he shall visit the property in person. The captain is glad of this legacy, as it will enable him to provide for his adopted daughter, Ruth. He leaves her in charge of Mrs. Lawrence, and with his friend Bunce, starts for South Africa. They are met by Krako, the overseer of the property, who has come to drive them to it in his ox van. Bunce mistrusts him, but there is nothing left to do but follow him. He takes them to the property where Barnacle discovers that Markham has left an African wife and seven children, who want to adopt him as their father. He gets some very valuable diamonds from a safe in the house, and these excite the cupidity of Krako. He works on the jealousy of the wife and they plot with some other natives to kill the sailors as they sleep. Barnacle and Bunce, however, let themselves down out of a window with their possessions, take two horses which they are forced to ride bareback, and fly the place. After many difficulties, they reach their native land, and Barnacle, happy in his legacy, hangs some of the diamonds on Ruth's neck.

BUNNY'S SUICIDE (Sept. 6).—Born with that tired feeling, John Spink is a lazy, ne'er-do-well. His poor wife is obliged to take in washing. The harder she works, the thinner she gets, and the fatter and more useless he grows. She reasons and argues with him, but to no purpose, until driven to desperation, she gives him a rope and tells him to go hang himself. With an air of injured innocence, he goes to a near-by grove, and while making preparations to adjust the rope, he is seen by one of his neighbors who hastens to tell John's wife that she will soon be a widow. On his way, he imparts the news to others, and they all go to carry the news to Mrs. Spink. She hastily quits washing and with all speed goes to the rescue of her "poor, dear husband." Spink, in fastening the rope to a limb on the tree, is struck with the idea of what a fine swing he could arrange for himself, and in a very short time has both ends of the rope fastened to the bough. Dropping to the ground, he places a board in the swing, and is soon swinging into the "land of Nod," his face wreathed in smiles. His wife, with the neighbors, soon appears and is so jubilant that he still lives that she throws her arms around his neck and kisses him profusely. John lifts her on to the seat beside him and she nestles her head upon his pillowy bosom.

SHE WANTED A BOARDER (Sept. 6).—Give me liberty or give me death," declares Mr. Crosby, after a quarrel with his better half. She gives him the privilege of a choice and he takes French leave, declaring he will never return. She loses no time, and places an advertisement in the paper for boarders. Crosby sees the "ad," repents of his hasty action and decides to frustrate his wife in her determination to take boarders. He conspires with two friends, who plan to help him out. One disguises himself as a musician and trombone player, and secures a room of Mrs. Crosby. He blows his horn so loud and long all the neighbors are disturbed and pay him a bonus to get rid of him. The other friend makes up as an actor, and takes a room at Mrs. Crosby's. He spouts Shakespeare with such vigor that she is frightened almost to death. When she appears to remonstrate with him, he addresses her as his opposite and makes desperate love to her. Raising a knife above her head he threatens to slay her if she will not fly with him. At this crisis her husband accidentally on purpose appears upon the scene and saves her, whereat she falls into his arms and looks upon him as her brave preserver and beseeches him not to leave her alone again.

A WASTED SACRIFICE (Sept. 7).—With all his faults, Jack Martin, an Arizona gambler, has one redeeming quality, a deep love for his motherless child. The baby is taken sick. Leaving her with Aunt Jane, the Mexican housekeeper, Jack goes for Dr. Winton, who is also the sheriff. The child dies. Crazed with grief, Jack gets drunk and shoots the town marshal. Leaping astride his horse, he escapes into the desert. Far out on a sandy plain, he comes across the dead body of a young Apache squaw, who has been bitten by a rattlesnake. By the side of the lifeless form he finds a child who has nursed from its mother's breast and imbibed the poison. Jack thinks of his own child, and his heart goes out to the little one. Jack has eluded his pursuers and his horse has dropped from exhaustion. He knows that he is free to escape. He hesitates, but determines to save the little papoose by doubling back on his tracks and meeting the posse, of which the doctor-sheriff is the leader. On rounding a curve in the canyon, he comes upon his followers, who cover him with their weapons. Holding out the child to the doctor, he begs him to do something for it. The sheriff examines it and discovers it is dead. Jack, with tears in his eyes, stands ready for his capture, conscious that inasmuch as he did it for one of God's little ones he has not done it in vain.

ECLIPSE.

AN ECCENTRIC SPORTSMAN (Sept. 4).—When the clock strikes 4 in the morning, Jack leaves his bed with a yawn, and proceeds to dress and breakfast, in preparation for a good day's fishing. He accomplishes everything with the least possible exertion; he sweeps his clothes with a broom, jumps cleanly into his boots, makes a tablecloth out of the counterpane, drinks his tea from the pot, and swallows his eggs and other viands whole.

He then takes his fishing tackle down from the wall, and calling his faithful dog, "Sport," makes his way towards the river. There he meets with all sorts of adventures, and does most everything, but catch any fish. At nightfall, he returns triumphant with great stories of his luck and prowess, but no fish.

FROM LAUTERBRUNNEN TO MURREN (Switzerland) (Sept. 4).—A delightful journey across the Bernese Alps, by Funicular Railway, at an altitude of 7,000 feet. The Alpine scenery is simply superb; the snow-capped mountains, the deep, narrow gorges, and the quaint little villages perched upon the mountain slopes, offer a fascinating sight.

SMALL GAME AT THE ZOO (Sept. 4).—An instructive as well as interesting subject, introducing many of the smaller inhabitants of the zoological gardens.

WE HAVE CLOSED NEGOTIATIONS IN EUROPE TO HANDLE ALL

"ASTA NIELSEN FEATURES"

IN AMERICA, AND ARE NOW SELLING EXCLUSIVE TERRITORY AT FIFTEEN CENTS PER FOOT, GIVING ALL PURCHASERS THE BENEFIT OF OUR ENORMOUS ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN OF

"THE GERMAN BERNHARDT"

THE SECOND RELEASE, AMERICA'S AND EUROPE'S SENSATION

"THE TRAITRESS"

A THREE-REEL PICTURE, AND ONE OF THE MOST POWERFUL EMOTIONAL DRAMAS EVER PRODUCED, IS NOW READY

WIRE OR WRITE TODAY

ONE AND THREE SHEET POSTERS AT COST

The United Feature Film Company 559 Spitzer Bldg. TOLEDO, OHIO

MOTION PICTURE SUPPLIES

PHOTOGRAPHIC SUPPLIES — WHOLESALE and RETAIL — THEATRE SEATING

EDISON
MOTIOGRAPH
POWERS
SIMPLEX
STANDARD

MACHINES

ARCO
BIO
ELECTRA
EXCELLO
SIEMEN

CARBONS

Ticket Hangers Carrying Cases Machine Parts Asbestos Booths
Reels Rewinders Disinfectants Exit Signs

Everything for the Motion Picture Theatre except the Film

PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT Co., 21 E. 14th St., N. Y. City
Phone Stuyvesant 2478

CINES.

RICHARD, THE LION-HEARTED (Aug. 31).—Richard of England, the champion of Christendom, dominates with his iron will the camp of the Crusaders, and is most desirous that the English banner shall float supreme upon St. George's Hill, flaunting defiance to the enemy. He gives orders that Sir Kenneth of Scotland shall guard this banner with his life.

Kenneth is brave and a worthy knight, but is falsely induced to leave his post, and, unfortunately, fails in his trust, for during his absence the banner is stolen by his enemies. When this comes to the king's ears, he becomes furious, and calls a council of war. The Duke of Montserrat scornfully admits to have committed the deed, and the king decrees that the two knights shall settle the matter in mortal combat.

To the sounding of trumpets, a gay and gorgeous throng assemble to view the struggle in the lists. The two rival warriors, Kenneth and Montserrat, clad in mail and mounted upon chargers, are soon engaged in furious assault upon each other.

The battle is fierce, but of short duration, for Sir Kenneth proves the mightier, and Montserrat is soon stretched upon the ground desperately wounded. Kenneth thus triumphantly justifies himself, amid the plaudits of the multitude. The king is so pleased with the victory that he graciously bestows upon him the hand of Edith Plantagenet in marriage.

A TRAGEDY OF LONG AGO (Sept. 3).—With great pomp and ceremony the marriage of Beatrice and Philip Viconti is solemnized. But the latter does not long remain true to his nuptial vows, for soon afterwards, while out hunting, he meets Agnes of Maino, and falls madly in love with her.

Beatrice learns of her husband's perfidy, and with the help of her faithful friend and adviser, Macaruffo, plots revenge. But unfortunately, a traitor informs Philip of the plan, and the latter, with several of his men, surprise the pair and imprison them in the tower.

During the night, Macaruffo gains Beatrice's consent to escape with him. Suspending a rope from their lofty prison window, he makes a perilous descent, hand under hand, with his intrepid comrade clinging to his shoulders. But lo! when they are about twenty feet from the water of the lake surrounding the tower, the rope breaks precipitating them into the water. With a few powerful strokes, however, the brave fellow succeeds in reaching the opposite shore, with his almost lifeless burden.

They escape to the hills, but soon are pursued by Philip, who overtakes them with his soldiers. Macaruffo dies nobly, defending Beatrice, but the latter is captured, and heartlessly sent to the block.

THE SACKING OF ROME (Sept. 7).—"To the walls! The enemy is upon us!" is the cry of the citizens of Rome on May 5, 1527. Renzo of Cari, leader of the defenders, is forced to bid a fond farewell to Julia, his betrothed, and go to assume command of the defenders.

After a number of furious assaults upon the ramparts, which are defended with pitch and heavy stones, the invincible French Army under the Duke of Bourbon, manages to scale the walls, and enter the city. His hired soldiers clamorous for spoils, immediately put the city to sack.

The greatest confusion reigns. Fleeing citizens with their household goods upon their backs, attempt to evade the merciless fury of the soldiers, but no one is spared; even the sacred portals of the churches are entered and eagerly ransacked for treasure.

Seeing that all is lost, and fearing for the safety of Julia, Renzo, with several of his comrades, hurries to find her, with the hope of assisting her to safety. But while trying to escape, they encounter a band of the invaders, and although they resist bravely, superior numbers prevail, and all perish by the sword.

PICTURESQUE SARDINIA, ITALY (Sept. 7).—Situated one hundred and forty miles west of Italy, this Italian island offers many interesting sights to tourists. After showing a wonderful bird's-eye view of the town of Cogligari, with its beautiful harbor, the film brings before our eyes such picturesque places as the Ramparts of St. Remy, the Plazza of Coperta, the Gate of Christina, and St. Pancrazia's tower.

ESSANAY.

BACK TO THE OLD FARM (Sept. 3).—Frank Clayton, a young city chap, plans a vacation on his uncle's farm. Going to his friend, George Randall, Clayton shows him old Barnes' letter asking that George be brought along as he has always been like a son to him and that someone will be glad to see him. George agrees to go and that night has a dream of the old days on Barnes' farm, where he worked as a young fellow and loved pretty Mollie. Toiling on the old-fashioned place becomes irksome to him and he determines to seek his fortune in the city. Packing up his few things he leaves a note for Barnes, then steals away in the moonlight and comes upon Mollie in the garden. Telling her of his discontent and his plans for the future he kisses her tenderly, receives her blessing, and leaves. With a start George now awakes to find Clayton urging him to hurry and make the train. But what a change greets their eyes on arriving at the old place. Time and money has worked miracles, and Barnes' farm is now equipped with the latest and most modern machinery and conveniences. With pretty Mollie by his side George rides over the vast acres in wonderment, and the two plan a moonlight elopement that night. Proudly old Barnes shows them a new auto-wagon he has just bought and tells George it is good for anything. Next morning the young couple are missed, and Barnes finds a note from George declaring the auto-wagon has been just the right medium for their elopement and that the farm and Mollie are good enough for him for they are coming back soon. So with a smile the old man prepares to kill the fatted calf.

THE WILDMAN (Sept. 5).—Old John Barnabee has a charming daughter, Mildred, who is loved by Billy, an arrant coward, and Charles, an artist. Barnabee objects to the attentions of Charles and forbids Mildred to receive his attentions. On the other hand Billy is liked by the old man, who urges Mildred to accept his proposal of marriage. She refuses and accompanies Charles while he sketches in the woods one morning. Billy sees them and immediately informs old Barnebee, who rushes into the forest in his shirt sleeves to bring his daughter back. Meanwhile, Billy finds Charles' deserted sketching outfit, and, thinking to trick him, pours a bottle of glue over the log on which the artist has been sitting. But the trick proves a boomerang in that old Barnebee, exhausted from tramping through the woods, flops down on the log to rest and sticks fast in the glue. Endeavoring to extricate himself Barnabee loses an embarrassing portion of his trousers and is forced to decorate his exposed person with tree branches and odds and ends of everything that is handy. Consequently he is taken for a "wildman" by some girls who spread the alarm in town and the constable, with a posse, starts out on the hunt. Billy joins the pursuit and proves himself an arrant coward when asked to capture the strange apparition. After a frantic search Charles suddenly comes upon Barnabee and the mystery is solved. Billy is forced to confess he worked the glue incident and Barnabee orders him out of sight, while Charles takes Mildred in his arms much to the old constable's bucolic amusement.

TWILIGHT (Sept. 6).—Old Silas Grant and his wife are contented and happy on their little farm and watch the budding of their pretty granddaughter, Ruth, and her sweetheart, Harry, while the tenderest of memories of by-gone years bring the sparkle of youth once again to their age-dimmed eyes. In the old-fashioned parlor, with the lights turned low and the glow from the fireplace enfolding them in its ruddy embrace, Mrs. Grant plays once again and the beautiful twilight song on the spinet, while the old man slowly keeps time, and the smoke from his pipe curls upward in the darkened room. Slowly the scene fades and we see the love romance of young Grant, the wooing of his pretty sweetheart, and her mother's consent to the marriage. Again the scene fades and we see them happy and contented on their little farm, sturdy young hearts not afraid of toil and the work of the fields. Once more the scene fades and Time has whitened their locks with his unrelenting, withering touch. The heat of midday is too much for the old man, and Mrs. Grant leads him from the plow to the cool of the old library and the enchantment of the twilight love song. The fading scene returns us to the dim parlor just as the pretty granddaughter and her sweetheart enter and discover the old couple nodding over the last strains of the wonderful music. Slowly Grant knocks the dead contents of his pipe into the fireplace, and, as the young people look on from the doorway, takes his sweetheart of fifty years in his arms and kisses the wan lips.

LUBIN.

A SUBSTITUTION (Sept. 2).—Harry Lawn, at home from college, has fallen in love with Dorothy Somers, a summer boarder at his father's farm. Lem Durpee, the "hired man," also falls victim to Dorothy's charms, while Priscilla Vane, a maiden lady, "on the shady side of forty," becomes smitten with Harry. The attentions of Lem and Priscilla wearying the two lovers, they plan to elope. They are overheard by Lem, by Priscilla, and by Dorothy's father, who decide to stop the elopement. Priscilla resolves to take Dorothy's place and marry Harry herself. At dinner Priscilla drops a sleeping powder into Dorothy's coffee. The powder takes effect and Dorothy goes to her room and drops to sleep. Priscilla dresses in Dorothy's clothes, putting on a heavy veil. Lem goes to the barn to chloroform a cat. It gives him an inspiration, which is to take Harry's place and elope with Dorothy himself. Harry comes into the barn presently. Lem "puts him out of business" and dons Harry's auto togs, which, with the goggles, effectually disguise him. A whistle at Dorothy's window, and the elopement is on. Priscilla and Lem start off with a horse and wagon, as Lem has not mastered the mysteries of an automobile. Dorothy's father, waiting in his room, falls into a doze, and awakes just too late to stop the elopement. In his haste to overtake the lovers, he falls downstairs, arousing the household. A number of the boarders give chase in the Somers' car. The car breaks down. A match, lighted to ascertain the trouble, causes an explosion, which spoils the car for immediate use. The pursuers then have to "foot it." Lem and Priscilla, unconscious of each other's identity, arrive at the minister's. The pursuing party, well-nigh breathless, arrive at the parsonage, and hurry in just as the minister is pronouncing Lem and Priscilla man and wife. Somers berates Priscilla soundly, believing her, of course, to be his daughter. Priscilla removes her veil and Lem looks decidedly foolish. He takes off his cap and goggles and Priscilla learns the worst. Congratulations seem to be in order and Lem accepts them sheepishly, while Priscilla, deciding that Lem is better than no man at all, concludes to make the best of things.

THE BANK CASHIER (Sept. 4).—George Graham and James Fairbanks are two young men employed in the bank of Carson City, of which John Davis is the president. Davis has a pretty daughter, Helen, and both young men have surrendered their hearts to her, but she prefers only George, and plainly shows her preferences by deliberately snubbing James. His jealousy is aroused and he can scarcely conceal his feelings of enmity toward George, who only pities him. Mr. Davis is suddenly called away to look at a prospective purchase of land and leaves the bank in George's care. James also leaves the office before his regular quitting hour and goes to a gambling place near the bank and loses heavily, giving the winning gambler an I O U for a large sum. The gambler, knowing James is an employe of the bank, also that his salary is not large enough to ever make good the I O U, he induces him to rob the bank. This James finally agrees to do, so they wait the time, when they will be sure of no interruption. Helen, who has made a social call on George, playfully closes the vault door on him, while he is putting away the day's cash, and finding that she cannot open the door again, she rushes out to get her father, who is now miles away from town. Frantic with fear, she drives her pony at its topmost speed, soon reaches her father, and both ride to the rescue of the imprisoned cashier, who is slowly suffocating in the vault. In the meantime James and gambler have entered the bank, opened the vault, and are about to leave with the money when George recovers sufficiently to realize that a robbery is taking place, shoots at James, wounding his hand severely. The gambler quickly closes the vault door, leaving George to his fate. On the arrival of Helen and her father, they find the vault still locked and upon opening it find the cashier with still a spark of life left and begin the work of resuscitation. He regains his strength long enough to tell of the robbery and again swoons. Helen telephones for a doctor, who has been busy dressing the wounded hand of the thief—but quickly binding it, he starts for the bank to answer Helen's call. The two thieves fearing capture compel him at the point of a revolver to drive them to a railroad station. The banker jumps into his auto and pursues them, bringing them to bay. On his return to the bank he finds Helen, who has used her knowledge of "first aid to the injured" to good advantage, and George, both wishing they were one. The banker believing George is worthy of his only child, gives his consent.

THE SMUGGLER (Sept. 5).—Jean Dupont, a captain of the Coast Guards, is in love with Marie, the daughter of a smuggler. Jean thinks her father is a respectable fisherman. One day, while Marie and Jean are taking a stroll near the coast, he receives an order to the effect that the smugglers are quite active in his district and cautions him to double his guard and to be on the lookout. This order is seen by Marie. She at once thinks of her poor father and makes an excuse to get away from Jean. She runs home, gets her signal lantern, hurries to the spot where her father waits for the usual signal of safety. Marie meets her father, who is returning with the smuggled goods. She informs him that the guards are after him, and pleads with him to allow her to take his coat and hat that she might lead the guards a wild goose chase so that he can reach home in safety. Marie is mistaken for a smuggler by Jean, and his guards. Jean orders his guards to shoot. Instead of finding a smuggler at the bottom of the cliff, Jean finds the supposedly dead form of his sweetheart. She is removed to a hospital and, while on the road to recovery, grief overtakes her father, and he repents and surrenders himself to the guards.

ROMANCE OF THE COAST (Sept. 6).—Seeking local scenes for stories, Harry Myers leaves his home at Becket Castle to live among the fisher folks near Pond Cove. At the start of his stay, he falls in love with Ethel, daughter of Dick Drayton, a lobster fisherman whose cravings for drink causes him to mistreat his daughters, Ethel and Beatrice. In his love-making with Ethel, Myers incurs the enmity of Charles Cogan, who has forced unwelcomed attentions upon Ethel. When Ethel's father learns of Myer's infatuation for Ethel, he orders him away from the cabin. He also discourages a love affair between Beatrice and a fisherman. Due to their father's indolence, Ethel and Beatrice are forced to go out alone in their fishing punt and set the lobster pots. One day Ethel goes forth in the punt without Beatrice. She moors the boat to a rock, half a mile off shore, where pots have been set. While she is pulling in a pot, the boat becomes dislodged and drifts away. It is flood tide and Ethel is left alone on the rock, absolutely helpless. Slowly the incoming tide covers the rock.

Myers, from the window of his room in Pete Wright's cabin, catches sight of the figure on the rock. He runs to Ethel's home, and from Beatrice learns that Ethel had gone alone. Down to the beach rushes Myers. Here Cogan's punt is moored.

THE BIG THREE

Now Ready for You to Buy
STATE RIGHTS

Every One of These Features a Money Maker

THREE REELS SAPHO 2800 FEET

Absolutely the Largest and Grandest of any Production Ever Produced by any Motion Picture Company in the World. Over 100 People in the Production. Elaborate Scenery, Gorgeous Costumes, all Arranged Especially for this Great Play. 90 Scenes. Every One Beautiful

WRITE US AT ONCE FOR THE STATE YOU WANT. SELLING FAST

DEADWOOD DICK

3 Reels Hero of the Black Hills 3000 Feet

A Real Story of the Real West. A Picture Full of Thrills and Exciting Scenes, Taken in and Around the Beautiful Dakotas, with its Natural Scenery.

THE LAST STAND OF THE

DALTON BOYS

3 Reels AT COFFEYVILLE, KANSAS 3000 Feet

TAKEN ON THE EXACT LOCALITIES WHERE THIS FAMOUS GANG DID ALL THEIR OUTLAWISH DEEDS

GET IN TOUCH WITH US AT ONCE FOR THESE FEATURES

ATLAS MANUFACTURING CO., 411 Century Building, St. Louis, Mo.

OUR NEXT -- COMING SOON -- QUO VADIS

Myers starts to leap in the boat to go to Ethel's assistance, but Cogan refuses to let him. Myers knocks out Cogan, leaps into the boat, and rows to Ethel's assistance. He reaches her just as the waves have climbed to her chin. Ethel is dragged safely into the boat, while the assembled villagers, on shore, applaud his bravery. When Ethel has recovered, Myers asks for her hand in marriage, and discloses his identity. Ethel's father approves of the match.

A LITTLE FAMILY AFFAIR (Sept. 7).—Peter Johnson, a bookkeeper, lives a monotonous life with his aunt, Mrs. Skaggs. One day a bright-eyed orphan girl, Lottie Wilson, is sent to Mrs. Skaggs for her care. Johnson becomes fascinated with her. Under the influence of the happy little woman, Johnson, one night, is tempted into a card game with Lottie. He also smokes a cigar, two things absolutely prohibited by Mrs. Skaggs. She returns from church in time to find them. She is furious. Later Mrs. Skaggs brings things to a crisis by selecting Lottie a husband, Reggie Mitchell. Reggie is a dear fellow, and goes to church regularly, but Lottie is made miserable. On the night of the marriage, Peter and Lottie elope, leaving Mitchell and a church full of guests in a panic. Mrs. Skaggs, suspecting the truth, rushes up to Lottie's room. She rushes back to the church and informs the waiting guests what has happened. Meanwhile, Johnson and Lottie, now man and wife, are enjoying luncheon at a cafe. Mrs. Skaggs returns home and discovers the painting of a nude woman, a work of art of Johnson's. Mrs. Skaggs sinks into a chair and swoons. Johnson and Lottie return home, and creep into the sitting room. Lottie awakens Mrs. Skaggs by kissing her. The old lady jumps up in one of her furies, but when she is told that Johnson and Lottie are married, she gradually subsides and allows herself to drift into the first good humor since Lottie's arrival.

PATHE.

PATHE'S WEEKLY NO. 35—1912 (Aug. 26).—Danzig, Germany—The Kaiser and the Crown Prince and Princess review the entire Danzig garrison.

New York, N. Y.—Commodore Brown and Captain Rademacher, both of the U. S. Volunteer Life Saving Corps, fail to finish their race from the Battery to Coney Island for a wager of $500.

Chalons-sur-Saone, France — The submarine Espadon is launched in a novel manner on account of the shallow waters of the stream.

New York, N. Y.—The New York Central R. R. pier at West 33d Street is destroyed by fire.

Sydney, Australia—The annual soliciting of funds for the hospitals brings in a large sum for these institutions.

New York, N. Y.—Miss Theora Carter, pursuing her idea of "better teeth make better health," gives away a few thousand tooth brushes in the playgrounds of the city.

Moscow, Russia—The Grand Duke Michel Alexandrovitch, brother of the Czar, turns the monument erected to General Skobeleff over to the President of this city.

Washington, D. C.—President Taft witnesses the ball game between Washington and Chicago.

New York, N. Y.—A new double deck stepless car is being tried out by the New York Railways Company.

Paris, France—The newest fall models in millinery are being displayed.

LOCKED OUT OF WEDLOCK (Sept. 4).—Saying farewell to his bachelor friends keeps Dudley Brown out of bed until the cold, gray dawn of his wedding morning. He tells his landlady to wake him at ten and tries to get some sleep, but is disturbed by boys playing beneath his window. Dressing hurriedly (and scantily) he goes to the yard and sets the watch dog loose. This stops the noise of the boys, but not their mischief. Brown dozes off in the shade of the old apple tree. The boys return, lock the dog's collar about Brown's neck, and leave him there. Ten o'clock arrives and after a search the landlady finally discovers Brown. She tells him the time and he rushes to keep his appointment. But, pshaw, he is chained to the dog house. To get away he takes a piece of the kennel with him. He starts on a wild run to meet his bride, but a policeman suspects he has broken his chain and escaped from some asylum. His explanations sound preposterous and, after a struggle, he is locked up for safe keeping. However, the key is secured, the bride acquainted with her lover's mishap, and she marries him in spite of it.

THE PENALTY PAID (Sept. 5).—Black Hawk and Red Fox, members of two neighboring tribes, dispute the ownership of a carcass and in the struggle which follows Red Fox is killed. Black Hawk informs the chief, his father-in-law, of the act and is condemned to wander the plains with the body of Red Fox tied to his back. Black Hawk is discovered, exhausted, by two Braves, members of a warring band, who relieve him of his burden. Their chief accepts him as one of his warriors. An expedition against Black Hawk's former tribe results in the capture of the chief's daughter, Black Hawk's squaw. The outcast proves his love for her by helping her to escape and return to her own people, and for this her father welcomes Black Hawk back to his old stamping ground.

GEE! MY PANTS (Sept. 7).—The call of duty and his love for his new hat place Dr. Gibbs in an embarrassing predicament. While he is hurrying to attend a patient his hat blows into a pond. Seeing no one near, the physician divests himself of his trousers and wades into the stream. A tramp makes off with the clothing and leaves Gibbs looking very much like an acrobat. The doctor manages to secure the blanket from his carriage, however, and thus continues his journey. Reaching the patient's house, a watchdog flirts with the loose end of the improvised trousers. The doctor's screams acquaint the family with the situation and they provide him with a pair of real trousers, four sizes too large. The medicine man is almost happy on the return trip. He meets his sweetheart whose automobile is stalled in a sea of mud, and offers to transfer her to his carriage if she will promise to marry him. She accepts the offer, but her weight in his arms, the mud, and the clumsy attire are too much for his equilibrium, and he slips. To say what happens after this would be spoiling a good story.

C. G. P. C.

BEATRIX D'ESTE (Sept. 3).—Beatrix D'Este, a beautiful Italian widow, is loved by Orlando, an Italian nobleman, and also by the powerful Duke of Milan. She refuses the duke, who plots to prove to her that her lover is false. The plot succeeds and she gives her consent to the duke. Orlando, hearing of this, seeks to die, and the young widow is informed that he has killed himself for love of her. She rushes to him, in her bridal robes, and learns from his own lips that she is the victim of treachery.

WIFFLES AND THE MAGIC WAND (Sept. 6).—Wiffles, the noted comedian, is married to a shrew, who proves more than his match in their many conflicts. A discolored eye is the last straw and Wiffles decides to tame his wife's aggressiveness. He buys the magic wand of Professor Jinks and marches bravely home. He arrives late for dinner and his wife aims a blow at him. He touches her with the magic wand, but, alas, with the wrong end, producing two wives instead of making one disappear. The wives combine forces, take the magic wand away and pound the unfortunate Wiffles until he apologizes.

THE BUD, THE LEAF AND THE FLOWER (Sept. 6).—One of the wonders of nature, the growth of a flower, reproduced in color.

MELIES.

THE UNWORTHY SON (Sept. 12).—Jim, an unworthy son, after leaving his family in destitute circumstances, goes West, and there makes the acquaintance of Bill Haskin, a horse thief, who takes Jim as his partner. Falling in love with Haskin's daughter, Nell, he threatens to expose her father if she refuses to marry him. Jim's father, enraged, orders Steve, another son, to locate Jim with a letter explaining that he has been disinherited. Having no address to be guided by, Steve wanders through the wilderness. Meeting a young woman sobbing he learns her sad story and discovers his brother's whereabouts. With the promise of protection, Nell goes with him and, upon their arrival, he hands Jim the letter, which the latter casts aside. Picking it up Nell learns that Jim is married. After a desperate battle between the two brothers, Jim is overpowered. A fatal quarrel between the two partners, leaves Nell without a father. In appreciation of Steve's kindness in saving her from destruction, she accepts his proposal of marriage and they both receive the blessings of the community.

KALEM.

THE HOODOO HAT (Sept. 2).—Jack calls to take Della to the picnic and receives a shock when he sees the monstrosity of a hat which she is wearing. In vain he pleads with her to wear something else. On the way to the grounds Della's hat frightens passing horses and when the couple joins the picnickers the head-dress is a source of merriment to all except the wearer. Della resolves to part with the hat and throws it into a stream. A fisherman brings it back to her. She buries it in the ground, but a party of excavators discover the hat and return it to the unfortunate owner. Finally Jack effectually destroys the hat and the lovers return home. Tired and disgusted with her day's trials, Della falls asleep and in her dreams the hoodoo headgear still follows her.

FROM JERUSALEM TO THE DEAD SEA (Sept. 2).—This interesting travel picture permits the spectator to visit many famous spots in the Holy Land. From the Tomb of Rachael the tourist proceeds to the Convent of St. George. This is the scene of the prophet Elijah's visitation by the ravens, as described in the bible. Passing through old Jericho we reach the Mount of Temptation where, the bible relates, Christ was tempted by the Evil Spirit. The River Jordan, the place of baptism, is the next point of interest. At our journey's end we come to the Dead Sea—1,300 feet below the sea level.

DOWN THROUGH THE AGES (Sept. 4).—In a party of tourists visiting the ancient temples of Egypt, we find Miriam with her father and a persistent suitor—a French count. In the party is also an old sweetheart of Miriam's, Jack Lawrence, whose proposal of marriage has been half rejected.

The tourists plan an excursion to the ruined city of Thebes, and Jack determines to make a last effort to win Miriam's heart. Becoming separated from her people Miriam sits down in the royal tomb and falls asleep. In her dream her soul returns to past ages and she finds herself as Kama, the beggar maid, within the temples of Karnak. Mefres, the priest, at the sight of the pretty beggar maid forgets his vows in his love for Kama. Herhor informs the high priest of Mefres' conduct. The high priest promptly banishes the unfortunate Mefres, who goes to inform Kama of his punishment, which means death to their love. Unable to bear the loss of love, the priest plans to take the golden treasure from Pharaho's tomb and with it fly from the country with Kama. Through the Valley of Death to the tomb of Pharaho the lovers proceed. They break into the treasure vault and are about to make their escape when the high priest and others from the temple discover Mefres' crime and both are promptly sentenced to death.

The tourists return to the tomb where Miriam has fallen asleep and awaken the girl. Looking up, she sees Jack's pleasant face and recognizes the Mefres of her dreams.

THE LONELINESS OF THE HILLS (Sept. 6).—Joe, trapping alone in the hills, meets Moonlight, the Ogallala maid, and in his loneliness he stops and chats with the girl, giving her a silk handkerchief. She tells him that she lives with her tribe nearby. Later on Joe follows to the Indian camp and is told he cannot have the girl unless he joins the tribe—a situation which does not appeal to him. A few days later an envoy from the Creeks demands that the Ogallalas leave the fertile valley where they are hunting and fishing, but the Creek messenger is sent back to his tribe with scorn. Moonlight tells Joe of the impending attack on her tribe. When the Creeks arrive in force, the Ogallalas put up a fierce fight and succeed in driving the enemy back. The Creeks entrench themselves behind natural defences and in a brave but foolhardy attack the Ogallalas are repulsed and their chief killed. Joe, while not in sympathy with the Indians, feels sorry for the friendly Ogallalas and shows them how to defeat the Creeks. After the successful Indian war, Joe is urged to join the Ogallalas and become their chief, but replies—"I'll take the squaw, but I'll be hanged if you can make an Injun out of me." Joe marries the Indian maid. Later we find them living in a log cabin in the hills and Joe has forgotten his loneliness.

THE DARLING OF THE C. S. A. (Sept. 7).—Agnes Lane is a daring spy and a great favorite with the soldiers of the C. S. A.

Riding into the Federal camp, she tells the commanding officer that she can aid in capturing the troublesome spy—Agnes Lane. The Federal officers are inclined to accept her proposal but through an accident the identity of Agnes becomes known and she is placed under guard. The Confederate army, learning of the peril of the fair prisoner, decide to take the fort and liberate her. Agnes succeeds in escaping and at the risk of her life induces the despairing Confederate soldiers to attack again.

Through a series of thrilling adventures, she delivers to the Confederate general, Beauregard, a supply of powder, enabling him to make a final and successful attack.

BIOGRAPH.

IN THE NORTH WOODS (Sept. 2).—A trapper, confident of the safety of his wife and child in the boundless woods while he is away on his trip to the trading post, a day's journey, leaves for that place to dispose of the pelts he has secured. He has just departed when an adventurous Frenchman and his guide saunter through the woods in search of game. From a distance the adventurer sees the trapper's wife place her bag of savings in its hiding-place. At once his cupidity is aroused for his own purse is sadly depleted, and he is determined to get the bag of money, which purpose seems easy to accomplish. He finds, however, that the woman is made of stouter stuff than the ordinary female of the species and he not only fails but suffers for his attempted villainy.

GETTING RID OF TROUBLE (Sept. 5).—The Newlyweds move into their new flat and prepare to entertain their uncle. A cook must be engaged and they go to the employment office to get one. It would spoil the fun to describe her—suffice to say trouble begins. They try to "fire" her, but she refuses. More trouble comes in the person of a persistent bill collector. Uncle devises a great scheme. He asks the cook, who is eager for a fight, to chase the collector from the doorstep and while they are struggling outside he telephones to the police station. It proved a master stroke.

HE MUST HAVE A WIFE (Sept. 5).—Harry expected to come in for a portion of his uncle's estate, but didn't figure that he would get his share before his worthy relative's demise. The uncle, however, being an eccentric individual, decides to divide his estate while he is alive so as to avoid misunderstandings. Harry's share is $25,000, but the condition is that he is happily married, otherwise he doesn't get a penny. He has only a couple of hours in which to comply with the condition. Well, he gets his share, but, oh, what a struggle!

CALIFORNIA RODEO

THE GREATEST OF AMERICAN ROUNDUPS

A truthful picture of California frontier life in death defying sensational Broncho-busting, bulldogging, wild-horse racing, bull riding, roping and taming of wild horses and steers.

The largest number of competing cowboys and cowgirls ever assembled.

Contestants and champion riders from all Western States.

Absolutely NO posing.

SEE THE ACCIDENTS.

Close, clear and sharp views covering every interesting point.

Every foot of film full of life and excitement.

A film sure to play return dates.

Sensational Posters.

3000 feet of exciting, thrilling and inspiring Western life as seen in early days on California's largest cattle ranges of Monterey County.

Exclusive State Rights for State Right Men.

For Sale by

DUHEM & HARTER MOTION PICURE CO.

652 Oak St. San Francisco, Cal.

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

COMET.

THE DENTIST'S DILEMMA (Sept. 2).—Martin Stafford, a Wall Street broker, has a daughter, Majorie. She has many admirers, including Dr. Gas, a typical New York dentist of the quack stamp, and Jack Phillips, a young broker's clerk. The doctor, it appears, is very much in the good graces of Mr. Stafford, who favors him as his future son-in-law. The girl, however, has given her heart to Jack and shows her displeasure for the doctor in many ways. When Jack is seized with a violent toothache he at once hies himself to the office of the quack. After making a hasty examination of the young man's teeth he tells him that he will have to use gas to extract the bad molar. Phillips is then placed in the chair while the doctor summons his assistants, whom he instructs to adjust the gas administering apparatus. While the assistant is doing this the dentist is called out of the room to attend to another patient. Stafford comes to the office. He, too, is in great pain from a bad tooth. Seeing Jack in the chair he begs Phillips to allow the dentist to attend to him first. Phillips vacates the chair, which Stafford immediately occupies, and placing the gas cap over the broker's face, retires. Believing that his patient is Jack, he realizes that by extracting six of his front teeth he will ruin Phillips' chances with the girl. Gas proceeds with the operation. As the last tooth is released the doctor holds it aloft in triumph. Stafford then awakes, and when he discovers what the doctor has done he is naturally beside himself with rage. He rushes out of the room with the doctor after him. Of course, the doctor tries to explain, but to no avail. Stafford has no further use for the dentist, and immediately insists that Jack marry his daughter, a mandate which the young man is only too willing to obey.

GAUMONT.

THE REFUGEE'S CASKET (Sept 3).—The Marquis de St. Hilaire, in danger of his life from the revolutionists, decided to leave his country and seek a refuge across the border, but before departing intrusts to his maid a casket containing the family treasures. A few hours after the revolutionists arrive to search the house, but cannot find any trace of the marquis or his treasures. Failure resulting in this direction, they next turn their steps to the maid's house. The officers instruct their men to search the upper rooms while they attend to the lower regions, and by a strange coincidence they notice an interstice in the hearth, which when examined reveals an underground chamber in which is concealed the casket. Intending to return at the first opportunity and divide the spoil, they say nothing to their men regarding the discovery. In their hurry, however, they omit to remove all traces of their find, and Marie Jeanne immediately upon entering the room knows that her secret is shared by the intruders. Determined to save her master's property, she takes the casket to a more secure hiding place. Upon returning she is arrested by the officers, who bind her with cords and threaten to shoot her if she does not reveal the secret. She remains firm and eventually makes her escape after severing her bonds and killing one of the officers. The revolution having subsided, the marquis and his family return to their own country, but when visiting Marie Jeanne's house notice that the Government seals are affixed and her whereabouts shrouded in mystery. They are surprised to see Marie Jeanne return, and after affectionate greetings she restores to them the treasures for which she suffered.

A MIDNIGHT ENCOUNTER (Sept. 5).—Mr. and Mrs. Darwin lead the life of many a man and woman where the former is continually out on the road. Mr. Darwin is a traveling salesman, and he has for some time noticed that his wife, Suzanne, is chafed at his continually enforced business trips. Therefore, on this particular trip, he decides to make it more pleasant for Suzanne by leaving her in care of friends, the Nearys. Darwin is gone for a number of weeks, but counts on getting home for one of the holidays. A telegram from his firm, however, orders him further out on the road and he wires his wife advising her that he cannot come home for quite some time. Suzanne has by this time suffered thorough disappointment through the prolonged absence of her husband, and we will therefore have to forgive her if she engages in some harmless flirting with Mr. Neary. The latter, however, is not only persistent, but also malicious in his intentions and encourages the ogling weakness in Suzanne to the extent of danger. Mrs. Darwin, however, holds herself in check, before any embarrassing situations arise, and informs Mrs. Neary of the character of her husband. Mrs. Neary decides to co-operate with Suzanne in teaching her husband a decided lesson. With the assistance of Mrs. Neary, Suzanne directs a letter to her admirer, advising him to come to her house at midnight, and not to enter until the signal be given—the lowering of the lamp.

On this night we see Suzanne in her home, preparing to give the signal. The lamp lowers. The adventurer winds his way through the garden to the open window and thence up to the appointed room. In the meantime Suzanne has arranged with Mrs. Neary that she don her clothes so as to resemble Suzanne exactly. In the darkness Mr. Neary could not tell the difference, and it was well that it was so arranged, for just at this point Mr. Darwin returns unexpectedly from the road and sees the figures of the two silhouetted against the moonlit window. Mrs. Neary, in her consternation runs from the room, while her husband remains there, supposedly to face the consequences. Just at this moment, the situation is solved by the appearance of Suzanne at another angle of the house, who shrewdly explains that she has invited the Nearys to spend a few days with her because of her enforced lonesomeness. The dazed and perplexed Neary is only too willing to fall in line with this suggestion, and does not realize what a ridiculous caper he had cut until sometime later, when his wife reveals the true story to him.

THE LAUNCHING OF THE IMPERATOR (Sept. 5).—On this reel is attached a tailpiece of more than ordinary interest. It is the record of five cameras on the launching of the Imperator, the latest German transatlantic leviathan, in the service of the Hamburg-American line.

RELIANCE.

THE BULLY AND THE SHRIMP (Sept. 7).—A young Westerner, known as the shrimp, is in love with a pretty Western girl. They are engaged to be married. A big burly Eastern bully arrives in town and becomes enamored of the girl. He deliberately acts the bully and shows up the shrimp as a coward because of his weakness, and sets about to win the girl. She, believing his courage to be of the right sort, throws over the shrimp and marries the bully. After they have been married some time, the bully is injured and unable to get around. While the bully is laid up, the doctor finds that worry and care the wife has gone through has incapacitated her to such an extent that she is unable to give her baby proper nourishment. The only way to save the baby's life is to furnish it with a proper amount of baby food. The doctor discovers that there is none in town. He goes to the saloon where the men are congregated and tells them that someone will have to cross the desert to a certain town where the food needed can be obtained. The men, knowing that few have ever returned after crossing the desert, back down. The man who shows supreme courage turns out to be the shrimp. He volunteers and we see him on the desert enduring every hardship. He enters the Western town on the opposite side and secures a number of packages of the food. On the way back he loses his way; his horse dies, but he staggers on through the desert, still holding on to the precious food. One by one the packages slip away from his fingers until when he arrives in his home town he staggers up the main street and surrenders just two packages to the men in the saloon. The shrimp dies from exhaustion, the child lives, and the bully is regenerated.

AMERICAN.

THE BAD MAN AND THE RANGER (Aug. 14).—Jim Hickey, bad man, insulted pretty Rosalyn Perkins by helping himself to several kisses. Rosalyn told her father, a rigid Southern gentleman who still believed in the duello, and who promptly arranged a duel between Bob Blackburn, her lover, and Jim Hickey. This novel proposition amused Jim. On the battle-ground, Perkins slipped a blank into Jim's gun and a bullet into Bob's. Of course, Bob didn't fire, but Jim did. A week later, Bob, appointed deputy sheriff, went in search of Jim and his pals. But Jim caught Bob—then, recognizing Bob as the charitable lover who did not kill him when he had the chance, turned him free.

THE LAND OF DEATH (Aug. 19).—John Morgan, his wife, son and two daughters made their way slowly, by wagon train, toward the Golden West. Ten miles in advance of them, Will Briscom fought a band of marauding, lawless cowpunchers. The wagon train caught up with Will and they gave him water and food. He joined them. A few miles further on the marauders met the wagon train. A terrible battle followed. On they fought for hours until the sands of the prairie were stained with the blood of father, mother, brother and sister. Only Briscom and pretty Anna remained on the one side, while all but the leader died on the other. Ammunition gone, they closed, Briscom and that leader, and the latter pinned Briscom to the ground ready to slay him. Then Anna, with a knife, taken from her dead father's body, pressed it between the murderer's shoulder blades. Then Briscom and Anna faced a future in that Land of Death.

THE WOOING OF WATHENA (Aug. 21).—John Menton, with his wife and baby daughter, settled in the Great West. Red-Leaf, an old Indian squaw, lost her beloved child about that time and kidnapped the pretty baby daughter. Years passed. The baby grew tall and beautiful and was called Wathena.

One day John Menton came again to the big West, this time to superintend the construction of a railway. His surveyor, Will Beverley, stopped work that day to make a snap-shot of a pretty Indian miss. He developed it and fell in love with the image. He showed it to Menton, who, suspicious, immediately went in search of her, identifying her as his daughter. And there was happiness untold in the construction camp that night.

THE BANDIT OF POINT LOMA (Aug. 22).—The old lighthouse-keeper and his daughter heard rumors of a bandit in the neighborhood. But they had never seen him and when he came, representing himself to be a government sleuth, they readily took him in. And, worse than that, Jennie began to fall in love with him, despite the unhappiness of her lover, Freddie Whitcomb. Then a sheriff came. A running revolver battle followed, ending in the extermination of the bandit. The sheriff then turned his attention to the love affair that had been nearly wrecked. How he straightened out the tangle makes 1,000 feet of delightful pictures.

THE JEALOUS RAGE (Aug. 26).—Marjie Cooler was the belle of the mining camp. Often she made her way among the men, saying a pleasant word here and there and leaving behind her a trail of loudly thumping hearts. A stranger came, one day, and the belle had at last found a conqueror. Bess Harding, jealous and deceitful, loved the foreman of the camp who was one of the many admirers of the village belle. The foreman did not like the stranger and Bess, seeing her chance to retaliate for old scores against her rival, incited him to kill the stranger. This he tried to do, disastrously for himself, and with equally dire results for Bess. How? You should see for yourself.

LONESOME TRAIL PIONEERS (Aug. 28).—Through the machinations of an unscrupulous Mexican, pretty Marguerite Cardwell is taken by Indians. The Mexican is tracked and overtaken at the Indian camp just before he could wreck his vengeance upon the helpless girl.

THE WILL OF JAMES WALDRON (Aug. 29).—When James Waldron died he divided his will to include his crippled son, William, and his pretty daughter, Mabel, and a son of an old friend. Watkins, his old friend's son, made life miserable for the brother and sister. He frequently kicked and maltreated the cripple and repeatedly insulted the girl. She petitioned one of the cowboys to help her. He interceded and Watkins knocked him down for his pains.

Then one day came Ralph Conwell, handsome, strong and with something of a reputation for being able to take care of himself. He and Mabel fell in love at once. The brother confided their trouble to him and he interceded with such good results that Watkins carried a black eye for some time. Watkins, revengeful, determined to kill Ralph. He saw them standing together, slowly pulled his gun and took aim. At the other end of the yard stood the cowboy before mentioned, calmly rolling a cigarette. He dropped his tobacco and paper, slowly pulled his gun and took aim. Another instant and Watkins lay dead upon the ground.

SOLAX.

THE FIGHT IN THE DARK (Sept. 4).—Bert Green is an agent for the Government on Mexican territory, buying Mexican bred horses. He meets the daughter of Jose, a horse dealer, and falls in love with her. Although Juanita has encouraged the attentions of Pedro, she casts the latter off most cruelly when Bert comes into her life.

Pedro is vindictive. With the assistance of a servant he manages to surprise Bert and Juanita at a clandestine meeting. While Bert temporarily leaves the scene the spying Mexicans come on, throw a blanket over the surprised girl and carry her off. Bert soon returns, sees signs of a struggle and follows the trail made by the abductors.

After a long hunt he finds Pedro's shack in the mountains. He acts quickly, but a false step gives the advantage to Pedro. The girl thinks rapidly. She comes to her lover's aid by breaking the lamp. Then there is a struggle in the dark. Two shots are fired. Soon Bert draws a deep breath, sits on the edge of a table, rolls a cigarette and lights it, while in the shadow is the dead body of Pedro. Bert and Juanita leave the shack and see a stagecoach approaching. Bert decides to cross the Mexican border before he is captured by a Mexican posse and so holds up the stage, tells Juanita to get in and drives off like fury.

Soon after he is pursued by the Mexicans but he eludes them by throwing the stagecoach over a cliff and finds temporary safety in the canebrakes until he is rescued by Texas rangers sent to his aid by a little girl.

OPEN TO PROPOSALS (Sept. 6).—Billy is a cowboy. He gets rather tired of punching cows and doing odd jobs on a ranch, so when he sees an article in the papers to the effect that eastern women consider western men more desirable than eastern men as husbands, Billy decides to go east and find a spouse.

When Billy arrives in New York he loses no time in getting a wife—but the unfortunate part of it is Billy interprets the article he has read literally. So every woman he sees, he imagines has read the article about western men making the "best husbands." In his free western fashion

"WARNER'S FEATURES LEAD TO SUCCESS"

HOME OFFICE:
145 West 45th Street WRITE TO NEAREST OFFICE New York City

To Exhibitors in

CONNECTICUT

Remember the money that was made in Conn. with Dante's Inferno.

HOMER'S ODYSSEY

The new Milano three reel Production will be

OPEN FOR DATES AFTER SEPT. 2nd.

Address Immediately

WORLD'S MOVING PICTURE CLASSICS.

Box 485, Madison Sq. Station, N. Y. City.

EASTMAN motion picture film—the acknowledged standard the world over.

Manufactured by
EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

ONE, THREE and SIX SHEETS

READY NOW, FOR THE LATEST BIOGRAPH TWO REEL SUBJECT RELEASED AUGUST 29th

A PUEBLO LEGEND

Order all three sizes at once from your Exchange, or direct from us. If you use Biograph Films regularly, why not increase your attendance by using our THREE SHEETS in addition to the ONE SHEETS. SEND FOR A LIST OF OUR FULL LINE OF LARGE SIZE POSTERS, it will pay.

A. B. C. COMPANY -:- CLEVELAND, OHIO

he proposes to all whom he meets and naturally he receives many set-backs much to his surprise and discomfort.

Luckless Bill at last meets with an "old maid" who is willing to have him "for better or for worse," but Billy knows in advance that it would be "for worse," so he tries to escape the woman's clutches. He has an awful time of it for she is persistent and vows "she will get him yet."

IMP.

CHAPPIE, THE CHAPERONE (Aug. 24).—Carroll Fleming refuses to allow Chappie to court his daughter and thereby incurs the young man's enmity. Chappie places an advertisement in the paper, stating that Fleming's daughter is desirous of marrying a handsome young man, and that she will bring a handsome fortune as a dowry. All kinds of suitors put in an appearance. The father places an advertisement and is engaged. Father discovers him without his wig, and attempts to kick him out of the house, but instead Chappie locks him up in a cupboard and the police who have been summoned, take the old man in charge while the young couple are being married. When he finds he has been outwitted, he gives the happy pair the usual blessing.

MAKING GOOD (Aug. 26).—Young Billy Burns is in love with Irene Brander, to whose father he is private secretary. Irene returns his affection, but is very much afraid that her father will force her to marry Bert Austin, a young society and club man of his choice.

Billy, seeing that this is imminent, goes boldly to Irene's house and asks her father for her hand. The father rates Billy severely for his impertinence in daring to put such a request, and forbidding him to ever speak to Irene again, sends him from the house. The next day when Billy arrives at his employer's office, he finds himself discharged.

Discouraged, Billy goes to a nearby resort and obtains a position as life-guard on the beach, where soon after his engagement, Bert Austin brings Irene and her father for a day's outing. Bert and Irene go for a swim, when Irene is seized with cramps and appeals to Bert for help. He deserts her in a cowardly fashion. Billy, on the lookout house, sees her plight and, jumping into the water, brings her safely to shore just in time. The father, who has also seen the accident, meets them on the beach. Explanations are forthcoming, Bert is discredited and Billy receives his reward—reinstatement, and permission to marry the girl of his choice.

A HAPPY FAMILY (Aug. 29).—Mr. White and Mrs. Black were originally married to each other and divorced. Mr. Black and Mrs. White were also formerly man and wife and divorced each other. The two ladies assumed their malden names, and each meeting the other one's husband, fall in love and marry. Mrs. Black thus becoming Mrs. White, and Mrs. White becoming Mrs. Black. Neither of the men or ladies tell their newly married partners that they have gone through the divorce court, the two men believing they have married spinsters and the two ladies thinking they have married bachelors. None of them have heard of the re-marriage of their former husband or wife, and each one is fearful of meeting the other. The Whites have rented a house which is too large for their needs, so they advertise for a congenial couple to share it with them. The Blacks answer the advertisement and each former man and wife confront each other separately and as neither one is in a position to give the other one away, they swear each other to secrecy and for mutual protection they agree to occupy the same house—though each individual is in constant dread lest his wife or her husband should discover their former relations to one another. The mother-in-law of both men makes an unexpected visit on her daughter, thereby precipitating the disclosure that they all have dreaded. Explanations are refused by all—Mr. and Mrs. Black (the 2nd) with the mother-in-law, beat a hasty retreat sadder but wiser, while Mr. and Mrs. White (the 2nd) decide that no one will ever share their home again.

POWERS

AN EXCITING OUTING (Aug. 28).—Billy the Bug, escapes from the insane asylum. Mr. Bates arrives in the same village for a day of rest. The Ladies' Club take an outing. Miss Prim happens in the vicinity. Mr. Bates goes for a swim with the children, who steal his clothes. Mr. Bates is chased by Billy, the Bug. Escaping, he is mistaken by the farmer folks as Billy. After a hard chase and many complications, the situation is cleared up to the satisfaction of all.

U. S. ARMY MANOEUVRES (Aug. 28).—Showing tactics, etc., used by our army in the time of battle. Hospital corps at work, etc.

LIFE'S LESSON (Aug. 30).—A busy man cannot spare the time to escort his wife to a social function, and appoints a friend to fulfill his social obligations. The wife and the friend become very fond of one another. On their return from the affair the wife sinks exhausted and is about to fall. The friend catches her in his arms. The husband enters, calls the friend into another room and gives him five minutes to kill himself. The husband, waiting outside the door, does not hear the shot and goes in. He finds the friend dead of heart-failure. A reconciliation is soon effected with his wife.

ECLAIR.

DOLLS (Aug. 27).—Nellie Simpson's father dies, leaving her with but a few dollars, and no way of earning more. Dr. Day and his wife take Nellie into their home until something can be done for her. She seems so melancholy, that Dr. Day says she must be roused. To this end he takes her with him on his rounds of visits. At length they come to the home of a very poor woman, whose only child, a girl, is a cripple, not even able to sit up. While talking with little Betty, Nellie draws to her a rag, which is lying on the bed, and from it fashions a rude doll. When Betty sees it she is so enraptured, and lavishes such a world of love for it, that Dr. Day tells her he will buy her a real one if Nellie will dress it. She promises and they go and buy a large doll, which she dresses. As they are taking the doll to Betty a rich man sends for them to see his motherless daughter, a child of five. The child cries for the doll and her father hires Nellie to dress all of Lily's numerous dolls. He at length falls in love with her, and she promises to be his wife.

THE PASSING PARADE (Aug. 29).—The day is Decoration Day, the veterans are marching and the band is playing "The Star Spangled Banner." A crowd of girls hear the music and drop their work to see the passing parade. The parade passes on before a home where two lovers are buried in thoughts of love, the strain reaches their ears and for the nonce they forget their love to view the passing parade and pay their hearts' reverence to the passing heroes.

It passes the home of a family in the throes of their own enjoyment, the faw away music grows louder, they recognize the air and they, as the rest, step out to see the parade.

A school teacher tells her children of the truthfulness of George Washington as a boy and most beautifully does there appear a picture of Washington as a little fellow who chopped down his father's cherry tree and then told the truth when asked who did it.

And last is seen two fine noble old soldiers at a garden table refreshing themselves with a mint julip. One was of the North in "65," the other was true to his South, but today they clasp hands both true to their own grand old Red, White and Blue.

TWO BRAVE LITTLE HEARTS (Sept. 1).—After weeks of hardship and poverty, Peter Martin finally secures a place of employment at a jewelry store. One day while the proprietor of the store is out, and leaving Peter in charge of his office wherein is kept the more valuable jewels, Peter falls asleep. Now enters a thief named Dixon, and, noticing Peter asleep, he robs the safe of its valuable contents and leaves.

The thief passes out and meets two little boys carrying a basket of lunch. He happens to drop a racing program which the boys pick up and keep. The two youngsters are the sons of Peter, bringing his lunch. They arrive at the jewelers and discover their father still asleep. They wake him and the jeweler returns to discover the theft and dismisses Peter. Instinctively the youngsters, Ben and Artie, believe that the racing program is a clue to the thief, so they go to the race track selling flowers. They meet the man who passed them on the steps the day of the robbery, and they follow him to his home. Ben arms himself with a tile to prevent the thief escaping. Artie hurries away and soon returns with the police. Dixon is captured, the jewels found and returned and happiness comes again to the Martin family.

THE ACTRESS PULLS THE STRINGS (Sept. 3).—May Allen, an actress, arrives at a summer hotel. When the guests learn that she is an actress, they shun her as they have a dislike for actresses. Their coolness is soon apprehended by May, so one day she leaves, only to return disguised as an old maid missionary. She is joyfully received. May later plays a trick on them and once more she appears as the actress. The guests are depressed, especially the feminine portion.

A lawn dance is soon given, but May is ostracized. An idea strikes her as the different male guests sneak out to her. Taking a ball of cord she gives each one of the men a piece of string, telling him to go and hide and that she will find him later, following the string, of course, to locate him. Then she goes into the ball-room, where she is confronted by the women, who discover that the men have disappeared. They tell the old maid missionary that they suspect the actress and their suspicions seem justified when they find that she is not in the seat she occupied the rest of the evening. May starts pulling on the strings given to the different men and which were tied to a chair. One by one the delinquents appear and when all are back again, May uncovers her disguise to the astonishment of all.

THE GUEST AT THE PARSONAGE (Sept. 5).—Kenneth Disbrow, a wealthy bachelor, pays a visit to his old college chum, Rev. Boyd Birley. In a friendly argument, Kenneth makes fun of Boyd's fashionable congregation, and offers to give an automobile to the member of the Ladies' Aid Society, who can show a real charitable act done during the month. Kenneth decides. The minister makes the announcement, and the spinsters and widows of the church determine to win both Kenneth and the motor car. But Kenneth has been introduced to Rhoda Odgen, a country maid, with love at first sight on both sides.

Kenneth disguises himself as a tramp, and calls on Sarah Jane Smith, and others of the Ladies' Aid Society, asking for charity. He does not get it. Sarah Jane, however, recognizes Kenneth as he walks away, and runs after him to bring him back. Instead she finds Bill Hykes, a real tramp, dressed like Kenneth. Bill gets a feed, but is "fired" when Sarah Jane discovers her mistake.

Kenneth finds no charity in Dedham but he finds love. At the end of the month, the Ladies' Aid meets to see who wins the auto. The minister carries the joke along, and leads Sarah Jane and the rest to a sheltered nook where Kenneth and Rhoda are deciding to become engaged. Sarah Jane reads the answer, and exit in disgust with her "fellow hypocrites."

THE KIND OLD MAN (Sept. 8).—Mr. Gordon is a kind old gentleman who loves to see and be with those of youth, those who look at life with

EDWARDS'

NEGATIVE and POSITIVE RAW FILM

(Extra Fast) (Extra Brilliant)

Sole Agents Write for Terms

THE PHOTO CINES CO., 24-26 East 13th Street, New York

CARBON News Photos

We issue twice a week, four on Wednesday and four on Saturday, CARBON PHOTOS depicting the WORLD'S LATEST HAPPENINGS in the most graphic form. These prints are each 11x14 inches and are easily the most successful drawing cards ever devised for exhibitors. Hundreds of the most profitable motion picture theaters are now regular customers of these photos, which are sold at a price decidedly lower than that charged by other producers for half the service.

These photos are devised primarily to advertise the Gaumont Weekly, but can be used by any house exhibiting topical film.

Write for samples and prices.

Gaumont Company
Congress Avenue
Flushing : N. Y.

A Few More States Open

We own exclusive rights for the United States and Canada for

"The Penalty"

In two reels each, $250.00 per set

"The Circus Girl"

No bonus for exclusive territory

Write, wire or telephone for further particulars

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY COMPANY
145 West 45th Street, New York, N. Y.
Telephone Bryant 6332

Crown Features Draw Crowds!

ANOTHER MILANO MASTERPIECE FOR STATE RIGHTS

Saint George and the Dragon

3 REELS—Copyrighted 1912.

A Thrilling Romantic Drama of Love, Chivalry and Adventure that is Drawing Full Houses Wherever Presented.

$450-$500-$550

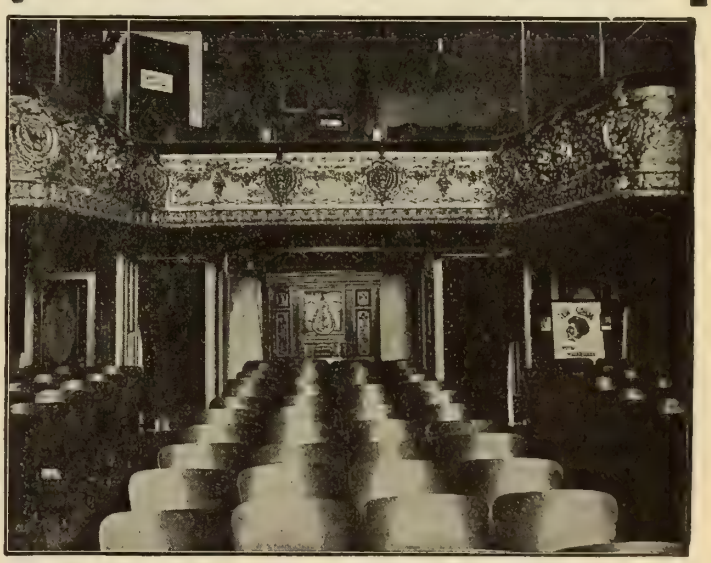
BUYS FILM AND EXCLUSIVE RIGHTS TO BEST STATES

INVESTIGATE! WIRE NOW FOR CHOICE

Our Lithographed Show Paper, Photos, Cuts, Slides, Booklets, Heralds, Dodgers, Insure Success For This Feature

Crown Feature Film Company
145 West 45th Street
NEW YORK

WURLITZER
World's Largest Mfrs Established 1856



Write for 32-page booklet, showing
Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments
in the leading picture theatres of the country.

The Wurlitzer Instruments furnish better music than musicians and reduce expenses. 50 different styles; time payments; big catalog free. If you can't call, write to our nearest branch.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company

CINCINNATI 117-121 E. 4th — NEW YORK 25-27 W. 32d — CHICAGO 329-331 S. Wabash — PHILADELPHIA 1835 Chestnut
ST. LOUIS 412 Pine St. — CLEVELAND 800 Huron Road — BUFFALO 701 Main — LOUISVILLE 426 W. Greene — COLUMBUS, O. 57 E. Main

a happy smile and whose hearts sing out their gladness in pleasant song. Such was the disposition of his two young neighbors who have just moved away. Mr. Gordon sadly misses the sunshine of their companionship; he is sad and alone now. But wait, a van is delivering furniture to the vacant house. He sees a charming young woman superintending its arrival. Her grace and manner appeal to him, and he in his kind way bids her welcome as a neighbor and learns her name and vocation: Clara Warner, schoolteacher.

To the other side of the kind old man dwells a young man whose name is Oliver Hurd. This young gentleman old Gordon likes and admires immensely because of his splendid habits, his intelligence and his genuine manliness. It occurs to the old gentleman that his young lady neighbor and his young man neighbor would make a perfect match and he sets to work to bring about this end between them.

He is beset by many retardments, owing to Oliver's distressing bashfulness. It seems impossible to ever accomplish his self-appointed mission. His disappointment is great but from it is born his scheme that works. He pretends sickness and sends for both to attend him and keep him company. Gradually love and Cupid capture and command the bashful boy to propose, and so it is that our kind old man discovers them each in the other's arms.

BISON.

FOR LOVE, LIFE AND RICHES (Aug. 27).—Tom Warren, a young prospector, falls from a cliff. Angus McLean and his daughter, Jean, find Tom at the bottom of the cliff, and carry the injured man to their cabin. In gratitude Tom locates his claim in their names as well as his own. Dave Moody, a mining man, covets Tom's claim and plans to defraud him. Angus and Tom are obliged to fight for their rights. Jean makes a dash for the records. Jean, on her return to the claim, hears the distant popping of guns and divines the truth. She rounds up a band of cowboys and goes to the rescue. The enemy is caught between two fires and goes down to defeat. Jean will shortly become the life partner of Tom Warren.

A SHOT IN THE DARK (Aug. 31).—Tom and Joe are rivals for the hand of May. She favors Tom. The latter proposes and upon getting a refusal determines upon revenge. He is goaded into further passion through his dismissal at the hands of Max Weyman, the ranch boss, for ill treating his horse.

Tom and May are married and have a baby. Their household duties are attended to by a half-breed. Tom departs for the village one day and shoots a rabbit, which he hides under a bush to pick up upon his return. The half-breed goes out to pick wood. During their absence, Joe enters the cabin and forces his unwelcome attentions upon May. She stops him by showing him the baby and talking until the half-breed returns, when he makes his exit. He follows Tom to town and sees him enter the saloon with Max the ranchman and some cowboys.

Tom and Max get into an argument over their cards and the hot tempered Max strikes at Tom, who retaliates. Max draws his gun and Tom anxious to avoid bloodshed smashes the lamp with a chair. In the brief spell of darkness a flash is seen and when lights are brought Max is seen lying across the table badly wounded and unconscious. Tom demands to know who did it and the guilt is fastened upon him. He is taken off by the sheriff. In the meantime Joe has disappeared from the scene.

May becomes anxious at Tom's absence and sends the half-breed to find out the cause. He traces Tom and in an interview learns all about the shooting of the rabbit and the cause of the empty chamber in his revolver, which led to his arrest. The half-breed rides back and gets the rabbit and tells May the news. May leaves the baby in the charge of her mother and sets out on horseback to right matters if possible.

The cowboys, enraged at the attempt upon their boss, go to the jail and take Tom and lead him out to hang him. May comes across Joe, who is mortally injured. He calls to her and tells her the truth. The half-breed takes him upon his horse. The party reach the scene of the hanging just in time and Tom is set free.

MAJESTIC.

THE CHAPERON (Sept. 1).—The boys of the Junior "Frat" resolve to have a camping party, and each invite a girl. They are to be chaperoned by Harry's aunt, Mrs. Lester. When the girls arrive and everything is ready a telegram comes from Mrs. Lester, saying that she is detained at home by a severe attack of neuralgia and can't attend. The boys are in a quandary, and finally select Harry to impersonate a woman and pretend to be the chaperon.

Although he sees his chances of love-making slip by, he consents and the party proceed to the camp by the river. They are attended by Professor Black, of the college, who has been very much attached to Mrs. Lester in bygone days, but is now nearsighted and does not detect the deception.

The chaperon proves to be a great entertainer and wins the girls away from the boys by her stories, etc. The boys organize to teach Harry to behave, and administer a severe punishment to him, when, after being caught smoking, he induces the girls to try cigarettes.

Harry in his make up, while lighting a cigarette held in the lips of one of the boys, is silhouetted against the side of the tent, and the professor and girls seeing this from the outside, think that the chaperon is carrying on a clandestine love affair and break into the tent. They demand the expulsion of the chaperon and Harry is forced to declare his identity. The party is about to break up on this account, when the real chaperon arrives and everything ends happily, with the renewal of the professor's love story.

MABEL'S BEAU (Sept. 3).—Mabel's mother, the wife of a poor workman, has made great sacrifices to enable her pretty daughter to spend her vacation at a fashionable summer resort with the intention of making a good match. With a trunkful of new clothes, Mabel and her girl friend arrive at the hotel. Her friend introduces her to a rich young man, Ralph Page. He takes an interest in Mabel at once. He insists upon taking her home in his motor car. As he is unaware of her poverty Mabel is forced to write a warning letter to her mother, telling her to borrow furniture, silver, etc., from the neighbors so that the little home will look fairly prosperous. The parlor which is used as a bedroom is ready for the night when the letter arrives. Great hustling prevails. In a short time the whole place is transformed. Mabel and Ralph arrive and everything goes off smoothly. But after Ralph leaves, the room is changed back to its original state, with couch-bed and a bed made on the piano for one of the children. Ralph forgets a glove and returns for it. He is let in by the little boy. He takes his glove and leaves as soon as possible. Later he breaks an appointment with Mabel on account of business. She thinks her poverty is the reason and is heartbroken. However, they come to an understanding and he is able to assure her that he loves her just as much as he did before he knew of her parents' poverty.

NESTOR.

THE STORY OF A WALLET (Aug. 26).—Joe Moore is an expressman: his home is humble but clean and although he provides for his wife, baby and mother adequately, he cannot afford any luxuries. He worries because he cannot give his wife the things she covets and after he has been unable to purchase a shawl she has admired, Joe leaves the house in a bad frame of mind.

Jabez Spriggs is a clerk who has grown old in his faithful service to George Gray, a prosperous merchant. Mr. Gray entrusts Spriggs with a wallet containing a goodly sum of money and which he is to deliver to the bank president in person. As he is about to enter the bank, he bumps into Joe and Spriggs drops the wallet. Joe sees the wallet and pockets it. On the way home Joe enters a saloon in an endeavor to drown his troubles.

Spriggs is received by the president of the bank and discovers his loss. The sincerity of his distress is evident. A messenger is sent with Spriggs to help him find the wallet. The search is unavailing and Spriggs returns and tells Mr. Gray of his misfortune.

Mr. Gray is of a hard nature and he accuses Spriggs of stealing it. In the meantime Joe's wife, Mary, becoming alarmed at his absence, goes to look for him and, seeing his wagon outside the saloon, enlists the services of an Irish workingman, who fetches Joe from the saloon and helps him home.

In the morning after a night of anguish and remorse, during which he dreams of the innocent old man being placed behind the bars, Joe can stand it no longer and, getting Spriggs' address from a card in the wallet, starts out to make reparation. He drops the wallet in his nervousness, and Mary, picking it up, guesses his trouble and starts out after him.

Joe goes to Gray's office and learns that Spriggs is being tried by a magistrate, and he rushes frantically to the court. Joe forces his way in just as Spriggs is being remanded to a higher court. He tells the magistrate that he has the wallet and falls in despair as he finds it is gone. Mary arrives with the wallet and Spriggs is free and taken back to the position he loved so well. Joe departs with his wife with a kindly warning from the magistrate and resolves to be content with his humble lot and his loving family.

UNCLE BILL (Aug. 28).—Dorothy lives with her Aunt Jennie. The aunt gets the note which Joe has written the girl: "Dearest—I'll be over this afternoon, and if your old maid aunt don't consent to our marriage, I'm going to steal you. Joe."

As soon as Joe appears, she sends him away, telling him that her niece is much too young to marry. Joe, who lives with his Uncle Bill, hurries home, and after a good deal of pleading Uncle Bill agrees to go to the aunt to try and get Aunt Jennie to consent to the union of the young people. He goes, but Aunt Jennie, thinking that Uncle Bill is proposing to her, accepts. Uncle Bill is both angry and miserable and turning on Joe, he absolutely refuses to help him further, declaring that one fool in the family is enough. Aunt Jennie writes a note to her rector, and sends it by Dorothy: "J. B. Chapin, Reverend Sir—Will you kindly call at my house at three o'clock, June 24th, to perform a marriage ceremony. Yours very truly, Jennie Meldon."

As soon as Dorothy shows it to Joe, instead of allowing her to deliver it he hurries with it to the bunk house, and there he and the boys plan a reply from the rector to be delivered to Aunt Jennie on the day of the ceremony: "My Dear Miss Meldon—Owing to an attack of rheumatism, I will be unable to come to your ranch. However, if you will call at my house, I will be pleased to perform the ceremony. Yours sincerely, J. H. Chapin."

The happy day arrives. The big barn is handsomely decorated and a feast prepared for the guests. The boys watch for the minister, and as soon as he arrives, hurry him out of the way, while the foreman enters with the note he is supposed to have written. Aunt Jennie is much annoyed, but bound not to be disappointed, insists upon Uncle Bill going with her to his home. Upon their arrival, however, they find a note pinned to the door: "Have gone to Meldon Ranch. Will return about 6 o'clock. J. H. Chapin." Puzzled and angry, Aunt Jennie hustles Uncle Bill back to her ranch, only to find that Dorothy and Joe have been made one by the minister she had called to the house.

THE GIRLS AND THE CHAPERON (Aug. 30).—Dick Martin, foreman of the Circle E ranch, tells Colonel Gray that his mother is coming to visit them for a short time. The Colonel thinks it's a fine opportunity to invite his three nieces from the city, as Dick's mother could act as their chaperone.

The girls eagerly accept the invitation, and start for the ranch. In the meantime two letters are delivered at the ranch. One from the girls to their uncle apprising him of their visit, and the other to Dick from his mother, saying that she was obliged to postpone her intended trip. Phil, the Colonel's son, together with Jack, a college chum of his, and Dick are downcast, knowing full well that the Colonel would not permit the girls to come without a chaperone. Jack comes to the rescue by impersonating Dick's mother. The Colonel is delighted at the appearance of Jack arrayed as Mrs. Martin, and loses no time in making himself agreeable to "her," much to the amusement of the boys.

The girls arrive and immediately take a great liking to the chaperone, which fact is not relished by Dick and Phil. For a while things are lively at the ranch, with Jack having many narrow escapes of being more than once on the point of being discovered. The girls in their kimonos, insist on taking down Jack's false hair and put it up in curl papers. Jack, of course, has to use considerable diplomacy. A shaving mug and brush almost gives him away, and the smell of tobacco also get the girls on the scent. Jack wants to enjoy a game of cards with the boys, and manages to get into their rooms only to be interrupted by the Colonel. Jack, however, pacifies the Colonel by saying that "she" is there to lecture the boys, and accordingly takes cards, bottles and glasses and throws them out of the window.

In the midst of the festivities the real Mrs. Martin comes. Pandemonium breaks loose. Jack in his haste to get away leaves his wig in the Colonel's hands. Later, when himself again, he

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES & LANTERNS
BRIGHTER THAN CALCIUM.
OZO-CARBI-LIGHT
PATENTED
NO SATURATOR—OPENS NEW FIELDS FOR MOVING PICTURES.
SPECIAL SLIDES TO ORDER ALSO CARRY SLIDES ON ALL SUBJECTS.
Moore Hubbell & Co.
34 N. Franklin St. Chicago Ill. Send for Catalogue.

Repairs
The most modern shop and best picture machine repair men in the country guarantee you promptest service and complete satisfaction. Second-hand machines bought and sold.
Full Line of Supplies
Selling agents for all makes of machines.
Chicago Moving Picture Supply Co. 107 N. Dearborn Street CHICAGO, ILL.

Of Course We're Right!

Haven't we always told you so? You and you also—who want your patrons to have the best that money can buy—who believe in giving them something better than the rest. Read and take comfort:

Keystone, W. Va.

Gentlemen:
We have been using a RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN for one month and will say that I have been in the moving picture business since 1897, and I have yet to see a screen that gives the same satisfaction. It brings out all details, gives a sunlight effect, and causes no eye strain. We use A. C. current, 110 volts, 60 cycles, and are running all films on 20 amperes.

Upon seeing the screen in action Mr. John Evans at once ordered one with frame for his theater at Abington, Va.

Respectfully yours,

Signed .....A. M. GRUBER,
Mgr., The Hippodrome.

P. S.—Sunday we use D. C. current, have no house lights, have two front doors, side door and two windows open, and get fine picture.

N. B.—The above screen was paid for in full and letter is absolutely genuine.

You have tried the rest—Now buy the best.

American Theatre Curtain & Supply Company

105 North Main Street St. Louis, Mo.

Pitzer & Smith, 32 Union Square,
New York City Special Representatives.

This Lens Outfit is a Paying Investment

Practical and progressive moving picture men now realize that a cheap lens outfit is expensive, and that the best possible lens outfit is a paying investment. A superior lens and proper condenser give clear, sharp, splendid pictures—increase attendance at the show and thereby soon pay for themselves from increased profits. The best lenses, judged by the results they give, are the

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lenses

They get out of a reel all that can be desired. They throw on the screen clear, brilliant pictures—the kind the public want to see.

Leading operators use our objectives and condensers and have proved them to be satisfactory in use. You will get just as excellent results.

Make a progressive move by writing TODAY for free Booklet 62D, which explains many things of value to owners and operators.

The Superior Quality of Bausch & Lomb lenses, microscopes, field glasses, projection apparatus, engineering and other scientific instruments, is the product of nearly Sixty Years of Experience.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

NEW YORK WASHINGTON CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO
LONDON ROCHESTER, N.Y. FRANKFORT

The Convincing Evidence

Are the Facts! The Essential Proofs! The Enormous Sales of

MIRROROIDE

Are Due to the Following Facts Backed Up by a

BONA FIDE GUARANTEE

MIRROROIDE Is Virtually a Flexible Glass Screen That Cannot Crack, Peel or Turn Black. It Will Stand Water, Any Climate; It Stood a Fire Test of Heat That Cracked the Glass at Our Recent Fire. Moisture Will Cause Glass to Sweat, But It Has No Effect on MIRROROIDE.

MIRROROIDE

Produces a Clear, Bright Picture—Detail Perfect—In Absolute Daylight Without Haze, Glare or Eye Strain. Its Metallic Surface Consists of a Filled Canvas. The Filling a Glass Mercury Foil Amalgamation. That Is Why We Guarantee MIRROROIDE to Last a Lifetime. We Have Over 2,000 in Use; 40 Per Cent. of Our Orders Are Repeats. We Have Exhibitors Who Bought from Two to Twenty of Our Screens. Why? We Have Testimonials on MIRROROIDE After One Year in Service. That Is Why It Is Sold Under a Positive Guarantee.

LET US SHOW YOU

Get Our Large Free Samples. Test This Flexible Glass Screen Against Any Screen You Know Of. These Samples are Free. This Is a Test No Other Manufacturer of Curtains or Screens Dare Make.

Manufactured Under Seven Pending Patents.

THE J. H. CENTER CO.
NEWBURGH, N. Y.

It is that wonderful, exquisite sweetness "Kubelic" draws out of his fiddle that makes his meal ticket spell $1000.00 per hour. A horse fiddle makes more noise but

"What a Difference!"

It is that quaint "humanly human" way "Whitcomb Riley" puts jingles together that makes him loved and famous. Not such great English but his "beat on the heart-strings"

"Makes a Difference."

It was the realism, fine arrangement of color and striking study of light and shadow that immortalized "Rembrandt." A circus ONE SHEET is sometimes even more striking but

"Oh! How Different!"

It is a Motion Picture when you only show "Flickering Shadows" that are meaningless, dull, indistinct, without perspective, roundness or depth and almost without interest. But on a "Mirror Screen" this same picture "comes to life," shows clear, true and sharp. Every detail is visible and not a shade, gleam or shadow is lost and "Believe Me"

"There IS a Difference."

It is a Motion Picture Theatre when your equipment and light is poor and you have a bum curtain. But the "Mirror Screen" insures you a great light so that an ordinary film shows like a FEATURE in comparison. Every foot is so realistic and natural that folks are spell-bound because pictures on a "Mirror Screen"

"Are Different."

It is the Extra Nickels over expenses that means Profits, Bread and Meat and some of Life's Luxuries. It is the "Mirror Screen" that will create a sensation in your theatre, bring the crowds, and it is the only way to get that Wonderful Light WITHOUT EYE-STRAIN. The old and young come and the pictures on the MIRROR are so delightful to look at that they won't miss a reel and that "Keep Them Coming" is what makes, in your bank balance,

"Such a Great Difference."

Please write us today and tell us WHY you don't order that MIRROR.

MIRROR SCREEN COMPANY

Frank J. Rembusch, President. SHELBYVILLE, IND., U. S. A.
Frank Manning, Sales Agent, 922 Sixth Ave., N. Y. City, Phone 401 Plaza.

is introduced to the ladies, who forgive him.

Grace, one of the girls, who has shown a great liking for the chaperone, learns to love Jack, much to the latter's delight. Dick and Phil also meet their future partners, and the old Colonel transfers his affections to Mrs. Martin.

GEM.

BABY FINGERS (Aug. 27).—It all depended on Bernice. Whether her consumptive brother obtained the light and air that meant life to him, and whether her aged mother and little sister ate daily and slept nightly, all depended upon her. Bernice made a few dollars as a stenographer.

One day her pressing needs presented a new view of economics to Bernice. Her employer had too much money, she had nothing. The check-book lay open on the desk. He would never miss it—why shouldn't she.

Her employer did miss it; and sent for a detective. She was suspected. The detective called at her home in her absence, and questioned her family. The consumptive brother admitted that she had given him a sum equal to the amount missing. Bernice was arrested.

A short while after the incident, her mother went to the little prison where Bernice was awaiting trial, leaving the sick boy to take care of the baby June. In the boy's mind was conflict, in his heart was war. Long he thought, and then his resolution was formed. Taking the tot, he rallied all his weak strength, and started for his sister's employer's office. The walk was long, he was weary and exhausted, but he stubbornly continued, reached the door, and fell fainting. Baby June entered the office, and walked straight to the employer. He looked into June's eyes, and saw the eyes of his own love lost. The baby-story was told, and the baby fingers led him to the door where the unconscious boy lay. The invalid was revived, the girl's sacrifice explained. At her employer's request, she was liberated from prison and her position was returned to her. The consumptive went to Mexico at her employer's expense, and Baby June won a life-long friend.

VICTOR.

THE WINNING PUNCH (Aug. 30).—James Ross is in the habit of visiting a country town, where he has fallen in love with pretty Nellie Wilson, the daughter of a local real estate operator. Nellie, however, is in love with one of her fellow townsmen, Tom Owen.

One day after Ross has declared his love for Nellie and been rejected, he walks with her over to the local postoffice, where they meet Tom. The moment Nellie sees her favored admirer, she forgets the existence of Ross entirely and leaves him most unceremoniously for the society of Tom. This angers Ross very deeply and he goes away longing for vengeance. Returning to the city, he visits his club and wins a large stake at cards. It is then that he "frames up" his scheme of revenge. Noticing a good looking waiter about the place, a fellow named Potts, he employs him to impersonate a millionaire and visit Nellie's town in order to win her affections. Providing Potts with proper raiment and giving him a large share of his recent winnings, he sends him with a strong letter of introduction to Nellie's father, who is thus led to believe him a prospective buyer of some of his real estate holdings. Potts meets Nellie and begins his campaign and it is soon "nip and tuck" between Tom and himself.

Tom naturally resents Potts' attentions to Nellie and laying for Potts, he warns him to keep away from her. Potts refuses to do so and thereupon Tom proceeds to give him a good thrashing. Sullenly recovering from his beating, Potts seeks out and employs two toughs to beat up Tom and goes with them to watch the fun. Unfortunately for his calculations, Tom proves too much for the toughs and is soon getting the best of the fight. Then Nellie appears and seeing Potts looking on, she urges him to go to Tom's assistance. Potts refuses. By this time Tom has completely routed the toughs and next turns his attention to Potts. This person, however, has no further desire for mortal combat with Tom and hastily gathering himself together, he breaks several long distance records in disappearing from his view. Tom is thus left in possession of the field and the girl of his heart.

REX.

AN OLD-FASHIONED GIRL (Aug. 22).—The girl in question possesses wealth and an old-fashioned aunt. One day, the girl, tired of the luxury and pretense of her life, visited her aunt, with the simple, pleasant little cottage, and the real sure enough garden and the wholesome country comforts. And either due to a queer whim or to something really sincere way down deep in her, the girl discarded her revolutionary dresses and manners, and became just a simple old-fashioned girl. She combed her hair in the old-fashioned way, and for an hour returned to the old way.

There was a lawyer in the little village, a man with ambition and ability. He had a future—but that was about all he possessed. One day he passed the little garden and saw the girl picking flowers. He stopped to look and remained to stare. In due time he was presented to her by her aunt, and they took many long walks together, some of them by moonlight. The old story was whispered.

Suddenly she left the village, but a little later wrote her lover asking him to call on her in the city. He came and saw the mansion and the wealth and that she was not for him. So he told her she wasn't the girl he know, and that it could never be, and left. She told her father about it, and soon the little country lawyer became very busy. Case after case was brought to him, and what's more he won them. Then he was invited by a firm of lawyers in the city to join their partnership. So he grew wealthy, and mighty and successful. One day he called on the girl. He felt it was different now, that he was of her order, and able to care for her in the manner to which she was accustomed. And he never knew that the girl had had her own way all through the matter.

A JAPANESE IDYLL (Aug. 29).—Hiti was a little Japanese maid, but her feminine heart was the same as that organ of any other woman in the world—and it played the same tune. Hiti had big black eyes, soft olive hands and a stubborn will. Hiti fell in love. He was only a poor little Jap—but a manly chap. It was just like in your own little town—the more Hiti's parents objected to the fellow, the more determined was Hiti to marry him.

Then a wealthy Japanese merchant came a-wooing Hiti. Many miles he came, advising Hiti's parents that he was en route to bid for the hand of the enchanting Hiti. The parents were filled with joy, which of course Hiti didn't share. There was a little American girl in Hiti's town, the daughter of a consul or something, and the two girls had long been friends. It was the East's appeal to the Western, and the Western heart's silent response to the East. So Hiti went to the American girl and told her of her great sorrow, and American strategy and Oriental sagacity combined to defeat the logic of the old. It was thought of by we don't know whom; it might have been Hiti, or it might have been Elsie; but at any rate, when the mighty merchant reached the house, he found a very ugly Hiti indeed. Her face was enough to stop a Japanese automatic toy, and the merchant fled.

Hiti married the right man. Hiti and Elsie often talk about the stunt that made her sweetheart her husband, and sometimes they laugh so loud that they wake the little Jap baby, who evidences his displeasure at the interruption of his siesta with a very ordinary baby wail.

IN HONOR BOUND (Sept. 1).—The little Mexican girl was in love with the American engineer, and she bravely and boldly told the Mexican who loved her. But the Mexican was vindictive and vain and once he stole into her shack when she was alone, grasped her roughly by the arm and attempted to force his dagger into her throat. Her cries were heard by an American tourist, who at once came to her assistance and forced the Mexican from the shack. He disappeared before the group that was attracted by the sounds of the struggle, and the girl never saw her benefactor.

Sometime later they returned to the East—she and her American husband. He had succeeded, comparatively, and his Mexican wife gave him much time and interest to charity and benevolence. He took to gambling in stocks; and one day when he entered the room and she presented a contribution list for something or other, asking for his mite, he silently and solemnly pushed a letter toward her, a note from his brokers, informing him that his speculations were wiped out, and even his house may have to be sold to meet his creditor's demand. The little wife was broken-hearted, but bravely tried to cheer her husband, and failing pitifully, she left the room.

He noticed the contribution list on the table, and from that his eye went to the newspaper next to it. "James Burden, the Multi-Millionaire, Interested in Charity." Then the idea came; it was daring, it was wrong, and he knew it; but he was desperate. He would call on the millionaire, ask for a contribution, and then copy his signature and forge a check. All of which he did.

Eventually he was arrested, and his wife went to plead with the millionaire for leniency. But he obstinately refused to grant any clemency, and she returned in despair. Her Italian housekeeper heard and knew all and, leaving a note that in order to save the master she would kill his prosecutor, she left silently for the millionaire's home.

It was just by accident that the woman discovered that the finger marks on the contribution list handed to her husband with the millionaire's signature was the same as that left on the dagger that her unknown champion had snatched from the Mexican's hands out in the West. She knew then he was the man who had saved her life, and at once started for his home to ask again whether he would not also save her happiness. She entered the house to find her servant creeping upon the sleeping form of the millionaire, weapon brandished in air, ready to strike death to the sleeper. She grappled with the servant for possession of the knife, and during the struggle the sleeper awoke and instinctively snatched his pistol and fired. The little Mexican woman fell. A moment later she was no more, and her death earned her husband's liberty.

MILANO.

A CIRCUS ROMANCE (Aug. 31).—Valeska and Danilo Bedini and their daughter Rita are performers in a circus. Years of hardship and ceaseless striving to keep abreast with the demand for new and hazardous feats in the ring, have told on the woman, who before her elopement and marriage to the handsome performer, was a member of a prominent and wealthy family in Madrid. Valeska has kept this feeling of unrest hidden, striving to content herself with the lot of her husband and Rita, who know no other life; but she can stand it no longer and when temptation comes in the form of an ardent note from a persistent admirer, she throws caution to the winds and accepts his proposal to run away. In their haste to escape from the dressing-room unobserved, a candle is overturned and flames soon envelop the flimsy furnishings. Rita returns to the apartment and discovers the smoke. She calls her father and a search is made for Valeska. Danilo cannot be kept from the burning room and dashes into the flames, only to fall blackened and overcome. He is carried to a place of safety by his fellow actors, but no trace of Valeska can be found and she is mourned for dead. After months of torturing pain, the actor recovers from his hurts, a crippled and broken-hearted man. Rita becomes his mainstay and comforter, attempting bravely to support both by selling flowers in the gay cafes of Paris. One day Rita comes face to face with Valeska. Explanations follow and Valeska learns for the first time of the fire of her supposed fatal ending, and of the injuries sustained by Danilo. The maternal love is rekindled in her heart and she leads Rita to her home.

Here Count Rinardo, the lover, who is really an adventurer, learning Rita's identity, shows his displeasure, fearing the undoing of his scheme to secure the fortune which had been left to Valeska by her father. Rita, thinking she is interfering with her mother's happiness, refuses to stay, and leaves for her humble home in the attic. Danilo, becoming impatient at Rita's absence, sets out to search for her. He meets her at the gate of the villa and seeing her taking leave of the fashionable woman, is told by Rita that she is a lady who has taken a great interest in her and will help them. Together they return home.

With Rita gone the unhappy woman turns and denounces the supposed Count who had lured her away. He tells her of the fortune which awaits her in Madrid and begs her to flee with him and forget Rita and Danilo, but she will not listen, and sends him away.

Months later Rita contracts a heavy cold, which turns into a dangerous fever, and the distressed father is forced by hunger to overcome his pride and seek charity at the hands of the woman who befriended his daughter. Valeska receives him. Danilo is dumbfounded. She tries to explain and pleads his forgiveness, but he refuses to listen. Crushed in spirit he finds his way back to the attic, but is followed a short distance by Valeska, who will not be kept from her sick child. The woman instantly perceives the serious condition of Rita and secures everything possible to restore her health. Then, worn out by her labors, Valeska falls into a weary sleep. Rita awakens early in the morning, the crisis passed, and her strength and reason returning. She sees the sleeping woman and awakens her with kisses. The happy mother pleads forgiveness of her daughter and husband, and when Danilo in his great joy takes her to his heart, the little family is once more united and happy.

LUX.

THE MODERN CHILD (Aug. 30).—Bobby is a precocious child who is adopted by wealthy people. However, he cannot forget, amid his new pleasant surroundings, the little playmate of former days. Eileen, the little playmate, soon finds herself wandering the country again with her former playmate, who had broken out of school and ran away intending to earn his own living. While wandering, the children encounter a traveling company of cinematographers, who engage them to act for their films. Bobby becomes quite a star at the picture halls.

THANHOUSER.

THE CAPTURE OF NEW YORK (Sept. 1).—This subject shows scenes attending the attempted capture of New York by the Red army in the recent maneuvers in Connecticut. Twenty thousand men participated in the attack, and the Blue army was steadily driven back to the great city it was defending. All the different forces that made up the victorious Red army are shown in action in the film. The picture starts with the transporting of cavalry and their preparations to move to New Canaan. Then Section A of the Aerial Squadron is shown sending out wireless messages. You see a wireless field set and the hangars of the Aerial Squadron. Some of the other scenes shown are: Installing wireless apparatus on Burgess Wright's aeroplane in the aerial squadrons. Aviator Lieutenant Milling, U. S. A., and his Curtis machine. Cavalry division of Blue army. Cavalry on "hike" in heavy marching order. Rear guard of cavalry division leaving camp. Officers' mess. "Camp

ALL OVER THE COUNTRY EXHIBITORS and THEATRICAL MANAGERS ARE CLAMORING TO BOOK

BLANCHE WALSH

in RESURRECTION

(FOUR PARTS)

WILL YOU BE THE MAN TO SHOW IT IN GOOD TERRITORY STILL OPEN?

YOU CAN BILL THIS BROADWAY SUCCESS IN BROADWAY STYLE

MASKO FILM COMPANY, 145 WEST 45th STREET NEW YORK

AgfA

CELLULOID POSITIVE
CELLULOID NEGATIVE
AND
NON-FLAM POSITIVE
(MADE UNDER LICENSE OF THE PATENTEE)

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.

15 EAST 26th STREET - - NEW YORK
Tel. Mad. Sq. 7876. Cable Rawfilm New York

WHY

Buy Other State Right Features When

OLIVER TWIST

With NAT C. GOODWIN as FAGIN

(5 REELS)

MAY STILL BE HAD

General Film Publicity & Sales Co.

145 W. 45th St., New York City

American Moving Picture Machine Co.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE

STANDARD

Automatic Moving Picture Machine

101-102 Beekman Street New York

EXHIBITORS' HEADQUARTERS

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY

(Incorporated)
50 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Jobbers in Edison, Powers and Motiograph Machines and Parts

Machines repaired by Expert Mechanics. Genuine Parts Only Used.

SPECIALTIES

Mirror Screens, Chairs, Tickets, Pianos, Bio & Electric Carbons, Special Gundlach Lenses, Condensers, Edison Transformers, Ft. Wayne Compsensarcs, Asbestos State Booths, Asbestos Wire, Switches, Plugs, Spotlights, Gas Making Outfits, Limes, Film Cement, Branch General Disinfectant Co., Scenery, Stage Effects, Theatres Bought, Sold, Rented

CHAS. A. CALEHUFF, Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

LECTURES ON SPECIAL FILMS

EACH $1.00 PER COPY Prepared by W. STEPHEN BUSH POSTAGE PAID

Lectures for French-American Film Company
"CAMILLE" BY SARAH BERNHARDT and "MADAME SANS GENE" BY MADAME REJANE
One Dollar for Both (Typewritten)
Also in printed form the following:

HOW TO PUT ON THE PASSION PLAY
(Second Edition)
For Pathe Freres World-Renowned Production

HOW TO PUT ON THE CRUSADERS, OR JERUSALEM DELIVERED
For World's Best Film Co., Feature Film
(Copyright 1911)

KEY AND COMPLETE LECTURE FOR DANTE'S INFERNO
For Milano Film Co. (Italy), Five-Reel Production

ORDER NOW Only a limited edition of each $1.00 PER COPY

COPYRIGHTED AND FOR SALE ONLY BY
MOVING PICTURE WORLD, Box 226, Madison Square P. O., New York City

canaries." Army cook tent at a busy hour. "Roast beef for dinner!" "Making himself comfortable." A little game of Blackjack. "His own tailor." General Lasker Bliss' headquarters. Aviator N. Y. N. G. Beckwith Havens in Curtis' machine. Lieutenant Milling coming down. Aviator Haven's landing after flight. Haven and Milling taken after landing. Aviator at work. In addition to the aeroplane and wireless views, the use of the army automobile is also demonstrated. Finally the fight commences and the camera takes you after the Red army in their pursuit of the Blues.

THE VOICE OF CONSCIENCE (Sept. 3).—An orphan girl was given a home by one of her father's friends, who, with his mother, carefully looked after her. The girl's benefactor was much her senior, but soon fell desperately in love with him, although she hid it from those around her.

Jealousy came into her life, when a young woman came to visit her guardian's mother. Soon it was apparent to the orphan that the man she admired was deeply in love with the elder girl, and she saw that his affection for his ward was purely paternal.

While the two girls and the young man were motoring one day, they met with an accident and the young women were badly injured. A little country hospital was nearby, and there the victims were taken, being placed on adjoining cots. The young man did all he could for their comfort, but his actions showed that his heart was wrapped up in the elder girl. This his ward noted, and as she lay on her cot she brooded and prayed for a chance to have revenge.

The man's sweetheart was suffering principally from shock, and a heart stimulant was given her at constant intervals. This draught was a very powerful drug, and the ward knew that an overdose would be fatal. Full of hatred, she watched her chance and when she thought she was unobserved, poured half of the contents of the bottle into the glass containing the mixture prepared for the patient.

By good fortune the doctor, who was outside on the porch, saw her. He decided that she should be punished, but had a firm belief that conscience would cause her more suffering than could be administered by the law.

The guilty girl peeped stealthily when the doctor approached her enemy's cot, and gave her a dose of medicine. She shuddered a few minutes later when the screen emblem of a patient's approaching death was put around her neighbor's cot. Later when the screen was removed and she saw the empty bed beside her she bitterly regretted the evil deed that jealousy had led her to do.

The girl was not dead, however, the doctor only pretended to give her the medicine, and removed her for safety's sake to another part of the hospital.

The guilty girl regained her strength very slowly. Weak and wan, she was seated in the hospital grounds one beautiful afternoon when visitors were announced. They were the man she loved and the girl she thought she had killed. Joyfully she greeted them, but was so weak from the shock that her callers were ordered to leave. To the doctor who came to administer to her, the girl made full confession, and devoutly thanked heaven that in some mysterious way the crime she planned had not succeeded. The doctor explained that he knew all, and had known it from the time she tampered with the medicine, but had kept the secret. Humbly she thanked him, told him she had learned her lesson, and as reparation would consecrate the rest of her life to doing good.

HIS FATHER'S SON (Sept. 6).—A contractor who had amassed a fortune through handling big jobs, thoroughly disapproved of his big son. He regarded the youth as a "dude," and feared that he was fast developing into one of the idle rich class. The son, although educated as a civil engineer, was perfectly willing to idle along and live upon the money his father gave him.

The two quarreled constantly until finally there came a day when the boy tired of his father's constant sneers and declared that he would prove he could make his way in the world himself. Fortune led him to a section of the West where men in his father's employ were carrying on a gigantic piece of work. Under an assumed name he secured a position, and by strict attention to the business and native ability rapidly forged ahead.

One of the division superintendents, although an excellent workman, was a victim of drink, and after repeated warnings, was discharged. The "son of his father" was advanced to his vacant position, and gained the bitter enmity of his predecessor, not only because he had supplanted him, but because the daughter of the general superintendent seemed to look with favor upon the newcomer, and the disgraced employee had long admired her.

It was generally known that the new engineer's job depended upon his concluding his section of the task within the time limit. The old engineer plotted with an anarchistic workman and offered him a sum of money if he would wreck the work. The plot was overheard by a child who had received many favors from the superintendent's daughter. He ran over to warn her, and found the girl alone in the house. She realized that there was no time to summon assistance, found the bomb and at the risk of her life carried it to a nearby stream, where she hurled it into the water. The villains were captured by the girl's father and lover, who were hard at work in their office and knew nothing of the plot until they heard the explosion.

The young superintendent advanced rapidly in his chosen profession and the girl's father gladly consented when the young man asked his consent to marry the daughter. The old contractor also heard of his new employee and as the day of the wedding approached decided to travel a few hundred miles out of his way to meet him. The reunion was a joyful one, for the older man found that the one time dude was a chap to be proud of and through adversity had really become his father's son.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY NO. 24 (Aug. 21).—A Meal Under Water—Depicting the strange feat of eating a lunch and smoking a cigar entirely submerged.

Thrilling Aeroplane Flight—Graham-White, England's foremost aviator and society favorite, flies at Manchester.

Fighting the Flames—Heroic efforts of the New York Fire Department in quenching a disastrous fire on the Hudson River docks.

A Trackless Trolley—Unique means of transit in actual operation in Pasadena, California.

Death Defying Feat—Law, the steeplejack, climbs the outside of a twenty-story Wall Street skyscraper, reaching the eighteenth story, where he was stopped by the police.

The King's Prize—The famous "Bisley Shoot," which decides the Champion Sharpshooter in the British Empire. Private A. G. Fulton, the winner.

National Convention Motion Picture Exhibitors—Representative Motion Picture Exhibitors from every state in the Union convene in Chicago.

Society Flower Girls—Pretty Chicago society girls sell flowers on the street for charity.

Army Attacks New York—20,000 troops of the Regular Army and National Guard in a sham attack on New York City.

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS.

Clarion, Ia.—W. F. Smith will open the Colonial motion picture theater here.

Davenport, Ia.—J. Harry Blanchard will open a new motion picture theater at 324 West 2nd St.

Hancock, Mich.—Herman Stark will open a motion picture theater here.

Bayfield, Wis.—Ulric Boutin sold his interest in the Princess Theater to Carl Wasmuth.

Petoskey, Mich.—P. Austin Collins is now the sole owner of the Majestic Theater here.

Lake Geneva, Wis.—G. A. Van Slyck has his new theater nearly completed and will open soon. The seats are of the latest pattern and are now placed and the other work of finishing will take only a very short time.

INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS, INC.
5 WEST 14th ST., NEW YORK CITY
IMPORTERS AND EXPORTERS
DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC FILMS

INTERNATIONAL EXCLUSIVE FEATURES ITF

NEW AND SECOND HAND FILMS
OF EVERY MAKE AND DESCRIPTION
FEATURE FILMS A SPECIALTY

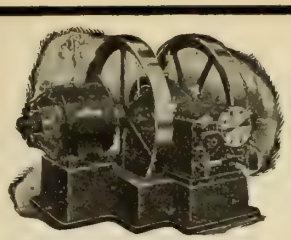
State Right Men!
ATTENTION!
Here are several money getters. Now is the time to get the Coin. State Rights for sale.

Convict Life in the Ohio Penitentiary
The biggest money getter out today, bar none.

FRISCO'S CHINATOWN
A SURE MONEY GETTER — Best Territory Open
Also "Grip of the Mormons," "Foe to Richelieu," "Temptations of a Large City," "4 Dare Devils." Write for prices. For sale or rent.
We sell everything pertaining to the moving picture business.

UNITED AMUSEMENT CO.
319 Security Bank Bldg. Cedar Rapids, Iowa

SILVER YOUR CURTAIN WITH SILVERIT
Why buy an expensive screen when you can make your own better than any you can buy? No other curtain or preparation can produce this same bright, mellow light, no matter what you pay. Build up your business with a light, clear picture and a bright house. It's human nature to shun darkness. Wake up. Silverit is a silver paste, applied with a rag and can be polished like a mirror.
1 Lb. covers a curtain 9 x 12.
1 Lb. Can, $3.00. 2 Lb. Can, $5.00.
A. C. THOMAS
1705 Fairacres Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.



THE Foos

ELECTRIC

Generating Set

will furnish direct current for your show and give you better quality of light than you can get from the best Central Station service. With a Foos Engine you can save 50 to 75 per cent. of the money you have to pay for electric current and have all the light you want when you want it.

Send for Bulletin F-98.

The Foos Gas Engine Co.

809 Linden Ave. Springfield, O.

FEATURE FILMS FOR SALE

2 3 4 Reels Feature Productions 2 3 4 Reels

WRITE FOR LISTS QUICK

SUPERIOR FEATURE FILM CO.

32 Union Sq., New York City

Orchestra Music FOR MOVING PICTURES

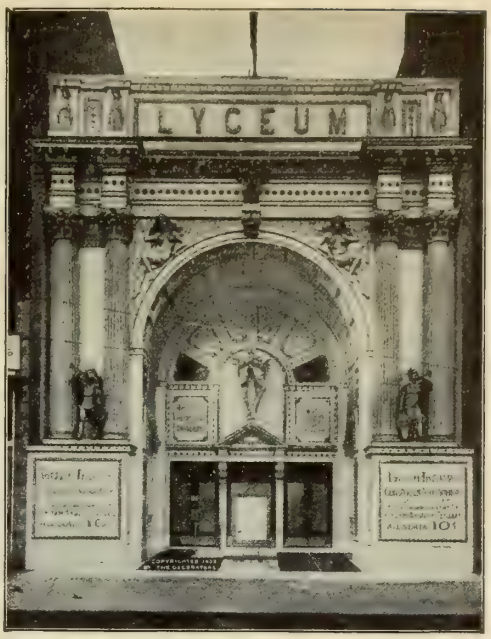
Violin, Cornet and Drum parts have been added to the popular "Orpheum Collection" of piano music (dramatic and descriptive) for Moving Pictures. Practical for piano alone or any number of above instruments. Issued in two parts: No. 1 and No. 2.

Piano, 58 cents each; both No.'s $1.15
Violin, 40 cents each; both " 75c
Cornet, 35 cents each; both " 65c
Drums, 30 cents each; both " 55c

Send for free sample pages.

CLARENCE E. SINN

1501 Sedgwick St., Chicago, Ill.



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.

2549 Archer Avenue, :: CHICAGO, ILL.

In answering advertisements kindly mention the Moving Picture World.

"THELMA"

will make money for you! Three big, interesting reels. Adapted from Marie Corelli's great novel.

RELIANCE

A powerful drama, splendidly acted by an all-star cast. See the Burning Ship! The Great Waterfalls! Tense Dramatic Moments! Special 1 and 3 sheet posters.

"THELMA"

Released Sat., Aug. 31, 1912.

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

Aug. 15—The Outlaw Colony (Drama).....1000
Aug. 19—The Land of Death (Drama).....
Aug. 21—The Wooing of Waethena (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—The Bandit of Point Loma (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 26—The Jealous Rage (Dr.).....
Aug. 28—The Lonesome Trail Pioneers (Dr.)..
Aug. 8—The Girl and the Gun (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 29—The Will of James Waldron (Drama)..1000
Sept. 2—The Greaser and the Weakling (Dr.)..1000
Sept. 4—The Marked Gun (Drama).....1000

"101" BISON (N. Y. M. P. CO.).

Aug. 6—The Reformed Outlaw (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—The Garrison Triangle (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 13—The Bugle Call (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 16—The Other Girl (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 20—The Buffalo Hunt (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 23—The Reckoning (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 27—The Bandit's Gratitude (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 30—The White Lie (2 reels) (Dr.).....2000
Sept. 3—For the Honor of the Tribe (Dr.)....
Sept. 6—An Old Tune (Dr.).....

BISON (Universal).

Aug. 6—A Western Girl's Dream (Drama)...
Aug. 10—Her First Choice (Drama).....
Aug. 13—The Widow's Claim (Drama).....
Aug. 17—The Shot That Failed (Drama).....
Aug. 20—How He Made Good (Com.).....
Aug. 27—For Love, Life and Riches (Drama)..
Aug. 31—A Shot In the Dark (Drama).....

CHAMPION.

July 29—The Poisoners (Dr.).....
Aug. 5—What a Woman Will Do (Drama)....
Aug. 12—For His Child (Drama).....
Aug. 19—The Bum and the Bomb (Comedy)...
Aug. 26—The Foundling (Dr.).....

COMET.

July 29—Reconciled in Reno (Com.).....
Aug. 3—The Hold-Up in Buckeye Canyon (Dr.)
Aug. 5—A Bachelor's Romance (Dramatic)...1000
Aug. 10—Hold-Up in Buckeye Canyon (Dr.)...1000
Aug. 12—Two Women and One Man (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 17—Western Chivalry (Drama) 1000
Aug. 19—House of "No Children" (Com.).....1000
Aug. 24—The Deputy's Duty (Drama).....1000
Aug. 26—A Divided House (Dr.).....
Aug. 31—The Moonshiner's Task (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—The Dentist's Dilemma (Comedy)....

ECLAIR.

Aug. 13—Daddy (Comedy) .....
Aug. 15—Aunt Hetty's Gold Fish (Com.-Dr.)..
Aug. 18—A Child to the Rescue (Drama).....
Agu. 18—Egyptian Ruins (Scenic) .....
Aug. 20—Wanted, a Wife In a Hurry (Com.)..
Aug. 22—Robin Hood (3 reels; Drama).....
Aug. 25—The Will (Drama).....
Aug. 25—A Moslem Lady's Day (Novelty)....
Aug. 27—Dolls (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—The Passing Parade (Tableaux).....
Sept. 1—Two Brave Little Hearts (Dr.).....
Sept. 3—The Actress Pulls the Strings (Com.)
Sept. 5—The Guest at the Parsonage (Drama)
Sept. 8—The Kind Old Man (Com.-Dr.).....

GAUMONT.

Aug. 20—Her Supreme Sacrifice (Drama).....
Aug. 21—Gaumont's Weekly (Top.).....
Aug. 22—Androclus and the Lion (Ed. Dr.)....
Aug. 27—The Story of Chopin (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—Marriage on the Run (Com.-Dr.).....
Sept. 3—The Refugee's Casket (Drama).....
Sept. 4—Gaumont's Weekly (Topical).....
Sept. 5—A Midnight Encounter (Com.-Dr.)....
Sept. 5—The Launching of the Imperator (Topical). .....).....

GEM.

July 28—Bread Cast Upon the Waters (Dr.)..
July 30—Back to Her Own (Dr.).....
Aug. 6—'Neath the Homespun (Drama).....
Aug. 13—Babette (Drama).....
Aug. 20—White Dove's Sacrifice (Drama).....
Aug. 27—Baby Fingers (Drama).....

GREAT NORTHERN.

July 13—Circumstantial Evidence (Dr.).....
July 13—Moving Pictures (Com.).....
July 20—Almost a Tragedy (Com.-Dr.).....
July 20—Uncle Reuben Goes to Town (Com.)..
July 27—Don't Go On a Spree (Comedy).....
Aug. 3—The King's Power (Drama).....
Aug. 10—Thou Shalt Not Kill (Drama).....
Aug. 10—The Springlock (Comedy).....
Aug. 10—When the Cat's Away (Comedy)....
Aug. 10—Thou Shalt Not Kill (Drama).....
Aug. 17—The Prodigal's Return (Drama).....
Aug. 24—For Her Sister's Sake (Drama)..... 944
Aug. 31—Love is Blind (Dr.)..... 943

IMP.

Aug. 5—The Hindoo's Prize (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 8—Blood is Thicker Than Water (Dr.)..1000
Aug. 10—How Jones Saw the Ball Game (Comedy) .....
Aug. 10—Ferdie's Family Feud (Comedy).....
Aug. 12—Big Hearted Sim (Drama).....1000
Aug. 15—In Old Tennessee (2 reels; Drama)..2000
Aug. 17—Kidnapping Dolly (Comedy).....
Aug. 17—In and Around Charleston, S. C. (Sc.)
Aug. 19—Padrone's Daughter (Drama).....
Aug. 22—The Castaway (Drama).....
Aug. 24—Chappie, the Chaperone (Comedy)....
Aug. 24—The Great Geysers of Yellowstone Park (Scenic) .....
Aug. 26—Making Good (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—A Happy Family.....
Aug. 31—A Case of Smallpox.....
Aug. 31—Her Burglar.....

LUX.

Aug. 2—The Mysterious Flowers (Drama).... 983
Aug. 9—A Race for Liberty (Dr.)..... 580
Aug. 9—The Postman's Escapade (Com.)..... 272
Aug. 16—Tommy Saves His Little Sister (Dr.)
Aug. 23—Uncle's Favorite Pudding (Com.).... 744
Aug. 23—Views of the Livran (Scenic)..... 239
Aug. 30—The Modern Child (Drama)..... 990
Sept. 6—A Cripple's Folly (Drama)..... 990

MAJESTIC.

Aug. 11—The Matrimonial Substitute (Com.)..
Aug. 11—The Striped Parasol (Comedy).....
Aug. 13—A Summer Idyl (Comedy).....
Aug. 18—Toodles (Comedy) .....
Aug. 18—A Game of Chess (Com.-Dr.).....
Aug. 20—The New Butler (Comedy).....
Aug. 25—A Corner in Kisses (Com.).....
Aug. 27—A Disputed Claim (Dr.).....
Sept. 1—The Chaperon (Comedy).....
Sept. 3—Mabel's Beau (Drama).....

MILANO.

Aug. 3—The Battle of Two Palms (2 reels) (Dr.)
August 10—Playthings of Fate (2 reels, Dr.)..
Aug. 17—Their Guardian Angel (Drama).....
Aug. 24—The Courage of Fear (Drama).....
Aug. 31—A Circus Romance (Drama).....

NESTOR.

Aug. 2—Young Wild West Washing Out Gold (Dr.).....
Aug. 5—Fortunes of War (Drama).....
Aug. 7—Fatty of E Z Ranch (Comedy).....
Aug. 9—A Mexican Mix-up (Drama).....
Aug. 12—A Tale of the Foothills (Drama)....
Aug. 14—How Steve Made Good (Com.-Dr.)..
Aug. 16—The Miner's Widow (Drama).....
Aug. 19—When the Heart Calls (Drama).....
Aug. 21—The Alibi (Drama).....
Aug. 23—A Stubborn Cupid.....
Aug. 26—The Story of a Wallet (Dr.).....
Aug. 28—Uncle Bill (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—The Girls and the Chaperon (Com.)..

POWERS.

Aug. 14—Wanted, a Practice (Comedy).....
Aug. 16—The Golden Rule (Drama).....
Aug. 21—Her Diary (Drama).....
Aug. 23—What the Milk Did (Com.-Dr.).....
Aug. 28—An Exciting Outing.....
Aug. 28—U. S. Army Manoeuvres (Naval)....
Aug. 30—Life's Lesson (Drama).....

RELIANCE.

July 27—The Soldier Baby (Dr.).....
July 31—Where There is Soap, There is Hope (Comedy) .....
Aug. 3—The Wood Nymph (Drama).....
Aug. 7—Phillip Steele (2 reels) (Dr.).....
Aug. 10—The Two Fathers (Dr.).....
Aug. 14—Order in the Court (Comedy).....
Aug. 14—The Old Swimming Hole (Comedy)..
Aug. 17—A Man Among Men (Drama).....
Aug. 21—One Against One (Drama).....
Aug. 24—North of 53 (Drama).....
Aug. 31—The Secret Service Man (Dr.).....
Aug. 28—Thelma (2 reels) (Dr.).....
Sept. 4—The Heart of a Cossack (Dr.).....
Sept. 7—The Bully and the Shrimp (Dr.)....

REPUBLIC.

July 15—The All-seeing Eye (Dr.).....
July 22—Evil be to Him Who Evil Thinks (Dr.)
July 29—A House-top Romance (Dr.).....
July 29—Evolution of a Duck Egg (Edu.).....
Aug. 5—The Octoroon's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—The Borrowing Simp (Comedy).....
Aug. 19—The Curse of Drink (Drama).....
Aug. 26—The Pickaninnies and the Watermelons (Com.) .....

REX.

Aug. 15—The Greater Christian (Drama).....
Aug. 18—Thus Many Souls (Drama).....
Aug. 22—An Old Fashioned Girl (Drama).....
Aug. 25—The Leader of the Band (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—A Japanese Idyll (Drama) .....
Sept. 1—In Honor Bound (Drama).....

SOLAX.

Aug. 9—The Pink Garters (Comedy).....
Aug. 14—The Blood Stain (Drama).....
Aug. 16—The Strike (Drama).....
Aug. 21—His Double (Drama).....
Aug. 23—The Equine Spy (2 reels) (Drama)...
Aug. 28—Phantom Paradise (Drama).....
Aug. 30—Playing Trumps (Drama).....
Sept. 4—The Fight in the Dark (Drama).....
Sept. 6—Open to Proposals (Comedy).....

THANHOUSER.

Aug. 18—Warner's Waxworks .....
Aug. 20—Her Darkest Hour.....
Aug. 23—Conductor 786 (Drama).....
Aug. 25—When a Count Counted (Dr.).....
Aug. 27—Lucile (reels 1 and 2) (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—Lucile (reel 3) (Dr.).....
Sept. 1—The Capture of New York (Military and Educational) .....
Sept. 3—The Voice of Conscience (Drama)....
Sept. 6—His Father's Son (Drama).....

VICTOR.

Aug. 2—Taking a Chance (Dr.).....
Aug. 9—The Mill Buyers (Drama).....
Aug. 16—The Chance Shot (Drama).....
Aug. 23—Her Cousin Fred (Drama).....
Aug. 30—The Winning Punch (Dr.).....

MISCELLANEOUS.

NEW YORK FILM CO.

July 15—Lights and Shadows of Chinatown (Dr.).....

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY COMPANY.

July 15—The Penalty (Dr.).....
July 29—The Circus Girl (Dr.).....

GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM COMPANY.

March 18—The Call of a Woman.....3000
April 8—Cell Thirteen.....2000
April 22—The Dead Man's Child.....3000
April 15—The Dead Man's Child, 3 Reels (Dr.)

SHAMROCK.

May 7—A Gypsy's Love (Dr.).....
May 11—Algernon's Busy Day (Com.).....
May 14—On the Verge (Dr.).....
May 18—Algernon's Busy Day (Com.).....
May 21—The Thorny Path (Dr.).....
May 25—A Cold Reception (Com.).....
May 25—The Kissing Germ (Com.).....
May 28—White Fawn (Dr.).....
May 31—A Petticoat Ranch Boss (Com.).....

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS THE BIG TICKET. ANY PRINTING ANY COLORS

5,000	- -	$1.25	20,000	- -	$4.60	50,000	- -	$7.50
10,000	- -	$2.50	25,000	- -	$5.50	100,000	- -	$10.00

GET THE SAMPLES STOCK TICKETS, 6 CENTS

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - - Shamokin, Pa.

ELECTRA

PINK LABEL

•TRADE MARK•

CARBONS

ARE A GUARANTEE OF PERFECT PROJECTION

ESTABLISHED

Firmly in Legitimate Channels of the Trade, by TRIMLESS METHODS

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

And its Recognized Program Has Made an Enduring Impression on the Thoughtful Exhibitor who Appreciates Fair Dealing along with Quality Films

YOU NEED THIS OFFERING

MONDAY
AMERICAN, COMET, ALL STAR

TUESDAY
THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC, GAUMONT

WEDNESDAY
RELIANCE, SOLAX, AMERICAN, GAUMONT WEEKLY

THURSDAY
AMERICAN, ALL STAR, GAUMONT

FRIDAY
THANHOUSER, SOLAX, LUX

SATURDAY
GREAT NORTHERN, RELIANCE COMET

SUNDAY
THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC

Address all communications

133-135 West 44th St., New York

LICENSED
RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, C. G. P. C., Cines, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Eclipse, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Pathe, Selig.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, C. G. P. C., Vitagraph.

Saturday—Edison, Essanay, Cines, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

Aug. 8—A Child's Remorse (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—Rameses, King of Egypt (Special—2 reels—Drama) .....
August 12—The Inner Circle (Drama).....
August 15—An Interrupted Elopement (Com.)..
August 15—The Tragedy of a Dress Suit (Com.)
Aug. 19—With the Enemy's Help (Drama)....1000
Aug. 22—A Change of Spirit (Drama).....1000
Aug. 26—Mr. Grouch at the Seashore (Com.)....
Aug. 26—Through Dumb Luck (Com.).....
Aug. 29—A Pueblo Legend (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—In the North Woods (Drama).....
Sept. 5—Getting Rid of Trouble (Comedy)....
Sept. 5—He Must Have a Wife (Comedy)....

CINES.

(G. Kleine.)

August 13—Mona Lisa In Disguise (Com.).... 600
August 13—Vicovara, Italy (Scenic)..... 400
August 17—A Convict's Gratitude (Drama)....1025
Aug. 20—A Matter of Pride (Drama).....1000
Aug. 24—A Picture C. O. D. (Comedy)..... 470
Aug. 24—Jenkins, the Watchman (Comedy)... 250
Aug. 24—Modern Naples (Scenic)..... 305
Aug. 27—The Bride of Lammermoor (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 31—Richard the Lion-hearted (Dr.).....1070
Sept. 3—A Tragedy of Long Ago (Drama)....1000
Sept. 7—The Sacking of Rome (Historical-Dr.) 770
Sept. 7—Picturesque Sardinia, Italy (Scenic).. 242

EDISON.

July 24—The Grouch (Com.-Dr.)..... 985
July 26—The Escape from Bondage (Dr.).....1000
July 27—The Relief of Lucknow (Hist.-Dr.)....1000
July 30—More Precious than Gold (Dr.).....1000
July 31—When She Was About Sixteen (Com.)1000
Aug. 2—The Lord and the Peasant (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 3—Ninth International Red Cross Conference, Washington, D. C., May 7 17, 1912 (Top)..... 700
Aug. 3—Mary Had a Little Lamb (Com.)..... 300
Aug. 6—In His Father's Steps (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 7—Marjorie's Diamond Ring (Com.)....1000
Aug. 9—The Librarian (Dr.)..... 980
Aug. 10—The City of Washington, the Capital of the United States (Scenic)..... 960
August 13—A Dangerous Lesson (Drama).....1000
August 14—Holding the Fort (Comedy).....1000
August 16—The Harbinger of Peace (Drama)..1000
August 17—Spring Log Driving, Maine (Ind.)..1000
Aug. 20—The Street Beautiful (Edu. Dr.)....1000
Aug. 21—Mr. Pickwick's Predicament (Com.)..1000
Aug. 23—The Cub Reporter (Drama).....1000
Aug. 24—The War on the Mosquito (Edu.)...1000
Aug. 27—Alone In New York (Drama).....1000
Aug. 28—Helping John (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Aug. 30—The Boy and the Girl (Drama).....1000
Aug. 31—Simla (Scenic) 1000
Sept. 3—The Triangle (Comedy-Drama).....1000
Sept. 4—Aladdin Up-to-Date (Comedy).....1000
Sept. 6—Believe Me, if All Those Endearing Young Charms (Dramatic).....1000
Sept. 7—Bridget's Sudden Wealth (Comedy).. 600
Sept. 7—Opening of the Y. M. C. A. Playground, Lynchburg, Va., (Descriptive). 400

ESSANAY.

Aug. 1—Her Hour of Triumph—(Dr.).....1000
Aug. 2—The Browns Have Visitors (Com.)...1000
Aug. 3—The Loafer's Mother (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 6—The New Church Organ (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 8—The Old Wedding Dress (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—The Tale of a Cat (Com.).....1000
Aug. 10—The Little Sheriff (Com.-Dr.).....1000
August 13—Broncho Billy's Last Hold-up (Dr.).1000
August 15—An Adamless Eden (Comedy).....1000
August 16—The Magic Wand (Juvenile).....1000
August 17—On the Moonlight Trail (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 20—The Return of Becky (Drama).....1000
Aug. 22—A Corner in Whiskers (Comedy).....1000
Aug. 23—Her Adopted Father (Drama).....1000
Aug. 24—Broncho Billy's Escapade (Drama)..1000
Aug. 27—Alkali Ike Plays the Devil (W. Com.).1000
Aug. 29—Three to One (Com.).....1000
Aug. 30—The Hermit (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Aug. 31—Broncho Billy for Sheriff (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 3—Back to the Old Farm (Drama)....1000
Sept. 5—The Wildman (Comedy).....1000
Sept. 6—Twilight (Drama) 1000

KALEM.

Aug. 9—The Wandering Musician (Dr.).....1000
August 12—The Little Keeper of the Light (Drama) 1000
August 14—Kentucky Girl (Drama).....1000
August 16—The Prison Ship (Drama).....1000
Aug. 19—The Daughter of the Sheriff (Drama).1000
Aug. 21—The Frenzy of Firewater (Drama)....1000
Aug. 23—The Beauty Parlor of Stone Gulch (Comedy) 1000
Aug. 24—Rube Marquard Wins (Drama).....1323
Aug. 24—Rube Marquard Wins (Dramatic)....1000
Aug. 26—The Little Wanderer (Dramatic).....1000
Aug. 28—The Woman Hater (Comedy).....
Aug. 28—Palestine (Educational) .....
Aug. 30—Jim Bludso (Dramatic).....1000
Aug. 31—Saved from Courtmartial (Dramatic)..1000
Sept. 2—The Hoodoo Hat (Comedy).....
Sept. 2—From Jerusalem to the Dead Sea (Scenic). .....
Sept. 4—Down Through the Ages (Drama)...1000
Sept. 6—The Loneliness of the Hills (Drama).1000
Sept. 7—The Darling of the C. S. A. (Drama).1000

LUBIN.

Aug. 19—The Hobo Club (Comedy).....
Aug. 19—Won at High Tide (Comedy).....
Aug. 21—The Convalescent (Drama).....1000
Aug. 22—The New Ranch Foreman (Drama)....1000
Aug. 23—Work In a United States Arsenal (Educational) .....
Aug. 23—A Water Fight (Comedy).....
Aug. 24—The Government Test (Drama).....1000
Aug. 26—The Deceivers (Com.-Dr.).....1062
Aug. 28—The Caretaker (Com.).....
Aug. 28—A Burnt Cork (Com.).....
Aug. 29—For the Love of a Girl (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—Pinned (Com.).....
Aug. 30—The Overworked Bookkeeper (Com.)..
Aug. 31—The Sheriff's Prisoner (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—A Substitution (Com.) 691
Sept. 2—His New Cane (Com.)..... 363
Sept. 4—The Bank Cashier (Drama).....1000
Sept. 5—The Smuggler (Comedy-Drama).....1000
Sept. 6—A Romance of the Coast (Drama)....1000
Sept. 7—Little Family Affair (Comedy).....1000

MELIES.

Aug. 1—The Will of Destiny (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 8—The Ranger's Girls (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 15—A Romance at Catalina (Dr.).....1000
August 22—The Moth and the Flame (Drama)..1000
Aug. 29—His Partner's Share (Drama).....1000
Sept 5—The Obsession (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 12—The Unworthy Son (Drama).....1000

ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

August 14—The Rivals (Drama).....1000
Aug.21—A Day In the German Navy (Naval).. 425
Aug. 21—Pulp Mills in the Province of Quebec (Industrial) 310
Aug. 21—Microscopical Curiosities (Edu.)..... 280
Aug. 28—The Golden Curl (Dr.).....1030
Sept. 4—An Eccentric Sportsman (Comedy).. 455
Sept. 4—From Lauterbrunnen to Murren, Switzerland (Scenic) 382
Sept. 4—Small Game at the Zoo (Educational) 165

PATHE.

July 31—Anona's Baptism (Drama).....
Aug. 1—In God's Care (Drama).....
Aug. 1—A Little Trip in the Colorado Mountains (Scenic) .....
Aug. 3—Memories (Drama) .....
Aug. 5—Pathe's Weekly, No. 32, 1912 (Top.)
Aug. 7—The Arrow Maker's Daughter (Dr.)..
Aug. 8—The Famous Scout to the Rescue (Dr.)
Aug. 10—Here and there in Oregon (Sc.).....
Aug. 10—Kittens (Juvenile).....
August 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 33—1912 (Top.)
August 14—Silver Wing's Two Suitors (Dr.)..
August 15—Cupid's Stolen Arrows (Com.).....
August 17—The Cactus County Lawyer (Dr.)..
Aug. 19—Pathe's Weekly No. 34 (Top.).....
Aug. 21—Jealousy on the Ranch (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—The Hand of Destiny (Dr.).....
Aug. 24—The $2,500 Bride (Dr.).....
Aug. 26—Pathe's Weekly, No. 35, 1912.....
Aug. 26—Fire at Sea (Special Release) (Dr.)..
Aug. 28—The Live Wire (Drama).....
Aug. 29—The Detective's Chance (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—The Armless Wonder (Acrobat.).....
Aug. 31—An Aeroplane Love Affair (Com.)....
Sept. 2—Pathe's Weekly No. 36, 1912.....
Sept. 4—Locked Out of Wedlock (Comedy)....
Sept. 5—The Penalty Paid (Drama).....
Sept. 7—Gee! My Pants! (Comedy).....

C. G. P. C.

July 30—The Martyrs (Drama).....
Aug. 2—The Lightning Paper Hanger (Com.)
Aug. 2—Havana, Its Streets, Buildings and Fortresses (Scenic) .....
Aug. 6—Death of Chevalier Albertini (Dr.)..
Aug. 9—The Burglar's Weird Reception (Com.)
Aug. 9—How a Letter Travels from the Great Lakes of Central Africa (Edu.)....
August 13—The Tyrolean Doll (Comedy).....
August 15—Some Inhabitants of Stagnant water (Educational) .....
August 16—A Love Story of Old Japan (Dr.)....
Aug. 20—His Windmill (Dr.) .....
Aug. 20—The Sedge Warbler and the Cuckoo (Ed.) .....
Aug. 23—The Queen's Pity (Dr.).....
Aug. 27—A Prince of Israel (Bib.).....
Aug. 30—The Musketeer's Love (Hist.-Dr.)....
Sept. 3—Beatrix d'Este (Drama).....
Sept. 6—Whiffles and the Magic Wand (Com.)
Sept. 6—The Bud, the Leaf and the Flower (Science). .....

SELIG.

July 29—The Three Valises (Drama).....1000
July 30—The Peculiar Nature of the White Man's Burden (Drama).....1000
Aug. 1—Officer Murray (Drama).....1000
Aug. 2—The Wreck of the Vega (Topical)..
Aug. 2—The Right Way and the Wrong Way (Educational) .....
Aug. 5—An Unexpected Fortune (Com.-Dr.)...1000
Aug. 6—The Man From Dragon Land (Dr.)...1000
Aug. 8—The Girl at the Cupola (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—The Boob (Com.-Dr.).....1000
August 12—A Messenger to Kearney (Drama)..1000
August 13—The Wayfarer (Drama).....1000
August 15—In the Tents of the Asra (Dr.)....1000
August 16—Two Gay Dogs (Comedy).....1000
Aug. 19—The Box Car Baby (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 20—The Cowboy's Mother (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—Betty Fools Dear Old Dad (Com.)....1000
Aug. 23—Land Sharks vs. Sea Dogs (Com.-Dr.)
Aug. 23—From Forest to Mills (Ed.).....
Aug. 26—The Laird's Daughter (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 27—The Whiskey Runners (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 29—The Little Indian Martyr (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 30—Just His Luck (Farce-Comedy).....
Aug. 30—Frenzied Finance (West.-Com.).....
Sept. 2—As the Fates Decree (Drama).....1000
Sept. 3—An Equine Hero (Drama).....1000
Sept. 5—Sergeant Byrne of the N. W. M. P. (Drama) 1000
Sept. 6—Circumstantial Evidence (Drama)....1000

VITAGRAPH.

Aug. 9—Wanted, a Grandmother (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 10—Suing Susan (Com.).....1000
August 12—Bunny and the Dogs (Comedy).... 300
August 12—Ingenuity (Drama)..... 700
August 13—The Heart of Esmeralda (Drama)..1000
August 14—Vultures and Doves (Drama)....1000
August 16—The Bogus Napoleon (Comedy)....1000
August 17—Two Battles (Drama).....1000
Aug. 19—Rip Van Winkle (Special 2 reel Dr.).2000
Aug. 19—Her Grandchild (Drama).....1000
Aug. 20—Lovesick Maidens of Cuddletown (Comedy) 1000
Aug. 21—The Ancient Bow (Drama).....1000
Aug. 23—Saving An Audience (Comedy).....1000
Aug. 24—The Party Dress (Drama)..... 614
Aug. 24—On Board Kaiser Wilhelm the Second (Educational) 388
Aug. 26—A Double Danger (Drama).....1000
Aug. 27—Flirt or Heroine (Drama).....1000
Aug. 28—Two Cinders (Com.-Dr.)..... 555
Aug. 28—Bumps (Comedy) 447
Aug. 30—Written In the Sands (Drama).....1000
Aug. 31—Bond of Music (Drama).....1000
Sept. 2—Tommy's Sister (Drama).....1000
Sept. 3—Coronets and Hearts (Drama).....1000
Sept. 4—Captain Barnacle's Legacy (Drama)..1000
Sept. 6—Bunny's Suicide (Comedy)..... 400
Sept. 6—She Wanted a Boarder (Comedy).... 600
Sept. 7—A Wasted Sacrifice (Drama).....1000

We wish to thank the Exhibitors for their visit to our Exhibit during the Chicago Convention; and for their many expressions of appreciation of our efforts to supply them with the best poster and song slide service obtainable.

AMERICAN SONG SLIDE & POSTER CO., 5th Floor First National Bank Bldg., CHICAGO

EXHIBITOR'S BUSINESS BOOSTERS!

HOW ABOUT YOUR ADVERTISING?

Realizing that advertising is the life blood of business building, does it not stand to reason that a good campaign of display will benefit your box office?

LET US TALK IT OVER. Have you seen our display of new special three sheets and six sheets? We carry stock enough to keep your front looking LIVE at all times.

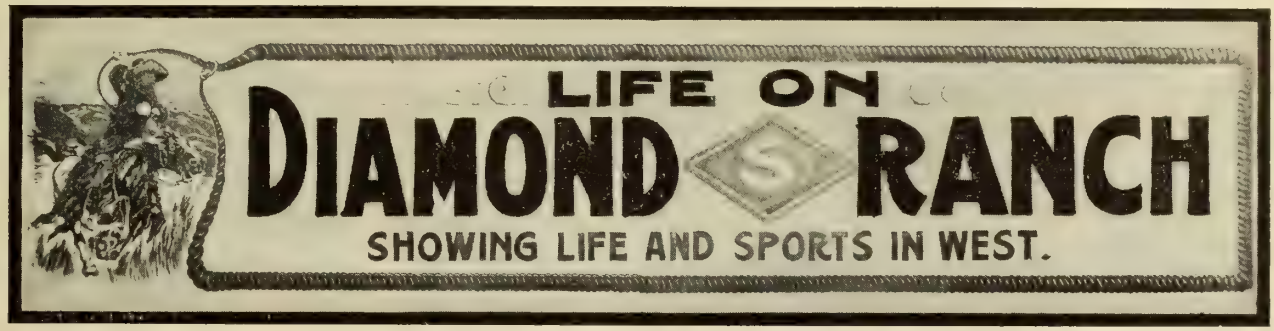

PHOTO-PLAY TICKET CHOPPER

Finish: Cabinet is of finest golden quartered oak, mission or mahogany, highly polished, and trimmings are of metal, finished in colored enamel, baked by special process, which retains its brilliancy, or if desired all metal parts heavily nickel plated. Glass is best polished French plate, quarter inch thick.

Size: 45 x 12 x 12 inches.
Weight (boxed) 100 lbs.

Price: $50.00

If It's Anything To Advertise A Motion Picture Show, We Have It

ANOTHER THING, IF WE HAVEN'T GOT IT WE WILL GET IT IF POSSIBLE. OUR SLOGAN IS "SERVICE."

BANNERS

Our Banners Are Works of Art. Lithographed in Four Colors. Printed on Heavy Muslin, 3 ft. wide by 12 ft. long.
PRICE $1.00 EACH.

MADE FOR ALL RELEASES, BOTH LICENSED AND INDEPENDENT.
GUESS WE HAVE A RIGHT TO BE PROUD OF OUR WORK.

America's Popular Photoplayers

Handsome Photographs 11 x 14 of the Leading Stars of the Film Firmament

MAURICE COSTELLO	MARY PICKFORD	ARTHUR JOHNSON
FLORENCE TURNER	G. M. ANDERSON	ALICE JOYCE
JOHN BUNNY	GENE GAUNTIER	MARSHALL P. WILDER
LILLIAN WALKER	CRANE WILBUR	MARY FULLER

Complete set of 12 for $2.00 Charges prepaid

Send Money Order or Bank Draft with Order. NO Personal Checks or C. O. D. The Latest Novelty in Motion Picturedom.
Every One an Established Favorite. The Largest Photographs of These Stars Ever Sold.

ORDER NOW SUPPLY LIMITED

Photo-Player One-Sheet Posters, 15c Each.
Photo-Player Post Cards, $4.00 per 1,000.

Sign, Show Cards, Banners, Posters, Heralds, Photos and Photo Frames, Banner, Posters and Three-Sheet Frames, Novelties, Announcement Slides, and all kind of display.

PHOTO PLAY ADVERTISING & SPECIALTY CO.

Main Offices: 121-123 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

BRANCH OFFICES: 1022 Superior Ave., Cleveland, O. 26 W. Naghten St., Columbus, O. Equity Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

LIGHTS and SHADOWS of CHINATOWN

3000 Feet or THE YELLOW PERIL 3000 Feet

All Territory Open to State Right Buyers Excepting Greater New York, Northern Ohio, Pennsylvania, Oregon, Idaho, New Jersey and Delaware

Coming! Society Life in Paris

2000 FEET

New York Film Co.
12 Union Square New York

IMPORTANT NEWS! EXHIBITORS!
Send Us Your Name
CRYSTAL FILM COMPANY
430 Wendover Ave., New York City

EXCLUSIVE SELECTED FEATURES
For Rent or Sale at Reduced Prices.
Federal Feature Film Supply Co.,
Fourth Floor, Hartford Bldg., Chicago.

USE BRADY'S LICENSED POSTER
124 EAST 14th STREET, N.Y.

Changeable Illuminated PROGRAM SIGN
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE
ZENITH MFG. CO.
Box 252 Cincinnati, Ohio

ADVERTISING WELL PLACED IS A GOOD INVESTMENT
FOR PROOF, TRY THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

"The House of a Thousand Features"
Big stocks of exclusive two and three-reel features; big advertising; reasonable prices.
IMPERIAL FEATURE FILM CO.
121 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

BRUNSWIC BROS.
NEW YORK HARMONY BOYS.
ALWAYS BUSY THERE'S A REASON
Now Singing—Savoy Theater, Anniston, Ala.
September 2d, and 3 Weeks. American Theater, Columbus, Ga.
IT'S WORTH INVESTIGATING

WE LEAD THEM ALL IN MAKING MOTION PICTURES TO ORDER. ANYWHERE OR ANY TIME. 10 CENTS PER FOOT. All Work Guaranteed.
SPECIAL EVENT FILM MFG. CO.,
248 West 35th St. New York City.

36 Licensed Posters
A WEEK FOR $2.00
EXHIBITORS ADVERTISING CO.
Hobbs Bldg. Chicago

THE TOURNAMENT FILM CO.
TOLEDO, OHIO.
Owners of the following feature films:
1911 Cheyenne Cowboy and Indian Frontier Celebration.
Fall Round-Up on the Y-6 Ranch.
State Rights for These Films for Sale.
Bookings Can Be Made by Writing Us.

SONG SLIDES
NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO.
23 N. Ninth Street Phila., Pa.
WRECK OF THE TITANIC
20 Colored Slides . $ 8.00
30 Colored Slides . $12.00
Cash with order
SONG SLIDES

For Sale
MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS.
I am prepared to accept for practically immediate delivery, cash orders for standard types of English motion picture cameras. Attractive prices and catalogues on application.
R. S. KENNEDY,
640 Broadway - New York, N. Y.

Headquarters for
ASBESTOS
CURTAINS and PICTURE BOOTHS
SEND FOR BOOKLET
C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co.
39 Pearl St., Boston, Mass.

WATCH FOR OUR NEW LIST TO BE ANNOUNCED SOON
ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO.,
538 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

CHANGE to POWER'S 6-A.
If you have the regular Power's 6 machine, exchange equipments with us and get the new 6-A machine at a small expense. We furnish Edison type "B" machines with Powers No. 6-A equipment at $225.00. Old Edison machines rebuilt and fitted with outside shutters for only $30. Work guaranteed.
STELZER BROTHERS, Lincoln, Ill.

FILMS FOR SALE
$2.50 per reel up.
Biggest bargains in the United States.
Send for Catalogue.
ACME FILM CO.
130 WEST 37th ST. NEW YORK

JUST off the Press—our new general catalogue, a copy sent you for the asking—Write to-day.
We want your slide business. Our slide circular illustrates all our stock announcement and advertising slides and prices on slides to order. Our Calcium Gas service is unexcelled. Get our terms. Prompt and courteous treatment assured. All orders filled same day as received.
ERKER'S 606 OLIVE STREET, SAINT LOUIS, MO.

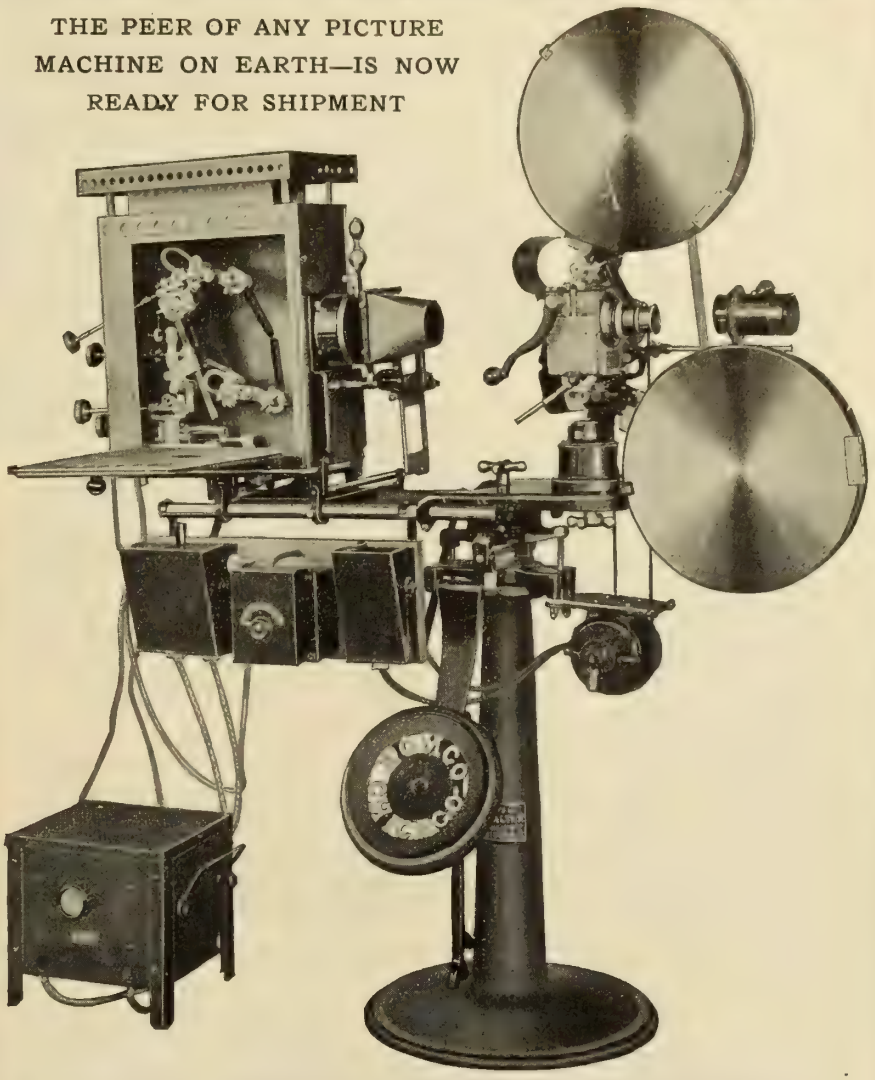
ZIGOMAR has escaped again!
AND WILL DASH THROUGH
Three Thrilling Reels of New Pictures
TO BE RELEASED SOON BY
THE F. & E. FILM CO., Cleveland, Ohio

"EVERYONE'S USING"
Our Developing System

A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.
11 John Street, New York

THE 1913 MODEL MOTIOGRAPH

THE PEER OF ANY PICTURE MACHINE ON EARTH—IS NOW READY FOR SHIPMENT



PRICES—COMPLETE AND PACKED FOR SHIPMENT:
$250.00 without motor, switchboard or seat.
$285.00 with motor (any voltage), switchboard and seat.
$300.00 special Massachusetts, with motor, switchboard and seat.

THE PRICE HAS GONE UP FOR THREE REASONS:
1st: Because of the advance in Material and Labor Cost.
2nd: Because we furnish a complete metal equipment.
3rd: Because the introduction of the Motiograph is complete.

OUR GUARANTEE

FREE UPKEEP FOR ONE YEAR COVERING PARTS of the 1913 model Motiograph mechanism, THAT MAY BECOME WORN OUT IN SERVICE, or WHICH MAY SHOW DEFECT IN MATERIAL OR WORKMANSHIP, with the understanding that the part be sent to us, charges prepaid, for examination.

Manufactured by THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY
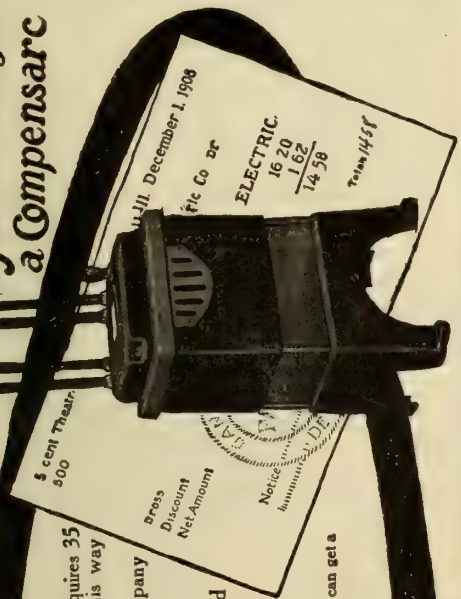
564-572 W. Randolph Street CHICAGO, ILL.
For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere

After he bought a Compensarc



Which Would YOU Rather Pay?

This man is on a 220 volt circuit and as his moving picture lamp only requires 35 volts at the arc, he formerly used a rheostat to reduce the voltage. In this way he paid for about 3 times as much "juice" as he actually needed.

Then he figured he needed this money more than the Lighting Company and he bought a

FORT WAYNE COMPENSARC

Now he gets a clearer, whiter, more intense unflickering light and his bills are only about 1/3 what they were before. The machine has three adjustments and the circuit can not break for even an instant in passing from one to another. No delays, no bother, no waste, no danger, no heat.

Send today for our 22 page booklet "Compensarc vs. Rheostat." It tells you how you can get a much better light at 1/3 your present cost.

Fort Wayne Electric Works, Fort Wayne, Ind. of General Electric Company—1403 Broadway

When he used a Rheostat

THE ENTERPRISE (Portable) CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Price, with carrying case, $35.00.

Is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the

ONLY SATISFACTORY PORTABLE OUTFIT

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valve to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most satisfactory for the production of oxygen gas.

For Sale by Dealers Everywhere.

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS 564-572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

MANUFACTURERS!

We are sending two operators this month to make a complete tour of the world. They will visit Honolulu, Japan, Manila, China, Java, Singapore, Penang, Burma, Siam, India, Ceylon, Egypt, South and Central America, South and East Africa, Australia, New Zealand and many other less known countries. We can offer for sale any quantity of film depicting scenes and life in foreign lands. Many exclusive features. Can begin to supply 15th October and regularly weekly thereafter. Highest class of photography. Attractive rates. Write or wire us your proposition for developed or undeveloped negatives.

The Globe Motion Picture and Advt. Co., Inc.
Majestic Theater Bldg.
Santa Monica, Cal.

WE RENT AND SELL
TWO AND THREE REEL REAL FEATURE ATTRACTIONS
SEND FOR LIST
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE
405 Schiller Bldg. Chicago

20,000 roll tickets, $1.20; 50 ⅝ cored carbons, $1.15; stereopticon objectives, 50c to $3.00; stereopticons, $15; rheostats, $3 to $5; arc lamps, $1.75, $2 and $2.25; condensers, 50c; calcium jets, $2.80; acetylene jets, $2.50; gas generators, $3.50; moving picture objectives, $2.75; jackets, $2. List of moving picture repair parts at fair prices. Sprocket wheels, 85c; films 1c a foot. Catalogue. All makes of moving picture machines repaired at reasonable prices. L. HETZ, 302 East 23rd St., New York City

IT PAYS TO GET THE BEST FILMS.
Bradenburg's World Renowned
Feature Films for Sale or Rent

Titles.	Reels.	Rental Price.	Selling Price.
The Outcast (Asta Nielsen)	3	$15	$275
Great Moment (Asta Nielsen)	4	15	175
Gypsy Blood (Asta Nielsen)	3	15	250
An Old Man's Darling (Asta Nielsen)	3	15	100
The Traitress (Asta Nielsen)	3	15	200
Peep Behind the Scenes (Asta Nielsen)	4	15	200
Red Rose of the Apache	3	15	175
Four Dare Devils	3	10	125
Nursing a Viper	3	15	200
Flower of the Mormon City (western)	3	15	250
The Trap	2	10	250
Written in Blood	3	15	180
Course of True Love (A. Nielsen)	3	15	180
Inventor's Secret	2	10	150
Poison of Humanity	2	10	100
Lady of Lourdes (Religious)	3	15	150
Fisherman's Sweetheart, or Saved From the Sea	3	15	200
Great Mine Disaster	2	10	100
Lt. Rose and Hidden Treasure (Naval)	2	10	100
Revenge	3	15	125
Mystery of the Banker's Safe	2	10	150
The Weed	2	10	150
Cripple Creek (Reliance)	2	5	120
Waneta's Sacrifice (Western)	2	5	120
A Merry Night	2	10	100
A Woman's Honor	3	15	250
Might of Gold (A. Nielsen)	4	15	180
Siege of Calais	2	10	75
White Slave	2	10	125
Macbeth	2	6	50
Fall of Troy	2	5	50
Golden Wedding	2	5	75
Germany's Glorious Days	2	8	50
Martin Luther	2	8	100
Smuggler's Fate	2	10	100
Mysterious Automobile	3	15	240
A Woman's Power	3	15	180
Life's Game of Dice	3	15	180
Bells of Notre Dame	2	10	100
Love's Combat	4	20	240

It will be in the interest of your own business if you will write for a list of our

IMPORTED AND ORIGINAL FILMS
Exclusive Program Guaranteed
Independent Film Exchange
G. W. BRADENBURG
233 N. Eighth St. Philadelphia, Pa.

Direction J. D. Williams Management Wm. H. Bell
INTERNATIONAL PICTURES
Controlled by
The Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Company, Ltd
Capital, £200,000.

The World's largest dealers in Motion Picture Films, machines and accessories. We are on the market for everything Biographic. No Moving Picture Film and equipment proposition too large for consideration. Our Specialty—Exclusive Australasian Rights on the best long feature subjects produced, and the latest successful supply novelties.

PRINCIPAL EXCHANGES.
610 George Street, Syndey, New South Wales. Melbourne, Brisbane, Perth and Wellington, New Zealand.

Send samples and communications to our purchasing offices as follows—J. A. Hayden, Dewar House, 11 Haymarket, London, England. Louis M. Noto, 146 W. 23rd Street, New York City.
IMPORTANT:—When writing us direct remember that letters with insufficient postage are delayed.

2nd Hand Motiograph
Power 5, head for sale cheap
Send for list of Bargains
Chicago Projecting Co.
107 N. Dearborn St.

THUNDERSTRUCK
Licensed exhibitors who hadn't seen Universal films before were simply thunderstruck at the superfine quality of "Universals" exhibited at the Chicago convention. That's the kind of program all Laemmle customers are getting!!!!! Do you wonder that the Laemmle Film Service offices are enjoying the greatest prosperity of their history?

CARL LAEMMLE
PRESIDENT
The Laemmle Film Service
204 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.
Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1312 Farnum St., Omaha, Neb.
421 Walnut St., Des Moines, Iowa.

The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World.

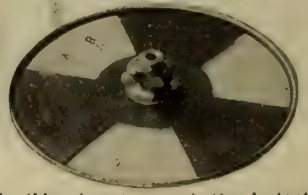
McINTIRE & RICHTER
23 East 14th Street
New York
Have for sale
300 slightly used Films at $12.50 to $15.00.
50 cold copies, $25.00.
Write for list.
2, 3 & 4-Reel Feature Films for Rent.

HOW CAN I GET BETTER PICTURES?
Use a Surehold Shutter Setter



Just the thing to set your shutter instantly and accurately, giving you a sharp, clear picture. Anyone can use it. Made to fit any outside shutter. All those who have bought one say they would not part with it for any price. Send for circular, or, better still, send $5.00 and we will send you one prepaid by return mail. Money back if not satisfied. Price, $5.00.
SUREHOLD SHUTTER SETTER CO.,
P. O. Box 428, Bellingham, Wash.

America's Feature Film Co.
406-7-8 Schiller Building, Chicago

We buy, sell and exchange second-hand FILMS and MOVING PICTURE MACHINES.
WESTERN FILM BROKERS
538 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

SCENARIO WRITERS!
If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made saleable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism for a fee of only $2.

Exhibitors!
Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

Epes Winthrop Sargent
Box 70, Madison Square Station
New York City

The Finest Scene in the
Best Film Ever Produced
Can be Vastly Improved

WITH

BIO RECOGNIZED BIO CARBONS BRAND STANDARD MILD CARBONS

BECAUSE

They are the only carbons that give a fine white, steady, long, flickerless light
If you expect the best results give your operator what he wants

BIO CARBONS

GET THEM FROM

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

NEW YORK
165 Greenwich Street

MILWAUKEE
114 Huron Street

SAN FRANCISCO
19 Sutter Street

AND ALL LIVE FILM EXCHANGES AND SUPPLY DEALERS

Von Duprin Self-Releasing Fire Exit Latches

"Made On Honor."

Absolutely Reliable. Safeguard Against Panic Disasters.

Approved by New York Board of Underwriters. City of New York Bureau of Buildings.

Applied on thousands of Buildings in more than 500 Cities in the U. S. A. and Canada.

Send for Catalogue No. 10 D.

VONNEGUT HARDWARE CO.,
General Distributors,
Indianapolis, Ind., U.S.A.

Can you afford to be without them?

Safe Exit is a Universal Demand.

Use the Real

Projector Carbon "Biograph"

Brand

L. E. Frorup & Co.
232 Greenwich St., New York City

Subscribers, Please Note

BINDERS

For each three months' volume of the

Moving Picture World

Can be furnished as follows, express charges additional:
75c each.
$2.60 for four.
$7.25 per doz.
By prepaid mail
$1.00 each.
Simple and Secure
Single Copies easily removed

Moving Picture World
125 East 23d Street
New York City

Exclusive Features!

The Royal Feature Film Company

ONE RELEASE EACH WEEK
THE BEST THAT MONEY CAN BUY

BLAZING THE TRAIL	Bison,	2 reels
POST TELEGRAPHER	Bison,	2 "
THE CRISIS	Bison,	2 "
LIEUTENANT'S LAST FIGHT	Bison,	2 "
DEAD MAN'S CHILD	Gt. Northern,	3 "
THE OUTCAST	Bison,	2 "
ST. GEORGE AND THE DRAGON	Milano,	3 "
MYSTERIES OF SOULS	Gt. Northern,	3 "
WRECK OF THE AURORA	World's Best,	3 "
LAST OF THE FRONTIGNACS	Gt. Northern,	3 "
VEILED INNOCENCE	Ambrosio,	3 "

Every One a Box Office Winner

Watch for future releases and get busy quick before your competitor beats you to it. You will need each one of them at least two days. One, three, six, eight sheets; heralds, booklets, banners, etc.

SPECIAL NOTICE

We have just secured state rights for Ohio and West Virginia on "Last Stand of the Dalton Boys at Coffeyville, Kansas." Book it quick and get your S.R.O. sign ready.

NOTHING BUT { STATE RIGHT FEATURES the Best To Be Had } RELEASED BY US

302 Schultz Bldg., High and Hickory Sts., Columbus, O.

THE Eye Comfort System
OF
Indirect Illumination

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theaters a month.
This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

National X-Ray Reflector Co.,
227 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago.
Distance, Screen to Rear of Auditorium.....
Ceiling Height .....
Width of House.....
Name .....

THE PHILOGRAPH FILM BUREAU, Ltd.
3, Macclesfield Street
London, W.

Cables "Philograph London" A. B. C. Code 5th ed. used.

Exporters of 2 x 3 Reel Feature Films by all leading European makers. Prices from 2 to 4 (two to four) Cents per foot.
Terms: Deposit with order & balance C. O. D.
Cable titles of Films required. We have them. Don't wait until the Fall.

HERE IS WORD FROM THE WEST

ANSONIA AMUSEMENT CO.,
Incorporated,
62 and 64 West Park Street.

Philip Levy, Manager

Butte, Montana, Aug., 2nd, 1912

Inventors Specialty Mfg. Co.,
620 Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

Enclosed please find draft for one hundred and fifty dollars in payment for your most beautiful screen. It is the making of our house and all the moving picture exhibitors in the country have come to our place and rave over the beautiful pictures that they see on our "Perfection Concave Screen."

At any time that anyone that does not know what this screen is and wants any information regarding it, refer them to me and I will gladly tell them what a beautiful screen you are selling. Your screen has made a hit with the public here. We are only in business one week but are now playing to capacity, not on account of our ability or beautiful house, but simply because your screen is restful to the eye and a picture looks like it was a block away from the seat the spectator is occupying.

Wishing you success and prosperity, we remain,

Yours respectfully,

ANSONIA AMUSEMENT CO.,
Philip Levy, Manager.

This large screen is pulled into the flies when vaudeville is shown.

The satisfactory results are the same whether made to be used stationary or for fly work. We can please you as well as we have all the others if you give us the chance.

INVENTORS SPECIALTY MFG. CO.

620 Ashland Block CHICAGO

I Equip Theatres Completely

And the Increased Demand for My Services Has Forced Me to Add an Architectural Department to My Business. I am Prepared to Furnish Detailed Building Plans and Specifications for Your New Theatre.

The "Hallberg Electric Economizers" for all circuits, made only by Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," save you the most money on your electric bills and produce the best light possible on your screen.

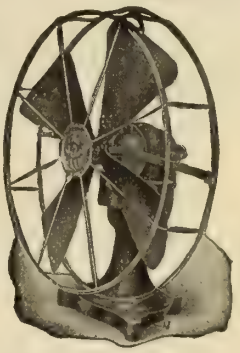
For Sale--At A Bargain--Slightly Used Machines

1 No. 1A Motiograph, 1911 Model, first-class condition $135
1 No. 5 Powers, remodeled head, balance of machine new No. 6 Equipment..... 125
1 No. 5 Powers complete in good running order 100
1 Edison Exhibition Model One-Pin Movement, with fire shutter, first-class condition..... 85
1 Powers No. 6 in good running order, complete with lenses 100
Second-Hand Current Savers for 110 volts, 60 cycles, of all makes but Hallberg (which I have replaced with my Standard Hallberg Economizers) .....$20 and up.

Any information to help you in your difficulties along the above lines cheerfully furnished.

I am jobber of ALL MAKES of Moving Picture Machines

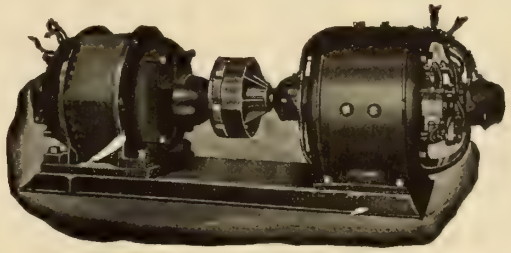
Through my Exchange Department I am prepared to make liberal allowance for your old machine in part payment on purchase price of new M. P. machine of any make.



FANS

Ventilating and Exhaust
$7.50 and up

Separate catalogues of different makes of machines, supplies and economizers furnished free upon request, BUT Hallberg's Big Complete Catalogue costs you 25c.



I carry the Largest Complete Stock of
Electra Pink Label Carbons

J. H. HALLBERG
36 E. 23rd St. New York City

Make Your Own Films of Special Events!

Buy the Junior Professional Film making outfit comprising the World's Greatest Camera, Printer and developing outfit—you would not hesitate for a minute if you would know how good it is—or—buy the camera only and let me do the finishing work—better films as what some manufacturers turn out. Everything of supreme quality for the projecting room and the laboratory. Mirror Vitae Projector, the best machine in the world from which all others have been duped—with single arc slide dissolvers, something others cannot offer you, special lenses for any size picture—film stock, slides, repairing catalogues to your service.

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER,
219 Second Ave., near 14th St., New York.

ROSE'S RING SPROCKET

For Top or Bottom

Mr. F. H. Richardson in M. P. World of May 11, 1912, says: "I certainly can vouch for the excellence of the workmanship put into it. The sprocket is mechanically well made, and I see no reason in the world why it should not work perfectly. The removal and insertion of the tooth ring is a very simple operation indeed."

COMPLETE SPROCKET $2.50
Extra Rings per pair $1.00. Give make of machine
WRITE FOR CATALOG
J. E. BOYLE, DISTRIBUTER
530 MAIN STREET DUBUQUE, IOWA

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theater Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Write for Catalog.

Don't fail to visit our complete New York showroom, 101-103 4th Ave.

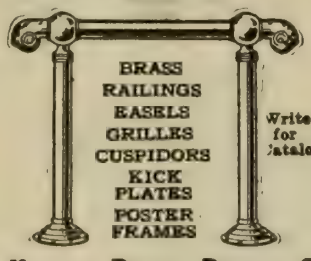
THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-721 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O,
Established 1882

The Simpson Solar Screen

Is the best Daylight Screen in existence. Fully covered by U. S. Patent No. 980,161. Don't buy imitations.

ALFRED L. SIMPSON, Inc.
No. 113 W. 132nd St., New York City

McKENNA



McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
PITTSBURGH

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES.

Powers No. 5, $115. Edison Exhibition, $125. Lubin 1909 Nickel Plated Head, as NEW, $125. Machines Repaired. Parts for all Machines. Supplies of all kinds. Send for Catalogues and Lists. Machines Wanted.

HARBACH & CO.
809 Filbert St., Philadelphia.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
The A. H. Andrews Co.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office, 1165 Broadway. Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, 728 Mission St.

Get Our Prices Before You Buy

The Wisconsin Seating Company
New London, Wisconsin, U. S. A.

OPERA CHAIRS

GEO. W. BENNETT
34-36 E. 3rd Street
CINCINNATI, OHIO.

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use.

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE Co., Grand Rapids, Mich
New York: 150 5th Ave. Pittsburgh: 318 Bissel Blk. Philadelphia: 610 Flanders Bldg.

THEATRE SEATING—Send for Moving Picture Chair Cat. "V4." Upholstered Chair Cat. "V5."
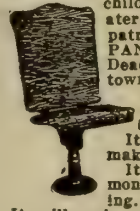
AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY
Chicago New York Boston Philadelphia

OH! MR. EXHIBITOR!!



Think of the motherless, the fatherless, and the childless homes as the result of theater panics. Protect the lives of your patrons by installing our "ANTI PANIC" THEATER CHAIR. 24 Dead at Cannonsburg, 176 at Boyertown, 575 at Iroquis Theater, Chicago. Make these horrors impossible. Our chair is a friend to the Public.

It advertises your theater and makes your business grow.

It is a space-saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.

It will make your theater all aisles. It is the only sanitary chair. It is the world's greatest theater chair, perfected to the highest degree. Write to-day for Circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio, U.S.A.

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing

Why don't you send it to us?

We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.

We buy second hand machines.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO., 176 N. State St., Bet. Lake & Randolph Chicago, Ill.

For a short time only

$12.00 ACTIONS, LAVEZZI'S - - - - $9.75
For Power's 5, and Edison One Pin Machines
$11.50 REPAIR KIT - - - - - - - $10.00
$4.00 SHUTTERS ABOVE MACHINES - - $3.75
Write for No. 3, 1912 Catalogue.

Lavezzi Machine Works, 2940 Herndon St., Chicago, Ill.

G.MÉLIÈS

"FORSAKEN"

THE OBSESSION

Lee surreptitiously breaks his engagement with Dorothy, whose deepest and first affections he had been honored with, and marries Jesse. The shock leads Dorothy to attempt to end her life, and, failing in this, to become a nun. Lee is remorseful from the day of his marriage and even on his honeymoon is obsessed by the presence of her whom he had wronged, and haunted by his conscience he becomes insane, and not till Dorothy is called as nurse and gives complete forgiveness is reason restored and happiness resumed.

G. MELIES, 204 EAST 38th St., NEW YORK CITY

Approx. Length, 1000 ft. 9-5-12.

SATISFACTION

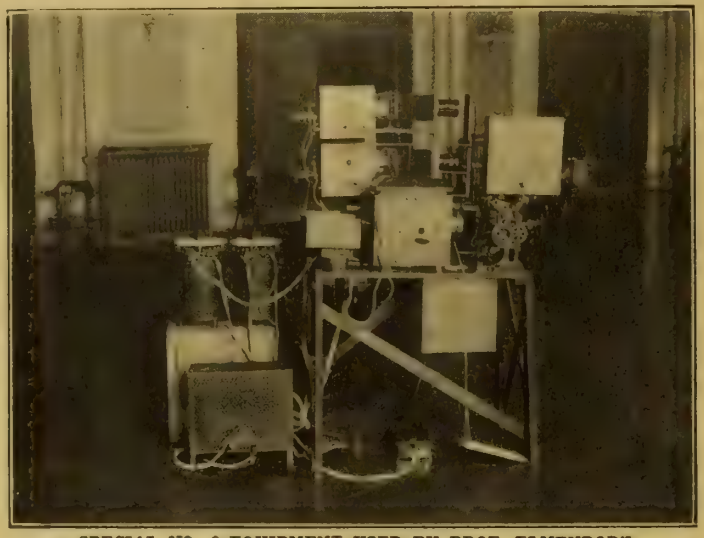
always obtained with a

Power's Cameragraph

¶ A good workman is known by his tools. So, with the Lecturer. He must utilize the best medium wherewith to interest and please his audience.

¶ In no line is this more evident than in the moving picture field, where the pictures projected must be clear, steady and without flicker.

¶ The name of Prof. Dwight L. Elmendorf stands for perfection in moving pictures; and the subjoined letter speaks for itself. It partially reveals why POWER'S is the favorite machine with every prominent lecturer.



SPECIAL NO. 6 EQUIPMENT USED BY PROF. ELMENDORF

July 1st, 1912.

Nicholas Power Company,
90 Gold Street,
New York City.

Gentlemen:—Replying to your recent inquiry am glad to say that your new No. 6 model which we installed last season has given us entire satisfaction; it runs perfectly and produces an absolutely flickerless picture, far surpassing any machine I have ever seen; and, as you are aware, I have been constantly in the work of making and projecting moving pictures ever since the business began.

Yours sincerely,
Signed. F. H. White,
Operator for D. L. Elmendorf.

¶ Our newest equipment, No. 6A, retains the mechanism of the No. 6, to which are added many vital improvements.

¶ POWER'S ALWAYS SATISFIES. Now, better than ever. Write for catalogue G, giving full details.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

90 GOLD STREET NEW YORK CITY

FOR FIFTEEN YEARS THE LEADING MAKERS OF MOVING PICTURE MACHINES.

Vol. 13. No. 10 September 7, 1912 Price. 10c.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "Human Hearts" (Imp).

125 East 23rd Street New York—Chicago 169 W. Washington St.

"FEATURES ALL!"

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

"FEATURES ALL!"

UNDINE

IN TWO REELS—TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 24

A De Luxe Adaptation of the Famous Riverside Classic

THANHOUSER PERFECT PUBLICITY FEATURE

PERFECT PUBLICITY — Two Kinds of One-Sheets and a Three-Sheet at YOUR EXCHANGE. Illustrated Heralds from HENNEGAN & CO., CINCINNATI, OHIO. Cuts for Newspapers and Circulars (2-column), 40 cents apiece from STANDARD ENG. CO., 560 7th AVENUE, N. Y. CITY. Slides 30 cents apiece from NOVELTY SLIDE COMPANY, 20 E. 14th ST., N. Y. CITY

RELEASED SUNDAY, SEPT. 8

"Don't Pinch My Pup"

This was the ultimatum that a little newsie issued to the police department. He had learned that they would "pinch" his pup under the new dog license laws, and he sent them his defiance. They laughed at it—but made him glad that he sent it.

RELEASED TUESDAY, SEPT. 10

A Star Reborn

A great Shakespearian actor gives a stage-struck girl a chance, when all had rebuffed her. She "makes good" and is finally won from the stage by a young millionaire. Years after, she discovers that Shakespearian plays are passé, and the actor who had befriended her is penniless. She and her husband, backed by their wealth, rescue him from his plight and soon he is a-starring again.

RELEASED FRIDAY, SEPT. 13

The Birth of the Lotus Blossom

THE FIRST STORY IN OUR

JAPANESE SERIES

Produced by our special Japanese Stock Company, headed by Miss Taku Takagi

Real Depictions of Real Japanese Life, by Real Japanese Photoplayers

THE FINEST NOVELTY EVER OFFERED THE PHOTOFAN

Start the Season Right by Featuring these Features to your Patrons

REMEMBER, JAPANESE PLAYS WILL BE THE RAGE ON BROADWAY THIS FALL!

A Really "Exclusive" Proposition—No Other Film Maker has a Japanese Producing Company

BOOKED THIS YET?

The Capture of New York

The Story of the Big War Game, With 20,000 Fighting Men

(ONE REEL, SUN., SEPT. 1)

BOOKED THIS YET?

Lucile

The Picture That "Stopped the Show" at the Film Exhibit, Orchestra Hall, Chicago Convention, Moving Picture Exhibitors League of America

(THREE REELS, AUG. 27 and 30)

GETTING 3 3 A WEEK?

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

Film Supply Company, Agents for U. S. and Canada

FOUR-A-WEEK ESSANAY

? ? ?

A WESTERN "AMERICANS" THREE-A-WEEK

Only once in a great while do you find the theater patron who does not like the essentially Western picture. There's a certain hypnotism, never failing, in the swift ride of a troop of cowboys down a winding mountain road—a breath of the big Western out-of-doors—a "closer to nature" feeling very delightful to the tired worker and the youthful enthusiast.

You can't fail in the selection of Western subjects. Insist upon getting them, but don't forget to ask for the products of a company skilled in producing the uttermost in Western subjects — demand "Americans" and you will get the known established brand of reputable manufacture.

"The Stranger at Coyote"

(Release Thursday, Sept. 5, 1912.)

How the coyote bully met his just deserts at the hands of a husky stranger. A "Western" replete with adventure, strong situations and superb acting.

"Vengeance That Failed"

(Release Wednesday, Sept. 11, 1912.)

Distinctly "Western." A drama of genuine heart-appeal and subtle power. One of the kind your patrons clamor for —backgrounds of riotous beauty and superb photography.

"The Dawn of Passion"

(Release Monday, Sept. 9, 1912.)

A Mystic subject of extraordinary power—how the wandering cowpunchers found themselves in a miniature Garden of Eden with results quite similar to those that followed the partaking of forbidden fruit. A drama of subtle power, of original plot, backed by superfine photography and splendid pantomime.

COMING!

Two Giant 2-Reel Subjects. Both Historical

(Release Thursday, September 12, 1912)

"Geronimo's Last Raid"

A magnificent two-reel historical subject of the out-of-the-ordinary kind. You remember Geronimo—the famous Indian chief, whose death a few years ago removed a constant source of trouble to southwestern settlers and army posts on the border.

A delightful love story winds its way through beautiful settings—a story of love and intrigue between two post officers and the Major's daughter. Beautiful battle scenes where close to 300 Indians and soldiers participate. Altogether the exception in motion pictures—a subject you, picture-tired, will find inspiration in.

"The Story of Starved Rock"

In Two Reels. A magnificent pageant—a spectacular giant, made on the very ground. A large company of "Flying A" players, by permission of the State of Illinois, encamped at Starved Rock while the pictures were being made.

This gorgeous costume subject covers the history of the famous Rock, showing the discovery by Father Marquette, the later journey of La Salle and Tonty and the mighty battle from which the Rock obtained its name. Watch for future announcements.

American Film Manufacturing Company

5th FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK, CHICAGO

SPECTACULAR AND CONVINCING DETECTIVE PLAY

DUBLIN DAN

THREE REELS

A tense story dealing with an organized gang of clever counterfeiters. A careful analysis is made of the psychology of the criminal mind, portraying the kind of criminal who commits a wrong without a real motive.

FEATURING THE RETURN OF

BARNEY GILMORE

The widely known Irish and American player. A popular idol for years. The matinée girl's pet. Supported by our all-star cast.

COPYRIGHTS WELL PROTECTED

STATE RIGHTS SOLD ONLY

THROUGH FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA.

Unusual Abundance of Advertising Matter

REGULAR WEEKLY FEATURES

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 11th, 1912

TREASURES ON THE WING

A child plays an April Fool trick on her mother. She takes the money and other valuables from her mother's purse, places them under the inner sole of her father's discarded shoes and puts a note in the purse saying "April Fool." A burglar comes that night, steals the purse and when he arrives in his den he sees the joke is on him. A complication arises that almost ends in the break-up of a quiet household. A comedy with a new twist.

RELEASED FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13th, 1912

THE SOUL OF THE VIOLIN

A pathetic story of the reunion of a couple after the wife leaves her blind husband. The wife realizes that riches and fine clothes are not always synonymous with happiness. An original story which touches the heart strings.

Solax Company

FORT LEE, NEW JERSEY

A Very Important Announcement From the House of

GAUMONT

FLUSHING, NEW YORK

Which Will Interest and Delight All Exhibitors and Exchange Men

Beginning SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, we have decided to issue our third regular release, not including the GAUMONT WEEKLY, which in reality makes four GAUMONTS per week. This new release will be put out every SATURDAY. Remember, this release, as well as all our other productions, will be fully protected by copyright, and will be obtainable from any Film Supply Company of America exchange

Saturday the New Release Day

Gaumont

3

GAUMONT RELEASES

Per Week

Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday

Also the

GAUMONT WEEKLY

A DISTINCT INNOVATION

3

Saturday the New Release Day

Gaumont

This new Saturday release will always be a split reel, the first part consisting of some great and important topical event of the same week as issued, with a scientific, educational, industrial, or scenic tailpiece.

Mr. Exhibitor—The Gaumont Co. offers you the Gaumont Weekly and three regular releases as follows:

Tuesday Thursday Saturday

Start your order for this new Saturday Gaumont release at once.

Flushing GAUMONT CO. New York

UNIVERSAL WINS THREE MORE VICTORIES!

VICTORY No. 1 The California courts have issued a most sweeping injunction protecting the UNIVERSAL COMPANY'S rights to the famous BISON films.

VICTORY No. 2 Hereafter the celebrated GREAT NORTHERN FEATURE FILMS will be a regular part of that glorious UNIVERSAL Program!

VICTORY No. 3 Hereafter the masterly AMBROSIO films will be a regular part of that glorious UNIVERSAL Program!

The stampede is on! The quality and strength of that UNIVERSAL Program is showing itself in a hundred ways. It is a triumph for decency, square treatment and clean, honest methods. More reason than ever why you should constantly

"DEMAND THAT UNIVERSAL PROGRAM"

IT'S ALMOST HERE! A Big BISON Release that will set you and your patrons wild with excitement and delight, entitled

"The Massacre of the Santa Fe Trail" Released September 21st

WATCH FOR THE RELEASE DATES ON THESE MARVELOUS FEATURES

"HUMAN HEARTS" With King Baggot. Imp. Two Reels. September 12th

"ACROBAT AND THE SERPENT" Three Reels

"EVA" Two Reels

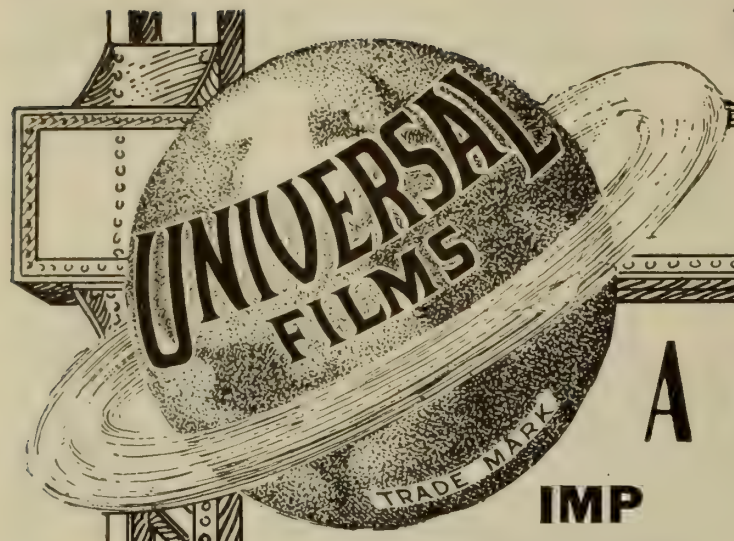
"THE GREAT CIRCUS ATTRACTION" Three Reels

"THE BLACK CHANCELLOR" Three Reels

"LEAH THE FORSAKEN" Imp Three Reels

EVERY ONE OF THEM A GREAT BIG STUPENDOUS PRODUCTION. ARE YOU GETTING THE UNIVERSAL WEEKLY?

Universal Film Manufacturing Company, 1 Union Square New York, N.Y.



Week of Sept. 2nd

"DEMAND THAT A Tower of Strength

IMP

"THE LOVE TEST."
Monday, September 2nd.

When Margaret left the village she little expected that she would soon become the subject of admiration of both her employer and his contemptible clerk. When she accepted the loan she did not realize the immorality which pervaded the system of the clerk. To rid herself of his vile associations she forged a check. Of course when the employer found out they were both discharged. But the employer learned the truth and he wooed and wed her. A pretty story, a very superior company and effective staging.

"TARES OF THE WHEAT."
Thursday, September 5th.

They were brothers and the friend was a mutual one. The one brother was honest and thrifty, the other the "tare of the wheat." When the brother stole his friend's valuables the honest one returned the spoils, but in doing it he was accused of the theft. He willingly sacrificed himself that the brother might have "his chance." Cleverly portrayed and produced.

"QUEENIE AND THE CANNIBAL."
"LEM'S HOT CHOCOLATE."
Saturday, September 7th (Split).

Ha-Ha. Ho-Ho. Well, I never did see two such funny comedies before. Many ideas have been injected into moving picture stories to create a laugh, but here are two you never dreamed of and they are funnier than any Sunday Supplement Comic Sheet that you ever saw. You'll scream with delight. Get 'em and let the crowds laugh with you.

REX

"FROM THE WILD."
Thursday, September 5th.

Simply remarkable how they can go on making pictures that hit the 100 per cent. mark. Here's a brand new idea that has a "punch" to it that is real. No picture ever presented before has such a novel theme. No production ever received such careful treatment and no more brilliant company ever engaged to enact it.

"THE GHOST OF A BARGAIN."
Sunday, September 8th.

When the Rex company and its director lends itself to a comedy you can go the limit in unstinted praise of it, because it's bound to be a huge success. The idea upon which this picture is based is original and novel and will cause no end of laughter.

NESTOR

"ON THE BORDER LINE."
Monday, September 2nd.

It wasn't until he had been exposed as a cheat and a rogue that Millie's eyes were opened. Of course Robert shouldn't really have expected her to warm up to the Western life that he had enjoyed since childhood. No Eastern girl could. But when Robert was injured, and the criminal's career brought to light, she appreciated her sense of duty, and with that duty came love born anew. Very pretty story, enacted amid splendid surroundings.

"THE EVIDENCE."
Wednesday, September 4th.

When the crucial moment came and they needed John's assistance he willingly gave up his college career and put his shoulder to the wheel. Fortune favored him and he prospered. A renegade half-breed endeavors to steal a wallet from the pocket of a creditor of John's father. Circumstantial evidence points to John's guilt as the thief. But it all ends happily just as a spirited Western drama of its kind should.

"THE GIRLS AND THE CHAPERONE."
Friday, September 6th.

Here's a real Western comedy. Not the kind with a snicker getter here and there, but a series of comical situations that will keep your patrons laughing all the time. Just as the pandemonium breaks loose in the picture your house will re-echo with howls of laughter. The "happy-ever-after" ending so pleasing to the ladies has not been lost sight of. A really clever comedy.

GEM

"THE CELEBRATED CASE." Two Reels.
Tuesday, September 3rd.

No historical story ever gave the latitude for spectacular production as this wonderful tale of the Battle of Fontenoy. You won't have to go begging for patronage when you bill this picture. There isn't a man or woman who hasn't heard of this wonderful episode and the children will be delighted with the great big battle scenes. It breathes with excitement from the main title to the last foot of film. Your patrons will jump to their feet with enthusiasm when you project it.

CHAMPION

"THE MAID OF THE ROCKS."
Monday, September 2nd.

The Coast Guard seemed to be the better man of the two, but she preferred the smuggler, and when he promised to give up his criminal calling she promised to marry him. Fate placed the lover in the hands of the Coast Guard and it was only on her promise to marry him that he secured his release. When the Coast Guard saw how she pined for her lover and that he could never hope to win her love he gave back her promise and she married the man she loved. Staged and produced in a manner which brings out most effectively every thrill and bit of romance that is in it.

"STRONGEST IN

THAT ANIMATED WEEKLY Is always a week or more ahead of all others. IT'S ALIVE !

Week of Sept. 2nd

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM"

for Exhibitors Everywhere!!

BISON 101

"THE ARIZONA LAND SWINDLE."
Tuesday, September 3rd.

"You'd better nail down your seats good and hard and collect all the hats in the audience when you show this picture, because they are simply going to go wild with enthusiasm when they see it. Ever heard the cry of a real full-fledged Indian war whoop? Well, that will be like the silent breeze when they start yelling with admiration. Not going to say a word about it except that it's a real Bison 101, with a great big B.

"HER LAST RESORT."
Saturday, September 7th.

They are going to get up on their tip toes and yell when you project this Bison 101. The story is based upon the hardships of a Mexican and his family. His heroic deed and the dire necessity which compelled his wife to "borrow" the animal she did. Plenty of that real Western atmosphere and dash. Staged where nature's splendors run riot.

VICTOR

"AFTER ALL."
Friday, September 6th.

Those base passions which have crowned men with glory and sent others to perdition are wonderfully brought to play in this most intensely impressive picture. She really didn't know which she loved the best, but, nevertheless, she favored Rob. It was evident, for when Rob's life was in danger she shielded him. Thrilling situations rapidly follow one another until the finale. In addition to its being a big, fine subject, don't forget that Florence Lawrence is in the stellar role.

POWERS

"LOVE WILL FIND A WAY."
Wednesday, September 4th.

You've been pleading for pleasing comedies so long that we've given special attention to your wants in this direction. Here's the very style of comedy that is immensely popular. A good, spirited story runs through the entire farce.

"HIS WEAKNESS."
Friday, September 6th.

The doctor's love for the girl must have been ideal. When he learned that the artist, whom she had promised to marry, was a drug fiend he determined to cure him. Circumstances made it appear that he had intended killing the artist and she believed it until, when the artist was about to die from the effects of the drug, she learned the noble sacrifice the doctor had made. A brilliant story portraying most vividly a conflict of emotions. Most capably enacted and produced.

ECLAIR

"THE ACTRESS PULLS THE STRINGS."
Tuesday, September 3rd.

When May appeared in the hotel and the women-folks saw the "theatre" label on her trunk they simply shunned her; in fact, they went out of their way to show their displeasure. But May was an ingenious girl and she certainly got her revenge. 'Twould be a shame to expose the very funny finale. See it. Let your patrons see it and enjoy themselves.

"THE GUEST AT THE PARSONAGE."
Thursday, September 5th.

A wealthy bachelor concocts a scheme to test the charitable instincts of the congregation of his friend the Reverend. Though he holds out an automobile as a bait for the promotion of his charitably disposed plan, he is actually seeking a girl in marriage. Humorous indeed are the many acts performed by the old maids to win his favor. But it was the simple unstinted charity of the country maid that won his love and his fortune. A real novelty excellently produced.

"THE KIND OLD MAN."
Sunday, September 8th.

He longed for the happiness that youthful companionship gave him and when the school teacher moved next door to take the place of his previous neighbors he was delighted. He took a special interest in the young man on the one side and he looked with favor upon the school teacher just arrived. 'Twas a self-appointed mission to bring these two young people together. The method he employed was most original, most inspiring. Excellence of production and story put it in a class by itself.

MILANO

"VICTIMS OF INGRATITUDE." Two Reels.
Saturday, September 7th.

Two women and a man, the inevitable triangle, bring about many stirring situations. From the moment when Gina, Helen's school chum, arrives at Helen's home until the death of Mario, who chooses a very novel method of expiating his sins, the picture moves along rapidly in a series of gripping, heart-throbbing scenes. Most elaborate settings, a brilliantly masterful company and a very efficient director make this release a masterpiece of the Milano studio.

THE UNIVERSE"

THAT ANIMATED WEEKLY Gives this week's news this week.
IT'S ALIVE!

BRONCHO FILMS

Produced Upon the Largest Scale Ever Attempted in Motion Pictures
Stirring Themes ----- Tremendous Casts ----- Perfect Photography

FIRST RELEASE
Wednesday, September 18

"SUNDERED TIES"

The Biggest One-Reel Feature Ever Made

The North against the South—Father against Son—in wonderful and thrilling battles, booming cannon, hand to hand conflicts, sensational cavalry charges. Through it all runs a heart-gripping story, splendidly acted.

A BRONCHO EVERY WEDNESDAY

THE BEST FILM IN THE WORLD

SECOND RELEASE

"HIS BETTER SELF"

1 Reel Wednesday, Sept. 25 1 Reel

In the hot desert, beneath the blistering rays of the sun, the rivals battle for the canteen of water—and life. As one falls wounded the hand of his conqueror is stayed in a death thrust by the picture of the woman they both love, and he carries his erstwhile opponent to shelter.

EXHIBITORS: Place your order with your exchange at once for booking. The demand will be tremendous.

BRONCHO MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

150 EAST FOURTEENTH STREET

Mutual Film Corporation, 60 Wall St., N. Y. City Sole Agents for U. S. and Canada.

AVOID FAKE FILMS!

GET THE REAL AND GENUINE

"101"--BISON HEADLINERS--"101"

Produced by the New York Motion Picture Co.

"A FRONTIER CHILD"

TWO REELS FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13 TWO REELS

SENSATIONAL FRONTIER PRODUCTION

Thrilling Indian Battles

WONDERFUL BOMB-THROWING SCENES BY THE DESPERATE SOLDIERS, IN WHICH HUNDREDS OF REDSKINS ARE ANNIHILATED

"THE FUGITIVE"

ONE REEL SEPT. 10 ONE REEL

Caught in a web of circumstantial evidence and accused of embezzlement, a bank cashier escapes from the police and makes his way west. He is joined by his sister and becomes a miner. The real thief locates him and causes his arrest. He is taken fatally ill, and through the influence of the wronged man's sister, is induced to confess his guilt.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

150 EAST 14th STREET

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION 60 WALL ST. N. Y. CITY Sole agents for the U. S. and Canada

KEYSTONE FILMS

MABEL NORMAND

A Quartet of Popular Fun Makers —

MACK SENNETT
MABEL NORMAND
FRED MACE
FORD STERLING

SUPPORTED BY AN

All Star Company In Split Reel Comedies

A KEYSTONE EVERY MONDAY

FIRST RELEASE — SEPTEMBER 23

"Cohen Collects a Debt" and "The Water Nymph"

Featuring MABEL NORMAND, the beautiful Diving Venus

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 30

"Riley and Schultze" and "The New Neighbor"

Amusing subjects, cleverly acted by world-famous actors

KEYSTONE FILM COMPANY

150 EAST FOURTEENTH STREET

Mutual Film Corporation, 60 Wall St., N. Y. City, Sole Agents for U. S. and Canada

CARBON
News Photos

We issue twice a week, four on Wednesday and four on Saturday, CARBON PHOTOS depicting the WORLD'S LATEST HAPPENINGS in the most graphic form. These prints are each 11x14 inches and are easily the most successful drawing cards ever devised for exhibitors. Hundreds of the most profitable motion picture theaters are now regular customers of these photos, which are sold at a price decidedly lower than that charged by other producers for half the service.

These photos are devised primarily to advertise the Gaumont Weekly, but can be used by any house exhibiting topical film.

Write for samples and prices.

Gaumont Company
Congress Avenue
Flushing : N. Y.

NOTICE

Indiana and Kentucky Exhibitors:

We are the largest buyers of Independent films in the Middle West.

We buy one to two prints of every film released through the Film Supply Company of America.

This office has only been open seven weeks and is now buying 30 to 35 reels per week.

Make Us Prove It.

Original 101 Bisons on our list; and FEATURES GALORE included in regular service.

Hook up with a live one.

Yours for service,

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION
217 N. Illinois Street, Indianapolis, Ind.

KLEINE
CINES ECLIPSE URBAN TRADE MARK

RELEASES FOR NEXT WEEK

Cines, Tuesday, September 10, 1912

The Conspiracy of Catiline

Cicero brands him a traitor for attempting to overthrow the Roman Republic.

SCENES ALONG THE SALERNO COAST
A charming scenic.

Eclipse, Wednesday, September 11, 1912

WINTER SPORTS AT ST. MORITZ
(Switzerland) (Topical)

CHEMICAL ACTION
(Nature Study)

GLIMPSES OF ST. PETERSBURG
(Travelogue)

Cines, Saturday, September 14, 1912

HONORS DIVIDED
An excellent drama.

Advance Synopses Free. Write to

GEORGE KLEINE
166 North State St. CHICAGO
Licensed by Motion Picture Patents Co.

THE EDISON KINETOSCOPE

UNDERWRITERS TYPE B
An Unsurpassed Moving Picture Machine From Every Point of View

SPECIAL FEATURES of Edison Underwriters' Type "B"

The only machine with hardened steel shafts running in hardened bearings throughout.

Adjustable Outside Revolving Shutter, Chain Take-Up, Extra Large House, with square condenser holder, Double Magazine Rollers, Heavy Brass Terminals on connecting cords, set of Heavy Extension Legs, four of which are 1¼ inches in diameter. A very substantial stand.

"Once used, always used"

If you've just about given up all hope with that cheap moving picture machine—if it's always breaking down and discouraging the crowd with blurred, flickering pictures—get rid of it, now, before it does your business any more harm, and get an Edison Kinetoscope.

The Edison means certainty of success. It projects the sharpest, steadiest pictures, is a simple machine to operate, the most accessible, and is built to stand up to the work. Many have bought Edisons after finding the cheap machines a failure. Write today for catalog 500 and a copy of the Edison Kinetogram.

Price, with Rheostat, 110 volt, 24-40 amperes, $225.00
Price, with 110 volt, 60 Cycle Transformer, - $245.00

Edison Releases for Sept. 1912

Sept. 6—"Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," suggested by Thomas Moore's famous poem. 1,000 feet Dramatic.
" 7—"Bridget's Sudden Wealth." 600 feet. Comedy.
" 7—"Opening of the Y. M. C. A Island Playground, Lynchburg, Va., 1912. Produced in co-operation with the Industrial Dept. of the International Committee Y. M. C. A. 400 feet. Descriptive.
Sept. 10—"The Manufacture of Paper, Maine. 1,000 feet. Industrial.
" 11—"The Stranger and the Taxicab," by E. J. Lucke. 1,000 feet. Comedy.
" 13—"The Dam Builder," by Bannister Merwin. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 14—"The Rescue, Care and Education of Blind Babies." Produced in co-operation with the International Sunshine Society. 1,000 feet. Descriptive.
" 17—"The Governor," by Bannister Merwin. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
Sept. 18—"Lazy Bill Hudson," by E. J. Montague. 490 feet. Comedy.
" 18—"National Soldiers' Home, Virginia." 510 feet. Descriptive.
" 20—"Hearts and Diamonds," by Herbert E. Morgan. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 21—"The Grandfather," by Lillian E. Sweetser. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 23—"How Bobby Joined the Circus." 650 feet. Comedy.
" 23—"Benares and Agra, India." 350 feet. Descriptive.

5th Edison Release Beginning Monday, Sept. 23d

The great popularity of Edison pictures with the public has made it advisable to announce an additional subject each week, effective on Monday, September 23d.

The release days of Edison subjects thereafter will be Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

Thomas A. Edison INCORPORATED
239 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

FOR VARIETY

You Must Book the Best Foreign Films the World Famous

C. C. P. C.

It is unavoidable that American films should have points of similarity which grow monotonous.

SIDE STEP BY BOOKING

C. G. P. C.

THE FILMS THAT ARE DIFFERENT

LUBIN FILMS

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 4th, 1912
LENGTH 1060 FEET

THE BANK CASHIER

George Graham and James Fairbanks, two clerks in the Carson City Bank, are in love with Helen Davis, daughter of the President. One day the girl playfully closes the vault door on Graham and cannot open it. She mounts a broncho and makes a dash to bring her father to open the safe; then they find that the safe has been robbed by Fairbanks and Graham is senseless in the vault. Helen, however, saves his life and the robbers are captured.

RELEASED THURSDAY, SEPTEMB R 5th, 1912
LENGTH 1040 FEET

THE SMUGGLER

Jean Dupont, captain of Coast Guards, is in love with Marie, the daughter of a smuggler. One night Marie hears that the guard is doubled and that they are on her father's track. She rushes to place the signal lantern and when the father lands she takes his hat and coat, that she may mislead the officers. They fire on her and Jean finds her supposedly dead. She, however, recovers and her father surrenders to the officers.

RELEASED FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 6th, 1912
LENGTH ABOUT 1000 FEET

A ROMANCE OF THE COAST

This is a pretty romance of a fishing village on the coast of Maine. A pretty fisher-maid is marooned on a rock as her punt drifts away while she is setting the lobster pots. She is rescued by a young novelist, in sight of the villagers on the coast, and of course is rewarded with the eternal promise "Yes."

RELEASED SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 7th, 1912
LENGTH 1066 FEET

LITTLE FAMILY AFFAIR

Mrs. Skaggs takes an orphan girl, Lottie Wilson, into the home and makes a servant of her. Peter Johnson, a nephew, soon falls in love with Lottie, but Aunty does not favor the match; in fact she makes all arrangements to marry the girl off to a dude acquaintance. As the intended bridegroom and a crowd of friends are waiting at the church, Peter and Lottie skip off and get married elsewhere.

RELEASED MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1912 LENGTH 1058 FEET

THE HALF-BREED'S SACRIFICE

Manuel, a half-breed, is a body servant to the Governor, Don Remo. One night at a Dance House, the Don being intoxicated, flirts with a dancing girl which causes a quarrel and fight. Manuel taking sides with his master, throws a stone which kills the girl. The Governor is pursued and being hard pressed the half-breed declares himself to be the guilty one and stabs himself, falling over the unconscious body of his master.

EXTREMELY BEAUTIFUL ONE and THREE SHEET POSTERS of our PHOTO-PLAYS, printed in FIVE COLORS, can be obtained from the A. B. C. COMPANY, CLEVELAND, OHIO. These handsome bills will offer a GREAT ADVANTAGE to your Theatre.

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY,

Chicago: 154 West Lake St. B. Nichols, 86 Wardour St., London, W., England.

MODEL NEW STUDIOS,
20th and Indiana Avenues,
Philadelphia, Pa.
Berlin, 35 Friedrich Str.

VITAGRAPH
LIFE PORTRAYALS

"TOMMY'S SISTER" Monday, September 2nd

A HUSTLER AND EQUAL TO THE OCCASION. She fills Tommy's job when he is sick and helps her employer save a pile of money.

"CORONETS AND HEARTS" Tuesday, September 3rd

AFTER AMERICAN MONEY. A young lord tries to win a girl's heart with his title. He is turned down. He goes West, proves himself a man and wins.

"CAPT. BARNACLE'S LEGACY" Wednesday, September 4th

STRIKES IT RICH. After a stirring experience in South Africa and an exciting chase, he gets it. It puts him and his little family on easy street.

"BUNNY'S SUICIDE"
"SHE WANTED A BOARDER" Two Comedies

Friday, September 6th

1. AN AGREEABLE DISAPPOINTMENT. He fools his wife and still lives to make us laugh.
2. WITH A BIG NOISE HE ARRIVES. He is followed by another one, a bigger scream than the first. Her husband is the only star boarder ever afterwards.

"A WASTED SACRIFICE" Saturday, September 7th

A NOBLE INTENTION. An outlaw to save the life of a little child sacrifices his freedom. The child dies but his deed still lives. An example of self-sacrifice.

NEXT WEEK NEXT WEEK

"MEMORIES OF PATIO DAYS"—The Road of Yesterday.
MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 9th.

"THE HIGHER MERCY"—From life of Abraham Lincoln.
TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 10th.

"THE HINDOO CURSE"—In far-away India.
WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 11th.

"THE LOYALTY OF SYLVIA"—A wise choice.
FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13th.

"POPULAR BETTY"
"THE FORTUNE IN A TEA CUP" } Two refined comedies.
SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 14th.

Beginning Thursday, Sept. 26, there will be six Vitagraph portrayals a week.

FIVE A WEEK

KALEM

NEW-YORK
235 West 23D Street
LONDON
86 Wardour Street

"International Producers"

BERLIN
35 Friedrich Str.
PARIS
13 Rue du Faubourg Montmartre.

The Parasite

John Benson, a camp follower, proves himself a true parasite by robbing the dead and wounded on the battlefield. From Jim Adams, one of his victims, who is an exact double of Benson, he secures papers and goes to Adams' home, where he impersonates the wounded soldier. Through Adams' sister, Madge, Benson enters the homes of the wealthy, where his plundering propensities are soon discovered and he lands behind the prison bars.

Released Monday, September 16th

In Peril of Their Lives

A fisherman and his sons are shipwrecked on the coast of California. The two daughters of the fisherman rescue the party after a series of perilous adventures. This production is novel in plot and replete with thrilling action.

Released Wednesday, Sept. 18th

Chips off the Old Block

Bill and Jim quarrel over politics. Later they endeavor to act as peacemakers for Bobby and Tommy, two school boys who have had an argument, and a lively time ensues.

(On the same reel)

Tilley's Bird Farm

A Remarkable Institution at Darien, Conn., Which Supplies Most of the Zoological Gardens.

Released Friday, Sept. 20th

The Grit of the Girl Telegrapher

An Exciting Railroad Drama

Bettie's fiancé, a railroad detective, is called out of town. "Smoke-Up" Smith, a notorious thief, appears at the station and is captured by Bettie. "Smoke-Up" manages to escape, but the girl telegrapher follows in pursuit and brings him to justice.

Special one and three-sheet, four-color posters for this feature.

Release Sat., Sept. 21st

FOUR A WEEK

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.

Published by
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY,

Telephone Call, 1343-1344 Gramercy
125 E. 23rd Street (Beach Building), NEW YORK

J. P. CHALMERS, SR., PRES.; E. J. CHALMERS, SEC. AND TREAS.; JOHN WYLIE, VICE-PRES. AND GENERAL MANAGER.

The office of the company is the address of the officers.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second Class Matter.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: $3.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada, $3.50. Foreign Countries, $4.00, Post Paid.

WESTERN OFFICE: 169 W. Washington St. (Post Bldg.), Chicago, Ill. Phone, Main 3145. Automatic Phone 32732.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES ON APPLICATION.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS (No Display), Three Cents per Word; Minimum Charge, 50c.

Address all correspondence "Moving Picture World, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square, New York," and not to individuals.

Vol. 13 SEPTEMBER 7, 1912 No. 10

INDEX TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS..... 970

BOTH ENTERTAINING AND EDUCATIONAL, by Louis Reeves Harrison..... 953

CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES.....989
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES.. 988
"CELEBRATED CASE, A" (Gem)..... 961
CHICAGO LETTER 965
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed)..... 975
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent).. 976
CORRESPONDENCE 992

"DAUGHTER OF THE SPY, THE," by James S. McQuade..... 954
DOINGS AT LOS ANGELES..... 968

"DUBLIN DAN" (Solax), by Louis Reeves Harrison..... 956

FACTS AND COMMENTS 952
"FATALITY" (Universal Features) 963
FOREIGN TRADE NOTES 967

"HEART OF A COSSACK, THE" (Reliance).. 959
"HUMAN HEARTS" (Imp)..... 958

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY..... 994
IN THE NORTHWEST 994
IN THE SOUTHWEST 994
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES 1006
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES 1020
INQUIRIES 974

LICENSED FILM STORIES 996
LICENSED RELEASE DATES 1022
LOUISVILLE 992

MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES 983

NEW ENGLAND 992

PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE 972
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 978

SAN FRANCISCO 994
SECRETS OF SUCCESS, by Epes Winthrop Sargent..... 982
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)..... 996
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent).....1006
SONG SLIDE RELEASES 990

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
FRORUP, L. E. 1024
KIEWERT, CHAS. L. 1024
REISINGER, HUGO 1021

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
CHICAGO M. P. SUPPLY CO..... 988
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO. 1028
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.....1028
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO.....1015
HALLBERG, J. H. 1029
LAVEZZI MACHINE CO. 1004
PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT CO...1011-1015
SCHNEIDER, E. 1015
SMITH, L. C. 990

FILM IMPORTERS & DEALERS.
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS 1015
WESTERN FILM BROKERS 994

FIREPROOF APPARATUS.
TRAINER, C. W. 1004

FILM EXCHANGE.
ACME FILM CO. 1004
BRADENBURG, GEO. 1011
CALEHUFF, CHAS. 1027
CALIFORNIA FILM EXCHANGE 999
HETZ, L. 1004
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE 1025
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION 945
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE....1004
UNIVERSAL FILM EXCHANGE 1000

FILM MANUFACTURERS.
CRYSTAL FILM CO. 999

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS. (Film Supply Co.)
AMERICAN 936
BISON "101" 943
BRONCHO FILM CO. 942
ECLAIR 1005
FILM SUPPLY CO. 1005
GAUMONT 938-45-91-93
GREAT NORTHERN 1003
KEYSTONE FILM CO. 944
LUX 1003
MAJESTIC 1009
RELIANCE 1025
SOLAX 937
THANHOUSER 934

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS. (Universal.)
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURERS ..939-40-41

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
EDISON 946
ESSANAY 935
KALEM 1050
KLEINE 945
LUBIN 948
MELIES 1031
PATHE FRERES 947
SELIG 997
VITAGRAPH 949

MISCELLANEOUS.
A B C CO. 993
AMERICAN PHOTOPLAY SALES CO.....1010
AMERICAN SONG SLIDE & POSTER CO.....1022
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO. 1013
BOYLE, J. E. 1030
BRADY, A. 1004
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS 1014
CORCORAN, A. J. 1004
EASTMAN KODAK CO. 1026
EXHIBITORS' ADV. CO. 1004
EXHIBITORS' ADV. & SPECIALTY CO..... 989
FEDERAL FEATURE FILM SUPPLY CO.....1004
HARBACH & CO. 1030
HOKE, GEO. M. 1030
HOYT, DEUEL CO. 1023
McKENNA BROS. 1030
M. P. W. BINDERS.....1024
M. P. W. BOUND VOLUMES..... 999
NATIONAL TICKET CO. 1020
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.....1011
NEWMAN CO. 1030
PHOTO CINES CO. 1008
PHOTOPLAY ADV. & SPECIALTY CO.....1023
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.....1027
SARGENT, E. W.....1025
STEBBINS, CHAS. M.....1004
STERN POSTER & SIGN CO..... 994
THREE IN ONE OIL CO.....1021
U. S. FACTORIES CO.....1013
WILLIAMS AMUSEMENT CO. 1015

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
GUNDLACH MANHATTAN CO.....1007

LECTURERS.
BUSH, W. S.....1027
MARION, L. M.....1013

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN 1027
EDISON 946
MOTIOGRAPH 1028
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH 1032
SIMPLEX 987

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
BARTON, DAN 990
CLOUGH & WARREN 1024
DEAGAN, J. C. 1013
SINN, C. E. 1028
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH 1007

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO. 1030
ANDREWS, A. H. 1030
BENNET, GEO. 1030
HARDESTY CHAIR CO. 1030
STAFFORD, E. H. 1030
STEEL FURNITURE CO. 1030
WISCONSIN LUMBER CO. 1030

PROJECTION SCREENS.
AMERICAN THEATRE CURTAIN CO.....1026
INVENTORS' SPECIALTY CO. 1029
MIRROROIDE CO. 1026
MIRROR SCREEN CO. 1026

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.
BATTERSHALL & OLESON 990
CLAPHAM, A. J. 990
KANSAS CITY SLIDE CO.....1011
LEVI CO. 990
NIAGARA SLIDE CO. 1004
SCOTT & VAN ALTENA..... 990
SIMPSON, A. L. 1030
SPEIGEL MOTION SLIDE CO..... 990

FEATURE FILMS (Released by).
AMERICA'S FEATURE FILM CO.....1011
CROWN FEATURE FILM CO..... 999
CURTIS & PRIESTLY 989
DUHEM & HARTER M. P. CO.....1011
FAMOUS PLAYERS CO. 995
FEATURE FILM CO. 1021
FEATURE & EDUCATIONAL FILM CO.....1001
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO. 1015
GENERAL FILM CO. 1018-19
GENERAL FILM PUB. & SALES CO.....1004
HILL FEATURE FILM CO..... 997
IMPERIAL FEATURE FILM CO.....1015
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS 1015
MASKO FILM CO. 1027
NEW YORK FILM CO. 1023
ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO.....1004
ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO.....1007
SOUTHERN FILM CO. 1027
SPECIAL 990
SUPERIOR FEATURE FILM CO.....1028
TOURNAMENT FILM CO. 1004
UNITED FEATURE FILM CO..... 987
UNIVERSAL FEATURES 1016-1017
WARNER'S FEATURE FILM CO.....1007
WORLD, M. P., CLASSICS.....1024

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO. 1025

Facts and Comments

"CONTINUATION SCHOOLS" are the latest development of modern methods of education. In various countries in Europe these schools are established and endowed by the government, which makes it obligatory upon all employers of labor to give their employees a reasonable opportunity to attend these schools. Our own night schools and popular lectures are efforts in the same direction. The real post-graduate course for the plain people is the motion picture. Persons whose mental visions are bounded by Broadway on the north and an endless vacuum on the south, east and west, never tire of the sad and silly drone: "We must not try to educate the public; we must positively confine ourselves to amusing the public." It all depends on how you define the word "educate." Any thing which broadens or expands and stimulates the mind or stirs it to action of any kind is in the wider sense of the word an educational influence. Every human mind craves for knowledge, more so to-day than ever before in the history of the race. Year after year millions of girls and boys and men and women must forego the advantages of a better education, because necessity forces them to earn their daily bread or to contribute to the support of such as are dependent on them. Their thirst for knowledge and the pleasures of the mind stays with them. Working for a livelihood during many hours of the day they have scarcely the mental energy and concentration needed to profit by the night school or a formal lecture. Knowledge must be brought to them in a more or less predigested state. Their sensation while acquiring knowledge must be pleasurable and impressions must be conveyed to them without any too great effort on their part. The progress must be made by easy stages. Does not the motion picture offer this kind of useful and easy teaching? Where good pictures are put on in proper style with an occasional lecture, where the surroundings are clean and pleasant there is scarcely a moment when the screen does not agreeably enlighten us. There are many communities in this country, especially in the rural sections, where the motion picture has improved the moral and intellectual tone of every inhabitant.

* * *

WHENEVER a sensational newspaper is reckless in its statements about moving pictures or the theater where pictures are shown, a pointed letter to the editor, stating the facts and demanding a retraction under pain of a suit for damages, is pretty certain to bring a retraction and apology. In our last issue we called attention to the libelous statements of a Hoboken or Union Hill, N. J., newspaper, regarding the character of the great feature film "Dante's Inferno." Upon a strong remonstrance to the editor of the paper a complete change of front occurred. The paper now says that the police "investigated the moving picture shows and failed to find any film that was not moral, decent and in every way satisfactory. They reported that they liked to look at the pictures and they judged from the amount of applause which greeted the films that every one else in the houses visited also liked the moving films." It must be recorded to the credit of the police captain that, after seeing "Dante's Inferno," he remarked, "Instead of being corrupting I really believe it is uplifting and inspiring."

* * *

AS the hot season is drawing to a close we are reminded of the fact that in every part of the country the motion picture has borne the "heat and burden of the day." Hundreds of theaters would have closed their doors but for the popularity of the motion picture. The logic of some of the managers of these big theaters is not always clear. They would not for a moment entertain the idea of converting their theaters into first class motion picture houses during the busy season, but cherish the sublimest faith of the drawing power of the picture in the summer time. As a rule little effort is made to present a first class cinematographic program and all the aids to proper presentation are neglected. In spite of this negligent handling the pictures have been a success in the great majority of cases. Why not give a first class motion picture entertainment and depend on its drawing power in the winter as well as in the summer? Admitting that a number of so-called legitimate houses have within the last twelvemonth been successfully changed into straight motion picture houses there are still a great number of houses, which are now standing in the shadow of bankruptcy, when judicious management of motion pictures would very probably bring about the long wished-for prosperity.

* * *

WE cannot help congratulating the New York exhibitors upon their early and energetic preparations for next year's national convention. We hope to see the convention held in a big hall, entirely devoted to motion picture exhibits not alone for the pleasure and benefit of the exhibitor, but for the instruction of the public as well. A great opportunity presents itself here of taking the public into our confidence and making the hall of exhibits a most powerful and irrefutable argument for the motion picture. It would be, we think, entirely feasible, to show to the public all the mysteries of the cinematograph in constant operation. The public are curious and eager to learn. In connection with the next national convention and housed in the same building we hope to see a miniature studio in full blast, a developing and drying room and all the paraphernalia of the motion picture in the making. Let the public have the chance to see the whole process of making motion pictures from the first step to the last. A display of machines in operation would be another attractive number in the general exhibit. Changing crops of scenario writers in the throes of dramatic composition would add a touch of comedy and a scene showing their remuneration would provide the necessary pathos. Such an exhibition would insure plenty of space in the great New York dailies and would give the convention that needful publicity which the motion picture must have no less than the theater. A nominal price of admission would probably cover all incidental expenses and leave a little profit for the treasury besides.

Both Entertaining and Educational

By Louis Reeves Harrison

I READ a lot and hear a lot about educational productions, but I am afraid that the word "education" is gloomily associated with those days at school when all that was creative and imaginative within us was under severe restriction, if not repression, instead of being nourished and assisted. For many of us those days are darkly reminiscent of Caesar's commentaries and Cicero's orations hammered into our noddles by the application of a hickory stick to some unintellectual part of our anatomy, or else the broad word is being interpreted in a narrow though popular sense as tending to make us impracticable thinkers by isolating us from the actual world in which we must struggle to survive.

"Education" really means what is now going on in every motion picture exhibition in this country where the photodramas fittingly shown are strong enough to affect the manners and habits of the people, to cultivate their taste for the beautiful, to soften harsh temperament by awakening tender sympathy, to correct primitive egotism and avarice, to glimpse history and travel, to nourish and support the best there is in us. No authority exists for the narrow sense of the world of merely drawing out the intellectual powers of the mind. The narrow portion of the broad meaning is often misleading and should not be that strictly imposed upon moving pictures.

Let us not consider the moral accountability of the ten thousand little theaters to the people who patronize them—managers are only human beings and cannot be expected to amuse the people from philanthropic motives—let us take conditions as they are and try to raise the standard of present production by suggestive and appreciative criticism in order to maintain the best that is being shown on the screen. You who are raising a child, you who are teaching a class, you who are helping a fallen friend, you who are caring for the aged and sick, you who are trying to brighten and better the condition of those within the sphere of your influence, all, remember that moving pictures constitute one of the most powerful influences at work on our social body just as they are, and you are a factor, more or less important, in what they are destined to accomplish.

If you are an exhibitor, ask the members of your audience, especially the intelligent portion, to freely express approval or disapproval, openly or privately. It is your desire to accommodate and entertain the best element in your location. Your hospitality means their mental enjoyment, your friendly patrons, or guests, deserve the best you can give them in quality of presentation and appropriate music, and your expressed requirements will gradually affect the character of general production. Only remember that "educational" has no deadening or depressing significance.

People nearly always enjoy a sparkling comedy that shows up certain primitive qualities man has brought along with him from his lower state of existence—egotism, hatred, avarice, hypocrisy—because we would like to kick those qualities out of ourselves if we could, and such amusing photoplays help us to correct what lies in us unacknowledged. Photodramas that deal with our lower impulses should be civilizing in their purpose to command human interest and respect. One of the first objects of education is to bring out what is faulty in human character with some ennobling result, and therein lies the essence of many a powerful play. Such plays may hold an audience enthralled while silently inculcating what may serve as an impressive warning.

The splendid activity of some of the types shown in athletic deeds or those of daring, exhibits of training schools and military bodies in diversified forms of exercise, even views of children engaged in rhythmic movements, all contribute in their way to physical education. Pictures of mechanical achievements, industrial schools, constructive efforts in modern enterprises, and all that busy men are accomplishing in growth and enlightenment serve to stimulate new ambition by practical illustration of what is actually being done and may often start men on the road of natural inclination and aptitude. Any exhibitor who thinks American people are not fond of what is new and progressive is not more than half awake himself.

I wish I had time to accord direct and individual praise to those producers who are appealing to one of the most delightful emotions of the human mind—the sense of beauty. As aversion accompanies our judgment of what is ugly, so what is finest in us responds to beauty of form, proportion and color. Such producers are not only forming public taste on correct lines, but are reproducing and perpetuating whatever is lovely and lovable in this little planet of ours during the short term that we hold residence here. All forms of beauty are closely allied to interest because we need them to be happy.

Ardor and admiration are aroused by views of what is attractive in nature and art; it warms and elevates the soul even in the occasional glimpses we are given of charming exteriors or tasteful interior backgrounds. Exquisite costumes contribute, and the best expression of all is found in the grace and spirit of ideal women.

Woman's best setting and her best self-expression is that of home, and here lies a tremendous educational opportunity. A room decorated and furnished according to some one or another of the proved styles of the past exercises an effect as quietly impressive as the way a view of it is usually received. No loud applause attracts attention to it as does flag-flaunting in mediocre situations because its slow and thought-inspiring purport is like that of a sunset sky. Its charm is a subtle one, but is productive of delightful results among those watching a pictured play.

Amid all the hurry and bustle of our tremendous commercial activities, we are essentially a home-loving people, and the adequate picture of home rich in sentiment and association acts like a Spring shower upon the tired and fading human plant, reaching and reviving its smallest tendrils. The little sacred things of hidden existence operate powerfully on human emotions with a softening result on the moral nature of all clean-minded people.

In moral, mental, esthetic, technical and physical forms of education moving pictures are already busy, the best of them enlightening and cultivating millions of our people who deeply feel the need of variety and recreation to support them after the dull routine of what is imposed by necessity or feelings of obligation—just plain work. The entertainment is needed, and it is one of the few that comes within reach of the many. It is a blessing when it provides amusement, comfort, gratification or diversion for the millions whose joys are few, and if it inspires as well as refreshes them, so much the better for all concerned.

"The Daughter of the Spy" (Cines).

Reviewed by Jas. S. McQuade.

A MOST interesting, well sustained, and clearly told story has been filmed by Cines, under the title "The Daughter of the Spy," which will be released September 16. This is a two-reel subject, dealing with events in Italy about the fifteenth or sixteenth century. It is of the romantic type and lays no claim to historical value. The principals in the well balanced cast are: Chas. Maestro, the spy; Signorina Leah Gillami, as Beatrice, daughter of the spy, and Anthony Novelli, as Count Rossi, the leading conspirator. These clever actors sustain their characters very creditably, if exception be taken to the over-acting of Signorina Gillami, in the rescue scene, that portion of it which shows her making her way to the cell of Count Rossi, after stealing the keys from the jailer's son. Signorina Gillami more than compensates for this, however, in her daring descent from the dizzy height of the castle, by means of a rope. It is no mean athletic feat for a man to accomplish, yet this gritty little woman performs it fearlessly, and shows that she has muscles of steel in her arms and also the knack of the ankle coil, which prevents slips and consequent scorching of the flesh of the hands.

Signor Novelli is at his best in the scene before the governor of the castle where, as Count Rossi, he is offered pardon, if he will reveal the names of his fellow-conspirators. There is no air of bravado in his scornful refusal of the governor's proffered clemency; it is rather the dignified, contemptuous rebuke of a gentleman and man of honor, who holds life cheap when loyalty to principle is at stake.

Signor Maestro succeeds so well in simulating the duplicity and sordid motives of the spy that one unconsciously assumes an instinctive aversion for that base creature. Indeed, his swift and unexpected death at the close is viewed with a spirit of unmixed exultation.

The engagement between the soldiery and the mob of conspirators is spirited, and the flight and pursuit of the leaders creates a thrill. Count Rossi's escape, in the midst of many perils, will be viewed with suppressed breathing and a lavish flow of sympathy. His swim for life while a rain of bullets whitens the water in his course has all the excitement of a real adventure.

The photography and technique of these films are good.

The opening scene introduces Louis, the jailer's son, and Beatrice, whom he loves. He pleads his suit with all a lover's ardor and diffidence, but she gently, yet firmly, says him nay. About the same time Count Rossi and his co-conspirators seek to overturn the government. The insurrection is soon suppressed and the Count and his friends are either slain or fugitives.

Scene from the Cines Special, "The Daughter of the Spy," Released Sept. 16, 1912.

Count Rossi is among the latter. Sorely wounded and hard pressed by his pursuers, he seeks entrance at the gate of an old mansion, but there is no response from within. Then he climbs to the roof and, with his remaining strength, opens an iron shutter that guards a small window. Looking in he finds that it leads to a small sleeping room, the only occupant being a young girl who has retired for the night. The noise made by him has awakened her and she glances nervously at the intruder, the outline of his head and shoulders being dimly shown by the light from without. Hastily she lights a candle and a flood of sympathy wells up in her heart for the handsome young stranger, who supports himself half fainting on the sill, his face showing extreme pain and exhaustion. Then she assists him to enter and bathes his wounds.

This done, she goes to her father's room and tells him of the strange visitor. Unknown to Beatrice, her father is a government spy, and he soon discovers the identity of the Count. He knows that a large reward is offered for information leading to the arrest of Count Rossi, and immediately reveals his hiding place to officers of the government. The Count is arrested and, believing that Beatrice has assisted in his ruin, he heaps bitter reproaches on her head as he is led away to prison. Beatrice is wounded to the soul by the charge and still believing in her father's innocence of the crime against hospitality, questions him. He does not deny his guilt. Utterly cast down, Beatrice renounces her father and leaves her home. In the meantime Count Rossi has been brought before the governor and sentenced to death.

Learning that the Count has been imprisoned in the castle, the jailer of which is the father of her discarded lover, Louis, she forms a daring plan for his escape. She calls on Louis and promises to become his wife. Overjoyed, he takes her into his father's quarters in the jail and introduces her. The old jailer welcomes her cheerfully as his prospective daughter. He is busily engaged in preparing the evening meal for the prisoners, and points to the rations intended for the Count, among them a small loaf of bread. While father and son were busy in another part of the room, Beatrice wrote a note and hurriedly thrust it into the Count's loaf. The note advised him that a friend was near and counseled him to have courage and hope.

Previous to this, she had persuaded Louis to show her the location of the Count's cell. Now she determined to secure the keys of the jail. His father having made the prison rounds with food, Louis was left in charge of the prison for the night. Beside himself with joy over the gracious words and tender looks of his sweetheart, Louis had no suspicion of her duplicity. Flinging an arm around his neck, as if in affectionate embrace, with woman's cunning Beatrice pressed to his nostrils a handkerchief, well soaked in a powerful anesthetic. After a brief struggle, the youth succumbed to the narcotic, and Beatrice took possession of his keys. Then she hurried to release the man whom she had learned to think of as the dearest object on earth or in heaven. She had just overheard the jailer say to his son that the Count would be beheaded on the morrow, and this renewed her energy and fainting spirit to the utmost.

Scene from the Cines Special, "The Daughter of the Spy," Released Sept 16, 1912.

The Count, on recognizing his liberator, at first refused to accept liberty at her hands; but she soon convinced him that she was innocent and revealed that it was her love only that compelled her to seek his safety.

It chanced on this very night that the spy had warned the governor to take all necessary precautions against the prisoner's escape, and he himself had personally received instructions from that dignitary to supervise the soldiers on watch. Beatrice and the Count had succeeded in lowering themselves from the prison cell to the beach below, and were hurrying toward the sea to a boat, when the spy caught sight of the fugitives. He ordered a soldier nearby to fire on them and, the shot going wild, he himself seized the weapon and took careful aim. At that moment the Count was bearing Beatrice in his arms through the waves. The bullet pierced her heart. Careless now of safety, he bore her back to the dry beach and pressed her lifeless body to his heart. When the spy and the guards came upon the scene, the face of the dead girl was turned upward to the sky, while the Count looked on in hope less agony. Recognizing the features of his own child. the spy gave a shriek of horror. Clutching at his heart he staggered and fell, struck dead by the sight. Then the soldiers permitted the Count to take one last kiss from the pallid lips, before marching him off to the place of execution.

"Dublin Dan" (Solax)

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

HERE is a drama of the "thriller" type which is aflame with elemental passions, but whose dominant feature is situation. It deals purely with the outside of the criminal, with sensational episodes of his history resulting from his condition, but there is much suggested to the close observer concerning conditions that result from his presence in an organized society of individual freedom. It is plain to be seen that the character of John Forsythe is not that of a man who has accidentally exposed himself to the penalty of a code provided to punish trangressions, nor that of a rebel against constituted authority in this generation to be honored as a martyr in the next—he is one of those strange defectives whose logical powers are not conspicuously impaired, but who seems destitute of moral sense.

Audiences that enjoy melodrama exact a villain of the deepest dye—they have no faith in the regeneration of a thoroughly bad man—and they seem to instinctively understand the true nature of the habitual criminal. Expert alienists may labor to distinguish between acquired wickedness and actual brain defect, but the common opinion is that such men are dangerous to society and should be eliminated or put under some form of perpetual restraint. The question of responsibility never enters the heads of those who love drama that is sensational from beginning to end, and Forsythe appears to be destitute of conscience, an instinctive criminal.

Opposed to him is Dublin Dan of the Secret Service, a detective of valorous rather than subtle methods. His ways are those of the daring sleuth who seems to court peril for the sake of enjoying hairbreadth escapes without attempting to veneer his policy with any gloss of possibility. Freed from the restrictions of Sherlock Holmes' cautious methods, he penetrates the very centers of villainy without being killed or even seriously injured. Meanwhile he captures the heart of the persecuted heroine by his bravery and by a virtue so obtrusive that one cannot help wishing that the alienists would examine him. Dublin Dan is one of those extraordinary fellows who emerge from the filth of the underworld without a spot on his halo, whereas the average man has to burnish his about as often as he brushes his hair.

The cast of this intense melodrama is as follows:

Dublin Dan, a secret service detective..Barney Gilmore
John Forsythe, a criminal.....Darwin Karr
Robert Forsythe, his brother.....John Roberts
Bill Steele, Forsythe's pal.....James Sterling
Magg Steele, an old hag.....Lillian Lorraine
Rosalie Clarke, Forsythe's ward.....Blanche Cornwall
Juno Savage, an adventuress.....Ray Leanski
Matt, a thug.....Lee Beggs
Sailor .....George Paxton
Thugs, policemen, etc.

The play opens with the escape of John Forsythe from prison, where he has been sentenced to a term of ten years for counterfeiting. He is seen running through the woods in striped clothing until he emerges on an open road. He there holds up a passing chauffeur and secures a linen coat and cap. These cover the stripes to the knees, and he blacks the remainder from the mud of a swamp until those who sit in front can't tell the difference. In this guise he makes his devious way to the house of his brother Robert, a highly respectable member of good society, who has just been made guardian of person and property for a young lady he has never seen, charming Rosalie Clarke, just fresh from boarding school. John enters the house of Robert and demands protection. Robert offers a small sum of money and tells him to get out. John tears up the money and insists upon a larger amount. The good brother goes to another room, while the wicked one responds to a new criminal impulse. He shoots through the door and kills the man who sought to befriend him. He swaps clothes with the dead man, makes up to resemble him, and rings for the police—the latter is an act of insane cunning.

Meanwhile, Dublin Dan hears of the escape of a convict he was instrumental in sending to jail for a long term. He goes to the country home of Robert Forsythe and watches at the railroad station. Who should come down by the next train but charming Rosalie. In gathering together her effects she drops the card of Robert Forsythe, and it falls into the hands of the detective. He promptly makes her acquaintance and assists her to find what is to be her future home. His pleasing appearance and manners—he is a winner—inspire confidence, and Rosalie consents. Thus it happens that they arrive simultaneously and opportunely just as the police John has summoned come on the scene. John claims that he is Robert and asserts that he shot a burglar whom he caught in the act of breaking into his house with the intent of committing a felony.

This part of the plot is replete with dramatic possibilities.

Scenes from "Dublin Dan," Produced by the Solax Co.

Detective and criminal both fall in love with Rosalie, and it is man to man from this moment through exciting situations to the end. Dublin Dan's suspicions are excited by some trivial clue he finds, and he manages to examine this silent testimony while the others are variously engaged. He also subjects John to sharp scrutiny when the latter receives Rosalie. The criminal betrays that he did not know she was coming, and the fact that he has not had time to adjust himself to his new environment is shown in his conduct.

Mr. Darwin Karr makes the best of his role as the criminal that could be possibly expected. John Forsythe is clearly shown to be a man of specialized cunning, who has none of the fine mental balance of a man living on a higher plane. As far as possible he discovers the emotional state of a criminal long trained to deception, yet incapable of being guided by broader observation and experience. Karr's impersonation is masterly. Forsythe is savage and brutal, or merely sensuous and lazy as the mood strikes him, but in all cases an instinctive malefactor.

Forsythe naturally gravitates to his old haunt, a den of counterfeiters, and there renews relations with confederates who have been operating in a small way. Their laboratory is shown behind a long screen, and John takes up his former occupation with the fanatical enthusiasm of an artist. It is revealed that the adventuress, Jumo, is still infatuated with him, though she has ostensibly given her affections into the keeping of his pal, Bill Steele. Mag Steele is an old hag whose services are those of guard over the safety of the retreat.

Barney Gilmore as Dublin Dan, a Detective, in the Solax Feature of That Title.

Forsythe has the temerity to take these people to the house of his slain brother and there make merry to the discomfiture of innocent Rosalie. Rosalie escapes and goes to faithful Dan for advice and help. Dan places her with his mother. Dan goes to the Forsythe house in disguise and informs the merry party he meets there that his motor car is stalled not far away from lack of gasoline. Forsythe offers to send a servant for a new supply. Dan extends a hundred dollar bill —the smallest he has with him—in payment, but this does not attract suspicion. Forsythe takes it and gives counterfeit money in exchange. He is certainly suffering from induration of the occipital. The detective detects, but no matter, just wait. He must locate the den.

Forsythe locates him and attempts to abduct Rosalie. She barely escapes the first time by the timely intervention of Dublin Dan in the disguise of a cabman. The second attempt is more successful, and Rosalie is carried away to the den. She is there incarcerated in a prison cell—the den is almost as well equipped as a motion picture studio—to languish while Forsythe resumes his nefarious work in the hidden laboratory.

Now comes a closing in of all the elements. Juno is so cruelly jealous that she releases Rosalie from the cell after the others have retired for the night and proceeds to torture her—at least she makes ready—when Rosalie's screams bring the others and the former status is restored.

Dublin Dan is not idle. He chances upon Matt, the thug of the counterfeiting gang, in a nearby tavern. In preparation for this encounter the detective has brought along a makeup bag which contains among other wonderful things a live carrier pigeon. Matt the thug has become interested in a drunken sailor who rashly flashes a roll. Dublin Dan interferes and conducts the drunken sailor to a bed-chamber. There the detective has an inspiration. He disguises himself as the drunken sailor, secretes the carrier pigeon in his bosom and contrives to encounter Matt the thug near the counterfeiter's den. Matt takes the drunken sailor into the den to rob him. Dublin Dan not only sees imprisoned Rosalie looking out from behind the prison bars, but is given a full view of the secret laboratory. Feigning sleep while the others play cards, he manages to write a note and attach it to the carrier pigeon's legs. As he sends the dove up the chimney Matt the thug turns suddenly to help himself to whiskey and catches Dublin Dan in the act. The entire gang assaults the detective in a terrific struggle, with a result that he is overpowered, bound and thrown into a dungeon through a trap door.

Is he done for? Ask of the white rats that crawl over his prostrate body and gnaw the ropes that bind him, just as a mouse once liberated a lion caught in a net—see Aesop's Fables for authority on the intelligence of rodents. Dublin Dan rises and rids himself of his bonds. He creeps up an iron ladder, opens the trap and seizes a brace of pistols. Now he has the whole gang at bay. After effecting Rosalie's release, he marches the counterfeiters, one by one, into the prison cell and there he holds them until the police arrive. Best of all, he is so cool about it. When the officers come on the scene he is calmly smoking a cigar.

Mr. Belasco has produced melodramas; so has Mr. Daly; so has the fertile Dion Boucicault. They punished vice and rewarded virtue after piling up catastrophe after catastrophe, and were often rewarded with applause more enthusiastic and quite as sincere than that heard in pretentious playhouses. If it still entertains or even affords variety, "Dublin Dan" will be a winner. It is crowded with incident and adventure from beginning to end.

GAUMONT HAND-COLORED SUBJECTS.

The demand for hand-colored subjects is so keenly felt by the exchangemen that in order to satisfy the needs of the exhibitor, many have written to the Gaumont Company to place more of these colored films on the market. However, the process of making these chromatic productions is so tedious and expensive that, although this concern wishes to please its patrons, it nevertheless must limit itself to between four and six hand-colored reels per month.

Quite a few are therefore slated to appear within the next thirty days, the first of which was "The Story of Chopin," which made its debut on Tuesday, the 27th of August. This is followed on the 3rd of September by the two-reel hand-colored spectacle, "The Refugee's Casket." On Thursday, September 12th, "The Plague Stricken City," hand colored, one-reel production, will make its appearance, while the far-famed "Queen Elizabeth's Token," another hand-colored offering on one thousand feet, will be released on Tuesday, the 17th of September. "The Legend of Cagliostro," a two-reel, hand-colored film which has made an enviable European reputation for itself, will be put out about the middle of October, probably on Thursday, the 17th. Before this, the first of a series of hand-colored comedies, entitled "A Domestic Treasure," will definitely appear on Thursday, the 10th of October.

HARRY McRAE JOINS SELIG STAFF.

Mr. Harry McRae, who has gained considerable reputation in the legitimate theatrical field as a producer, has joined the producing staff of the Selig Polyscope Company and will be located at the Chicago studio for the present. His first pictures have been submitted to the censors of the Selig studio and have been approved. Judging from their excellence the Selig Company feels that it has secured in Mr. McRae a man whose work will greatly strengthen its product

"HUMAN HEARTS"

A Two-Reel Imp Feature Taken from the Famous Play of That Name by Mr. Hal Reid.

Reviewed by Hugh Hoffman.

PLAYS that have stood the test of time are good plays to do in moving pictures. The public seems to appreciate a pictured version of plays they have known for years and have often seen acted by a traveling company in the days when traveling companies were far more numerous than they are to-day. One of those plays is "Human Hearts." For many years it was one of the standard road productions, ranking with "'Way Down East," "The Old Homestead," "In Old Kentucky," and others. It is still doing duty as a road attraction, which is saying a great deal in these latter days, when we reflect that sixty per cent of the theaters which were once known as dramatic houses are to-day catering to moving picture audiences. The trashy dramas have gone their unlamented way into oblivion since the advent of pictures. "Human Hearts" as a theatrical attraction still stands the test of elimination and very probably will continue for many years to come.

"Human Hearts" has been splendidly done as a picture by Producer Otis Turner. King Bagott plays the leading part. With an actor like him in the leading role, the play is given a vigor that might be expected of Mr. Bagott in the part of an honest country blacksmith. His work in the picture is better, if possible, than anything he has done in some time. He looks the part and seems to feel it. He is the strong, dominating character upon whom all else depends. Apart from Mr. Bagott's work, Miss Jane Fernley, whose art is beginning to attract more than usual attention, is cast for the role of the erring wife. Those who remember her excellent acting in "Lady Audley's Secret" will have no trouble in believing that she possesses elements of greatness. Miss Mayne Kelso deserves mention also for her good work as the blind mother of the blacksmith, and Mr. Dick Lee as the tramp played a very clever comedy part in a way that helped the picture along immensely.

King Bagott in a Scene from "Human Hearts" (Imp).

The plot of "Human Hearts" is strong. In the parlance of the pavement, there is "something doing" in it all the time, yet everything proceeds logically without any extraneous incidents. The plot of the story is substantially as follows: A young Kentuckian and his father conduct a cross-roads blacksmith shop, far removed from the city and its evil ways. There comes one day to the blacksmith shop a young city man accompanied by a charming young woman. The fellow's mission is to buy up some property which has been reported to contain oil. As these two drive along in the buggy, looking at the land, the vehicle becomes disabled and they are forced to put into the cross-roads blacksmith shop for repairs. While there, the young city woman, who is apparently the mistress of the city man, becomes attracted by the handsome young blacksmith, and it is noticed that he, too, sees a revelation in her ways and looks. It is a case of love at first sight.

Before very long the man from the city learns that the property he is seeking belongs to the old blacksmith and for some time he endeavors to persuade the old man to sell it, but he is met with a stubborn refusal. Meanwhile his lady friend and the young blacksmith have had plenty of time to get acquainted, and when the time arrives for her departure to the city she decides she likes the place and determines to remain in the village as a summer boarder at the home of the blacksmith. By meeting a good man, she is repentant of her way of living and has a stormy parting with the swindler who brought her there.

In the course of time, the young city woman marries the country blacksmith and settles down to lead a better life. She sticks to her purpose for a number of years, being blessed with a little daughter, who reaches the age of seven or eight years under these conditions before a change takes place. After nearly ten years the swindler returns to the village, prompted perhaps by a longing for his former companion, and there he meets her. His tales of the city and his doings there arouse in her breast a desire to return to a life of gaiety. His talk has the effect of producing a dissatisfaction in her mind with the simple country life, and before long she decides to elope with the man who brought her there. But before they have an opportunity to elope, they are discovered in one of their clandestine meetings by the husband. His faith in his wife is shattered by her conduct and he orders her from his home. The only reluctance she has in leaving is on account of her child. She would take the little one with her, but this, of course, the broken-hearted blacksmith will not allow.

Driven from home, the heart of the wife wells up in hate against the father of her child and a passion for revenge takes possession of her mind. While driving away with the city man and taking a last glimpse of the blacksmith's shop, she notices her husband sitting asleep by the forge, exhausted by his weight of care. The fickle wife, driving on, urges her companion to go back and strike her husband dead as he sleeps, and he proceeds to carry out her desires. Meanwhile the old blacksmith arouses his son and sends him off to repair a wagon on the other road, taking the young man's place by the forge himself. Soon he falls asleep there and soon he meets his death at the hands of the man who once tried to swindle him out of his property.

The tramp at this juncture plays an important part in the plot, as he has been hanging about the place for some time and sees enough to know who really did the murder. Suspicion, however, points directly to the young blacksmith and he is placed under arrest and is given a long sentence. While he is locked in his prison cell far away, and praying every day for the safety of his little daughter, the mother of the child with her companion returns to the homestead and forcibly takes away her child, departing at once for the city.

The activities of the blacksmith's blind mother, his sister and his incompetent brother are directed toward securing a pardon for the breadwinner of the family. After weary months of pleading, they are successful in securing the blacksmith's release. Arriving home, his first thought is of his little child. He obtains the address of the swindler from the secretive tramp and hastens forthwith to find his daughter in the city. Arriving at their place of residence, he demands the child from the woman and her paramour. They deny that they have her, but he will not take "no" for an answer. He searches the house, finds his little one locked in an upper room and carries her down in triumph. At the door he meets resistance from his wife and immediately her companion appears on the stairway with a pistol and fires at him. Accidentally the woman, instead of the blacksmith is killed, and a violent struggle takes place between the blacksmith and the swindler. The police, who have been waiting outside, immediately make their entrance, accompanied by the tramp, who possesses knowledge enough of the previous murder to send the prisoner to the gallows.

The plot is strong in dramatic incidents and these have been admirably handled by Mr. Turner, not only in the matter of acting but in well-selected scenes and good characterization. The picture is strong enough to be billed as a dramatic feature almost anywhere; taken as a whole, it is the kind of drama that exhibitors like to get and which their patrons like to see.

"The Heart of a Cossack"

A Thousand-Foot Reliance Feature Touching an Entirely New Field in the Matter of Local Color.

Reviewed by Hugh Hoffman.

COSTUME plays that are really authentic are rare; especially when they aim to represent phases of life of early periods in other countries. Comparatively little is known by Americans of the small details that go to make up the daily routine life of the obscure corners of the world. Particularly is this true of those remote provinces along the Mongolian frontier, extending from the Black Sea on the west to Port Arthur on the east. The Russian Empire and the Mongolian nations are separated along their frontiers by an imaginary line. As one approaches this line, it is found that the customs of the Slavic people and the Mongolian race are more or less interwoven. Being isolated as are these frontier villages, those customs have become an ineradicable part of domestic life. The ceremonies of the Russian subjects in such localities have a distinctly Mongolian character. The mode of dressing the hair verges towards the Mongolian, and, in many respects, the ceremonial regalia. Still, with these added embellishments, the Slavs keep to their personal characteristics, according to the Slavic nature. They also cling to Slavic tradition and their domestic relations are distinctly those of the Caucasian. Women and their mode of life are not degraded to the level of the Mongolian women, although their life is much circumscribed in comparison with that of American women.

The Marriage Contract, Showing the Military Governor with His Sceptre of High Authority.

It is under such conditions that this new Reliance picture, "The Heart of a Cossack," is worked out. It is a domestic drama that is an educator as well, by having for a setting such an out of the way corner of the world. It is distinctly fresh, and, while keeping track of the action, the spectator unconsciously finds himself studying the elaborate mass of detail which the picture contains. It is one that could have been produced by no other than a person who knows intimately the domestic life of the Russo-Mongolian frontier. Such is indeed the case, for the pictures were produced at the Reliance studio under the direction of M. Makarenko, a splendid Russian actor who has traveled the Russian provinces for twenty years and knows thoroughly the mode of life in all parts of the Muscovite Empire. The costumes used in this play were brought by him from Russia, and there is not another set like them to be found in America, so far as anyone knows. Besides the costumes, M. Makarenko brought with him a complete set of domestic properties and ceremonial paraphernalia peculiar to the region of which the story tells. These articles contribute to a picture that is rich in study. They give the entire picture its atmosphere, despite the fact that it is enacted by American players. The picture, in every inch of it, savors of a foreign clime and, with its resplendent and picturesque costuming, is a pretty thing indeed.

In "The Heart of a Cossack" the principal part, that of the Cossack lover, is enacted by M. Makarenko himself, and he is very charming, tall and handsome with a gallant bearing. He is every inch the ideal of the Cossack folk-lore that we in this country have occasionally come across in interpreted works. This hero of the Steppes by his chivalrous mien has won the heart of a wealthy land owner's daughter. The father, according to the custom of the country, reserves the right to dispose of his daughter's hand in marriage to the best advantage, and he is greatly pleased when he receives word from the supreme military commander of the district, an elderly man, to appear before him. The object of this summons is that the potentate may negotiate with the father for his daughter. The father appears before him and the transaction proceeds with much felicity on both sides, except that there is one obstacle. That obstacle is the girl's Cossack lover. So long as he remains in the vicinity, there is a likelihood of his inducing the girl to elope with him. In the opinion of the father and the commandant it would never do for the plans of two such wise men to be frustrated by a pair of foolish lovers. The military governor thinks of an easy way out of this situation; he will send the young Cossack away on an erand as the bearer of an important military message. He acts upon the idea immediately and signs an order, dispatching the Cossack to another part of the province. The two elderly gentlemen then part ceremoniously and on very good terms. Meanwhile the order is delivered to the Cossack, while he is pouring his love tale into the ears of his adored. This order contains crushing news for these two fond lovers. At once the Cossack sees through the plan to get rid of him and informs the girl that such is the case. Each promises the other to remain steadfast until such favorable time as they can again be together and consummate their vows to each other.

Before parting, however, they make an appointment to meet after dark at a nearby tavern, taking the housekeeper into their confidence to enable them to do so. Shortly afterwards the Cossack receives his summons an engagement committee arrives at the land owner's house to apprise the daughter of her marriage engagement. The scene following represents in truthful detail the exact ceremony with which such matters are surrounded in that particular part of the world. A committee of two serious men arrives and is ushered into a parlor. They bring with them various ceremonial regalia and paraphernalia. The ceremonial articles are spread out on the table and the committee takes its place behind it, ready for the rites. The father then appears in semi-oriental festive costume, and soon after the bride-elect makes her entrance in ceremonial attire, accompanied by the housekeeper. She is apprised that her marriage has been arranged and she is very happy, thinking that her father has at last yielded to her desire to marry the dashing Cossack. Taking a tray with golden goblets, she fills them with wine and passes the cups around in token of her obedience and happiness. The happiness is genuine until she is further informed that she is to become the wife of the supreme military officer of the region. At that moment she first realizes that negotiations have been going on without her knowledge, and being afraid to rebel, she recoils with horror from further participation in the ceremony. Her father, noticing her aversion, is in the act of upbraiding his daughter when her Cossack lover with a companion smashes in the door and denounces the father and the entire proceeding. The ceremony breaks up in disorder, as the father orders his daughter to leave the room by one door and the Cossack to leave it by another.

The Betrothal Ceremony from "The Heart of a Cossack" (Reliance).

At evening time, with the aid of the housekeeper, the lovers meet at the tavern. A number of Russian dancers are there executing their figures and a merry time is in progress. This scene is extremely typical of the Russian mode of entertainment and there are some expert dancers performing in the Russian style. The lovers decide that quick action is necessary. If they are ever to have each other they realize that the time is now. An elopement seems to be the only solution of their tangled affairs and they decide to leave at once.

Meanwhile the absence of his daughter is discovered by the father, who calls about him a number of his men and they proceed at once to the tavern. Arriving there they find that the young pair have departed and a wild pursuit is at once begun. The lovers are overtaken in the woods, and a fierce battle takes place between the lover and the superior numbers representing the father's interests. The Cossack is overpowered and left by the roadside, tied hand and foot, while his sweetheart is taken away by the pursuing party at the direction of her father. The Cossack, however, is soon liberated by his faithful comrade who, it begins to appear, is in love with the housekeeper. The two men overtake the retreating party and engage in another conflict, and this time are successful in routing them. The last man left standing on the pursuing side is the girl's father. By a deft stroke the Cossack disarms him and places the point of his sword at the father's breast, having a perfect right under the unwritten laws of the code duello to run him through.

The Interruption of the Betrothal Rites, from "The Heart of a Cossack" (Reliance).

During the fracas the daughter makes her escape and waits for her lover further down the road whence he repairs, with his companion, to meet her. The vanquished forces of the land owner rally and once more take up the pursuit, and another clash of arms is soon in progress when the girl's father comes upon the scene. But this time he calls a halt. He remembers that the Cossack has spared his life by refusing to take advantage of the opportunity to run him through. He has suddenly come to admire the fighting spirit of his would-be son-in-law, and his hostile attitude changes to one of conciliation. He accordingly joins the hands of the two lovers and blesses them. By this time the housekeeper has arrived on the scene and she and the Cossack's loyal comrade make known the fact that they, too, would appreciate a blessing, which is freely given in the best of humor by the old gentleman, who quickly wins over the spectator by the fairness of his nature and the completeness of his acquiescence.

The picture affords an intimate glimpse of provincial domestic life that is entirely unique in moving picture production. It is understood that M. Makarenko will enact a number of these Russian domestic stories, which will be released from time to time by the Reliance Company.

By way of criticism; it seems to be an inexplicable mystery why ninety-five per cent. of the American producers insist upon cutting all figures off at the knees. Particularly is this custom ruinous to fine costume plays, such as this one. What is the use of producing costume plays if one-third of the costume must invariably be lopped off at the bottom? Feet are interesting; much more so than two feet of gingerbread wall above the head of the actor.

FLICKERS.

Mr. A. K. Greenland, formerly New York manager for the Billboard, and at present sales manager for the Gaumont Co., will sever his connection with that company to assume charge of the Chicago office of The Billboard. Mr. Greenland's former connections and acquaintance with the trade will stand him well in his new position.

* * *

Mr. Bert Garret, who formerly was identified with the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co., and who left that company when it dissolved to accept a position as chief clerk of the Universal Film Manufacturing Co., has been transferred to the 43rd Street plant of the Universal as business manager.

* * *

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, the Economizer Man, is one of the more fortunate men in the business and is getting the money these days. Mr. Hallberg has moved his family and personal effects to a Riverside Drive residence.

* * *

Carl Laemmle, who left these shores some weeks ago to enjoy a summer abroad, is on the high seas, coming back to New York on account of urgent business.

* * *

The New York Film Company, at present located at No. 12 Union Square, have outgrown their present offices and will move to more spacious quarters in the Savoy Theater Building, 112 West 34th Street.

* * *

H. J. Stryckmans, the man of the hour for the Bison-"101" Film Co., it is rumored, will shortly leave that concern to assume charge of the publicity department of the Mutual Film Corporation, whose offices are at 60 Wall Sreet. The Mutual are planning a press department second to none in the film business.

* * *

Mr. Albert Lichtman, formerly identified as manager of the Monopol Film Co., 45 West 45th Street, resigned his position with that company to accept a similar berth with the Famous Players Co., located in the Times Building.

B. NICHOLS IN TOWN.

B. Nichols, of the M. P. Sales Agency, London, representing the Biograph, Kalem and Lubin companies as well as half a dozen English and Continental makes, arrived in New York last Friday and will return some time the coming week.

An announcement of interest is that he has obtained control of the company making the animal films that the Gaumont Company has been featuring of late and that in the future these will be put out under an individual brand, possibly being known as Tiger films.

CANADIAN FILM PIRACY.

We have had more than one complaint from Canada from owners of territorial rights of moving pictures in regard to encroachments in their territory. This is a most contemptible form of downright theft and we trust some of our Canadian brethren will take the trouble of teaching a much needed lesson to those who deliberately go in and take what has been paid for and belongs to others. We believe some films have been confiscated in the States where the owners have been caught attempting this, and possibly this action could also be taken in Canada. There is little doubt but that a suit for substantial damages would be easily secured in the Canadian Courts. We would urge all Canadian exhibitors to co-operate in protecting the rights of everyone by promptly notifying the rightful owners, whenever possible, of any booking offered by film pirates in their territory.

The latest to suffer in this respect is the firm of Curtis & Priestly, at 918 Green St., Victoria, B. C. They secured the rights for the Bernhardt Camille and Rejane Sans Gene pictures for British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. The proceeds of at least one week's booking has been filched out of their territory by someone with a set of the reels, who evidently has no regard for the rights of others.

DOINGS OF THE SELIG COLORADO COMPANY.

August 16th was Marshall Stedman's birthday. The Selig players, led by Miss Myrtle Stedman, gave a surprise dinner party in honor of their manager. The entire company and many well-known Cañon City citizens were present and a pleasant evening was passed.

On the evening of August 15th, as a benefit for the Cañon City library, the Selig players now located in that city gave an entertainment at the First Presbyterian Church.

"A Celebrated Case" (Gem)

Reviewed by G. F. Blaisdell.

A FAMOUS old-time play has been put on the screen by Producer George O. Nicholls. It has been well put on. In order to condense into two reels the drama so well known to theatergoers of a generation ago, slight changes have, of course, been necessary, but the essence has been preserved. There are many strong situations, some of them highly dramatic, others of marked pathos. Among the latter perhaps the more notable is that where Jean Renaud, one of a gang of convicts in ankle and wrist chains, meets his daughter Adrienne under the spreading trees on the lawn of the estate of the Duke d'Aubeterre.

Careful attention has been paid to costumes and uniforms in order that the mid-eighteenth century period may be properly portrayed. The action is even and continuous. The work of the cast is excellent, showing careful rehearsal and intelligent direction. There are some fine exteriors, one of them the battle scene. Mr. Nicholls has not tried to show a battle scene covering wide area; wisely, he has preferred to portray a small part of the field. There are detached cannon wheels and dismounted cannon. In the background a great pall of smoke conceals from view what the spectator well may imagine to be the real conflict. Bursting shell give the touch of realism to the picture and adequately carries out the letter of the book—that wherein the Count de Mornay is caught between the opposing forces.

Scene from "A Celebrated Case" (Gem).

Charles Pearley takes the leading role, that of Jean Renaud. The part of Lazare, the camp-follower and later the pretender to the title and estates of the Count de Mornay, is carried by Alex Franks. Lucy Destelle finely portrays the part of Madeline, Jean's wife. Janet Salisbury is the daughter of Jean; in the latter half of the picture much work falls to her, and she performs it in a finished, artistic manner. Lucretia Davis has the character of Valentine de Mornay, the schoolgirl friend of Adrienne; Viola Alberti of the chanoinesse, and Marion Navarro of Duchess d'Aubeterre.

The play opens at the altar of a church. Jean Renaud, robust, handsome, is being wedded to Madeline, the foster sister of the Duchess d'Aubeterre. The bride has a face notable perhaps more for its strength of character than for any doll-like beauty; it is a good face to "tie to" and one that will wear year in and year out; a face that easily carries a winning, charming smile. At the conclusion of the ceremony the duchess takes from her own neck a necklace—destined to play a most important part in the future—and hangs it about the neck of the bride. It is her marriage portion.

Seven years later Madeline is sitting in her cottage surrounded by a half-dozen of her friends. They are sewing. Present also is Adrienne, the daughter of the house. O'Rourke, the friend and soldier companion of Jean, enters and tells the little company the news of the battle of Fontenoy (1745).

The Count de Mornay, just previously, had taken his daughter Valentine, of perhaps a half dozen years of age, to the chanoinesse of d'Hyeres. Later, in the battle of Fontenoy, he was caught between the lines and wounded. As he fell Lazare, a camp follower, ran to him and began choking him, in order that there might be no obstacle to the robbery he intended to commit. Jean discovered him in the act, threw him off and gave De Mornay a drink from his canteen. The count handed Jean his jewels and papers and fell back dead. Jean picked up his gun and set out for his own home, not far away. Lazare searched the body, but finding nothing, started after Jean.

Scene from "A Celebrated Case" (Gem).

A short time later the soldier was in his own home. After greeting his wife and child, the little one was put to bed and her door locked. Then Jean gave to Madeline the jewels and papers confided to his care by the count. Madeline put them in the casket containing the necklace. Lazare, through the window, saw all this. Unlocking the door of the daughter's bedroom, Jean and Madeline kneeled by the side of their daughter. A moment later they arose and the two passed out of the house.

Scene from "A Celebrated Case" (Gem).

As Jean and Madeline went out the door Lazare came in the window. His first move was to lock the door that led to Adrienne's bedroom. As he opened the drawer that contained the casket Madeline returned. The plucky wife lost no time in assailing the robber. The noise of the scuffle awoke Adrienne. She got out of bed and with her small fist pounded on the door. To the childish query "Who is it?" Lazare, with his great hands on Madeline's throat, forced her to reply "I am with your father." The struggle was long and severe. Lazare drew his knife. Madeline fell, wounded. The robber finished his work, took the casket and leaped through the window. The mother had just sufficient strength to crawl to the bedroom door and unlock it. To the child she was only able to ask for help. Adrienne ran for a neighbor. The mother fell back. For her all was over.

When Adrienne returned there were many with her. To the inquiry as to who was with her mother the child promptly replied "Papa."

In the morning the neighbors laid the facts as known before Jean's commander. He closely questioned the child; her answers were to the same effect as on the evening before. Jean was placed under arrest. He gave the child to O'Rourke. As his old friend was taking away the little one the father called him back. Again he embraced his daughter. O'Rourke carried Adrienne straight to the Duchess d'Aubeterre, who gladly took her in. Jean? The sentence of the court-martial was "galleys for life."

Fourteen years later the Duchess d'Aubeterre decided to withdraw from the care of the chanoinesse of the College d'Hyeres the adopted daughter who had for so many years been at the school. Adrienne introduced to the duchess her companion, her chum, Valentine de Mornay, and begged that she might go with them. The duchess was in entire agreement with the wishes of her adopted daughter.

It was but a few weeks before the two girls sent an invitation to their beloved preceptress to visit them. The chanoinesse gladly accepted. Following her arrival the entire party adjourned to the lawn. Great trees protected them from the rays of the sun. The mansion, ivy-covered, in the background, completed a charming setting. O'Rourke, who, following the adoption of Adrienne, had been taken into the service of d'Aubeterre for life, entered and asked permission of the duke for a party of convicts to come into the grounds and rest under the trees. D'Aubeterre consented.

The convicts, hampered by wrist and ankle chains, slowly, painfully came out under the trees and awkwardly threw themselves upon the grass. In the foreground was Jean Renaud. Adrienne, her heart stirred by the pathetic spectacle, passed among the group, handing to each unfortunate a coin. As she approached Jean she looked in his face. She started back with a cry. It was not a cry of recognition, for it was not recognition. It was alarm, vague, indefinable, yet nevertheless terrifying. Jean also was stirred. He glanced to the man beside Adrienne. He recognized the faithful O'Rourke. It was to him he spoke.

"Where is my child," he asked.

"This is your daughter," replied O'Rourke.

The daughter ran to her father and into his arms. It was an affectionate greeting. There was an intensely interested audience—the convicts as closely following the dramatic scene as were the handsomely garbed owners and their guests. The reunion was rudely interrupted by the orders to march given by the unsentimental officer in charge of the gang.

Lazare, the former camp-follower, the robber, the murderer, had waited for time to effect changes that he might assume the titles of the Count de Mornay. His first move was to appear before the College d'Hyeres and demand his daughter. Promptly he was sent to d'Aubeterre. At the duke's home Adrienne was the first of the two girls to be introduced. She shunned the pretender. Valentine at first repudiated him. She could not remember him.

Adrienne was anxious to see her father again. She was firm in her belief in his innocence. She persuaded the duke to send for him. O'Rourke, armed with a note to the prison officials from d'Aubeterre, soon returned with Jean. His chains had been removed. There was another affectionate greeting. The chanoinesse entered the room. The duke took Jean by the arm and led him to an adjoining room. Lazare entered. He made a courtly salutation to all. He took snuff. Again he demanded his daughter. The chanoinesse inquired of Lazare if he remembered her. Lazare said he did not. The chanoinesse denounced the pretender.

Promptly Lazare played his trump card. Reposing on a table where he had placed it on entering the room was a small casket. Lazare opened it. The first object he took from it was a necklace. Lazare was going to prove he was DeMornay by producing the count's papers. He handed the necklace to the duchess. She recognized it as the wedding gift she had bestowed on her foster sister. So, also, did the duke. Jean, who had entered the room, also recognized the necklace. To him it revealed what heretofore had not been clear.

"There is the one who murdered my wife!" said the man who for fourteen years had worn convict's garb. He started for Lazare. The duke restrained him. O'Rourke all this time had been watching intently the rapidly unfolding drama. He had acted also. As Lazare stepped to the door three soldiers put him under arrest.

There was great rejoicing. Jean Renaud was no longer a convict. He was restored to society. The great, free world was restored to him. Adrienne was clinging to his neck.

O'Rourke in a corner of the room was dancing a jig.

LOTTIE BRISCOE.

Miss Lottie Briscoe, for one so young, has achieved remarkable distinction in her chosen profession. She was discovered by Mr. McKee Rankin at the age of 4 years in St. Louis and played the boy in "The Runaway Wife." She starred for three years in "Editha's Burglar" and after that created the principal female part in Russ Whytals' "For Fair Virginia." She was with Richard Mansfield and was always described by him as his one and only prince, in which he referred to her performance in "Richard III." She was in the original stock company at the Orpheum Theater, Philadelphia, playing ingenues there two and a half years. Those who have ever seen the "Two Little Vagrants" cannot help remembering her impersonation of Claude. Wherever she has stayed for any length of time, as in Milwaukee, Providence, Portland, Me., or Columbus, she has been popular and endeared herself to all the theatergoers. During the last 18 months she has devoted her attention and time to moving pictures and is now one of the Lubin leading ladies.

SELIG'S INDIAN TRIBE.

Nothing attracted the attention of the members of the League who visited the Selig plant as the tribe of Winnebago Indians which were camped within its enclosure. There were over 100 of them, men, women and children of all ages up to 150 years or thereabout, coming from the Black River Falls reservation in Wisconsin, and were employed by the Selig Company in a big feature subject entitled the Fort Dearborn Massacre. Among them were Aleck Longtree, William Whiteswan, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brownbear (who are on their honeymoon), James Ogalaafire (a Sioux chief), Henry Eaglebend, and the great Adam Thunder, considered the greatest living chief.

ANOTHER SELIG SUBJECT EACH WEEK.

To meet the demand for Selig pictures the output of the big Selig studios will be increased to five reels weekly beginning September 25th. The new release will appear on Wednesday of each week. Extensive provisions have been made at the Selig plant to take care of the extra release. A number of excellent subjects have already been set aside and the increased product will appear without interruption.

"FATALITY"

(Universal Features)

Reviewed by G. F. Blaisdell.

THE remarkable personality of Miss Cecile Guyon dominates this Parisian stage tragedy. Her work stands out above that of her associates; and the work of all her associates is uniformly of a high order. Her entrance into motion pictures makes for the distinct advance of artistic standards—steadily rising on the silent stage. Probably among the multitude who will critically follow her through these three reels and who will closely observe her acting in succeeding releases, none will be more deeply inte ested than her fellow-actresses of the picture.

"Fatality" is a story of deep heart interest throughout. Not only is the interest sustained; it is cumulative. There are strong scenes aplenty. They are carefully and competently handled. The action is clear and coherent. Most of the scenes are interiors. Chief among these from a spectacular viewpoint is the theater fire. It is highly dramatic as well. Another scene that is impressive is that wherein Cecil, after her attack on Suzanne, goes to the riverfront, boards one of the rivercraft, and leaps into the Seine in the effort to end it all.

Among the notable incidents in this dramatic story are the interview between the two fellow workers Cecil and Suzanne, wherein the former confides her secret love for the young man whom she has nursed through illness; the fainting and the craftsmanlike fall of Cecil, arrayed in wedding garb, as she reads the note of her affianced that the marriage is not to be; the scene portrayed in the accompanying illustration wherein Cecil, made ill by her disappointment and deep humiliation, appeals to her father to bring Arthur to her—in her hysteria tears alternating with smiles—a wonderful bit of acting; the violence of the father when, sacrificing his pride and animated by a desire to save the tottering reason of his daughter, he seeks Arthur, and, finding him in the company of Suzanne, begs him to carry out his promises, only to be repulsed by the successful rival; the unusual dancing at the reception to Suzanne at the Folies-Musicales; the dramatic interruption of the festivities by the entrance of Cecil intent upon slaying Suzanne; the scene in the police station when Arthur, brought in under arrest, discovers Cecil wrapped in a blanket just as she has been brought from the Seine, and on his knees begs her forgiveness, and her clinging to him as he is removed by the unsympathetic gendarmes.

Best of all, however, is that scene near the close where Cecil, recovered from the effects of her immersion, is told that Arthur has come to her. She sits in a chair, her back to the door. Arthur enters slowly, haltingly. Cecil does not turn to greet him. Her eyes are straight ahead. The wonderfully mobile features are illumined by the deep joy in the love she knows is no longer unrequited. Her father stands at her right; she grasps him by the hand and playfully kisses it. Arthur at last stands by her side; he kneels and holds out his arms. The great, expressive eyes of Cecil meet his. In a flash her arms are about the neck of the man who has caused her so much sorrow.

Cecil and Suzanne are close friends. Suzanne asks Captain Martin, the father of Cecil, to visit a sick young man. The Captain does so, and Cecil goes with him. She aids in the care of the young man; in so doing she falls deeply in love with Arthur. It is to Suzanne that she first confides her new feelings.

At the florist's ball, which Cecil attends with Arthur, Suzanne meets Austin Dow, an opera singer. Dow advises Suzanne to go on the stage. This is in line with Suzanne's ambitions, she having for some time been taking lessons. Her preceptor secures for her an engagement at the Folies-Musicales.

Hardly had Arthur and Cecil become engaged and begun to plan for the wedding when Suzanne came upon the scene. Suzanne was attractive; likewise was she inconstant. As Cecil stands in the center of her wedding party, all arrayed for the ceremony, and waiting for the bridegroom, she is handed a note. It is from Arthur. "It cannot be," he writes; "my heart is not my own. I hate myself for what I am writing." The bride that was to have been falls to the floor.

Cecil is dangerously ill. In the opinion of the attending physician, nothing but the return of Arthur can restore her health. She pleads with her father to bring him to her. The father hesitates. With him it is a matter of pride. His love for his only child overcomes his reluctance, and he goes to Suzanne's home, where he finds Arthur at the piano, accompanying Suzanne. Arthur is in doubt, apparently, as to what to do, when Suzanne angrily interferes, roughly casting the venerable father to one side and denouncing him. The father loses his remarkable self-control and becomes violent. Others rush into the room and restrain him.

Scene from a Universal Feature, "Fatality."

Suzanne is not yet satisfied with her conquests. Dow has been an ardent suitor, but to him she has been indifferent. Now enters a man of means, and Arthur is relegated to second place in her affections—in fact, his attentions bore her. Arthur haunts the theater in hopes of seeing Suzanne He meets Dow, who half humorously, half sarcastically, tells him that he has been supplanted. Cecil has in a measure recovered from the shock of her great disappointment. But the love for Arthur is still the one passion. As her affection has endured, so likewise has her hatred of Suzanne become the subject second uppermost in her thoughts. Cecil reads in the newspapers that Suzanne is to be given a reception at the Folies-Musicales in honor of her one hundredth performance.

The news that the woman who has so deeply wronged her is to be publicly honored is more than Cecil can stand. She writes her father a note. "It must end," she says. "I cannot bear it. I must avenge myself against the woman who stole my love. Forgive me, father, and good-bye." Cecil takes a small pistol and, hatless and without a wrap, leaves the house.

The reception to Suzanne is a gay affair. A score and a half, perhaps, of her friends are gathered about one long table, laden with flowers, with viands, with wines. As the repast is concluded a dancer appears. She swings into a typical native dance. The revelers applaud. The dance continues, growing wilder, yet always rhythmical, fascinating. As the performer ceases and bows her acknowledgments to the hearty commendation of the diners, there is consternation at the appearance of Cecil. Cecil goes straight to Suzanne. Womanlike, she must talk first and act afterward. The threatening manner of Cecil has warned the friends of Suzanne. Two of them stand just behind her. As Cecil draws the pistol her arm is seized; two shots are fired, but they go to the ceiling. Cecil breaks away and leaves the theater.

The next scene is the riverfront. Along the quays are moored mastless river craft, looking like so many canalboats. Cecil leaps aboard one of these, and without hesitation goes straight to the bow. Over she plunges into the water. One of the boat's crew has seen her, and is right behind. From the bank others plunge in—one, two, three, four. Cecil is taken ashore, but she has gone down once before her rescuers reach her, and is unconscious. Gendarmes and others wrap her in a blanket and carry her to the station.

In the meantime Captain Martin has found his daughter's note and immediately repaired to the police. As he is showing the missive to the man at the desk, the doors are thrown open and Cecil is brought in. A moment later Arthur enters under arrest. He had called upon Suzanne and had found there her wealthy admirer. In his rage he had choked the more fortunate rival until he was separated by those who had entered the room attracted by the sounds of the struggle.

The father's fears that the blanket-enveloped figure is that of his daughter are confirmed as a gendarme exposes the pale face. His joy as he notes the returning consciousness is unbounded. His arms are about her. Arthur stands a short distance away, intently watching the scene. He starts toward Cecil, but the father warns him away. Cecil, however, sees him and holds out her arms. Arthur is on his kness at her side. Cecil folds him to her. The gendarmes pull Arthur away from Cecil's clasp.

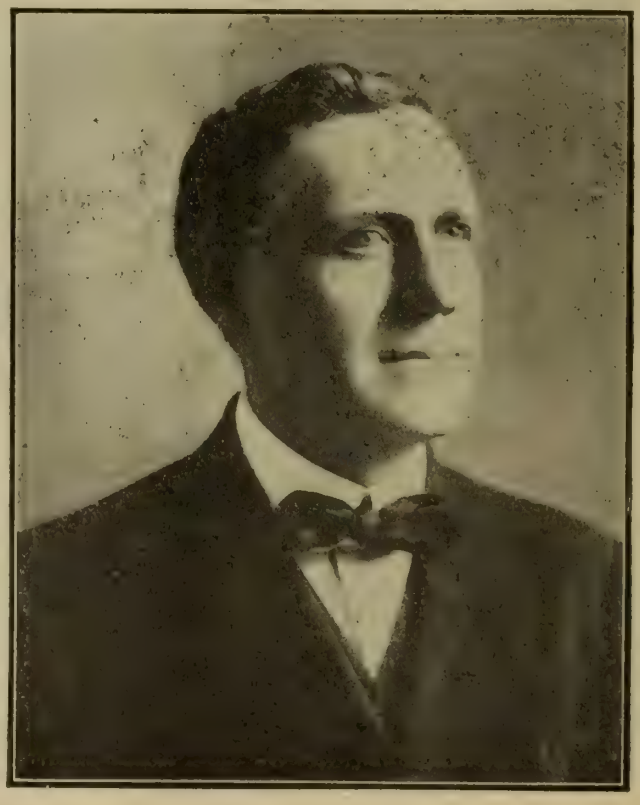
Let us leave Cecil in her newfound happiness to follow Suzanne. There had been no break in Suzanne's fortunes. There had been no clouds. The night following the happenings just recorded, Suzanne was in her dressing room. Her maid was preparing for her for the evening's performance. Suzanne did not know that down below in the great foyer of the theater flames were rapidly spreading. Her first intimation of danger was the presence of smoke in the room She threw open the door. Flames were already licking the carpet at the threshold. Suzanne, followed by her maid, leaped across the blazing fabric and made her way to the foyer. There she was partly overcome and fell to the floor. A man passed near her and she clutched his arm. The man tried to cast her off. Suzanne then saw that the man to whom she was appealing was none other than Dow, her one time admirer, whom she had treated with such scant consideration. Dow recognized Suzanne. He violently threw her to the floor, where she lay still, among the dozens who but a moment before had been running wildly first one way and then another, only to find escape cut off, and had perished in the smoke and flame.

The following morning Cecil read that the wealthy suitor of Suzanne had decided not to prosecute Arthur, and that her lover was at liberty. Almost simultaneously she received word from the maid that Arthur was already at the door and was asking to see her. Then ensued the dramatic entrance previously described.

The final picture is of Cecil in her wedding gown, the same one which she had worn on a previous occasion—on an occasion the horror of which was now departed. The ceremony has already taken place. Cecil is with Arthur, alone—with the exception of the faithful father. Cecil puts her head on Arthur's shoulder. Captain Martin blesses the two. The scene fades with the lovers in fond embrace.

NEW HOUSE FOR JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

The Prince Theater opened at Jacksonville, Fla., on July 20th. The interior decorations are in an elaborate panel effect in several shades of mottled lavender, with framework in bronze. Royal purple draperies are hung at the entrances and exits, of which there are five. A Mirroroid curtain is used and it is set in a bronze frame of heavy mold. The seating capacity is 500 and the rows are spaced 32 inches apart, allowing more than the usual space for convenience. A pipe organ, made in this city, is built in on either side of the curtain and is operated from the orchestra pit. The orchestra consists of six pieces. The theater is exceptionally well lighted and the fixtures consist of inverted ceiling lights and numerous wall brackets, all in wrought brass of modern design. Ventilation is secured through two 42-inch exhaust fans in the rear of the house and two 24-inch blowers in the front, which draw in fresh air through cooling boxes. Twelve 18-inch oscillating wall fans accelerate the air in the house. A ladies' retiring room, with maid in attendance, is a feature. Phones connect all departments. The front of the house is in old ivory finish, with trimmings of striped Italian marble. A glass canopy in front of the lobby reaches to the street line. The operator's room is 14 x 25 feet and all modern conveniences are installed. Two Power's 6 A machines are used. The house is controlled by the United Amusement Company, a local concern, with officers as follows: Walter Mayer, president; D. J. Prince, vice-president; A. M. Endel, secretary and treasurer; O. P. Hall, manager; W. L. Hudson, chief operator, and Wm. Gray, in charge of the front. The manager, Mr. Hall, has had 15 years' experience in the motion picture and amusement field and is thoroughly conversant with the business.



M. LORENZO LUKI,
Appearing in Cines Productions Released by George Kleine.

CHICAGO LETTER

By JAS. S. McQUADE

"IT was a great convention," "I had the time of my life," "Chicago set the pace, sure enough," and many other expressions of similar nature have been heard on all sides from resident and non-resident exhibitors about the second national gathering. It is gratifying, extremely so, to the members of the convention committee, most of whom have been sleeping overtime ever since to catch up on the nods.

The convention was a great educator in many ways. I have heard several Chicago exhibitors refer in very complimentary terms to the fine business qualifications of delegates from the smaller cities and towns throughout the country, and in a way that made Chicago feel small by comparison. These visitors were intelligent, well posted in all branches of their business and able to express themselves clearly and forcibly. They were well read on matters pertaining to their business, which showed that they take time to read their trade papers.

In the great cities, like New York and Chicago, there is a tendency among exhibitors to grind, grind, grind, day in and day out. "I have no time to read," such exhibitors tell you. The nickel obscures everything but the nickel pile. Such men are being left behind in the race. Unconsciously they are retrogressing and, in the long run, they will fall out of the ranks to make way for fitter men.

I know an exhibitor in St. Louis, who is one of the best-posted men in the country, in every department of his business. Five or six years ago he knew absolutely nothing about a moving picture; now he is an expert on technical points and is always studying how to make things better and get in closer touch with his patrons. This progressive exhibitor told me that he gained his knowledge by reading every trade paper on moving pictures published in this country and Great Britain. His knowledge of projection was acquired chiefly from the department devoted to that subject in the Moving Picture World.

It is only a few weeks ago, while talking with a man who had just joined the ranks of exhibitors, that I was looked upon as a grafter because I suggested the importance of reading some good trade paper; of course, recommending the World. "Oh, I don't need any papers," he said gruffly. This man will soon find, if he persists, that the business has no need of him.

The convention just closed has opened the eyes of every man and woman in attendance to the greater responsibilities of the future; and it has succeeded in kindling anew, in every mind, the desire to excel. Ambition has been re-awakened, and a higher sense of the dignity of his calling has come to every participating exhibitor.

Humorous Address at Banquet by W. A. Daniels.

Owing to the great mass of convention matter handled in the last issue of the World, it was only natural that some items of interest should have been squeezed in order to find them a place. Among these was the humorous address made by W. A. Daniels, president of the National Waterproof Film Company, at the banquet. His speech was greeted with such hearty laughter that the many, who were absent, will doubtless read it with zest. Here it is:

Shakespeare says, Words are but wind," so I have been wondering if your toastmaster was insinuating anything when he asked me for "a few words." Accepting the invitation as best I can, I welcome you to Chicago, the Windy City by the lake.

Years ago some one coined the phrase, "It is an ill wind that blows nobody good," but here we have a saying which reads "It is a Chicago wind that blows good for all."

Of course, there are some spots in Chicago where it blows better than in others. These good places you can easily locate by noting a dozen or more native hosiery experts standing nearby. Although I would not look myself, I hope those of you who have "blown in" from great distances to attend this delightful "blow out" will not leave until you have seen some of these windy sights. The "blow that almost killed father" was one of these; it happened when mother got wind of it and caught him straining his eyes with the boys on the corner.

Our weather man here has instruments for measuring the velocity of the wind, but just how high it blows you can best learn from these stocking experts. A New York camera man once tried to cinematograph the pranks of a Chicago wind. He obtained a reel all right, which, for stags and lodge purposes, he figured would be "great stuff;" but alack and alas. Our good Chicago censor ordered it cut in so many places that the New Yorker in despair began to plead that he be allowed to use it as it was, claiming that he really had taken but a few feet anyway. Then the intelligent censor paralyzed him by saying: "Yez can lave in the feet; but, begorry, yez must cut out the legs!"

Of course you all know that the moving picture business has four principal factors—the manufacturers, the exchanges, the exhibitors and the National Waterproof Film Company. With the exception of the exhibitors, all of these grand divisions have their own troubles. Exhibitors have no trouble; for all they have to do is to exhibit pictures, attend conventions and eat, drink and be merry. If anything goes wrong with the show all they have to do is to swear at the operator or some other person around the place; but this is no trouble for an exhibitor. No indeed, it is just natural. You can always expect a natural flow of language from an exhibitor when a certain promised reel, which he has advertised for a certain day, "slips a cog" and fails to materialize. After hearing what he thinks about it we can all be thankful that "film supply" of this sort is not "universal," nor for the "mutual" good. An exhibitor so treated is fully justified in getting service where the "general" treatment is reliable. He can be "independent" about it, too and believe me he would have "license" to be.

Now, in all seriousness, I want to congratulate you upon your association. Association, you know, is just another name for combination, and combination is the outcome of the divine law, "In Union there is strength."

In a homely sense it means that if your piano is too heavy for you to move alone, you can combine your strength with that of others and move the old thing just where you want it. This law of strength in union applies not only to moving pianos, but to moving pictures, and to all business and things commercial as well as physical. Through it you can accomplish much, which singly and alone you could not hope to perform. To think alike on all subjects would possibly be the worst that could happen to you, but on this fundamental question of the benefits of association there can be no division.

Long before the day of photoplays some great orator said "We must hang together or be hung separately." I say to you now that you must stick together or be stuck separately.

It is no uncommon thing to find people who do not care for poetry, and now and then you will run across those who have no love for music. But you can never find any incapable of interest and enjoyment in pictures. This love of pictures develops early in childhood and continues throughout old age. It is exclusively a human blessing, for which dogs and the lower animals have been given no appreciation whatever.

As we grow and become cultivated in pictorial matters, we demand better pictures, and this certainly means that moving pictures presented to our view shall not be marred with dirty scratches and oil spots, whether they be seen on release day or not until months after.

The novelty of moving pictures may fill the theaters for a time, but as novelty wears away people will demand quality; for as we become familiar with a subject we become critical of it. If we get a job in a stable, we soon become a good judge of horse flesh. When we become regular patrons of a picture show, we become critics. You can hear many already discussing focus, light, oil spots and rain, with much knowledge. It must be evident that, to keep pace with them you must supply pictures that will meet their exalted views. This means among other things cleaner pictures.

Although I am interested in waterproof films, which can be easily cleaned by washing with soap and water, I am an advocate of cleaning by any process which cleans. It is not expected that the work of cleaning should devolve upon you exhibitors. This slight labor should be performed by the exchanges; and about all you, gentlemen, can do towards cleaner films, is to kick, kick, and keep on "kicking" until you get them.

This reminds me of old Uncle Eph, who used to work for a Chicago exchange. His duty was to keep the floor swept, so that the customers would not fall over the money that was constantly overflowing from the pockets of the proprietor. You know that all exchange proprietors are very, very careless with money. Well, after Uncle Eph had worked in this exchange for a few months, he had picked up enough money to buy an old mule and wagon, with which he went into the express business.

Meeting him one day with his outfit, I said: "Uncle Eph, what name do you call your mule by?" He replied: 'I calls him 'Exhibitor.' "

Why do you call him "Exhibitor?" I asked.

"Kase," said Uncle Eph with a chuckle, "I calls him 'Exhibitor' kase he's such a pow'rful hard kicker."

Another story I read the other day told of a colored man meeting a dusky belle on the street and say to her "Howdy, Miss Mandy. Whah is you gwine?"

Mandy replied: "I's bin whah I'se gwine."

"Say, gal, whah you mean wid talk like dat?—you'se been whah you'se gwine. Dat ain't no sense."

Mandy's ire rose instantly and she said: "Looky heah, niggah, don't you try to larn me nuthin. I'se bin down to de picture show, an' I'se gwine again; so, sho 'nuf, I'se bin whah I'se gwine."

Concluding, I wish again to congratulate you upon your league and to tell you that the best money you can possibly spend will be for dues and assessments in nourishing and maintaining it for all time to come.

The Other Side Concerning Salted M. P. Theater.

In the issue of August 17, an article under the heading, "A Salted M. P. Theater," appeared in my letter. Alton C. Mann, who was accused by Otto C. Duke of unfair treatment, gives his side of the story, and it is only fair to him that it should appear here.

"It is true," says Mr. Mann, "that I advertised my house for sale; it is true that Mr. Duke visited the house one night and saw a fair sized audience; but it is untrue that there was a single man, woman or child in that audience who did not pay admission on that particular night. I also maintain that I never made any misrepresentations to Mr. Duke to influence him in making the purchase.

"Alderman Danisch, who owns the theater building, and who drew up the papers transferring the lease to Mr. Duke, asked Mr. Duke to read the documents carefully before signing. This Mr. Duke did. I am ready to furnish proof that Mr. Duke spoke to several people about a week after the deal was made, to whom he stated that he was thoroughly satisfied with his bargain. I am amply prepared to meet all charges in court, and have no fear whatever of the results," Mr. Mann concluded.

Chicago Film Brevities.

R. W. Horn, traveling representative of the Kleine Optical Company, will leave for an extended tour of the South on September 1st, in the interests of his firm.

* * *

F. W. Swett, of the Nicholas Power Company, New York City, paid a call at the World office on Tuesday, August 27th

Mr. Swett is well satisfied with the result of his exhibit at the second national convention.

* * *

M. H. Livingston, manager of the De Luxe Theater, Peoria, Ill., made a pleasant call last week at the World office. Business has been very good throughout the summer with Mr. Livingston.

* * *

James H. Hennegan, the genial member of Hennegan & Co., Cincinnati, made several pleasant visits at the Chicago office during convention week.

* * *

Mrs. M. F. Barker, mother of Mrs. John R. Rock, has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Rock for some time past at their home in Rogers Park.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Rock left for the East on Thursday, August 22. "Pop" Rock will entertain the visitors at some Eastern seaside resort for about two weeks.

* * *

On Sunday, August 15, Miss Rose Coghlan, who is now playing in "Fine Feathers," at the Cort Theater, this city, viewed a private presentation of "As You Like It" in the Vitagraph offices, in the Schiller Building, on invitation of John R. Rock. Miss Coghlan was much pleased to see herself for the first time in a moving picture. She described the sensation experienced as unique and one that she could not find words to express.

* * *

Anthony Xydias, one of Houston's pioneer exhibitors, was the only representative from that city at the convention. While here Mr. Xydias got a line on opera chairs and on the latest improved electric musical instruments.

* * *

The Princess Theater, Houston, has been leased by N. G. McGoun, and extensive improvements have been made.

* * *

Miss Lena Seivertsen, formerly of the staff of the general city offices of the Selig Company, has returned to fill her old position, after a stay of twelve months in Seattle. While in that city, Miss Seivertsen was part owner of a moving picture theater. The house showed to excellent business, but Miss Sievertsen pined for home and sold out her interest.

* * *

Miss Margaret Ryan, the engaging young lady who presides at the switchboard in the Selig city offices, has returned from a two weeks' vacation in the Dells, Wis.

* * *

Fred H. Young, manager of the United Amusement Supply Company, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was a caller at the World office last week. This company's offices are located in the Security Building, Cedar Rapids. The company handles a number of feature films on the State rights plan, and also all kinds of supplies for the equipment of moving picture theaters.

* * *

F. H. and E. A. Franke, took over the Bell Theater, Armitage and Albany Avenues, this city, August 1. The Bell seats 530 people. This is the fifth vaudeville house which the Messrs. Franke have turned into successful straight picture houses. They have no doubt that the Bell will be a winner in a short time, like the four others. All the houses now controlled by them were considered "lemons" at the time they purchased them. The California, one of their houses, has just been redecorated and business is excellent. The Clark, another of their houses, is also doing fine business. These enterprising proprietors and managers have just closed a contract for the erection of a new picture theater on Grand and Monticello Avenues. The new house will seat 300 people, and will be completed about November 1st. It will be one of the best appointed of its size in Chicago.

GEM FEATURE RELEASE.

The director of the Gem Studio announces a two-reel feature entitled "The Woman in White." We understand this will be released very soon.

DEATH OF VEDAH BERTRAM.

Miss Vedah Bertram, the charming leading woman of the Essanay Western stock company, died in the hospital at Oakland, Cal., on Tuesday, Aug. 27, after an operation for appendicitis. Miss Bertram was known in private life as Adele Buck, and was the daughter of a prominent Boston family. She was a graduate of Wellesley College and entered the theatrical profession against the wishes of her family. She is believed to have relatives in New York.

EXHIBITORS INSPECT ESSANAY PLANT.

The Essanay Company recently had the pleasure of entertaining Mr. Charles Vance, proprietor of the Dawn Theater, of Streator, Ill., and Charles McNamara, city clerk, during the Exhibitors' convention. They were conducted through the big studio and plant and, upon returning home, evidently were enthusiastic over their visit, for a copy of the Streator paper forwarded contains half a column from which we quote the following:

"The great feature of the Streator men's visit to Chicago was the inspection of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company's plant. They spent nearly a whole day at this establishment and they report it the most wonderful place they have ever had the pleasure of visiting. There they saw how everything pertaining to the manufacture of films is made. They were shown through every department and everything of interest was explained to them. During their visit they were introduced to all the principal actors and actresses that work for the Essanay people. There is a small army of these and they are kept busy posing for the various pictures turned out by this up-to-date company. Many of the people were those seen every day by the Streator people who attend the moving pictures here. They were very pleasant people and gave the Streator men quite an insight into their part of the moving picture business."

ANOTHER ALKALI IKE PICTURE.

"Alkali" Ike is here again! This bully Western comedy to be released during the last two weeks of September is unquestionably the funniest in theme and title ever released. How's this for a title: "Alkali Ike's Pants." Doesn't it just reek with comic possibilities, and can't you just picture in your mind's eye the frantic time little Augustus Carney, world famous for his great character role, is going to have before things are untangled and his trousers are restored to him? You all know by this time what a tidal wave of laughter has rocked the world over "Alkali Ike Plays the Devil," released August 27th, so don't miss a single one of this rollicking series. Each one is a masterpiece!

AMERICAN PRODUCES TWO-REEL ANDREW JACKSON STORY.

The Starved Rock party of "Flying A" players have just completed a two-reel subject on the interesting theme of Andrew Jackson. The pictures are historically accurate and dealing with so commanding a figure as Andrew Jackson are certain of appreciation.

The schoolboy has been given much consideration in the layout of the scenario. For instance, that famous duel between Andrew Jackson and "Dead Shot Dickinson" is faithfully portrayed as per Eggleston's History of the United States and the valuable treatise written by William Allan White. Students will remember the boast made by Dickinson to shoot Jackson through the button which covered Jackson's heart, and the latter's crafty strategem in moving that button some distance to the left.

The battle of New Orleans is also portrayed despite much discouragement in obtaining the proper military costumes of the period. That last final charge of the English on the mud-wall fortifications is as fine a bit of action as ever seen in spectacular, military productions.

NEW PICTURE HOUSE OPENS.

Charles and William Meyers have just opened their beautiful little moving picture house at 1812-1814 West Chicago Street, Chicago, Ill. It is claimed for the house that it is the most up-to-date show on the northwest side. The woodwork is of stained mahogany, with the seats and piano matching. The proprietors have installed the first 1913 Motiograph machine in Chicago. The employees have separate lockers for their clothing at the rear of the building. The managers are so proud of their house that they invite exhibitors to come and inspect it.

BUYS REDWING THEATER.

F. E. Daigneau, of Austin, Minn., father of D. Daigneau, closed a deal recently by which he purchased the fine Davenport motion picture theater at Redwing, Minn. Its seating capacity is 600.

SELIG-PATHE BASEBALL GAME CALLED OFF.

On account of the lateness of the season, the baseball game that was scheduled to take place between the Selig Polyscope Co.'s team and the Pathe players in Chicago, in the near future, has been cancelled. A series will undoubtedly be played between these two teams next season.

FOREIGN TRADE NOTES

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD has from its very beginning recognized the international character of the motion picture. It has realized that the motion picture was bound to promote a closer understanding between the nations. The motion picture transcends the limits of nationality and language. For this reason the interests of the industry will be well served by having a bond of union, which will knit together the Kinematographic world. THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD has been such a bond in the past. There is no part of the civilized globe where THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD does not have its quota of readers. We are constantly receiving letters of approval, assurances of good will and especially inquiries of a business nature from every corner of the earth. The popularity of the American-made film and the constant spreading of the English tongue may in part at least account for the growing interest of the world in the affairs of American filmdom. On the other hand it is well known that much of the foreign product is well liked here. Especially the great feature films of Europe have always interested the American market. To mark the ever present American willingness for honest reciprocity and to provide the readers of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD with an authentic and reliable picture of International filmdom, THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD has decided to establish a foreign department in its future issues. Reliable and competent correspondents will lay their reports before our readers as often as the occasion shall demand it and we hope that the Foreign Department will further vindicate the old established policy of this paper of being useful to the exhibitor and every branch of our great artistic industry.

International Kinematograph Exhibition and Conference in London.

The organizing secretary of the "International Kinematograph Exhibition and Conference" writes to the Moving Picture World that the sessions of this conference will begin on February 7th, 1913, in London, and continue for the period of one week. The exhibition will be held in Royal Agricultural Hall at Westminster.

Many novel features will be included. Among these may be noted the following:

A competition for the most popular picture-player, with prizes for the patrons, actors and managers.

A conference where matters affecting the interests of all those engaged in the kinematograph industry will be discussed and all due publicity given in the general press; amongst these subjects may be noted:

a. Discussion on the perfect security of a kinematograph theater.

b. The value of the kinematograph as an educational medium with practical illustrations.

c. The care that is exercised in choosing films for the English market.

d. Up-to-date methods of establishing and popularizing a theater.

e. The founding of a school or college for picture-players.

Three competitions will take place:

1. For the best plan of a kinematograph theater.
2. The best poster design.
3. The best front of kinematograph theater.
4. For the most expert operator.

What it is Hoped the International Kinematograph Exhibition and Conference Will Do.

1. Prove the extent and importance of this wonderful trade by assembling under one roof machinery, apparatus and accessories representing every branch of the kinematograph industry.

2. Induce members of Parliament and those in authority to effect equitable legislation in matters concerning the trade.

3. Tend to show the substantial nature and profitableness of the industry as an investment and to make easier the introduction of necessary capital into the trade. (Provide the Kinematograph Weekly, Financial News—with what ease much capital is subscribed in Italy and Germany for kinematograph undertakings.)

4. To give provincial, continental and American showmen an opportunity of meeting under one roof and seeing to advantage the different machinery; this must inevitably extend trade everywhere.

5. The industry has grown to such an extent that it has now become worthy of an exhibition and therefore should take its proper place in the industrial ranks with all other important trade undertakings.

6. To enlarge the educational and scientific branches of the industry.

7. To arouse public interest and enthusiasm by means of a large general press campaign which is always made a feature at such exhibitions (the advertising value of this to all concerned is very great and, being of an editorial nature, its worth is impossible to estimate).

8. To re-establish public confidence in the industry.

9. To show those in authority, many of whom have never entered a kinematograph theater, how great is the value of the kinematograph as an educational medium and what a power it has become towards influencing every phase of their every-day life.

10. To establish a bond of union between various people in the trade and to bring them into closer touch with each other. This must inevitably be to the advantage of all parties concerned.

11. To give proof to the general public that every precaution is taken by the trade to ensure their safety, to prove to them by actual demonstrations the security of the apparatus now used and to interest them generally in the numberless developments that have occurred in other matters necessary for their safety.

12. To give show-people an opportunity of seeing all that is latest and best in kinematograph theater work. At the present moment many branches of the trade are so isolated that a buyer has no chance of visiting them all when in London.

Notes from Paris.

A French corespondent writes that their public have developed quite a taste for American films. As a consequence the programs of many of the theatres are often composed almost entirely of American productions. The American films are gladly welcomed as the photography is usually well done and the scenarios or plots well developed and enacted.

The Parisian syndicate have a hall where all the films offered are projected every Monday and Tuesday before a numerous audience of buyers. A large and independent group of directors view each reel and their criticisms are given weekly in a special paper for the trade.

The programs are only changed once a week in France as the showmen believe more in keeping down expenses than in booming business by a more varied program at a higher weekly expense. Managers of many of the shows are endeavoring to enlarge the film market in order to counterbalance an effort to control the number of films offered each week. A syndicate has also been formed to check the boom in film renting and have adopted a tariff of five cents per meter for ordinary film and six cents per meter for artistic film for each week's rental.

EDWARD ROSKAM TO BE A MANUFACTURER.

Mr. Edwin M. Roskam is leaving the Imp Films Company to embark in business for himself. He will make a specialty of taking educational, scenic, local and industrial moving pictures under the business title of The Commercial Motion Picture Company, with offices in New York City and Montreal, Canada. The New York offices will be located in the Exchange Building, 145 West 45th Street.

Mr. Roskam has been eight years in the motion picture business and understands it thoroughly. When Carl Laemmle entered the manufacturing division, Mr. Roskam was the first man he employed, and he it was who supervised the construction of the Imp plant and remained there as its superintendent, in which capacity he has handled every picture made there. As a laboratory superintendent Mr. Roskam stands high in his profession and any firm that he is connected with in that capacity can be depended upon to turn out first class work.

Doings at Los Angeles

Los Angeles Exhibitors Discover Benefits in Organization—Other Notes of Interest.

IT begins to look as if the Los Angeles Motion Picture Men's Association started something when they reorganized after a year and a half of suspended animation and opened a fight on the city authorities for trying to make the motion picture houses the scapegoats in a quarantine against infantile paralysis.

As soon as they had revived and reorganized the association the exhibitors began an active campaign against the health and police departments. They held a public mass meeting and called the attention of the public to the fact that although the picture exhibitors were forbidden to admit children to their houses summer schools were allowed to go on as usual and many other gatherings of children were sanctioned.

Next a number of them began displaying posters and other graphic arguments bearing on the controversy in front of their places of business. The newspapers have been compelled to pay attention to the campaign and two of the dailies—a morning and an afternoon paper—have taken up the fight. It is now alleged that the number of cases of infantile paralysis has been overstated and that the seriousness of the epidemic has been much exaggerated.

An official investigation was ordered by the city council after a delegation of the motion picture exhibitors, backed by several other civic bodies, appeared at a public hearing. The investigation will determine whether the situation is as serious as it has been reported and will also decide whether the quarantine against the picture theaters shall continue.

One thing at least has been proven by the whole affair and that is that, despite the short-sighted view a lot of exhibitors take of it, the motion picture men can accomplish a great deal if they will unite their forces. The organization that has stirred up all the agitation consists of only about 60 members, but in this one thing alone it has exerted more force and accomplished more results for the exhibitors in a couple of weeks than the members could have accomplished as individuals in a dozen years.

A Refreshing Note.

The Los Angeles Tribune of August 22, under the heading of "Virtues of Picture Shows" printed in its editorial columns the following communication, which no doubt will sound a refreshing note for those who are accustomed to hear criticism and abuse on the subject:

> "Editor The Tribune—I attended a picture show last night and saw a fine illustration of the downward and upward course of a man's life. Bless the picture shows! They portray characteristics of all phases. They are object lessons to old and young. Fathers and mothers need them, for they can see many of their own shortcomings, the lack of patience, sympathy, and judgment. The young need them, teaching gentleness and self-restraint. Far better are they than dull sermons of advice wherein practice in the speaker often is a failure. 'Back to the land' is the slogan of to-day. Government and state aid is being invoked to establish state and county agricultural schools. Pictures representing the analysis of water and soil and their relation, the cultivation of soil and the bounteous return glad earth gives her children would stimulate and encourage all to a more scientific knowledge of nature-resources. From such scenes a better realization can be gained of the still processes of the law that creates and evolutionizes all animate and inanimate things. May they eventually evolutionize public schools, the churches, the homes. Introduce them everywhere.
>
> "MRS. U. M. POATES.
>
> "Los Angeles, Cal."

Ammex First Release.

The first regular release under its own brand is to be put out by the Ammex Company, of National City, Cal., August 28, according to announcements which have been sent to the exchanges in this city. After that date the company will release two reels regularly every week. The company has been in existence for a long time and has been turning out a great deal of high grade work in Western and Spanish pictures, but only occasionally have they been marketed under the Ammex brand. It is reported that the company will start with orders for 21 reels of each release and that a great deal of other business is in sight. The word "Ammex" is derived from the two words "American" and "Mexican." National City, where the studios are located, is south of San Diego and only a couple of miles from the international line between the United States and Mexico.

Good Photoplays Scarce.

The experience he has had in trying to get workable scripts since he has been at the head of the Santa Monica studio of the Vitagraph Company has convinced Rollin S. Sturgeon that the business or art of writing photoplays is in a more infantile stage of development than the motion picture industry itself.

In spite of the efforts of men like Mr. Sargent to teach writers the technique and requirements of the photoplay, Mr. Sturgeon says, there is a prodigious amount of worthless stuff being sent the rounds of the studios and mighty few scripts that can possibly be made available.

"I am coming to the belief that perhaps the only hope of the future is for the manufacturers to take an interest in the rare writers who show signs of an ability to grasp the subject and undertake to train them," he says. "I am getting so I almost dread having to go through the manuscripts that are passed up to me, for I have learned by bitter experience how many, many mediocre or bad ones have to be examined to find the rare good one. It seems that not one in a thousand, of the men and women who are trying to sell photoplays, has given the slightest study to the technical side. I would like to buy many scripts from outside writers, but I can't use the things that are offered as a rule. I have been driven to rely almost entirely on two writers who are here in Southern California—William E. Wing and a woman—who have demonstrated that they know the requirements of the photoplay, and who are now "writing a large share of my photoplays for me."

Brevities.

George Melford, director of the Kalem Glendale Company, with all of his players, dodged a couple of hot days this week by taking advantage of an opportune time to make a mountain drama. The entire company went to Mount Lowe for backgrounds of tall pine trees and mountain peaks.

The Santa Monica Kalem Company is reported to be preparing to make a desert picture in Death Valley which will feature Walter Scott, sometimes known as "Death Valley Scotty," the mysterious miner. The scenes are to be laid in Death Valley and Scott is reported to have promised to lead the camera men to his mysterious mine.

* * *

Newsboys of the Los Angeles Tribune, who were given an outing at Long Beach by that newspaper recently, were photographed in motion pictures by P. L Howland, who is developing a new phase of the motion picture industry. Howland makes contracts with individuals and organizations to take motion pictures of picnics, outings, public events, and all sorts of unusual occasions. The newsboys' picture was exhibited at the Pastime Theater in Long Beach for the benefit of the members of the Chamber of Commerce, and it made such a favorable impression that the organization has purchased a number of copies and will arrange to exhibit them under the auspices of other civic organizations in eastern cities.

Howland has also made arrangements to take the only motion pictures of "The Stampede," at Calgary, Alberta, Canada, which opens September 2. It is similar to Frontier Day at Cheyenne, Wyo., and is to be opened by the Duke of Connaught.

* * *

All the war pictures which had been in preparation by the various producing companies operating around Los Angeles have been indefinitely postponed, owing to the fact that the several militia companies of Southern California have marched north to the annual encampment and military maneuvers in which all the State and National troops of California are participating.

* * *

The Alaska-Siberia pictures of the Carnegie expedition, which have been running at the Mason Opera House, have drawn so much profitable business that the engagement of two weeks originally announced has extended into three, with every prospect that a fourth week will be added.

* * *

No additional revelations concerning the plans of the new Brand (or the Brand new) Advanced Motion Picture Company, have emanated from the offices of H. J. Brand, president and general manager, this week. Mr. Brand says that the list of principals who will appear in the company's pictures is nearly completed and will be ready for announcement in a few days. At the same time the names of the nine directors will be made public. The studios and other buildings on the immense tract which the company has purchased in the San Fernado valley near Burbank are being erected as rapidly as possible.

* * *

Fred Mace, of the Bison Company, was the host at a unique "Stein party" given to motion picture people exclusively, at his home, "The Rowdy House," according to the invitations, the night of August 22. The festivities began at 10 p. m., and since the Moving Picture World is strictly a family paper, the hour at which they were concluded cannot be printed. Everybody connected with the motion picture industry in any of its branches in Southern California had an invitation and most of them attended. The result was that part of the party was held indoors and a lot of it overflowed on the front lawn, to the scandalization of the neighborhood. It is reported that the occasion for the arrival of the patrol wagon full of policemen about 3 o'clock in the morning was due to the erroneous report that there had been a riot further down the street and that it had no connection whatever with the Mace function.

* * *

Announcement that the Globe Amusement Company has acquired another motion picture theater, making six in all, was made this week. The new house is the Starland Theater, located on the $1,000,000 Frazer pier at Ocean Park. It is one of the finest motion picture houses in California. J. M. Boland, former owner of the house, is to be retained as resident manager. The Globe Amusement Company is planning to build or acquire and to operate, 15 houses in and around Los Angeles. No. 1 is at Fifth and Los Angeles Streets, No. 2 at Central Avenue and Jefferson Street, No. 3 at Sunset Boulevard and Echo Park road, No. 4 at 18th and Main Streets and No. 5 at Sixth and Palos Verdes Street. All except the last named, which is in San Pedro, are in Los Angeles proper.

* * *

The new Mozart Theater, owned by Mrs. Anna Mozart and operated entirely by women, is turning out better than anyone expected. Although the theater is located on the outskirts of the shopping district and on a by-street the house has enjoyed excellent business ever since it opened its doors. The policy is to provide good music and good pictures and it has been living up to this policy. The first week the feature was "St. George and the Dragon." Last week "The Crusaders" was the principal subject. This week "The Raven" is the bill, and "Robin Hood" is scheduled for next week. In addition to the feature two or three other reels—educational, travel, scenic or industrial—are run each week.

* * *

The smile that won't come off is back in town after having beamed for a little while on New York and a few other Eastern towns. That is to say, W. T. Horne, owner of Horne's Spring Street picture theater, is home from his Eastern trip. People who pass along Spring Street in the afternoon may again see behind the box office window the man who looks like the Japanese god of Plenty. The perpetual smile is really justified, it seems, for all the other exhibitors say Horne is the richest as well as the most prosperous motion picture man in town. Perhaps that is the reason he always draws the honor of heading all the lists with a subscription for $10.

* * *

The Los Angeles Herald, the evening Hearst paper of this city, has been conducting a popular contest to determine who is the most beautiful woman in Los Angeles. There are a great number of contestants. To add to the interest of the contest the management of the newspaper has announced that it has made arrangements to have a 1,000-foot reel made after the decision is announced, showing all of the principal contestants, the ceremonies incident to the awarding of the prize and other scenes of interest in connection with the event. Arrangements will be made to exhibit the reel in this city and elsewhere.

* * *

The Carnegie expedition's Alaskan-Siberian pictures which have been running at the Mason Opera House entered their fourth week this week and will establish the longest motion picture run in the history of this city. The business instead of falling off toward the end of the third week was stronger than during any of the preceding weeks and there is every indication that a fifth week would have proved profitable if it had been possible to keep the pictures that long.

POWELL.

MR. OSCAR APFEL.
Director of the Reliance Feature Productions.

The Reliance Company has recently secured the services of Mr. Oscar Apfel, whose portrait appears herewith, as producer of the Reliance feature films, to be released from time to time, apart from the two regular weekly releases. Mr. Apfel comes to his new position with plenty of experience. He has been stage director at the Chicago Opera House and Lyric Theater; also of the Davis Stock Co., in Minneapolis, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Rochester and other cities. For the past two years he has been a director with the Edison Company, and has to his credit such noteworthy productions as "Martin Chuzzlewit," "The Corsican Brothers," "The Passerby," "Aida," "The Black Arrow," and the Edison historical series.

SELIG WESTERN PLAYERS SCATTERED OVER VAST TERRITORY.

The acting force of the Selig Pacific Coast Studio is just now scattered widely through the wonderland of California, all the way from the islands of the sea to the peaks of the desert-girding San Bernardino Mountains. The regular summer campaign of exploration for beautiful scenery is under way. While Director Colin Campbell is encamped with a company in the interior of Catalina Islands, Hobart Bosworth is directing a company in the lofty forests of the San Bernardinos.

EDISON COMPANY TO RELEASE FIVE REELS WEEKLY.

To successfully meet the demand for the Edison films, the output of the Edison studios will be increased to five reels each week. The new release day is to be Monday and the first additional release will appear on Monday, September 23rd. Many managers will welcome the opportunity of adding this to their program on account of the steady increase in public favor of the Edison Company productions.

NEW MUTUAL EXCHANGE IN ALBANY.

The Mutual Film Corporation is about to open an exchange in Albany, N. Y., carrying the full line of film releases manufactured by the Film Supply Company. In last week's issue we noted a similar exchange just opened by this corporation in Minneapolis, Minn.

H. A. Spanuth, president of the General Film Publicity and Sales Co., has just returned from the coast and informed us that he has several new features to put before the public in a short time. Mr. Spanuth and his partner, Mr. Strouse, have incorporated a music publishing company, in addition to their already large film interests.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

A RECENT suggestion from William Barie, Jr., regarding the marking of his advertisement copy appears to have aroused considerable interest and has brought requests for more light on the subject. As the intelligent use of printer's terms may avoid trouble, we offer a few hints that should help many progressive managers, who may not wish to ask this information of their printers. Many no doubt know their subject well, but the majority of managers do not.

In an older day type sizes were named: Nonpareil, Brevier and Pica being the best known. These sizes were more or less exact, but the brevier of one type founder would not work well with the brevier of another, being a hair line larger or smaller. Some uniformity was required and the point system was adopted. A point is one seventy-second of an inch and the twelve point "em" was adopted as the general standard of measurement. When a publisher tells you his column is thirteen ems wide he means that it is thirteen times twelve points wide. Generally speaking the em denotes width and the point height, though in larger measurements the pica or the pica line are used. If a printer tells you he thinks a three-line letter will be good in a certain place, he means a letter three pica (em) lines high, or a thirty-six point letter. As a rule the point size is indicated up to the 120 point letter, though wood type is generally sized by lines.

The Point.

Few type faces are cut smaller than the six point and few are cut on odd points. Above twelve point the rise is in six point advances, the general faces being 6, 8, 10, 12, 18, 24, 30, 36, 42, 48, 54, 60, 72, 84, 96 and 120 point. A study of points is offered here.

This is six point.

This is eight point.

This is ten point.

This is twelve point

It does not always follow that a six point letter is always the same size. The point classification applies to the base on which the letter is cast and different faces may be so much at variance that one eight-point face may not seem to be larger than a six point in another face. This is due to the fact that some faces may have long "ascenders" and "descenders" while others are short. In other words if the tops of the "h," the "t" and similar letters rise well above the line and the "p" and "y" fall well below, the height of the "m," "n," etc., will be less in proportion to the size than where the stems of the letters rise but a short distance above or below the line, but all six point faces are cast on a base exactly six points high and will fit on a line with any other six point face.

Other faces are cast only in capitals, the majority of the gothics having no small letters, though some gothics, as the Copperplate, have two or more sizes on the same base, it being possible to use the smaller letter instead of a lower case. Copperplate has four heights each in the six and twelve point and two each in the eighteen and twenty-four point and with these almost any combination can be made.

Faces Are Varied.

Each style of type has a name and in many styles there are perhaps a dozen qualifying names. The style is referred to as the "face"; the various styles of one face are a "family." In the Cheltenham, for instance, there are some eighteen members of the "family" at present. These are all cut to the same face, and all have the same general characteristics and all are Cheltenhams, but there is the Cheltenham Bold, the Cheltenham Medium and the Cheltenham Old Style, differing only in that the line of the bold is heavier than the medium and this in turn is blacker than the old style. A monotone is a letter in which all lines are equally heavy; the slant of the y, for instance.

But not all types of the same face are of equal width. Where it is desired to use many words in a small space a "condensed" type is employed in which the curves of the "m" and "n" are shortened, the sweep of the "a" contracted and the type generally made more narrow in proportion to its height. On the other hand it may be desired to spread a few words over much space without increasing the height, when an "extended" type is used. In this the type is made wide in proportion to height and covers almost double the width of the condensed.

Italics may also be regarded as a variant of the face. This is almost too well known to need description, the light line, slanting letter that is used for emphasis.

Capitals and Lower Case.

Where capitals and small letters are cast they are referred to as Caps or Upper Case, and Lower Case. In newspaper offices, before the advent of the typesetting machines, the type was kept in two cases, that the compartments for the small letters might be sufficiently large to contain a proper quantity. Being most used, there were set on the rack below the case containing the capitals and so the small letters became lower case letters and the capitals upper case. In some faces the capitals are cast two heights; the small and large caps, but this obtains generally only in news faces, designed for what is known as body fonts, a font being a quantity of type in the same face and size. Quantities are sold in fonts of 25 pounds or multiples, but in fancy faces, designed for advertising work, where not much of any one kind is desired, job fonts are sold. These are sold with capitals and lower case letters separate, the quantity being indicated by the number of letter "a" contained in the font, the other letters being proportioned to their general relation to the letter "a" as used in setting English words.

As a general thing matter set in upper and lower case may be read more easily than all capital letters, and it is for this reason that the use of all capitals in a line is to be avoided. All capitals may make an apparently better display because there is more ink on the paper and the line stands out better, but legibility is more to be desired than blackness, and the use of all capitals should be sparingly made.

Rule and Border.

The use of brass rule is advertising work is rapidly giving place to borders, even where a single straight line is desired. Brass rule is made up to 18 point but it is seldom found in offices above six point and many shops do not stock it above two point.

In brass rule, as in type, the point indicates the base and not the line. It is possible to get a hair line on a 12 point base, or get a full one point line on a one point base. Brass rule is costly and for this reason as well as reasons of convenience has given place to borders.

Borders are cast in type metal instead of brass, the simplest being merely a straight line cast on bodies one-half, one and four ems wide. Since all type is set to an em measurement it is possible to use this border without cutting and fitting. Straight line borders are provided with square and rounded corners, but from the straight line the border grows in intricacy through various simple designs to the most ornate frames composed of various characters. In advertising work the simple "three on six point" border is the most effective or one of the simpler "newspaper borders." In booklet or program work the more intricate designs may be used to great advantage. Given a sympathetic foreman (with a few passes in his pocket) and an American Type Foundry sample book, you can secure effects vastly more presentable than the reproduction of a special design drawn by some local artist. Even where you have to buy the outfit (or font) of border yourself, you will save money, and by having the designs stereotyped you can use the same font for a dozen designs varying in size and proportion; which is more than can be done with the pen and ink drawing.

Marking the Copy.

Obtain from the offices where you send your advertisements a proof of the different faces they have in the job room. Perhaps they have these ready prepared for the use of patrons, or perhaps you'll have to talk the foreman into setting a style sheet and pulling a quantity for the use of yourself and other regular advertisers. Get him to write in the names and point sizes of all these and when you prepare your copy mark the points for each line and add the name of the face, remembering that to mix too many styles of type in one advertisement is to produce a botch. Stick to certain families and mix these families sparingly, though now and then you can get a better effect with several styles.

If you contract for your advertising by the line remember that agate (5½ point) lines, which run 14 to the inch are meant; not the twelve point lines. If you get it by the inch simply allow 72 points to the inch and figure your space accordingly, but remember that you must allow for spacing. This is usually done with two point leads and six and twelve point slugs or reglets. Reglet is a strip of wood and a slug is a strip of metal of the desired size. Give a good allowance for space between lines, remembering that an eight point type line will look almost half as large again if leaded with two point lead and fully half as large again if double leaded, but if you lead equal to that height of the type, the lines look thin and stringy. This does not apply so forcefully to type larger than 18 point, but it is well to bear the rule in mind and use excess white space only where you have a letter large enough to stand out by itself.

Ornaments.

Be sparing in the use of ornaments. Many printers, particularly the old timers, have a mania for working in ornaments on every possible occasion. There is much up to date stuff that can be used to point up a line or even to suggest a catch-line, but dotting the surface of an advertisement with a motley collection of worn out stock material is the sign of the novice. The Kate Greenaway Mignonettes are handy for a manager who makes his appeal to women and children and there are hundreds of cuts in black and outline that can be used to catch the eye. They can be bought singly or in sets. Many of these sets will come in handy where you are getting up a special program for some club or society. It is best to buy your own ornaments direct, loaning them to the printer as needed and getting them right back. This keeps the cut to you, if you make a good selection, and does not offer an illustration that may have been used by a clothing store the day before and a grocer before that. If you make up an order find out just what the printing shops use—then order something else.

Warm Waves and Pictures.

Carey Wilson, of the Criterion Theater, Rutherford, N. J., hasn't cleaned his typewriter type since the more famous Woodrow of that ilk was elected Governor of New Jersey, but he writes to remark that when the weather gets warm he finds it advantageous to use a few extra window cards calling attention to the fact that the Criterion is cooled by electricity. His last effusion carries the couplet we borrowed from the Moving Picture Sales Agency. There almost always comes a warm spell in September or even October, when some advertising of this sort might help to hold the patronage that follows the opening of the season.

Mr. Wilson also wants us to agitate the question of a price list on the various ages of feature film, which information he should be able to obtain from his exchange.

Come In Early.

The other day we had a letter from a manager who wanted an idea for a float in a local parade. The request was dated just seven days before the day set for the parade and took two days to get here. We will be glad to give ideas of this sort when possible, but those who write in will please remember that this copy is prepared ten days in advance of issue and that questions of this nature should be submitted at least thirty days in advance. If you send a float in your local Labor Day parade let us have a photograph of it.

Better Still.

Here is a letter from W. E. Brewer, manager of the Masonic Opera House, Peabody, Kan. He says:

> In your issue of August 17th, I note in Advertising for Exhibitors that Mr. Chaney, of Hillsboro, Ohio, closed his theater during the local Chautauqua. We have a Chautauqua here, but instead of closing down, for the last six summers I have taken my machine to the grove and have put on the pictures after the regular program, except on Sunday. This year I used the regular service supplied my house by the General Film Company, and I noticed that no matter how restless the audience was during the exercises, we had them quiet for the pictures. I get all my expenses paid and a small sum for the use of the machine. I take out folding chairs and rent them at 5 cents for the session, and in this connection cleared an additional $40. This beats closing down the house.

Now let's hear from some one who had the pictures made a part of the regular program with what may be termed the feature educationals, such as the X-Ray examination of the stomach and some of the crusade films. These could come in as a part of the regular program with the photoplays coming afterward as an intellectual dessert to the heavier mental fare.

Doing Very Well.

The Oakland and Lyric Theaters, Oakland, California, are under the same management and combine in a single four page folder 4¾ by 8½. The first house in a ten cent house, the other charging half that admission. The manager, Homer L. Le Ballister, asks for suggestions.

We think that the compositor has done well with the space at his command, and the lines are well written. About the only suggestions to offer are that the full face titles of the plays be cut into the light face line so that the title will stand out better. As the lines now run they show something like this:

> DUSSELDORFF, GERMANY—The dirigible "Schwaben" is completely destroyed by an explosion.
>
> JOHN BUNNY AND FLORA FINCH, the Vitagraph stars, are IT in a delightful comedy entitled.
> "SUING SUSAN"—Vitagraph.

If the lines were cut in they would stand out better as shown in these (if the compositor does his best):

DUSSELDORF, GERMANY—The dirigible Schwaben is completely destroyed by an explosion.

SUING SUSAN—A delightful Vitagraph comedy in which JOHN BUNNY and FLORA FINCH are cast for the principal roles. Susan sues for John's money: John sues for Susan's hand. Which wins?

THE LIBRARIAN—An Edison feature with MARY FULLER and MARC MCDERMOTT, abounding in dramatic situations and surprises.

Edison cuts are used and where these are captioned the caption is made to do double service, which is not a good idea. The caption should be set in italic and be regarded as apart from the regular announcement. Italic might also be used with profit to distinguish the date from what follows.

Speaking of Edison.

And speaking of the Edison cuts we note that the last issue of their Kinetogram contains a note to the effect that they occasionally have complaint that the fine screen electros furnished by them do not print up well. The editor adds that "any printer will tell you" that half tones will show up well only when used on "smooth" paper, and suggests the use of line cuts for rapid work. We would suggest to the editor that he see some printer and learn of the 50-screen half-tone that is designed for coarse paper. It is rather a surprising "break" to come from the Edison offices. It would involve a duplication of cuts in the coarse screen, but this would be a comparatively slight expense and then cuts might be had either fine or coarse as the management desired. In these Oakland programs the 50-screen cut would have shown up well on the cheaper paper.

Finds Decency Pays.

Here is a letter from Emery N. Downs, of the Knickerbocker Play-House, Cleveland. He writes:

> The enclosed front page display will speak for itself. The above house is located in a very fashionable residential section and has built up a fine patronage since you, at my request, advised me to "keep away from the lurid." I have frequently "cut out" one of my first run subjects that transgressed and have run a clean commercial instead.
>
> All exhibitors worthy of the name are constantly complaining against immoral pictures and those where undue violence is shown. It would seem that the producer or editor of photoplay scripts in some of the companies had in mind a low-browed, blood-thirsty clientele to whom they were catering, or am I right when I picture this so-called editor in my mind as a besotted outcast of the drama, utterly devoid of refinement and honor, one of those unfortunate creations of God who has allowed his mind to grow sick?
>
> You can help to give us more honor and love of the honorable in the pictures and drive out the depraved editor of photoplays who gloats over a chance to show a civilized audience all that is primitive and depraved.

Don't Blame the Editor.

We do not think that editors are so largely to blame for the very frequent transgressions. They are a pretty decent sort of crowd as a whole, but the director is apt to be a peevish person who claims he cannot follow simple directions or interpret the ideas of others, and so he takes a script and "builds it up."

Building it up all too frequently means putting in battle, murder and sudden death, where it does not belong and where the story, of itself, is strong enough if rightly presented.

There is nothing more dramatic than death, yet the funniest story we ever read had a killing in every one of the eighteen scenes of the script save where there was more than one sudden death. The gloomy and the morbid is dramatic, and these recruits from the melodrama and the stock companies are apparently unwilling to dig beneath the surface for the real strength of the story and so add violence in the mistaken belief that it gains strength and the still more mistaken belief that this is what audiences want.

The story in question was "The Battleground," produced as a two-reel subject by the American. It was written by a Cleveland agent of the Humane Society, as a one-reel subject in which a dissolute husband, who neglected his family, was brought to a better mode of life after the society had rescued his wife and child from the distress his excesses entailed. From the skeleton outline it appears to have been a story sufficiently strong and forceful to have made a single reel drama along the lines followed by Selig, Edison, and others in their purpose plays.

Building It Up.

In two-reel form the heroine marries a man to conceal the fact that she has had illicit association with a divinity student. The husband becomes a drunkard and the wife a woman of the streets. The student comes home in holy orders and seeks to forget his yearning for his lost love (he is a Catholic priest), in hard work. He learns of his child, which unknowingly he has induced his mother to adopt. The husband is run down by an auto and the priest also dies.

Just before we took this letter up we received a protest from an Episcopal clergyman who declared that the picture was likely to do more damage to the cause of the photoplay than "The Nun," or similar releases. It also promises to result in the furtherance of some movement to censor films more closely. Undoubtedly the plot was a strong one. In many points it may have found a parallel in real life, but these are not arguments in favor of the passing of the picture by the Board of Censorship—and the censorship tag was flashed at the end of the reel here in New York.

Let's All Work Together.

The MOVING PICTURE WORLD, from its foundation, has made a fight for cleanliness and decency. Its founder, the late James P. Chalmers, suffered both financially and through the loss of some friendships in his fight for fitting pictures, and he has left his fight a legacy to those who now direct the policies of the paper; but the exhibitor, the man who most directly suffers through these pictures, can do the most good. If the immoral and the vicious is refused, the exchange, in time, will also refuse to accept this sort of thing (in the present case we understood that the Lake Shore did return the reels), and if the manufacturer cannot sell the product he will more carefully censor the work of his producers and they, in turn, will acquire new ideas of what is and is not suitable. If every exhibitor who has sent him a picture he does not approve of will write the company making the release, and will keep on writing every time offense is given, it will not be long before a change is made. There is plenty that is dramatic without being violent, plenty that appeals without reference to transgressions of the moral or civil law. In another department we have urged time and again that the production of studio made scripts be stopped, and we are of the opinion that herein is to be found a part of the remedy. It lies there in so far as we can trace.

In England.

In England the needs of the manager are more completely met. The M. P. Sales Agency has sent some hangers illustrating a set of travel views and another combination of trade mark and paper spoken of in a recent issue. We think that if one of the agencies here would get up something of this sort; a strip of trade marks to be used in raising a one sheet to a three, or a one sheet and a portrait into a six or eight, it would pay a return. We will be glad to loan our samples if any are interested.

Mr. Nichols, of the Sales Agency, gives his patrons a far better assortment of paper than is offered here by any company, and finds that it makes for business where the "standing order" is not known and films sell more on their merit.

NEW HOUSES IN NEW ENGLAND.

Mr. Charles E. Schneider, of Springfield, Mass. was in our New York office recently and reported considerable activity in his territory in the moving picture equipment line. In addition to his moving picture supply business in Springfield, Mass., he is in partnership with Mr. Maier and they are remodeling the premises at 247 N. Main Street, Springfield, as a M. P. theatre to seat 400. Ventilating, heating and equipment are all to be first class at an expense of about $5,000.00. Pictures and illustrated songs only will be shown. He is also arranging for the projection equipment of the two new theatres of the Poli Circuit in Worcester, Mass. and Bridgeport, Conn. Each of these houses will seat well up to 3000, and moving pictures will form a considerable part of the program.

The PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

The Dinner.

THIS is the last call for dinner, not in the dining car, but in the dining room of Henderson's restaurant at Coney Island, September 7th. There has been a good response from the photoplaywrights and the photoplay editors are equally eager to get together. We hope that this will be but the first of many similar dinners when the members of the craft can get together and become acquainted.

We are sorry now that we barred the ladies, for Lois Weber writes she is sorry she cannot come. It is not generally known that the clever former leading woman of the Rex Company is a high degree playwright, but she has written a lot of clever plays and has helped direct them as well. She hopes to be with us at the next dinner, and we hope her hope comes out.

If you've a dress suit, don't wear it. We are going to sit down to table at half past five sharp, and dress suits are not ripe until six. Anyhow this is just to be an informal affair with soft shirts and solid comfort. If you see an editor who has turned back your scripts remember that he is there for a good time and don't ask him why. No author who argues with an editor can have anything to eat, and the first man who wants to form a trade union isn't going to stop running until he gets in the ocean up to his neck. Outside of this, a pleasant time will be had by all. Be one of the all.

Twenty Scenes and Sixty.

Those Stockton tables of scenes and our comments thereon have been the cause of many letters in the past couple of weeks. One point that seems to bother the writers is our advice to keep on writing in twenty or thirty scenes instead of meeting the new demand.

Many of the correspondents argue that we give false advice when we tell them to keep on in the old-fashioned way instead of meeting the present demand and this argument runs all the way from polite chiding to stuff that might hurt our feelings if we had not become hardened to criticism long ago.

In the face of all argument we repeat the advice to keep the story down to twenty or thirty scenes and we beg to offer our reasons for this proposition.

The multi-scene drama is simply a thirty-scene drama broken up by the introduction of contrasting scenes. The story proper is told in the old-fashioned way, but the director, when he makes the production, cuts in these contrasting scenes.

As no two directors will have precisely the same ideas as to how and where the scenes should be broken, it is best to tell your story in straight action, as you have always done, and let the accepting director break to suit himself.

Suppose that you have written a scene in which Joe proposed to Maude. He enters the parlor, tells his love and is accepted. That's all one scene. One setting and one run of action is all that is needed, but this scene may run forty feet. That's too long, the director decides, but how much too long depends on the director.

One man may do it this way: Joe enters and greets Maude. He sits beside her and begins to talk. Flash to Harry (who also loves Maude), sitting in his furnished room kissing her photograph. Come back to Joe just finishing his proposal. That's three scenes.

We can do better than that. Joe enters and greets Maude. Flash to Harry kissing her picture. Come back to Joe, who is invited to sit down, Flash Harry regarding the photograph soulfully. Come back to Joe and Maude. He is putting the ring on her finger. That's five scenes.

That's better, but still it's too slow for the ultra faddist. Joe enters. Harry is kissing the photograph. Joe is invited to sit down. Harry returns the photograph to the bureau. Joe sits down. Harry turns away from the bureau. Joe says "Maude, I——." Harry looks disconsolate. Joe says "love, will you——." Flash to Maude's mother listening at the keyhole to see if Joe is proposing. Joe says "you marry——." Harry is getting his hat and coat. Joe says "me?" completing the sentence. You see Harry leaving his house. Maude says "I will." Harry is seen entering a saloon. Joe says: "My darling!" Harry is taking a drink. Maude's mother is delighted. Joe kisses Maude. Twenty scenes.

Does it sound exaggerated to you? Perhaps it is a trifle, but it's what we are coming to if this keeps up. The point is that the three-scene director would not approve the twenty scenes any more than the twenty scene director would approve of only five. You may want to try it on all three directors. Send it in one sane scene and let them do with it as they will, each according to his likes.

That's what we mean by sticking to the twenty or thirty scene photoplay and leaving the rest to the director.

The Bison Matter.

Numerous inquiries have been received as to the status of the Bison-Universal trouble. Most of the inquirers want to know just how the matter has been decided. It has not been decided yet. Both sides claim to be the winners, but there has been no legal decision and probably such a decision will be appealed.

Here's how the matter stands from the photoplay point of view. The Universal Company is releasing Bisons. The Mutual Film Corporation is also offering Bisons. These latter are the product of the New York Motion Picture Company, original owners of the brand.

The plant of this company at Los Angeles is still being run on full time with Thomas Ince as dramatic director, and Fred Mace looking after the comedies. They are buying and using scripts, which should be sent to the same address as before. They may be released as Bisons or as Broncho or Keystone films, both of these brands having been announced by the company. The name on the film is less important than the name on the check, and the name on the check will be honored.

Stories intended for the Universal along the old Bison lines should be sent to the Nestor Company in Los Angeles. Richard Willis is reading for all sections.

Be Careful.

Be careful to whom you send your photoplays, most particularly if you find an advertisement for such in the non-professional press. There are at least three alleged bureaus that advertise high prices for plots that return all scripts but retain for their own profit the ideas of value. One of these advertisers has been practising this scheme on and off ever since he was discharged from the editorship of a film company for stealing the ideas submitted and selling them to himself with the aid of a friend in a distant town, who mailed the scripts and cashed the checks, less his percentage. Deprived of this opportunity, the editor simply advertised for scripts and appropriated such ideas as he liked, selling them to the general market. Not all script agencies are guilty of this practice, nor even a large percentage, but we know of three at least who indulge in it.

Just as a matter of fact there is no reason why you should sell your stuff to outsiders or through a bureau. You will get precisely the same consideration for your privately mailed scripts as will be given the same story submitted through an agency, and in some instances you will receive attention where the bureau script will not be read. You can have a list of addresses for the asking and a stamped and self-addressed return envelope, and with the stories of the film and the information found in this department you will be in possession of precisely the same information as that the bureau has. By using our list, which includes only those companies having a permanent establishment and an outlet through one of the three distributing agencies, you will reduce your risk to a minimum.

The Problem Play.

We are sorry to note a tendency toward the problem play. In the studio as on the stage the problem play is no more than an effort to do something you know perfectly well you should not do.

The frank, unvarnished story of a courtesan would not be permitted, but introduce the "problem" and the play is in fashion. The story is the same plus an alleged moral that very few persons ever regard. In the photoplay the moral is even less obvious, even when put into a leader. Some recent developments concerning recent problem releases will check this growing tendency, but meantime don't tempt the editor with a problem of your own.

Cold Nerve.

Some time ago we stopped using names and addresses in this department because we found that following such publication there came a flood of letters from would-be photoplayrights. Hugh King Harris, for instance, wrote that he had received more than a hundred requests for free criticism, the loan of scripts, and similar favors, even though we did not give his street address, and the letters came merely to the town. He is well known and the letters reached him by the dozen.

But the other day announcement was made of the winners in the Powers Photoplay Contest, and one of the contestants sent to Hal Reid a copy of a letter received from a tightwad genius in Houston, Tex., who did not even have the courtesy to send an original letter, but who carbonized the form and sent one to each of the four winners. The text follows:

> On page 547 of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, for the week ending August 10th, I saw the announcement of the winners in the Powers' scenario contest, which constituted you four gentlemen.
>
> I also noticed that you are experienced and successful scenario writers and I would like to see the copy of your script that won one of the prizes, if, you have no further use for same.
>
> Am very anxious to become familiar with the proper method of preparing script with a view of writing one. Have never seen a scenario form other than those very brief ones sent out by some few producers.
>
> I will return the copy of the script after I have studied same if you desire me to and also will pay the postage both ways.
>
> Trust I will hear from you soon, I am.

Mr. Reid passes it on to us with the suggestion that this ingenuous person wants the script to copy and sell as his own before the publication of the prize play, but we are not inclined to agree with him. We think that this Texan novice is one of the vast army of advice grafters who merely thinks that if he can get the form of a successful play he can write as good himself. We think the letter interesting only as an exhibition of cold nerve on the part of a man who lacks ability and wants to be helped along. We do not think that he obtained any of the scripts; one contestant merely writing that he suggested the purchase of a copy of Technique of the Photoplay, but it gives one reason why so few of the photoplayrights score a hit.

It's not the form in which a photoplay is written that brings success. It's the idea that form conveys, and the perusal of all four of the prize winners will not teach a brainless author to think—and you must think, if you would win success.

We hold it to be the duty of those who have found the trail to help others to find the path, but help does not consist in loaning unpublished scripts nor in undertaking the education of entire strangers. Walk on your own feet. Don't try to climb on the back of some more experienced man.

Your Eyes and the Editor's.

Comes a letter from an exultant photoplayright who lately claimed he had never sold a script. The next week he sold one, and in his joy he propounds some sound sense in this paragraph:

> Each week brings the realization that the scenarios turned down are turned down because they are not good enough. The writer may be able to visualize scenes in a mighty attractive manner to himself—but the editor is not subject to thought waves and unfortunately cannot see it when he is reading the skeleton. There is one particular pet of mine—have had it running around in my skull for six or eight years and always intended to make a short story of it—that I send the rounds. It's going to be redressed and sent out again and again till I wear someone into accepting it. It isn't wonderful, but if it is put out right it will have the grip and some mighty nice little scenes that will be appreciated.
>
> Can a photoplay be too brief? I rarely use more than four sheets, including synopsis. The latter runs about 200 words and I make the first page carry that and the cast. Seenes average 24-26.

We do not think that a photoplay can be too brief, provided that the idea is gotten over. That's the real test of length. If you tell all the action that tells the story (which is different from all the action in the scene), you'll have told enough if it runs two sheets or twenty, but there is too much to the idea that requires twenty pages in the telling and we think that between the two the brief script is to be preferred in a marketing sense.

The writer has solved one great problem for himself when he says that the editor may not be able to visualize scenes precisely as the author does. It is not probable that the photoplay ever is produced in exact accordance with the ideas of the author, but it is possible to get the idea over, and it's the idea that the editor and producer want. Get the plot told properly and if the idea is novel it will sell, but don't get the idea that because the scenes are pretty the weak idea will be excused. Leave it to the director to write the thin seacoast story that he knows will be carried by the seascapes. He can do that himself. But if you send in a gripping plot with the tang of the salt air in it, the man who is going to the shore will grab at the story to bolster up some of the thin little things he is going to make without script.

Mere prettiness of scene will not sell a play and the interest in the scene as a picture may beguile you from the plot. We've seen more than one script that started out as a photoplay and ended up as a suggestion for some lantern slides.

Undoubtedly some scripts are too brief in that the author writes too little, but for each of these there are scores turned back because they are word paintings rather than plots.

And please note that this writer gets his plot into 200 words. He has full fifty words to spare. There's hope for a man like that.

Go the Route.

While one correspondent tells of a script that has been the rounds and will be sent again and again in revised form, E. W. M. writes:

> To date I have written seven photoplays; never sending them to more than two places, as two rejections make it appear that the effort has fallen short of requirements. It was rather difficult to read the signs at first, as rejection slips did not offer any information as to what was wrong, but the last crop were a little different, one editor being kind enough to write a page of advice. The other rejections were due, I think, to the fact that the scripts were not quite within their line. I figure that if one can, within the year produce anything that is worth considering, the case is not absolutely hopeless.

It seems to us that E. W. M. supplies his own answer when he says that he thinks some rejections were due to the fact that they were sent to the wrong place. Two rejections do not constitute proof of worthlessness. Every day some script goes back into its envelope with a sign of regret that the lead is for a man instead of a woman, or vice versa, that the leading role is not suited to any of the company's players, or some similar reason that has nothing whatever to do with the merit of the story.

Send your stories to every possible market. If you still have faith fix them up and send them out again. More than one story has sold at its first port of call the second time round, and only the other day we saw on the screen a story that had not only been rejected once by practically every company, but which had been turned down a second time by three of those companies.

Were we E. W. M., we think we would dig up those seven scripts and send them to seven places each, selecting those companies most likely to do that style of story. The best way to find out which is which, since you cannot see all screened stories, is to look each week through the Stories of the Films in the back part of this publication. Don't read the hints on selling manuscript in correspondence school courses or send five cents in coin for a list. Read the stories to be released next week and know what the company is doing now. Find out what is wanted, then send your stories over the route.

Leaders.

Just because the ideal story contains no leaders is no reason why leaders should not be used now and then. Leaders have their uses and should not be utterly despised.

In one recent script there was a lapse of some years between scenes, but no leader marked the passage of time. The heroine took the hero to the train, after that we saw her home, she drove back to town, the hero gets off the train, and meets the girl. Before his arrival a two-word leader, Jim Returns, marked that obvious fact, but so far as the time went Jim might have gone to the next town on the local returning the same day instead of several years afterward. A leader to the effect that it was five years later, used before the trip to town and not just before the hero's return would have cleared the situation at a cost of three feet of film.

Leader is to mark the passage of time or convey any other explanation that cannot be photographed. Do not avoid it when it is necessary. Seek rather to employ it intelligently. Leader interrupts the story, but the story should be interrupted when there is a break in the continuity of the story. The leader acts as a sort of mental punctuation. All this has happened in one day. Now here are some things that happens a week later. The break helps to mark the change. Use it.

Don't Be Ashamed.

Don't be ashamed of your hero. Did you never try to write one of those stories where all the time you had to keep making excuses for your lead? You can't interest yourself or your audience in a man you have to keep apologizing for. Will is a fine fellow. Of course he took that money from his father, but then it would be his own money some day and anyhow the old man kept him too close. Jim is all right and it's not his fault he gambles and gets so drunk he tries to thrash policemen. His mother spoiled him when he was a little boy and his father doesn't care for him, and won't bother to keep him headed straight.

You've seen that class of story if you have not written them. We have seen them and we've never seen one yet that really caught hold of our interest. It's even worse when your leading character is a woman.

All the time you're writing you're ashamed of the people you are mixing up with. You may not be conscious of it, but you are. You don't put all the vim and snap into the story that you might did you have a really nice girl to write about. It may be a nice problem that you handle, but you don't like the girl yourself, and you can't make others like her any more than you can. The specked peach never gets the star place on the fruit stand, and the speckled heroine should be left alone whether the specks go down deep or are merely upon the surface.

Be Explicit.

Only the other day a chap wrote that he had received a fiction script from a magazine editor with the comment that it seemed to be an interesting story, but that they could not find out what it was all about.

That's the comment that might be passed upon scores of photoplays. The script seems to suggest a good idea, but the working out of the plot is so vague and indefinite that it is never quite certain what the writer is trying to tell. As a rule the synopsis gives a hint of the writer's real meaning, but we've seen manuscripts in which the synopsis was even more vague than the action.

It's not always the novice that sends the story in, at that. Sometimes the trained writer lets a story go out that he knows all about, but which lacks full explanation. He knows why certain things are done, but he forgets that the editor doesn't. Don't take it for granted. Before you let your script go out, be absolutely certain that it is all there. If you can't be certain yourself, get someone else to read it. If they can get all the story probably the editor can.

Workman and Amateur.

Judging from the contemplation of numerous plays, it would seem that the greatest trouble with the man who complains that the editors will not take his stuff is that he does not go about his task in a workmanlike fashion. After all, the difference between a trade and a profession is largely a matter of degree, and in profession as well as trade the workman like man is the winner.

The real worker gets an idea. It may be an inspirtation or it may be the result of careful thinking and planning, but it is an idea. He examines it as carefully as does the cabinetmaker his wood, the jeweler his metals. He tests it, he assays it, and having put it to examination and found it good, he proceeds to fashion it.

Here is a certain idea capable of certain developments. Please note that the plural is used. From a bit of gold a jeweler may fashion a ring, a chain or a watchcase. With an idea the author may work out a short or long story or a photoplay, and just as the rings or chains may vary in design so may the story or photoplay be capable of variation. The expert studies all the possibilities of his plot, changing a situation here, a motive there until the result represents the best he can do with his material. Then he makes a clean copy and sends it to the company most likely to produce that sort of story.

The novice is more apt to have an idea, slap it down on paper and send it to the company whose plays he likes best, irrespective of the question as to whether or not the company makes that style of play. Then he sends it to another place and another, until repeated rejections cause him to exclaim that authors stand no chance; that editors cannot recognize genius.

There is no examination as to the probable freshness of the plot; no careful study of recent production. The novice has thought of the idea. It must be new because he just thought of it. All that remains is to write it and send it out and its prompt return is a certain sign of lack of understanding on the part of the editor. Because the novice wrote it it must be the best possible version of the story; if indeed not the only one. The workman may try a score of developments.

Every apprentice must serve his time, and in that time he must learn by his experience, but the apprentice who wants to quit after a few months because his work is not recognized as better than that of the journeyman never will become a qualified workman any more than the beginner who wants to sell four out of five of his photoplays from the very start will ever become a photoplaywright.

In the language of the glowing advertisements, "you do not have to possess literary ability to write photoplays," but you are required to possess imagination, tempered by common sense, application, persistence and patience. If you lack these qualities quit, but don't kick. The fault is yours, not the editor's.

Writing the Editor.

Although this matter has been treated before, so many new readers are added to this department each month that there are half a dozen requests for light on the subject of writing the editor when you send a script.

There are two big objections to sending a letter with a manuscript. The first is that it takes up the time of a busy man. The second and more personal objection is that you are more apt to hurt than to help the sale of the story.

There is no necessity for the brief note that merely states that you are offering a script for sale. The fact is self-evident. If you seek to be facetious the editor is apt to make some remark about hiring a hall. He is there to read scripts; not comic supplements. If you offer a long-winded argument that this story should be accepted because it will make a splendid photoplay, you prove not only that it is not so good as you think, but you've put the editor in a Missouri frame of mind and it is going to be hard to prove to him that you speak truly.

But above all is the letter that suggests that it is not necessary to remark that this is your first script, as the editor will probably see for himself. Somehow there's something peculiarly irritating to most editors in that bromidic sentence, and it is just as welcome in the studio as the suggestion that you hope to pay your way through college or clear off the mortgage of the dear old home, a postcard portrait of which you send only it isn't very good because it was taken on a cloudy day and Jimmie Jones is just learning anyway.

All of this is old to the editor and doesn't interest him in the least. He feels that if he buys your script you'll develop into a pest, so he buys another instead and you've lost a sale because you did not let your story speak for itself. Maybe the editor is sorry because the dear old home is going to be decorated with a red flag, but that's no reason why you should wave the scarlet bunting at him. He's a photoplay editor, not the head of the Carnegie Fund, and his business is buying scripts, not relieving distress.

There is a way of getting friendly with the editor, but when you are in a position to work the scheme, you'll know how without being told. Meantime, just put your script and return envelope inside a larger one and send it on its travels. It's the best way.

Have You the Picture Eye?

Here is something that a friend of the department sends in. It is the reply of Phil. Lang, of the Kalem Company, to a question as to whether or not his company could use psychological scripts, and why. He wrote:

> The successful photoplaywright is the one who has developed the "picture eye." If you will visualize each scene of this scenario, abandoning the "psychology" which inspired it, you can readily determine how it will appear to the picture patron. This is not a criticism of your play but an answer to your question. The psychology of an action or development of an act in the photoplay is only psychology when the natural pantomime and business make it clear to the spectator. By the process of visualizing you can readily determine if your play offers anything different from others of the same character which have been done.

This applies to other than the style of script mentioned. The photoplay is first of all a picture of a story. If the picture that tells the story is without interest; if it simply shows men and women walking about the stage without telling any story, it does not matter how good the underlying theme may be nor how close the character study. The mental processes involved must be presented to the audience, by means of startling situations and vivid action. Get the picture eye. We've said that before, but Mr. Lang puts it all in so small a paragraph that you can paste it on your desk. Men like Mr. Lang and Lawrence McCloskey, of the Lubin Company, are doing more to help the photoplay than all the correspondence schools in existence.

INQUIRIES

NOTE—No questions can be replied to by mail. Look for your answers here. A list of studio addresses, kept up-to-date, will be sent if a stamped and addressed return envelope accompanies the request.

K. S.—Miss Cassinelli has not yet left the Essanay Company. See elsewhere for Miss Bertram's death.

Q. Q. Q.—Miss Blanche Sweet was Nancy in Biograph's "The Lesser Evil." Miss Mary Pickford had the lead in "The Schoolteacher and the Waif." Mr. Anderson may be addressed at Niles, California.

G. H.—You mean Comet's "Two Women and One Man." Place to the ladies. The man was Frank Smiley and the leading woman Miss Mabel Miller.

MRS. C. L. M.—Lola and Strongheart in Pathe's "A Redskin's Appeal" were Red Wing and George Genhardt. Essanay did not cast the wife in "A Wife of the Hills," the name not being known to the home office. Alkali Ike's bride was Mrs. William Todd. The fake widow was William Todd. Jerold T. Hevener had the leads in Lubin's "Dream of a Lobster Fiend" and "A Windy Day."

READER.—Next time give your name. When the lights seem to be turned off in a motion picture the diaphragm is stopped down. If you have or can borrow a plate camera look at the glass and let someone turn the ring, showing how cutting down the opening darkens the plate. Where the light is turned off and the firelight glows, the latter is produced with a strong spot light through the fireplace opening. Most companies educate their own cameramen. This paper has a large circulation in France, but is not sold on the stands. Subscribe before you leave or order through Brentano in Paris.

K. B.—The Bison-101 Company is in Los Angeles. The Bison-Universal in New York.

M. E. H.—Wallace Reid was Miss Robinson's lover in Reliance's "Kaintuck," Robert Tabor was the artist and Virginia Westbrooke the child. Sorry, but we have no exact information on the other questions.

F. F. S.—Take up the matter of the soft emulsion with the company. It seems to be some unusual freak. The rainy streak is possibly due to careless handling of the negative in the projection machine before the positive prints are made. The company is rushed with work at present and this makes for carelessness. Miss Lawrence heads her own company, the Victor. See the Universal advertisement for details. The Board of Censorship tag is in the nature of an official stamp and must accompany the film. It cannot be sent out by itself.

E. E. N.—It is possible to take a short story and work it into fiction form, but it is neither legal nor honest. The idea is not yours; you did not think it up nor did you acquire it by purchase. We had the pleasure of showing up one of these thefts very recently and the fictitious author got into trouble. If you can't think your own ideas don't write. Essanay is buying a little, but is not formally in the market.

J. C.—Your first question taken up elsewhere at length. It is our experience that in the long run "at regular rates" pays better than a set price save in some isolated instances. The trouble with a stated price is that you are apt to cut too low or set a prohibitive price. Very few experienced writers set a price. If a company is stingy they go elsewhere. Very few writers can properly judge their own work.

M. E. D.—We state the rules correctly. There are exceptions to all rules and this does not alter the wisdom of the advice. Crimes and abductions generally occur in studio-made scripts. "Her Hour of Triumph" was not a magazine story, but a French classic. If it was offered as original the probabilities are that the author is sorry that he took money for a theft. If it was studio made it supports our point that stories done from standard fiction are not wanted from outsiders. If you can't get a story back notify the company by registered letter that you withdraw it and send a new copy elsewhere.

H. D. Q.—See top of column for first two questions. Miss Blanche Sweet was lead in Biograph's "The Temporary Truce." Miss Phyllis Gordon was leading woman in Selig's "The Lake of Dreams."

L. G. L.—It doesn't matter whether a man is killed or merely assaulted. If it is too violent it will not pass the Board of Censorship, though more depends upon the manner of the crime and its emphasis than on the crime itself. The unwritten law reads, "Murders and other scenes of violence." The Armat Picture Company mentioned in the Philadelphia anti-trust proceedings has reference to the interests of a man who had much to do with the perfection of the motion picture. We do not know its exact legal status. If the company still exists it is a very old, not a new one.

A. E. F.—There are too many "winsome blondes" of Biograph fame to mention any particular one of three years ago. What parts did she play in remembered films? In regard to the second question we asked for no excuse. None seemed to be needed. The Solax Company is now in Fort Lee.

KATHERINE S.—Jack Standing is in vaudeville with the Belasco production of the "Drums of Oude." The company is playing the Western Orpheum time at present. Please give more definite information as to the advertisement you have reference too. Never heard of the Weekly Moving Picture Book.

F. G. T.—The company does not state the name of the woman player. The Sheriff in Essanay's "The Sheriff and His Man" was Arthur Mackley. Do not know of a Miss Anderson in Reliance. Don't you mean Thanhouser? We do not think she is related to G. M. Anderson.

H. K. B.—We refuse to try hard to place the missing Pathe player. Looks too much like press work.

D. R.—Miss Mary Fuller is the player you seek to identify.

T. R. M.—We think the Home Kinetoscope an admirable device. In course of time, when the machine comes into more general use, it is probable that films may be exchanged at local agencies instead of being returned to the factory. Do you remember the early days of the phonograph? Yale Boss is Yale Boss. That is his name. He is a clever youngster with the Edison players. We don't get your said that "eleven and a half inch knife." Maybe it was a twelve-inch knife reduced by sharpening.

NOT INQUISITIVE.—"On the same reel" means that two subjects are used to make the standard thousand-foot length. The second and third questions seem to refer to the Eclair advertisement. Ask them. We have nothing to do with the matter. They want good stuff for their advertising booklet and are willing to pay for it.

W. A. G.—The tenth Edison historical has not yet been announced. Have not heard that the Motion Picture Patents Company was going to be dissolved. They are being proceeded against, on certain points, under the Sherman law, but that does not constitute dissolution. A court decision on the point at issue affects only certain phases of the company, not its entire formation. We do not place the film company mentioned. Nestor has discontinued the "Young Wild West" series. Bison-101 Ranch is making pictures right along.

ED. H.—We do not recommend correspondence courses, for the reason that "Technique of the Photoplay" teaches you the same thing in really practical form. The courses are amateurish.

M. M.—Eight leaders are not too many if the story actually requires that much, but we think you can eliminate some if you work over the script long enough. Clean your type and use a quicker touch and your work will look neater. Your paper is a trifle too light. A box will last you so long that the difference of half a dollar in the cost of 500 sheets is not a real saving. Get a twenty pound bond for your original and some yellow "second sheets" for your carbons and sketch work.

J. L. C.—We have sent your letter too the company with the request that they supply the information.

CONSTANT READER.—There is no set price for film service. Your question is too vague. Apply to the exchanges.

H. K.—Guy Coombs did not recently join the Kalem section in the Holy Land. The Egyptian section is now working in Ireland. When they needed more players for "The Life of Christ," English players were secured. The Florida section of the Kalem Company, which includes Mr. Coombs, is working in the vicinity of New York, but will go South again with the approach of cold weather. Mr. Halliday and Miss Buckley have not been with Lubin for several months. They were playing stock in Cleveland the last we heard of them. Why not write the paper for the interview? We cannot spare the space.

E. S. T. J.—We do not place the first Bison title. No information is to hand about the other. Stanner E. V. Taylor left the Rex at the same time that Miss Leonard did. Francis Ford and Bertram Bracken are two distinct identities.

J. A. M.—Miss Ethel Wright was the poor mother and Miss Lilia H. Chester the Manufacturer's wife in Thanhouser's "The Cry of the Children." Mr. Henderson was the Uncle in the same company's "The Twins." There are several "leading" Thanhouser actors.

H. W.—Our identifier does not get that name you want.

M. P. READER.—Sign your name, please. Miss Adele Lane and Burton T. King were the nurse and doctor in Lubin's "The Ingrate." They seem still to be with the company.

M. L.—Miss Fuller was not in Edison's "Their Hero." Miss Natalie Kingden had the leading part. Ben F. Wilson was the lead in "The Passing of J. B. Randall & Co."

G. O.—The irritation at the mishandling of scripts in the Universal office seems to be due in part to the newness of the organization. There is a deal of dissatisfaction at the way Hall Reid is handling affairs and we think the problem will work out its own solution. You are wrong in stating that any company now acknowledges the receipt of scripts. Ten dollars for full reel scripts seems to have cut down the supply of good material, but we know of a few payments as high as $25. Just wait.

DOROTHY.—It isn't a bit ladylike to lie, but King Baggot played John Prentiss in Imp's "Tempted But True." Jack Richardson is the American's Jack.

G. B. W.—Miss Mabel Normand was the wife in Biograph's "The Furs." The other player is not stated.

I. T. Y.—Write the American regarding the photographs. Pathe pays for ideas, not for suggestions that they visualize some published story. Read up the column for answer to your last.

M. L. E.—We have not the Biograph names you want. We are not interested in rumored divorces. Edwin August is with Lubin.

M. B. L.—Most companies require a short synopsis. Some refuse to read unless one is furnished. Write one on the first page with a cast of characters, and keep the synopsis within 2500 words. It can be done if you merely tell the facts of the story and not the whole story.

Comments on the Films

Licensed

"HER GRANDCHILD" (Vitagraph), Aug. 19.—Mrs. Maurice as the mother, and Maurice Costello as the son, have the leads in this drama of the home. It is a story of a wayward son who causes the expulsion by the elders of the kirk of his mother from the parish. The son goes away, promising to return when he is a good man. Three years later a child is left by a dying mother in the care of the elderly woman. The son returns, prosperous looking, and declares that the child is his, its mother having left him in his wild days, to which fact he ascribes his awakening. There are some good situations, especially the one in which the son returns to his mother and informs her that the child she has cherished is her own grandchild.

"A MATTER OF PRIDE" (Cines), Aug. 20.—This picture can hardly be described as one that is good to see. Distinctly it is unpleasant. The story turns on a man forced by circumstances to beg. A young woman puts her foot on a note and tells the down-and-out he may have it if he will pick it up with his teeth. The remainder of the picture is devoted to the uncovering of a chain of circumstances that enables the aforesaid young man to get revenge for his humiliation. "A Matter of Pride" is not in the same class as the Cines' releases we have been seeing recently.

"MR. PICKWICK'S PREDICAMENT" (Edison), Aug. 21.—A splendid picture, one that an exhibitor may bank on. All the Edison male stars are in the cast. There is some delightful comedy, especially in the court-room scene. The particular adventure portrayed is that of the entanglement best known as "Bardell vs. Pickwick."

"JEALOUSY ON THE RANCH" (Pathe), Aug. 21.—The feature of this picture is the fine panoramic view of the round-up. There are plenty of lively incidents, including the roping and branding of a horse, but the camera work stands out.

"THE MOTH AND THE FLAME" (Melies), Aug. 22.—A story which at times, perhaps, is not exactly pleasant, but it is well put on and has some excellent photography. There is one magnificent "back drop."

"HER ADOPTED FATHER" (Essanay), Aug. 23.—A good story, tenderly told. While perhaps the child in motion pictures is being overworked these days in the effort to get something unusual, the little girl in this film does her work well. The character of the "adopter" is taken in an especially sympathetic and feeling manner, and opposite to him is Miss Branscombe. Miss Cassinelli takes the part of the sister. It is all well done—so well done, in fact, that many an impressionable man and woman will experience an unusual sensation at the throat. There is a happy ending.

"THE WAR ON THE MOSQUITO" (Edison), Aug. 24.—This is an educational film; also, and this does not always follow, it is decidedly interesting. Of particular interest is the pictorial description of what is being done in New Jersey to exterminate the mosquito. The last scene, showing the birth of a mosquito, is a rarity among picture achievements.

"RUBE MARQUARD WINS" (Kalem), Aug. 24.—This picture marks the initial appearance of Kalem's "four-a-week," and it will be sure to make a hit. There are 1,323 feet of it, and every one of them will have interest for the male end of the patronage. Marquard takes to the camera as he does to baseball—just "naturally." Perhaps his vaudeville experience stood him in good stead or maybe it was his known modesty. It is a certainty that exhibitors who keep no check on their audiences will find the small boys sitting through to see again the demonstration in close-camera work of this south-paw with the slow ball, the curved ball, the "turkey trot" (one of Marquard's own), and the fast ball. There is, of course, a plot, but it is an excuse only; the interest will center in the baseball pictures, taken at the Polo Grounds. They are excellent.

"A CORNER IN WHISKERS" (Essanay), Aug. 22.—A clever idea, quite fresh, does a good deal to make this release a bright comedy. A good producer and able comedy-players do the rest. It is very enjoyable and made many hearty laughs. It is true that in this situation there is something that doesn't convince. The sprite of fun is kept in a cage, so to speak; but he's there and sings. William Mason with Eva Prout, as sweethearts, play the leads. Dad, whom we don't yet know, is good as the objecting, but outwitted parent, and Dolores Cassinelli is fine as the mother.

"BETTY FOOLS DEAR OLD DAD" (Selig), Aug. 22.—Old situations certainly do furnish good entertainment when a writer comes along who can treat them freshly. There are several new and very funny twists in this comedy, and there is also novelty in its use even of old things. It gives a runaway match with the laugh (it is a laugh) first on the lovers, then on Dad, again on the lovers, and last of all on Dad. Once or twice Dad seems "easy," but the laugh comes just the same. This is chiefly because it is amusingly acted, and, although it may be thin just for a moment, something funny folls very quickly.

"THE ANCIENT BOW" (Vitagraph), Aug. 21.—A tragic picture well-drawn enough to startle the emotions somewhat at its close, but it is a bit slow in getting under way. In general, one can safely say that it is dangerous to use a squaw-man for a picture's hero. Especially in the West it is likely to displease, but white people everywhere are apt to find in such a character something with which it is hard to sympathize. In this picture, where the center of interest is the squaw, and where the squaw's character is given great dignity, the disqualification is only momentary and soon evaporates. The human soul always and under every circumstance rises above even race and color. This is a picture of the soul. It is quite clean, at least in its big second half of sentimentality, and we commend it as a worthy release.

"THE FRENZY OF FIRE WATER" (Kalem), Aug. 21.—An Indian story, but a good one. One sees pictures dealing with situations that are human and fresh, and in which characters who happen to be Indians appear. This picture is of the more common kind; it depends for its suspense on capture, rescue, chase and battle, but it holds up the suspense very well. The bigness of the canvas on which it is drawn and the large number of figures in it make it impressive. The very sight of a long caravan of prairie schooners in an Indian country is a thrill. On the other side, the scores of red men on horses, who pour down upon the waiting settlers, make the beginning of an adequate climax. This picture has another merit. The primary situation is a significant one, and strongly calls to the attention. There are short-comings in the conduct of the story, but they don't hide its great merits.

"THE BEAUTY PARLOR OF STONE GULCH" (Kalem), Aug. 23.—A farce whose name will at once make its qualities clear to all who watch the films. Miss Ruth Roland in the lead adds something to it, and there is a new twist at the end, otherwise it is like other farces that utilized this old situation. It is amusing.

"WORK IN THE UNITED STATES ARSENAL" (Lubin), Aug. 23.—A very interesting film that many will find very instructive. It shows how flags, uniforms and such accoutrements are made. The embroidery machine is worth seeing. It's a very good film.

"A WATER FIGHT" (Lubin), Aug. 23.—On the same reel, a very short farce, which makes a fair reel filler.

"LAND SHARKS VS. SEA DOGS" (Selig), Aug. 23.—The average spectator will get healthy satisfaction from this picture, which shows how two simple sailors "get back" at a swindler who had sold them a "farm" under water. It isn't strictly dramatic, but it will be liked.

"FROM FOREST TO MILLS" (Selig), Aug. 23.—On the same reel is this longer industrial. Its special interest comes from its fine views of the machinery for handling the big logs at the mills. The forest photographs are also of interest, but are not so clear. Spectators will be glad to see it and the two on one reel make a good release.

"SAVING AN AUDIENCE " (Vitagraph), Aug. 23.—A picture in which Mrs. Maurice takes the part of Susan B. Anthony, and she pictures her as a very dear old lady. The most devoted admirer of this pioneer in the woman's rights movement would probably feel thankful to her for the characterization. The picture was written by Will Carlton. We cannot say it was skillfully put on. The first scene was written to center the interest in a young girl of talent. The scenes that follow shift the interest to four inconsequential college youths, who are only figures, and in whom we have very little interest. Again, from the moment these four come in touch with Susan B. Anthony, she becomes the center of very wakeful interest. From that point it is a first-class production. We know who Susan B. Anthony was and how she would probably behave. Mrs. Maurice adds greatly to our interest in her as a character in a picture. From that point, too, everything else in the picture (youths, girl, and audience), adds to our interest in Susan B. Anthony and in how she is going to act in the situation. This last half is excellent.

"THE PARTY DRESS" (Vitagraph), August 24.—An extremely pretty, but somewhat artificial picture. It is very well acted. Its object, which is to create a poetical impression, is accomplished very well. The heroine has no dress for the party; but puts on her grandmother's dress of sixty years ago and finds that it is in the latest style. Charles Kent, Miss Helen Gardner, and Earle Williams play the chief roles in it.

"ON BOARD THE KAISER WILHEM II" (Vitagraph), August 24.—A very interesting picture of a big ocean steamer.

"A CHANGE OF SPIRIT" (Biograph), August 22.—The interest in this picture that holds us strongly comes almost wholly from its characters. Our minds wait more or less breathlessly upon the action, but we have seen the same things happen before and have not been deeply interested. The "change of spirit" comes to a burglar after he has fallen in love. He has broken into the girl's house and what happens there shows him that his ways are not worthy, it makes him ashamed. The breath of life has been put into the characters in this instance, and it has been accomplished quietly; the effect is merely to make us think that the story is fresh and unusually entertaining. Miss Agnes Sweet and William Walthall play the leads as girl and burglar. The second burglar is Charles Mailes.

"THE NEW RANCH FOREMAN" (Lubin), August 22.—For the last few weeks the pictures made by the Lubin Western Company have been better than ordinary; this, if it is by the same company, is a distinct fall-down. It has one very serious fault; it is broken backed. A schemer, whom the sheriff wants, is hoodwinking a woman who owns a ranch. The interest of this half may be expressed thus, will he succeed in swindling the women before the sheriff gets him? After his pal sends him a note saying that the sheriff has learned his whereabouts, there is a new interest and a very much weaker one. It might be expressed by the question, will the girl save the money before he gets it? In a work of art, two halves are never so good as one whole. We must add that the two halves in this picture are pretty good.

"THE CUB REPORTER" (Edison) August 23.—A newspaper story that is well written and melodramatic. The picture's worst weakness is a slight one and is due solely to its being produced in an old fashioned way. Some of the best players in the business have been made to shout, "I'll do it," right at the camera, with clenched right hand hard into the palm of the left hand. There is also much shoulder shrugging and melodramatic poses meant to express a villainous disposition. The story is excellent and will deeply interest in spite all its slight drawbacks. A good picture to show.

"THE GOVERNMENT TEST" (Lubin), August 24.—A new safety device for stopping trains, which is shown at work and which, at the climax of this story, saves a train, gives the picture more than usual interest. It is a melodrama fairly well written, but in which villainy and heroism are not booked together in the most effective way. This is due to the fact that the producer has mixed realism with melodrama, has made the heroine's father the villain and left the actual dirty work to be done by a tramp who is frustrated, not by the hero, but by a detective. All this is more like real life than like the usual melodrama. But the situation is much more like the usual melodrama than it is like real life and the realism makes it most unconvincing. It is well acted, has much that is deeply interesting, and some fine scenes.

"THE LITTLE WANDERER" (Kalem), August 20.—A very acceptable picture, not strongly dramatic, but interesting. The little wanderer is a girl, the step-daughter of a harsh woman, and whose life is made burdensome. She wanders off, has an adventure and finds a home. The picture has a notable feature in the child's dog who follows her. This dog is intelligent and is plainly very fond of his little mistress. The picture's object, which is sentiment, is accomplished and it also has some pretty scenes. As entertainment it is excellent.

"THE LAIRD'S DAUGHTER" (Selig), August 26.—We have here a Scottish romance for a change. The first half of it is not so effective as the second half. These early scenes do not convince. This is not because they picture unbelievable actions so much as because it isn't true to its situation in little things. In fact, throughout, it is too constrained, it accepts the formal stage limitations where there is no necessity and these make it very artificial. Notwithstanding, the second part is good, because it falls into the groove of a natural and human dream which gives it vitality. Taken as a whole, it gives acceptable entertainment.

"PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 35" (August 26). This week's topical opens with a picture of a burning dock in New York City. For one moment, it is exciting; but fires have little news interest a week after they have been put out, unless the building burned is very widely known. There are some excellent views of troops in review which are thrills in a measure. There is a picture of a remarkable race horse, Amos R., that paces a half mile in one minute one second, without rider or harness. The Crown Prince of Germany is also pictured and the brother of the Czar of Russia appears in another item.

"DOUBLE DANGER" (Vitagraph), August 26.—One sees, before the picture is finished why it was called, "Double Danger"; but the two sides of the situation are not woven together in a very dramatic way. A little crippled girl is being operated on at home. Her father, who is in charge of an express car and is carrying a large invoice of money, is fighting a convict at the same time. This half of the picture is the only truly dramatic side. All that is dramatic on the other side is expressed by the mother; but the complex emotions in the mother that, if means had been found to make them very plain, would have united the two parts into one whole, were not clear enough. It would be very difficult to make them clear. Also the matter of fact way in which the father responded to the call to duty and left his wife and child hampered the real meaning of the picture. Perhaps, if more time had been given to this scene, it would have been a stronger production. But there is good material in it and it will give good entertainment.

"THE WHISKEY RUNNERS" (Selig), August 27.—An interesting, well-conducted story of the border line between the United States and the Northwest Territory of Canada. It gives the adventures of a Northwest Mounted Royal Policeman who is sent out to arrest smugglers and to get one man in particular who had murdered a brother officer. He makes the capture after an exciting chase which is the picture's climax. It is entertaining.

"A PRINCE OF ISRAEL" (C. G. P. C.), August 27.—If we can say any thing that would persuade exhibitors to hasten in order to book this picture while it is in perfect condition, we shall be glad. It is truly a great offering. It deals with the rebellion of Absalom against his father, King David, opening when the king appoints Solomon his successor and closing with the death of Absalom and the mourning of the king. It is glorious on three counts: (a) It is very dramatic. (b) It is beautifully set in Palestine or in same place very like it; finely cast and acted by a host of players; and faultlessly (as it seems) conducted. (c) It is splendidly hand-colored. Besides being dramatic, it is spectacular. There's a thrill in it when the hosts of the king and the rebel prince meet. We think it a long advance over other Biblical pictures, and they also were good.

"ALONE IN NEW YORK" (Edison), August 27.—This gives us the second installment of "What Happened to Mary." If the picture keeps up on this high level, when it is complete, it will make a splendid evening's entertainment. It is so interesting in this part that the end comes before one knows or expects it; he feels very sorry that there is no more. This is partly because it is cut short at an intensely interesting point. It gives a very strong invitation to the spectators to call at the theater on September 27th to see what will follow.

"THE $2,500 BRIDE" (Pathe), August 24.—A story of the West rather commonplace in plot, but featuring the driving of a herd of cattle to the stock yards which makes the film very acceptable. The photography is of good quality and the picture a worthy offering.

"ALKALI IKE PLAYS THE DEVIL" (Essanay), August 27.—A first class comedy, well planned and cleverly acted. It made many hearty laughs and some real howls. Ike gets an invitation to a "maskerade" and takes an amusing way to obtain a suitable costume. It's a devil's make-up and when Ike gets it on and, with a pitchfork, starts out for the ball he frightens even the horses. The men are stampeded until one shoots off the tip of his tail. It's a very desirable release, a good mirth-maker.

"FLIRT OR HEROINE" (Vitagraph), August 27.—A story of English people in India at a time when cholera has broken out. Miss Florence Turner plays the lead as a light-hearted rather flirtatious girl who seems coy enough when everything is pleasant, but who becomes a ministering angel when the cholera breaks out. We have seen this accomplished artiste to better advantage, yet she gives, in this interpretation, a clearly drawn and deeply interesting character. Mr. Costello plays opposite to her, a young British doctor who loves her. Mrs. Julia Swayne Gordon. Mr. Van Dyke Brooke and Mr. Robert Gaillord also have roles. The picture was written by W. A. Tremayne and produced by Van Dyke Brooke. It is a worthy offering.

Independent

"A CASE OF SMALLPOX" (Imp), Aug. 31.—This comedy is not strong. One doctor says a baby has smallpox, and some rube constables establish a rube quarantine. Another doctor says the baby is merely troubled with the heat.

"HER BURGLAR" (Imp), Aug. 31.—On the same reel as the foregoing is this real comedy. Harry Pollard and Miss Loveridge are the whole show, but they are enough to make any amount of fun.

"A CIRCUS ROMANCE" (Milano), Aug. 31.—There is a real plot behind this picture. There is a powerful situation near the climax; also there are other good ones. There is a well-planned circus scene, and also many other pretty settings. It is well worth while.

"THE MODERN CHILD" (Lux), Aug. 30.—A picture featuring a precocious child. It is extravagant, overdrawn.

"THE WINNING PUNCH" (Victor), Aug. 30.—Owen Moore, in the character of a country boy, is disturbed by the attention paid to his sweetheart—portrayed by Florence Lawrence—by a young man from the city. There are no strong situations in the play, unless a rough-and-tumble fight be so construed. Miss Lawrence hardly has a chance to do what she so well can do. The work of the company is good.

"FOR LOVE, LIFE AND RICHES" (Universal Bison), Aug. 27.—There is much of shooting and riding in this story of an attempted claim jumping. Two men for a long time withstand the assault of a half-dozen. The battle at close range in its negative results constitutes a libel on American marksmanship. There is some dare-devil horseback riding by the heroine and some good scenery. The photography is good.

"A JAPANESE IDYLL" (Rex), Aug. 29.—An all-American cast puts on this play in Japanese settings. There is an abundnce of flowers and the interiors are carefully arranged. There is a bit of comedy when the Japanese maiden and the American girl change wearing apparel in order that the Japanese may so disillusion her rich suitor as to chill his ardor. Apparently she succeeds. The photography is in-and-out. Where the girl is leaving home to elope the work is poor. A scene later, where the couple sail out over the bay into the rays of the sun, it is excellent.

"LIFE'S LESSON" (Powers), Aug. 30.—If this be rather a strange play it must at the same time be denominated a strong play. The story is of the trusting husband who introduces to his wife, his second one, a friend, in order that she may have compay and escort in his absence. As the husband was divorced by his first wife for the best of reasons it may seem strange to the sophisticated that such a man would be so unworldly-wise as to deliberately lay a trap for the second wife. That the friend and the wife, thrown constantly in each other's company, should develop a strong friendship, was the most natural result to be expected. The picture did not reveal any justification for the act of the husband when he put a pistol in the hand of the indiscreet friend, with a suggestion that he blow the top of his head off. That the author saw fit to permit the young man to die of heart disease rather begged the issue. The picture is worth seeing.

"AN EXCITING OUTING" (Powers), Aug. 28.—John Cumpson takes the lead in this comedy, designed to show how a trip to the country does not always yield the rest and recreation sought. He has some unexpected adventures before the vacation properly begins.

"UNITED STATES ARMY MANEUVERS" (Powers), Aug. 28.—On the same reel as the foregoing are pictures of soldiers in the field, made during the late maneuvers in Connecticut. The troops are shown on the march, attacking, intrenching and in camp.

"WHAT THE MILK DID" (Powers), Aug. 23.—Carl Harbaugh and Florence Barker have the leads in a not overstrong comedy. A young man and young woman intended by their respective parents for each other, but who, unseen, each have repudiated the arrangement, meet by a most remarkable coincidence in the country. It proves to be a case of love at first sight. The parents, notified, hasten to the farm, and simultaneously come upon the youngsters. Their discovery turns their dismay into great joy. The widower father of the girl and the widowed mother of the son depart in suspiciously close companionship.

"THE LEADER OF THE BAND" (Rex), Aug. 25.—A melodramatic picture about musicians employed in a band at a fashionable restaurant. The bandmaster is the villain and the first violin is the hero. They both love the same girl (played by Marian Leonard). The picture seeks to interest through cleverness rather than to stir the emotions. It is a faintly disguised comedy. It uses a mask ball as the set for its climax in which the bandmaster is made ridiculous. The working out of the picture does not convince strongly enough to make us sympathize with its characters, nor does its humor even rise to laughter. In fact, the lavish and expensive way in which it is put on, with its sets, its costumes and its general good acting, is the chief reason why it gives good entertainment.

"THE PASSING PARADE" (Eclair), Aug. 29.—A patriotic picture in which glimpses of a parade, passing under the Memorial Arch at Prospect Park, Brooklyn, are used as a background to show something of American history in the minds of modern American people. Glimpses of home life and of school life are given. People will like the lad who plays the part of Master George Washington, as he acknowledges cutting down the cherry tree; but we question the wisdom of showing that incident. Spectators will also like the picture of the two veterans, blue and gray, who have become friends. The views of the Memorial Day parade with the old veterans passing are excellent. It is a commendable picture, not an emotional one, nor a very great one.

"A DESERT TRIP" (Eclair), Aug. 29.—On the same reel is this short picture giving excellent and extremely interesting views of a journey in Egypt. Not one of these views have we seen before. The pyramids, old ruins, statues and works of art are included.

"MAKING GOOD" (Imp), Aug. 26.—Miss Jane Fernley plays the most interesting part, as the heroine, in this picture. Mr. Chaille plays her father. Her two lovers are her father's secretary (Wallace Reid), and her father's choice for her husband (Mr. Dunn). She prefers the secretary, now discharged, and the development of the situation makes him win her He has become a life-guardsman at the beach (Brighton Beach), and saves her from the sea. The picture lacks the sharp contrasts that are liked in romantic melodramas; it is not emotional, but, on the other hand, it gains something from its realistic backgrounds. Miss Fernley is an unusually accomplished actress and adds much to the picture, which is beautifully photographed and makes good entertainment.

"BABY FINGERS" (Gem), Aug. 27.—A strong, artistic picture that wrings the heart. It is a picture of a crime (forgery), committed by a young girl and shows all its dread consequences. The girl stole the money to send her consumptive brother to the West. "Baby Fingers" are in the employer's memories, and they have an actual counterpart in the girl's baby sister, who, with the brother, pleads for her. The strength of the picture in its early scenes is remarkable. The producer has chosen all his players, but especially his leading lady, well, and he has, in the development of the situation, made skillful use of small contrasts that vividly bring out its human qualities. After so strong a first act one can hardly help wondering whether the ending, the last few feet, might not have been made stronger. It is a desirable release; it will be liked.

"THE WILL" (Eclair), Aug. 25.—A picture by the French company dealing with peasant life. The old grandmother has made a will leaving everything to her son, a farmer, on condition that he care for two grandchildren. There is a letter that is not to be opened for a month. This the oldest granddaughter holds. The development of the situation, brought about by the uncle's greed, makes a good, interesting story. But the picture's chief interest centers in the grasping old uncle. This is partly because the role is taken by a good actor and the emotions that he pictures convince, and partly because his character is the pivotal center of the story. The subject of the story is the punishment of greed. It is a good, satisfying picture. The sets are well made, but the views of peasant life, out of doors, are not many. We commend it for all kinds of audiences.

"THE STORY OF A WALLET" (Nestor), Aug. 26.—A good plot clearly developed and excellent feeling for character make this picture strongly convincing in most of its scenes. The wallet is intrusted to Spriggs, a confidential clerk, who is an old man; he is beautifully drawn. He drops the wallet and the workman who finds it, and knows to whom it belongs, spends a night of anguish, half-drunk, and, in the morning, confesses to save the old man. It is a picture that will hold the audience to the end, and, although the grip loosens now and then, it never lets go. We especially commend the characterization of Spriggs.

"THE FOUNDLING" (Champion), Aug. 26.—The foundling was discovered, a baby, by a priest who brought him up. No one knew who his parents were; he went the downward path as soon as he was old enough to be tempted, and soon was, though innocent of crime, made to seem a thief and murderer for a time. The narrow escape made him repent. There is some good acting and there are some good scenes in the picture. It is not strongly convincing; yet as an entertainer it stands up because of the inner truth of its situation. The photography is excellent.

"A HAPPY FAMILY" (Imp), Aug. 29.—A comedy of modern life brightly conceived and cleverly acted. It deals with the amusing adventures of two families, both of which are broken up by divorce, and the several parts reunited crosswise, so to speak. They two families hadn't known each other before, but after the remarriages, fate throws them together in the same house. Jealousy is thoroughly enjoying itself in that house when the woman who had been mother-in-law to the first and was now mother-in-law to the second, descends upon them. A thunder storm is said to clear the atmosphere. The picture is skillfully made, well photographed, and will furnish excellent entertainment. King Baggott and Susanie Willis are the first couple when the picture opens, with Wm. R. Day and Violet Horner playing the other couple.

"UNCLE BILL" (Nestor), Aug. 28.—A love story comedy, played by four people, Jack Conway and Dorothy Davenport, as young sweethearts, with Mr. Davis and Victoria Forde as an elder couple. The first of the older folks is the boy's uncle, the second is the girl's aunt. The story is set in a Western village. The older people were going to get married; they refused permission to the younger people, but the picture shows how the older couple was outwitted. It furnishes good entertainment, because it is well acted and has some freshness. It doesn't drag.

"WHEN A COUNT COUNTED" (Thanhouser), Aug. 25.—A picture whose first quality is its prettiness. It is full of lovely scenes and it is also an amusing comedy with a situation that enlists our sympathies. Miss Anderson plays the lead very charmingly. The climax takes place at a fashionable summer hotel where the "exclusive younger set" has taken up the stenographer who is on a well-earned vacation. The presentation of this "exclusive set" is somewhat in caricature; but that slight fault does not diminish the picture's effect, for there is much in the situation that convinces.

"NORTH OF 53" (Reliance), Aug. 24.—A melodrama of the great north woods. The story is artificial; it seems made to give human interest to a beautiful bit of mountainous, wooded country already chosen by the producer. Photography in such a picture is of supreme importance. In this film the early scenes are not well photographed, but, later, some very charming views are given. This production has another good quality, the action shows the Reliance cast to good advantage. Miss Gertrude Robinson and Mr. Hector Dion are always more than merely acceptable in romantic roles. The whole is commendable, but it falls a good way below the best Reliance work.

"A DIVIDED HOUSE" (Comet), Aug. 28.—There is a good deal of substance in the situation exploited by this picture, which, in a way, is an argument in the back to the soil propaganda. The father, a workingman, and his son, hear the "back to nature" call. The mother and daughter don't want to leave the city, so the men folks go out on a rented farm for themselves, and make good. Soon the family is reunited in the country. The charm the picture has undeniably comes mostly from its rural, farm life scenes, which are fine. The acting, too, is good. The film is commendable as a very interesting release that will be liked.

"THE MOONSHINERS' TASK" (Comet), Aug. 31.—A melodrama of mountain life in which the hero-detective helps to arrest a gang of moonshiners and wins the love of the leader's daughter. The picture is conducted in a rather lurid way, such as is acceptable to the gallery, but has thrilling, speedy action and some very pretty natural scenery. In its opening scenes, we are made acquainted with a few mountaineer types and with the sheriff and his men. These scenes are very well done. Next comes the deputy's visit to the cabin and the beginning of the love story, with the deputy in the lead and the ruffian lover, who acts as special villain, in the background. The deputy needs the girl's assistance before he is through with his task.

"PHANTOM PARADISE" (Solax), Aug. 28.—The melodrama where there's a mad inventor with a pretty daughter and where the rich hero buys the worthless invention, telling the girl and her father that it has proved good. It is not a very affecting story, and it is not very effectively pictured her. Miss Blanche Cornwall plays the heroine well; she is the only convincing figure, with the possible exception of the old inventor, Lee Beggs, in the picture. We have never seen Darwin Karr to so poor advantage as in this particular role of hero. His work was no flatter than was that of Billy Quirk as office boy. We fear to call the picture a success.

"THE SECRET SERVICE MAN" (Reliance), Aug. 28.—A picture designed to be sensational. The foreign spy has stolen the plans of the fort and the secret service man has caught sight of him making away. Nearly every means of getting across space known to man is used in this pursuit and flight. The photography is excellent and the producer has made good, according to his intention. The picture is designed to appeal to the intellect. It doesn't ever become truly emotional, but maintains suspense very well.

TRADING ON COSTELLO'S NAME.

Mr. Maurice Costello, one of the Vitagraph Company's bright, particular photoplay stars, is in receipt of a communication from Hutchison, Kan., enclosing a playbill of the Elite Theater of that city. A vaudeville act appearing at that house is down on the bill as Costello and St. Croix. The playbill further states that Jack Costello, of the act of Costello and St. Croix, is "a brother of Maurice Costello, the famous Vitagraph player."

Mr. Costello wishes to refute this announcement in toto, as he has no brother and never had one. Therefore, it is evident that Jack Costello is featuring himself at the expense of the well-known Vitagraph player, Maurice Costello, and hereby warns Jack Costello not to repeat this statement under penalty of prosecution. Furthermore, he requests that all managers refuse to make themselves party to this imposition and fraud upon the public, by allowing Jack Costello to make this announcement in connection with his appearance at their theaters.

GLOBE AMUSEMENT COMPANY PURCHASES THE STARLAND THEATER, OCEAN PARK, CAL.

The Globe Amusement Company, with executive offices in the Title Insurance Building, Fifth and Spring streets, Los Angeles, Cal., which owned up to a few weeks ago five high-class motion picture and vaudeville houses on the Pacific Coast, has now acquired the Starland Theater on Fraser's Million Dollar Pier, Ocean Park, California. This house will be known in the future as Globe Theater No. 6. Mr. J. M. Boland, the former owner, will still be retained as resident manager.

It is understood that the Globe Amusement Company is not only building fifteen large moving picture and vaudeville houses with large seating capacities, but is absorbing houses already in operation boasting of large seating capacities and making money. It is further acknowledged that the Globe Amusement Company has acquired something over $300,000 worth of assets in the shape of splendid theatrical properties, and it intends to have, through building or purchase, something in the neighborhood of $700,000 in live theatrical enterprise within the next few months. Mr. H. N. Nixon is president and general manager of the company.

Projection Department

Edited by F. H. RICHARDSON

Reorganization of New York Operators.

PURSUANT to the instruction of the convention, the New York operators, formerly organized in auxiliary to Local 35, I. A. T. S. E., are now in the process of reorganization. The editor attended the meeting, held Sunday, August the 18th at Redman's Hall, 47th St., and it was a most agreeable surprise. The meeting was entirely orderly, and business was conducted in a business like manner, with consequence that it only lasted about an hour and a half, whereas the auxiliary used to drag along from four to six hours, and even then real business seldom received much, if any, consideration. I have conferred with International President Shay and he assures me that the reorganization has been done strictly in accordance with the instruction of the convention.

On page 163 of the report of the Twentieth Annual Convention, the following appears: New York C. E. C. L. Local No. 35 vs. Auxiliary M. P. M. O. Local 35. The General Executive Board recommends that Local No. 35 be empowered to reorganize the Auxiliary, and that if they deem it necessary to have the services of an Executive Officer, it shall be granted them. "No objection. Carried."

Personally the writer would have preferred that the reorganization be conducted by a committee entirely outside of both the Auxiliary and No. 35. However, after carefully examining into the matters, I am convinced that the reorganization is being carried forward without prejudice; that it is genuine, and that a great deal of good will come from it.

The New York Union has, in the past, failed to accomplish the work it should have done; this by reason of the fact that it contained certain elements which made for inefficiency. These men perhaps meant all right. I do not know, but am willing to give them the benefit of the doubt. It must be remembered, however, that hell is paved with good intentions, and that nothing, comparatively speaking, could ever be accomplished, so long as fully two-thirds of the operators in New York were so thoroughly and completely dissatisfied with the methods of conducting the affairs of the organization that they would not attend the meetings, or do anything else but pay their dues, and many of them even went to the extent of dropping their membership.

At the August 18th meeting, the hall was well filled, and the showing was one creditable to the operators of this great city. An examination committee was appointed, and the membership of the new union will form what will be known as Branch No. 2, of No. 35. An examination will be given as to the qualifications of all applicants. Any applicant failing to pass this examination cannot again apply for membership for a period of three months. The Examining Board will itself be examined by the Executive Board of Branch No. 1 (by the present plan Local Union No. 35 consists of Branch No. 1, which is the old union, and Branch No. 2, which is the operators). Until the meeting of the 18th, enrollment was free—that is to say, there was no initiation fee. But after that date any one coming in must join as a new member, losing all the rights accrued through previous membership in the Auxiliary. I brought the matter of out of town members up and it was decided that this should not apply to them, but that the free enrollment should be left open a reasonable time for their benefit, the time to be at the discretion of the Executive Board. Out of town members will be fully informed as to what procedure to take by addressing Brother Harold Williams, Business Agent, Local 35, I. A. T. S. E., 259 W. 42nd Street.

At the meeting spoken of the hall was well filled and the enrollment in the new branch already runs into the hundreds.

It is a regrettable fact that any such course as this was necessary. The fault, however, lies with the auxiliary and those members of the Auxiliary who fail to get into Branch No. 2 of 35 are deserving of scant sympathy, except in a few isolated cases. The Auxiliary was warned time and again of what would happen, unless it mended its ways. This it would not do. A member even openly insulted the International President on the floor when he visited one of the meetings. The meetings were a riot. I have personally seen three fist fights in progress on the floor of an auxiliary meeting at one and the same time. It shames me to say this, but it is the fact, and the only wonder is that the Auxiliary was permitted to exist as long as it has. Local Union No. 35 did not perhaps do altogether right by the Auxiliary, but in this connection we must consider the proposition they had to deal with, and when we do so, we cannot perhaps blame them so much after all. And now let us all pull together for the mutual benefit of the operators of New York, and the improvement of their conditions. I believe that Branch No. 2, of Local Union No. 35, will prove a success, and I am willing to do any and all things possible to bring about that happy end.

The Next Convention.

Kansas City, Mo., writes at some length in the interest of the operators acting together at the next convention of the I. A. T. S. E. He also says that Local 170 stands ready to fight, if necessary, to get justice for Auxiliary, No. 35, of New York.

I do not quote the letter because I do not think it is wise at this time. As Kansas City will see, in another part of the department this week, the operators are being reorganzed into a branch of 35, which is to have the same rights that 35 herself has—that is to say, the same authority, or that at least is my understanding of the matter. For certain reasons, which President Shea explained to me personally, it is practically impossible to grant a direct charter to the New York operators at this time. It is believed, however, that a direct charter will be the outcome in the not very distant future, but radical changes will first have to be made in L. U. 35's charter, since it now holds, and always has held, the right to govern the moving picture machine operators of this city. I hope and believe the present arrangement will prove quite satisfactory, at least for some time to come.

I heartily agree with the proposition of operators acting together in the next convention. But for the request of one of Boston's delegates, I would have permitted a great deal of discussion in the department concerning operators' measures to be brought before the last convention. Boston headed this off and I have since put in considerable time industriously engaged in kicking myself for allowing them to do it, or rather allowing one of their delegates to do it. You can wager your everlasting life that nobody but the International President himself will be able to stop discussion next time. Before the next convention it is to be hoped that, through the medium of the department, all the various operators' measures to be brought before the convention will be freely discussed, and that operator-delegates will go to Seattle with a complete knowledge as to what they want and what they do not want, and thus be prepared to act as a unit.

Motor Drive.

Mr. E. C. Woods, Dayton, Ohio, writes:

> As I have seen no letters from this city, thought I would come in. Up to date, I have seen no method of driving machine with motor like the one I use, and which I have been using for the last eighteen months without the least trouble. The motor I built myself out of an eight-inch fan motor. It has a variable speed, and which leaves nothing to be desired. Enclosed you will find photographs which I hope will prove to be self-explanatory. No. 1 of the small > photo is the controlling lever, and No. 2 is the back gear and driving pulley which gives a gear ratio of six to one. As you can see, the motor is very compact. It weighs only seven pounds, yet is powerful enough to give the machine a crank speed of 110, which, of course, no one would care to use. I use No. 5 sash cord for belting and find it a more positive drive than leather. It lasts many times as long and never breaks. Do you think any of the machine manufacturers would be in the market for a take-up tension device, which is absolutely positive in its action, yet very cheap to manufacturers, costing only about $1.25 to make?

I am sorry, friend Woods, that you didn't give us more information concerning your method of "making the motor." I presume you mean that you rewound the armature, and possibly the field pieces. Will you kindly tell us, in detail, just how you did that stunt? The motor drive shown certainly is unique, but I do not see any reason why it should not work all right, since the lower sprocket shaft has a pretty wide bearing. I should think, however, by the time you get a machine crank speed of 110, that motor armature would be revolving quite frequently. The sash cord belting may be all right, but very few could make a proper splice, and: moreover, I would suppose it would stretch pretty badly when it was new, though, of course, when the stretch was out of it and the proper splice made, it would last a long time and give an excellent service. It would depend entirely on the relative value of your takeup as compared to those now in use.

Kind Words.

Mr. George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky., writes:

> Now unless the manager-owners write you occasionally, which they do, how are you to know that others besides the operators appreciate your work? So, if I am not seeking information by asking a multitude of questions in this letter, take it as indicating one exhibitor's deep interest in your department. And I don't agree with you on all you say, either, but who could fill your position and be right at all times? You will admit an error once in a while. There are two departments in the World, viz: Projection and Advertising, which are of incalculable benefit to the exhibitor. The one who does not absorb the good of both is of the breed that still maintains a barker at his door and runs four reels of pictures, changed daily, for a nickel, and, dollars to doughnuts, uses a two-pin projection machine. His operator probably sings an illustrated song between times, mother sells tickets and little Johnny takes them at the door, sister plays the piano, and papa plays pinochle, maybe, in the bar-room next door. I have been in the game some several years, but have had few operators, as those in my employ seemed satisfied to stay, and of one thing I can assure you; when I looked for the World each week, after it was opened first by me, I was pretty sure to find it in the operating room, and open at the Projection Department. If I found an operator in my employ who wasn't interested in your department—well, I wouldn't have him. Absolutely good projection, and nothing else goes in a place of mine. You can "kiss the book" on that. Can an operator keep abreast of times and up with improvements unless he studies? Just a few more lines and I'll stop. I know this will interest you. If a man built a palatial steamboat and placed his pilot in miserable, cramped little coop of a pilot house, he would be classed as a fool, and, besides, the authorities wouldn't let him operate that boat. Then why in the name of common sense will people build splendid picture theaters, and then omit the most important feature, viz: A decent sized, commodious, well ventilated and arranged operating room? You know they do it, and yet expect an operator to be happy and produce good work in the stuffy, close box, rightly dubbed a "coop" or "booth." In my new house here, now under construction, my operating room (not booth) is 13 x 9 x 9, and is of Johns-Manville Transite Asbestos, because that material is cooler than iron, and over each machine there is an 18-inch ventilator through to the roof, and—think of it—a lavatory so that the operator can wash his hands! And there are other features you would commend. And business? Why just fine when I'm in it, as I am not just now, while the house is going up. I sold my "Princess" at Hopkinsville, where business was never dull (that's honest) in a town of less than 10,000 population. It is a house seating 700, with a ten-cent admission, and a weekly expense of considerably more than $200. Everybody, "rough neck" and "high brow," young and old attended the "Princess," and do yet, as it is under an admirable management. When I opened there many post-mortems were held on my financial death, as the wise ones said knowingly, "no picture show will pay in this town—too many have tried it." What was my success due to? I'll tell you; close attention to business, courteous treatment of my patrons, TRUTHFUL ADVERTISING, AND you know what else, GOOD PROJECTION. Make what use you want to of this letter. Put it in the waste basket, boil it down and publish it in part, or feed it to the goat. I've enjoyed writing you a letter, and expect to do so again, and I am going to inflict one on that advertising fellow one of these days, too. But I didn't intend to say much as I have. I wanted this as an expression of appreciation of you and your department.

I thoroughly appreciate the kind words you have written, Friend Bleich, and I am sure Friend Sargent, who conducts the Advertising Department, will appreciate them also, and be glad to receive a letter from you. I thoroughly agree with you that the Advertising Department is of great value and I believe that the Music Department is also of much benefit to exhibitors. I am not saying this because I happen to be one of the editors, but because I believe it to be a fact. I believe that sufficient improvement in projection, music and advertising will result in increased patronage to the extent of many dollars in a year, and yet the Moving Picture World costs the exhibitor but three dollars a year. Now, friends, this sounds a little like boasting. I can truthfully say, however, that I regard it not as boasting, merely as a statement of plain fact. Of course, these departments will be of no value to the exhibitor, who does not read and study them—though that is not wholly true, either, because his operator or musician may read and study them, and he reap the benefit. However, as I have before pointed out, an exhibitor who does not read and study his business will not have any business left very long, since others who will, will get ahead and outclass him so badly that he will be forced out. I agree with you also that I would not have an operator in my operating room who did not read and study. Why? Simply because it would be convincing and conclusive evidence that he was not progressive and not keeping up with the rapidly moving procession. Now if some think I am saying this to toot my own horn, why that is their privilege, but I do not mean what I have said to be construed that way. I wish to congratulate you, Friend Bleich, on the showing you made in a town of less than 10,000. It proves you to be a real manager. More power to you and may your tribe increase.

Isolated Plant.

Villisca, Iowa, writes:

In regard to the Detroit outfit, I have a 6 h.p. engine, 2½ k.w., 60 volt direct current generator, which lights forty 16 c.p. carbon lamps, twenty 2 c.p., and 10 to 15-16 c.p. carbon lamps, while projection arc is on and get a very much brighter and steadier picture than from a.c., through a transformer—that is to say, a General Electric compensarc. I use nothing but coal oil, and get fifteen gallons every ten days, which costs me $1.25. I would not use gasoline at all. It does not give me the power and is much more dirty. I first had a 3 h.p. engine for traveling, but exchanged it for a 6 h.p. My only trouble is with the spark coil, which must be properly adjusted for good, even running, and the timer spring, which breaks occasionally. I start my engine, see that everything is properly adjusted, and that oil to the crank case is dropping about eight drops per minute. I then start my show and my boy goes out occasionally to see that oil is feeding to the crank case properly, and we just let 'er rumble. I would not part with my outfit, and I do not think it is necessary to have an engineer. Anyone with a little stay-with-it-iveness at first will soon get the necessary points, as it is a very simple engine. I use 4 pronged plug and have a voltmeter. I always run with full load on. When the arc is off, we have a balance load; therefore it never varies, unless spark coil gets pitted or out of adjustment. The electric light company put in, free of charge, a general electric compensarc and three-wire system, which I have used for a month to help them out on the fight with the city, but I long for my Detroit, as I can run three reels without trimming, which I cannot do with a.c.; also I get a much brighter picture with the little outfit. The Handbook is a great help. I should have had one a year ago.

We are glad to have so favorable a report from a user of the Detroit. Let us hear from others who are using this outfit. Most certainly your light bill is ridiculously low if you can run ten days on fifteen gallons of kerosene. I could not make out the name of the spark plug you use. By balance load I presume you mean that you switch in incandescents sufficient to use the arc amperage when the arc is off, which is a very good scheme indeed. You neglected one very important point, however, viz: How many hours a night do you use the outfit? Not having that particular piece of information one cannot compute the cost per hour of running the engine. Yes, although we have sold thousands of Handbooks, there are still other thousands who should by all means have had one. It would have been the best investment they made in their lives. It has finally been decided that the new book will be $2.50, and I think you are, all going to concede that it is well worth the money.

Another Isolated Plant.

Mr. S. K. Leen, proprietor, Ruby Theater, Madison, S. Dak., writes:

In August 10th issue, I note request that all those having experience with isolated light plant, tell what they know concerning same. Now I am a constant reader of the Moving Picture World, and the first thing I turn to is the Projection Department. While I do not feel chesty, or in any way conceited, or think that I am one of those that know it all, yet I can truthfully say I have the reputation of producing the best picture on my screen of anyone in this part of the country, and I am doing it with a small isolated plant, too. And now, for the information of those interested in such plants, I will set forth my experience: A man does not necessarily have to be an expert electrician or engineer in order to run one of these outfits. I think that anyone with ordinary brains and a little good common horse sense, can operate one of the plants successfully. My own experience is as follows: In December, 1911, I hardly knew a gasoline engine from a locomotive; also I did not know the first thing about electrical work. I had, however, so much trouble with our city power plant, and such difficulty in getting the right service, that I concluded to install a plant of my own. I purchased a 4 k.w., 125 volt Hawthorne Non-flicker Generator, and a switchboard with ammeter and voltmeter, rheostat, and pilot lights. This part of my outfit I purchased from the Western Electric Company of Minneapolis. I also bought a 6 h.p., 2-cycle gas engine from the Fairmont Machine Co., of Fairmont, Minn. This little machine I consider one of the best gasoline engines on the market to-day. You, of course, understand that this makes a belted outfit. My house equipment consists of 48 2-c-p. carbon lamps, 5 4-c.p. carbon lamps, 18 15-watt tungstens, 20 48-watt tungstens, 5 100-watt tungstens, 1 150-watt tungsten, and 66 5-watt tungstens, wired in series of 11 to the series, six 16-inch oscillating fans, and my projection arc. I also run my machine with a ⅓ h.p. motor, with controller which gives me any speed I desire. I thus have my two hands free to work with at all times. I project a 12½-foot picture on a 70-foot 6-inch throw. My light is rock steady. It is the best I have ever seen and everyone tells me my pictures are the clearest and brightest of any house they have visited. I have no trouble whatever, for all there is to it is to fill my tank with gasoline, throw the engine against the compression and let it go, lock up my engine room door and never see it again till the evening's performance is over. My light is now costing me forty-five cents per day, while before I was paying an average of $1.25 a day. I bought this high voltage outfit so that in case anything went wrong with my plant, all I would have to do would be to throw the switch on the city light and go right on with the show as if nothing had happened, for I am still connected up with the city light, and, as I understand it, if I had a low voltage outfit I could not do this. Should any brother exhibitor wish further information, which I have not set forth, I will be more than glad to provide the same. I trust you will not think I have taken up too much space.

A man never takes up too much space, Neighbor Leen, as long as what he writes is of interest and value; therefore you have not consumed too much space. You, like Villisca, have not said how many hours per night you run the outfit, and cost of operation per hour. When we get the cost down to the cost per hour, then we know what we are doing. I do not quite understand why you are running all those lamps in series. You must be wrong there, unless you have lamps of very low voltage. Eleven lamps in a series on 110 would indicate a very low voltage lamp indeed. I think you are in error in that statement, because you at least could not wire five 100-watt tungstens in an eleven series, when you have only five of them. There is a mistake there somewhere, Friend Leen. I am, of course, gratified to know that you appreciate the work we have been trying to do in this department, and I sincerely trust we shall continue to merit your approbation and approval in future as in the past. Many thanks for report on the light plant. Mr. Leen offered to supply additional information to any desiring it by mail. I don't prefer that way. Let it go through the Department, even if a little slower, so it will benefit all.

Automatic Slide Carrier.

Dawson Bros., Wasseca, Minn., write:

It has been a long time since we have bothered you, but we now again ask assistance through the Exhibitors' Bible, the Mov-Picture World. From the enclosed photo you will see we are coming to the front and are now very comfortably located in our new theater, The Palace, which we have done all we possibly could to make a palace in appearance as well as name. And now for a question: Do you remember, some time back, some advertiser was putting on the market a new slide carrier on the Igento order, but it had two magazines, one on either side of a lever, which put the slides into place? By moving the lever a slide was taken from one magazine, placed in front of the lens, and after exposure, automatically placed in a magazine on the other side of the carrier. With this device it would be an easy matter for the operator to run the song slides while threading the machine. Can you say whether or not this carrier is practical, and if so, where can we get one? Who said that the pictures were dying out? In this particular part of the country it is quite the contrary. Thanking you for past favors, I wish you and the World all possible success for the future.

I do not remember the advertisement referred to. I have, however, seen several such carriers. The thing looks very plausible and really it works very well indeed, except for one thing. The fly in this particular ointment is the fact that the working of these devices causes too much vibration. At least I have never seen one that didn't cause the picture to dance a highland fling on the screen when first exposed. I, therefore, could not advise the purchase of any such device, unless it has first been submitted to this department for examination, test and report. No, the pictures are not dying out. There are quite a number of theatrical managers who see to it that their agents keep that yarn alive, but there is nothing in it. The pictures are very much alive and what is more they are not going to die out, either now or any other time, provided of course, the standard is kept up, and the necessary improvements made to keep abreast with the progress of the times. Glad to see you so comfortably located in your new home. We wish you all possible success. May the river of nickels and dimes continue to flow uninterruptedly in your direction.

Belt and Direct Connected Sets.

Washington, Kan., writes:

I have long taken an interest in the Moving Picture World, especially the Projection Department. Thus far, I have been content to read the sayings of others, but now I will break into the game, if you will give me a chance. I thought I was pretty fast at changing reels, doing it in eighteen seconds from time picture leaves the screen until time it goes on again. To-day, however, I was reading a page in an advertising circular supposed to be devoted to operators, and here is one of the items, word for word: "Referring to breaking world's records for changing reels, you're not in it with Walter Brown, my operator, who is better known as 'Rocky Brown,' the famous swimmer. He changes reels without stopping. He runs the end of the reel off the spindle when it is near the end. Cements the next reel to it and goes ahead. This can be vouched for by other operators in this city. No operator in this house but what could change in eight seconds. Signed 'Colonial Theater, Bloomington, Ill.'" Now what do you think of that? I myself would like to see the man who could change reels in eight seconds.

And, now, just a word about light plants. In the light of my own experience I can say this much, and say it in the face of all conflicting arguments, viz: The belt connected outfit is more serviceable than the direct connected outfit, for the one reason that your direct connected engine must be high speed in order to drive your generator at proper speed, whereas the belted engine can run much slower. It is a well-known fact that high-speed machinery is short lived, and not nearly as reliable as that operated at slower speed. After all, the engine is the most uncertain part of the outfit. Dynamos need almost no attention, except to oil them and adjust the brushes and clean the commutator. My advice is to get a good sized, water-cooled gasoline engine. Set the engine and dynamo on a solid base and use a good two to three-ply belt. You thus have an outfit which is just as reliable as the average small town central station is.

Now for a question. I have made an automatic slide carrier which holds the slides on one side of condensers, and by pulling, a lever automatically feeds them in and out to a box on the opposite side. Do you think it worth getting a patent on?

Now, isn't it queer how things go? I just finished answering an inquiry about this type of automatic slide carrier, and the very next letter I pick up is from a man who has just such a device. I would respectfully refer you, Washington, to my answer to the last letter. As to that talk about cementing one reel to another without stopping, it is pure unadulterated piffle. I presume it would be a physical possibility to do such a thing, with the assistance of another man, but in order to do it, the upper magazine must be open, and at least ten or fifteen feet of the tail-end of the film, rapidly unwound from the reel, the next reel fastened to it by some sort of a clip which would go through the machine (cement would be impossible), and the other reel replaced in the magazine. But I would just like to have an inspector catch Mr. Operator doing that kind of a stunt. If there is any license in Bloomington, and the operator had as much sense as a last year's bird's nest, he would certainly attempt no such fool caper and if he did, and got caught at it, he would certainly loose his license in a hurry. No, Washington, Bloomington is talking through his chapeau. As to changing in eight seconds, the Bloomington boys must certainly be wonders. The man who can open the top magazine, take out the old reel, insert the new one, thread through the fire trap, through the machine, through the lower fire trap, attach the film to the lower reel, and then take up the slack and close the magazine in eight seconds, has missed his calling. He ought to hire himself out for exhibition purposes, calling himself "Own brother to greased lightning." You will note this wonderful film circular talks about running the end of the reel off the spindle. I didn't know a reel had an end. What he meant was, of course, running the end of the film off the reel, but before making such large claims it would be well to learn, at least learn to call things by their right names, wouldn't it? As to the belt connected outfits, I would rather not comment, but leave that matter for our readers to thrash out. What you say is quite correct so far as it goes, but there are also things to be said on the other side, and I would rather leave our readers to do the saying. You can have all the space you want in the department for the next few weeks to discuss isolated light plants.

Split Reels.

Binghamton, N. Y., writes:

Don't you think it a foolish idea some of the makers of the films adopt, notably the Kalem Company, when on a two-subject reel they run from one subject into another without a break or blank of any sort between the two? In some cases if a person in the audience should sneeze, they might look up to find something altogether of a different nature on the screen, much to their puzzlement until they realize that they are looking at another subject. The only remedy I see is to chop out some of the tail-piece and insert it between the subjects. I am not alone in this "kick" I can assure you.

There is nothing whatever to prevent the operator from stopping his machine for fifteen to thirty seconds when the title of the second subject appears. What you say is correct, and I have for some time been advising operators and managers to have an interval of from fifteen seconds to a minute between each reel, and between the two subjects on split-reels. I had to laugh when I read your comment about sneezing, for I had an experience like that myself not long ago. There was a tragedy on the screen. I turned my head about to look up at the operating room, and probably kept my eyes in that direction as long as fifteen seconds. When they again sought the screen a howling comedy was in course of projection. The title between the two subjects must have been a light colored short one. Anyhow, that was what happened. It is not necessary, however, to put in a blank piece of film. It is not even desirable. Stopping the machine is the thing.

Arc Resistance.

Fort Worth, Tex., writes:

In July 27th issue was a letter which interested me very much, and I am going to try and answer, after testing it out, not on 220, but from 80 to 120 volts, the arc voltage ranging from 45 to 51, which would be an average of 48. Now, to apply this to the arc in a projector let A B, C D, E F represent the principal points of a projection arc circuit, A F being the "line" terminal, B C the rheostat and D E the arc. The connections between these parts are of such heavy wire, and these wires are so short that their resistance may be neglected. Suppose the following to be the data of an arc light: Line pressure 110 volts, rheostatic resistance (B C) 2 ohms, arc resistance (D E) 1 3-7 ohms, current 32.5 amperes. Now since the resistance of B C is two ohms, and the current 32.5 amperes, the difference in potential between its terminals would be $32.5 \times 2 = 65$ volts. By Ohm's law $E = C \div R$, since the resistence of the arc is 1 and almost 3/7 ohms, $1\ 3\text{-}7 \times 32.5 = 46$ volts, the potential difference between its poles. Now, since the arc is in series with the rheostat, their resistance and difference of potential may be added together to obtain the total resistance and difference of potential of circuit A F; hence the correct resistance would be 3 and almost 3/7 ohms. Now, if you increase your voltage at A F, with the same 2 ohm rheostat —according to Ohm's law, 220 volts, will force more current through a given resistance than 110 volts—hence in order to secure the same number of amperes and with higher voltage, you would have to introduce additional space between D E. In other words, lengthen the arc. Now supposing you were using 130 volts, your 2 ohm rheostat would deliver a larger number of amperes, if your combined resistance is only 3 3-7 ohms, than would be delivered were the voltage 110, but if you lengthen your arc so as to get 2 ohms resistance at the arc, in which, instead of 1 3-7 you would then have a total of 4 ohms resistance or 32.5 amperes of current, the same as you had when 110 volts was used.

While I cannot see that Fort Worth's letter brings up any new points, still its statements are correct and may help some one to understand the matter better. His scheme of handling arc voltage, however, is not practical since, in order to get the best projection light, the arc must ordinarily be of a certain length, and if the carbon points are separated too far, the light will not usually be satisfactory. However, the statements the brother has made, as I have said before, in the main are correct.

Correct.

Western Canada writes:

> As you do not seem to be able to coax anyone to write on the difference between 220 and 110 volt arcs, and innocently pretend you yourself do not know, I am going to try, if only for the purpose of getting your view of the subject, and explain it, though I will ask you not to use my name or the name of the town if you publish this. In the twelve years I have been operating, I have used currents of varying pressure, and have had meters on the different voltages (ammeters and voltmeters I take it you mean, Ed), therefore I believe I can give you a fairly understandable explanation, taking my present plant as an example: I am operating a 10 k.w. generator, with a rheostat of my own build in series with the arc. I use about 48 amperes, with approximately 48 volts across the arc. The generator is wound for 125 volts, operated at 90 volts. After the arc has been struck and has settled down, I open it slowly and the voltage across the arc rises gradually, while the amperage drops until the arc is about three-quarters of an inch long. The voltmeter then shows approximately 83 volts across the arc, and the ammeter registers only about 15 amperes. A little thought will enable one to understand that a rheostat built for 50 amperes will have very little effect in cutting the voltage when delivering only 15 amperes. It is very possible that the rheostat reduces the voltage to a great extent, but this only occurs when the rheostat wire is used to capacity, or very nearly so. When, however, a lower amperage is passed through it, it has so much less effect on the voltage. I have had as much as 350 volts, across the arc on 550 volts, d.c. though the arc of course, flamed very badly. I have also run as many as four arcs in series on 550 with splendid results. The resistance being cut down as each arc was opened, until there was very little left when all the arcs were operating. In my opinion, the rheostat, as built by the manufacturers, is not properly wired; but this is another matter about which I would like to write you at some other date, asking your opinion. In closing I send my best respects.

Canada has the right dope on the resistance proposition. I explained it in a recent issue of the department. The whole thing lies in the fact that a 35 ampere rheostat reduces the voltage very little when passing only, let us say, eight or ten amperes, and as the arc length is increased, the total resistance is increased, with consequence that the arc voltage becomes very much higher—hence current will be forced across a longer gap. We shall be glad to have Canada's views on the rheostat, but see no reason why he should be so bashful as to ask that even the name of the town be suppressed. Should you think you would have trouble operating a 125 volt generator at 90 volts, you would still have to provide lots of resistance to operate four arcs in series in 550. They would consume only about 200 volts if d.c., less if a.c.

Shutter Setting.

St. Louis, Mo., orders a Hand-Book and says:

> Would you kindly tell me how to set a three-wing Edison outside shutter, type B machine so as to eliminate the flicker as much as possible?

The setting of the shutter, St. Louis, has nothing to do with the flicker. It has to do with travel ghost, which is white streaks, or flashes up or down from white objects in the picture, or letters of titles. The Edison Co., give the following directions for setting their type B outside shutter(see page 824, June 1st issue), remembering that the wide blade of the three-wing shutter is the only one that counts. Proceed as follows: place a piece of film in the machine and loosen the three clamp screws on the front of the shutter just enough to be able able to turn the blade when the hub is held stationary. Now set the wide blade so that it covers the lens during the time the film is in motion. This can be determined either by looking through the aperture, by watching the intermittent sprocket, or by leaving the dowser down, lighting the arc and allowing the light to filter through the dowser cap, which will, when the fire shutter is raised, project the picture on the screen plainly enough to be seen. After the blade is set so that no movement of the film is visible while any portion of the lens is uncovered, tighten up the clamp screws again and the job is done.

Film Making.

Newport, Wash., writes:

> "Notice, in the August 10th issue of the department, Chicago's complaint of Essanay's sub-titles being out of frame. Have been looking for a big kick concerning this for some time, as the sub-titles of the Essanay films I have run for the past six months have been out of frame. Can you tell me how pictures are made where one scene starts to fade away as another is coming on? Under "Inquiries" in August 10th number, Snyder Ave. asked what C. G. P. C. stands for. A great many of our patrons have asked the same thing, and I always did hate to have to say: "I don't know," so told them it was Pathe's foreign films, but they come back at me with the fact that half of the reel is an American made picture, and the sub-title says so. I would like to know what the four words are that C. G. P. C. actually stand for.

The fading of one scene into another is accomplished as follows: at the end of the scene, the diaphragm is gradually closed over the camera lens until the lens is entirely obscured. The film is then turned back until the point is reached where the lens had started to close, it is then again gradually opened while the beginning of the new scene is enacted and the scene is thus dissolved into the new one. The thing works just exactly the same as the dissolver does. In this connection I made an unpardonable error recently. I said that in manufacturing films, the negatives were spliced together before the positives were printed. This is wrong. The positive of each scene is printed separately and then the positives are joined together. I really knew this, and don't know what I could have been thinking of when I dictated that particular reply. Seven film manufacturers have called my attention, by mail, to the error—the rest needn't mind. As to the Essanay sub-titles I wrote that company concerning the matter. It is a fault which certainly ought to be remedied. The Essanay productions are too magnificent to be marred by any such thing as this. The letters C. G. P. C. stand for Compagnie Generale des Phonographes et Cinematographes.

Dirty Lamphouse.

Harry G. Waldron, Langdon, N. D., writes under date of August 15th, complaining that he cannot hold his arc steady. It flames so badly that he gets very little light from it; also there are little spots running around and around the upper carbon. Says he is using a Motiograph 1912 Model machine, having a fine lamp, which he doesn't think it at fault. Wants to know if I would advise the use of a three-wing shutter, instead of the double one, as he has some flicker with bright light. Says if the three-wing one doesn't reduce the light too much, he would like to get rid of the flicker. Says his equipment was put to a novel use recently. Had the judge, jury, witnesses, lawyers and the entire court room crowd at the theater to view the projection of a plate (negative presumably, Ed.) offered in evidence in the trial. The entire case hinged upon the identity of one of the figures in a group, and projection probably helped the jury in arriving at a decision. The court appreciated the favor, and friend Waldron believes this is a new field of usefulness for the local picture house.

Under date of August the 17th, Mr. Langdon again writes as follows:

> Since writing you on the 15th, I have found the remedy for my flaming, sputtering arc. When I bought the machine about two months ago, I broke a few condensing lenses until I finally cut a hole in the back of the lamphouse. It worked fine for a while. Last week I engaged an A 1 operator, Mr. Russel Hoyle, who operated for Lyman H. Howe for more than a year. We got the projection first class in every respect, save the unsteady light. While cleaning the lamphouse to remove carbon dust, he noticed that the space between the asbestos board and wire screen at the top, was almost filled with carbon ash, the screen being clogged so that it was almost entirely closed. He trimmed the asbestos so that a direct draft was obtained through the holes, brushing out the mesh of the screen thoroughly. Since then the lamp has burned without a flicker. It was simply gasping for air.
>
> I believe a word of appreciation is due my operator. I have never seen a man so thoroughly in love with his work. From morning till night he is busy, although we only show two houses in the evening. There is not a speck of dust in his operating room and the machine didn't run as well when it left the factory as it does now. He has cleaned, oiled and adjusted every part and keeps them that way. I have just installed a 16-inch ventilating fan in his operating room, direct to open air, and will meet him half way in anything he wants, for he takes a pride in his work and the result is a picture that money couldn't buy from an indifferent man.

While I am glad you have set forth the remedy for your trouble for the benefit of others, still, Langdon, it is rather surprising that you didn't discover this at once, as I have on a number of occasions, through the department, cautioned operators to be very careful to keep the screen in the top of the lamphouse, perfectly clean, so as to afford free, ample and full ventilation; also on page 64 of the Hand-Book, you will find the same instruction and warning. The lamphouse should be thoroughly cleaned at least once every week and the ventilating holes and screen should by all means be kept perfectly clean. Otherwise there is likely to be abnormal condenser breakage, and lack of adequate ventilation will cause the arc to burn unsteadily, just as you have described. I am glad, indeed, to see you give your operator due credit for the excellence of his work. I would regard the fact that a man, who has been employed as operator by Lyman Howe for more than a year, as undisputable evidence of his ability, and ability coupled with willingness is a mighty good combination; also it is one not met with every day. Yes, a three-wing shutter is much superior to the inside shutter, provided the three wings be of approximately equal width, and provided further that you are not using 60 cycle, a. c. Such a shutter cuts off a considerably greater percentage of light than does the two wing shutter, but the absence of flicker more than compensates for the additional current required to bring the screen up to its former brilliancy. That is not the first time juries have viewed evidence projected on the screen. In this connection it seems to me that a comparison of handwriting samples and signatures enormously enlarged by projection would be of aid in many cases.

Machine Instructions.

Binghamton, N. Y., writes:

> Have those instructions on the various machines been published in separate form? If not, is there any prospect of their coming out in the near future?

They have not. There is. The instructions are a part and parcel of the new hand-book, which I had hoped to have out by the first of September, but which I am afraid will not be ready for about sixty days.

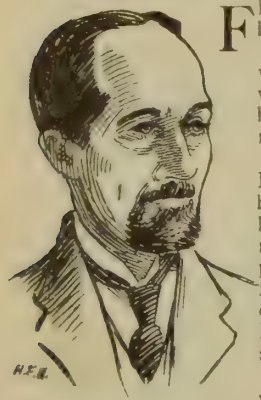
Mechanism Thieves Caught.

Mr. Michaelson, of Bath Beach, Brooklyn, reports that the thieves who stole his moving picture mechanism, as well as the mechanisms of several other exhibitors in and around Bath Beach, have been caught. We are indeed glad to hear this and trust they will, in the parlance of the street, "get theirs," and get it good and plenty.

SECRETS OF SUCCESS.

"Montgomery, the Moving Picture Man," Tells How He Quickens Dead Ventures Into Profitable Enterprises.

By Epes Winthrop Sargent.



FRANK MONTGOMERY, better known as "Montgomery, the Moving Picture Man," came to New York last week, arriving from Jacksonville by way of Chicago and returning home by way of Dayton, Ohio, where his newest house is located.

To anyone who has followed the Montgomery advertising, the man himself is a surprise. Set him at the board table at a bank director's meeting and he would not look out of place, but somehow you cannot reconcile the flamboyant advertising of Montgomery, the Moving Picture Man, with Frank Montgomery himself.

He is slightly under average size, with keen, alert eyes, and a quiet air of confidence that is far removed from the braggadocio that in America is erroneously associated with the term "showman." His dress is quiet, his speech soft and his manner reserved. Mr. Montgomery and the Montgomery advertising are far apart, but it is this contrast that has won for him success in the section of the country least likely to yield success to any new form of amusement.

Mr. Montgomery is a motion picture man, but his real business is to raise from the dead the moribund enterprise and breathe life into the still born venture. The more seemingly impossible the task the better he likes it and the more confident he is of success.

"I have little use for the town where pictures are making money," he explains. "Where a house is making money I can perhaps make more, but it is less profitable than taking a town where all are agreed that pictures cannot be made to pay, and proving everyone in error. That's one of the secrets. Pictures do not pay because they are not properly presented or because there is something wrong with the house. Remedy the defects and the profit is immediate.

"When I find a town in my territory that looks like a good opening, I get the house and then I set the people talking. I tell them that I am going to make a success, that they are all wrong in supposing that pictures will not pay. I do not make extravagant predictions, but I make predictions extravagantly. I do not promise more than I expect to perform, but I phrase those promises in such a way that they wonder whether I am a liar or merely insane. By the time they commence to figure it out every man, woman and child in town knows that Montgomery is going to open a house that he has built or bought. They come out of curiosity and remain because I give them the best I can obtain.

"In a late issue you quoted from the advertisements and explained something of my method as derived from my press book, but it is difficult from a distance to explain the sensation that such advertising makes in a town that is not used to the style.

"Once, for a few days, I almost wondered if I was beaten. This was in Jacksonville, the foundation and home town of my present enterprises. I had come into town and found a good house running a vaudeville performance. It was starving, but nothing else offered and the manager kept on. He was rather surprised when I offered to buy, basing my offer on the fact that he was not making money. He didn't seem able to understand how I knew, though any experienced man could have come within a few dollars of the receipts and a couple of hundred dollars of the expenses. It took him a day to decide to sell, but he sold and seemed to be sorry for me.

"Everyone I talked to seemed to share his pity and in some directions it took the form of spot cash for all work to be performed. They had been shown I had money, but they wanted their payments before I lost it all, and after a time the thing got on my nerves. I began to have doubts myself, but I kept silent and made my advertising even stronger. I sent out a thousand passes, not broadcast, but to the best list I could obtain. A form letter accompanied each. I simply said that I did not know them and they did not know me, but that I hoped we would get acquainted with each other.

"This was Florida, but they all wanted to be shown and we played to packed houses. Better still, we took in more paid admissions than any house in town, and the people who did use their passes came back with their money, not once but regularly.

"In my next town I was told the proposition was impossible. At the bank where I went to open an account the cashier told me that pictures had never paid. It was a quarter of an hour before I had him even half way willing to admit that perhaps the vaudeville and the management and not the pictures were at fault. He smiled when I told him that I would not only make a fan of him, but all his friends and the others smiled when I made the same prediction in print, but I got them and held them, and I have them still. The Southerner is conservative, but once he is convinced he is loyal.

"Advertising, mostly newspaper advertising, has been the real secret of success. I use some lithographs, but not many, and spend my money with the papers.

"When I go into a new town I try to contract for space, but I want the commercial rate. Amusement rates are double or even triple the price paid by the grocer or the dry goods man, partly because it is supposed to carry with it write-up matter. I explain to the business manager that I want no house notices. If the show warrants mention as a matter of news; if they see a film worth while and want to write it up, well and good, but I want no house-written criticisms or advance notices. I take the stand that I have theater tickets to sell just as the others advertise to sell cloth or food and that I want the same rate they obtain. If I can't get it I go to the billboards, but usually they see my point and accept the contract. If they don't I use the boards until they admit my argument and ask for the contract.

"I do not care for the small, regular advertisement. I would rather take thirty inches once a month than an inch a day for thirty days. You cannot say much in an inch. You can do a lot of talking in thirty. I do not boom my features, as a rule, but the enterprise as a whole. I may not do a line of special work for a three reel feature, letting it come as a surprise and boom some single reel that seems better worth while. The three reel features are good attractions where the material is there, but the single reel story spread over three reels does not make good.

"There seems to be a lack of technique in planning most of the features. No special will satisfy that leaves the audience cold at the end of the early reels. In a dramatic performance there is always the ante-climax ending each act that leaves the audience eager for the rise of the curtain and the continuation of the story, and few specials meet this demand. Then, too, the subjects are not always well chosen from the point of general popularity.

"I do not employ vaudeville, nor do I use the permanent singer who is featured into fictitious popularity. I change my singers every two to four weeks. Vaudeville I do not use, because so far south if I find that I have an act not suited to my clientele the discovery is made too late to obtain a substitute. Electrical posing acts and similar features that can be worked on the small apron that constituted the stage in my houses will give variety, but good singing is a better attraction. I do not use orchestral selections as act numbers. This seems to work well out West, but my patrons want the orchestra as accompaniment to the pictures and not as a feature number. In one of my houses I have had good results from a pipe organ that cost $5,000 in actual money. Not all five thousand dollar organs deplete the bank account to that extent.

"I make my pictures my feature and do not use strong attractions to make them a go. When the pictures do not draw I will turn to some other feature, but so long as I conduct photoplay theaters—and I expect to keep on with them—I shall make the pictures the feature. I pay the highest price for service of any manager in my territory. I get the best and make them work for me. Other attractions lend diversity to the program; for it is not always possible, under existing conditions to gain diversity of program from current releases, but the pictures are the thing and the foundation of my success, backed by a policy of promising no more than I can perform and generally doing more than I promise. To condense my policy into a sentence I start out by making people believe me a liar and prove to them that I am not."

WARDEN TYNEN IN SELIG PICTURE.

In the Selig release of Sept. 6th entitled "Circumstantial Evidence," Warden Thomas Tynen, of the Colorado State Penitentiary, plays a prominent part. The warden is one of the best-known men in the west and his appearance in a motion picture will be looked forward to with a great deal of interest by his numerous friends. Warden Tynen is the man who instituted the now famous honor system among the convicts in his charge. The picture in question is exceptionally interesting in that it shows many scenes which were taken in and around the penitentiary grounds.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"TWILIGHT" (Essanay).

Taking for their theme one of the sweetest musical compositions ever written, the Essanay Company have constructed a beautiful dramatization replete with heart-interest and the tenderest of memories.

Old Silas Grant and his wife are contented on their little farm and watch the budding romance of their pretty granddaughter, Ruth, and her sweetheart, Harry, while the tenderest of memories of bygone years bring the sparkle of youth once again to their age-dimmed eyes. In the old-fashioned parlor, with the lights turned low and the glow from the fireplace enfolding them in its ruddy embrace, Mrs. Grant plays once again the beautiful twilight song on the spinet while the old man slowly keeps time and the smoke from his pipe curls upward in the darkened room. Slowly the scene fades and we see them happy and contented on their little farm, sturdy young hearts not afraid of toil and the work of the fields. Once more the scene fades and Time has whitened their locks with his unrelenting, withering touch. The heat of midday is too much for the old man, and Mrs. Grant leads him from the plow to the cool of the old library and the enchantment of the twilight love song. The fading scene returns us to the dim parlor just as the pretty granddaughter and her sweetheart enter and discover the old couple nodding over the last strains of the wonderful music. Slowly Grant knocks the dead contents of his pipe into the fireplace and, as the young couple look on from the doorway, takes his sweetheart of fifty years in his arms and kisses her wan lips, while the flickering flame leaps up rejoicing, then only the wondrous twilight bathes the room in its enchantment as the shadows steal over all.

Scene from "Twilight" (Essanay).

A more beautiful story can hardly be imagined, and the Essanay players have done it full justice. The vision scenes are exquisite, and the fine lighting effects portrayed in the old parlor are masterpieces of ingenuity.

Francis X. Bushman gives another of his fine character-studies in the role of old Grant, Martha Russell is his aged wife, Ruth Stonehouse portrays the charming granddaughter and Harry Mainhall is her sweetheart.

"THE RANCHERS' LOTTERY" (Eclair).

"The Ranchers' Lottery," to be released by Eclair September 12th, features several members of their stock company in a delightful bit of hearty, unconventional acting. The whole story seems to have gone into their soul and blood, judging by the absolute abandon they exhibit in their working up and then out of a very good situation. It ought to please any sort of audience.

AMERICAN GETS SOME "ODD" PICTURES.

Kerrigan fans who have watched and admired the handsome big "cowboy" as he appears in "Flying A" productions, would have found food for reflection in the result of an experience which befell the picture idol last week. Kerrigan, in company of R. D. Armstrong and one of the cowboys, went to visit a genuine, dyed-in-the-wool ranch lying in a remote region off Santa Barbara, Cal. They found cowboys of the old school, the kind that have made countless feet of motion pictures and numberless volumes of books. Kerrigan began his experience by nearly shooting his foot off with a Colt that did not have blank cartridges in it. The company, upon asking for rooms, were told that there were about eighteen thousand acres in the ranch and they were welcome. They shot a deer and dined on real jerky and had numerous other experiences befitting real cowboys. When the party returned they had taken 3,000 feet of pictures, which advance reports claim will be unique in the history of ranch pictures. The ranch in question lies two days' ride from railroads or other civilization and is one of the few old-fashioned ranches still extant in the West.

"THE CAPTURE OF NEW YORK."
(Thanhouser.)

The Thanhouser Company has been extremely busy in Connecticut during the recent maneuvers of the armies of the Red and Blue. The various military movements have been recorded in motion pictures under expert military guidance and will serve an educational purpose, particularly to the profession of arms in the teaching of military tactics. The sham war was instituted primarily as a practical lesson for army officers in the handling of men and impedimenta. The old guard of American generals is rapidly passing, and there are few of those to-day in command who have seen actual service in war. It becomes necessary in times of peace to instruct the younger officers in the practical moving of large forces in order that the theory of war may not predominate over the practical side.

Camp for Moving Picture Battery—Thanhouser on the Right.

Methods of attack and defense were gone through under conditions that have been modernized by new inventions. For instance: the aeroplane played a prominent part in the war of the Reds and the Blues; also the wireless, the telephone, the automobile and new departures in ordinance equipment. The artillery maneuvers are particularly of interest in showing numerous changes from the older methods. The matter of throwing up entrenchments has been carefully illustrated, together with strategic movements and charges. The engineering departments were put to many tests in the appliance of modern equipment. Taken altogether, the battle of the Reds and Blues is a great lesson, not only to the soldier but to the ordinary citizens of the Republic, in the way that war is waged.

Soldiers of Red Army Resting After Victory.

Being sponsored by the United States Government, the maneuvers were on an extensive scale and motion pictures of the event were decidedly a part of the Government's programme. One of the objects is to use them at West Point in the teaching of cadets until other and better war methods have been devised.

The Thanhouser "war correspondents" with cameras followed the victorious Reds and filmed the fight and preparations for it. They got some special views that will be an education in twentieth century fighting methods. The great popular modern "charger" is the automobile, and its use has been abundantly shown in this Thanhouser picture, which will be entitled "The Capture of New York," to be released Sunday, September 1st.

"AFTER ALL" (Victor).

In this simple little romance of the South many phases of love are presented.

Neither Rob or Tom were wealthy, both of them were sturdy sons of the South and in each of their hearts kindled the spark of love for that pretty mountain lass. Margie really wasn't partial to either, but she must have loved Rob the more, for when Tom aimed to kill his rival Margie protected him with her own body.

That both of the lads loved her dearly was evidenced by their jealousy of each other, but after all when the romance was over Tom's apparent brutality could not leave the slightest doubt as to which of the two loved her the most.

The most dramatic situation comes about when Tom threatens to kill Rob unless Margie will denounce him and refuse to marry him. To carry out his ingeniously villainous plan Tom ascends a tree and with his gun pointed at Rob forces Margie to dismiss her lover.

Florence Lawrence in a Scene from "After All" (Victor)

Rob knowing nothing of the plot and the sacrifice that Margie made to save his life, took himself off to distant lands and Tom thought that he had won the day. But Margie pined for her loved one and each day she looked more sorrowful. When Tom realized the suffering he had inflicted he set forth to find his rival and explaining the devilish methods he had employed to win her he had little trouble in inducing him to return, for Rob was as miserable as Margie.

With Florence Lawrence and Owen Moore in the principal roles and most picturesque scenic effects, the picture is decidedly charming. Released Friday, September 6.

CLARENCE B. PURDY.

Clarence B. Purdy, president of the Novelty Film Exchange, 32 Union Square, New York City, died August 24 at his New York residence. Mr. Purdy was well known in New York motion picture circles. He was actively engaged for some time in supervising the motion picture tuberculosis exhibitions of the New York Board of Health.

Just prior to his death Mr. Purdy spent two weeks at Greenwood Lake for the benefit of his health, during which time this work and the exchange business were conducted by his wife.

The deceased at the time of his death was 36 years of age. He leaves a widow and three children. The interment was at Greenwood Cemetery.

"BACK TO THE OLD FARM" (Essanay).

This is a charming summer pastoral story, unique in plot conception and showing the most modern farming methods as compared with those of years gone by, and has been splendidly portrayed by the Essanay Eastern players.

Frank Clayton, a young city chap, plans a vacation on Uncle Barnes' farm. Going to his friend, George Randall, Clayton shows him Barnes' letter asking that George be brought along, as he has always been like a son to him and that someone will be glad to see him. George agrees to go and that night has a dream of the old days on the Barnes farm, where he worked as a young fellow and loved Barnes' pretty daughter, Mollie. Toiling on the old fashioned place becomes irksome to him and he determines to seek his fortune in the city. Packing up his few things, he leaves a note for Barnes, then steals away in the moonlight and comes upon Mollie in the garden. Telling her of his discontent and his plans for the future he kisses her tenderly, receives her blessing and leaves. With a start George awakens to find Clayton urging him to hurry and make the train. But what a change greets their eyes on arriving at the old place. Time and money have worked wonders, sure enough, and the Barnes' farm is now equipped with the latest and most modern machinery and conveniences. With pretty Mollie by his side George rides over the vast acres in wonderment, and the two plan a moonlight elopement that night. Proudly old Barnes shows them a new auto wagon he has just purchased and tells George it is good for anything. Next morning the young couple are missed and Barnes finds a note from George, declaring the auto wagon has been just the right medium for their elopement and that the farm and Mollie are good enough for him, for they are coming back soon. So with a smile the old man prepares to kill the fatted calf.

Scene from "Back to the Old Farm" (Essanay).

The Essanay Company have succeeded in making a thoroughly pleasing production of this unique story. The scenes about the old fashioned farm with everything in confusion at the beginning of the film, are characteristic and absolutely true to life, while the later views of the modern farm with all its fine machinery and conveniences, and showing just how the appliances are used, are of great educational value to all who view the photoplay.

William Bailey plays George Randall, E. H. Calvert is young Clayton, Frank Dayton portrays Farmer Barnes, Beverly Bayne is Mollie and Lily Branscombe is Mrs. Barnes. All the characters are well taken by these well-known Essanay favorites. The production is booked for release Tuesday, Sept. 3rd.

M. B. DUDLEY TO FEATURE FREDERICK WARDE.

Frederick Warde, the renowned American tragedian and portrayer of Shakespearean roles will appear shortly in a five-reel classic production, the name of which is at present withheld for business reasons. These pictures will be sponsored and disposed of by Mr. M. B. Dudley, a man of long experience as a newspaper man and theatrical manager. There are several other notable actors on Mr. Dudley's list who have also signed to appear in pictures and whose names will be given at the proper time. The scenarios for these features will be arranged by Mr. James Keane, formerly of the Selig Polyscope Company, and he will also stage the productions.

"QUEEN ELIZABETH" PRESENTATION IN NEW YORK.

Mr. Daniel Frohman has made arrangements with Marcus Loew for the presentation of the feature film, "Queen Elizabeth," in all of the Loew theaters in Greater New York. The role of Queen Elizabeth is acted by Mme. Sara Bernhardt. This picture will be exhibited at popular prices.

The Famous Players Film Company is the firm responsible for the production of "Queen Elizabeth." Its managing director is Daniel Frohman, of the New York Lyceum Theater. It is the intention of the firm to record in pictures famous plays with famous actors, by which means the inhabitants of the remotest villages will be enabled to observe the work of theatrical stars who in all probability would never visit the smaller towns. The next play to be sent out by the Famous Players Film Company will be "Monte Cristo," with Mr. James O'Neill in the part of Edmund Dantes, which he has played for more than twenty years.

A TOKEN OF ESTEEM TO M. A. NEFF.

Just before the Chicago convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League adjourned Joe Rex Engel on behalf of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company presented to Mr. M. A. Neff, president of the league, a loving cup.

In making the presentation Engel said: "To you, Mr. M. A. Neff, the man, and as President of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, I wish to tender this token of esteem. Do not, however, infer that because the name of the Universal Film Manufacturing Co. appears thereon that it is in any sense a gift of a portion of the motion picture industry.

"In presenting this loving cup to you I do it as the representative of a group of men identified with the film industry who individually wish to show their appreciation of the work you have done and the progress the League has made under your able administration.

"Accept this token of respect and esteem from the officers of the Universal Film Mfg. Co. individually and as men who wish you the greatest possible success in your new term of office."

AMERICAN FINISHES FATHER MARQUETTE STORY.

In addition to the two-reel subject of "The Story of Starved Rock," completed at Starved Rock, Ill., recently by the party of American "Flying A" players encamped there, a second two-reel has been made dealing with the early life of Father Marquette.

It is no exaggeration to say that handsomer backgrounds have seldom been seen in motion pictures, inasmuch as the region in and about Starved Rock has always been noted for its marvelous canyons, rapid streams and remarkable rock formations. The story begins with Father Marquette as a cavalier in France, his love affair with a royal beauty and his departure for America as a missionary. So little is known of the really astonishing part played by the French priest in the discovery of the upper Mississippi, his many plans and charts, locating coal beds along the Illinois, his geographical surveys throughout the Middle West, his reports to the French Crown on the length, depth and tides of the Great Lakes, that it is believed this two-reel subject will attract a wide comment among all classes of people. Much of the material used was obtained from the archives of the Chicago Historical Society. The story ends with the death of Father Marquette on his journey home at the Michigan city now bearing his name.

C. G. P. C. NOVELTY.

A tiny figure of Cupid, awakening from his slumber, rejoicing, sorrowing, and then triumphant, is the novel substitute for sub-titles in the delightful story entitled "Love's Progress." A young marquis meets a peasant girl, and with them both it is a case of love at first sight. The girl's father, however, doubts the sincerity of the marquis's love and forbids his daughter to marry. The mother of the marquis, too, has other plans for her son and insists that he marry a girl of his own rank. With his real sweetheart's father opposed to him, the young man decides to fulfill his mother's desire. The country lass, hearing of this, falls seriously ill. Her father realizes that he has not succeeded in killing his daughter's love for the marquis and fears for her recovery. He explains the situation to the younger man and pleads with him to save his daugter's life. The marquis hesitates only a moment, then, forgetting nobility and rank and his promise to his mother, he goes forth to marry the girl he really loves. The film is beautifully colored and will be released September 10th.

Scene from "Love's Progress" (C. G. P. C.).

On the same reel will be "A Little Journey in Tunis"—a portrait of the Arabian tribesmen at home, at work, and at play.

"THE DAWN OF PASSION" (American).

Away off on the borderland of civilization lived Jasper Worthy and pretty Jenny Whippleton. Their people had moved to the desolate barren lands close to the desert before they were born, so it was not unusual that a love should have sprung up between them.

It was a fierce strong, primeval love with the man, but merely a quiet acceptance of love on the part of the woman. One day they watched the first visitors—cowboys—as their horses toiled up the mountain path. Bill Hicox, rough and dissolute, soon selected the unsophisticated girl for his own. She gave him later, fierce, burning love which came straight from untrammeled nature. Often, with this newly awakened feeling in her bosom, she went to Jasper. He found her strangely changed, a new light in her eyes, a new thought in her mind. He did not like it, but did not have the strength to reason with it.

Scene from "The Dawn of Passion" (American).

A day came when primeval man again asserted itself. Away up on the hillside, he saw the cowboy clasping the willing body to his breast, showering kisses on the upturned lips. A sudden anger came over him; he clenched his hands and the smoldering hatred that had burned in him tightened his jaw and knotted the cords of his powerful arms. She came to him shortly after, and threw her arms impulsively around his neck. He shook her off and broke into a run up the hillside. The cowboy and the primeval man met—they clenched and fought over the dangerous precipice while the girl with bated breath watched the desperate battle from the distance. Lifting his burly antagonist in his arms, the primeval man hurled him into eternity. A moment later Jenny was in his arms weeping, a burden lifted from her heart, the strange, new longing vaporing heavenward with the soul of the cowboy whose stiffening body lay at the base of the cliff.

A REMARKABLE SLIDE FEATURE.

Life in Sing Sing Prison is the title of an intensely interesting subject being offered to showmen by A. J. Clapham, the pioneer manufacturer of features. At an enormous expense Mr. Clapham secured 45 excellent photographs of this famous prison showing convicts at work, the various departments, cells, and death chairs, etc. These scenes have never been previously published and every picture is stamped with genuineness. Mr. Clapham's advertising shown in this issue explains fully what he has to offer. An attractive line of lithographs has been prepared and every requisite for the proper exhibition of this subject has been carefully attended to; advance slides, two styles, one sheets, three sheets, electrotypes and a very dramatic lecture and lobby display goes to make it complete. The subject is a strong one and will undoubtedly be in great demand. It treats of the prison matters in an educational as well as sensational manner. The slides are perfect in photographic quality; and some idea can be had of the value of the subject from the fact that Mr. Kellmann, of the Kellmann Feature Film Company, Boston, Mass., purchased the New England rights from Mr. Clapham for the sum of $500. This is probably the first time in moving picture history that State rights have been sold on slides. Mr. Clapham, however, does not intend to sell State rights in other parts of the United States, but will offer the subject to anyone who wants it. We can heartily recommend this subject to exhibitors looking for a novelty.

Shower Baths in Sing Sing Prison.

THEATERS OPENING FOR SEASON WITH NEW MACHINES.

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports that the better class of moving picture theaters are throwing out their old machines and opening for the coming season with new, up-to-date equipments. Among recent sales by Mr. Hallberg are one Powers No. 6A complete with Hallberg Standard A. C. Economizer, to E. H. Haverly, Lewistown, Pa.; a Powers No. 6, E. E. Jardine, Phœnix, N. Y., and many Hallberg Economizers to all parts of the country.

WE HAVE CLOSED NEGOTIATIONS IN EUROPE TO HANDLE ALL

"ASTA NIELSEN FEATURES"

IN AMERICA, AND ARE NOW SELLING EXCLUSIVE TERRITORY AT FIFTEEN CENTS PER FOOT, GIVING ALL PURCHASERS THE BENEFIT OF OUR ENORMOUS ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN OF

"THE GERMAN BERNHARDT"

THE SECOND RELEASE, AMERICA'S AND EUROPE'S SENSATION

"THE TRAITRESS"

A THREE-REEL PICTURE, AND ONE OF THE MOST POWERFUL EMOTIONAL DRAMAS EVER PRODUCED, IS NOW READY

WIRE OR WRITE TODAY

ONE AND THREE SHEET POSTERS AT COST

The United Feature Film Company 559 Spitzer Bldg. TOLEDO, OHIO

Calendar of Independent Releases.

Releasing Through Universal Company.

CURRENT RELEASES.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 1st, 1912.

ECLAIR—Two Brave Little Hearts (Drama) .....
REX—In Honor Bound (Drama) .....

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 2nd, 1912.

IMP—The Love Test (Drama) .....
NESTOR—On the Border Line (Drama) .....
CHAMPION—The Maid of the Rocks (Drama) .....

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3rd, 1912.

GEM—The Celebrated Case (2-Reel—Drama) .....
ECLAIR—The Actress Pulls the Strings (Comedy) ....
BISON—The Arizona Land Swindle (Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 4th, 1912.

POWERS—Love Will Find a Way (Drama) .....
NESTOR—The Evidence (Drama) .....
UNIVERSAL—The Animated Weekly (Topical) .....

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 5th, 1912.

REX—From the Wilds (Drama) .....
IMP—Tares of the Wheat (Drama) .....
ECLAIR—The Guest at the Parsonage (Drama) .....

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 6th, 1912.

VICTOR—After All (Drama) .....
POWERS—His Weakness (Drama) .....
NESTOR—The Girls and the Chaperon (Comedy) .....

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 7th, 1912.

IMP—Lem's Hot Chocolate (Comedy) .....
IMP—Queenie and the Cannibal (Comedy) .....
MILANO—Victims of Ingratitude (2-Reel—Drama) ...
BISON—Her Last Resort (Drama) .....

UNIVERSAL ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 8th, 1912.

ECLAIR—The Kind Old Man (Comedy-Drama) .....
REX—The Ghost of a Bargain (Drama) .....

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 9th, 1912.

IMP—The Intrigue (Drama) .....
NESTOR—In the San Fernando Valley (Drama) .....
CHAMPION—The Trysting Tree (Comedy-Drama) ....

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 10th, 1912.

GEM—A Tune of Fate (Drama) .....
ECLAIR—The Haunted Bachelor (Comedy) .....
ECLAIR—The Marshal's Honeymoon (Comedy) .....
BISON—A White Indian (Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 11th, 1912.

POWERS—His First and Last Appearance (Comedy)...
NESTOR—The Men Within (Drama) .....
UNIVERSAL—The Animated Weekly (Topical) .....

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 12th, 1912.

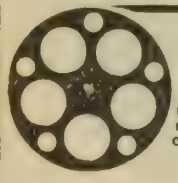
REX—The Squatter's Rights (Drama) .....
IMP—Human Hearts (Two Reels—Drama) .....
ECLAIR—The Rancher's Lottery (Comedy-Drama) ....

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13th, 1912.

VICTOR—All for Love (Drama) .....
POWERS—The Supreme Power (Drama) .....
NESTOR—Three Love-Sick Cowboys (Comedy) .....

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 14th, 1912.

IMP—Dolly, the Tom Boy (Comedy) .....
IMP—Dick's Predicament (Comedy) .....
MILANO—The Wedding Gift (Drama) .....
BISON—(Title not reported) .....



Repairs

The most modern shop and best picture machine repair men in the country guarantee you promptest service and complete satisfaction. Second-hand machines bought and sold.

Full Line of Supplies

Selling agents for all makes of machines.

Chicago Moving Picture Supply Co. 107 N. Dearborn Street CHICAGO, ILL.

Releasing Through Film Supply Company.

CURRENT RELEASES.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 1st, 1912.

MAJESTIC—The Chaperon (Comedy) .....
THANHOUSER—The Capture of New York (Military and Educational) .....

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 2nd, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Greaser and the Weakling (Drama).1000
COMET—The Dentist's Dilemma (Comedy).....

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3rd, 1912.

"101" BISON (N. Y. M. P. Co.)—For the Honor of the Tribe (Drama) .....
GAUMONT—The Refugee's Casket (Drama).....
MAJESTIC—Mabel's Beau (Drama) .....
THANHOUSER—The Voice of Conscience (Drama)..

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 4th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Marked Gun (Drama).....1000
GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly (Topical) .....
RELIANCE—The Heart of a Cossack (Drama).....
SOLAX—The Fight in the Dark (Drama).....

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 5th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Stranger at Coyote (Drama).....1000
GAUMONT—A Midnight Encounter (Comedy-Drama).
GAUMONT—The Launching of the Imperator (Top.)..

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 6th, 1912.

"101" BISON (N. Y. M. P. Co.)—An Old Tune (Drama)
LUX—A Cripple's Folly (Drama)..... 990
SOLAX—Open to Proposals (Comedy).....
THANHOUSER—His Father's Son (Drama).....

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 7th, 1912.

COMET—Title not reported.
GREAT NORTHERN—The Afflicted Governor (Com.) 496
GREAT NORTHERN—The Spring Lock (Com.)..... 457
RELIANCE—The Bully and the Shrimp (Drama).....

FILM SUPPLY COMPANY—ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 8th, 1912.

MAJESTIC—The Pleasures of Camping (Comedy).....
MAJESTIC—Willie's Dog (Comedy) .....
THANHOUSER—Don't Pinch My Pup! (Com.-Dr.)...

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 9th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Dawn of Passion (Drama).....1000
COMET—Title not reported.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 10th, 1912.

"101" BISON (N. Y. M. P. Co.)—Title not reported.
GAUMONT—Love's Serenade (Drama) .....
MAJESTIC—Lola's Sacrifice (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—A Star Reborn (Drama).....

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 11th, 1912.

AMERICAN—Vengeance That Failed (Drama).....1000
GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly (Topical) .....
RELIANCE—Love Knows No Laws (Drama).....
SOLAX—Treasures on the Wing (Comedy).....

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 12th, 1912.

AMERICAN—Title not reported.
GAUMONT—The Plague-Stricken City (Drama).....

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13th, 1912.

"101" BISON (N. Y. M. P. Co.)—Title not reported.
LUX—Tommy's Playmate (Drama) 980
SOLAX—The Soul of the Violin (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—The Birth of Lotus Blossom (Drama)

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 14th, 1912.

COMET—Title not reported.
GREAT NORTHERN—Aunt Jane's Will (Com.-Dr.)...
RELIANCE—For Love of Her (Drama).....

The KINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY

is the original journal devoted to the motion picture industry, and is recognized as the leading organ of the trade. It has a guaranteed circulation of 10,000 copies weekly.

Subscription.—$3.50 per annum, postfree in America. Specimen copy and tariff for advertisements on application.

PUBLISHING OFFICES. 9 & 11 Tottenham Street, Tottenham Court Road, W., London, England.

Fairman Advertising Agency, 250a Kingston Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

Current Releases

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 2nd, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—In the North Woods (Drama).....
KALEM—The Hoodoo Hat (Comedy).....
KALEM—From Jerusalem to the Dead Sea (Scenic)...
LUBIN—A Substitute (Comedy) 691
LUBIN—His New Cane (Comedy)..... 363
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 36—1912 (Topical).....1000
SELIG—As the Fates Decree (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Tommy's Sister (Drama).....1000

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3rd, 1912.

EDISON—The Triangle (Comedy-Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—Back to the Old Farm (Drama).....1000
CINES—A Tragedy of Long Ago (Drama).....1000
C. G. P. C.—Beatrix d'Este (Drama).....
SELIG—An Equine Hero (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Coronets and Hearts (Drama).....1000

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 4th, 1912.

EDISON—Aladdin Up to Date (Comedy).....1000
ECLIPSE—An Eccentric Sportsman (Comedy)..... 455
ECLIPSE—From Lauterbrunnen to Murren, Switzerland (Scenic) 382
ECLIPSE—Small Game at the Zoo (Educational)..... 165
KALEM—Down Through the Ages (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—The Bank Cashier (Drama).....1000
PATHE—Locked Out of Wedlock (Comedy).....
VITAGRAPH—Captain Barnacle's Legacy (Drama)....1000

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 5th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—Getting Rid of Trouble (Comedy).....
BIOGRAPH—He Must Have a Wife (Comedy).....
ESSANAY—The Wildman (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—The Smuggler (Comedy-Drama) 1000
MELIES—The Obsession (Drama) 1000
PATHE—The Penalty Paid (Drama).....
SELIG—Sergeant Byrne of the N. W. M. P. (Drama)..1000

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 6th, 1912.

EDISON—Believe Me, If All Those Endearing Young Charms (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—Twilight (Drama) 1000
C. G. P. C.—Whiffles and the Magic Wand (Comedy)...
C. G. P. C.—The Bud, the Leaf and the Flower (Science)
KALEM—The Loneliness of the Hills (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—A Romance of the Coast (Drama).....1000
SELIG—Circumstantial Evidence (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Bunny's Suicide (Comedy) 400
VITAGRAPH—She Wanted a Boarder (Comedy) 600

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 7th, 1912.

EDISON—Bridget's Sudden Wealth (Comedy)..... 600
EDISON—Opening of the Y. M. C. A. Playground, Lynchburg, Va. (Descriptive) 400
ESSANAY—The Ranchman's Trust (Drama).....1000
CINES—The Sacking of Rome (Historical Drama).... 770
CINES—Picturesque Sardinia, Italy (Scenic)..... 242
KALEM—The Darling of the C. S. A. (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—A Little Family Affair (Comedy).....1000
PATHE—Gee! My Pants! (Comedy).....
VITAGRAPH—A Wasted Sacrifice (Drama).....1000

Advance Releases

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 9th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—An Unseen Enemy (Drama).....
KALEM—The Girl Reporter's Big Scoop (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—The Halfbreed's Sacrifice (Drama).....1000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 37—1912 (Topical).....1000
PATHE—The Blighted Son—Special (Drama) .....
SELIG—The House of His Master (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—The Road to Yesterday (Drama).....1000

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 10th, 1912.

EDISON—The Manufacture of Paper, Maine (Ind.)...1000
ESSANAY—Title not reported.
CINES—Scenes Along the Salerno Coast, Italy (Scenic) 140
CINES—The Conspiracy of Catiline (Drama)..... 885
C. G. P. C.—Love's Progress (Comedy-Drama).....
C. G. P. C.—A Little Journey in Tunis (Scenic).....
SELIG—The Fighting Instinct (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—The Higher Mercy (Drama).....1000

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 11th, 1912

EDISON—The Stranger and the Taxicab (Comedy)...1000
ECLIPSE—Glimpses of St. Petersburg (Scenic)..... 560
ECLIPSE—Chemical Action (Educational)..... 180
ECLIPSE—Winter Sports at St. Moritz, Switzerland (Topical) 485
KALEM—Dr. Skinnem's Wonderful Invention (Comedy)
KALEM—The Ancient Port of Jaffa (Scenic).....
LUBIN—A Red-Hot Courtship (Comedy) 1000
PATHE—Black Beauty (Drama) .....
VITAGRAPH—The Hindoo's Curse (Drama).....1000

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 12th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—Blind Love (Drama) .....
ESSANAY—Title not reported.
LUBIN—Betty and the Roses (Drama).....1000
MELIES—The Unworthy Son (Drama).....1000
PATHE—Anguished Hours (Drama) .....
SELIG—The Indelible Stain (Drama).....1000

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13th, 1912.

EDISON—The Dam Builder (Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—Title not reported.
C. G. P. C.—For Her Lord (Drama).....
C. G. P. C.—The Late Harriet Quimby's Flight Across the English Channel (Topical).....
KALEM—The Street Singer (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—Never Again (Comedy) .....
LUBIN—Buster and the Pirates (Drama).....
SELIG—The Trade Gun Bullet (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—The Loyalty of Sylvia (Drama).....1000

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 14th, 1912.

EDISON—The Rescue, Care and Education of Blind Babies (Educational) .....
ESSANAY—Title not reported.
CINES—Honors Divided (Drama) 1075
KALEM—A Railroad Lochinvar (Comedy-Drama).....1000
LUBIN—A Trustee of the Law (Drama).....1000
PATHE—Saved at the Altar (Drama).....
VITAGRAPH—Popular Betty (Comedy-Drama) 600
VITAGRAPH—The Fortune in the Tea-Cup (Comedy). 400

POPULAR PHOTO PLAYERS

Costello, Bunny, Joyce, Gauntier, Turner, Anderson, Johnson, Fuller and other favorites. Posters, 28 x 42, 10 for $1.50 Prepaid. Photos 11 x 14, 12 for $2.00 Prepaid. Postcards $4.00 per 1,000.

LICENSED EXHIBITORS — TAKE NOTICE

We carry in stock, posters (one-sheet 28 x 42 pictorial lithos) of all the above licensed releases and all back releases; also 3-sheets for all Biograph and Lubin subjects and 3- and 6-sheets on feature releases of Bio, Lubin, Edison, Kalem, Pathe and Vitagraph; also 3-sheets for feature releases of Selig, Kleine and Essanay.

One sheets 15c. Three sheets 35c. Six sheets 70c. Add 1c per sheet for prepaid postage.
"If It's Anything to Advertise a Picture Theater, We Have It."

EXHIBITORS' ADVERTISING & SPECIALTY CO. 30 Union Square, New York

THREE-SHEET POSTER FRAMES

With top sheets reading Special Feature, Extra Feature, Extra Attraction, To-Day's Newest Feature, Special Attraction, Coming Soon. Complete set of 10 (assorted), for $1.20 Postage Paid.

Most News, Most Reliable News, Most Impartial News.
Correct and up-to-date in Every Department.
Get the MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Box 226, Madison Square Station, :-: New York City
You Need No Other

Canadian Warning! We are the sole owners of the territory rights of the Bernhardt Camille and Rejane Sans Gene Pictures for Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia. Exhibitors booking these pictures from others are jointly liable to us for damages.
CURTIS & PRIESTLEY, 918 Green Street, VICTORIA, B. C

Song Slide Releases.

Scott & Van Altena.

"Tell Me That You Love Me"—Harold Rossiter.
"Somebody's Coming to Town"—Smith & Brown.
"Humming Bird"—H. A. Weymann.
"Come to Dolly's Party"—H. Von Tilzer.
"Won't You Let Me Take You Home"—Crown.
"Those Wonderful Eyes"—Harris.
"After All I've Been to You"—Haviland.
"Any Time is Loving Time"—Crown.

A. L. Simpson.

"Do You Regret the Days Gone By?"—Pub. by F. B. Haviland Pub. Co.
"My Girl of the Golden Days"—Pub. by J. H. Aufderheide, Indianapolis, Ind.
"When I'm Away"—Pub. by Robert B. Thompson, Chicago.
"Just a Twig From the True Lover's Tree"—Pub. by J. Fred Helf, New York.

De Witt C. Wheeler, Inc.

"I Always Knew the Girl I'd Love Would Be a Girl Like You"—M. Witmark & Sons.
"What Made the Boys Like Rosie"—J. H. Remick & Co.
"Rainy Days"—Jerome & Schwartz Pub. Co.
"Hear Those Chimes"—Jos. W. Stern & Co.
"Everybody Two Step"—J. H. Remick & Co.
"My Tallahassa Flo"—M. Witmark & Sons.

A. J. Clapham.

"The Rosenthal Case."
"The Olympic Games."

EXHIBITORS

SELECT YOUR PROGRAM IN THE

OPEN MARKET

Book with the house of Variety. Elaborate Advertising Matter.

2 and 3 Reel Features of all makes and descriptions for rent.

SPECIAL FILM CO., Ltd.
5 West 14th Street, New York

SLIDES

OF ALL KINDS

Send for Catalogue "W" of our new line of beautiful

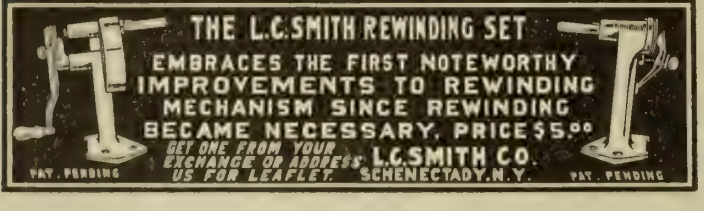
ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

Each slide illustrated from life and most exquisitely colored. The Chicago Song Slide Exchange, 6th floor, Powers Bldg., Chicago, Ill., have the exclusive agency for our announcement slides in the states of Wisconsin, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Iowa.

Advertising Slides at Reasonable Rates

Our Song Slide Catalogue of 500 different songs free to anyone for the asking.

SCOTT & VAN ALTENA
59 PEARL STREET NEW YORK CITY



THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET
L.C.SMITH CO.
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
PAT. PENDING
PAT. PENDING

Patent Allowed

Musical Bells and Piano played at the same time with

BARTON PIANO ATTACHMENT
(Patented).

Several 25 note sets same as new, used for demonstrating, while they last, $60.00.

Write to-day

DAN BARTON
266 East Irving Street : : : Oshkosh, Wisconsin

SOMETHING NEW

THE UNBREAKABLE AND WASHABLE E-Z BLANK MICA SLIDE
MAKE YOUR OWN ANNOUNCEMENT

Made of Specially Prepared Mica That Can be Written on as Easily as Paper
PRICE 25 CENTS EACH.

BATTERSHALL & OLESON, 39 W. ADAMS ST CHICAGO, ILL.

The Spiegel Motion Slide Greatly Improved

"The Slide That Moves With Lifelike Motion."

Our new series of slides have improvements that cost us thousands of dollars to perfect.

The Most Wonderful Slide on the Market.

Write for Illustrated Catalog.

THE SPIEGEL MOTION SLIDE CO.
(Incorporated.)
160 N. 5th Avenue, CHICAGO

LIFE IN SING SING PRISON

The most startling and sensational feature ever offered, produced from genuine views of the famous prison inside and out. Photography is perfect. The original views cost us a small fortune. They are exclusive and copyrighted.

Stunning three-sheets and two styles one-sheets in colors. An intensely dramatic lecture written specially, three different style electrotypes, 5 x 7 photographs for lobby.

25	slides, colored	$20.00	45	slides, colored	$40.00
1	Three sheet		2	Three sheets
5	One sheet		10	One sheets
1	Electrotype		3	Electrotypes
6	5 x 7 Photos		12	5 x 7 Photos
1	Lecture		1	Lecture

Rush your order to

A. J. CLAPHAM, Mfr. of Features, 130 West 37th St. NEW YORK

The Originator of Sensational Lectures.

Exclusive New England Rights sold to Kellmann Feature Film Co., Boston, Mass.

NOTICE! This subject has been copyrighted by us and we hereby warn infringers that we will prosecute to the full extent of the law.

One of our Big Money Makers---The Big New York Police Scandal

Rosenthal Case 20 slides, plain, $5.00. 40 slides, plain $10.00
20 slides, colored, $10.00. 40 slides, colored, $20.00
Lecture and 1 sheets free with each set. Look before you buy. Shipped anywhere in the United States with privilege of inspection.

We don't use Newspaper Prints. ·.· No Lecture required. ·.· Explanation on every slide.

Get the Genuine

American Press Association Copyrights on the
New York Police Scandal & Rosenthal Case
20 Slides - - - - $10.00

Cash with order or C. O. D.

LEVI CO., Inc.
1560 BROADWAY, N.Y.
Exclusive Makers

GAUMONT

THE GAUMONT CO.

Has decided to put out that widely-heralded, sensational, intensely exciting two-reel hand-colored feature entitled

"In the Land of the Lions"

at 15c per foot on the state right basis.
Remember TWO REELS Hand-colored

State Rights For Sale Now!

This is the biggest, bulliest two-reel sensation that the capable house of Gaumont ever made.

More Wonderful than "ATTACKED BY A LION"

A story of lions in the wilds of their native habitat. In fact, no comparison with any former release. Wire your order for exclusive territory at once to

GAUMONT CO.

FLUSHING, N. Y.

GAUMONT

GAUMONT

GAUMONT

CORRESPONDENCE

LOUISVILLE.

THE Consolidated Theaters Company, which will operate a string of moving picture houses in Kentucky, Southern Indiana and Eastern Tennessee, has been incorporated under the laws of Arizona, with a capital stock of $500,000. O. T. Crawford, owner of a dozen houses in St. Louis and Chicago, and largely interested in the Atlas Manufacturing Company, of St. Louis, has been elected president of the Consolidated Theaters Company. Other officers have been chosen as follows: William C. Higgins, vice-president; Allen Kinney, secretary and treasurer, and I. C. Simon, manager. Mr. Kinney is well known as holding a heavy interest in the Princess Amusement Company, of Louisville. Mr. Higgins is a rich whisky man of the same city. Other capitalists are also interested in the new company, included in the list of incorporators being Edward L. Williams, president of the Southern National Life Insurance Company of Louisville. The Consolidated Theaters Company will confine its efforts to towns which boast of a population of at least 5,000. Small theaters will be the rule, except in cases where the erection of an expensive building is justified by the outlook. It is planned to begin work within the next month on at least four new theaters in the three states named. The erection of others will begin as soon as the towns are selected. This phase of the work already has been started, inquiries having been put on foot to ascertain just which cities present the greatest possibilities for one or more new theaters. While not definitely decided, it is likely that the new company will begin operation by taking over the Orpheum, Casino and Crystal, now operated by the Princess Amusement Company in Louisville. Subscriptions to stock will not be solicited, although if residents of any town wish to invest in Consolidated stock they will be given an opportunity to do so. While the film service to be used has not been announced, it is probable that it will be about evenly divided, Licensed and Independent being placed in towns where they are considered most popular. Vaudeville may be used in some cases, but, in the main, straight moving pictures will prevail. The admission price is another subject yet to be settled, but it is likely that local conditions and the size of the theater erected will govern that end of the business. The announcement of the formation of the Consolidated Theaters Company caused a great deal of interest in Louisville, though rumors of the organization had been current for some time. The official announcement followed a visit of O. T. Crawford, the St. Louis magnate.

"Old Tennessee," a Thanhouser production, was a recent feature at the Novelty Theater in Louisville. Owner Dave Levinson expressed satisfaction with the results. The recent change of service has exercised a favorable effect, according to Mr. Levinson.

M. Switow, head of the Falls Cities Amusement Company, has returned from French Lick, Ind., where he spent a couple of weeks, and has left for Indianapolis, Ind., on a business trip.

The Louisville moving picture men who attended the national convention in Chicago recently, have returned to the Kentucky metropolis, enthusiastic over the meeting. The exhibitors, while in the Windy City, inspected the Selig plant, many taking their first peep behind the scenes. Several were accompanied by their ladies, and Miss Martha Russell, of the Essanay Company, took the Louisville women in hand, conducting them through the Essanay establishment. Miss Russell spent a few days in Louisville during the winter and became fast friends with the exhibitors' ladies. The intimacy was renewed in Chicago, Miss Russell showing the Louisville folk the sights in one of the Essanay touring cars. The Louisville party included Fred Dolle and Louis and Joe Steurle, of the Broadway Amusement Company; Fred Hoffman, a stockholder in the same concern; Max Simon, of the Hippodrome; Louis J. Ditmar, of the Majestic Theater Company, and official delegate of the Kentucky Motion Picture Exhibitors' League; J. M. Wentzel, of the Norman Theater, and Arthur V. Sheckler, Louisville representative of the Gomes Theatrical exchange of Cincinnati.

H. B. Strube, head of the Pastime Amusement Company, who with his wife intended to take in the convention, was prevented from attending from an accident to his son, Henry R. Strube. The youth was injured in a street car accident, which occurred when two cars collided. The exhibitor and his wife were packed and ready to leave when the news of the accident reached them. Young Strube is getting along nicely and is now out of danger.

While in Chicago, Fred Dolle and the Steurle Brothers, of the Broadway Amusement Company, ordered three Wurlitzer pianos for their three houses. The largest instrument cost $12,000, and will be installed in the Ideal Theater at Twenty-third and Market Streets. The other two cost $8,000 each, and are intended for use in the West Broadway Theaters. The new Ideal Theater is practically completed and will be opened shortly. The Ideal has a seating capacity of 1,350, exclusive of the balcony, which will not be opened at once. Vaudeville and moving pictures will be used in the Ideal, with a three-times-a-week change. Two acts will be presented. Fred Dolle will give the splendid new theater his personal attention. The theater has cost $75,000 instead of the $40,000 which was originally to be spent. The owners, however, are satisfied with the outlay, believing that they have the most beautiful theater in the South, and one that will compare favorably with any other house in the country.

L. H. Ramsey, secretary of the Kentucky Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, is in Lexington after his trip to Chicago. Mr. Ramsey had little time for pleasure while in the Illinois metropolis, being a member of several committees which had their hands full during the sessions. After a close-down of several weeks, Mr. Ramsay will re-open the "Hipp" to the public. Vaudeville and moving pictures will be staged, as in the past. The Annex ran steadily, while its partner, the "Hipp," was closed, and played to unusually large crowds. Mr. Ramsey has secured Stamper & Lyons, Lexington vocalists, for the Annex, and both are winning the crowds. Miss Stamper is the daughter of the president of the Kentucky League, who is owner of the Orpheum.

Cansler & Mahoney have opened a new moving picture house in Earlington, Ky., remodeling a building for the purpose. New floors have been installed and other alterations made. An electric piano will provide the musical entertainment. Earlington now has two animated picture theaters, exclusive of the Opera House.

Owner Stamper, of the Orpheum Theater, Lexington, Ky., is confident that his house boasts more noise-producing instruments than any other in Kentucky. Mr. Stamper's orchestra can reproduce any sound, from that of a steamboat to a mouse running across the floor. The clever methods of operating the devices have added life and snap to the performances at the Orpheum, and are largely responsible for the popularity of that handsome theater.

Robertson & Watson, of Henderson, Ky., are to operat a new theater in that town, it is understood. Necessary alterations will begin at once and the house will open early in September.

The Woodruff Theater, of Murray, Ky., has increased its attendance recently by giving away a barrel of flour each week. Every patron receives a chance on the flour with each ticket, and the commodity is given away each Saturday night.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

NEW ENGLAND.

MEMBERS of the Pilgrim Athletic Association, Boston, had a chance to see for themselves whether or not Ad. Wolgast, the boxer, has "gone back," as the club exhibited the moving pictures of the Wolgast-Rivers bout in California. These reels are exceptionally clear, and made a big hit when shown at the Pilgrim Club.

The Boston Association for the Relief and Control of Tuberculosis, in co-operation with local vaudeville and picture houses, is giving the public an insight about the "White Plague," and the best methods of escaping it. The secretary, Mr. S. H. Stone, lectures in the theaters, using colored slides to illustrate his talk. The writer is glad to report that Mr. Stone has met with excellent treatment from local managers, all of whom were only too glad to allow the lecture to be given. The audiences have been extremely receptive to the lecture, and seem to have been much interested. Mr. Stone reports that his association intends to enlarge its scope of operations this fall and that lectures will be given throughout the New England States. The lecture lasts seven minutes, and is absolutely without charge to the theaters. Many houses have advertised the attraction and found it a good box-office winner.

A certificate of incorporation was filed by the Germania Theater Company at New Haven, Conn. The capital stock is set at $2,500, with H. M. Miller as president, A. O. Pallman treasurer, and Michael Hilsenbach as secretary. These men all reside in New Haven, and will operate a theater in Germania Hall, Wooster Street. Extensive alterations are being made in the building, and vaudeville and photoplays will form the programs. Mr. Pallman is the city clerk of New Haven, and promises a good show.

The City Opera House of Somersworth, N. H., has undergone very extensive alterations, and is much improved in appearance. Manager Harry Rosendorf now has a theater which plays to good business. Moving pictures form the bills.

Another recent corporation is the Hyde Park Amusement Company of Hyde Park, Mass. This firm is incorporated at $25,000, and is composed of W. E. Greene, L. B. Cozzens, R. L. Hogg and several others. A first-class, thoroughly modern and fireproof theater is promised for Hyde Park, to be devoted to motion pictures and vaudeville.

Main Street, Hartford, Conn., will soon have another moving picture house, located on Longley Block.

The new Theater in Newburyport, Mass., is now nearly ready for its initial opening, and Manager George Goldthorpe is anxious to start the ball going. Moving pictures and vaudeville are to be given.

Mr. J. F. Appleton of Beverly, Mass., is nearly ready to open his new moving picture house which he is building. This house is to be known as the Marconi Theater, with an excellent location on Wallis Street.

Mr. Charles H. Bean, the well-known manager of the Pastime Theater, Franklin, N. H., has enlarged his house considerably, and now boasts of a seating capacity of 725, which is nearly 200 more than the Pastime could accommodate last winter.

Waterbury, Conn., will soon have another first-class theater, as Mr. S. Z. Poli, the theatrical magnate, intends to erect a house there. Land has been secured, which will admit of a theater to seat about 2,600. It is reported that the new house will play vaudeville and pictures, while the present Poli Theater and the Jacques Theater will present legitimate and stock company attractions respectively.

Michael R. Sheedy of Boston, has become a member of the Sheedy and Affiliated Vaudeville Circuit.

Mr. C. H. Blackall, the Boston Architect, has completed plans which call for a theater to seat 2,000. The plans are for a new theater, to be built in Springfield, Mass. The promoters are the Goldstein Brothers, who own a large number of New England theaters. The location chosen is Bridge Street, and the house will be 115 x 150 feet. Vaudeville and photoplays will be shown.

The moving picture operators of New Bedford, Mass., have organized, and are now known as the Moving Picture Operators' Union Auxiliary 18. The following officers have been elected: Fred C. Burke, president; J. E. Slinger, vice-president; corresponding secretary, Thomas Maloney; financial secretary, W. S. Smith. About fifteen members now comprise the union, but more will be taken in.

The state police of Danielson, Conn., who have been looking into the question of what is what in moving picture machines, booths, etc., evidently did not find anything seriously wrong with present conditions. Accordingly the revised rules regarding the use of moving picture machines are practically a replica of the old ones, with only a few very minor changes being ordered. The rules are very explicit, and give instruction for operators as to the proper size of booths and other similar things.

The new theater which has been talked about for Greenfield, Mass., for so long a time, has now become a certainty. The house is to be built by the Lawler Brothers Theater Company, which was just incorporated for this purpose. N. J. Lawler is president, T. L. Lawler is treasurer, and F. J. Lawler has been elected secretary. Federal Street has been chosen as the site, the exact location being the old Ames lot. It is surely expected that this new theater will be ready by December 1, because the builders agreed to deliver the house on that date or to pay a certain amount if they cannot deliver as promised. About 1,000 people will be easily taken care of, as the auditorium will hold 600. The estimated cost will be $60,000. Vaudeville and pictures will be the regular policy.

Mr. A. Sanditz of Waterbury, Conn., reports that he is now having a theater built in that city. The house is on East Main Street, and will seat nearly 400. Mr. Sanditz's house will be of brick, and is being made to conform with the standards required in a first-class house. Moving pictures are to be given, with the admission fee at 10 cents.

Extensive alterations are now being made in the City Theater of Brockton, Mass.

The Music Hall of Worcester, Mass., is being transformed into a moving picture theater. A seating capacity of 1,000 is called for.

The Scenic Theater of Clinton, Mass., is doing exceptionally well since it reopened for the new season. This house, which is owned by Mr. J. Jasper, has a seating capacity of 450, and is using Independent service.

"Mutual" service seems to suit the Scenic Theater in great shape, and Manager Benjamin has nothing but good to say of his new service.

Mr. Jacob Lurie, president and general manager of the Beacon Theater Company, reports that his concern has just completed a deal, whereby the Nashua Theater, Nasua, N. H., comes into their control. Besides owning the Bacon Theater of Boston, the Colonial of Nashua, has been operated by the company. By gaining control of the Nashua Theater, Mr. Lurie practically has the theatrical situation of Nashua in his hands. Mr. Davis, who formerly owned the Nashua Theater, has been retained as manager of both the Nashua and Colonial Theaters. Mr. Lurie will supervise all three houses. The Beacon uses Licensed service, as does the Colonial, but the Mutual Corporation will supply the Nashua Theater with pictures from the Film Supply Company.

Mr. Maurice F. Tobias of the Mutual Corporation, Boston, handling the product of the Film Supply Company, jumped to Boston from New York, and was seen scouting about after new houses. Mr. Tobias remained in Boston some time in order to start the Mutual game in Boston, and had no difficulty in lining up a large number of houses.

Mr. James H. Donovan, Manager of the Central Square Theater, Lynn, Mass., recently came in for a bunch of free publicity. This arose from the fact that Manager Donovan had a thousand children of the vacation schools as his guests. The Kiddies had a great time and were greatly interested in the big program of pictures. The local papers gave Mr. Donovan a great deal of favorable space, stating that the treat was an excellent deed.

Mr. R. A. Worsley is now the manager of the Dreamland Theater, of Keene, N. H., which offers moving pictures and illustrated songs. Mr. P. P. Spencer, who was the first manager, has left Keene in order to accept a position in Stamford, Conn.

One handcolored Reel. Tues., Sept. 17

"Queen Elizabeth's Token"

Why pay that bonus for the State right picture when you get it from us in the ordinary way. The best pictures made, Gaumont's

One Reel. Tuesday, October 1

"THE CONVICT'S BRAND"

A sensational 1,000 feet of film. See the branding scene, the prison escape, the raft launching on the tempestuous briny deep.

REMEMBER!

The Refugee's Casket

Two Reels handcolored.

Tuesday, September 3.

Tuesday, Sept. 10, Love's Serenade

Thursday, Sept. 12, The Plague Stricken City handcolored

Thursday, September 19, Two Reels.
Black and White. Tinted and Toned.

Kings in Exile

A master film dealing with the stirring epoch of the Messina revolutionary exiles when the Queen and Prince Charles were forced to flee from the throne. A serious, dignified monarchy exposer. Not anarchistic but treated rather from the angle of love and princely sorrow. The everlasting evil of title marry title

Tuesday, Sept. 24, THE HEART OF THE REDMAN
Thursday, Sept. 26, THE STOLEN CUB
Thursday, October 3, ZIGOTO to the RESCUE

ALL OUR FILMS ARE PROTECTED BY COPYRIGHT

GAUMONT CO.

FLUSHING :: NEW YORK

GAUMONT WEEKLY

GAUMONT WEEKLY

ATTENTION, ALL!

The PATHE FOUR REEL Subject,

THE BLIGHTED SON

released September 9th, through the General Film Co., is such a strong subject, that we are making

ONE, THREE and SIX SHEETS

for same. Place your order early, as the demand will be heavy. Write for our catalogue of one, three and six sheets. We have a good supply of back subjects.

A. B. C. COMPANY -:- CLEVELAND, OHIO

Since the Scenic Temple of Union Square, Allston, Mass., has changed hands business has improved in good shape. The house closed late in July and extensive alterations and general improvements were made. Mr. W. J. Hammond has sold his interest in the house to W. H. Walsh. Moving pictures and songs are now given, with Mr. Walsh as the active manager.

Mr. Fred Mardo, for a long time manager of the New England office of the Marcus Loew Vaudeville Circuit, has left his position in order to take charge of the Boston branch of the United Booking offices. Mr. Jeff Davis will assist Mr. Mardo, as will Mr. Wesley Fraser. As these agencies book the vaudeville of a large number of New England vaudeville and picture houses, many managers will be interested to hear of this change.

The Cox Hotel, Savin Rock, near New Haven, Conn., was the meeting place of the various managers for the S. Z. Poli houses last Sunday. Mr. S. Z. Poli was present, as were P. Alonzo and Edward Renton, both of whom are associated in an executive way with Mr. Poli. The conference was for the purpose of completing plans for the coming season.

The baseball nine, composed of members of the Rockland Theater, Rockland, Me., won a ten-inning game from the Elks last week. The score was 16-14, and manager Al Rosenberg of the Rockland Theater, is very proud of his boys. HENRY.

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

AN effort is being made by the theater managers of Jerseyville, Virden, Carlinville, Litchfield, Gillespie, Staunton, Hillsboro, Pana and Nokomis, Ill., to organize a circuit. It is planned to have stock companies and to give two reels of pictures.

The Home Circle Airdome, Eighteenth and State Street, East St. Louis, Ill., has been conducting a baby contest.

Max Goldberg of Joliet, Illinois, has sold his lease on the Castle Theater at Bloomington, Ill., to Gallagher & Lyons, of Litchfield, Ill.

Members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, after visiting the Majestic Theater in Granville, Ill., asked the village board to pass an ordinance to close the show on Sunday nights. The municipal authorities probably will call for a referendum vote by the male residents of the village.

Henry Tiemann has purchased a site at Spring Valley, Ill., for a temperance amusement park. An airdome is included in the construction, which is to begin next spring.

In the voting contest conducted by Don McClellan at Pekin, Ill., the name "Celestial" was the most popular choice for rechristening the old Standard. In succession followed, "Wonderland." "Pastime," and "Majestic."

The Fox Theater at Aurora, Ill., has been remodeled.

The Lyric Theater, the Allhardt vaudeville house at Danville, Ill., has been remodeled.

Dreamland Theater at Galena, Ill., was closed during the session of a Chautauqua association in that city.

Lincoln, Ill., photoplay house owners are surrounded by arguments as to the advisability of running Sunday shows.

The Phincess Theater, Elkhart, Ind., will have a new stage dressing room and increased seating capacity.

The Advance Motion Picture Company of Chicago, has been negotiating with business men and city authorities in Moline and East Moline, Ill., for a reel of local pictures.

Basil Argeropolis, who conducts the Olympia Theater in Kewanee, Ill., will open a new house in North Chestnut Street in that city, to be known as the Nickelodeon. This will make five picture houses for Kewanee.

The Washington Theater Company of Granite City, Ill., has leased one of the ground floor rooms in the new Fire Department Building at Madison, Ill.

The village board of Clayton, Ill., has voted to furnish E. B. Coe light for free motion pictures on Saturday nights, so long as he does not take up collections.

The Motiograph Company of America, with headquarters at St. Louis, Mo., has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $2,000, to manufacture, sell and deal in moving picture machines and appliances. The incorporators are: George W. Helmrich, Frank X. Hiemenz and Albert Kochs.

The charters of the Mecca Amusement Company and the Washington Amusement Company of Missouri, have been revoked for failure to submit annual reports to the Secretary of State.

Arthur and Horace Heaton of White Hall, Ill., have started a moving picture show, and will play at Manchester, Glasgow and other nearby towns.

Walter Arndt, singer-manager of the Royal Theater at Elkhardt, Indiana, is said to have disappeared.

The Turman Opera House at Virginia, Ill., has been remodeled and redecorated. Six reels of pictures are given on Saturday nights for ten and fifteen cents.

It is reported that W. M. Sauvage, the Alton, Ill., amusement magnate, may go into the excursion steamboat business.

The Imperial Theater Company, of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $2,500. Incorporators are: W. M. Franey, H. P. Munn and E. B. Munn.

The American Theater, Decatur, Ill., gave a special matinee for the benefit of Chicago fresh-air kids and their hosts. F. H. MADISON.

IN THE NORTHWEST.

EDUCATIONAL moving pictures will form a part of the exhibit of the Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs at the Minnesota State Fair.

Nels J. Nelson, of Chicago, an aviator for the Mills Aviators, will take moving picture of the Green County Fair at Monroe, Wis., September 11-14. The machine will be taken aloft in his Curtis biplane.

A better standard of livestock in Wisconsin will be urged upon breeders, who attend the Wisconsin State Fair, by means of moving pictures. The exhibit will be furnished by the Wisconsin Live Stock Breeders' Association.

Rev. Henry Faville, D.D., of Appleton, Wis., proposes to give historical and biblical moving pictures under the auspices of the Young Men's Society at the beginning of the regular winter service. He is a successful worker among men, having founded the Men's Sunday Evening Club of the First Congregational Church in Peoria, Ill., which has been very effective in that city.

The opposition of Alderman A. L. Moore, of Minneapolis, Minn., to granting a license to the A. L. Moore Company, for a picture show at 1301-1305 West Lake Street, was lost.

Attorney General Lyndon A. Smith, of Minnesota, has given an opinion that political candidates may use moving pictures showing their accomplishments, provided they are labeled with the name of the author, like other political announcements.

Managers of moving picture shows in Seattle, Washington, have appeared before the license committee of the city council and asked for lower rates. The present fee of $250 is declared exorbitant for some of the smaller houses, and a graduated scale is asked.

The Miles Theater Company of Minneapolis, Minnesota, has declared its second quarterly dividend of 3% on its capital stock.

W. S. Butterfield, of Battle Creek, Michigan, and Marcus Heinan have secured the Grand Opera House at Oshkosh, Wisconsin, which they will use for road shows and vaudeville.

The Lyric Theater, Minneapolis, Minnesota, is now giving three complete shows each evening. Patrons arriving as late as 10 o'clock can see a full show. A number of improvements have been made at this place, consisting of a canopy, containing more than 1,000 electric lights, a new stage set, electric fountain, new electric sign, and a playground for the children with all kinds of toys as well as chutes and sand piles. A rest room has also been provided for shoppers where hot tea and cocoa will be served by colored matrons after the matinee free. The Minneapolis Journal published a coupon which, with five cents, admitted one adult to any Tuesday evening performance or any matinee (holidays and Sundays excepted) during the month of August. Two coupons and five cents admitted two children. Anita DeWitte Cook at the pipe organ is being featured.

F. H. MADISON.

IN THE SOUTHWEST.

MAJOR EMELIANO LOPEZ FIGUEROA, chief of the police of the City of Mexico, is establishing free picture shows in each ward of the municipality to keep the lower classes away from the saloons. Fedrico Gonzales Garza, governor of the Federal District, is said to heartily approve of the plan.

The Greenville Amusement Company of Greenville, Texas, has decreased its capital stock from $25,000 to $15,000.

Misses Beulah Allred, formerly a stenographer at Cheildress, Texas, and Miss Naomi Gibson, formerly a teacher at Marshall, Texas, are successfully conducting an airdome moving picture show in the shadow of the University of Texas at Austin, where they are students. Miss Allred formerly served on the missionary committee of the Young Women's Christian Association, and the possibility of securing pictures bearing on missionary themes to be exhibited in the downtown theaters, suggested itself to her. She failed to get the co-operation of the photoplay managers and the idea of going into business for herself was evolved. A site was secured for an airdome and the enclosure was made greater by judicious planting of vines. With the opening of the university term, performances will be given both afternoon and evening. Students will be employed as operators, pianists and ticket-sellers. It is the managers' intention to show films that correlate with courses in the university and the common school.

F. H. MADISON.

SAN FRANCISCO.

THE members of the California Exhibitors' League can now secure, at a very nominal cost, a neatly printed and framed "Notice to Membership," which is intended for display in theater lobbies. It not only makes a nice advertisement for the house, but also, as it contains a warning clause similar to that on the Jewelers' Protective Association sign, it acts as a preventive of the acts of vandalism and destruction usually very apparent around moving picture theaters.

The steel work of Mr. Grauman's new Market Street house is now finished, and the concrete pouring is well under way. The completion of the theater will be accomplished within a very few months, but as yet no announcement has been made regarding the class of attraction and this omission has lead to considerable conjecture among other theater owners. Mr. Grauman's contract with the S. & C. Circuit prevents his putting in vaudeville, and the supply of legitimate houses is about complete. So there is only one of two policies left open; he can either put on stock musical comedy or else a straight motion picture program, with the odds in favor of the latter possibility. Developments will be awaited with a great deal of interest by all concerned.

Another of the "re-openings" of the Washington Square Theater occurred recently when a program of Italian stock "varity" and Independent moving pictures was inaugurated. Many changes in policy have been made since the original opening of the house several years ago. The Washington Square is unfortunately located, being in the midst of the Italian settlement which is seldom visited by outsiders, and the Italian population is not large enough to support a theater of this size, 1,500 seats.

The Richmond Theater, which switched from Licensed to Independent service three weeks ago, is now under the management of Mr. A. Walter. The policy of the house remains the same, four acts of vaudeville, changed twice per week, and four reels of pictures, chandeg daily. Ten cents for adults and five cents for children is the price of admission charged. ffi

Mr. Guy Smith's fourth theater, the Home, was opened in East Oakland on August 16 with the three-reel feature entitled, "Tom Butler," in addition to the regular three-reel show. Music is plentifully supplied by a Wurlitzer Orchestra, a Fotoplayer, and a Sound-'o-phone. On the opening night and succeeding evenings, the seating capacity has been taxed. Mr. Smith has just placed an order for a large size Fotoplayer to be installed in his Broadway Theater.

Mr. Lesser is in receipt of a telegram from the Mutual Film Exchange, which confirms a contract his Golden Gate Film Exchange holds with the Mutual Co. This telegram refers to the arrangements which permits the Golden Gate Film Exchange booking the output of the Mutual Exchange. Mr. Lesser is just back from a trip to Salinas and intermediate towns. He found each and every exhibitor enthusiastically boosting for the coming State Convention.

The Actograph Theater was opened in Sacramento last week by J. W. DeStastio, with an Independent program of four reels, with a daily change. Film service is supplied by the California Film Exchange, which also installed two Simplex machines and a General Electric Rectifier. The seating capacity is 500 and the admission charge is five cents.

Mr. C. Robinson changed the service of his Manterey, Cal., Bheby Theater, to Independent releases.

Mrs. Doreman opened a theater on Haight Street, this city, recently, and at first the name Pastime was given the house. Undoubtedly this will be changed, as the name conflicts with Mr. Herzog's Pastime Theater, which was opened several months ago. Mrs. Doreman placed an order for the entire furnishings of her house with the California Film Exchange. They installed 225 chairs, a silvered curtain, two Edison "B" machines and a Perdy Coke coil. The admission charged is one cent.

San Jose recently welcomed the opening of the Lyric and the Garden theaters. They are both under the management of Mr. Tonancia, who is really the pioneer motion picture exhibitor of that city, but who has been out of the game for a while. The Garden is a house seating 1,000 people. The operating room has a battery of Powers No. 6 machines. This equipment was installed by the Golden Gate Film Exchange, which exchange also supplies film service for both theaters.

Mr. Winterhod, who has an interest in two moving pictures in San Jose, motored up to the Exposition City recently in his new auto. ANDY.

We buy, sell and exchange second-hand FILMS and MOVING PICTURE MACHINES.
WESTERN FILM BROKERS
538 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

We Give You a
NEW MACHINE ANY MAKE
For Your Old Machine
Drop us a Postal today and we will tell you how we do it.
Stern's Poster & Supply Co.
43 East 21st Street, New York, N. Y.
Complete Outfitters of M. P. Theatres

GRASP YOUR OPPORTUNITY

WE HAVE A PATENT RIGHT TO PROCLAIM

SARAH BERNHARDT

IN THE FILM MASTERPIECE

QUEEN ELIZABETH

IN 4 PARTS

THE ONLY FEATURE FILM THAT HAS ALL THE QUALITIES THAT MAKE IT WORTHY OF THE NAME

FEATURE FILM

A FEW OF ITS QUALIFICATIONS

Prestige

Drawing Power

The Greatest Actress at her best.

PerfectProduction

Five States Sold Last Week

MARCUS LOEW Bought New York

FOLLOW HIM AND YOU CANNOT LOSE

WE HAVE BOOKINGS TO TURN OVER WITH EACH PURCHASE

Licensed by Motion Picture Patents Co.

Don't Hesitate — Wire Now and Reap the Reward of Success

Everything Pertaining to This Production Spells Success

FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO.

TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK CITY

F. ZUKOR, Pres. DANIEL FROHMAN, Man. Director

LICENSED FILM STORIES

EDISON.

THE MANUFACTURE OF PAPER, MAINE (Sept. 10).—We first see the delivery of the logs to the mill after their journey of eighty miles down the river. They are stacked in enormous piles, a three months' supply looking as though it would furnish paper for years to come. One by one they are taken into the mill where they start on theirtrip which is to be an eventful one.

First, with huge circular saws they are cut into lengths convenient to handle, then a machine shaves off the bark, after which a beaklike device cuts them into small clocks. Again they are cut up, this time into ships, these travelling into huge "digesters" where they are cooked for eighteen hours under steam pressure and with acid, to separate the fibre and remove the rosin, thus the fluid pulp is formed.

This is carried onto cylinders, coming off in large sheets. Split into smaller sheets this is stored in piles and the first part of the operation is completed. The sheets of pulp go into the beater room where they are beaten up with water until it becomes like mush.

This substance, again thinned with water, is run onto the paper machine, after which it passes through forty-two hot cylinders to dry. Now it is finished paper and is rolled into enormous rolls, some of them weighing 4,000 pounds. The real manufacturing operation being over we visit the store room, the shipping room, the laboratory, where pulp specimens are tested and are finally shown a very beautiful view of the mill itself on the water front.

THE STRANGER AND THE TAXICAB (Sept. 11).—True love never runs smooth as the saying goes, and this is the case with Harry and his sweetheart Rose. The trouble begins when he declines to take Rose to a ball and she decides to go alone. The night of the ball he fancies she may be dancing with some unknown rival and determines to attend the ball in order to satisfy his suspicions. Sure enough he finds her accompanied by a most attentive young man.

Harry becomes insanely jealous, the supposed rival however being only Rose's brother, home on a visit, and unknown to Harry. Rose noticing Harry's jealousy tantalizes him by keeping up the deception and concealing her brother's identity. Rose and her brother decide to go home in a taxi and Harry, who has been planning revenge, now sees an opportunity of carrying out his plans by bribing the chauffeur to change places with him and thus enable him to drive to some lonely spot and administer a sound thrashing to his hated rival.

Without turning to look at his passengers Harry drives off at a furious rate of speed and when at last they halt Harry is astounded to discover that his passengers are Rose's parents instead of Rose and his rival. The old folks indignantly refuse to ride any further with him and walk home. Meanwhile Rose and her brother start for home in another automobile which later breaks down. Harry by chance happens to come across them and offers to tow them home, where, upon arrival he recognizes them but they enter the house before he can administer the intended thrashing.

The following day the matter is cleared up by a note from Rose which reads: "Dear Harry: I ought never to forgive you but perhaps I was a little at fault myself. My brother, who was with me last night, says so anyway. Come quick. Rose." Suffice it to say he loses no time in reaching his sweetheart's house and once more true love runs smooth.

THE DAM BUILDER (Sept. 13).—Jack Marley, a young engineer who is in charge of the construction of a great dam, has occasion to discharge Bill Murdock, an unruly foreman. Murdock threatens to get satisfaction.

A few miles up the valley there is a settlement of Norwegian farmers of the most thrifty type, though ignorant of modern methods. They believe the dam will back the water over their farms and ruin them. Marley receives a letter from one of his associates advising him to go to the Norwegians and explain the matter to them. Murdock accidentally gets the letter and sees his chance for revenge by misusing its contents.

In riding to the settlement to square the matter, Marley comes upon Thelma, the daughter of the moving spirit of the Norwegians, Peter Wist. She has been stunned by a fall upon the rocks while fishing. Marley revives her and takes her home. The old farmer refuses an introduction when he learns that Marley is employed on the dam. This, however, does not affect the very evident interest that Thelma and Marley have awakened in each other. They have many walks together unknown to her father.

Murdock finds little difficulty in convincing old Wist that the dam will ruin the settlement, so, in a conference of the farmers, Wist and Murdock incite them to blow up the sluices at the dam. Thelma overhears the plan and vainly tries to intervene against this folly. They will not listen and old Wist roughly puts her aside. What can she do? Her lover's life and work are in danger! The only available horses are hitched to the wagon that is to carry the farmers and the deadly explosive! With no thought of danger to herself the brave girl decides to cut across the valley on foot. The way is rough and dangerous for she must avoid the road in order to make time.

The scenes shift from Thelma to the wagon with increasing tension; she arrives a few seconds before them and warns Marley.

In a terrific struggle between Marley's men and the farmers, led by Murdock, the latter is thrown overboard and the enraged engineer leads the Norwegians to his office and makes them understand the fallacy of their belief about the dam. The closing scene gives promise of a happy ending to the love of Marley and Thelma.

THE RESCUE, CARE AND EDUCATION OF BLIND BABIES (Sept. 14).—This film shows how blind children are educated. You see them run and play, dance, read and write and the blind teaching the blind to walk. You are shown little Rachel as she appeared before the governor and how, through her pleadings, a bill was passed allowing blind infants before the age of eight, to be placed in proper institutions. You are also shown the Arthur Home, the only one of its kind in the world (a free institution for blind children, where they are taught the beauties of nature and of life). Rachel is a living example as she was rescued from one of the institutions for the feeble minded when only a few months old. She can do almost everything that a child blessed with her eyesight can accomplish.

ECLIPSE.

WINTER SPORTS AT ST. MORITZ, SWITZERLAND (Sept. 11).—St. Moritz is known all over the world as a splendid winter resort. The facilities offered to indulge in all sorts of out-door pastimes for that season of the year, are certainly unexcelled anywhere else. We see in the film some marvelous tobogganing and ski-jumping, which almost make us hold our breath in suspense. Skillful exhibitions of skiing by horse, and several exciting games of hockey and curling on the ice, are also shown.

CHEMICAL ACTION (Sept. 11).—Showing a series of very wonderful pictures, taken under a powerful microscope, of the action of acid upon metals. We are vividly shown the destruction of chalk by sulphuric acid, the action of nitric acid on silver wire, the destruction of metallic gold by Aqua Regia, and many other marvelous phenomena.

GLIMPSES OF ST. PETERSBURG (Sept. 11).—An extremely interesting visit to the capital city of Russia, showing a panorama of the whole city, views of fine buildings, such as the Winter Palace of the Czar, St. Isaac's Cathedral, the Statue of Peter the Great, Alexander Memorial Cathedral, and the many picturesque sights of street life.

CINES.

THE CONSPIRACY OF CATILINE (Sept. 10).—To set fire to Rome! murder the consuls! cancel all debts! and proscribe the wealthy citizens, is the plan of Catiline and his fellow conspirators, when they meet at the house of Quintus Curius, in the year 66 B. C.

Their lowered voices are overheard by a spy, who carries the news to Cicero, the consul. With this evidence the great orator plans the utter destruction of Catiline and his followers.

At the next meeting of the Senate, Cicero majestically rises from his seat, and pointing an accusing finger at Catiline, delivers his famous denunciation, branding him a traitor to his country. Catiline rushes from the chamber, followed by the curses of the senators.

He then hastens to his army, and not long afterwards hazards battle with the consular forces. A terrible engagement ensues, in which not one of the conquered is taken alive. Catiline's body is found far in advance of his own ranks, amidst a heap of the enemy.

SCENES ALONG THE SALERNO COAST, ITALY (Sept. 10).—An extremely interesting travalogue subject, spreading before us a magnificent bird's-eye view of the town of Salerno and many interesting points of interest along the coast.

HONORS DIVIDED (Sept. 14).—Edwin Blake, a struggling young author, toils day and night in writing his new play, and is making rapid progress, when suddenly he is taken ill, and is forced to retire to his bed.

During the long days of sickness, Helen, the landlady's daughter, offers her gentle sympathy to the impatient invalid, and listens with close attention as he explains the story of his play. She becomes greatly interested and longs to try her talents along this line.

Seeing her friend in despair at not being able to finish his work, she is suddenly struck with an idea, and her purpose formed, she carries the manuscript off to her room. By working almost continually for several days, the girl manages to complete the play, and confident of the quality of her work, she delivers it in Edwin's name to the theatrical manager.

As it turns out, the play proves the success of the season. When Edwin grows better, he is at first unable to understand why he is to be congratulated, but the truth soon begins to dawn upon him, and when he receives the first reward of his success, he rushes to find Helen, and offers her a partnership, not only in this venture, but for life

KALEM.

THE GIRL REPORTER'S BIG SCOOP (Sept. 9).—Aline, the girl reporter, is seen at work securing unusual photographs for her paper. When she returns to the office she is commissioned to visit the home of the Ellsworths and obtain pictures of the young heiress who is about to wed Count Brigan-thal. The couple, however, are hostile toward the photographers who visit the country home and Aline is obliged to return without accomplishing her mission.

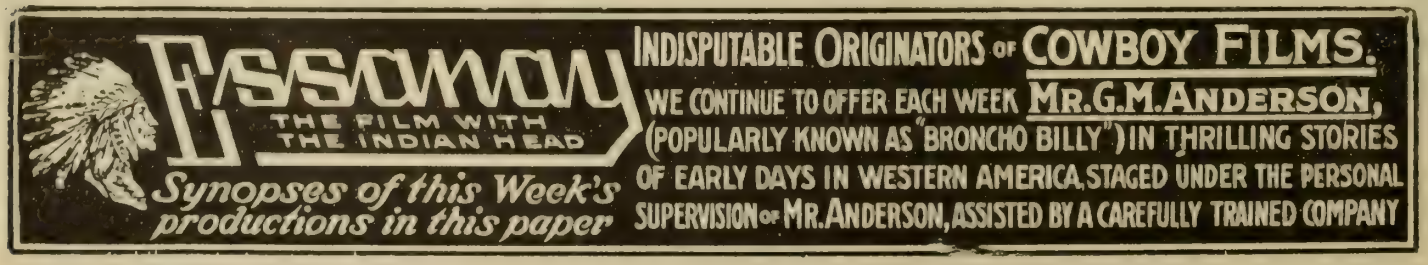
As she sits despondently in the station, Aline picks up a newspaper and notices that a maid is wanted at the Ellsworth home during the social activities. The girl reporter is right on the job and secures the position. While engaged in her duties she sees the count meet Mr. Ellsworth and demand a larger dowry. When the demand is refused the count bargains with the chauffeur to steal some of the costly wedding presents. Aline finds that she is on the trail of an unusual "scoop" and sends to the office for a flash-light outfit.

That night the young lady secrets herself in the parlor and touches off the flash just as the count and the chauffeur are about to make away with the valuables. The house is aroused and while the startled family turns on the unscrupulous count, Aline hastens to the office to prepare her "scoop."

DR. SKINNEM'S WONDERFUL INVENTION (Sept. 11).—Dr. Skinnem is flat broke and greatly distressed. His maid-of-all-work notifies him of her intended departure, which completely crushes the doctor. Making himself comfortable in a lawn chair, the Doctor falls asleep and dreams of a wonderful invention that enriches him and causes the departure of all his troubles. What the invention accomplishes and its final results are laughably depicted by the Kalem players.

THE ANCIENT PORT OF JAFFA (Sept. 11).—The picture opens with a scene on a steamship, showing the Kalem players ready to depart for the ancient port of Jaffa, referred to in the Bible as Joppa. A successful landing is made after navigating the dangerous, rocky passage. A splendid view of Jaffa from the sea greets our eyes and, going ashore, we marvel at the wonderful street scene near the Custom House. We journey on to the auction market and then visit the public fountain on the Jaffa road.

THE STREET SINGER (Sept. 13).—Our story opens with a scene on Fifth Avenue, New York, in the neighborhood of 34th Street, where a small crowd is gathered about Papita, a little street



ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON,
(POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES
OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL
SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

THE HOUSE OF

SELIG

MONDAY, SEPT. 9th.

THE HOUSE OF HIS MASTER

A story of downfall, retribution, and reformation. A tale of every day life told in an appealing manner. The action and settings are of the usual Selig standard of excellence and the moral is clear. About 1,000 ft.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 10th.

THE FIGHTING INSTINCT

A dramatic western story depicting the law of self preservation. Pictured in that ever interesting land of the real, though fast disappearing, cowpuncher, Colorado. About 1,000 ft.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 12th.

THE INDELIBLE STAIN

A picture of the old, picturesque mission days, before the time of the Gringo, when the romantic Spanish people lived and laughed and loved in sunkissed California. About 1,000 ft.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 13th.

THE TRADE GUN BULLET

An incident in the daring and exciting life of the western yesterday. A young westerner's life is saved by the finding of a trade gun bullet in the wounded arm of a visiting companion. About 1,000 ft.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT EXTRAORDINARY TO THE FILM WORLD

COMPLYING WITH THE DEMANDS OF THOUSANDS OF ENTHUSIASTIC EXHIBITORS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY THE HOUSE OF SELIG WILL RELEASE FIVE FULL REEL PICTURES EACH AND EVERY WEEK. THE FIFTH RELEASE WILL BE ON WEDNESDAY EVERY WEEK AND THE FRST ONE WILL MAKE ITS APPEARANCE ON WED., SEPT. 25TH. THINK OF IT! FIVE SELIGS EACH AND EVERY WEEK. DEMAND 'EM, INSIST UPON 'EM, FIGHT FOR 'EM.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

20 East Randolph Street

CHICAGO, ILL.

SEND IN YOUR NAME FOR OUR MAILING LIST

Weekly Bulletins Sent Free

To Exhibitors of Eastern Penn.

We have secured the Eastern rights on

"TOM BUTLER" in 3 reels
"POWER OF DESTRUCTION" in 3 reels
"FATALITY or THE PARISIAN STAGE TRAGEDY" in 3 reels
"THE CHILD OUTCAST" in 3 reels

All of these Features are made by the French Eclair Company and Beautifully Tinted.

Positively the greatest features that have ever been produced.

Can furnish you with two kinds of 1 sheets, 3 sheets, Heralds, magnificent Lobby Display.

Wire at once for bookings.

HILL FEATURE FILM CO.

E. W. BOOTH, MGR.

Room 331 Heed Bldg. 1211 FILBERT STREET, PHIL., PA.

singer, who stands holding her father's hand—singing to the assembled men and boys. Suddenly Papita's father falls and upon the arrival of the ambulance it is discovered that he has died from heart failure. Carl, a young musician, who has been attracted by Papita's singing, observes the plight of the little street singer, and takes her to his home, where the exquisite quality of her voice impresses both Carl and his mother. Ten years pass by and the voice of the little street singer continues to improve. Carl finally decides to take her to a great vocal teacher. After a few months under the instruction of the master, Papita makes her appearance in the drawing-room of a rich patron of music. The wonderful promise of the fair singer impresses them all and Mrs. Burleigh, a lady of means, offers to give Papita a musical education abroad. Papita leaves for Europe and after three years of hard study under the leading teachers, she returns to America and makes her debut at the Metropolitan Opera House. Carl visits the opera and sends his card in to Papita. The card is intercepted by Mrs. Burleigh, who meets him and informs him that Papita does not wish to be bothered. Carl becomes ill, brooding over Papita's apparent ingratitude. Papita, after scoring an immense success at her debut, feels there is something lacking to complete her happiness and, alone, she goes in search of Carl and his mother. Arriving at the former home of Carl, she learns that his mother died some time ago and the neighbors have no knowledge of the son. While walking through the street she hears the sound of a violin and readily recognizes that it is Carl playing her favorite air. Entering the house she climbs the stairs, locates the unhappy musician and proves to him that her heart is true.

A RAILROAD LOCHINVAR (Sept. 14).—Bob Tempest, just home from college, tells his father he wants to go to work and applies for a job. His father, president of the W. & R. Ry., writes to his superintendent asking him to give his son a position as fireman and cautions him to let no one on the line know who he is. While on his first trip over the road as fireman, Bob meets Peggy, the line superintendent's daughter, and it is a case of love at first sight. Later Bob and Peggy meet again under dramatic circumstances. The train stops at a way station and fire is discovered in a car next to one that is loaded with powder. The agent happens to be busily engaged at the station and Peggy notifies Bob of the fire. They back the train to the water tank, where a stream of water is turned on the burning car and the fire extinguished. During the next three weeks Peggy and Bob become ardent lovers. This is much to the displeasure of Peggy's father, who orders the young man from the house, saying he is only a fireman and has "nerve" to aspire for the daughter's hand. The two lovers are not discouraged, however, and a scheme is fixed up to elope. They run to a waiting engine, climb aboard and make a rapid run to a nearby town, where a clergyman is taken on the locomotive. Peggy's father learns of the flight of the lovers and follows in another engine. The laughable situation that follows and the final triumph of Peggy and Bob bring a decidedly novel climax.

VITAGRAPH.

MEMORIES OF PATIO DAYS (Sept. 9).—After Many years of toil, Ygnacio Marquez, now an old man, visits the home of his youth. In the place of the old rancho he finds a new civilization. There is only one landmark left, the home of his dead sweetheart. Wearied by his days of travel he falls exhausted on his sweetheart's grave and dreams of yesterday—his courtship, his serenades to his senorita and the confirmation of her love by the token of a rose. He beholds a vision of the base plot of Pasqual Chavez, who demands the hand of Juanita by threatening to take advantage of a law to dispossess her father, and for his sake, she marries Pasqual. The ceremony has just been completed when the rancho is besieged by hostile Indians. Pasqual, in terror jumps from a window and is shot by one of the besiegers. The rest of the company give battle. The savage attackers are fast closing in upon the house. Ygnacio, late for the wedding, is just putting in an appearance. He spurs his horse and turns back and notifies a party of cowboys. With them, he comes to the rescue of Juanita and her friends, killing and putting the Indians to flight. Pasquale's body is found, Juanita is now free to give her heart and hand to Ygnacio.

As the last vision of the days of long ago fades away, Ygnacio awakens in the land from whence no traveler e'er returns.

THE HIGHER MERCY (Sept. 10).—No matter how absorbed with affairs of state, Abraham Lincoln was always ready to give audience to his little son Tad. Little Tad, playing at the boat landing of the White House lake, falls into the water and is saved from drowning by a young fellow named Jasper Brinton. When young Brinton carries Tad into the White House, the president is very grateful to him and says if there is anything that he can do for him at any time he will be glad to do it. Young Brinton's mother is an enthusiastic supporter of the Federal cause, and when the war breaks out, she urges her son to join the Union army. He has an inherent dread of danger and naturally hesitates. He finally enlists. On the battlefield his natural fear takes possession of him. He trembles in every limb and flees in terror when he hears the cannon's roar and sees the shot and shell falling about him. He rushes into the colonel's headquarters. The colonel tells him to carry a message to the commanding officer, who is in the front ranks of the fighting regiment. The poor fellow starts out with it to the battlefield. As he sees the dead about him, the bombs bursting and hears the bullets whistle, he determines to desert. He changes his uniform for a dead Confederate's and continues his flight, dropping his message as he goes. Some Union soldiers see him, pursue and capture him. He tells them that he is a Union soldier and confesses the reason for his disguise. He is tried for desertion and sentenced to be shot. His mother intercedes for him with the president, and reminds him that her boy saved little Tad from drowning. The president is in great stress of mind. The poor boy's offence is so evident that the president feels, aside from his personal feeling and gratitude, that he can make no plea in behalf of the offender. While he is meditating over the matter, an officer enters the room and tells him that young Brinton has died in prison of heart-failure. Little Tad, unseen, enters the room, throws his arms around Mrs. Brinton's neck and in his childish way tries to comfort and console her.

THE HINDOO'S CURSE (Sept. 11).—Living by their wits in India, two adventurers, Guy Randall and Jack Lowell, are caught cheating in a game of cards at the English army quarters. They are about to leave India, when their Hindoo servant, Sukim, proposes that they go with him to the Hill Country, where a festival is being held to one of the Hindoo gods. At this feast, all the natives contribute money. Under Sukim's guidance, Randall and Lowell hide in the temple, and when the high priest is alone counting over the offering, they strike him insensible and steal the money. From the forehead of the god, Randall steals a costly jewel which the Hindoo people consider sacred. Sukim tries to persuade him against the theft, warning him that a curse will follow him. The priest recovers, and calling his two assistants, they swear to be avenged and recover the jewel.

Randall, with his colleagues, escapes to England, prospers, and is now a land proprietor. He seeks in marriage the hand of Grace, the daughter of Lord Leverton, an impoverished peer. He forces her to accept Randall, although she is already engaged to young Greyson, whom she loves. On the wedding day, the Hindoo avengers, who have tracked Randall with unrelenting determination and hatred, hover about the scene. That night they follow him to his country house where he is to spend his honeymoon. Unseen, they stab him to death. Grace, suddenly left a widow, is quite ready to accept Greyson, and fulfill her betrothal to him.

THE LOYALTY OF SYLVIA (Sept. 13).—"I cheerfully accept the guardianship of your daughter Sylvia, during your trip abroad. You say she is rather mischievous and self-willed, but I am sure we will get along famously together." This is what Mr. Dudley Laurence wrote to his old friend. In response, Sylvia makes her appearance in the doctor's home. She is very attractive, but certainly up to all sorts of pranks. Her first manifestation is with a bouquet of flowers which she fills full of pepper and presents to the doctor, causing him to sneeze immoderately. While surprised, he cannot suppress his laughter, and with it all, rather enjoys her lively cheerfulness with which she fills his home. Three months later she becomes acquainted with one of the doctor's friends, young Benson, who proposes to her and asks Doctor Laurence's consent. It is then that the doctor realizes that he has grown to love Sylvia himself. He does not refuse Benson, who joyfully imparts the news to Sylvia. Sylvia is not so joyful apparently.

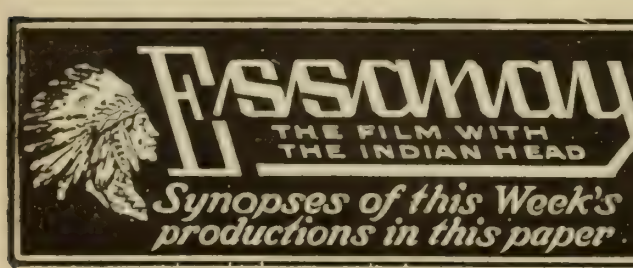
The doctor gives an engagement party to Sylvia and her young friend. He is just about to join them when he receives a call to attend a poor sick child. He responds, very much to the disappointment of Sylvia. The doctor administers to the child who has a contagious disease, but his efforts are unavailing. He hurries back to his home, anxious to put in an appearance at the party. Sylvia is delighted to see him. Exhausted from his services at the bedside of the sick child, the strain is too great. He falls in a half-faint upon the sofa. Sylvia is at his side. He tells her that he fears he has contracted the disease of his recent patient. Everybody leaves the house. Benson flees in terror at the thought of contagion. His cowardly action disgusts Sylvia and later she returns their engagement ring. During Dr. Laurence's sickness, Sylvia is his constant nurse. When the crisis is past and he is convalescent, he notices that the engagement ring is no longer on her finger. He takes her hand in his and asks her about it. When she tells him, he declares his love for her and she informs him she is the happiest girl in all the world.

POPULAR BETTY (Sept. 14).—Ruth Rise is a very sweet girl, but Betty is both sweet and popular. Jack Winget is expected at the Hotel Riggs, where the girls and their party are stopping. Ruth is very much smitten with Jack, and she is afraid that Betty will win his attention; so she circulates reports that Betty is flighty and not altogether rational. Upon Jack's arrival, Betty meets him at the station. Sitting on the edge of a well, talking to Betty, Jack accidentally falls into the well. Betty rushes off to secure help. In her distress, she is very much excited. She frantically tries to tell the guests at the hotel what has happened. In the meantime, some farm laborers hear Jack's cries and lift him from the well. The guests notify the town policeman and he rushes back to the hotel, where they find Jack talking to the guests, and they can't understand it. Before Jack has time to explain matters, the guests make a charge of insanity against Betty. She is taken to the station house. She cannot make the officers understand that she is perfectly sane, and that her excitement was perfectly natural under the circumstances. While they are trying to make matters clear, Ruth comes to the rescue and tells that it was all her fault. She apologizes for the trouble she has made. Betty is discharged. A great surprise comes when they discover that Jack and Betty are engaged. This is a shock to Ruth on account of her admiration for Jack.

THE FORTUNE IN THE TEA-CUP (Sept. 14).—Tea is served during an afternoon visit of Sybil with her friend Mabel Brown. Sybil begs Mabel to tell her fortune from the tea leaves in her cup. Walter, Mabel's older brother, is in love with Sybil. Mabel complies, and at the same time puts in a good word for Walter. She tells Sybil that she will cross the water, come into possession of a fortune and marry a man with a title. This is the way her fortune came true: Mabel's little brother hides his little clay pig bank with its savings at the foot of a tree on the opposite side of a brook in a nearby wood. Walter takes Sybil for a walk and he helps her across the brook. They hesitate at the tree where the little brother has hidden his bank. Sybil impatiently strikes her parasol upon the ground and comes in contact with the bank, which, upon investigation, she finds. They return to Mabel, and Sybil tells her that her fortune came true, She crossed the water, came into possession of a small fortune, but, she asks, "Where is the honorable gentleman whom I am to marry?" Walter shows her that he has been elected by his townspeople to a judgeship and has secured the title of "Honorable." This settles it. She accepts him. Mabel and the little brother come in for their share of the completed happiness of Sybil and Walter, and the fortune in the tea-cup.

LUBIN.

THE HALF-BREED'S SACRIFICE (Sept. 9).—Manuel's father was a Mexican and his mother an Indian. While walking beside a precipice he hears horses' hoofs and, looking up, loses his balance and falls to the rocks below. Don Remo, the governor of the state of Sonola, Mexico, sees the accident and hastens to the half-breed's rescue. After finding that his hip is broken, he takes him to his home where he turns him over to Major Domo for attention. When he recovers he is a cripple and the don keeps him as a body. servant. The breed, through thankfulness, becomes a human dog, following Don Remo like a shadow, attempting to protect him at every turn. One day Don Remo, the worse for liquor, starts out to tour the theaters in a lowly district. He meets with a well-known dancer, and flirts with her, much to the chagrin of Castinette's sweetheart. The breed, watching, throws a stone which, by accident, strikes the girl and she dies from its effects. Don Remo is warned by a friend that he is accused of the crime. Believing



INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON, (POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

CROWN FEATURES DRAW CROWDS!

AN UNEQUALED BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

$500 BUYS
Eastern Massachusetts
Connecticut and
Rhode Island, or Western Massachusetts
Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont

The Newest and Greatest MILANO Film Production — In 3 Reels. Following "DANTE'S INFERNO"

St. George and The Dragon

A THRILLING ROMANTIC DRAMA OF LOVE, CHIVALRY AND ADVENTURE.
DRAWING FULL HOUSES WHEREVER PRESENTED.

$500 BUYS
New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland,
or Eastern Pennsylvania
or
Western Pennsylvania

Full line of Show Paper, Booklets, Dodgers, Slides, Cuts, Photos, etc., etc., to present this feature in Highest Class Manner.

CROWN FEATURE FILM CO., 145 West 45th St., New York City

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Bound Volume No. 12
APRIL TO JUNE 1912
(THREE MONTHS)
NOW READY
FEW OF No. 11 STILL LEFT. (Jan. to March)
$1.50 EACH NET $1.50
Postage 60c. extra, or Express Charges collect

PUBLICATION OFFICE

Moving Picture World, 125 East 23d St., N.Y. City

THE CRYSTAL FILM CO.

WHY WORRY?

LET US DO YOUR DEVELOPING PRINTING and PERFORATING

Perforated Negative

THE CRYSTAL FILM CO.
428 WENDOVER AVENUE :: :: NEW YORK

CALIFORNIA FILM EXCHANGE

THE HOUSE WITH A REPUTATION

Handling the entire UNIVERSAL PROGRAM
101 BISON and all other LEADING BRANDS

Write, Wire or Phone and Arrange for Your Film Service with the Largest Independent Film Renters on the Pacific Coast

OFFICES

54 Seventh St.,
San Francisco, Cal.

110 East Fourth St.,
Los Angeles, Cal.

Lewis Bldg.,
Phœnix, Ariz.

himself to be innocent he determines upon flight. Don Remo rides off to an old ruin in the farthermost corner of his estate. The breed follows him. In the scuffle that has occurred in the theater, two of Don Remo's ribs were fractured, which causes him intense pain. After arriving at the ruins he dismounts and nearly faints from agony. The breed runs to his assistance. The soldiers, who have been warned to take Don Remo, come upon them. A fight ensues and the breed, thinking his master wounded unto death, when in reality he has only fainted, tells the soldiers that it was he who committed the crime and deliberately taking a knife from his belt, stabs himself and falls across his master's body dead. The don, recovering from his fainting spell, learns what has transpired. He instructs the soldiers to take the body of the breed to his home, says a prayer to God for the soul of the breed and returns home to his mother and sister.

A RED-HOT COURTSHIP (Sept. 11).—Nellie Nugent, an attractive young actress, is stranded in a small, one-night stand. She remains at the boarding house while her husband goes to New York. Nellie makes a hit among the rubes. Hoyt Heffoner and Folsom Barrymore, two village dandies, both forsake their sweethearts, who also board at Mrs. Heffoner's. Then they start an ardent courtship for Nellie. After many love situations, Folsom is driven to desperation. He thinks of some way to eliminate his rival. He passes a drug store, enters and asks the clerk for two pills—one deadly poison, the other harmless. The drug clerk sizes up Folsom as a "bug," but to humor him, gives him two pills. Both are red-pepper.

At the boarding house he bursts into Hoyt's room. "Choose one of these," he commands, holding out the box to Hoyt, who is too frightened to refuse. He swallows one pill, Folsom swallows the other. Hoyt almost immediately begins to scream with pain. Folsom laughs. Then he too is convulsed with pain. Both run madly through the door. Outside in the yard they encounter the hired man with two buckets of water. They grab these, drink part of them. Not having yet quenched the horrible fire inside, they run madly to the front yard. Here they beg the man who is sprinkling the lawn to soak them with water. They feel no better. They then rush wildly upstairs into the bathroom. One of the boarders, peering into an upper shelf, is standing on the edge of the tub. In their mad rush to plunge into the water, Hoyt and Folsom upset the balance of the third man, and he too splashes into the tub. The water runs over and trickles down into the dining room below, deluging the table where the boarders are eating, with the exception of Nellie, who, in her bedroom, has just received a wire from hubby saying he will arrive that morning for her. She starts to pack up. The water causes a panic among the boarders. Headed by the landlady they rush upstairs and put Hoyt and Folsom to flight. While they are upstairs, Nellie's husband arrives, meets Nellie, and they hurry from the house to catch the train. In the front yard they meet Hoyt and Folsom. Then the bucolic swains discover to their intense chagrin that Nellie is married. They collapse and their two sweethearts, whom they had forsaken, agree to take them back.

BETTY AND THE ROSES (Sept. 12).—Tom White's father is wealthy and Tom is averse to work. His father receives a letter that a relative has died and left him a country estate at Rosedale. Here is the chance to get some work out of Tom. White sends his son to Rosedale to assume charge of the estate. Tom tears himself away from the city angered at his father. In Rosedale Tom is miserable. His sole companion is a grumpy butler, who is perpetually sad.

One morning, while Tom is eating breakfast, a bright, winsome, smiling face is reflected in the mirror across from the dining table. He leaps to his feet, impressed with the idea to gain the girl's friendship. She is called "Betty of the Roses" because of her penchant for spending most of her time in the rose garden adjoining Tom's property. But she is a worrying teasing young miss and while Tom tries vainly to impress her with his love, she wears a tantalizing air of indecision that is maddening. At the same time, Hiram, a country lout, who imagines he loves Betty, worries her with his advances. She laughs at him. Hiram's real admirer is Sallie Rhodes, a country damsel. But Hiram will have none of her. Finally Tom, in his room, reads that in the language of flowers the red rose stands for love. He writes a note to Betty, asking her if she really loves him to leave a rose on her window sill next morning. He creeps forth to slip his note under Betty's window. Betty receives the note with secret delight, sleeps with it under her pillow, and early next morning she places a red rose on her window sill, with a note reading: "If the rose means love, this will show you just how much I value your affections." Before Tom arrives at the window, Hiram accidentally passes by. His eye catches sight of the rose and he carelessly thrusts it in his button-hole. He reads the note. He is carrying a bunch of carrots at the time and replaces the note with one of the carrots. Tom finds the note and the carrot. "The little wretch! So this is what she thinks." Tom packs up to go back to the city. Outside his front door he encounters Hiram. Hiram ironically offers him a carrot. As Tom angrily dashes it to the ground, he sees the rose in Hiram's coat lapel. He gives Hiram a punch in the head after Hi has confessed and rushes around to find Betty. He finds her, and papa White gets this message: "This is the finest place in all the world; my wife and I are going to settle here."

NEVER AGAIN (Sept. 13).—George Hartzwell, lately acquiring the habit of going out with the boys and leaving his young wife at home to spend the evenings alone, she determines to give him to understand that she is through with him. One evening after a very eventful time, George returns home very much under the influence of liquor. Wifey is on watch. She swats him right and left, rubs the floor and cleans off the furniture with him, until George is as limp as a dish rag. She then leaves the room and hubby to his thoughts. George does not take the lesson very seriously; he falls asleep on the sofa and dreams of the horrible things his wife has done and told him. First seated in a cafe he is approached by a giant with a large head, and in his flight he meets several persons with whom he tries to speak and whose heads turn to represent animals, until finally George dreams he is surrounded by a jungle of animals and is about to meet a watery grave, when he falls off the sofa and wakes up. He calls for his wife, who is repentant of her lecture, and with the aid of a pitcher of water, soothes his fears and George promises never to do it again.

BUSTER AND THE PIRATES (Sept. 13).—The parents of Buster White, Brooks Black and Henrietta Brown take them to the park for a little outing. Buster and Brooks fall out over Henrietta's interest in Buster's yacht. Brooks throws a pail of sand on the yacht. Buster tearfully relates the incident to his parents who pet him. He falls asleep and dreams that during a trip on his yacht with Henrietta, he is pursued and captured by pirates. Brooks is the pirate chief. All the sailors are killed expecting Buster. The pirates take him with Henrietta to their island. Buster is bound hand and foot and forced to watch Brooks make violent love to Henrietta, who showing too plainly her dislike of Brooks, enrages him. She too is tied and left with Buster, who watches the pirates until they are out of sight and bites the ropes that bind Henrietta. She in turn releases him. They in escaping come upon the pirates asleep. Brooks is seated on a keg of powder. Buster throws a lighted match in the keg of powder and with Henrietta flees from the scene. The keg explodes, killing all the pirates and the noise awakens Buster from his dream.

A TRUSTEE OF THE LAW (Sept. 14).—Bob McNeal, an attractive and popular young man, is elected sheriff. He loves Virginia Gordon, but her parents object to his attentions paid to their daughter. One of Virginia's two brothers is found dead, and a worthless negro is suspected of having murdered him. The evidence against him seems conclusive to the Gordons and the community, and they determine to lynch him, when he is captured by the Sheriff. To their amazement, Bob declares that he will protect his prisoner. Bob's deputy deserts him—the entire community is against him and worked up to fire heat. Bob prepares to defend his prisoner. It is certain that both Sheriff and prisoner will be killed. An accident demonstrates the fact that young Gordon's death was accidental. Virginia is just in time with this information to prevent a deadly assault on the Sheriff. The conclusion of the story sees Bob with enhanced popularity, the friendship and approval of the Gordons, and the accepted suitor of Virginia.

SELIG.

AS THE FATES DECREE (Sept. 2).—George Clark hears that Bertha Wilson, a charming widow, is about to receive a legacy of fifty thousand dollars. Desirous of securing a portion of this fortune, Clark proposes marriage to the widow. Later he learns that the legacy has been used up in court proceedings and that Mrs. Wilson will receive but a small share of the money. He jilts her and goes to the seashore, where he meets Dorothy, the widow's pretty eighteen-year-old daughter. Dorothy and her sweetheart, Dick Gregory, have had a slight lovers' quarrel and Clark finds conditions ripe for a flirtation.

Dorothy is soon captivated by Clark. Finally Clark is shown up in his true colors, when the canoe in which they are paddling is upset and they are both plunged into the icy waters. Clark leaves Dorothy to her fate while he swims to shore. Luckily for Dorothy, Dick sees the accident and swims to the rescue. He manages to save Dorothy's life and when the young reunited couple return to their friend's cottage, Dorothy finds that her mother has arrived to spend the week end. Mrs. Wilson denounces Clark and the young couple repair to a secluded retreat nearby where they can whisper sweet nothings to each other.

AN EQUINE HERO (Sept. 3).—Mabel and her sweetheart, Billy Cutler, living among the foothills of Colorado, have been in the habit of sending love notes to each other by Mabel's horse "Doc." Pete, a lazy half-breed, who works on the same ranch with Billy, is also in love with Mabel. One day Mabel's horse comes into Billy's corral with a note tied to its mane. Pete secures the note, and in his jealousness refuses to give it up to Billy. Billy knocks Pete down and takes the note away from him. Pete, much humiliated, vows vengeance. Billy writes a note to Mabel and ties it to "Doc's" mane. Pete is a witness to this action, and when the horse starts for Mabel's home, he follows. He overtakes the horse and reads the note. He thus learns of Billy's plan to meet Mabel at their usual trysting place that afternoon. Pete replaces the note and sends "Doc" on his way. He then loads himself down with whiskey and goes to a nearby Indian camp. He gets the Indians intoxicated and then tells them of his hatred for Billy. He enlists their aid in a plan to scare the sweethearts, and they proceed to the old hollow log which marks the trysting place. By the time they reach the log the Indians are beyond all control, and a regular fight ensues. Billy is wounded and left for dead, while the redmen carry Mabel to the ledge of a nearby canyon, the only egress from which is a single log stretched across the abyss. "Doc" trails her to the canyon, walks across the log, and with his teeth, unties the captive's bonds. In the meantime Billy has recovered and has started for the canyon with a sheriff's posse. The Indians, upon finding that Pete can furnish them with no more whiskey, make short work of him. Billy meets Mabel and "Doc" and there are general rejoicings.

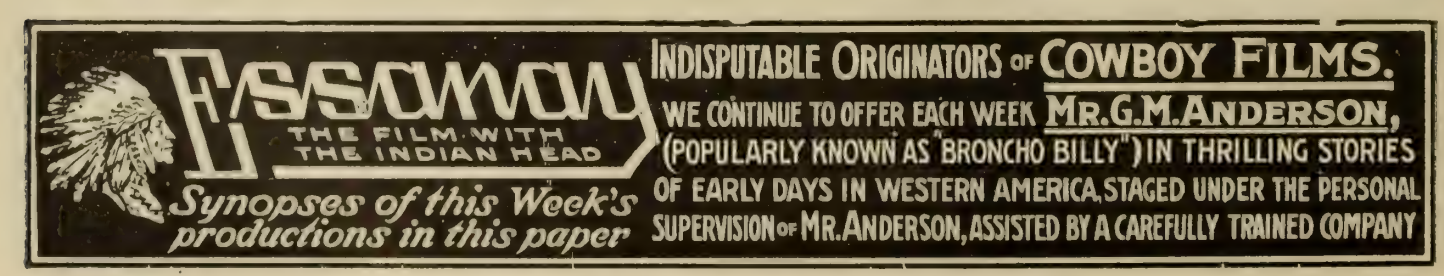
SERGEANT BYRNE OF THE N. W. M. P. (Sept. 5).—A young rancher by the name of Byrne is in love with Jessie Long. A city chap named Harvey is also courting her. Jessie has consented to become engaged to Byrne. Byrne has a weakness for cards, and on his way from town with his engagement ring he gets into a game. In his excitement he gambles away the ring, and overindulges in liquor.

On his arrival at Jessie's, her disappointment in him is so keen, that she turns to Harvey. While she still loves Byrne, in her exasperation, she marries Harvey. Byrne loses his self-respect for a short time, and gambles away his little ranch. Growing disgusted with himself, he determines to seek the company of real men and brace up. So he enlists in the Mounted Police.

Harvey, after his marriage with Jessie, degenerates into a good-for-nothing and drifts to the outskirts of a saw mill settlement, where he sets up a still and makes liquor illicitly. The Mounted Police learn of the place, and Byrne is assigned to the duty of investigating. He discovers Jessie and her child in misery and squalor. But duty is first, and he proceeds to attempt the arrest of Harvey. This is no easy matter, and there is a chase of many days through the forest, during which the fugitive is slowly starving to death. But the Mounted Police never give up, and Byrne plods on until he finds the dead body of his quarry.

In the meantime Jessie, deserted, has taken her child and moved into the saw mill settlement, where she secures work as a waitress. Byrne, returning from his long quest, stops at this boarding house to get a meal, and encounters Jessie. He gives her news of Harvey's death, and she realizes then that she is better off without him. Byrne takes her in his arms, and she is at last happy.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE (Sept. 6).—Tom Ellis, a young backwoodsman, is in love with Angie Lister, a country girl. Hort Ingles, a good-for-nothing, shiftless, young bully of the neighborhood is also in love with her. This rivalry is not particularly hostile until Hort, passing the



ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON,
(POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES
OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL
SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper

World's Most Thrilling Mystery Play

"The Phantom Bandit"

A Sequel to the famous Zigomar which caused the entire continent to wake with wonderment.

ATTENTION, ALL STATE RIGHTS BUYERS

We offer to the critical, sensation-loving public, this subject in four pretentious reels—3090 feet.

"THE PHANTOM BANDIT"

OR

"Zigomar vs. LeRouquin"

Eclipsing in thrills, ingenuity of production and plot the world famous---
ZIGOMAR

Showing this noted bandit in a desperate struggle with the police of Paris, then---
DEATH

LE ROUQUIN CONDEMNED TO A TERRIBLE DEATH

FIFTEEN CENTS PER FOOT

You never heard of such a price for this most astonishing film of the year. Wire at once—don't delay.

How About This Line of Advertising?

Half-sheets, one, three and six sheets, Banners, Frames, Heralds, Cuts, Photos, etc.

EXHIBITORS—We Will Book You—Write.

THE FEATURE AND EDUCATIONAL FILM CO.

710 COLUMBIA BLDG. Cleveland Sixth City

house one morning, sees Tom bid Angie goodbye in a somewhat affectionate manner.

That afternoon, while Hort is passing through a clearing in the forest, he accidentally overhears a quarrel between Tom and Ike Thompson. The latter had been hunting a squirrel and Tom had shot it. Ike becomes very bitter in his arraignment of Tom, and, as the quarrel progresses, he attempts to climb over a huge log, in order to get closer to Tom. In climbing over the log he accidentally discharges his gun and the shot kills him instantly. Tom and Hort are the only ones who see the accident and Hort's lying testimony sends Tom to prison for the murder. Tom serves his time in prison and, when he is finally released, he marries Angie, who has remained true and loyal through it all. About this time a devout parson comes to the village and exerts such an influence for good in the community that Hort finally tells the truth about the Thompson shooting. Tom is cleared of all suspicion and happiness at last comes to the young couple.

THE HOUSE OF HIS MASTER (Sept. 9).—The blight of Sylvia Steem's otherwise happy young life is her husband's crave for drink. Finally, when she can bear it no longer, Sylvia decides to leave her husband. While Robert is out with some friends of his she leaves the house, supposedly never to return again. Robert and his friends come across a pretty Gypsy girl on a country road. While the girl is struggling to free herself from Robert's embraces, she falls and lies stunned. Her cries for help are heard by her companions. They come to her assistance, but before they reach her, Robert runs away and hides among the trees. Joe, Robert's old colored servant, who has followed him to induce him to return home to his wife, comes across the Gypsy girl just as Robert is fleeing. The girl's companions see Joe, and, thinking him guilty of mistreating Carida, give him a beating, leaving him for dead. Robert, who has watched his old servant taking the punishment that rightfully belonged to the master, thinks that Joe is dead. He runs away like a craven and hides in his home. He then finds his wife's note telling him that she is leaving him. Heartbroken, he sees what a beast he has been. Summoning up what little courage he still has left, he swears never to touch another drop of liquor. Old Joe recovers and returns to Robert's house. Sylvia also returns and the reformation of Robert is complete.

THE FIGHTING INSTINCT (Sept. 10).—Billy Kent, a product of the sage brush country, is suspected, through a chain of circumstantial evidence, by his sweetheart, of having attacked and robbed her father. Although Billy is possessed of a peaceful disposition, when he is wrongfully accused, the fighting instinct, inherited from past generations, is awakened within him and he starts out to find the man whose crime has been laid at his door. He strikes the trail and, by some dexterous horsemanship, follows it through the hills. After a daring and perilous chase Billy is wounded, but he makes it so hot for the outlaw that he is forced to abandon his horse and engage in a hand-to-hand battle with Billy on the edge of a cliff. During the desperate struggle that follows, the outlaw is plunged to the bottom of the gorge. By a most unique method Billy manages to bring his wounded captive back to the ranch. There everything is fully explained and complete happiness is once more the reward for Billy's rough experiences.

THE INDELIBLE STAIN (Sept. 12).—In an age-old mission village lives Padre Argos, ministering with wonderful power to the sick, the grieving and the sinful of his quaint flock. In the Padre's flock is a passionate, wayward girl for whom the priest feels much compassion, because she has been misled by the town swaggerer, Juan Mendoza, but Piedad, the gossip of the community, leads the people to a misunderstanding of the Padre's tender humanity and love of justice.

One moonlight night Maria lays a new-born babe on the church steps with a pathetic note to the Padre, appealing to him to find a home for her child. In the morning as the villagers are on their way to work a crowd collects at the church to look at the baby, and Piedad, the hypocrite, warns the simple folk not to touch this child of sin, or they themselves will be contaminated. All fall back from the innocent babe as from a thing unclean. Padre Argos comes from the church, reads the pathetic note, takes the babe in his arms, kisses it, and demands if there is no woman in the crowd with mother enough in heart to adopt and raise the child. All hang back save the good wife of Eduardo, the village baker, who comes forward and takes the baby from the Padre. The Padre then rebukes Piedad for her un-Christian tongue, and in this moment Piedad becomes embittered forever against the family of the baker and their adopted daughter.

Elsa, the little outcast, grows up and for twenty years is kept in ignorance of her origin. But the day comes when Pedro, the son of a rich merchant, falls in love with Elsa. The merchant himself is very proud of his pedigree, and is in constant fear of any stain being cast on the family name. Piedad, whose disposition has not improved with age, knows this, and she satisfies her craving for revenge against Elsa by informing old Don Luis of the origin of the girl his son is courting. Then tragic events follow fast, with dear old Padre Argos, the protector and comforter of the girl he has loved as his own daughter since he first found her on the church steps. Pedro deserts Elsa when threatened with disinheritance by his father, and the beautiful girl turns to her only refuge—the church. There only may the indelible stain which lies on her innocent soul be cleansed away. She takes the veil and disappears forever into the convent, with old Padre Argos bidding her a last farewell at the gate.

THE TRADE GUN BULLET (Sept. 13).—Jim Redfield, the foreman of the 3 V Ranch, is in love with Bertha, the daughter of his employer, and she is interested in him, but is very young and wishes to retain her freedom a while longer. An aristocratic young Englishman comes to the ranch to restore his health, and Bertha is much struck by his charm of manner and distinction, and overcome with pity for his weakness. Jim's jealousy makes a fool of him, and he goes too far in his distrust of her motives so that when a treacherous Gila River Apache shoots Cecil with an old muzzle loading trade gun to obtain his money and jewels, which had been left too temptingly displayed, Jim is suspected and has to ride for his life. He is tracked by the men assisted by the Apache, is caught and condemned to die. He is saved, however, by the finding of the round bullet from the trade gun in Cecil's wound. Bertha flies to his rescue, realizing, now that he is in danger, how much she cares for him.

MELIES.

THE PRISONER'S STORY (Sept. 19).—Grace and her lover, Graham, being caught in the rain while riding, Graham begs her wait beneath a tree while he searches for a place of shelter. When, however, he does not return in due time she becomes alarmed and follows the path he took. Peering in the window of a house she discovers a man dead and her lover embracing a prostrate woman. Her conclusions are that her lover has committed murder, and in a fit of jealousy, she informs the authorities. Graham is captured and about to be lynched when remorse fills the heart of Grace. Perhaps he has some explanation. She pleads with the lynchers and obtains a hearing for her lover. Graham explains that the woman he embraced was his sister; that he had arrived at the hut just after she had been choked to death by her husband, a gambler, who had forced her to marry him to pay a gambling debt of Graham's; that in a conflict that followed between himself and the gambler-husband, the latter was killed. The lynchers are convinced by this story and Grace reconciled.

BIOGRAPH.

AN UNSEEN ENEMY (Sept. 9).—Two girls and their brother live at the little homestead left them by their late father. The brother, having disposed of a portion of the small estate, comes home with the money to show it to his sisters, telling them that they may now enjoy a few of the luxuries of life. As it would be after banking hours before he could get to the village, he places the money in the safe and returns to his office, some distance away. He has hardly departed when the maid, a slattern individual, who has seen him put the money in the safe, attempts to get it. Failing to work the combination, she calls up an erstwhile friend requesting him to come and help her. While these two work, the sisters are locked in the sitting-room, terrorized in a most unique way. The brother, however, arrives after a series of tantalizing delays and apprehends the criminals just as their scheme seems to have succeeded.

BLIND LOVE (Sept. 12).—In a little village there lived two families who were almost lifetime neighbors and friends. In the one family there was a boy, in the other, a girl. These two had been sweethearts from childhood and each found happiness in the other's company. All was sunshine for Dave, the boy, until the day of the church lawn party, when the nephew of the minister arrived from college. His easy manners and good clothes make an impression on the unsophisticated girl, and it is with slight persuasion she consents to elope with him that evening. The result is the inevitable, for the man proves to be a scapegrace. Meanwhile, the girl, through pride, pretends in her letters home to be doing well. Dave, however, has his misgivings and decides to pay them a visit. The result of this visit is a startling revelation. Later the girl is made to realize faithful Dave's true worth.

PATHE.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 36, 1912 (Sept. 2).—Indianapolis, Ind.—After being notified of his nomination for the vice-presidency on the Democratic ticket by Judge Alton B. Parker, Governor Thomas R. Marshall reads his speech of acceptance.

Bizerte, Tunis.—The bey, returning from his visit to Paris, takes the train for the City of Tunis.

Asbury Park, N. J.—Governor Woodrow Wilson attends the Annual Baby Parade.

Toulon, France.—The French navy puts into commission the Kangaroo, a boat for transporting submarines.

Chicago, Ill.—Sixty people are left homeless as a result of a $500,000.00 fire which completely destroys a grain elevator and twenty houses.

Port Baltic, Russia.—The German Kaiser and the Czar Nicholas meet and exchange courtesies.

Newton, Mass.—The invading Red Army crushes the Blue defenders in the war game by capturing Taunton Hill in a charge while the Blue's fire is being drawn in another direction.

Utica, N. Y.—Vice-president James Schoolcraft Sherman accepts his renomination and, against the advice of his physicians, makes a vigorous speech.

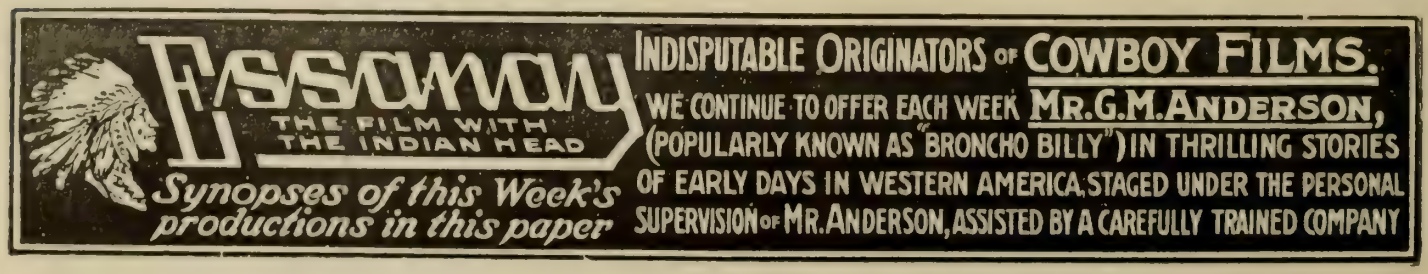
BLACK BEAUTY (Sept. 11).—Discovering a fire in his stable, Black Beauty breaks loose and awakens the family. He then races to the fire bell and rings it until the firemen are summoned. He further endears himself to his master by winning the County Stake in a race which makes the blood tingle. Things go against his owner later on and he is forced to sell the animal to a tradesman. Beauty's new lot is a hard one, but he struggles faithfully to earn his oats until his old owner is able to buy him back and allow him to end his days on the quiet farm.

ANGUISHED HOURS (Sept. 12).—John Parsons is of such a nervous temperament that the playing of his two little children drives him almost to distraction. He leaves the house in anger and goes to his club. He participates in a game of cards there and indulges in an excessive amount of liquor. Returning home with heavy head he falls into a deep sleep in which he dreams that his little daughter, playing "hide and seek," locks herself in a heavy chest. All his efforts fail to open the chest. He summons a locksmith who opens the box, but the child is dead. The horror of it all awakens him and he rushes to the children's room to find them safe and sound asleep. Then and there he realizes how much he would miss their noise and resolves to join in their play hereafter.

SAVED AT THE ALTAR (Sept. 14).—Grace, the daughter of Colonel Wesley, is betrothed to a young army lieutenant, Jack Dunbar. She is also loved by William Burton, an attache of the War Department, whom she refuses to marry. Through Burton's influence, the aged Colonel is transferred to the Philippine Islands. Burton offers to have him returned if Grace will consent to marry him. Dunbar withdraws as a suitor, and the girl agrees to make the sacrifice, in order to save her father from the harsh climate. As the marriage is about to be solemnized, Dunbar rushes into the church with the information that Colonel Wesley has been killed in battle. This ends the ceremony and, as the true lovers are married later on, Colonel Wesley does not die in vain.

C. G. P. C.

LOVE'S PROGRESS (Sept. 10).—An illustration of Cupid, awakening, in joy, in sorrow and finally in triumph is the unique method of introducing each chapter employed in this delightful story. A



ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON,
(POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES
OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL
SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

LUX FILMS

Release for Friday, September 6th, 1912

A Cripple's Folly

Drama—Length 983 feet.

A SPLENDID DRAMA BY THE LUX CO.

Release for Friday, September 13th, 1912

Tommy's Playmate

Drama—Length, 980 feet.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

R. PRIEUR, 10 EAST 15th STREET NEW YORK CITY

Telephone 3427 Stuyvesant

SOLD ONLY THROUGH FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA

GREAT NORTHERN

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO. COPENHAGEN

Release for Saturday, August 31st.

LOVE IS BLIND

A powerful drama, vividly portrayed, containing many thrilling situations. See the sensational duel in the dark.

Release for Saturday, September 7th. Split Comedy Reel.

THE AFFLICTED GOVERNOR

A comedy film sure to make a hit.

THE SPRING LOCK

A snappy comedy with laughs all the way through

Release for Saturday, September 14th.

AUNT JANE'S WILL

An elaborate comedy-drama of the very highest order. Don't overlook this big feature. One of the best comedies of the year.

SOLD ONLY THROUGH FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 E. 14th St., N. Y.

"NORDISK FILM CO. OF COPENHAGEN."

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

young Marquis falls in love with a lovely country lass, who reciprocates his affection. The Marquis's noble mother, however, plans to marry her son to a girl of his own station and nearly succeeds, but true love disregards the barrier of differing rank and Dan Cupid continues "Monarch of all he surveys."

A LITTLE JOURNEY IN TUNIS (Sept. 10.)—A portrait of the Arabian tribesmen at home, at work and at play.

FOR HER LORD (Sept. 13).—A peasant girl is entrusted with the passport which will enable the Marquis de St. Gilles, accused of conspiring against the French Republic, to escape to England. She delivers the passport to the Marquis but the soldiers with a warrant for his arrest arrive immediately after her. Nothing daunted, the girl disguises herself as the Marquis and St. Gilles thus escapes. When the trouble is over the Marquis returns and makes the brave girl his bride.

THE LATE HARRIET QUIMBY'S FLIGHT ACROSS THE ENGLISH CHANNEL (Sept. 13).—The world's greatest aviatrix is shown accomplishing her most notable flight, and as she appeared before she met her tragic death a short time ago.

Among the Exhibitors

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The North Cincinnati Amusement Co. will erect a new $12,000 five-cent theater here at 2021 Vine Street.

Chicago, Ills.—Alcazar Amusement Co., capital $50,000, inc. W. M. Bennett, W. B. Bennett and Fred M. Outhouss.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Work has commenced on the reconstruction of the old Reigel Building, 333 Market Street, into a moving picture theater.

Norway, Mich.—The new Bergeron Theater, which is being erected here is nearing completion.

Perham, Minn.—J. J. Dougherty and A. R. Nelson have just opened their moving picture theater here.

Greenup, Ills.—William Nolting has leased the Ewart Theater here and will operate it as a moving picture theater.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Lewin and Leighton are preparing plans for the erection of a new moving picture theater at 62nd Street and Woodland Avenue for Charles E. Futcher.

Salt Lake, Utah.—F. A. Dillingham of New York is planning to erect a new theater here.

Linton, Ind.—Robert Scherer has purchased the Nickelo Theater from William Ham.

Wheeling, W. Va.—The Elite Theater on Main Street, Elm Grove, has just been opened to the public.

Kansas City, Mo.—Plans will be prepared for the erection of a new moving picture theater at 3313-15 Main Street for Hugo Eysell.

Washington, D. C.—W. S. Plager, 210 N. Capitol Street, is receiving estimates for the erection of a moving picture theater for W. T. Carrington at 62 H Street, N. W.

Washington, D. C.—Speiden & Speiden, 1403 New York Avenue, is receiving bids for a moving picture theater for W. F. Holtzman at 1365 I Street, N. W.

Logansport, Ind.—The Broadway theater, this city, which has been closed during the summer months, was opened recently with moving pictures and vaudeville. Mr. E. E. Cunningham is the manager. A straight admission of five cents will be charged at all times.

Utica, N. Y.—The Gem Theater in Bleeker Street, which has been closed for sometime owing to redecoration, etc., opened recently with pictures and a good attendance.

Prairie Du Sac, Wis.—Garrison & Booth of Baraboo, have opened up a new moving picture theater in the Tabor Opera House here.

Allyance, Neb.—H. A. Dubuque and C. E. Calder, of this city, have purchased the Crystal Theater here.

Jackson, Mich.—A new Moving Picture Theater has just been opened here.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A new Moving Picture Theater will be built here on the northeast corner of Kensington and Allegheny Avenues.

Bay Ridge, N. Y.—Plans are being prepared by Thomas A. Lamb for the erection of a new theater here at the southwest corner of 4th Avenue and 50th Street.

Sedalia, Mo.—The Rex Moving Picture Theater in East Third Street, this city, was opened recently with good attendance. No vaudeville is shown and the admission price is five cents.

Pine Bluff, Arkansas.—The Orpheo Amusement Company, of this city, which will engage in moving pictures, vaudeville, etc., filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The capital stock is $5,000, all of which has been subscribed.

Wilmington, Del.—Consolidated Film and Supply Company of Wilmington, Del., capital stock $250,000, secured a permit to do business in Texas. The principal Texas offices are to be at Dallas and San Antonio.

Wrightsville, Pa.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Pleasantville, Ia.—W. L. Hart has completed arrangements to operate a new moving picture theater here.

Charlotte, N. C.—Ground has been broken for the erection of a new theater here in North Tryon Street.

Cincinnati, O.—The Hyde Park Amusement Co., moving pictures, etc., incorporated capital $40,000. Incorporators: W. B. Straton, Karl H. Williams, Archer E. Cragg, Philip E. Williams, H. C. Hyndman.

Toledo, Ohio.—The Western Exhibitors Feature Film Co., incorporated, capital $3,000. Incorporators: Will C. Bettis, Leslie Wm. Bettis, Grover C. Schenck.

Wausau, Wis.—The Electric Theater here is to be remodeled. It had been planned to add a balcony, but the management decided that it would detract from the comfort of the playhouse and the plan was abandoned.

IF NOT already a subscriber, WHY NOT send in One Dollar TO-DAY for a trial subscription to the end of the year, Four Months? YOU WILL make no better investment THIS YEAR. Mail $1.00 NOW. MOVING PICTURE WORLD, Box 226, Madison Sq. Station, N. Y. City.

ADVERTISING WELL PLACED IS A GOOD INVESTMENT FOR PROOF, TRY THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

EXCLUSIVE SELECTED FEATURES
For Rent or Sale at Reduced Prices.
Federal Feature Film Supply Co.,
Fourth Floor, Hartford Bldg., Chicago.

USE BRADY'S LICENSED POSTER
124 EAST 14th STREET, N.Y.

"EVERYONE'S USING" Our Developing System
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.
11 John Street, New York

36 Licensed Posters
A WEEK FOR $2.00
EXHIBITORS ADVERTISING CO.
Hobbs Bldg. Chicago

THE TOURNAMENT FILM CO.
TOLEDO, OHIO.
Owners of the following feature films:
1911 Cheyenne Cowboy and Indian Frontier Celebration.
Fall Round-Up on the Y-6 Ranch.
State Rights for These Films for Sale.
Bookings Can Be Made by Writing Us.

20,000 roll tickets, $1.20; 50 % cored carbons, $1.15; stereopticon objectives, 50c to $3.00; stereopticons, $15; rheostats, $3 to $5; arc lamps, $1.75, $2 and $2.25; condensers, 50c; calcium jets, $2.50; acetylene jets, $2.50; gas generators, $3.50; moving picture objectives, $2.75; jackets, $2. List of moving picture repair parts at fair prices. Sprocket wheels, 35c; films 1c a foot. Catalogue. All makes of moving picture machines repaired at reasonable prices. L. HETZ, 302 East 23rd St., New York City

Headquarters for
ASBESTOS
CURTAINS and PICTURE BOOTHS
SEND FOR BOOKLET C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co.
39 Pearl St., Boston, Mass.

WATCH FOR OUR NEW LIST TO BE ANNOUNCED SOON
ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO.,
538 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

FILM FOR SALE
From $2.50 per reel up. Send for list. Address—Acme Film Co., Inc., 130 West 37th St., N. Y.

SLIDES
We don't know what you're using, BUT we do know that we have got better ones for less money. Follow the crowd to the NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY, Lockport, N. Y.
Cat. free.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
Stereopticons, Slides, Accessories

CHAS. M. STEBBINS
1028 Main St.
KANSAS CITY, MO
Large Line of Edison Goods
Established 1899

Feature Films
General Film Publicity & Sales Co.
145 West 45th St., New York City

FOR SALE CHEAP
Prevost Film Perforating Machine. Perfect order, like new. Large Model complete with motion. Cost $475.00. $165.00 cash takes it. Address
Acme Film Co., Inc., 130 W. 37th St., N. Y.

FILMS WANTED
by reliable parties to rent on percentage. Have good territory and understand the business. Address
BOX 189, SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS

Excellent Camera Parts
Boxes, Retorts, Etc.
VERY CHEAP
Lavezzi Machine Works
2940 HERNDON ST. CHICAGO

WE RENT AND SELL
TWO AND THREE REEL REAL FEATURE ATTRACTIONS
SEND FOR LIST
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE
405 Schiller Bldg. Chicago

ECLAIR

TUESDAY, SEPT. 10th

Split Reel

"The Haunted Bachelor" and "The Marshal's Honeymoon"

A LONG LAUGH IN TWO PARTS

The first will surely prove a haunting comedy, and the other is funnier still.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 12th

"The Ranchers' Lottery"

Everything, almost, is a gamble. But there's no lottery speculation over the success of this comedy drama. Like rent day, it is a sure thing.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 15th

"A Marriage of Convenience"

Two genuine lions assist in making this a great big sensational laugh. On the same reel

"Around Constantinople"

A beautiful and instructive Film-Journey.

ECLAIR FILM CO., 225 West 42nd St., N. Y. City, N. Y.

ESTABLISHED

Firmly in Legitimate Channels of the Trade, by TRIMLESS METHODS

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

And its Recognized Program Has Made an Enduring Impression on the Thoughtful Exhibitor who Appreciates Fair Dealing along with Quality Films

YOU NEED THIS OFFERING

MONDAY
AMERICAN, COMET, ALL STAR

TUESDAY
THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC, GAUMONT

WEDNESDAY
RELIANCE, SOLAX, AMERICAN, GAUMONT WEEKLY

THURSDAY
AMERICAN, ALL STAR, GAUMONT

FRIDAY
THANHOUSER, SOLAX, LUX

SATURDAY
GREAT NORTHERN, RELIANCE COMET

SUNDAY
THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

Address all communications

133-135 West 44th St., New York

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

RELIANCE.

THE HEART OF A COSSACK (Sept. 4).—Helia leaves her father to keep tryst with Nazar while Hant, the friend, watches. A general, high up in Russian circles, bribes the father by offers of money, to help him wed Halia. In order to get Nazar out of the way, he is sent on a secret mission, and a committee (following the Russian custom) calls upon Halia and her father to arrange for the wedding. Halia does not know that it is the general and not Nazar whom she is arranging to wed and joyously acquiesces. Hant overhears the plot and brings the news to Nazar. They return in time to bring consternation upon the committee. Nazar and Hant leave, but arrange to kidnap Halia. The father learns of the abduction and follows with his retainers. Nazar holds them at bay until his friends ride up and defeat her father and his party. Hant is about to shoot Halia's father when Nazar gives back the old man's daughter. The father, overjoyed, has a change of heart and agrees to the marriage of Nazar and Halia.

THE BULLY AND THE SHRIMP (Sept. 7).—A synopsis of this subject was printed on page 910 of our last week's issue.

LOVE KNOWS NO LAWS (Sept. 11).—Jackson, a young revenue officer, starts up into the mountains to locate an illicit still. He leaves word at his departure that he will telegraph for them when the opportunity is ripe. Burying his telegraph instruments at the foot of a telegraph pole, he works on up the mountain. Red Dick, the old moonshiner's assistant, is in love with Mary, the old man's daughter. He presses his unwelcome attention upon Mary, and Jackson coming along, saves her. The old man, though suspicious at first, finally admits Jackson to his service as a lumberman, and Mary promptly gives him her heart. Jackson eventually discovers the still and while he is telegraphing his deputies he is captured. Mary learns of it, robs the men's guns of bullets, informs Jackson and, when he is supposedly shot, she is left to bury him. As she is untying his bonds, "Red" returns and, disgusted at her slowness, begins to bury Jackson himself. Mary, to gain time for the arrival of the deputies, leads "Red" to think that her love for him is real and, as he takes her in his arms, the deputies arrive, release Jackson and capture "Red." Mary, in the meantime, has run away unseen and warns her father and his helper. They escape and Mary, after leading the deputies on a false chase, goes to Jackson and makes known her love for him.

FOR LOVE OF HER (Sept. 14).—Jonas Heather suffers from moments of amnesia which is unknown to his daughter, Nellie, or his friends. His daughter is in love with Bob Wisner, a young ne'er-do-well of the town, whose saving grace is his love for Nellie. They become engaged, but her father won't permit the marriage and Bob leaves. Later he follows the old man during one of his bad moments and saves him from robbing a house. He is accused and goes to prison to save the father's name because of Nellie. Nellie goes blind from overstudy, and only the specialists in New York at the free clinic are available for her cure. To get to New York the father offers to take charge of a canal boat. On the trip, Bob, who has escaped from prison, takes refuge in the canal boat. Excuses are made to the blind girl and the pursuers placed on another scent. They are married before the boat reaches New York. In New York the operation is successful, and it is then she learns of her husband's prison term. The father explains all and the girl takes Bob to her heart.

GAUMONT.

LOVE'S SERENADE (Sept. 10).—Mr. and Mrs. Humbolt have just finished an enjoyable honeymoon. Long before twelve months have elapsed, the young couple's home is rent with the noise of continual quarrels. They decide to separate and leave each other.

It so happens that a year after their divorce, both Mr. Humbolt and his wife, Suzanne, stop at the same summer hotel. At the hotel, Humbolt is inconsolable. He can see no one but Suzanne and can think of no one but her, while she is quite as devoted to him, without letting him know of it. A most bold admirer, Don Juan, is smitten with the charms of the divorcee and pursues her relentlessly for her hand. She encourages him only to increase the jealousy of her former husband. Young Humbolt rages with fury at the advances of Don Juan and many are the comical situations that arise from the eagerness of these two to outstrip each other in bestowing favors and tokens upon the pretty little miss. Of course, Suzanne finally gives in to her husband and a complete reconciliation is effected.

THE PLAGUE STRICKEN CITY (Sept. 12).—Many of us sigh for the "good old days," but there are few of us who would care to go back to the time when sovereigns were spending the time that they should be devoting to the betterment of their governments in drinking and debauchery. This film takes us back to those days. We see how badly the streets are kept and how poorly ventilated and unclean the houses are, which all tend to make the city an easy prey to that terrible Black Plague.

When the inhabitants appeal to their Prince for sanitary conditions and for food to keep them from starvation, they are thrust out of his castle and he continues to carouse and make merry with his courtiers. But there is one man among the merry crowd who will not participate in the hilarity, and he is the captain of the Prince's bodyguard. The Prince requests him to join the happy crowd and to also bring his wife and daughters, which he does.

When the eyes of the Prince fall upon one of the captain's pretty daughters, he is struck by her beauty and starts to make violent love to her. She repulses his advances, and the captain is killed on attemping interference. Late that night, when the revellers are asleep, the captain's wife and daughters slip out by a subterranean passage—all other means of egress being shut off so as to avoid any strangers getting among the courtiers and spreading the terrible disease there—and go into the most stricken part of the city, where they do all in their power to alleviate the pain and distress of others. Having taken no precautions against the pestilence they easily succumb to the terrible plague.

Soon learning that they are of little help to the sufferers, they hasten back to the castle, where a man, much under the influence of liquor, seizes the older girl. The Prince, seeing that his prize is slipping from him, rises to interfere. The man who has now reached the zenith of his anger, and caring not for Prince or King, stabs the sovereign to death. The captain's wife, cognizant of the fact that their escape is cut off, sets fire to the tapestries and furniture, thereby wiping out not only the pestilence, but the whole den of debauchery.

THANHOUSER.

DON'T PINCH MY PUP (Sept. 8).—The boy's parents were poor, and he helped out the family income by selling newspapers. He was a lonesome little chap, and had no pals among the other chaps, and although he never admitted it openly he longed for someone who would love him and "be a chum."

While at work one day, the youngster met a dog, seemingly homeless, and most certainly hungry. The boy divided his scanty noon-day meal with the dog, and was delightfully happy when the dog refused to go away insisting upon accompanying the child home.

The newsboy found that his joy was not shared by other members of his family. They regarded the animal as an unnecessary luxury, but finally consented to take him in. Then for a few days the child was happy, for he had something to lavish his affection upon.

Anxiety came to him, however, when his father told him that a crusade against unlicensed dogs was to be instituted, and that all animals without tags would promptly be captured and destroyed. The amount of the license fee was trifling, but it was far beyond the financial ability of the newsboy. After vainly trying to borrow money from his mother, the youngster spent his spare time doing odd jobs, and slowly but surely his secret hoard mounted.

The trouble was, however, that there was a time limit. The day before it expired the boy counted over his money and found he was twenty-one cents short of the necessary sum. He had learned by patient inquiry that the law would not permit of partial payment and his little heart was filled with bitterness. He had done all he could, there was nothing left now but to defy the authorities.

Accordingly he wrote "a warning" to the police. In it he informed the police that he had labored hard and faithfully, had been unable to amass the sum necessary for a dog license.

A great big policeman saw the child shove this threatening message under the station house door. He read it, then called his companions, and they also perused the document.

Perhaps they were afraid: perhaps their hearts were touched. Anyhow, very shortly afterwards, they marched around to the boy's house and made him happy for a year by presenting him with a collar and a license good for one good dog that a little newsboy loved.

A STAR REBORN (Sept. 10).—"Nothing for you today," was what the girl heard in each theatrical office and agency where she applied for an engagement. Weary and despairing, she at last called at a theater where a Shakespearian star was rehearsing. The door-keeper rudely rebuffed her, but fortunately the star's attention was attracted, and he went up and talked to her.

The actor was a good-hearted chap, and his sympathy was aroused. He "tried her out," and as she made good, a regular position was given her. She did not become his leading lady, because she did not have the ability. As an actress she was just ordinary, but she was sweet and pretty and won the heart of a most presentable young millionaire, who was extremely happy when she consented to become his bride.

Some years later, on her return from a long trip abroad, the former actress was shocked to learn that the star was in financial difficulties. The public no longer cared for Shakespeare.

The woman called on her one-time employer and found him starving in a garret, although he tried to conceal the facts from her, she was not deceived. Knowing him well she realized he would not accept charity, but something had to be done, and she vigorously told her husband so.

The husband had plenty of money and was willing to help his wife. They sent for a theatrical manager and asked him to send the star out in Shakespearian productions. He was willing when they agreed to meet the deficit.

An open air performance of "Twelfth Night" was arranged to be given on the grounds of a country club. The one-time star appeared as Malvolio, made a great hit, and happily signed a contract.

He never knew to whom he owed his fortune. Actor-like, he honestly believed that his merit had finally been discovered. Arm in arm with his new manager, the shabby little man strutted off, explaining just what should be done and how. Husband and wife watched them.

THE BIRTH OF THE LOTUS BLOSSOM (Sept. 13).—One of the prettiest legends of old Japan, concerns the birth of the Lotus Blossom. It tells how, many years ago, a brave warrior fell under the displeasure of the Mikado, and a troop of soldiers were sent to capture him. He fought them off, single handed and made his escape, although badly wounded. Realizing that his end was near, he painfully made his way to the shrine of Hachiman, the God of War, to die there. Upon his arrival the temple was deserted, except for one of the priestesses, who bound up his wounds, hid him when the soldiers appeared. Then the warrior and the priestess departed.

The God of War was naturally the patron saint of soldiers, and in this time of peril he aided them. Knowing that the absence of the priestess would be noted, and a search that would be fatal to the fugitive, Hachiman descended from his shrine and took the place of the priestess at the altar.

The brave soldier reached a place of safety, but soon expired of his wounds. The broken-hearted priestess returned to her temple in fear and trembling, to pay homage to the god. When she reached the door and looked inside, she was stricken with awe, for she saw herself, in her garb of a priestess, kneeling at the altar.

The god, for the god it was, smiled upon her, and beckoned her to enter. Reverently she did so. As she walked forward, the god retreated and entered the shrine. Then the girl fell fainting on the steps.

The priest and a number of worshippers entered in time to see a miracle. On the altar steps, fainting, was lying the beloved priestess. The image of the God of War was alive. It stretched for-

ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD

Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper

INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON, (POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

"WARNER'S FEATURES LEAD TO SUCCESS"

HOME OFFICE:
145 West 45th Street WRITE TO NEAREST OFFICE New York City

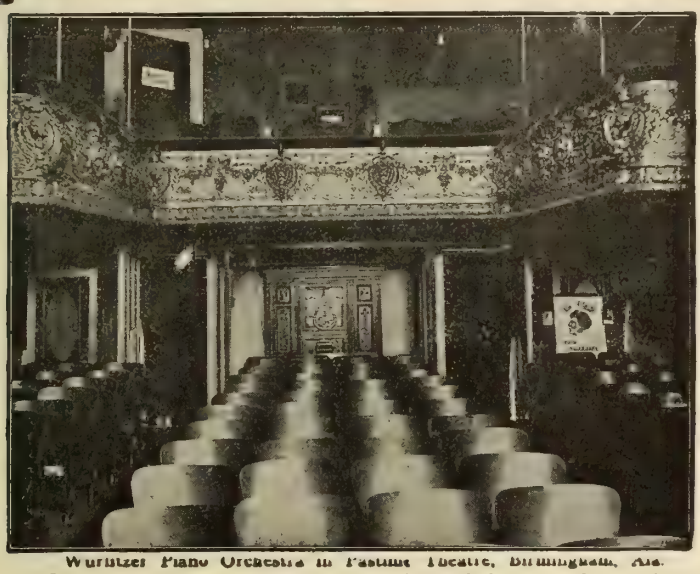
WURLITZER
World's Largest Mfrs Established 1856



Wurlitzer Piano Orchestra in Pastime Theatre, Birmingham, Ala.

Write for 32-page booklet, showing
Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments
in the leading picture theatres of the country.
The Wurlitzer Instruments furnish better music than musicians and reduce expenses. 50 different styles; time payments; big catalog free. If you can't call, write to our nearest branch.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company
CINCINNATI 117-121 E. 4th | NEW YORK 25-27 W. 32d | CHICAGO 329-331 S. Wabash | PHILADELPHIA 1835 Chestnut
ST. LOUIS 913 Pine St. | CLEVELAND 800 Huron Road | BUFFALO 701 Main | LOUISVILLE 426 W. Greene | COLUMBUS, O. 57 E. Main

Exclusive Features!

The Royal Feature Film Company
ONE RELEASE EACH WEEK
THE BEST THAT MONEY CAN BUY

BLAZING THE TRAIL	Bison,	2 reels
POST TELEGRAPHER	Bison,	2 "
THE CRISIS	Bison,	2 "
LIEUTENANT'S LAST FIGHT	Bison,	2 "
DEAD MAN'S CHILD	Gt. Northern,	3 "
THE OUTCAST	Bison,	2 "
ST. GEORGE AND THE DRAGON	Milano,	3 "
MYSTERIES OF SOULS	Gt. Northern,	3 "
WRECK OF THE AURORA	World's Best,	3 "
LAST OF THE FRONTIGNACS	Gt. Northern,	3 "
VEILED INNOCENCE	Ambrosio,	3 "

Every One a Box Office Winner
Watch for future releases and get busy quick before your competitor beats you to it. You will need each one of them at least two days. One, three, six, eight sheets; heralds, booklets, banners, etc.

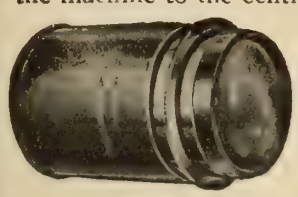
SPECIAL NOTICE
We have just secured state rights for Ohio and West Virginia on "Last Stand of the Dalton Boys at Coffeyville, Kansas." Book it quick and get your S.R.O. sign ready.

NOTHING BUT { STATE RIGHT FEATURES the Best To Be Had } RELEASED BY US

302 Schultz Bldg., High and Hickory Sts., Columbus, O.

Gundlach Projection Lenses Guarantee You the Sharpest and Most Brilliant Picture it is Possible to Produce.

If you want to improve your picture just order a lens for trial subject to approval and see the result with your own eyes. If you give the height and width of the screen, the size of the picture wanted and the distance from the machine to the centre of the screen we can furnish a lens of the exact focus for your operating conditions.



Many Exhibitors have found it an advantage to ask our advice about lenses before equipping new Theatres. Do not be afraid of a long throw. No matter what the distance is to the screen we can supply lenses of suitable focus and great illuminating power. All the best theatres in Rochester use our lenses and every customer has been satisfied of their superiority to ordinary lenses. THE LENS MAKES THE PICTURE, and you cannot get the best result out of the film unless you use Gundlach Lenses.

You can order through any Film Exchange or Dealer in Motion Picture Supplies.

Gundlach Projection Lenses will be furnished to order with the following machines subject to a little higher price than ordinary lenses: Powers Cameragraph, The Motiograph, The Simplex, The American Standard, The Edison. Our Lenses are used by the Kinemacolor Co. and a large number of the finest theatres in the United States and Canada.

GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN OPTICAL CO., 808 Clinton Ave. So., Rochester, N. Y.

ward its hands and slowly turned back into stone. As it did so, the body of the priestess disappeared and a lotus blossom appeared in the place where she had been. For the god, knowing that life would be a misery to her without her soldier lover, had taken her to join him in the land where there is no sorrow.

ECLAIR.

THE MARSHAL'S HONEYMOON (Sept. 10).—John Calhoun, marshal of Green Briar, is on his way to church to marry Lillian Carter, the village belle. He passes the railroad yards and duty halts him. Peregrinating Pete, a traveling worthy of the road, must needs be arrested and put in the calaboose. This accomplished, he returns to his wedding and soon he and his bride are off on their honeymoon.

The villagers release the hobo and leave a human skeleton in its stead. The marshal and his bride return and he goes at once to see his prisoner. He sees the skeleton and thinks poor Mr. Vagrant has starved to death. Until he is told there is fun galore.

THE HAUNTED BACHELOR (Sept. 10).—John Morgan, a rich bachelor, has a negro valet called Sambo. In a fit of rage he strikes the darky and thinking he has killed him, he puts his body into a trunk and plans to bury it. But Sambo revives and hides through fright.

Morgan waits till night and then takes the trunk to bury it and at every turn comes face to face with Sambo, whom he takes to be a haunting ghost. The movements of the doubly scared pair attract the police and both land in the station house.

THE RANCHER'S LOTTERY (Sept. 12).—Jim Gardener, a quick-tempered, well-to-do rancher, has invited two of his neighboring ranchers, both bachelors, too, to dinner. His Chinese cook commits a blunder and is discharged. Jim tries to finish preparing dinner and thinks he has done well till all three sit down to eat it. Briefly, it is impossible to eat. All three determine they ought to be married, so they advertise for a wife.

Three Eastern girls, who are going West for their vacation, see the advertisement and plan to have fun through it. Ida Carstairs, the prettiest of the three, gets herself up as an old maid. The three ranchers meet the three girls. They decide that two of them will do but each one balks at Ida in her disguise. So they decide to draw straws, the shortest straw means Ida. Jim gets it and turns and runs away while Ida gives chase and catches him. The other two are twitting him about his luck when lo, Ida removes her disguise and Jim laughs last.

MARRIAGE OF CONVENIENCE (Sept. 15).—Gavroche lives by his wit, so when he reads an ad, which tells that a rich American girl will marry the man who can cause her to experience the greatest thrill or sensation, he puts his mental ingenuity working. And he conceives a plan to win.

He calls at her address and sees two suitors try and fail. He then goes to a menagerie, where he buys two lions. With these he returns and enters the office where the contract is to be signed if one should prove the victor.

All flee before Gavroche and his lions, all but the heiress, who flies into his arms begging protection. Thus it is that he caused her the greatest emotion or thrill and she gladly names him victor and husband-to-be.

AROUND CONSTANTINOPLE (Sept. 15).—An animated panorama of those picturesque and antiquated views that abound around the Turkish capital.

IMP.

THE LOVE TEST (Sept. 2).—Margaret Burnham leaves her country home for the city and obtains a position as stenographer to Philip Steele, a well-know attorney. The chief clerk in this office, Mark Loring, is attracted by the girl's beauty and becomes a persistent wooer. Mr. Steele himself falls in love with his attractive employee and is surprised one day to find Loring and Margaret very much wrapped up in each other. Boxes of candy and flowers are given by Loring to the stenographer, but she has grown to care for her employer. Financial difficulties arise at home and Margaret's mother writes her for assistance, explaining that unless a thousand dollars is raised within a limited period their home will be taken away from them. Margaret is distracted, but, while reading the letter, is surprised by Loring, who hands her a check for the amount. She accepts it, but in doing so, gives Loring the opportunity he desires, and at a little dinner party that evening he takes advantage of the obligation and insults her grossly. Later he continues his advances and Margaret sees that the only way in which she can free herself is to repay him the thousand dollars. The chance comes when Mr. Steele hands her a check book with several checks signed by him. He orders her to fill out the amounts and in a weak moment she makes one out payable to herself for one thousand dollars and hands it to her persecutor. He denounces her as a forger and at that moment Steele enters the room. He learns of the girl's error, dismisses the chief clerk, and, not knowing the suffering through which the girl has gone, also discharges her. She returns to her parents and tells of her mistake. One day Steele, in loking over her papers, finds the letter from her mother in which the tale of the mortgage is told. He then realizes the great sacrifice the girl has made, rushes out of his office and goes to Margaret's home. He finds her in her little gown of gingham, with a towel tied around her head and a broom in her hand, working industriously. Upon seeing him she tries to make herself more presentable, but he insists upon taking her to his arms just as she is.

CHAMPION.

THE MAID OF THE ROCKS (Sept. 2).—Laid in a little seacoast village, the story is woven around the love of two men, one a smuggler, the other a Coast Guard, for the daughter of a fisherman. The girl favors the smuggler and his promise to give up smuggling wins her consent to marry him.

The flesh is weak, however, and the smuggler listens to the call of his former comrades and agrees to accompany them on a smuggling expedition. This, he asserts, is to be his last trip. But the Coast Guards have got wind of their plans and catch them red-handed. In the ensuing fight the girl's lover wounds his rival, the Coast Guard, and is taken into custody.

The Guard, realizing the power of his situation, sees his chance of winning the girl. She has pleaded with him to release her smuggler sweetheart. He agrees on one condition, that she marry him, the guard. To save her lover the girl agrees. Afterwards, realizing that the girl can never love him, and seeing the suffering he is causing her by the promise he has extracted, the Guard begs her forgiveness, releases her from the promise and reunited the lovers.
POWERS

POWERS.

LOVE WILL FIND A WAY (Sept. 4).—Two old gentlemen, life long friends, have adjoining estates, using the same entrance for both. One has a daughter, the other a son. The youngsters, while at college, become engaged. Meantime the old people have a quarrel. Each forbids the other to trespass on his property. The children arrive home and both fathers ignore the engagement. The young folks in their endeavors to meet, have many exciting experiences as they are invariably discovered by the older folks. The young folks finally devise a scheme to cut the gate in half. This allows thin people to pass, but not stout. They each call their parent, show them the idea, pass through, but when the older folks try, each gets caught. While stuck the humor of the situation strikes all. The laugh breaks the strain and a general reconciliation follows.

HIS WEAKNESS (Sept. 6).—Two young men love the same girl. One is a doctor, the other an artist. The girl chooses the artist. The doctor discovers that the artist is a drug fiend. He decides for the girl's sake to cure the artist of his habit. The artist in his delirium, tries to kill the doctor. The doctor grapples and manages to get the gun away as the girl enters the scene. The doctor is denounced by the girl and is accused of trying to murder. He maintains silence. The artist, while under treatment, dies, and at his death, the girl discovers his curse and realizes the injustice done the doctor.

MAJESTIC.

THE LEASURES OF CAMPING (Sept. 8).—John Wall and his wife suffering from the heat and dissatisfied with their suburban home, are attracted by an advertisement setting forth the pleasures of camping, on the riverside. They decide to spend their vacation in the open and they lose no time in buying the necessary camping implements. Wall scorns the oil stove and relying on his theoretical experience, he buys only the strictly necessary implements: tent, sleeping bags, provisions, hammock, pots, etc. They settle in a valley and are driven away by the river suddenly rising after a heavy rain. They have to move and this time select a high spot. After fighting the mosquitos all night, they fall asleep. A hurricane arises and the tent is blown up discovering husband and wife sleeping in plain sight of the passengers on a passing excursion boat.

Having seen enough of their experiment, Wall and his wife paddle to the passing boat in their canoe, but the husband makes a quick gesture trying to grasp a rope and the canoe is upset. They are hooked up on the river boat and reach home safely, but they continue to suffer from the heat until Wall comes back from town with an electric fan. This help makes them enjoy their home the more for their past experience in camping.

WILLIE'S DOG (Sept. 8).—Little Willie brings home a stray mongrel dog which he has found on the street, much to the annoyance of his father, mother and sister. To humor the boy, who is the pet of the family, they decide to let the dog remain. All goes well until the dog shows a destructive turn of mind and succeeds in destroying about everything within reach. The limit of patience arrives when the dog destroys mother's new spring hat and gown and she orders the dog put out of the house and summons father to get rid of the animal. Father secures a handbag and places the dog inside. Willie gets his painting outfit, and while father is getting his hat, the boy paints the word "Dynamite" across the bag in white letters. Father unconscious of this, starts to get rid of the dog. He meets several of his neighbors and is about to pass the time of day with them when they see the word "dynamite" and run away. Father thinks they have suddenly gone mad. He stops in a cafe for refreshments and the barkeeper who is about to serve him sees the word "dynamite" and makes for the open followed by the hangers on. Father, still mystified leaves the place and enters another shop, with the same result. He is then taken in hand by a policeman who very gently leads him before a magistrate. The bag is placed on the judge's desk and there is a general scramble by all to get out of the courtroom. The policeman, braver than the rest, siezes father and leads him away from the deadly bag. All hands cautiously re-enter the courtroom, when little Willie, who has been following his father to see what would happen, rushes up and grabs the bag, which starts another stampede. Willie opens the bag and lets the dog out to the relief of all.

LOLA'S SACRIFICE (Sept. 10).—Lola, a gypsy

EDWARDS'

NEGATIVE and POSITIVE RAW FILM

(Extra Fast) (Extra Brilliant)

Sole Agents Write for Terms

THE PHOTO CINES CO., 24-26 East 13th Street, New York

MAJESTIC

SUNDAY, SEPT. 1st

"THE CHAPERON"

BY ROBERT GOODMAN—WITH THE "BEAUTY" COMEDY COMPANY INCLUDING EDITH REEVES — ANNA LEHR — VALERIE MONTROSE AND VIRGINIA WESTBROOK

TUESDAY, SEPT 3.

"Mabel's Beau"

A really delightful Comedy-Drama with MABEL TRUNNELLE and HERBERT PRIOR supported by a strong cast.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 10.

"Lola's Sacrifice"

An intensely interesting Drama in which a gypsy girl's love overcomes jealousy and triumphs over death.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 8th

"THE PLEASURES OF CAMPING"

With the Popular Comedian: PAUL SCARDON.

AND

"WILLIE'S DOG"

A BRIGHT, SNAPPY, HALF-REEL COMEDY.

Sept. 15—"Cupid vs. Cigarettes" Sept. 22—"Mary's Chauffeur"
Sept. 17—"Thorns of Success" Sept. 24—"The Butterfly"
Sept. 29—"Belligerent Benjam in," and "A Garrison Joke"

SOLD ONLY THROUGH

The Film Supply Co. of America

The Majestic Studios, 540 West 21st Street, New York City

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

UNIVERSAL FILMS

EXCLUSIVE SERVICE

UNIVERSAL FILMS

Imp Nestor Bison
Rex Eclair
Animated Weekly
Gem Powers Milano
Victor Champion

Two and Three Reel Features Weekly

THE ONLY EXCHANGE IN NEW YORK CITY PURCHASING THE A OVE BRANDS

Universal Film Exchange of New York

UNIVERSAL FILMS

111 E. 14th ST.
NEW YORK, N. Y.

UNIVERSAL FILMS

It Is a Sight

On the Twentieth of each month, to see the excited groups of "fans" crowded around the box offices of many of the theaters. On the sixteenth they are getting ready, on the seventeenth they are expectant, on the eighteenth they are impatient, on the nineteenth they are beginning to buzz with anticipation; and on the twentieth they are

Made Happy

They just can't wait for the twentieth; and for twenty days they and their friends have been talking about it and saying: "I wish it came out every week."

Everybody's Talking About It

About what? Why, about the Motion Picture Story Magazine. Isn't it funny that some exhibitors can't see it? They know that nothing has happened in the last three years for a greater uplift of the Moving Picture Business, but they can't see why they should bother with it. "Bother." Say, not a bother, for the handling of it more than pays for itself in cash, but the great point is that the magazine actually doubles the interest in Motion Pictures in every town where it is widely circulated and hence

Doubles Attendance

(And we have hundreds of letters to prove it.)

The more you exhibitors let the public in on the personal and details of the business, the greater will be the interest and the greater the attendance. To do this, the Motion Picture Story Magazine is the thing. Ten cents a copy to exhibitors; unsold copies fully returnable. It sells for fifteen cents. Both Licensed and Independent pictures used. Send $1.00 for ten trial copies. If you don't sell them we will refund the money.

THE MOTION PICTURE STORY MAGAZINE

26 Court Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE SENSATION AT THE CHICAGO CONVENTION!

The "Fotoplayer" Carried Away All Honors

Write For Prices and Terms

Great —Wonderful— Just the thing—were the expressions on all sides. Twenty-eight sold in four days tells the story, and conclusively proves that Fotoplayer music is the best trade bringer

Exclusive Double Tracker Device

With the Fotoplayer you can change music instantly to meet every situation that comes up, and change one roll while the other roll plays.

Music Changes With the Pictures

Every known trap and effect incorporated in the Fotoplayer. Horse-hoofs and Battle Scene effects, Drums, Bells, Thunder, Castanets, Tambourines, Fire Gongs, Locomotive Whistles, etc. — IT'S SIMPLY GREAT

Fotoplayers For Every Size Theatre

Twenty minutes after the exhibit was opened Allan Morgan, of Morgan & Nye, purchased a Fotoplayer for their beautiful new playhouse, the Tabor Theatre, soon to be opened in Chicago.

Use a FOTOPLAYER in Your House

It gives fine music. You change instantly from piano to organ, or can play the entire instrument manually for vaudeville.

IT'S BIG ECONOMY—always a "Feature," and will bring the nickels and dimes faster.

THE AMERICAN PHOTO PLAYER SALES CO.

130 KEARNY STREET — GENERAL DISTRIBUTORS — SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO.

Distributors for States of Illinois and Wisconsin — 209 SOUTH STATE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

girl, repulses Tomo when he tries to make love to her. Angered, he makes Lola sing and dance to his violin playing when she is so ill that she can scarcely hold her head up. While dancing in a crowded street Lola sinks to the pavement exhausted and is rescued from Tomo by a minister who takes her to his home and puts her in charge of his deaconess. Lola is educated and taught the ways of refined society, but not without falling in love with her protector who fails to notice her fondness for him, as he is merely interested in helping her and is engaged to marry a society girl. Lola suffers the pangs of jealousy when she sees the minister with his fiancée. Sitting by her window in a passion of jealousy, she sees the minister walking in the garden with his future wife. Then she sees her gypsy lover, Tomo, sneak up behind him to kill him. Lola quickly makes her way into the garden and the deep love and gratitude she feels for her benefactor triumphs over her jealousy. As Tomo is about to plunge his dagger into the minister's back, she throws herself between them and receives the full force of the blow in her own frail body, thus sacrificing her life for her benefactor.

GEM.

THE CELEBRATED CASE (Sept. 3).—Jean Renaud, a young peasant, marries Madeline, the foster sister of the Countess d'Auheterre, who presents Madeline with a beautiful necklace as a wedding present. Seven years after, Jean goes to war and wins fame through taking the British flag at the Battle of Fontenoy. While searching for a comrade on the field that evening after the battle, he rescues the Count de Mornay from the hands of a camp follower, named Lazare. The Count then entrusts his family papers and jewels to Jean and begs him to take care of them, giving Jean a sum of money for himself. Jean takes the jewels and papers and decides to carry them home and give them to Madeline for safe keeping—his home being in the vicinity. His wife and little daughter Adrienne are overjoyed to see him. Jean confides the jewels and papers of the Count de Mornay to Madeline, who places them in the casket with the necklace. She locks the drawer and puts the key in her pocket, neither he nor she being aware that Lazare is watching them from the window. Jean hastens back to camp. Before Madeline can bolt the door Lazare rushes in, demands that Madeline open the drawer and upon her refusal threatens to kill her. Little Adrienne, aroused by the noise, calls for her mamma. In the struggle, Madeline drops the key to the drawer. Lazare picks it up, obtains the casket and is about to leave when Madeline throws herself upon him. He stabs her and runs off. Madeline crawls to the door of Adrienne's room. The child rushes out, and Madeline expires while trying to tell Adrienne who murdered her.

The child's frightened calls for help are answered by the neighbors, and Adrienne, in answer to their questions, tells them her father was home that night. The next day Jean is accused of murder by the seneschal, and is confronted by his own child, who corroborates the charge that he had been home. Jean cannot deny it. He tells why he went home, but his story is not believed. He is tried by court martial and is sentenced to life imprisonment to the galleys, his life being spared only in consideration of his gallant conduct in battle. He begs his friend and comrade, O'Rourke, to take care of Adrienne. O'Rourke promises to do so and persuades the Duchess D'Auheterre to adopt Adrienne.

Fourteen years later, Jean, while being taken from one prison to another, is allowed to rest on the grounds of his former commander, the Duke D'Auheterre. He meets his daughter Adrienne there with a school friend, the daughter of de Mornay that Jean aided that fatal night. Adrienne, attracted by some strange impulse, recognizes Jean as her father. After the convicts depart, she determines to prove her father's innocence. Strange coincidence! That very day Lazare appears as the Count de Mornay to demand the confiscated estates, and lay claim to Valentine as his daughter. He brings the jewels and papers to prove his identity. The Duke D'Auheterre listens to the pleadings of Adrienne and sends for Jean to confront de Mornay. Adrienne, believing of course that the supposed de Mornay will confirm Jean's story, and thus establish his innocence. On Jean's arrival, Lazare denies all knowledge of him, and afraid of being unmasked, decides to leave at once. He starts to pick up the jewels and papers where he has placed them while talking to the Duke, and Jean sees Madeline's necklace and the jewels. He shows it to the Duchess, who recognizes the necklace. Lazare, realizing that his exposure is imminent, starts to flee, but is stopped by the Duke and put under arrest. Jean's innocence is proved, and he is at last restored to his daughter and happiness.

SOLAX.

TREASURES ON THE WING (Sept. 11).—Dr. Brown is called out of town on an emergency case. Mrs. Brown, a woman who loves her husband is very attentive to him and sees to the doctor's wants, most diligently. When the doctor is about to leave, Mrs. Brown notices the large awkward health shoes which her husband wears and im-

IT PAYS TO GET THE BEST FILMS.

Bradenburg's World Renowned

Feature Films for Sale or Rent

Titles.	Reels.	Rental Price.	Selling Price.
The Outcast (Asta Nielsen)	3	$15	$275
Great Moment (Asta Nielsen)	4	15	175
Gypsy Blood (Asta Nielsen)	3	15	250
An Old Man's Darling (Asta Nielsen)	3	15	100
The Traitress (Asta Nielsen)	3	15	200
Peep Behind the Scenes (Asta Nielsen)	4	15	200
Red Rose of the Apache	3	15	175
Four Dare Devils	3	10	125
Nursing a Viper	3	15	200
Flower of the Mormon City (western)	3	15	250
The Trap	2	10	250
Written in Blood	3	15	180
Course of True Love (A. Nielsen)	3	15	180
Inventor's Secret	2	10	150
Poison of Humanity	2	10	100
Lady of Lourdes (Religious)	3	15	150
Fisherman's Sweetheart, or Saved From the Sea	3	15	200
Great Mine Disaster	2	10	100
Lt. Rose and Hidden Treasure (Naval)	2	10	100
Revenge	3	15	125
Mystery of the Banker's Safe	2	10	150
The Weed	2	10	150
Cripple Creek (Reliance)	2	5	120
Waneta's Sacrifice (Western)	2	5	120
A Merry Night	2	10	100
A Woman's Honor	3	15	250
Might of Gold (A. Nielsen)	4	15	180
Siege of Calais	2	10	75
White Slave	2	10	125
Macbeth	2	6	50
Fall of Troy	2	5	50
Golden Wedding	2	5	75
Germany's Glorious Days	2	8	50
Martin Luther	2	8	100
Smuggler's Fate	2	10	100
Mysterious Automobile	3	15	240
A Woman's Power	3	15	180
Life's Game of Dice	3	15	180
Bells of Notre Dame	2	10	100
Love's Combat	4	20	240

It will be in the interest of your own business if you will write for a list of our

IMPORTED AND ORIGINAL FILMS

Exclusive Program Guaranteed

Independent Film Exchange

G. W. BRADENBURG

233 N. Eighth St. Philadelphia, Pa.

America's Feature Film Co.

406-7-8 Schiller Building, Chicago

CALIFORNIA RODEO

The Greatest of American Roundups

HIPPODROME WILD HORSE RACING

The largest number of contesting cowboys and cowgirls on wild range horses, steers and bulls, in the most comical, dangerous and exciting "stunts" ever shown.

Words cannot explain how intensely exciting and thrilling this picture is. Something doing all the time. NO stalls. Absolutely no posing.

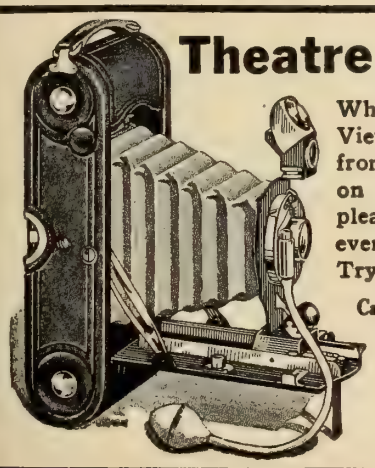
The public is hungry for something "ALIVE." You State Right Men Know It.

Grasp the opportunity now and get this "ALIVE" three reels. Better than a Special Feature.

SENSATIONAL POSTERS

TERRITORY FOR SALE BY

Duhem & Harter Motion Picture Co. 652 Oak Street San Francisco, Cal.



Theatre Managers

Why not KODAK Local Views; Have Slides Made from Them and Show on Your Screens? This pleases your audiences everywhere all the time. Try it.

Cameras and All Photo Supplies

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

21 EAST 14th STREET
NEW YORK CITY

THE

Eye Comfort System

OF

Indirect Illumination

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theaters a month.

This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

National X-Ray Reflector Co.,
227 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago.

Distance, Screen to Rear of Auditorium.....
Ceiling Height .....
Width of House.....
Name .....

mediately she protests that if he must go out of town in those shoes he would be the laughing stock of all. She induces him to take them off and wear his "city shoes." Before the usual leave-taking the doctor gives his wife a roll of bills with the request that she deposit it in the bank for him.

The doctor gone, the wife places the money in a purse and locks it in a bureau drawer for temporary safe keeping. Mrs. Broun's little daughter knows all this and as she looks on the calendar and sees that it is April 1st she waits until her mother puts her to bed and then when all is quiet, she stealthily walks down stairs, removes the money from the drawer and places it flat under the inner sole of her father's big shoes. She substitutes for the money in the purse the note—"April Fool — Go to School—Tell your mother you're a fool." Then she steals up to bed.

In the dead of night a burglar enters the house and among other things steals the purse! When he arrives in his den he discovers the note and is much amused at the joke on him.

Mrs. Broun the next morning sees her husbands shoes and decides to get rid of them forever, so she gives them to a passing tramp who finds that the shoes are too good for him and pawns them.

In the meantime Dr. Broun comes home and when he asks about the money; the robbery is discovered, the child during the rumpus goes for the shoes and discovers they are gone. She tells her story and then Dr. Broun makes a wild dash to recover the shoes and the money. His adventures are ludicrous.

The shoes turn up unexpectedly from the pawnbroker's via the butler and the poor fellow is innocently involved in a complicated case out of which he finds it difficult to extricate himself.

THE SOUL OF THE VIOLIN (Sept. 13).—Tony and Delores are happy together. Tony's blindness makes no difference. He earns money by playing on his old violin—an instrument very dear to him. His happy existence is interrupted by a rich man, a Mr. Gilbert who is interested in music. Tony and Delores one day play before Mr. Gilbert's palatial home. The harmonious strains of the violin attract his attention.

The alluring beauty of Delores fascinates Mr. Gilbert. He is very attentive and it occurs to him that he could be near her always if he arranger to take violin lessons from her blind husband. In this way an acquaintanceship develops. Mr. Gilbert is captivated by Delores' eastern seductiveness and takes advantage of every opportunity of being in her presence. He invites her to a masquerade ball and other functions. Her poor blind husband is ignorant of the growing attachment and constant companionship of the two.

Events come to a climax when Delores, temporarily overwhelmed by Gilbert's luxurious living, leaves her husband. Tony, abandoned and helpless, is soon reduced to penury and is forced to sell his violin.

Later, after the novelty of living in luxury wears off, Delores begins to think of her abandoned and helpless husband. Gilbert attempts at this time to get familiar and she repulses him. Then her slumbering conscience is awakened.

That night she sees a vision of her blind husband in despair. The strains of his old violin vibrate in her ears; with determination she casts off her fine clothes which Gilbert in his generosity had presented to her and then clothes herself in the rags in keeping with her station. She goes back to her husband full of remorse. He waits for her and takes her to his heart, the Soul of the Violin had done its work and forever after they live in harmony and good cheer.

BISON.

THE ARIZONA LAND SWINDLE (Sept. 3).—The farmers of a farming district in the Middle States are attracted by the promises made in exaggerated posters and circulars issued by a fraudulent land concern in Arizona. The clever agent so excites the credulity of the simple folk that a number of them buy tracts of land and start for the new mecca.

Mr. Strong heads the party of settlers and upon their arrival they set out with the land man, one Adams, to view their holdings and trouble broods at the outset. The party is informed that the water claims are taken up and that they will have to dig wells. Strong produces the contracts but they are waved aside.

For a time the settlers dig their wells and try to cultivate their land, but the drought comes and sickness and privations drive the settlers to desperation. They determine to either get the water given to them or to take it. They meet with determined resistance from armed desperadoes, hired by Adams. This scoundrel offers to grant the settlers the use of the water if a marriage is arranged between him and Strong's pretty daughter. Jack, her fiance, offers to ride for help and does so.

The suffering of the women folk and the children spurs the men to make a determined effort to get the water on their land and armed with spades they make another attempt to dig ditches from the spring. Armed resistance is again made and a battle is at hand when Jack rides up with the sheriff and a large posse who hold warrants for the defrauders. Adams and his desperadoes are taken prisoners and the settlers learn that the land they have paid out their good cash for, belongs to the government and that they may file their claims and have the use of the water.

HER LAST RESORT (Sept. 7).—Pedro, an ingenuous and willing Mexican, his wife and child, come to a small Western town. Pedro applies for work at several ranches, but is met with decided rebuffs. A reward is offered for the arrest of some cattle thieves and the cowboys around profess to suspect Pedro.

Pedro makes one more effort to get work, but his pathetic appeal is met by a refusal. Dispirited he turns homeward. Nearing a culvert he watches some workmen put in a blast, then seeing the rancher who has last refused him work ride into danger, he turns the horse and runs himself but is struck by a piece of rock. By the time the rancher has recovered from the shock and has asked for the man, who probably saved his life, Pedro has limped on his weary way. He arrives at the shack exhausted, and is helped to bed.

Pedro's faithful wife can stand the strain no longer. She steals out and, going to the rancher's barn leads out a cow, takes it home, milks it, and attends to the wants of her husband and child.

The loss of the cow is discovered and Pedro is suspected. The sheriff and rancher ride over with several cowboys. The cow is found and Pedro is about to be dragged from his bed, despite his wife's confession, when the rancher recognizes the man who risked his life for him.

The sheriff willingly withdraws and adds his quota to the collection raised by the cowboys and the rancher gives Pedro the cow and a steady job.

MILANO.

VICTIMS OF INGRATITUDE (Sept. 7).—Helene and Mario, a young married couple, living happily in their palatial home in Naples, receive a letter of appeal from Helene's old school chum, Gina, who has experienced a succession of reverses which ended in the death of her husband. They immediately extend an invitation to the woman to visit them.

Plans for Gina's future are discussed and they offer her the place of housekeeper and overseer of their country estate. This she accepts, but Gina grows discontented and fosters in her breast a feeling of jealousy for the woman who has befriended her, and this she allows to develop into a deep hatred.

Helene and her husband pay a visit to the country place and while gathering wild flowers in a rocky glen, Helene meets with an accident, which confines her to her apartment for several weeks. It is then that Mario becomes infatuated with Gina, Helene, recovered from the fall, returns to her home.

Later Helene seeks solace in travel, after securing a divorce from Mario. In England she meets the son of a wealthy French ship-builder. The two fall in love and are married. They make a tour of the world, returning after a year to her husband's home in Havre.

Mario and Gina were married, but all has not gone well with their plans. With a wild desire for pleasure and excitement, Gina has thrown herself into the whirlpool of fast society in the big European capitals, and her expensive habits and propensity for gambling have wrecked the fortune of the young man. He is sued for debt, and to escape a jail sentence which hangs over him, he is forced to flee from his own country.

He goes to France, and there, penniless and without friends, assumes another name and secures employment as a laborer in a great ship-building yard, being placed by the foreman in the Submarine Department. Here Mario labors for many weary months.

Word is passed among the employees of the big plant, that their employer's son has returned. The men prepare a big floral horseshoe in honor of the occasion and draw lots among them for one to express their congratulations and esteem in a presentation speech. This falls to Mario.

In the tragic moment of their meeting, Helene and Mario are brought to a thorough realization of the awful gulf which separates them. Mario, overcome with shame and remorse, slinks from the house,

Wandering back to the shops, he assists in drawing in a diver who has become exhausted at his work. He volunteers to take the man's place and, getting into the diver's heavy outfit, he is lowered to the bottom of the sea. Immediately he cuts the air-tube and connecting lines, and the helpers, knowing his peril, cry for assistance and attempt a rescue. But they are too late to save the unfortunate man. Other divers descend into the water and after a search bring his lifeless body to the bank.

News of the accident spreads to the house and, through a field glass, Helene sees and recognizes her former husband as he is carried to the shop. The truth breaks upon her and she falls fainting.

Recovering consciousness, Helene kneels, and with all the fervor of her good and simple soul, prays to God to pardon the man whom she herself has already pardoned.

VICTOR.

AFTER ALL (Sept. 6).—Margie, the only child of a widow, is loved by two young men, Rob and Orin. After being wooed most ardently by both men, Margie finally decides in favor of Rob. One day when Rob is kissing her, Orin comes upon them and is about to kill Rob from a distance. Margie sees him, but Rob does not. She is able to protect Rob with her own body and get him out of range, then playfully coaxing him to his own cabin, she locks him in. Returning to Orin she denounces him. Orin pours out his tale of love and tells her he did it all to win her.

While they are talking Rob appears in the distance. At sight of his rival, Orin tells Margie he will climb the tree under which they are standing and listen to their conversation and will shoot Rob dead unless she informs him that she does not love him any more and will never speak to him again. Margie agrees and when Rob joins her, she dismisses him. Rob returns home and, packing up his few belongings, he takes his canoe and goes down the river. Margie is confronted by Orin when he comes down from his ambush and at seeing him she flies at him like a mountain wildcat and leaves him bewildered and stunned by her fury.

The next morning, Margie, learning that Rob had gone away, steals down to the landing from which Bob had departed, and sat there gazing down the river. Orin, who has followed her, attempts again to plead his cause, but being struck by her dumb and abject misery, his heart is softened and he decides to restore her happiness. Taking his canoe he follows after Rob and discovering his camp by means of the fire, he comes in upon Rob and confesses his brutal treatment of Margie. Rob, in his natural anger, strikes Orin, but the latter controls himself and does not retaliate. Rob returns and the lovers are reunited.

REX.

FROM THE WILD (Sept. 5).—A young boy is found in the wilds of the forest, living with the denizens of the jungle. Sorelle, a trapper, takes him and tries to tame him. For the sake of the trapper's child, a small girl, the boy remains and endeavors to become civilized.

Years later, the girl has grown to womanhood. The bear-man worships her. The father brings a young trapper home with him, with whom the girl falls in love. When he leaves, the joy goes out of her life. The bear-man watches her, brooding He thinks out a way to give her peace. In the silence of the night he leaves and tracks the young trapper until he steals upon him. He binds him and forces him to accompany him homeward. The bear-man stands guard without sleep during the night, cooks the meals and feeds the bound prisoner, forcing the march between times.

At last they reach Sorelle's home. The girl is outside and the bear-man brings his captive to her. When she realizes what he has done, she is furious. She feels disgraced and ashamed, and furiously orders the bear-man back to the wilds. He leaves bowed with grief, not understanding why she is angry because he brought back to her the man she loves. The girl apologizes to the trapper and finally has to confess that the bear-man believed she wanted the trapper.

The father arrives and hears the story. It begins to amuse the trapper and when evening falls, he sees the girl sitting alone, in pathetic pensiveness. The thought has taken root in his mind, and he acts upon it. So he and the girl stand, in each other's arms, while the bear-man is out in the forest, suffering alone.

THE GHOST OF A BARGAIN (Sept. 8).—They wanted a house. They called upon a real estate dealer. They discussed the price. That started the trouble. The real estate dealer and his wife wanted him to pay three thousand dollars. He wanted to pay two thousand. The real estate dealer very politely refused to sell the house for the sum in question, and the woman very impolitely told him what she thought of a piker.

He stubbornly insisted that he would buy that house for two thousand dollars. To all his repeated offers no reply was given, and when he called himself he was told the the house had been sold for three thousand dollars.

Then he got an idea. He investigated, and learned that the house had been sold to an aged couple. So he invested in a long chain, stole into the house that night, and began the ghost act. He would blow a horn and rattle the chain and the aged couple would imagine the rest. One night of that was enough and the new purchasers rushed down to the real estate office the next morning, and flatly destroyed the contract. But again his offer of two thousand dollars was rejected, and the house was disposed of to a newly married couple.

To start housekeeping in the vicinity of a ghost is not a particularly encouraging situation, and the couple participated in a heated discussion with the agent, the result of which was that the house forthwith became vacant.

Then the agent became suspicious. He planted a trap in the house, announced it was to be occupied, and altogether with another, both armed with guns, they awaited the coming of the ghost. And he did. He fell into the trap in a double sense, and was soon limping down the moonlit road, with both pursuers close behind.

An officer joined the pursuit, and soon the ghost's wife was appalled to see the white-clad figure burst into the house, followed by the real estate agent, his friend and the officer. There was only one way out of it—he had to buy the house—for three thousand dollars.

Increase Your Income

SEND FOR OUR

32 -- PAGE -- 32

EXCLUSIVE

MOVING PICTURE THEATRE Catalogue

—OF—

100 CLASSIFIED SOUVENIRS 100

AND COMPLETE PLANS NOW USED BY

THOUSANDS

OF THEATRES

PLAYING TO STANDING ROOM ONLY

— WRITE TODAY —

United States Factories Co.

500 Great Lakes Bldg., CHICAGO

Machines and Repair Parts

All standard makes. Send for list of repair parts today. State make machine.

We will buy your old picture machine or will allow toward the purchase of a new machine.

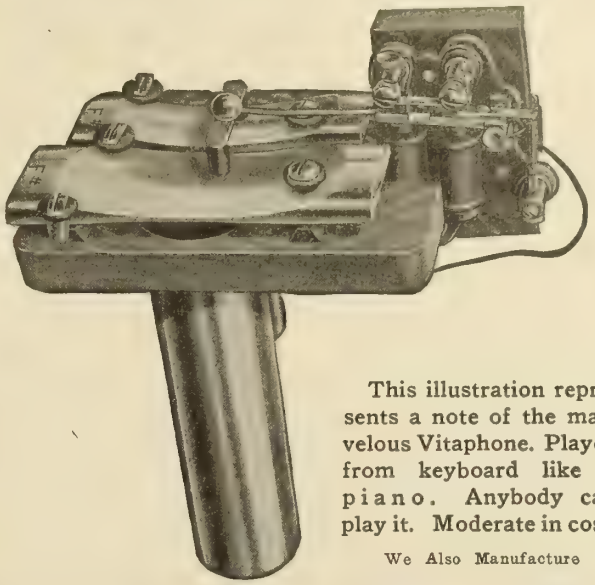
GIVE FULL PARTICULARS

Amusement Supply Company

107-A North Dearborn St., Chicago

Vitaphone

Is the Name of the Beautiful Instrument We Played at the National Convention in Chicago.



This illustration represents a note of the marvelous Vitaphone. Played from keyboard like a piano. Anybody can play it. Moderate in cost.

We Also Manufacture

NEW ELECTRICAL CATHEDRAL CHIMES

played from Keyboard like a Piano. The Most Beautiful Chimes in the World.

FAMOUS MUSICAL ELECTRICAL BELLS

Improved in Construction. Thirteen Hundred Sets Sold During Past Year

Xylophones, Marimbaphones, Organ Chimes
Aluminum Chimes, Parsifal Bells
Orchestra Bells, Etc.

We will be pleased to see exhibitors at our new $250,000 plant during the Convention.

J. C. DEAGAN

Berteau and East Ravenswood Park Avenue

CHICAGO, ILL.

WANTED

Negative Developer. Must be capable of producing Eclair quality of work. Apply

ECLAIR COMPANY

225 W. 42nd St: New York City

MOVING PICTURE LECTURES

HEAR

Louise M. Marion

in her

NEW ILLUSTRATED POEMS AND FEATURE LECTURES

Highest Testimonials. Now Booking.

LOUISE M. MARION

459 West 23rd Street - NEW YORK

Terms Reasonable.

HIGH CLASS ATTRACTION FOR THEATRES CHURCHES AND SCHOOLS

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—Experienced Film Man for inside. Give reference. Address L., care of Moving Picture World.

WANTED—Manager for Moving Picture Show, 400 seating capacity. Address LYRIC FILM SUPPLY CO., Terre Haute, Ind.

WANTED QUICK—Pianist who can play light comedy parts, etc. Address BARNARD'S MOVING PICTURE THEATRE, Millbrook, N. Y.

WANTED—Assistant General Manager for Film Manufacturing Company. Must be experienced in all departments and capable of taking full charge. Address B. A. F., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

WANTED—Experienced Scenario Editor. Address B. A. F., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

WANTED—By the best plant in its field, first-class Mechanic, accustomed to repairing Perforators, Printers & Plant Machinery. Address EXPERT, Moving Picture World N. Y. City.

WANTED—Pianists to send name and address of theater where playing for big collection of FREE MUSIC. All New York's latest hits—free for a postal. Most remarkable offer ever made. Address S. & B. PUB. CO., 124 W. 45th St., N. Y. City.

MISCELLANEOUS.

AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHERS—Will buy or exchange old negatives. Kodak film or slides of local interest. Write for particulars. Address PAUL F. MAYOTT, 626 Grand Ave., Milwaukee, Wis.

105 Magic Tricks 25c. Also free Catalogue Magic and Novelties. Address NATIONAL MAGIC SCHOOL, Room 24, 1193 Broadway, N. Y.

BROTHER OPERATOR—Just try one 10c bottle of my Oil. Address GEORGE BARNARD, Millbrook, N. Y.

FIRST AID TO SCENARIOS!—Leading Scenario Editor and Author personally criticises and improves photoplays, with advice on sales. $1.00 for each scenario. Must be enclosed with MSS. and stamped self addressed envelope. Address EUSTACE HALE BALL, 7080 Metropolitan Bldg., N. Y. City.

LIGHTING OUTFIT FOR SALE—Valuable information along this line free, by people with twenty years' experience with gasoline engines. The people that use gasoline engines improve them, they find the weak places and rectify them. We claim to be experts. Write us your wants. Address THE SPRAKERS, Rich Hill, Mo.

THEATRES WANTED.

WANTED—Will buy Moving Picture Show. What have you to offer? Address AL BOWDISH, Marion, Ohio.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

WURLITZER PIANO—$975.00 instrument. Will sell cheap, cash or payments. Address F. A. BECKMAN, Ottawa, Ohio.

PATHE—New. Shopworn, complete M. P. Outfit. Like new. Cost $225.00. Will sell $160. Powers No. 5 complete, $75.00. Simplex, new, shopworn, $200.00. Cost $275.00. 2 10-Hour Direct Excello Lamps, like new, $80.00. All goods shipped for examination on receipt of deposit. Address STERN, 43 East 21st St., N. Y. City.

FOR SALE—141 Plain, 99 Leather Seat and Back, Anti Panic Chairs in good condition. Price, .75 and $1.25 respectively. Will sell all or part F. O. B. Akron. Address DREAMLAND THEATRE, Akron, Ohio.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

YOUNG LADY—Wants position as piano player. Sight reader. Pennsylvania or New York states preferred. Address K. E. B., care of Moving Picture World.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Powers No. 6 Cameragraph Little Giant Indicator. Asbestos Booth in first-class condition. Used during three Summer months only. Will sell outfit for $300.00. Address FIETH, Carbondale, Pa.

NESTOR.

ON THE BORDER LINE (Sept. 2).—Robert Wilson, a stalwart Westerner, is married to a pretty Eastern girl. He has brought her to live upon a spacious ranch. Robert is proud of his holdings and loves the vastness of it all, and he tries to instill this same feeling into his wife. Poor Millie pines for the city and the bigness and the loneliness fill her with weariness. Robert does not notice how dissatisfied Millie is.

The lands next to one of Robert's boundary lines are owned by two fraudulent land promoters who find it necessary to obtain a portion of Robert's ranch. Henry Weyburn, a surveyor, is paid a large sum of money to impersonate a government surveyor and to successfully deceive him into the idea that he is not entitled to a large part of his ranch.

Weyburn is invited to Robert's ranch for a visit in order that they may talk matters over carefully. Being a man of good dress and polish, he finds it easy to get on good terms with Millie, in fact he provides the diversion that she is pining for.

Weyburn works cunningly and well; he deceives both Robert and Millie, and he persuades Robert that a portion of his land belongs to the United States Government. He flatters and makes love to Millie, until he makes her think that she has a real grievance and finally succeeds in making her agree to elope with him. Robert sees nothing of this domestic trouble. At the crucial moment a telegram arrives from a government official telling Robert to hold Weyburn who is wanted for fraudulent land deals. Weyburn is on the point of departure when he is stopped by Robert, and a fight occurs in which Robert detains Weyburn, but is shot in the arm. The sheriff arrives and Weyburn is arrested and taken away. Millie no longer yearns for the East, and her love is now all for her husband and his land.

THE EVIDENCE (Sept. 4).—John Bronson is in straitened circumstances and is reading a letter from his son, Bob, as his daughter May enters. "Dear Father and Sister:—Don't worry about the money. I have decided to quit college and go to work. I start for home at once. Yours lovingly, Bob."

Soon Bob arrives, and the next day he starts out to seek employment. At the Bar B ranch, he is given a trial position as manager, and at once writes his father. "Dear Father and Sister: Have secured a position as manager of the Bar B ranch. Tell Mr. Morgan that I will pay the interest on the note. Lovingly, Bob." A short time later, Bob receives the following letter. "Mr. Bob Bronson, Dear Sir: Will call as per your request to collect interest on your father's note. This must be paid to-day. Yours truly, M. H. Morgan."

Mr. Morgan arrived, and Bob paid the interest which he had gotten in advance from his employer, Frank King. In taking the note from his wallet, ete, the halfbreed, had seen that it contained a large sum of money, so when Mr. Morgan hung his coat up in the office, after having put the wallet in it. Pete crept cautiously to the window and searching inside, secured what he thought was the coat with the wallet. It proved to be without the wallet, however, for Mr. Morgan had just taken the wallet from his pocket to put the extra money in which Bob had given him. Bob then hung his coat on the same nail that Mr. Morgan's had, and that gentleman placed his wallet in the young man's coat, which was presently put on by Bob and missed by the other until Bob had reached home. In the meanwhile Pete had discovered that he had the wrong coat, and thrown it away, only taking from the pocket a fancy handkerchief. Bob, riding home, had picked up the coat and taken it with him. At home, being unable to explain how he came by the wallet, his father believed that he had stolen the money, as did his new employer and Mr. Morgan, who had followed in hot pursuit, until the latter saw the handkerchief which the halfbreed had taken and forced a confession from him, greatly to the relief of all concerned.

THE GIRLS AND THE CHAPERON (Sept. 6).—This subject will be released on this date instead of August 30th, as announced in last week's issue. A synopsis was published on page 914 of that number, and a Nestor two-reel subject entitled "Maud Muller" will be released on August 30.

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS.

New York, N. Y.—Santo Domingo Amusement Co., operates moving picture shows, capital $50,000, inc. E. E. Noble, E. V. Mann.

Dunlap, Ia.—W. C Wilkins has leased the moving picture theater here Galvestin, Texas.—Mr. Campbell has purchased a moving picture theater near here.

Ames, Ia.—The Scenic Theater here was sold to Mr. H. L. Coulson of Valisca.

New Rockford, S. D.—A. P. Blonde, a former printer of Devils Lake, will establish a moving picture theater here

Orlando, Fla.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

St. Louis, Mo.—A new $30,000 moving picture theater will be erected on Prairie and St. Louis Avenue by the William Goldman Amusement Co.

Reno, Cal.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Baltimore, Md.—Plans are being prepared to erect a new moving picture theater here on Hoffman Street.

Cantril, Ia.—Mr. J. F. Harbeidge and Mr. J. J. Irvin have purchased the moving picture theater of Carr & Prosser of Pulaski.

Coin, Ia.—Johnson & Miller of Burlington Junction, have rented the Mrs. Daugherty Building, and will convert it into a moving picture theater.

Westville, Okla.—H. Williams is planning to erect a new opera house here.

Waterloo, Ia.—Work has commenced on the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Jasper, Ind.—A. W. Flick has purchased the nickelodeon of Spraver & Schneider.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—A contract has been awarded for the erection of a new theater at the corner of Wayne and Clinton Streets.

Dubuque, Ia.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new theater here.

Davenport, Ia.—A new moving picture theater has been opened up here at 324 West 2nd Street, by J. Harry Blanchard.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Anderson & Houpt are going to build a new moving picture theater here on Franklin and Clearfield Streets.

Mr. Exhibitor — This paper thoroughly covers the field. 100 pages every week. Are you getting it mailed to your address? Domestic, $3.00. Canada, $3.50. Foreign, $4.00.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD, Box 226, Madison Sq. Station, N. Y. City

EXHIBITORS, GIVE SUMMER RESORT LOTS AS SOUVENIRS!

20 coupons, costing same as ordinary coupon tickets, entitle holder to 30x80-foot lot at LAKE BREEZE GROVE, near Rogers City, Mich. Suitable for summer home. Perfect title. Warranty deed.

MICHIGAN CENTRAL REALTY CO., Alpena, Mich.

The cleaner sets between the rewinds and does the work as the film is rewound.
Removes oil and dust.
Guaranteed not to injure film.
Prevents rain.
No trouble to operator. Write for free literature.
Price $10.00. Pads $1.00 per hundred

Mortimer Film Cleaner Company
703 Fidelity Bldg., Portland, Me.

CLEAN YOUR FILMS FOR One Cent Each

If your Exchange cannot supply you order from us.

INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS, INC.

5 WEST 14th ST., NEW YORK CITY

IMPORTERS AND EXPORTERS

DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC FILMS

INTERNATIONAL EXCLUSIVE FEATURES IF

NEW AND SECOND HAND FILMS

OF EVERY MAKE AND DESCRIPTION

FEATURE FILMS A SPECIALTY

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

Fort Wayne Electric Works

OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY

1402 Broadway

FORT WAYNE INDIANA 733

Make Your Own Films of Special Events!

Buy the Junior Professional Film making outfit comprising the World's Greatest Camera, Printer and developing outfit—you would not hesitate for a minute if you would know how good it is—or—buy the camera only and let me do the finishing work—better films as what some manufacturers turn out. Everything of supreme quality for the projecting room and the laboratory. Mirror Vitae Projector, the best machine in the world from which all others have been duped—with single arc slide dissolvers, something others cannot offer you, special lenses for any size picture—film stock, slides, repairing catalogues to your service.

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER,

219 Second Ave., near 14th St., New York.

Direction J. D. Williams Management Wm H. Bell

INTERNATIONAL PICTURES

Controlled by

The Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Company, Ltd

Capital, £200,000.

The World's largest dealers in Motion Picture Films, machines and accessories. We are on the market for everything Biographic. No Moving Picture Film and equipment proposition too large for consideration. Our Specialty—Exclusive Australasian Rights on the best long feature subjects produced, and the latest successful supply novelties.

PRINCIPAL EXCHANGES.

610 George Street, Sydney, New South Wales. Melbourne, Brisbane, Perth and Wellington, New Zealand.

Send samples and communications to our purchasing offices as follows—J. A. Hayden, Dewar House, 11 Haymarket, London, England. Louis M. Noto, 146 W. 23rd Street, New York City.

IMPORTANT:—When writing us direct remember that letters with insufficient postage are delayed

The Life of Buffalo Bill

In Three Reels

100 Real Indians. 300 People. Now booking for Western Pennsylvania, including Harrisburg. Don't miss this Great Feature.

IMPERIAL FEATURE FILM CO.

121 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Feature Photoplay Company

IMPORTERS AND EXPORTERS of Feature Films

H. A. LANDE, Proprietor

145 West 45th St., NEW YORK CITY

MOTION PICTURE SUPPLIES

PHOTOGRAPHIC SUPPLIES WHOLESALE and RETAIL THEATRE SEATING

EDISON
MOTIOGRAPH
POWERS
SIMPLEX
STANDARD

MACHINES

ARCO
BIO
ELECTRA
EXCELLO
SIEMEN

CARBONS

Ticket Hangers Reels Carrying Cases Rewinders Machine Parts Disinfectants Asbestos Booths Exit Signs

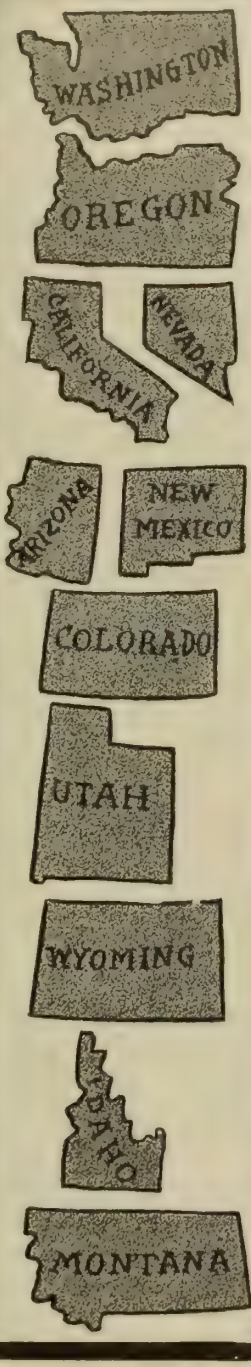
Everything for the Motion Picture Theatre except the Film

PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT Co., 21 E. 14th St., N. Y. City Phone Stuyvesant 2478



STATE RIGHTS SELLING FOR

Sarah Bernhardt

IN

"LA TOSCA"

This is the very first time a Bernhardt production has ever been offered to State Rights buyers at a flat price. No bonuses. It is priced so that every one connected may make a profit. Priced so that every regular Exhibitor can afford to exhibit it and take a profit. It is right down to a live-and-let-live basis.

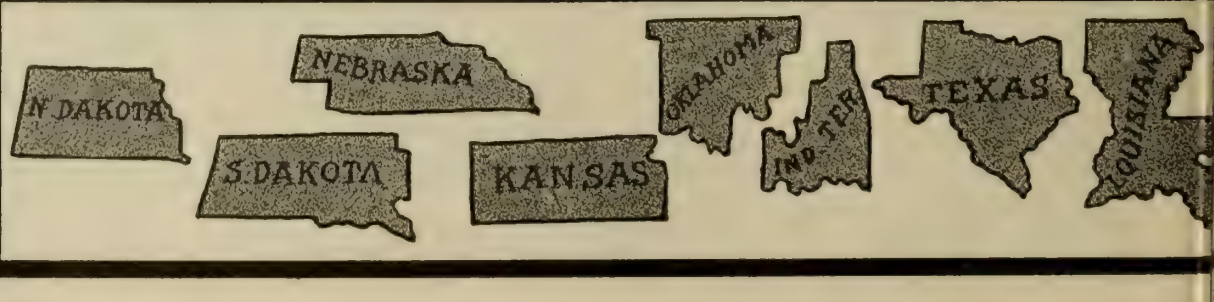
Remember, Feature and Exchange buyers, that every previous Bernhardt has been priced sky-high and honey-combed with contract restrictions. This one isn't. It will camp right on the profit side of your ledger.

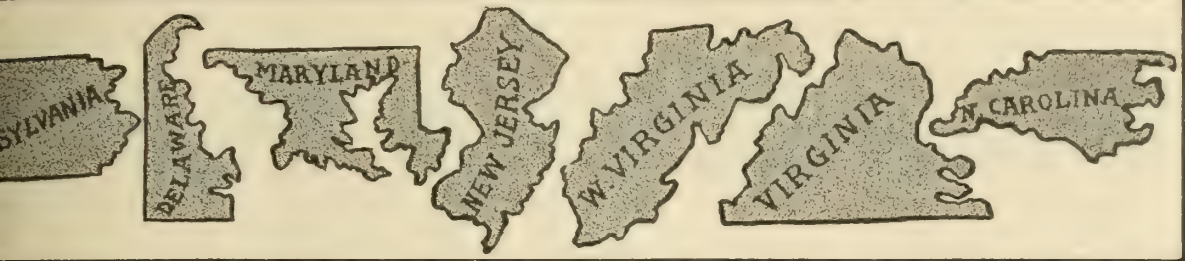
We are at your service. Ask for more extended particulars

"UNIVERSAL FEATURES"

225 West 42nd Street, NEW YORK CITY

J. D. TIPPETT, Manager





F

STATE RIGHTS SELLING FOR

LITTLE MISS LUCETTE

IN

"The Outcast Child"

(TWO REELS)

This is a Paris-ECLAIR with an entirely new and different theme. It has a story which every woman and child will see. They'll send their neighbors to see it. The scenes of the cattle stampede and the escaped giant python snake are sensational to the last letter. It is a play which will please the masses. That is all a feature need be to make money and satisfaction for all concerned.

We have some territory still open for "THE POWER OF DESTRUCTION." This feature is carrying its buyers straight ahead on The Highway of Success and Profit.

We are at your service. Ask for more extended particulars

"UNIVERSAL FEATURES"

225 West 42nd Street, NEW YORK CITY

J. D. TIPPETT, Manager

F

SPECIAL

COMING SEPT. 16th, 1912

CINES "Daughter of the Spy" 2 REELS

Romantic Story of Revolutionary Days Dramatically Portrayed in which Daughter of Spy gives her life in vain attempt to save her Nobleman Lover.

FOUR REELS

A Wonderful Presentation by Pathe

SEPT. 9th 1912

THE BLIGHTED SON

Story of a prodigal son who, having killed his mother and sister and made a street beggar of his aged father by his extravagances and wild deeds, suffers a career of unbelievable hardships, but finally returns home—a man. The prodigal's life dramatically told in wonderful pictures.

AUG. 26 2 REELS

FIRE AT SEA

Great interest already manifested in this exciting story of the sea

GENERAL

FEATURES

AUG. 19, 1912 VITAGRAPH'S Rip Van Winkle TWO REELS.
A GREAT FILM FROM A GREAT PLAY MADE FAMOUS BY THE LATE JOSEPH JEFFERSON

AUG. 12, 1912 CINES Rameses, King of Egypt TWO REELS.
ROMANCE IN THE DAYS OF THE SPLENDOR OF THE PHARAOHS

JULY 29, 1912 PATHE'S Don Juan & Charles V TWO REELS.
A WONDERFUL OLD WORLD STORY OF LIFE AT THE COURT OF SPAIN (COLORED FILM)

JULY 22, 1912 KALEM'S Siege of Petersburg TWO REELS.
A MASTERFUL PRESENTATION OF THE CIVIL WAR PERIOD

JULY 15, 1912 VITAGRAPH'S The Money Kings THREE REELS.
A VITAL SUBJECT SUPERBLY HANDLED BY THESE COMPETENT PLAYERS

JULY 8, 1912 PATHE'S The Adopted Child TWO REELS.
A FILM FULL OF HUMAN INTEREST AND INTENSE HEART THROBS

JULY 1, 1912 KALEM'S Tragedy of the Desert TWO REELS.
A FAITHFUL PORTRAIT OF THE ROMANCE AND TRAGEDY OF THE SEA OF SAND

JUNE 24, 1912 PATHE'S A Nation's Peril TWO REELS.
AN EXCITING FILM WITH A MARVELOUSLY THRILLING BOAT EXPLOSION

JUNE 17, 1912 VITAGRAPH'S The French Spy THREE REELS.
AN ENTHRALLING STORY OF MILITARY LIFE IN REAL VITAGRAPH STYLE

JUNE 10, 1912 EDISON'S Martin Chuzzlewit THREE REELS.
DICKENS' FAMOUS CHARACTERS ARE BROUGHT TO LIFE—PERFECT

FILM CO.

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

Aug. 22—The Bandit of Point Loma (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 26—The Jealous Rage (Dr.).....
Aug. 28—The Lonesome Trail Pioneers (Dr.)..
Aug. 8—The Girl and the Gun (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 29—The Will of James Waldron (Drama)..1000
Sept. 2—The Greaser and the Weakling (Dr.)..1000
Sept. 4—The Marked Gun (Drama).....1000
Sept. 5—The Stranger at Coyote (Drama).....1000
Sept. 9—The Dawn of Passion (Drama).....1000
Sept. 11—Vengeance that Failed (Drama).....1000

"101" BISON (N. Y. M. P. CO.).

Aug. 6—The Reformed Outlaw (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—The Garrison Triangle (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 13—The Bugle Call (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 16—The Other Girl (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 20—The Buffalo Hunt (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 23—The Reckoning (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 27—The Bandit's Gratitude (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 30—The White Lie (2 reels) (Dr.).....2000
Sept. 3—For the Honor of the Tribe (Dr.)....
Sept. 6—An Old Tune (Dr.).....

BISON (Universal).

Aug. 13—The Widow's Claim (Drama).....
Aug. 17—The Shot That Failed (Drama).....
Aug. 20—How He Made Good (Com.).....
Aug. 27—For Love, Life and Riches (Drama)..
Aug. 31—A Shot In the Dark (Drama).....
Sept. 3—The Arizona Land Swindle (Drama.)..
Sept. 7—Her Last Resort (Drama).....

CHAMPION.

Aug. 5—What a Woman Will Do (Drama)....
Aug. 12—For His Child (Drama).....
Aug. 19—The Bum and the Bomb (Comedy)...
Aug. 26—The Foundling (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—The Maid of the Rocks (Drama).....

COMET.

July 29—Reconciled in Reno (Com.).....
Aug. 3—The Hold-Up in Buckeye Canyon (Dr.)
Aug. 5—A Bachelor's Romance (Dramatic)...1000
Aug. 10—Hold-Up in Buckeye Canyon (Dr.)...1000
Aug. 12—Two Women and One Man (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 17—Western Chivalry (Drama) 1000
Aug. 19—House of "No Children" (Com.).....1000
Aug. 24—The Deputy's Duty (Drama).....1000
Aug. 26—A Divided House (Dr.).....
Aug. 31—The Moonshiner's Task (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—The Dentist's Dilemma (Comedy)....

ECLAIR.

Aug. 22—Robin Hood (3 reels; Drama).....
Aug. 25—The Will (Drama).....
Aug. 25—A Moslem Lady's Day (Novelty)....
Aug. 27—Dolls (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—The Passing Parade (Tableaux).....
Sept. 1—Two Brave Little Hearts (Dr.).....
Sept. 3—The Actress Pulls the Strings (Com.)
Sept. 5—The Guest at the Parsonage (Drama)
Sept. 8—The Kind Old Man (Com.-Dr.).....
Sept. 10—The Haunted Bachelor (Comedy).....
Sept. 10—The Marshal's Honeymoon (Comedy)..
Sept. 12—The Rancher's Lottery (Com.-Dr.)....
Sept. 15—A Marriage of Convenience (Comedy)
Sept. 15—Around Constantinople (Scenic).....

GAUMONT.

Aug. 27—The Story of Chopin (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—Marriage on the Run (Com.-Dr.).....
Sept. 3—The Refugee's Casket (Drama).....
Sept. 4—Gaumont's Weekly (Topical).....
Sept. 5—A Midnight Encounter (Com.-Dr.)....
Sept. 5—The Launching of the Imperator (Topical). .....).....
Sept. 10—Love's Serenade (Drama).....
Sept. 11—Gaumont's Weekly (Topical).....
Sept. 12—The Plague-Stricken City (Drama)...

GEM.

July 30—Back to Her Own (Dr.).....
Sept. 3—The Celebrated Case (2 reels) (Drama)
Aug. 6—'Neath the Homespun (Drama).....
Aug. 13—Babette (Drama).....
Aug. 20—White Dove's Sacrifice (Drama).....
Aug. 27—Baby Fingers (Drama).....

GREAT NORTHERN.

July 27—Don't Go On a Spree (Comedy).....
Aug. 3—The King's Power (Drama).....
Aug. 10—Thou Shalt Not Kill (Drama).....
Aug. 10—The Springlock (Comedy).....
Aug. 10—When the Cat's Away (Comedy)....
Aug. 10—Thou Shalt Not Kill (Drama).....
Aug. 17—The Prodigal's Return (Drama).....
Aug. 24—For Her Sister's Sake (Drama)..... 944
Aug. 31—Love is Blind (Dr.)..... 943
Sept. 7—The Afflicted Governor (Comedy).....
Sept. 7—The Spring Lock (Comedy).....
Sept. 14—Aunt Jane's Will (Comedy-Drama)...

IMP.

Aug. 12—Big Hearted Sim (Drama).....1000
Aug. 15—In Old Tennessee (2 reels; Drama)..2000
Aug. 17—Kidnapping Dolly (Comedy).....
Aug. 17—In and Around Charleston, S. C. (Sc.)
Aug. 19—Padrone's Daughter (Drama).....
Aug. 22—The Castaway (Drama).....
Aug. 24—Chappie, the Chaperone (Comedy)....
Aug. 24—The Great Geysers of Yellowstone Park (Scenic) .....
Aug. 26—Making Good (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—A Happy Family.....
Aug. 31—A Case of Smallpox.....
Aug. 31—Her Burglar.....
Sept. 2—The Love Test (Drama).....1000
Sept. 5—Tares of the Wheat (Drama).....1000
Sept. 7—Queenie and the Cannibal (Comedy)..
Sept. 7—Lem's Hot Chocolate (Comedy).....

LUX.

Aug. 9—A Race for Liberty (Dr.)..... 580
Aug. 9—The Postman's Escapade (Com.)..... 272
Aug. 16—Tommy Saves His Little Sister (Dr.)
Aug. 23—Uncle's Favorite Pudding (Com.).... 744
Aug. 23—Views of the Livran (Scenic)..... 239
Aug. 30—The Modern Child (Drama)..... 990
Sept. 6—A Cripple's Folly (Drama)..... 990
Sept. 13—Tommy's Playmate (Drama)..... 980

MAJESTIC.

Aug. 18—Toodles (Comedy) .....
Aug. 18—A Game of Chess (Com.-Dr.).....
Aug. 20—The New Butler (Comedy).....
Aug. 25—A Corner in Kisses (Com.).....
Aug. 27—A Disputed Claim (Dr.).....
Sept. 1—The Chaperon (Comedy).....
Sept. 3—Mabel's Beau (Drama).....
Sept. 8—The Pleasures of Camping (Comedy)..
Sept. 8—Willie's Dog (Comedy).....
Sept. 10—Lola's Sacrifice (Drama).....

MILANO.

August 10—Playthings of Fate (2 reels, Dr.)..
Aug. 17—Their Guardian Angel (Drama).....
Aug. 24—The Courage of Fear (Drama).....
Aug. 31—A Circus Romance (Drama).....
Sept. 7—Victims of Ingratitude (Drama).....

NESTOR.

Aug. 7—Fatty of E Z Ranch (Comedy).....
Aug. 9—A Mexican Mix-up (Drama).....
Aug. 12—A Tale of the Foothills (Drama)....
Aug. 14—How Steve Made Good (Com.-Dr.)..
Aug. 16—The Miner's Widow (Drama).....
Aug. 19—When the Heart Calls (Drama).....
Aug. 21—The Alibi (Drama).....
Aug. 23—A Stubborn Cupid.....
Aug. 26—The Story of a Wallet (Dr.).....
Aug. 28—Uncle Bill (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—Maud Mueller (2 reels) (Drama).....
Sept. 2—On the Border Line (Drama).....
Sept. 4—The Evidence (Drama).....
Sept. 6—The Girls and the Chaperon (Comedy)

POWERS.

Aug. 21—Her Diary (Drama).....
Aug. 23—What the Milk Did (Com.-Dr.).....
Aug. 28—An Exciting Outing.....
Aug. 28—U. S. Army Manoeuvres (Naval)....
Aug. 30—Life's Lesson (Drama).....

RELIANCE.

Aug. 3—The Wood Nymph (Drama).....
Aug. 7—Phillip Steele (2 reels) (Dr.).....
Aug. 10—The Two Fathers (Dr.).....
Aug. 14—Order in the Court (Comedy).....
Aug. 14—The Old Swimming Hole (Comedy)..
Aug. 17—A Man Among Men (Drama).....
Aug. 21—One Against One (Drama).....
Aug. 24—North of 53 (Drama).....
Aug. 28—The Secret Service Man (Drama)....
Aug. 31—Thelma (2 reels) (Dramatic).....
Sept. 4—The Heart of a Cossack (Drama)....
Sept. 7—The Bully and the Shrimp (Drama)...
Sept. 11—Love Knows no Laws (Drama).....
Sept. 14—For Love of Her (Drama).....

REPUBLIC.

July 15—The All-seeing Eye (Dr.).....
July 22—Evil be to Him Who Evil Thinks (Dr.)
July 29—A House-top Romance (Dr.).....
July 29—Evolution of a Duck Egg (Edu.).....
Aug. 5—The Octoroon's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—The Borrowing Simp (Comedy).....
Aug. 19—The Curse of Drink (Drama).....
Aug. 26—The Pickaninnies and the Watermelons (Com.) .....

REX.

Aug. 22—An Old Fashioned Girl (Drama).....
Aug. 25—The Leader of the Band (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—A Japanese Idyll (Drama) .....
Sept. 1—In Honor Bound (Drama).....
Sept. 5—From the Wild (Drama).....
Sept. 8—The Ghost of a Bargain (Drama).....

SOLAX.

Aug. 16—The Strike (Drama).....
Aug. 21—His Double (Drama).....
Aug. 23—The Equine Spy (2 reels) (Drama)...
Aug. 28—Phantom Paradise (Drama).....
Aug. 30—Playing Trumps (Drama).....
Sept. 4—The Fight in the Dark (Drama).....
Sept. 6—Open to Proposals (Comedy).....
Sept. 11—Treasures on the Wing (Comedy)....
Sept. 13—The Soul of the Violin (Drama).....

THANHOUSER.

Aug. 25—When a Count Counted (Dr.).....
Aug. 27—Lucile (reels 1 and 2) (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—Lucile (reel 3) (Dr.).....
Sept. 1—The Capture of New York (Military and Educational) .....
Sept. 3—The Voice of Conscience (Drama)....
Sept. 6—His Father's Son (Drama).....
Sept. 8—Don't Pinch My Pup (Comedy-Drama)
Sept. 10—A Star Reborn (Drama).....
Sept. 13—The Birth of Lotus Blossom (Drama)

VICTOR.

Aug. 9—The Mill Buyers (Drama).....
Aug. 16—The Chance Shot (Drama).....
Aug. 23—Her Cousin Fred (Drama).....
Aug. 30—The Winning Punch (Dr.).....
Sept. 4—Love Will Find a Way (Comedy)....
Sept. 6—His Weakness (Drama).....

MISCELLANEOUS.

NEW YORK FILM CO.

July 15—Lights and Shadows of Chinatown (Dr.).....

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY COMPANY.

July 15—The Penalty (Dr.).....
July 29—The Circus Girl (Dr.).....

GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM COMPANY.

March 18—The Call of a Woman.....3000
April 8—Cell Thirteen.....2000
April 22—The Dead Man's Child.....3000
April 15—The Dead Man's Child, 3 Reels (Dr.)

SHAMROCK.

May 7—A Gypsy's Love (Dr.).....
May 11—Algernon's Busy Day (Com.).....
May 14—On the Verge (Dr.).....
May 18—Algernon's Busy Day (Com.).....
May 21—The Thorny Path (Dr.).....
May 25—A Cold Reception (Com.).....
May 25—The Kissing Germ (Com.).....
May 28—White Fawn (Dr.).....
May 31—A Petticoat Ranch Boss (Com.).....

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS THE BIG TICKET. ANY PRINTING ANY COLORS

5,000	- -	$1.25	20,000	- -	$4.60	50,000	- -	$7.50
10,000	- -	$2.50	25,000	- -	$5.50	100,000	- -	$10.00

GET THE SAMPLES STOCK TICKETS, 6 CENTS

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - - Shamokin, Pa.

ELECTRA

PINK LABEL

•TRADE MARK•

CARBONS

ARE A GUARANTEE OF PERFECT PROJECTION

IT WILL PAY YOU

It is not what you pay for films, it's what films pay you that makes them valuable. If you require packed houses, which of course you do, YOU MUST put up a good show. Project films that will not only make your theater the talk of the town, but will also appeal directly to your audiences and so insure you permanent patronage. We are in a position to assist you in this direction, BECAUSE WE PROCURE EVERY FEATURE SUBJECT WORTH PROCURING. YES, IT WILL PAY YOU TO BOOK ALL THE FEATURES

WITH

Feature Film Co.

108 East 12th Street, New York

Any Experienced Operator Will Tell You To Use

3 in One

Because he has tried all the Moving Picture machine oils and knows that 3 in One is the best and most economical. It lubricates perfectly star wheel, fly wheel, shutter and every other part of the entire mechanism.

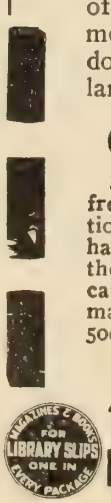
3 in One cleans and polishes like new, theater seats, piano, music racks, electric fans and scores of other things "in front" and also back of the curtain. Absolutely prevents rust on all metal surfaces. Try it indoors and then outdoors, too—on your metal signs, black iron lamps and ornaments, hinges, etc.

Get Your Free Bottle Today

Send right this minute for a generous free sample and the free 3 in One Dictionary. Then, give this good oil the hardest test. After you're satisfied, after the test has convinced you, remember you can buy a half-pint for a half-dollar (M. P. machine size) and save money. 10c, 25c, 50c, everywhere.

3 IN ONE OIL CO.

42 N A Broadway New York City



LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.
Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, C. G. P. C., Cines, Selig, Vitagraph.
Wednesday—Edison, Eclipse, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.
Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Pathe, Selig.
Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, C. G. P. C., Vitagraph.
Saturday—Edison, Essanay, Cines, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

August 15—An Interrupted Elopement (Com.)..
August 15—The Tragedy of a Dress Suit (Com.)
Aug. 19—With the Enemy's Help (Drama)....1000
Aug. 22—A Change of Spirit (Drama).....1000
Aug. 26—Mr. Grouch at the Seashore (Com.)....
Aug. 26—Through Dumb Luck (Com.).....
Aug. 29—A Pueblo Legend (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—In the North Woods (Drama).....
Sept. 5—Getting Rid of Trouble (Comedy)....
Sept. 5—He Must Have a Wife (Comedy)....
Sept. 9—An Unseen Enemy (Drama).....
Sept. 12—Blind Love (Drama).....

CINES.

(G. Kleine.)

Aug. 20—A Matter of Pride (Drama).....1000
Aug. 24—A Picture C. O. D. (Comedy)..... 470
Aug. 24—Jenkins, the Watchman (Comedy)... 250
Aug. 24—Modern Naples (Scenic)..... 305
Aug. 27—The Bride of Lammermoor (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 31—Richard the Lion-hearted (Dr.).....1070
Sept. 3—A Tragedy of Long Ago (Drama)....1000
Sept. 7—The Sacking of Rome (Historical-Dr.) 770
Sept. 7—Picturesque Sardinia, Italy (Scenic).. 242
Sept. 10—Scenes Along the Salerno Coast, Italy (Scenic) 140
Sept. 10—The Conspiracy of Catiline (Drama).. 885
Sept. 14—Honors Divided (Drama).....1075

EDISON.

Aug. 2—The Lord and the Peasant (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 3—Ninth International Red Cross Conference, Washington, D. C., May 7 17, 1912 (Top)..... 700
Aug. 3—Mary Had a Little Lamb (Com.)..... 300
Aug. 6—In His Father's Steps (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 7—Marjorie's Diamond Ring (Com.)....1000
Aug. 9—The Librarian (Dr.)..... 980
Aug. 10—The City of Washington, the Capital of the United States (Scenic)..... 960
August 13—A Dangerous Lesson (Drama).....1000
August 14—Holding the Fort (Comedy).....1000
August 16—The Harbinger of Peace (Drama)..1000
August 17—Spring Log Driving, Maine (Ind.)..1000
Aug. 20—The Street Beautiful (Edu. Dr.)....1000
Aug. 21—Mr. Pickwick's Predicament (Com.)..1000
Aug. 23—The Cub Reporter (Drama).....1000
Aug. 24—The War on the Mosquito (Edu.)....1000
Aug. 27—Alone in New York (Drama).....1000
Aug. 28—Helping John (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Aug. 30—The Boy and the Girl (Drama).....1000
Aug. 31—Simia (Scenic) 1000
Sept. 3—The Triangle (Comedy-Drama).....1000
Sept. 4—Aladdin Up-to-Date (Comedy).....1000
Sept. 6—Believe Me, if All Those Endearing Young Charms (Dramatic).....1000
Sept. 7—Bridget's Sudden Wealth (Comedy).. 600
Sept. 7—Opening of the Y. M. C. A. Playground, Lynchburg, Va., (Descriptive). 400
Sept. 10—The Manufacture of Paper, Maine (Industrial). 1000
Sept. 11—The Stranger and the Taxicab (Com.).1000
Sept. 13—The Dam Builder (Drama).....1000
Sept. 14—The Rescue, Cure and Education of Blind Babies (Educational).....1000

ESSANAY.

Aug. 1—Her Hour of Triumph—(Dr.).....1000
Aug. 2—The Browns Have Visitors (Com.)...1000
Aug. 3—The Loafer's Mother (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 6—The New Church Organ (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 8—The Old Wedding Dress (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—The Tale of a Cat (Com.).....1000
Aug. 10—The Little Sheriff (Com.-Dr.).....1000
August 13—Broncho Billy's Last Hold-up (Dr.).1000
August 15—An Adamless Eden (Comedy).....1000
August 16—The Magic Wand (Juvenile).....1000
August 17—On the Moonlight Trail (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 20—The Return of Becky (Drama).....1000
Aug. 22—A Corner in Whiskers (Comedy).....1000
Aug. 23—Her Adopted Father (Drama).....1000
Aug. 24—Broncho Billy's Escapade (Drama)..1000
Aug. 27—Alkali Ike Plays the Devil (W. Com.).1000
Aug. 29—Three to One (Com.).....1000
Aug. 30—The Hermit (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Aug. 31—Broncho Billy for Sheriff (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 3—Back to the Old Farm (Drama)....1000
Sept. 5—The Wildman (Comedy).....1000
Sept. 6—Twilight (Drama) 1000

KALEM.

Aug. 21—The Frenzy of Firewater (Drama)....1000
Aug. 23—The Beauty Parlor of Stone Gulch (Comedy) 1000
Aug. 24—Rube Marquard Wins (Drama).....1323
Aug. 24—Rube Marquard Wins (Dramatic)....1000
Aug. 26—The Little Wanderer (Dramatic).....1000
Aug. 28—The Woman Hater (Comedy).....
Aug. 28—Palestine (Educational) .....
Aug. 30—Jim Bludso (Dramatic).....1000
Aug. 31—Saved from Courtmartial (Dramatic)..1000
Sept. 2—The Hoodoo Hat (Comedy).....
Sept. 2—From Jerusalem to the Dead Sea (Scenic). .....
Sept. 4—Down Through the Ages (Drama)...1000
Sept. 6—The Loneliness of the Hills (Drama).1000
Sept. 7—The Darling of the C. S. A. (Drama).1000
Sept. 9—The Girl Reporter's Big Scoop (Dr.)..1000
Sept. 11—Dr. Skinnem's Wonderful Invention (Comedy). .....
Sept. 11—The Ancient Port of Jaffa (Scenic)..
Sept. 13—The Street Singer (Drama).....1000
Sept. 14—A Railroad Lochinvar (Comedy-Drama)1000

LUBIN.

Aug. 24—The Government Test (Drama).....1000
Aug. 26—The Deceivers (Com.-Dr.).....1062
Aug. 28—The Caretaker (Com.).....
Aug. 28—A Burnt Cork (Com.).....
Aug. 29—For the Love of a Girl (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—Pinned (Com.).....
Aug. 30—The Overworked Bookkeeper (Com.)..
Aug. 31—The Sheriff's Prisoner (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—A Substitution (Com.) 691
Sept. 2—His New Cane (Com.)..... 363
Sept. 4—The Bank Cashier (Drama).....1000
Sept. 5—The Smuggler (Comedy-Drama).....1000
Sept. 6—A Romance of the Coast (Drama)....1000
Sept. 7—Little Family Affair (Comedy).....1000
Sept. 9—The Half-breed's Sacrifice (Drama)...1000
Sept. 11—A Red-hot Courtship (Comedy).....1000
Sept. 12—Betty and the Roses (Drama).....1000
Sept. 13—Never Again (Comedy).....
Sept. 13—Buster and the Pirates (Drama).....
Sept. 14—A Trustee of the Law (Drama).....1000

MELIES.

Aug. 8—The Ranger's Girls (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 15—A Romance at Catalina (Dr.).....1000
August 22—The Moth and the Flame (Drama)..1000
Aug. 29—His Partner's Share (Drama).....1000
Sept 5—The Obsession (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 12—The Unworthy Son (Drama).....1000
Sept. 19—The Prisoner's Story (Drama).....1000

ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

Aug. 28—The Golden Curl (Dr.).....1030
Sept. 4—An Eccentric Sportsman (Comedy).. 455
Sept. 4—From Lauterbrunnen to Murren, Switzerland (Scenic) 882
Sept. 4—Small Game at the Zoo (Educational) 165
Sept. 11—Glimpses of St. Petersburg (Scenic).. 560
Sept. 11—Chemical Action (Educational)..... 180
Sept. 11—Winter Sports at St. Mortiz, Switzerland (Topical)..... 485

PATHE.

Aug. 5—Pathe's Weekly, No. 32, 1912 (Top.)
Aug. 7—The Arrow Maker's Daughter (Dr.)..
Aug. 8—The Famous Scout to the Rescue (Dr.)
Aug. 10—Here and there in Oregon (Sc.).....
Aug. 10—Kittens (Juvenile).....
August 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 33—1912 (Top.)
August 14—Silver Wing's Two Suitors (Dr.)..
August 15—Cupid's Stolen Arrows (Com.).....
August 17—The Cactus County Lawyer (Dr.)..
Aug. 19—Pathe's Weekly No. 34 (Top.).....
Aug. 21—Jealousy on the Ranch (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—The Hand of Destiny (Dr.).....
Aug. 24—The $2,500 Bride (Dr.).....
Aug. 26—Pathe's Weekly, No. 35, 1912.....
Aug. 26—Fire at Sea (Special Release) (Dr.)..
Aug. 28—The Live Wire (Drama).....
Aug. 29—The Detective's Chance (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—The Armless Wonder (Acrobat.).....
Aug. 31—An Aeroplane Love Affair (Com.)....
Sept. 2—Pathe's Weekly No. 36, 1912.....
Sept. 4—Locked Out of Wedlock (Comedy)....
Sept. 5—The Penalty Paid (Drama).....
Sept. 7—Gee! My Pants! (Comedy).....
Sept. 9—Pathe's Weekly, No. 37 (Topical)....
Sept. 9—The Blighted Son (Special) (Drama)..
Sept. 11—Black Beauty (Drama).....
Sept. 12—Anquished Hours (Drama).....
Sept. 14—Saved at the Altar (Drama).....

C. G. P. C.

Aug. 9—The Burglar's Weird Reception (Com.)
Aug. 9—How a Letter Travels from the Great Lakes of Central Africa (Edu.)....
August 13—The Tyrolean Doll (Comedy).....
August 15—Some Inhabitants of Stagnant water (Educational) .....
August 16—A Love Story of Old Japan (Dr.)....
Aug. 20—His Windmill (Dr.) .....
Aug. 20—The Sedge Warbler and the Cuckoo (Ed.) .....
Aug. 23—The Queen's Pity (Dr.).....
Aug. 27—A Prince of Israel (Bib.).....
Aug. 30—The Musketeer's Love (Hist.-Dr.)....
Sept. 3—Beatrix d'Este (Drama).....
Sept. 6—Whiffles and the Magic Wand (Com.)
Sept. 6—The Bud, the Leaf and the Flower (Science). .....
Sept. 10—Love's Progress (Comedy-Drama).....
Sept. 10—A Little Journey In Tunis (Scenic)...
Sept. 13—For Her Lord (Drama).....
Sept. 13—The Late Harriet Quimby's Flight Across the English Channel (Top.)

SELIG.

Aug. 2—The Wreck of the Vega (Topical)..
Aug. 2—The Right Way and the Wrong Way (Educational) .....
Aug. 5—An Unexpected Fortune (Com.-Dr.)...1000
Aug. 6—The Man From Dragon Land (Dr.)...1000
Aug. 8—The Girl at the Cupola (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—The Boob (Com.-Dr.).....1000
August 12—A Messenger to Kearney (Drama)..1000
August 13—The Wayfarer (Drama).....1000
August 15—In the Tents of the Asra (Dr.)....1000
August 16—Two Gay Dogs (Comedy).....1000
Aug. 19—The Box Car Baby (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 20—The Cowboy's Mother (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—Betty Fools Dear Old Dad (Com.)....1000
Aug. 23—Land Sharks vs. Sea Dogs (Com.-Dr.)
Aug. 23—From Forest to Mills (Ed.).....
Aug. 26—The Laird's Daughter (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 27—The Whiskey Runners (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 29—The Little Indian Martyr (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 30—Just His Luck (Farce-Comedy).....
Aug. 30—Frenzied Finance (West.-Com.).....
Sept. 2—As the Fates Decree (Drama).....1000
Sept. 3—An Equine Hero (Drama).....1000
Sept. 5—Sergeant Byrne of the N. W. M. P. (Drama) 1000
Sept. 6—Circumstantial Evidence (Drama)....1000
Sept. 9—The House of His Master (Drama)...1000
ept. 10—The Fighting Instinct (Drama).....1000
Sept. 12—The Indelible Stain (Drama).....1000
Sept. 13—The Trade Gun Bullet (Drama).....1000

VITAGRAPH.

August 16—The Bogus Napoleon (Comedy)....1000
August 17—Two Battles (Drama).....1000
Aug. 19—Rip Van Winkle (Special 2 reel Dr.)..2000
Aug. 19—Her Grandchild (Drama).....1000
Aug. 20—Lovesick Maidens of Cuddletown (Comedy) 1000
Aug. 21—The Ancient Bow (Drama).....1000
Aug. 23—Saving An Audience (Comedy).....1000
Aug. 24—The Party Dress (Drama)..... 614
Aug. 24—On Board Kaiser Wilhelm the Second (Educational) 388
Aug. 26—A Double Danger (Drama).....1000
Aug. 27—Flirt or Heroine (Drama).....1000
Aug. 28—Two Cinders (Com.-Dr.)..... 555
Aug. 28—Bumps (Comedy) 447
Aug. 30—Written In the Sands (Drama).....1000
Aug. 31—Bond of Music (Drama).....1000
Sept. 2—Tommy's Sister (Drama).....1000
Sept. 3—Coronets and Hearts (Drama).....1000
Sept. 4—Captain Barnacle's Legacy (Drama)..1000
Sept. 6—Bunny's Suicide (Comedy)..... 400
Sept. 6—She Wanted a Boarder (Comedy).... 600
Sept. 7—A Wasted Sacrifice (Drama).....1000
Sept. 9—The Road to Yesterday (Drama).....1000
Sept. 10—The Higher Mercy (Drama).....1000
Sept. 11—The Hindoo's Curse (Drama).....1000
Sept. 13—The Loyalty of Sylvia (Drama).....1000
Sept. 14—Popular Betty (Comedy-Drama)..... 600
Sept. 14—The Fortune in the Tea-cup (Comedy) 400

NOTICE TO EXHIBITORS: The American Song Slide and Poster Co., 5th floor, 1st National Bank Building, Chicago, carry a full line of Poster Frames in Wood and Brass. If you are in need of attractive frames write them for prices and illustrations of the handsomest and most attractive poster frames made.

10 ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES 1c

IF YOU USE

DEUEL'S CRYSTAL SLIDE COMPOUND

No Binding—No Cover Glass Required. You simply coat your glass slides with DEUEL'S CRYSTAL SLIDE COMPOUND, write or print your requirements, and you will have a Sharp, Clear Slide that will not Crack, Peel or Mar. The light floods the lettering, producing the same result as the announcements on your films. Slides can be washed and used as often as desired. We include with the compound Four Sample Slides, Brush and Flint Pencil, Complete Outfit to Make

2000 SLIDES $2.00

SENT EXPRESS—CHARGES PREPAID

Order Now—It Will Prove the Best Investment You Ever Made. Use it for five days according to instructions, then if it does not do all we claim for it and more, you get your money back.

Film Exchanges, Supply Houses, or Direct to

S. HOYT DEUEL COMPANY, Not Inc., No. 1 East Huron St., Chicago, Ill.

LIGHTS and SHADOWS of CHINATOWN

3000 Feet or THE YELLOW PERIL 3000 Feet

All Territory Open to State Right Buyers Excepting Greater New York, Northern Ohio, Pennsylvania, Oregon, Idaho, New Jersey and Delaware

Coming! Society Life in Paris

2000 FEET

New York Film Co.
12 Union Square New York

EXHIBITOR'S BUSINESS BOOSTERS!

CATER TO BOTH SIDES OF THE STREET

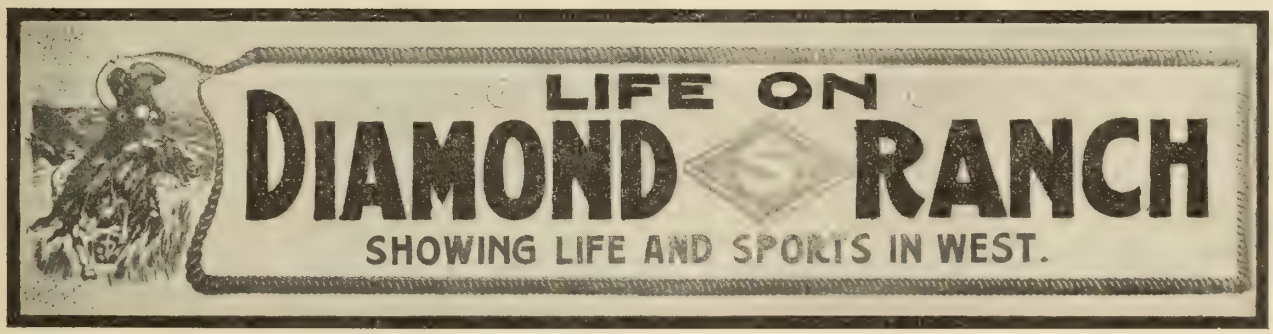

PHOTO-PLAY
SECURITY TICKET BOX

Built expressly for those who do not require the more expensive "chopper."
Tickets are deposited by patrons upon entering.
Of same construction as Photo-Play Ticket Chopper, minus the defacing mechanism. In place of same Security Ticket Box has trap, which when tripped by attendant drops all tickets into chamber below, this being secured by lock.

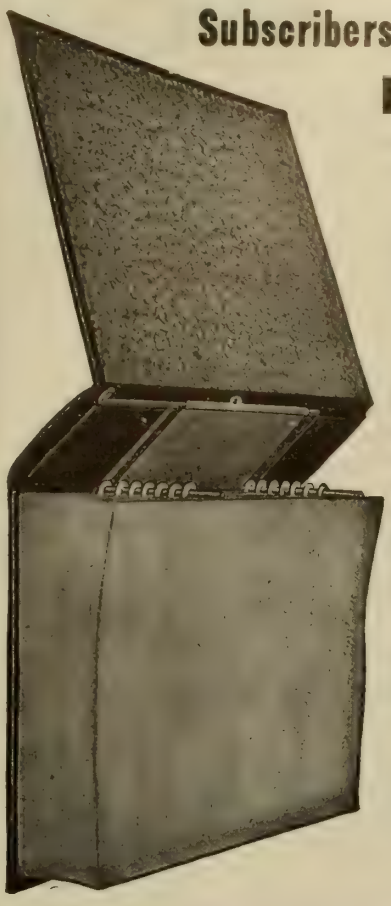
PRICE $35.00

BANNERS

Our Banners Are Worked of Art. Lithographed in Four Colors. Eyelets in Corners. Printed on Heavy Muslin, 3 ft. wide by 12 ft. long. Price, $1.00 Each.

Made for all Releases, both Licensed and Independent. Always in Stock. Remit with Order.

Photo-Play Advertising & Specialty Co.
Main Offices: 121-123 Fourth Avenue
PITTSBURGH, PA.



Subscribers, Please Note

BINDERS

For each three months' volume of the

Moving Picture World

Can be furnished as follows, express charges additional:
75c each.
$2.60 for four.
$7.25 per doz.
By prepaid mail $1.00 each.

Simple and Secure Single Copies easily removed

Moving Picture World

125 East 23d Street
New York City

Use the Real

Projector Carbon "Biograph"

Brand

L. E. Frorup & Co.
232 Greenwich St., New York City

Grand Combination Organ

Harmonium Pipe Tone

For Theatres and Music Halls

supplied with Auxiliary Pipes, Qualifying Tubes, and Enlarged Scale of Reeds, by means of which the quantity or volume of tone is very largely increased, and the quality rendered equal to that of Pipe Organs. Just the instrument for your Theatre. Further information furnished by addressing factory.

Clough & Warren Company ADRIAN MICHIGAN

To Exhibitors in

CONNECTICUT

Remember the money that was made in Conn. with Dante's Inferno.

HOMER'S ODYSSEY

The new Milano three reel Production will be

OPEN FOR DATES AFTER SEPT. 2nd.

Address Immediately

WORLD'S MOVING PICTURE CLASSICS.

Box 485, Madison Sq. Station, N. Y. City.

LISTEN!

If you're going to be independent, do it in the right way! Don't run the risk of slipshod service and half-baked films. The Laemmle Film Service is an authorized agent of the Universal, making it a dead certainty that you'll get that magnificent Universal program if you hook up with Laemmle. You have brains. Use 'em!

CARL LAEMMLE
PRESIDENT
The Laemmle Film Service
204 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.
Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1312 Farnum St., Omaha, Neb.
421 Walnut St., Des Moines, Iowa.
The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World.

SCENARIO WRITERS!

If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made saleable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism for a fee of only $2.

Exhibitors!

Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

Epes Winthrop Sargent
Box 70, Madison Square Station
New York City

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS
Theatres Designed Everywhere
Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
2549 Archer Avenue, :: CHICAGO, ILL.

In answering advertisements kindly mention the Moving Picture World.

ANOTHER WINNER!
"CALEB WEST"
In two reels. Released Sept. 18th. From the famous book of F. Hopkinson Smith's. Wonderful lighthouse and under the sea scenes. Special 3 and 1-sheet posters.

RELIANCE

Advance Releases: "The Heart of a Cossack," Wed., Sept. 4th; "The Bully and the Shrimp," Sat., Sept. 7th; "Love Knows No Laws," Wed., Sept. 11th; "For Love of Her," Sat., Sept. 14th.

It is that wonderful, exquisite sweetness "Kubelic" draws out of his fiddle that makes his meal ticket spell $1000.00 per hour. A horse fiddle makes more noise but

"What a Difference!"

It is that quaint "humanly human" way "Whitcomb Riley" puts jingles together that makes him loved and famous. Not such great English but his "beat on the heart-strings"

"Makes a Difference."

It was the realism, fine arrangement of color and striking study of light and shadow that immortalized "Rembrandt." A circus ONE SHEET is sometimes even more striking but

"Oh! How Different!"

It is a Motion Picture when you only show "Flickering Shadows" that are meaningless, dull, indistinct, without perspective, roundness or depth and almost without interest. But on a "Mirror Screen" this same picture "comes to life," shows clear, true and sharp. Every detail is visible and not a shade, gleam or shadow is lost and "Believe Me"

"There IS a Difference."

It is a Motion Picture Theatre when your equipment and light is poor and you have a bum curtain. But the "Mirror Screen" insures you a great light so that an ordinary film shows like a FEATURE in comparison. Every foot is so realistic and natural that folks are spell-bound because pictures on a "Mirror Screen"

"Are Different."

It is the Extra Nickels over expenses that means Profits, Bread and Meat and some of Life's Luxuries. It is the "Mirror Screen" that will create a sensation in your theatre, bring the crowds, and it is the only way to get that Wonderful Light WITHOUT EYE-STRAIN. The old and young come and the pictures on the MIRROR are so delightful to look at that they won't miss a reel and that "Keep Them Coming" is what makes, in your bank balance,

"Such a Great Difference."

Please write us today and tell us WHY you don't order that MIRROR.

MIRROR SCREEN COMPANY

Frank J. Rembusch, President. SHELBYVILLE, IND., U. S. A.

Frank Manning, Sales Agent, 922 Sixth Ave., N. Y. City, Phone 401 Plaza.

The Science of Perfect Projection

IS

Mirroroide

The Acknowledged Peer of Any Screen or Curtain Now on the Market.

MIRROROIDE

Is Not Merely an Overlay of Metallic Substances But An Integral Part of the Canvas, Forever Perpetuating Its Flexibility, Durability and Great Brilliancy. Like the Skin of the Human Form, It is a Part, a Firm Unition of the Whole.

MIRROROIDE

Is Sold Under a Positive "Bona Fide" Guarantee That No Other Manufacturer Dare Make.
We Invite You to Get Our Large Free Samples. Test Them Against Any Screen or Curtain Now on the Market, Bar None.

2148 MIRROROIDE

Screens and Curtains Now in Use. Over 1,000 Testimonials the World Over. Weekly Shipments Averaged During, June, July and August 40 MIRROROIDE Screens Weekly—the Really Dull Season. There's a Reason.

MIRROROIDE

Lasts—Is Guaranteed a Lifetime. If You Want the Best, Test the Rest, Compare Them with MIRROROIDE, the Only Perfect Projection Surface in the World.

Drop Us a Postal and Get Our Large Samples Free. Test Them Any Way You Desire.

The J. H. Genter Co.
Newburgh, N. Y.

EASTMAN

motion picture film—the acknowledged standard the world over.

Manufactured by

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

We don't care if you are from Missouri

SO ARE WE!

When so many of the prominent exhibitors throughout America testify to the wonderful qualities of the RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN we know we can SHOW YOU.

Omar G. Murray of the Murrette Theatre, Richmond, Indiana, who stands way up in theatre circles in that big state, recently said in a few well chosen words, "The best screen in all the world." He knows and is proud to do us the honor.

Now if you want to show the clearest, most natural pictures, soft and easy on the eyes, and also pay for the screen by the saving in the juice bill get a RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN.

You have tried the rest—now buy the best.

American Theatre Curtain & Supply Company
105 North Main Street St. Louis, Mo.

Pitzer & Smith, Special Representatives
32 Union Square New York City

ALL OVER THE COUNTRY EXHIBITORS and THEATRICAL MANAGERS ARE CLAMORING TO BOOK

BLANCHE WALSH
in RESURRECTION

(FOUR PARTS)

WILL YOU BE THE MAN TO SHOW IT IN GOOD TERRITORY STILL OPEN?

YOU CAN BILL THIS BROADWAY SUCCESS IN BROADWAY STYLE

MASKO FILM COMPANY, 145 WEST 45th STREET NEW YORK

"Agfa"

CELLULOID POSITIVE CELLULOID NEGATIVE
AND
NON-FLAM POSITIVE
(Made Under License of the Patentee)

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.
15 EAST 26th STREET - - NEW YORK
Tel. Mad Sq. 7876 Cable Rawfilm New York

Texas Exhibitors, Attention!

We have the exclusive rights for Texas for the two-reel historical production

"The Fall of Blackhawk"

Write or wire for bookings.

SOUTHERN FILM CO.
San Antonio, Texas

American Moving Picture Machine Co.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE

STANDARD

Automatic Moving Picture Machine

101-102 Beekman Street New York

EXHIBITORS' HEADQUARTERS
CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY
(Incorporated)
50 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Jobbers in Edison, Powers and Motiograph Machines and Parts

Machines repaired by Expert Mechanics. Genuine Parts Only Used.

SPECIALTIES

Mirror Screens, Chairs, Tickets, Pianos, Bio & Electric Carbons, Special Gundlach Lenses, Condensers, Edison Transformers, Ft. Wayne Compsensarcs, Asbestos State Booths, Asbestos Wire, Switches, Plugs, Spotlights, Gas Making Outfits, Limes, Film Cement, Branch General Disinfectant Co., Scenery, Stage Effects, Theatres Bought, Sold, Rented

CHAS. A. CALEHUFF, Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

LECTURES ON SPECIAL FILMS

EACH $1.00 PER COPY — Prepared by W. STEPHEN BUSH — POSTAGE PAID

Lectures for French-American Film Company
"CAMILLE" BY SARAH BERNHARDT and "MADAME SANS GENE" BY MADAME REJANE
One Dollar for Both (Typewritten)
Also in printed form the following:

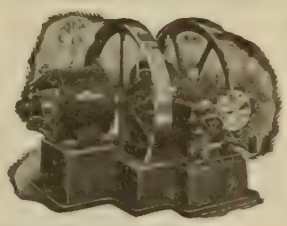
HOW TO PUT ON THE PASSION PLAY
(Second Edition)
For Pathe Freres World-Renowned Production

HOW TO PUT ON THE CRUSADERS, OR JERUSALEM DELIVERED
For World's Best Film Co., Feature Film
(Copyright 1911)

KEY AND COMPLETE LECTURE FOR DANTE'S INFERNO
For Milano Film Co. (Italy), Five-Reel Production

ORDER NOW — Only a limited edition of each — $1.00 PER COPY

COPYRIGHTED AND FOR SALE ONLY BY
MOVING PICTURE WORLD, Box 226, Madison Square P. O., New York City



THE Foos

ELECTRIC

Generating Set

will furnish direct current for your show and give you better quality of light than you can get from the best Central Station service. With a Foos Engine you can save 50 to 75 per cent. of the money you have to pay for electric current and have all the light you want when you want it.

Send for Bulletin F-98.

The Foos Gas Engine Co.
809 Linden Ave. Springfield, O.

FEATURE FILMS FOR SALE

2 3 4 Reels Feature Productions 2 3 4 Reels

WRITE FOR LISTS QUICK

SUPERIOR FEATURE FILM CO.
32 Union Sq., New York City

Orchestra Music
FOR MOVING PICTURES

Violin, Cornet and Drum parts have been added to the popular "Orpheum Collection" of piano music (dramatic and descriptive) for Moving Pictures. Practical for piano alone or any number of above instruments. Issued in two parts: No. 1 and No. 2.

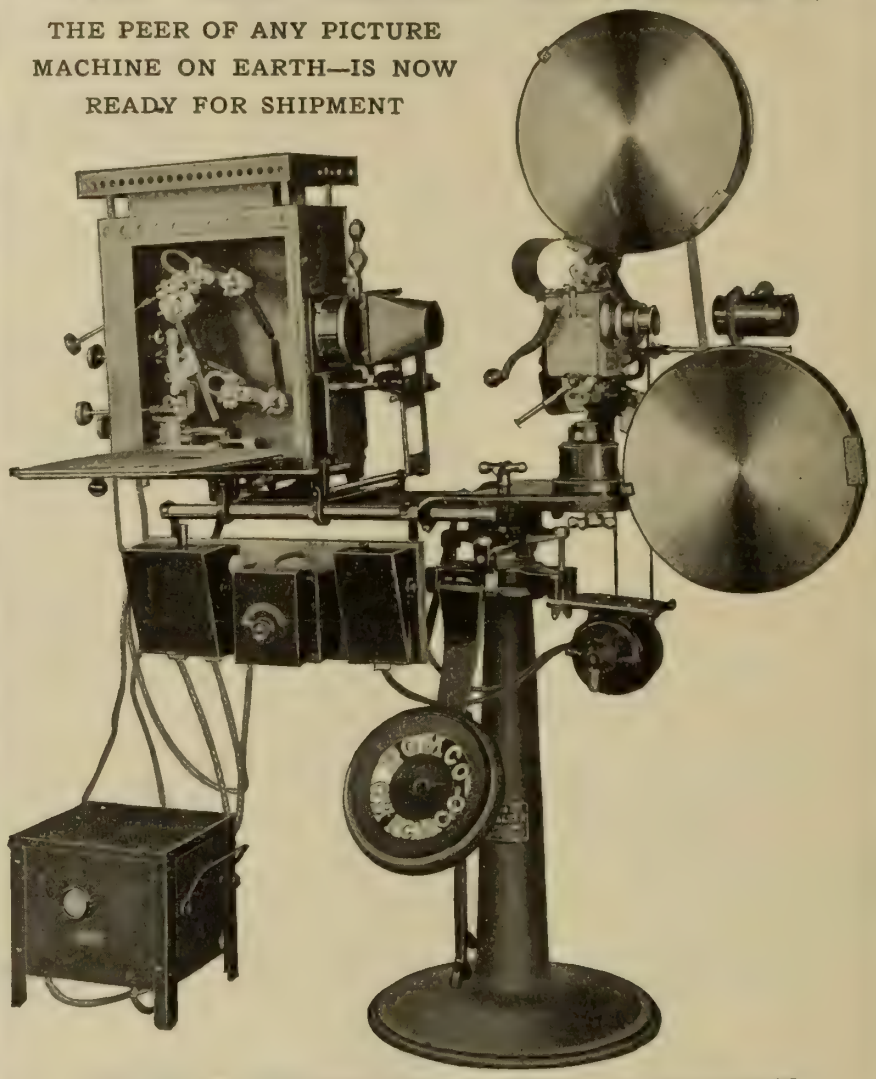
Piano, 58 cents each; both No.'s $1.15
Violin, 40 cents each; both " 75c
Cornet, 35 cents each; both " 65c
Drums, 30 cents each; both " 55c

Send for free sample pages.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 Sedgwick St., Chicago, Ill.

THE 1913 MODEL MOTIOGRAPH

THE PEER OF ANY PICTURE MACHINE ON EARTH—IS NOW READY FOR SHIPMENT



PRICES—COMPLETE AND PACKED FOR SHIPMENT:
$250.00 without motor, switchboard or seat.
$285.00 with motor (any voltage), switchboard and seat.
$300.00 special Massachusetts, with motor, switchboard and seat.

THE PRICE HAS GONE UP FOR THREE REASONS:
1st: Because of the advance in Material and Labor Cost.
2nd: Because we furnish a complete metal equipment.
3rd: Because the introduction of the Motiograph is complete.

OUR GUARANTEE

FREE UPKEEP FOR ONE YEAR COVERING PARTS of the 1913 model Motiograph mechanism, THAT MAY BECOME WORN OUT IN SERVICE, or WHICH MAY SHOW DEFECT IN MATERIAL OR WORKMANSHIP, with the understanding that the part be sent to us, charges prepaid, for examination.

Manufactured by THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY
564-572 W. Randolph Street CHICAGO, ILL.
For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere

ANOTHER ENTERPRISE TRIUMPH

TOGO CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Complete with Rubber Tubing and Keyless Jet

SUPERIOR WORKMANSHIP and HIGH GRADE MATERIAL combined with SAFETY and SIMPLICITY place the TOGO far ahead of any other cheap outfit.
PORTABLE and ready for instant use - $25.00.

Anyone can operate it

—MANUFACTURED BY—
The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564 W. Randolph St., Chicago
FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS

HERE IS WORD FROM THE WEST

ANSONIA AMUSEMENT CO.,
Incorporated,
62 and 64 West Park Street.

Philip Levy, Manager

Butte, Montana, Aug., 2nd, 1912

Inventors Specialty Mfg. Co.,
620 Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

Enclosed please find draft for one hundred and fifty dollars in payment for your most beautiful screen. It is the making of our house and all the moving picture exhibitors in the country have come to our place and rave over the beautiful pictures that they see on our "Perfection Concave Screen."

At any time that anyone that does not know what this screen is and wants any information regarding it, refer them to me and I will gladly tell them what a beautiful screen you are selling. Your screen has made a hit with the public here. We are only in business one week but are now playing to capacity, not on account of our ability or beautiful house, but simply because your screen is restful to the eye and a picture looks like it was a block away from the seat the spectator is occupying.

Wishing you success and prosperity, we remain,

Yours respectfully,
ANSONIA AMUSEMENT CO.,
Philip Levy, Manager.

This large screen is pulled into the flies when vaudeville is shown.

The satisfactory results are the same whether made to be used stationary or for fly work. We can please you as well as we have all the others if you give us the chance.

INVENTORS SPECIALTY MFG. CO.

620 Ashland Block CHICAGO

I Equip Theatres Completely

And the Increased Demand for My Services Has Forced Me to Add an Architectural Department to My Business. I am Prepared to Furnish Detailed Building Plans and Specifications for Your New Theatre.

The "Hallberg Electric Economizers" for all circuits, made only by Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," save you the most money on your electric bills and produce the best light possible on your screen.

For Sale--At A Bargain--Slightly Used Machines

1 No. 1A Motiograph, 1911 Model, first-class condition $135
1 No. 5 Powers, remodeled head, balance of machine new No. 6 Equipment..... 125
1 No. 5 Powers complete in good running order 100
1 Edison Exhibition Model One-Pin Movement, with fire shutter, first-class condition..... 85
1 Powers No. 6 in good running order, complete with lenses 100
Second-Hand Current Savers for 110 volts, 60 cycles, of all makes but Hallberg (which I have replaced with my Standard Hallberg Economizers) .....$20 and up.

Any information to help you in your difficulties along the above lines cheerfully furnished.

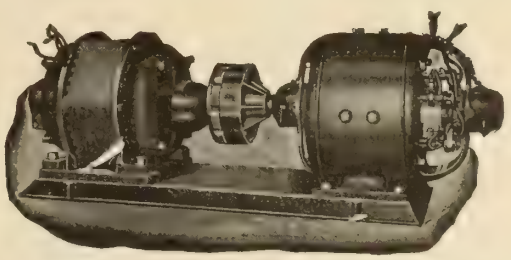
I am jobber of ALL MAKES of Moving Picture Machines

Through my Exchange Department I am prepared to make liberal allowance for your old machine in part payment on purchase price of new M. P. machine of any make.

FANS

Ventilating and Exhaust
$7.50 and up

Separate catalogues of different makes of machines, supplies and economizers furnished free upon request, BUT Hallberg's Big Complete Catalogue costs you 25c.

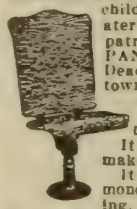


I carry the Largest Complete Stock of
Electra Pink Label Carbons

J. H. HALLBERG
36 E. 23rd St. New York City

OH! MR. EXHIBITOR!!

Think of the motherless, the fatherless, and the childless homes as the result of theater panics. Protect the lives of your patrons by installing our "ANTI PANIC" THEATER CHAIR. 26 Dead at Cannonsburg, 176 at Boyertown, 575 at Iroquis Theater, Chicago. Make these horrors impossible. Our chair is a friend to the Public.



It advertises your theater and makes your business grow.

It is a space-saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.

It will make your theater all aisles. It is the only sanitary chair. It is the world's greatest theater chair, perfected to the highest degree. Write to-day for Circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio. U.S.A.

ROSE'S RING SPROCKET

For Top or Bottom

Mr. F. H. Richardson in M. P. World of May 11 1912, says: "I certainly can vouch for the excellence of the workmanship put into it. The sprocket is mechanically well made, and I see no reason in the world why it should not work perfectly. The removal and insertion of the tooth ring is a very simple operation indeed."

COMPLETE SPROCKET $2.50

Extra Rings per pair $1.00. Give make of machine

WRITE FOR CATALOG

J. E. BOYLE, DISTRIBUTER

530 MAIN STREET DUBUQUE, IOWA

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theater Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Write for Catalog.

Don't fail to visit our complete New York showroom, 101-103 4th Ave.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.

717-721 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

Established 1882

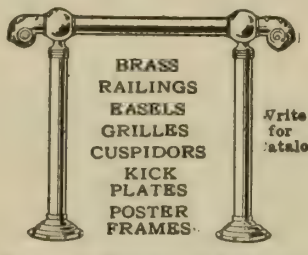
The Simpson Solar Screen

is the best Daylight Screen in existence. Fully covered by U. S. Patent No. 890,101. Don't buy imitations.

ALFRED L. SIMPSON, Inc.

No. 113 W. 132nd St., New York City

McKENNA



Write for Catalog.

McKenna Bros. Brass Co.

PITTSBURGH

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES

Powers No. 5, $115. Edison Exhibition, $125. Lubin 1909 Nickel Plated Head, as NEW, $125. Machines Repaired. Parts for all Machines. Supplies of all kinds. Send for Catalogues and Lists. Machines Wanted.

HARBACH & CO.

809 Filbert St., Philadelphia.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE

1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865

WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The A. H. Andrews Co.

Branches in all Leading Cities

New York Office, 1165 Broadway

Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.

San Francisco Office, 728 Mission St.

Get Our Prices Before You Buy

The Wisconsin Seating Company

New London, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

OPERA CHAIRS

GEO. W. BENNETT

34-36 E. 3rd Street

CINCINNATI, OHIO.

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS

ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use.

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.

New York: 150 5th Ave. Pittsburgh: 318 Bissel Blk. Philadelphia: 610 Flanders Bldg.

WE CAN HURRY

YOUR ORDER OUT.

STAFFORD Chairs excell all others.

Heavy Five Ply seats and backs.

The last-forever kind, that you are using long after you have forgotten the price.

STEEL CHAIRS TOO

We carry several kinds of good chairs in stock, all guaranteed.

ASK FOR CATALOG 305

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.

CHICAGO, ILL.

In answering advertisements kindly mention the Moving Picture World.

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing

Why don't you send it to us?

We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.

We buy second hand machines.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO., 176 N. State St., Bet. Lake & Randolph Chicago, Ill.

It pays to discriminate when you buy

THEATRE SEATING

WRITE TODAY for Cat. V2 (Mov. Picture Chairs) and Cat. V3 (Upholstered Chairs)

Send Floor Sketch for Free Seating Plan

Widest range of styles and prices. Large stocks.

American Seating Company

218 S. Wabash Ave., CHICAGO 15 E. 32nd St., NEW YORK

G.MÉLIÈS

"MAKE HER MARRY ME OR I'LL TELL ALL"

The Unworthy Son

Jim, after brutally attacking his wife, goes West, where he enters a horse-thieving partnership with Bill Haskins, whose daughter Nell he forms a desire for, and threatens to expose Bill if she refuses to marry him. Jim's father harbors the deserted wife, and sends his other son, Phil, to inform Jim that he is disowned. Nell learns that Jim is married, and reveals his wicked plot to Phil. In a desperate quarrel Jim and Haskins are both fatally injured and Phil takes Nell home a bride.

G. MELIES, 204 EAST 38th St., NEW YORK CITY

Approx. Length, 1000 ft. 9-12-12

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH NO. 6A

THE MODERN MOTION PICTURE MACHINE

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH has maintained its supremacy since the inception of the moving picture business, through sheer force of merit. In it are to be found more good points than can be discovered elsewhere, and it approaches closer to absolute perfection than any other machine.

